

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

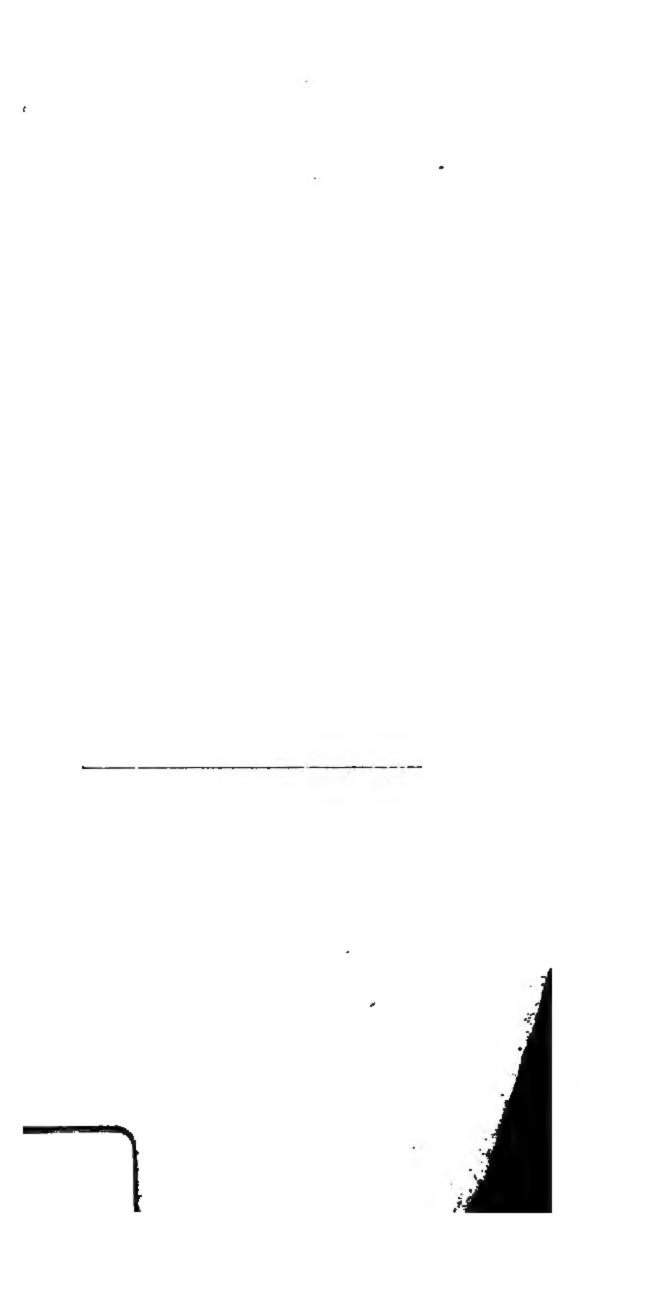

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

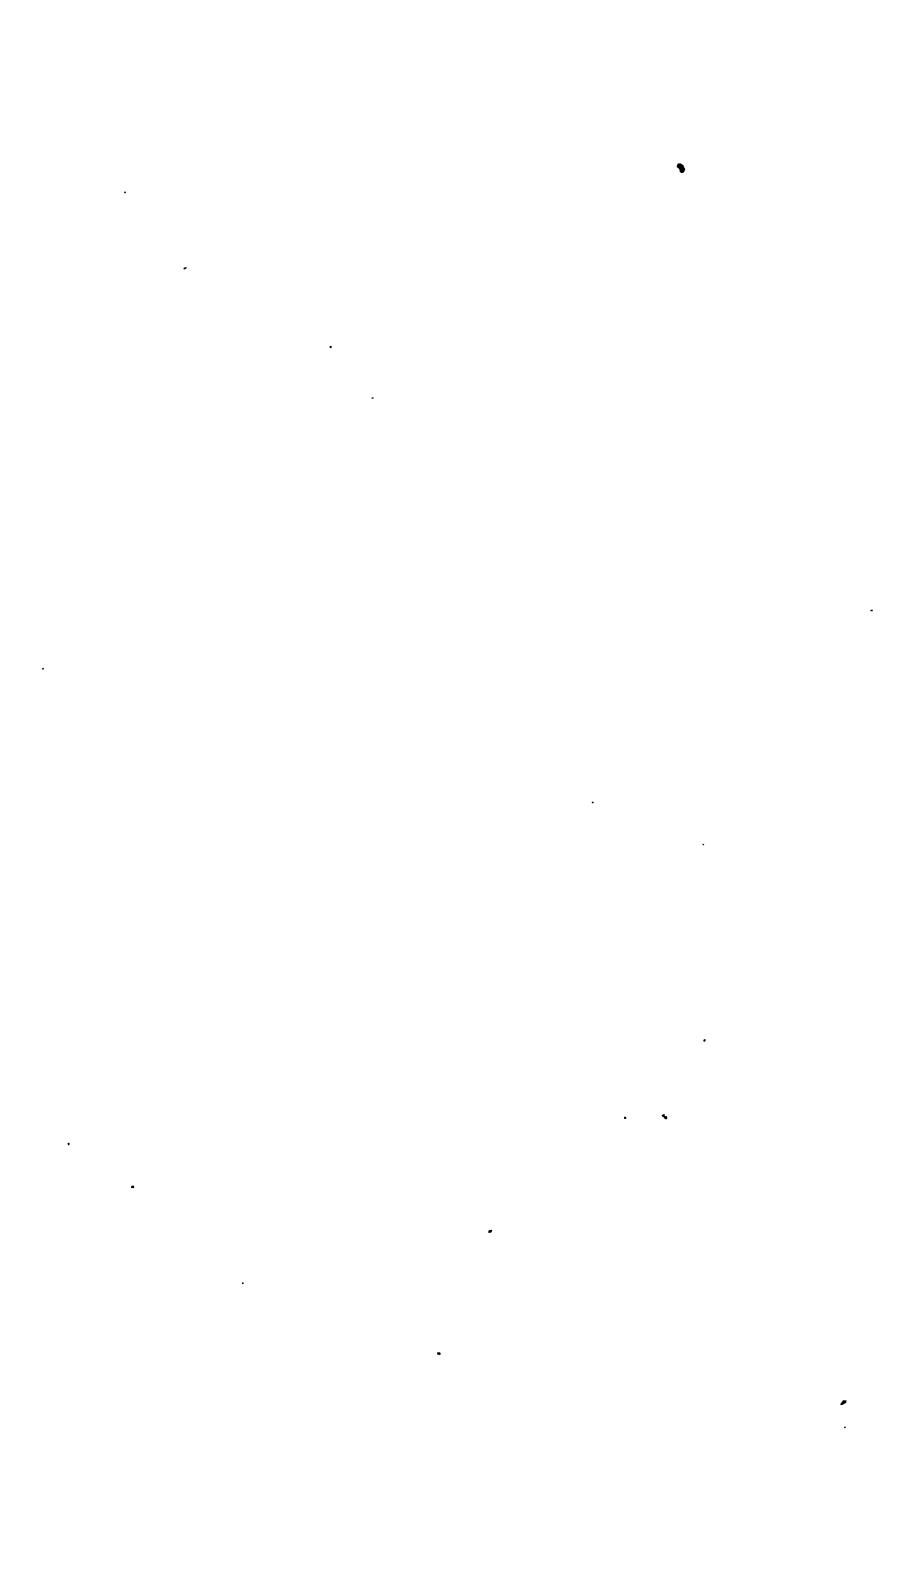

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/

•
x.				•
	•
				•
		,
•
			-
			•

• • • • • • • • • • .

Gentleman's Magazine:

AND

Historical Chronicle.

From January to June, 1811.

VOLUME LXXXI.

(BEING THE FOURTH OF A NEW SERIES.)

PART THE FIRST.

PRODESSE ET DELECTARE.

E PLURIBUS UNUM.

By SYLVANUS URBAN, Gent.

LONDON: Printed by JOHN NICHOLS and SON, at Cicero's Head, Red Lion Passage, Fleet Street; where LETTERS are particularly requested to be sent, Post-Paid. And sold by J. HARRIS (Successor to Mrs. NEWBERY), at the Corner of St. Paul's Church Yard, Ludgate Street. 1811.

To SYLVANUS URBAN, GENT.

On completing the First Part of Vol. LXXXI.

JRBAN, six months again thy toils complete, Again my lines those toils concluded greet. While War's rude din affrights the troubled deep, Thy peaceful toils their equal tenour keep; While roars Bellona's voice, like some great Sage, You turn the mirror of the changeful age, Whate'er the scene, or dreadful, grave, or gay, You shew reflected, and around display. Still favour'd by each Muse, thy far-read page Instructs, improves, and charms the passing age. Long may Minerva's sons her honours see, At once extended and enjoy'd by thee! May Mars' loud tumults long at distance roar, Nor check the enjoyments of our peaceful Shore! May Jove propitious ever deign to bless This sacred spot, where tumult dares not press! May Urban's Works extend to distant time, Please and instruct the Sons of every Climie; May they continue still to merit Fame From ev'ry titled, great, and honour'd Name!

S. C.

BIBLE.

WHAT taught me that a great First

Existed ere creation was, And gave the Universe its laws?

The Bible!

What guide can lead me'to this Power, Whom Conscience calls me to adore, And bids me seck Him more and more? The Bible!

Whence came I first of all to know The origin of human woe, When all was ruin here below!

The Bible!

And in this awful drear dismay, When hope itself refus'd a ray, What tells me God was still our stay? The Bible!

Since th' arms of Mercy then extend, To draw me to my God and FRIEND, Wind can my gratitude expand? The Bible!

And while life flies in gay career, And pleasures hail each coming year, What can enhance my sprightly cheer? The Bible!

When all my actions prosper well, And higher hopes my wishes swell, What points where truer blessings dwell? The Bible!

... /· ...

When passions with temptations join, To compute every power of mine, What leads me then to Help Divine? The Bible!

When pining care and wasting pain My spirits and my life-blood drain, What soothes and turns e'en these to gain? The Bible!

When crosses and vexations tease, And various ills my bosom seize, What is it that in life can please?

The Bible!

When horror chills my soul with fear, And nought but gloom and dread appear, What is it then my mind can cheer? The Bible!

When impious doubts my thoughts perplex, And mysteries my reason vex, Where is the guide which then directs? - The Bible!

Then may my mind be made to see What now I am and yet may be By reading often seriously,

The Bible!

And when Affliction's fainting breath Warns me I've done with all beneath, :... What can compose my soul in death?

Literature, in all its various branches: whereas our Brethren who make their appearance but four times in the year, selecting a few, for they cannot comprehend many, of such Works as they may think proper, make them the vehicle of ingenious comment and critical observation, of political political opinion and discussion, perhaps of political prejudice and party. That such may be consulted with benefit, and perused with satisfaction, we by no means pretend to deny; nay further, we are prepared to pay them the willing tribute of praise, for much acute remark and learned disquisition. Our pretensions are of a different, and, let it be permitted us to add, of a more permanent nature: Their usefulness is more local and temporary; their materials for amusement, and information too, are necessarily more limited.

20644

Our Volumes exhibit, and will continue to exhibit, a regularly connected series of information on the Literature of our Country, its Politicks, Domestic History, Antiquities, Biography, and Poetry; a faithful and regular detail also of the Occurrences in Foreign Parts; and every other subject which can tend to make a miscellaneous Periodical Work productive of immediate gratification, or proper bereafter to be consulted as a faithful and authentic record.

Having said thus much, and we trust without offence, it is not possible to conclude without reverting, as we always do, to the condition of our beloved Country. Would that it were permitted us to congratulate our Fellow-Citizens on the early prospect of again cultivating without molestation the Peaceful Olive! But the thirst for blood, which has so long tormented the infuriated Tyrant of the Continent, is not even yet satiated. But surely a brighter dawn may be discerned in the Political Hemisphere; it may be contemplated in the Laurel Wreaths which our gallant Countrymen have so gloriously won at Busaco, Albuera, and on the Plains of Portugal: it may be hailed in the moral operation progressively taking its effect in the patriotic bosoms of our oppressed and persecuted Allies. May our hopes be prophetic! and when we shall next again bring ourselves before our Readers, may we have the delightful occasion presented to us, of cheering the return of Liberty to the ravaged and insulted Nations of Europe; and the sweet and grateful task of welcoming the wished-for return of British Heroes from selds of glory to mansions of tranquillity and peace, no more to be disturbed by the ruthless spirit of War and lawless Ambition!

ENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE

LONDON GAZETTE GENERAL EVENING M. Post M. Herald Morning Chronic. Times-M. Advert, P.Ledger--Oracle Brit. Press—Day St. James's Chron, Star-Traveller Pilot--Statesman Sun-Even. Mad Lond, Chr. Packet Albiou--C. Chron. Courier—Globe Eng Chron .-- Inq. Cour d'Angleterre Cour. de Londres 15otherWeckly P. If Sunday Papers Hue & Cry Police Lit. Adv. monthly Bath 3-Redford Berwick-Boston Birminghum 3 Rlackb. Brighton Bristol 5, Bury Camb.—Chath. Carli,2—Chester 2 Chelms, Cambria.

d

JANUARY, 1811. CONTAINING

Meteorol. Diaries for Dec. 1810, and Jan. 1811.2 | Richardson's Reply to Salisbury on Piorin . . . 33 Reflections on History and Historians 3 Tithes defended, and proved to be no Hardship 36 Original Letterfrom Dean Bathurstto Dr. Bushyib | Little and Intrince and American Dean Bathurstto Dr. Bushyib | Little and Intrince of New Public PresentState of Lincolnshire Monasteries, &c. abid. Cur.ous Extracts from Whitkirk Registers . . 20 On present Depreciation of Paper Currency , 22 Mr. Whittington "Date of Lanthoni Abbey . 28 ABCHITECTURAL INNOVATION, No. CLIL... 2" Pointed Style temp. Henry VI, and VII. dad Surveyof the Interior of Henry VIII. shaped dad Explanation of Prophecies relating to Lie Jews 26 Pamphlets by John Fry? -Antient Wat in the digital of Markets and 1995 On the Deauery of St. Barren, in Corawall and a Dudy Variations in the Prices of the Stocks, 96

Coniw.-Covent. 2 Cumberland 2 Done aster -- Derb. Durchest .-- Essex Exeter 2, Glouc, 2 H ddax—Hants 2 Hereford, Hull 3 Ipswich 1, Kent 4 Lancast-Leices. Leeds2, Liverp. 6 Maidst. Manch. 4 Newc.3.---Notts.2: Northampton 2 Norfolk, Norwigh N. WalesOxford2 Portsea-Pottery Preston-Plym. 2 Reading -Salisb. Salop - Sheffield2 Sharborne, Sussex Shrewsbury Staff.-Stamf. 2 Taunton—Tyne Wakefi .--- Warw. Wore, 2-Your 3 IRELAND 37 SCOTTAND 24 Sunday Advertiser Jersey 2. Guern. 2.

Amelia; or, the Fatal Effects of Curiosity . . 4 Remarks on interesting Ecclesiastical Subjects 37. Remarks on Dr. Jenner and Vaccination . . . 7 The Continuation of Dogdale's Warwickshire 39

REVIEW OF NEW PUBLICATIONS; 178. Curious Church of St. Alkmund in Shrewshury 9 Life and Sel. ct Workself Bengamin Stilling fleet . 41 Illustrations of Horace, Book H. Satare I., ibid Clarkcand WArthur's Life of Adm. Lord Nelson 46 A Passage in Hamlet illustrated—" Ent ?". 15 Clapham's Edition of Bishop Taylor's Prayers .49 Essay on the Merits of French Versification . thid , Dr. Young a Scritton on the abundant Harvest 5.) Margate and Dovercourt Churches described . 17 'Aikm's Memoirs of the Life of Bishop Haet 51 Inscriptions, & c. in Ferring Church in Sussex ibid | Min Iford's Contemplatist; a Series of Essays 57 Two Drawingsof Lichfield Cathedral compared 19 Reformer, or Essays on Religion and Morality ib. The Classical Journal for 1811 59 The Elements of Astronomy, by G. Reynolds 60. Span re's introduction to the Science of Harmony ib. Fraudulent Bankrupteles - Notes - Gu neas . 25 lin ley Indicatorius - Qui stions answered . ibal. Select Poetro for January, 1811 61 Repairs of Henry VII 's Chapel jud coors : bol placer starg Intelliform the London Gazettes (5) Procee lings in present Session of Parliament, 66 Abstract of the principa, Foreign Congresses, 70 Proposal for establishing a femourty at Mada 73. Country News - Poincistic Occurred - s. . . . 84 Remarks on the Defects of Parish Clerks . . 31 Births and Marriages of emment Per ans . . "5 Thomas Wennian ?- Portrait of Carew wanted 12. One projects Anecd, of remarkable Persons (56)

Embellished with Perspective Views of the Churches of S.: Arkm vn in Sunewinday; Sr. Joun's, Margare; Dovercoupt Estra, and Fibring, in Sussex.

SYLVANUS URBAN, GENT.

Printed by J. NICHOLS and SOV, at Cicano's Head, Red Lica Possage, Fleet street, London: where all Letters to the Editor are desired to be audiessed. Post-pain.

METROROLOGICAD DIARY for December, 1810. By Dr. Polz, Bristol.

o a a to tre to to ~ Deptato.	M. S h. G. heat	Inches.	WEATRER.
1	28 40	29- 7	cloudy most of the day
2	22 33	99-16	foggy, clear in general
3	37 45	29-16	cloudy, rain most of the day
•	43 48	29-16	foggy, cloudy, afternoon rainy
5	46 50	29-16	foggy and cloudy
6	48 51	99 -10	cloudy at times, with rain
4	41 44	29-5	clear, evening rain
8	35 43	29- 5	mostly clear
9	24 34	26-15	foggy all day, cloudy at times
10	39 44	29-6	cloudy, dark, rainy
ĬI	32 34	29-10	morning foggy, afterwards clear
32	41 51	29-11	cloudy, miny, evening clear, windy
15	49 51	29-13	gloudy, afternoon showery, windy
24	48 48	99- 13	cloudy, frequent rain, very windy
25	39 46	166-C3	but little clouded
16	39 46	36-1	cloudy
17	45 50	39-91	mostly cloudy, frequent light rain
18	49 44	99-11	morning rainy, afternoon clear
19	37 40	99-10	foggy, mostly cloudy
20	33 40	29 9	cloudy, rainy, windg
91	37 42	29-6	night rain, bail, thunder, lightning-day frequent rain,
92	38 47	29-10	cloudy, frequent rain, windy at times [tempestuous
23	46 49	29-11	mostly cloudy, some light rain
24	39 43	29-11	cloudy at times, heavy rain, some hail
25	47 46	99-0	tempest, night and day, heavy rain, thunder and lightning
26	45 46	29-9	mostly clear, evening rain
27	45 45	29- 9	cloudy at times, with showers
98	36 39	30-1	cloudy at times, some rain, heavy had morning
95	26 32	30-6	clear
30	23 29	30- 7	clear
30 31	31 39	30-7	cloudy, some light rain.

^{} The average temperature, as well as the quantity of rain fallen this month, may be seen in the general statements, to be inserted in our next.

METEOROLOGICAL TABLE for January 1811. By W. CART, Strand. of Fahrenheit's Thermometer.

those Historians whom all read and all admire. The one are restricted by the limitations of an affidavit, but the other are permitted to make excursions into the regions of argument, and even imagination. Facts may of their class.

ges of the man, and cease to think

when he begins to write.

Yet while we regret that History is thus.liable to be made the vehicle of opinions which are probably dangerous, or absolutely hurtful, it is some consolation that the Historian is so often tempted to bring himself forward, and that, in obtruding his pecu-Har principles and accommodating facts to them, he is less capable of disguise than he may suppose. He lays himself open to detection and to refutation. Upon this account, I am inclined to hope, that much mischief has not been done by the prejudices of our eminent Historians, because they have been immediately discovered, and completely answered. If the reader is thus put upon his guard, he may enjoy all that is pleasing and valuable in their writings, without suffering very materially by their misrepresentations. Let it be considered too, that few men are so unwise as to trust their information in the hands of any one Historian. In the history of most nations, and particularly of our own, we have access to various authorities. and do not implicitly give credit to one series of narratives, unless we cannot discover that other evidence is inaccessible.

After all, it must be allowed, that after the tedious process of dry investigation is gone through, we revert with pleasure to the Robertsons, Humes and Gibbons; and refresh our memory, where at the same time our taste is gratified, perhaps improved, and our imagination delighted. We had useful Historians before Hume; but where is the history of our country traced with such elegant perspicuity, such connexion of cause and effect, as to leave on the mind an impression of unity, of something whole and entire? Yet Hume could not probably have produced this work, had his mind been less imbued with opinions of one kind, as to political government. Would the case have been otherwise, if he had chosen to exert his talents on the history of another pation? If Hume had taken the Roman empire, and Gibbon the History of England, should we have seen less of Hume and Gibbon in their respective narratives?

Yours, &c. P. P.

ADVICE TO YOUNG LADIES.
No. I.—Curiosity.

PHE President Moté de Champlatreux was one of the most eminent characters in the Parliament of His integrity was so incorruptible, that he merited the surname of Aristides. His perfect knowledge of the jurisprudence of his country gave him a great pre-eminence over the most enlightened lawyers; and his advice, in dissignit and obscure matters, was looked upon as the most certain and safe. By these qualifications his name was rendered famous; and his merit was considered so superior, that his associates, far from being jealous, confided implicitly in his impartiality.

The private and public character of the President Moté were equally laudable; for, having lost his wife, in whom his happiness was chiefly centered, he undertook the charge of his only daughter; and succeeded so far, that Amelia's mind was cultivated with all those good qualities which render young persons amiable. Besides an accurate knowledge of her own language, she could speak German and Italian; with regard to the English language, she was so well acquainted with it, that she translated into French the master-pieces of the English authors. Her understanding was not only enlarged by an acquaintance with all the practical sciences, but, what is still more valuable, with the precious seeds of virtue. had operated on her heart so admirably, that Amelia was modest, without affectation; mild and engaging, without tunidity; submissive, without losing her dignity; generous, without prodigality; kind and condescending to the servants, without familiarity; alteutive and respectful to her father, not only from a sense of gratitude, but also from that of affection, tenderness, and love.

The only fault which her father had not been able to correct in her was Curiosity. Extremely desirous of knowing every thing, she would not let the least thing pass in the house without enquiring into the particulars. If she heard a double knock at the door, she ran to the window to see who it was; if a carriage entered the yard, she was immediately hang-mg.

ing over the staircase, to hear whether it was a visitor, or somebody on business; if a visitor, she would run down stairs, and be at the carriage door before the servants of the house; if somebody on business, she continued running backwards and forwards from the staircase to her room, from thence to her father's antechamber; tben down stairs to enquire of the servants who it was, and on what business they came.

The President having often shewn her the impropriety of such mean actions, Amelia dared not apply to him when she wanted to be informed of any thing; but used to bribe his Secretary, by whom she was informed of all that was transacted in her father's Thus her inconsiderate curiosity not only rendered her culpable, but corrupted the fidelity of her father's confident. The President, who had several times discovered that his daughter was acquainted with secrets which he thought were improper to be entrusted to her, could not conceive how she came to the knowledge of them.

When I say secrets, do not suppose that the President improperly withheld any thing from the knowledge of his daughter, on whom he so fondly doated. On the contrary, his great pleasure was to converse with his Amelia on all the affairs of the family; and he entrusted her with the management of all those matters which he could not attend to himself, or which belonged to her department. secrets that he kept, from her were not his own; they were either those of the state, or of private people, which he could not have disclused But at the danger of his life, or his reputation. One maxim which the President maintained was, that he who violated a secret entrusted to him, deserved punishment ten times more than he who robbed you of your property. It was for this reason that he would never abuse the confidence reposed in him by the public, by relating to his daughter affairs which were of no concern to her. M. Moté had more than once explained this distinction to Amelia, whose good sense never failed to assent to so reasonable a discretion. But, though sensible of the truth and propriety of her father's representafions, her insatiable curiosity brought her always to the same point — that of wanting to know every thing: so difficult is it to get rid of the habit of Curiosity, whenit has once been contracted.

About the tenth of August, 1792, the most considerable men in the Government held a meeting to deliberate upon the deplorable condition of France, and came to a resolution to protest against all innovation. meeting was held at the President Moté de Champlatreux's house; and, as the resolution to be taken was of the highest importance, there was a numerous and respectable assembly; the sitting was prolonged until eight in the morning.

You cannot conceive the impatience and curiosity of Amelia during the time of the deliberation: she did not let a single servant pass, without enquiring the number of persons at the meeting, the time of their arrival, and the motive of their remaining so iong. As the servants knew nothing of the matter, the less she could get from them, the more was her curiosity inflamed. During the whole of the nightshe could not shut her eyes; nay, she could not even lie in bed, but walked a hundred times from her apariment to the door where the company were deliberating.

About one o'clock in the morning she heard the door open, and saw her father conducting two young magistrates, very secretly, toward the garden door: the latter were carrying a leaden box, apparently very heavy. At this sight the heart of Amelia throbbed with joy: she followed them at a distance, and perceived them digging a hole about seven feet deep in the garden, into which they put the pox. After this they filled the hole, which they covered with grass, that no appearance might be left. Amelia observed every circumstance; and, when she saw them returning, flew back to the top of the stairs, and retired to her chamber.

The magistrates had taken so much precaution to prevent a discovery of the place where they had concealed the box, that they could not suspect Amelia's having seen them; besides, they supposed that she was too well bred to descend to so mean an employment as that of a spy.

The next morning the artful Ame?

his began to coax her father more than usual; who giving a loose to his tenderness, she inquisitively asked kim what they had been doing during the whole preceding night. The virtuous President answered, that they had been deliberating upon matters of great importance, but of which he could my nothing, since all the members present had taken an eath of secrecy. "However," said he, with a smile of affection, "this business does not regard our family affairs, and therefore you may be quite easy about it." He then turned the conversation upon another topic; but, being called out, he left Amelia rather vexed, and still more embarrassed in her mind than before. For two or three days she was melancholy and thoughtful. At last, being unable to resist her curiosity to know what was in the hux, she got up one night, went into the garden, and began to dig in the place where she had observed her father deposit the box: she worked for an hour, but had hardly dug half the way before she was tired. Herstrength now failing her, but her restless curiosity preying more strongly upon her, she determined to call one of the servants to her assistance.

The President had a valet de chambre, of whom he was very fond, and who, from having lived nearly forty years in the house, was much attached to Amelia. Amelia, therefore, going to his bed-room, desired him to get up softly, and follow her into the garden. The valet dechambre obeyed, and, being desired to dig the remainder of the hole, he did it so heartily, that in less than half an hour he reached the box. Imagining that it was full of money and jewels, he advised Amelia to have it broken open: they, therefore, broke the lock, and, to their great astonishment, found nothing in it, but a paper, upon which was written the resolution beforementioned, signed by all the Presidents of the Parliament of Paris, and by more thantwenty counsellors, men of rank and dignity. It was a simple protestation against the proceedings of the National Assembly.

At the reading of this paper, which Amelia could scarcely understand, her curiosity was strangely buffled; she began to regret all the trouble that she had taken for a trifle, from which morning began to dawn, they have tened to put the paper into the body and buried it again in the same hold with all possible precaution. After this they went to bed; Amelia being heartily disappointed, and the valet well pleased to discover a secret which was of far greater importance than Amelia suspected.

than Amelia suspected. Some months after, the tyranny of Roberspierre had obtained its highest pitch, and great rewards were offered to any persons that would inform against those who were disaffected to Roberspiere's party; the valet chambre of the President, blinded by the hopes of receiving a large sum, went to the city hall, and told the officers, that if they would search in a certain place in his master's garden, they would find a paper of great consequence. Like another Judas, this monster received the reward agreed upon, and conducted the gang to the place where the box was hidden. Thus the prying curiosity of a child was the cause of the perfidious treachery of a servant who had been faithful to his master for nearly forty years! Thepaper was delivered to Roberspieral. The next morning all the Presidents. who had subscribed to the proteststion were arrested, and among them, of course, the President Mote, who was thrown into a dungeon, in which, however, he did not languish long 4 for, three days after, he and about forty others were tried, condemned, and perished on the scaffold. Thus the silly, mean, and culpable curiosity of a child of fourteen, was the cause of the ruin of her father, and of a number of virtuous and innocent men,

Mr. URBAN, Jan. 10. MUCH has been said for and against Cow Pox Inoculation in your Magazine; but nothing has excited my attention more than the letter of Mr. James Taylor, in answer to P. P. in your last volume, p. 524. This has not been caused by his observations, but by those which he has been enabled to adduce, of Dr. Jenner himself. It appears that P. P. was not wrong in asserting that Dr. J. had inoculated his own child with the Small Pox, in 1798, after the discovery of Vaccination. This is a stubborn fact. Dr. J. tries to account for

IODINCOLE	ponta	You	777.5	AND THE PROPERTY -	·	w	v
	P - 11 - 1	3		To a poore Widdow with seve-
				rali children	0	.5	0
				To Widdow Huffireys -	0	5	Ð
				To Kate Russell, an old sick
				mayd (by Mrs. Hesly) -	0	2	6
				To a poore family neare Mr.
				Paulet's	0	5	0
				To 11 poore at ence -	0	- 6	6
				Towards binding a prentice -	0	10,	0
				To a poors family in the Towne, at Mr. Major's request -	0	5	0 Given him, likowise, to distra-bute to other poore -	0	5	•
				More to some of the Choristers	0	3	0

fouriere pound you was

At several times, by small parcells Left with some of my Brethren and Mrs. Williams to dis-tribute the day before I went man, the remainder

To 4 antient poore mayd-ser-vants in the Liberty -

£:10 15 0

0 15 6

1 9

0 10 0

To the Rev. Dr. Richard Busby, at the College in Westminster. Mr. Mr. Urban, NCLOSED I send you my Meteorological Journal from Dec. 16, to Jan. 15, inclusive. I have added to it, this month, a register of the Hygrometer which I consider to be a useful instrument in Meteorology. For a particular account of the kind of Hygrometer which I make use of, I refer your Readers to Phil. Mag. for November, 1801.

Thomas Forster.

METEOROLOGICAL JOURNAL, kept at Crapton, in Hackney, from the 16th of December, 1810, to the 15th of January, 1811.

	Thermometer.		Barometer.
Day of Month.	Max.	Min.	Max.	Min.	Hyg.	Wind.	Weather, &c.
Dec.16	38	31	30.25		1.16	N.	fair
17	48	45 .	30.10	29.94	2.9	w . s. w.	misty—fair
18	49	37	29.65	29.45	2.12		showery—clear windy
19	44	36	29.84	29.50	. 1.21	W NW	sun and clouds
20	49	34	29 ·81	29.38	1-17	1	fog-wind and showers
21	43	40	29:38	29.33	1.22		wind and rain—clear
22	40		29 ·68		1.12		showery
23	l	'		· •		w.	showery
24	1 .	1				1	showery
25	Ì						wind and showers
26	49	43	29.85	29 ·80	1.8	W. N. W.
27	48	1		29.54	1.9	w.	showers—fair
28	37	29	30.30	30-20	1.5	N.	fair
29	35	26	30.50	30.36	1.4	N.	clear
. 30	35	24	30.50	30· 50	0.23	N.	clear
31	30	26	30.51	30.35	1.3	· ·	clouded and clear
Jao. 1	50	24	30.28	30.15	1.3		wind and snow
	29	22	30.05	29.85	1.3	1	snow, and wind
2 3	24	18	29.76	29.71	1.3	SE—S	windy and snowing
4	29	23	29.95	29.91	1.2	E.	windy and sleet
5	27	24	29.89	29.83	0.23	E. N. E.
6	25	22	29.94	29.84	0.22	N. E.	clear and windy
7	29	24	29.94	29.90	0.20	E.	windy
8	27	21	29.86	29.82	0.29	E.	windy—cloudy
9	31	17	29.94	29.86	1.3	N. E.	snowing—foggy
1.0		32	29.97	29.94	1.6	E.	fog-rain
11	44	36	29.82	29.74	2.18		rain—fair
12	48	35	29.68	29.49	3	S.	small rain and wind
13	37	į .	29.70	29.66	1.20	s. s. w.
14	50	42	29.70	29.66	2-14	S. E.	small rain, windy
15	45	32	29.60	29.62	2.8	S. E.	rain-windy and clear

OBSERVATIONS.

- Dec. 16. Cirro-stratus disposed in beds of small round spots, this afternoon. Evaporation since 14th, 4°.
 - 17. Cirro-cumulus seen in the intervals of fog A. M. Cirro-stratus P. M. Evaporation, 3½0.
 - 18. Burr observed round Jupiter.
 - 19. Evaporation, 7º.
 - 20. Hard squalls of wind during the night.
 - 21. Very high wind, particularly at night.
 - 25. High wind, accompanied by flashes of lightning all night.
 - 26. The marshes along the course of the River Lee, flooded. Evaporation, 45°. 4
 - 27. Evaporation, 50.
 - 28. Evaporation, 50.
- 1811. Jan. 4. Very high wind.
 - 5. Black fleeces of Cumulus seen floating beneath Cirri, in a calm region above.
 - 12. The doors of the house much swelled with damp.
 - 14. Evaporation since 12th, 39°.
 - 16. Evaporation, 18. Cirro-strati and Cirro-cumuli observable.

			,
	1
•
		•

; I

they perceived what little ceremony he observed with a Gorgonius and Rufillus, with a Pantalabus and Nonce acquires all the interest of a lumentanus, Fannius and Tigellius, and dicrous dramatical scene, and the art-lessness lessness of a casual conversation, in the course of which, however, he himself finds an opportunity, as it were by chance, and as if between themselves alone, to disclose in confidence to Trebatius, his private opinion of one and another, which was partly designed for quite different persons.

In order to feel the beauty of this piece to its full extent, as far at least as that is possible at present, we must previously have made ourselves acquainted with the character of Trebatius through the medium of Cicero's letters to him which are still extant*. The dialogue itself will be the more perspicuous, the more distinct and lively the knowledge we have of the We then behold as it interlocutor. were the gesture, the looks, the tone with which he utters every word; and who can need to be told, how totally different in signification the very same words frequently are, when pronounced with one or another modulation of voice, accompanied with such, or a contrary motion of the eyes, lips, &c.?

Caius Trebatius Testa, sprung from a good family, though it always remained in obscurity, of the equestrian order, appears to have been the first of his name, who felt impulse and capacity to distinguish himself in the world. To a young man, destitute both of credit and fortune, only two avenues were open at Rome to either, the law, and the army. Trebatius made choice of the former, and thus becoming acquainted with Cicero, was so successful in his assiduities as in early life to secure to himself the protection of that great man, and had the art, no less by his industry and abilities than by the charms of his converse, to render himself so agreeable and estimable to him, that of all his humble friends there was scarcely one in whose behalf, from real attachment alone, he made such earnest applications, and in whose success he took so Trebatius was in cordial an interest. the prime of life, when Cicero, in the year 699, recommended him to Julius Cæsar, who (as every one knows) was then, as proconsul of Gaul, making hasty strides to the completion of the great plan he had been regularly prosecuting all his life. Gaul, and a place amongst Cæsar's comites, was at that juncture, a gold mine in the contemplation of all young folks who wanted to make their fortune; without being too scrupulous about the means. Trebatius was not cold and insensible to this shining bait; on the contrary, he had an eager desire to take the short road to opulence; but he appears to have been too heedless, too impatient. audwhat some would perhaps call too horest, for pushing his fortune, by a zealous and entire devotion to his new patron, as far as in his power lay. The truth is, in the temper and disposition of Trebatius, there were several points in which he resembled Cicero; he had not fortitude enough always to act, altogether and without capitulation and conditions, according to his conviction; though he had the principles of integrity. Whenever he was attracted towards the contrary side, he uniformly vacillated back again to his natural propensity, and there were propositions to which he could not be determined by any prospect of advantage. Hence it was, that notwithstanding the various obligations he was under to the mighty Cæsar, yet at the breaking out of the civil war, without assisting the republic in any way by it, he improvidently found himself engaged, together with his old and first patron, Cicero, in the Pompeian faction, and therefore, presently after, in the necessity of leaving his fate to the vaunted Clementia Cæsaris. He was not, however, deceived in his cal-Cæsar forgave him; and culation. Trebatius, to whom (as it appears) this event was a lesson of prudence for the rest of his life, henceforth addicted himself entirely to his former profession without meddling any farther with matters of state, excepting that in the year 706 he personated a very harmless popular tribune. He was, to judge from the familiar and jocose style of Cicero's letters to him, and the many clear indications they containt; a man of activity and enterprise, ^{*} They follow in the viith book of the letters ad fumiliares, from the 7th to the 21st in regular succession. The 19th and 20th are written in the year 709, all the rest are of the years 699 and 700.

[†] For instance: sed hæc jocali sumus tuo more, ep. 14. and in the 10th letter: rideemus licet, sum enim a te invitatus — and in the following, where he very gravely assures him, that, were it not for Trebatius's good, the separation from so agreeable a compa-

For, on such a footing they must have stood together, if it be at all conceivable, that Horace could make a man of Trebatius's public character and consequence the interlocutor in such a conference. But, no sooner do we presuppose this circumstance, and the jovial humour of the old lawyer, than we have the true point of view from which this piece should be contemwith affected solemnity in the authoritative style of a prætorian edict—transnanto ! — habento ! — Dacier at this place observes, from a passage in the fifth of Cicero's letters to Trebatius (Famil. vii. 10. where he is termed studiosissimus homo natundi) that' Trebatius here speaks as an old lover of swimming, and recommends to Horace his favourite diætetic remedy as anon would have been quite insupportable to him: "were not our parting beneficial to thee," he adds, "nothing could be more foolish than both of us: I in not immediately running back again to Rome after thee; thou in having not come flying bither. For, by Hercules, one serious or jocular conversation of ours fund nostravel severa vel jucosa congressio would be more interesting than all your foes and friends in Gaul."

* —— tibs spondeo, probsorem homsem, meliorem virum, prudentiorem esse neminem. Accedit eliam quod familiam ducit in jure civili, singularis memoria, summa scientia, &c. From the circumstance that he was then already at the head of a peculiar sect of jurists (which afterwards, through his principal pupil Antistius Labeo, grewinto such consequence as to rival the sect of Offices and Aterus Capito) it is to be inferred, that in the year 699, when Cicero introduced him into the cohors ammorum Casaru, he was not so young as Melmoth in his translation of the 7th epistle makes him a panacea which would infallibly cure him of the poetic itch. To me it appears extremely probable that Trebatius was a lover both of bathing in the Tiber, and of old wine, and that the poet jocosely alludes to both. Many such particular touches, which derive all their facetia from local and personal circumstances, are undoubtedly couched in this and several other pieces, which to us are as good as lost. Cupidum, pater optime, vires, &c. This excuse which Horace so frequently avails himself of, I think I have placed in its proper point of view, in the introduction to the epistle to Augustus. Here we cannot tail to observe the particular ingenuity, with which (for the purpose of avoiding the bad appearance of a bare evasion) he as it were forces himself into the dilemma, by putting this objection into the mouth of Trebatius: " If then thou hast no talent for heroic poesy, what hinders thee from celebrating the great qualities which Cæsar displays in peace?" — To such an objection no other salvo remained but that which he gives in reply: I should not be backward in so doing, when the proper time and opportunity arrive. The fact was, the Romans began with some reason to expect, that Cæsar Octavianus, by a mild and wise administration in peace, would efface the remembrance of what he had been during the triumvirale. But that remembrance was still too fresh, and that hope too fallacious to excite a vehement passion in the breast of any houest Roman to praise and extol the successiul usurper as fortem et justum, that is, precisely for those virtues, in diametrical opposition to which he had been manifestly acting but a few years before. All in good time. Octavianus must first have learnt to play with greater case and propriety, the new part, which Mæcenas and Agrippa were tutoring him to perform. At present such panegyrics would wear too much the appearance of flattery for being really flattering to him; and from whose mouth would such strains sound more suspicious, than from one who, six or seven years ago had borne arms against him? At that circumstance the poet seems to give a gentle hint in the words, nisi destro tempore Flacci verba, &c.

† Trebatius, in the year 718 (in which this piece, at the very latest was composed) was indeed not above fourscore years old, as Dacier, from a mustake of the facetious expression of Cicero, mi vetule, infers: since at the time when Cicero so calls him, he was cettle opportunitima for making his fortune with Casar. Cic. ad Famil. vii. 7. We may however safely admit, that he was somewhat turned of 50, and at least about 20 years elder than Horses.

---- recalcitrat undique tutus. This metaphorical expression taken from a wild unbroke horse deserves notice as an instance how different the notions of propriety and decorum are in different ages and with different na-It would ill become a modern poet to use it, notwithstanding J. Matthias Gesper thinks that kings are fond of being compared to horses. whole passage, from the twelfth to the twentieth line, may be alleged, in my opinion, as a very striking proof of the little inclination and disposition, Horace had to recommend himself to Octavianus by the arts of adulation since even on this so gratifying an occasion (for Trebatius probably acts here only as the spokesman of the public) he could not bring himself to say any thing obliging, so far from flattering, even but incidentally, to one who, with all his authority and power, acted so equivocal a part in the Roman government.

Votiva tabella. The votive tablets, with which we still see in our days, the Roman Catholic churches garnished, especially in petty towns and villages, are best adapted to give us an idea of these tabula votiva, which in the times of paganism, superstitious persons who attributed their deliverance from any imminent danger to the immediate assistance of some particular deity whom they had invoked in the hour of their distress, were wont to testify their gratitude. The poor blind heathens had likewise their consecrated places, and miraculous images; they made vows to them when groaning under affliction, which they paid on being relieved from it, by votive tablets, waxen, silver or golden arms, legs, eyes, breasts, &c. As these votive paintings, with which principally the temples and chapels of the marine deities were richly hung, were mostly put up by common people, and daubed by wretched painters, at a moderate price: it is no wonder, that, together with other errors against good taste, they transgressed the rule of the unity of the subject represented. Frequently, therefore on the same tablet was to be seen at one end of the fore-ground the credulous votary going on shipboard; in the middle ground buffeting the billows in a violent storm; on another plan suffering shipwreck; on another again upon the top of a prodigious wave, with uplifted hands making vows to Neptuue, and lastly, at the bis note, that by Esil is to be understood Vinegar; — and he adds, that "the lowness of the idea is in some measure removed by the uncommon term."

Mr. STEEVENS, the most powerful of all Shakspeare's commentators, rejects this construction; saying, "that the challenge is not very magnificent, which only provokes an adversary to a fit of the heart-burn, or the colick." And he remarks that "the Fesell would serve Hamlet's turn, or his own;" and farther, that "the Poet might have written Welsel, which falls in the Baltic ocean, and could not be unknown to any Prince of Denmark."

Mr. MALONE advocates the elucidation of Theobald of Estl, or Eisel, being Vinegar; and quotes Sir Thomas More, as follows:

With sowre pocion

If thou pain thy tast, remember therewithal

Row Christ for thee tasted Einil and gall."

Who claim not, yet confess their liberties, And brag to strangers of their happy lives.

To Foes a winter storm; whilst your Friends bow [ty's load; Like summer trees, beneath your boun-To me (next him whom your great self,

with low

And cheerful duty serves) a giving God.

Since this is you, and Rhodalind (the light By which her sex fled virtue find) is yours;

Your Damond, which tests of jealous sight, The stroke, and fire, and Orsza's juice endures.

I trust this elucidation may be acceptable to your readers.
Yours, &c. W. P.

.....

ON FRENCH VERSIFICATION.

Mr. URBAN, . Bristol, Dec. 7.

WHILE we appear to acknowledge the elegance and precision of French prose, we seem little affected by the melody of French verse; or rather, rather, we are unwilling to admit that it possesses any melody whatever. It is however certain, that one nation can very imperfectly judge of those rules of harmony which govern the language of another, unless that language has become, by insensible adoption, equally familiar with its own; as is the case with the French tongue generally on the Continent. Laharpe, after quoting Voltaire's witty sarcasm, that "the English gained two hours a day on their neighbours, by eating half their words," and after observing that our inarticulateness, as to vowels especially, seemed to shock the very principles of articulation, finishes, by informing his readers, that "the English too, pretend to a harmony of their own, no less than their neighbours; and, doubtless, they must be believed; provided, he pertly adds, they admit in their turn, that the harmony exists but for themselves." would indeed be difficult to make a toreigner perfectly acquainted with the interior structure of our metrical harmony: especially in blank verse; of which, the music chiefly depends on the different arrangement of the pauses in different successive lines: but Laharpe is no more justified in insinuating that this is a mere harmony of agreement which has no positive existence, than an Englishman, whose knowledge of the French language is usually limited to the reading and writing it, can reasonably be excused in retorting on French rhythm a similar observation. What has contributed to this disdain of French verse, I allude more particularly to the heroic verse, is the very general prejudice, that its cadence is anapæstic: a measure usually employed by us on fight subjects, and, therefore, from peculiar association, regarded as unsuitable to subjects of dignity. posing this idea of the French rhythmical cadence accurate, the objection, arising from habits of national taste, would be altogether frivolous; but the notion of a certain appropriateness in particular metres to particular subjects, is in great measure arbitra-The lines in Beattie's Hermit,

But when shall Spring visit the mouldering urn?

Oh! when shall it dawn on the night of the aever, I believe, suggested to any body associations of a mirthful na-style and expression, than the syllabic arrangement, that produces the seeming correspondence of the verse with the subject. The celebrated author of "Hints for the Education of a Princess" is therefore wholly mistaken, when she infers the impropriety of the French Epic measure, from its supposed resemblance to which, as connected with a ludicrous association, cannot be admitted as a fair instance of comparison, and of which the rhythm, considered abstractedly from the sense, has, perhaps, necessarily, no essential property of light and joyous movement. The resemblance, moreover, is so completely chimerical, that, if the following verse,

Dans le récneillement son âme est absorbée, were pronounced with correspondent stress of emphasis to the verse of the English ballad, it would be absolute That partial emphasis which forms the peculiarity of English pronunciation, added to our close, compressed method of articulating, so contrary to the open articulation of the French, has led to this error in the reading of French verse. The French detect an Euglishman by the emphatic importance which he gives to one syllable more than another; which, concurring with his close and often sibilant articulation, cuts short the time of a word. In French verse, as in French prose, the emphasis for the most part is evenly distributed; the heroic measure is not marked by quantity like the Latin, nor by emphatic cadence like the English, but by time alone. The French Epic verse has twelve times: it exactly corresponds to the Alexandrine or twelvesyllable verse of Drayton's Polyolbion, which has nothing incompatible with Epic dignity of flow, and is less unwieldy than the measure in which Chapman translated the Iliad.

And as each one is prais'd for her peculiar things, [springs; So only she is rich in mountains, meres, and And holds herself as great in her superfluers waste [grac'd.

As others by their towns and stately tillage
It appears then that the movement of the French heroic is grave and state.

ly; and that its recitation, so far from dancing trippingly over the tongue, is of the second line. The verses often flow early into each other.

Que dis-je? ah! libre enfin des chames de la ville
Ne pourais-je à mon gré solitaire et tranquille
Confier aux hameaux le reste de mes jours?
Le luxe des cités, et le faste des cours
N'ont jamais ébloui les régards du poète:
Il songe en les fuyant à la douce retraite
Où sur des frais gazons, sous des ombrages verds
Il pourra méditer et soupirer ses vers.

† The English reader will accept a hasty translation of the passages quoted. Beneath redoubled blows the benches ring; Rock the firm walls, the vaulted roofs rebound, And the deep organ breathes a long and groaning sound. Air whistles, roars the heaven, the surge at distance howls. Whence air, earth, sea, rush boundless on the sight. There need such chartisements as may astound A shuddering universe; yes, let mankind Trembling compare the punishment and crime. ¶ I have beheld him grim with dust, and clad-In tatter'd garb, and pale --- but still his eye Beneath the dusky horror flash'd its pride.  Ah! why at freedom from the imprisoning town, Why may I not in solitary calm To hamlets trust my residue of days? The city's luxury, the pomp of courts, Were never dazzling in the Poet's eyes: He flies in thought to that serene retreat Where, on fresh herbage, underneath the shade Of verdant woods, he sits and meditates,

Or sighs his verses forth.

It seems probable, from the compositions of the earlier French Poets, that the metrical language of France might have attained a far greater degree of strength and freedom, had it not been refined down and restrained by the care of successive improvers. The modern French critics, indeed, object to the obsolete style in question, as barbarous; and it must be confessed that they are the best judges of their own language. The practice of the old Poets will, at least, demonstrate the practicability of running one verse into another, which the French call enjambement, and even of combining words in the manner of the Greek epithets; a usage to which the language is commonly thought inadequate. The following passage deserves to be cited at length, from its quaint ingenuity.

Trois fois cinquante jours le general naufrage
Devasta l'univers — enfin d'un tel ravage
L'Immortel attendri, n'out pas sonné si-tôt
La retraite des eaux, que soudain flot sur flot
Elles vont s'écouler; tous les flouves s'abaissent;
La mer rentre en prison; les montagnes rénaissent;
Les bois montrent déja leur limoueux rameaux;
Dejà la terre croit par le décroit des eaux;
Et bref la seule main de Dieu darde-tonnerre
Montra la terre aù ciel et le ciel à la terre*. DUBARTAS.

While I am on the subject of French verse, I shall observe that their lyric measure has great sweetness: witness these stanzas of Malherbe:

Le malheur de ta-fille aû tombeau descendue
Par un commun trépas;
Est-ce quelque dédale où ta raison perdue
Ne se rétrouve pas?
Elle était de ce monde, où les plus belles choses
Ont le pire destin:
Et rose, elle a vecu ce que vivent les roses
L'espace d'un matin†.

The fall from a long verse to a short one, has in that language an effect spirited and pleasing.

Ont-ils perdu l'esprit? ce n'est plus que poussière
Que cette majesté si pompeuse et si fière
Dont l'éclat orgueilleux étonnait l'univers;
Et dans ces grands tombeaux où leurs âmes hautaines
Font encore les vaines
Ils sont mangés des vers‡.

Of the lighter lyric measure, employed on themes of pleasure and gallantry, it is unnecessary to speak; its ease and sprightliness of flow are generally acknowledged: my object has been to insist on the higher merits of French versification; which, I ampersuaded, are only less relished, because they are less understood. In order to appreciate the metre of the French Poets, we must become intimately versed in the living language; we must hear it declaimed by the best French tragedians; to discern its povers, we must understand its principles.

Yours, &c. Rhythmus.

* Thrice fifty days the universal flood Devastated the globe: but touch'd at length
With such drear havock, scarce th' Eternal bade [wave
The deeps retreat, when sudden wave on.
Slide soft away; the rivers smooth subside;
The sea within its rocky dungeon rolls;
The mountains rise again: the woods put

The mountains rise again; the woods put forth [now gains
Their slimy boughs; increasing earth
On the decreasing waters; the sole hand
Of the dread thunder-darting God reveals
The earth unto the heaven, the heaven to earth.

† Ah! thy daughter's hapless doom.

Sunk within the common tomb;

Seems it then a gloomy maze
Where thy reason wilder'd strays?
Creature of this world was she:
Fairest things the frailest be:
Rose she liv'd, a morning's pride,
And with roses bloom'd and died.

‡ Could those haughty spirits die?
That fierce, vaunting majesty,
Whose pompous glare a universe dismay'd,
Is now but ashes and a shade.
And in those tombs of massive state,
Where still their souls affect the great,
On each majestic form

Riots the ravening worm.

				-
		•
						-
							٠.
		•				•
			,
				·
						•

Omit.Mag. Jan. 1811. A. I. p. 17.

1 STJOHN'S. MARGATE, N.E.

Margate, Dovercourt, and Ferring Churches.

Sept. 19, 1810. Mr. URBAN, THE Church of St. John the Bap-tist. Margate. in the lale of tist, Margate, in the lale of Thanet, (of which a N. E. view is inclosed, see Pl. II. fig. 1.) has been so well described by Mr. Hasted in the 10th volume of his excellent History and Survey of Keut, as almost to preclude the necessity of any farther observations: I trust, however, that the following description will not be deemed an intrusion on the time of your Readers. It seems evidently to have been raised at different times, as convenience suggested, with little regard to external appearance; it is principally built of field flints rough-casted over, the quoins of the windows and the door-cases being of Ashler stone. It consists of a nave, with an aile on each side, and three chancels. The North chancel is dedicated to St. James. On the North side of the high chancel is a square building of flints and hewn stone, with battlements, and very strongly buttressed. The windows, likewise, are small, and secured with iron bars. It appears that from before the year 1615, to the end of the year 1790, this was made use of for a store-house, for the preservation of the ammunition belonging to the Fort. In the year 1701, however, it was by a few alterations converted into a vestry, and as such it still remains. The inside of the church is low, and not very convenient. It contains some monuments worthy of notice *, and a few brases in tolerable preservation. The church-yard, which is large, is crowded with tomb-stones: these I have omitted in the view, as they would otherwise have perplexed the prospect of the building. The steeple contains a clock and six bells, all of which have inscriptions on them: concerning the tenor, the traditionary rhyme mentioned by Lewis + is still current, which I should be happy could any of your Correspondents explain; it is this;

John de Daundelyon with his great dog, Brought over this Bell on a Mill Cog.

> Yours, &c. PEMBREY.

Mr. Urban, Ilarwich, Sept. 28. OVERCOURT is a small village situated about two miles S.W. of Harwich. Its Church (a view of which is inclosed, see Pl. 11. fig. 2), dedicated to All-Saints, consists of a nave and chancel, with a square tower at the West and.

.This place in denomination, in all ecclesiastical accounts, presedes Harwich, as being the mother-church. Yours, &c. R. R. BARNES.

Oct. 28, 1810. Mr. URBAN, SEND you a drawing of the Church of Ferring in Sussex (see Pl. 11. fig. 3.) situated about four miles East of Little Hampton, and within a quarter of a mile of the Sea. village has many indications of rural beauty. As we have not yet been favoured with a History of this County, the following monumental inscriptions, literally transcribed, may not, perhaps, be unacceptable to your Readers. Should this be the case, I shall be happy to present you with what memoranda and inscriptions I have collected at different times during my rambles through this interesting part of our Island.

Yours, &c. I REDERICUS.

Ferring Church is a low building, consisting of a nave, North aile, and chancel; it is built with flint. At the West end is a small wooden furret.

Against the South wall of the nave is affixed a monument of white marble, with the following inscription:

"M. S. Of Mrs. Barbara Johnson, widow, and relict of kichard J. esq. late of the city of London, and daughter and coheress of John Minshull, esq late of Portslade in this county, by Barbara his wife, who was one of the daughters and coheiresses of William Westbrook, esq. late of this Parish. She departed this life the 4th July, 1757, aged 57 years."

Arms: In a loženge Arg. on a pile Azure (issuing in chief) three wolves heads erased of the field; an inescucheon of pretence, Az. issuing out of a crescent a star of six rays Arg.: impaling, Quarterly, I and 4, Az. is-

^{*} Copies of such monumental inscriptions as are worthy of notice, and the substance of the less interesting ones, may be seen in Mr. Cozens's "Tour through the Isle of Thanet, and some other Parts of East Kent;" where there is also an account of Margate as it was in the year Lor. 1792.

⁺ Page 98 of his "History of the Isla of Thanet."

GENT. MAG. January, 1811.

suing out of a crescent a star of six rays Arg. 3, Gu. a leopard's face with fleur de lis jessant Or. 4, Sab. three bars Arg.

Adjoining is the following inscription on a monument of veined marble:

"II. S. E. Richardus Westbrook; mercator, filius natu minimus Johannis W. arm. et Barbaræ uxoris ejus; qui apud Cyprum insulam Consulis munere (uon sine fructu et honore) functus est. Tandem in patriam reversus, animam cœlo, exuvias hoc loco deponendas curavit. Anno Domini 1700, Aug. 15; ætat. 49.

In quam decidimus, quicquid mortale creamur."

On a monument similar to the former, as follows:

"M. S. Gulielmi Westbrook de Fering, armig. et Elizabethæ uxoris. Obiit ille Feb. 29, anno Domini 1702, ætat. 62. Illa Oct. 16, anno Domini 1694, ætat. 54.

In thalamo nos junxit Amor: Mors inque sepulchro,

Una fœlices tandem requiescimus uma.

Hoc Filiæ lugentes posuere Monumentum."

Arms: Gu. a leopard's face with fleur de lis jessant Or, for Westbrook; impaling Sab. 3 bars Arg.

Adjoining, on a handsome monument of white marble, as follows:

"M. S. of Mrs. Elizabeth Richardson, widow and relict of Joseph R. esq. late of the Middle Temple, London; and one of the daughters and coheiresses of John Minshull, esq. late of Portslade in this County, and Barbara his wife, who was one of the daughters and coheiresses of William Westbrook, esq. late of this Parish. She departed this life the 22nd March, 1752, aged 52 years."

Arms: In a lozenge, dexter defaced, sinister in pale, same as her sister's, Mrs. B. Johnson.

Facing these monuments in the nave, on the floor, a large blue stone as follows:

"Memoriæ et Pietati sacrum. Sub hoc marmore depositæ sunt reliquiæ Barbaræ uxoris Johannis Westbrook, armigeri; quæ obiit 30mo die Maij, anno Domini 1657..... Johannis, qui ex hâc vitâ decessit.... die Junij, anno 1666. Atnbo sperantes resurrectionem quæ est in Jesu Christo."

Opposite the Pulpit in the aile a flat stone as follows:

"To the memory of Mrs. Barbara Minshull, wife of John Minshull, gent. eldest daughter of William Westbrook, esq. who departed this life June 27...." The remainder of the inscription is covered by a pew.

There is also another flat stone on which the name of Westbrook is just discernible; a family long since extinct, but formerly of considerable note in this parish. Their estates, by marriage of a daughter, became the property of the Minshulls; and from them, by marriage, were carried into the family of the Richardsons, who are at present possessed of them.

At the East end of the nave near the chancel is a lofty monument of various-coloured marble: on the upper part appears a youth whose countenance is expressive of the most poignant grief; on the lower compartment is the following inscription:

"Underneath are deposited the remains of William Westbrook Richardson, esq. of the Middle Temple, London, barrister at law, high sheriff of this county in the year of our Lord 1770. He died July 23, 1771, aged 45 years. The regret of this gentleman's relations and friends is the best panegyric to his memory.

"Here also lies interred the body of Mrs. Barbara R. relict of W. W. R. esq. together with Miss Barbara R. their only daughter, who died young. Mrs. B. R. died April 8, 1774, aged 55 years. To the memory of his ever-revered parents, Wm. Richardson, esq. of Findon in this County, their eldest son, erected this monument."

The workmanship of this monument is most beautiful, being adorned with exquisitely rich carving and mouldings of various-colouted marble.

Against the South wall of the nave is an elegant monument of white marble: at the back of which rises a pyramid of black marble, ornamented with an urn, &c., with the following inscription:

"In a vault underneath the Vicar's seat are deposited the remains of Thomas Richardson, esq. of Warminghurst-Park; high-sheriff of this County, in the year of our Lord 1793. He died August 29, 1797, aged 64."

Arms: Sab. on a chief Arg. three lions heads erased of the field; impaling, Sable, a lion passant guardant Arg. and a chief Or.

On a tablet affixed to the South wall of the nave as follows:

"In memory of Anne, wife of the Rev. James Penfold, vicar of this parish, who departed this life the 13th June, 1769, in the 31st year of her age.

"Oh i

IN your last volume, p. 403, you have given us a good plate of the West front of Lichfield Cathedral. I have compared it with that in Dugdale's Monasticon by Daniel King. (This view is somewhat more to the S. W.) They nearly agree, which shows there was an accuracy of delineation at-tended to, as well in the time of King as of Mr. J. Carter. The differences may many of them arise from alterations made in the building since the time that in Dugdale was taken; especially, in the upper part of the great West window; that in Carter's being what, I suppose, is called the Marigold, or Catharine wheely finish, that in Dugdale, the intersecting pointed such, with quaterfoils in the compartments. The cross, too, above, on the finish of the gable, is not given by Carter, it is by King. The pedestals of the statues, in the first and second rows above the dade, are also diminular to those in Dugdale, being by Cortor tall and slender, whereas by King they are low, squat, and seems about three acres, extending into two closes belonging to the hears of Berrys of Linwood Grange, and a Mr. Robinson.

Meer Hospital, commonly called Meer-Hall, four miles South of Lincoln, East of Sleaford Turnpike. The foundation and broken ground, no less than 20 acres, were formerly a village. At the toot is a fine pond and spring of water. The site of the Hospital is not exactly known; a modern stone-built farm-house is just by. The estate is extra-parochial, belonging to 1. Manby, esq.

Revesby Abbey. A quarter of a mile South of the village of Revesby, near the edge of the great West Fen. It occupied a considerable space of ground. Foundations of walls, and a fragment two feet high of brick and stone, with loose stones here and there, are the only remains of the building. On the South, within the area, are mounts of earth, like barrows. The site of the Abbey, &c. forms a good grazing close, belonging.

belonging to the venerable Sir Joseph Banks, bart.

Bollington. About a mile South of Wragby, now an hamiet to Goltho. The Abbey stood on a rising ground, close by a wood: a ruin remains, in a plain stone wall about 14 feet high, and 20 long. The space of ground is moated round, containing about six acres. A mean-built farm-house, and the stone wall above-mentioned, are the only appearance of buildings on the spot. On the East side is a cir-cular moat, inclosing a small space of ground, with a pond in the middle, the use of which is difficult to guess. The Abbey ground belongs to a gentleman of the name of Hackett, lately purchased of -Chapman, esq.

Hugworthington. Near Spilsby. The religious house here stood on a sunny hill side, South of the village, on land now the property of Lord Newark. A plain stone-built end wall, with two fire-places, one over the other, is all that remains of the building worthy of notice.

Haugh. Near Alford, on heathy wolds, now an extra-parochial place. The lower part of the present farm or manor-house is of brick, and very antient in appearance. It stands on high dry ground; and is probably part of the religious house called Haugh. The Church, a small edifice, contains several monuments and memorials of the Boll family. The estate belongs to some ladies of the name of Horsfield. An avenue of 70 antient yew-trees is near the house.

Torksey. This religious house was situate on the East part of the Village, in a place now called the Abbey-yard. There is no building upon it, but a new-erected brick and tiled barn; even the foundations have been so leveled down, that scarce any vestige remains. The estate belongs to Sir Abraham Hume, bart.

Tattersall College. Situate on the Bast side the Market-place, on the back of a new-erected dwelling-house, inhabited by Mr. Footit. What remains of the College is a large brick and tiled building, now made use of as a malting. The walls are very thick, the door-cases and windows are of stone, some arched, and others with mullions, very antient. The building, and site thereof, belongs to Earl Fortescue. Some people, however, suppose the College stood near the East end of the Church, where there are certainly many foundations, and a remarkable remnant of a brick building with an arched roof, like a bath.

Croyland. The venerable ruin of Croyland is in the same precise state it was 20 years ago; when Mr. Gough, with his friend Mr. Nichols, visited and described the remains.—The North aile of the Abbey Church is now the Parish Church. The Abbey and offices were situated on the South side this building, on land belonging to Mr. Whitsid, and now growing hemp, Sept. 14, 1810. C.

Mr. URBAN, Whitkirk, near Leeds, Sept. 1, 1810.

TAVING lately had occasion to look into the antient registers of this parish, I was induced to examine the whole series from the year 1603, when they commence, as well as the Churchwardens' accounts, which are preserved as far back as the year 1653, and other parish records, entered in the same book with those accounts. In the course of this research I was led to make some extracts, which may not be altogether unacceptable, or at least may tend to excite farther examinations of such old records as may be yet in existence, and thereby furnish similar or more curious information. The accounts of the Overseers of the Poor for the Township of Temple-Newsam, lying chiefly in this parish, are also preserved from the year 1663, and those of the Constables for the same Township from the year 1670; but I met with nothing sufficiently striking in either of them, on a cursory survey, to draw my attention.

The following is the list of the Vicars of this Parish as far as I have been able to make them out from the notices that occur in these records.

Richard Tharold, M.A. first occurs: buried 10th Dec. 1618.

Nathaniel Taylor, B.D. succeeded, inducted 8th May, 1619.

He occurs in 1623, but I do not find the register of his burial.

Christopher Rudston, M.A. buried

13th July, 1635.

Charles Procter, M. A. succeeded, inducted 30th Nov. 1635: ejected or resigned in 1661.

Richard

Richard Wright, vicar of the said Church, upon the twenty-third day of June, in the thirteenth years of the raigne of our soveraigne Lord, Charles the Second, by the Grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. Anno Domini 1661. In testimony hereof, wee hereunto set our hands. Charles Procter.

Will. Dixon. [Parish Clerk.]"

Under the idea of his being one of the Ejected Ministers, I could not but feel strongly interested for Mr. Procter on this occasion; particularly when I found he was a married man, and burthened with a large family. Seven children I find registered to Charles Procter, vicar, between the years 1648 and 1658, both inclusive, and I also find myself under the necessity of fathering four other children upon him, registered to Charles Prockter, with a trifling yariation of the spelling, and without the addition of vicar, between the years 1639 and 1645 inclusive; as there is no direct evidence to the contrary, the date of his marriage

Bame in sufficient repaire, and in such decent manner as becomes the house of God. CHARLES PROCTER, RIC. BOOTHE,
JOHN EAMORSON,"

I have before hinted that the first impression upon my mind was, that Mr. Procter was one of the Ejected Ministers; on which account, under the circumstances which I have mentioned, he would be entitled to serious commiseration; particularly if his removal were occasioned by scruples of conscience, in declining the subscription to the Articles. Upon a closer comparison of dates, however, I am willing to hope that he might be preferred to another benefice, as the operation of the Parliamentary proceedings would of course have ceased long before the year following the Restoration of Charles II. and the date of his successor's reading himself in was about one year and two months prior to St. Bartholomew's day, when by the Act of Uniformity, 14 Charles II. about 2000 of the Clergy, according to Hume, were deprived of their livings.

In the Churchwardens' Accounts I find the following entries:

"1653. Given to Mr. Procter towards the providing a dinner for the Ministers upon the Exercise day, 5s.

1654. Charges upon the Ministers on the Exercise day, 6s.

1659. Charges att a meeting att Whitkirke of severall neighbours, in consulting about the returne of an answer to a warrant from the Sheriffe about Ejected Ministers, 4s. 6d.

Mr. Procter, and Francis Dawson's charges, in going to York about the same businesse, 5s. 2d.

Given to Mr. Procter by consent of the Parishioners, for going to Yorke, and his paines about the same, 5s."

From one article in these accounts I am able to trace Mr. Procter into Lincolnshire after his resignation or ejectment, viz.

"1662. Edward Butterfield's charges in going into Lincolnshire, to speake with Mr. Procter about Mr. Askwith's leagacy, 6s."

Of the distresses of the Ejected Clergy at this period, some at least of the following entries are melancholy instances:

"1667. Given to a poore old Minister who preached here June 2nd, 3s. 6d.

Charges at severall times upon severall Ministers that preached here, 3s. 6d.

1668. Charges upon Mr. Bennington and some friends of his when hee preached here att Christmasse, 2s. 2d.

Bestowed in ale upon a poore preacher that preached here, 6d.

1669. Given to a poore Minister who preached here at the Church April 25, 5s. Bestowed on him in ale, 4d.

February 13, 1669. Collected then by the Churchwardens in the Church upon a testimoniall, and at the request of the Lord Bishop of Yorke, for one Mr. Wilmut, a poore Minister, the summe of 8s. 4d.

May 16, 1675. Collected then in the Church, upon a Lettre of Request brought by Mr. Francis Fowler, of Bungay in the County of Suffolke, a poore distressed Minister, which was given to him May 17, 1675, 5s. 7d. ob."

But the most affecting instances are those which follow:

"April 10th, 1670. Given then by the neighbours to a poore mendicant Minister, one Mr. John Rhodes, who then preached here, and after sermon stood in the midle ile to receive the charity of the people, the summe of 12s. 3d.

July 3d, 1670. Given then by the neighbours to a poor lame itinerary, one Mr. Walker, who then preached here, and after the sermon stood in the midle ile to receive the people's charity, which was 9s. 3d.

November 20th, 1670. Given then in the midle ile of the church by the neighbours to a poore mendicant itinerary lame priest, one Mr. Walker, who had preached here the 3d of July 70, and preached again this day, the summe of 3s. 6d.

July 30th, 1671. Given then in the midle ile of the church by the neighbours to the aforenamed Mr. Walker, the mendicant itinerary lame minister, who had been here severall times before, and did then preach, the summe of 6s. 3d.

Yours, &c.

S. S.

Mr. Urban, London, Dec. 18. THE evil of the present depreciation of our Paper Money having attained a height at once alarming and disastrous, and being pregnant with imminent danger to the commonwealth, every character conversant in matters of finance, and the political world in particular, are behoved, by the manifest existence of the fact, maturely to deliberate thereon, and to suggest any apparently efficient mode for the removal of this primary cause of general distress, this source of a series of national misfortunes, and principal measure, by which the Government may, in regard to the prosperity, strength, and true interests of the Country, be misled. Impressed with the great importance and magnitude of the subject, I shall venture (although in a great measure destibute of the qualities of a Financier or a Politician), after stating a few ascertained facts, to offer some material observations; and hope, that should any thing of an incongruous or indigested nature appear in my view of the case, I may have the advantage of the concise and limited manner in which your Publication obliges me to treat it. My design is simply to call the attention of your readers to the subject; and, in doing that, my end is answered.

It has, Sir, recently been demonstrated by a gentleman intimately acquainted, as well with financial concerns, as with all the arcana of office, and official circumstances, that "the difference between £46. 14s. 6d. and £56. (that is to say, the difference between us in a gradual and imperceptible manner; and although it is known to act, and to act magniterially and with decision, yet it is comparatively but little heeded, and, notil the late report of the Bullion Committee, passed almost upregarded.

We have been told that the export trade rapidly increases; that in the last year the amount of the woollen mamufactures exported was £5,416,151, exceeding by £562,152 that of the preceding year! If this immense exportation is attributable (for so the Report infe s) to the manufactures exported, without any reference to the Paper medium, we must doubtless couclude that the country is in a most flourishing condition; but, after the very able exposition given us by the gentleman alluded to, it is utterly impossible to entertain any such idea. Supposing, however, for a moment that the high amount of the returns were not to be attributed to the fluctuations of the Paper Currency: to what then can we attribute it? The fact of the very limited extent of the demands would of itself afford ample our manufactures increased to an extent almost incredible! If we recollect that, with the exception of our colonies, Portugal, Sweden, Sicily, and a portion of Spain, we, at the period of the return referred to, held no intercourse but that of stealth, no trade but that of contraband, we shall be fully satisfied of the fallacy of attributing the increase of the return to the increase of the exportation. Weighing, therefore, these circumstances, with the demonstration of the £20. per cent. depreciation, likewise with the consequent high price of each article by which the manufactures are produced, and with the very high wages of artizans and workmen of all descriptions, we cannot be at a loss to devise the true origin of the augmented amount of our commercial returns. Perhaps if I were to speculate on the progressive annual advancements, and calculate the gradual depression of Paper Money, I might discover, that the declared annual increase is, in point of fact, an annual depreciation of the circulating medium, in a ratio of little more or less than the annual advancement.

In 1807 some papers were laid before Parliament, which were afterwards printed, and in which it was stated, as the result of ascertained facts, that wages since 1780 had advanced £39. 7s. 1d. per cent.; and that the price of provisions had advanced, in the same time, £84. Ss. 2d. per cent. To what but the numense and incalculable amount of Paper circulating in the world can we ascribe these calamitous evils? What, but the unlimited discounts of the Bank, giving life and energy to a swarm of jobbers and speculators; their unrestrained issues, unregulated by an al-Jusion to the Bullion and Coin, and proper securities, in their coffers; and the fictitious capital thus floating, and enhancing by its plenitude every commodity its eyes are cast on? If a period is not put to such practices, it is to be expected (although by the shutting of the Swedish ports the calls for our manufactures are still more limited than they were in 1809) that the returns for the current year will far exceed that of its prede-By the mode of the Bank cessor! discounts, a merchant, or body of merchants, disposed to speculate or engross an article likely to advance in price, may, by sending their own bills or paper (together with such as the credit of their name, or their influence, can obtain from their friends) at different but close periods, into the Bank, get the whole discounted (that is to say, get the currency of the realm in exchange for them); and, by applying the produce to the buying-up (to make use of a well-understood phrase) of that article, cause an inconceivable advancement in its price, and consequently a reduction in the value of Paper, and a long train of attending miseries and evils. virtual encouragement of the most base and infamous of practices, this boundless issue of the legal currency, do they not, by throwing an immensity of that currency into circulation, not only cause and accelerate its depreciation; but may it not ultimately endanger the very existence of the state? Do they not eucourage and further the views of that swarm of locusts which prey on the very vitals of industry? 1)0 they not enhance the prices of the necessaries of life, by holding out an inducement to forestall and monopolize? It is somewhat consolatory to reflect, that those who are the primary cause of the depreciation, and reap a present gain,: must in the end pay the deficiency; and perhaps, if it were not for the mischief it causes in leading the world, and the Government in particular, to helieve that the export of our manufactures is annually increasing, and that to an amazing amount, when in reality it is nothing more than a fall in the value of money, and also the advancement it creates in the prices of all articles whatsnever, it were better to leave this trading company: to the pursuit of their plans, and await the blow which may sinite them. so severely as to level them with the dust.

The cause and multiplicity of bankruptcies is another point to which I beg to call your attention. In a general sense, they are a considerable benefit to the Country; a partial evil, but a general good: they are the proofs of the disappointment and confusion of speculators; they are the failures of men, who, as far as in them lies, have aimed at some engrossment, meditated some forestalment, or contemplated the disposal, at an advanced price, of some necessary commodity; they are the resource of men, who, by a total disregard of repule, and an abuse of public confidence, have plunged into hazard, and staked every thing their credit can by any possible means obtain, to accomplish their sole and selfish view of enriching themselves (although it must of necessity be accomplished at the expence of the interest of their Country, and of numberiess individuals), and being disappointed in such their landable endeavours, are reduced to the extremity of appealing to the bankrupt laws (laws which are wisely ordained for the protection of the honest trader, and for his amelioration when, by unforescen misfortunes, he is involved in embarrassment and difficulty) for relief; and, forsooth, to become bankrupt, and be exempted from any penalty whatever! In justice to the community at large, and as a preventive against such malpractices, a distinction should be made in bankruptcy; those failures which bave arisen from a fall in the articles in which the bankrupt dealt, from bad measures by which our country may again truly flourish, and by which the necessaries of life, the foreign exchange, and commerce in general, may be reduced to their natural level.

Yours, &c. Philopatrie.

Mr. Unnan, Jan. 10.

IT is often difficult to come to a conclusion on a question where much is said on both sides. Much has been said and written on the propriety of abliging the Bank of England to pay their notes in specie; but it should be considered, that, were they driven to this extremity by the repeal of the restriction act, they would in their own defence be compelled to narrow their discounts, so as to occasion the greatest distress throughout the Nation.

Suppose, for instance, the Bank should say, "We should lose a million and half of money if 10 millions of our notes were to be sent in for payment in guineas" (and there is hitle doubt but as many would be sent in); and "We will, therefore, be wise in GENT. MAG. January, 1811.

that Guineas, which were two shillings deficient in weight, were generally current. Suppose, therefore, that Government were to raise the nominal value of our present Guineas to 23 shillings, or to coin twenty shillings or one pound pieces, of such a weight in gold as a one-pound Bank, Note would now buy: this, probably, of evils would be the least.

Mr. URBAN, Dec. 31. Y antagonist, under the signature of " An Architect, opening his long-threatened attack, upon the restoration of Henry the VIIth's Chapel, with a prelude in praise of J. C.; but, whatever signature he may assume, whether J. C. or An Architect, or plain John Carter, or Sir John Carter, Knight of the Red Cross, or whether he dictates his own panegyricks to one of his Esquires, it is to me indifferent: if the assault is made by an individual, it is malice prepense; if by a collective force, it is a foul conspiracy against the character of an Artis employed employed in the most difficult task of his profession, and whose character is his support. I combat with no one but the Knight; and, though he maintains that I have declined the contest, I refer him to my repeated profession of defending that Artist, as long as the Knight shall appear in arms against him.

4

In your last Volume, Part I. p. 539, the Architect asserts, that his "friend John Carter informed him that the Master-workman to the Chapel's restorations observed to him, that he was bringing about every means to give more light to the Porch; one of which was, to knock up for the purpose a sky-light in the centre of the arched cieling."

Now, Mr. Urban, this passage, interpreted into plain English, is—John Carter told John Carter a direct and unfounded falsehood. The Masterwork wan never did propose to knock up a sky-light in the arched cieling; and the word of the Workman is entitled to more credit than John Carter's word, because John stands convicted of four falsehoods upon your records. Falsehood, Mr. Urban, is an unlawful weapon in controversy; and I maintain, therefore, that the Knight has tost his spurs.

A second charge is brought forward by the Architect in his tender concern for the support of the arched window now under repair, and his admonition of securing the arch by upright tim-Here there is no falsehood indeed, but there is ignorance in the extreme; for every architect in the kingdom but J. Carter knows that the strength of an arch consists in its proportion and bearings; and I cannot help thinking, that John made this observation upon his return from a visit to Staines Bridge, where he had seen an iron arch supported upon wooden stilts; but he should have considered that Sir Reginald Bray's arches never wanted such a wretched expedient as stilts to support them; but that his arch was correspondent to the abutments, and the abutments to the arch. Further than this, if John were an Architect, he ought to know, that the mullions in every Gothic window throughout the kingdom, however beautiful or ornamental, are not intended for the support of the arch which contains them, but to admit iron and support glass.

With equal kindness John has formerly warned the Hestorers not to open a turret, not to touch a flying buttress, at their peril; but turrets have been opened, and flying buttresses replaced, without difficulty or danger: and had this operation been delayed a few years longer, the fabrick could not have been restored; it must have been rebuilt.

It will be a piece of friendly advice in return, to warn the Architect not to indulge the fervency of his imagination, by adopting the language of "The London Spy." It is impious to impute a work of human excellence to Omnipotence, and nonsensical to knit together the fingers of Angels in the construction. The Restorers consider this edifice as one of the finest buildings in Europe, and perhaps the very finest of its kind in existence; they think it therefore one of their more especial duties to preserve it; they deem it worthy of public support, as the pride and ornament of the nation; and they are persuaded that, except John Carter, there is not an individual in the country who would wish to contemplate it in a state of ruin, rather than in a state of repair.

An Old Correspondent.

P. S. Will Mr. John Carter make affidavit before a Magistrate to the truth of his assertion about the sky-light? If he will, the Master-workman is ready to meet him for that purpose, and make affidavit to the contrary.

. Mr. URBAN, Dec. 31. IN vindication of the antiquity of our English Architecture, and in aid of the Architect's remarks on the publication of the late Mr. Whittington, which have appeared in your Magazine, you are requested to insert the following. Mr. Whittington, in his "Survey of the Ecclesiastical Antiquities of France," p. 110, states, " that all authorities concur in fixing the reign of Henry II. (that is, after the year 1154) as the earliest æra of the introduction into England of the mixed style of round and pointed arches, which we see practised in France before that period." He also, in a note, says, that our English writers have not been able to produce an earlier instance of the decided appearance of the pointed arch in England than the year 1160.

ost strict copy of the orit are deserving of great The clusters of columns piers of the windows very d, as at Cambridge and claim but little interest multitude of surrounding s are considered. The dado windows has the cill line angels, some in drapery, armour, and the rest in mposed of feathers, they e rose, portenllis, fleur-de variety of shields of arms. below them, to the point of , filled with compartments contaming statues of kings, The aints, bishops, &c. hew five divisions of mulb three tiers of transoms ited). The tracery in the bitectural. The three perazen doors of entrance preconceptions: grand they ire, and of imposing forms; c back to those oak comd doors of older date for ellishment in this respect.

undercutting, from the deep shadow it produces, is one secret cause of that heart-struck sensation here koown, but known only to the sufceptible minds of Antiquity-lovers. If this constellation of geometric features cause such high gratification, how the delight is enhanced, when continuing our view round the turn of the East end of the groins, where, notwithstanding the circles decrease in dimension, increase in rultitudinous forms, and multitudinous aftenction! To altempt farther to define their systematic formation, is to be plunged into the most profound geomatric meditation, impossible with me, at least, to bring to a full and comprehensive illustration 4 the task is too mighty, and I can but adore!

The work of the side ailes, and small chapels, consonant with the centre part of the chapel itself; the windows have no general prched head (as before observed) like those to the upper story of the edifice; the dido, rich in compartments, with (at the Eastern ends) cills of angels, &copargé niches above, with statues. The groins partake of the nature of those in the centre of the chapel, but done without pendentives. At the West end of the ailes are porches, curiously added to the first division of shese ailes. The perforated brass screen inclosing the tomb of Henry, is wrought in the true spirit of the features of the chapel, while the tomb (exclusive of the statues of the royal pair) is designed in the then Italian mode; therefore (setting aside its excellent workmanship) not strictly in character.

The mouldings are but few, individually; yet, by repeating them on particular objects, they appear at first view exceeding numerous. ornaments in the foliaged parts seem in general but little studied or varied, being a constant repetition of the Tudor devices, the rose, portcullis, fleurde-lis, dragon, greyhound, &c. The several statues fine, and evince the strict costume of the day, whether they pourtray saints, or personages then living.

As this survey has been expressly taken for the present purpose of carrying on our rise and progress, I embraced the opportunity of looking over with much care the several seats of the stalls, in order to give some confident answer to "An Old Correi spondent," who has more than once alluded to their indecent tendency. I can find very few of the carvings but what are strictly decorous; they indeed, in the mass, claim approbation, from the just moral they convey, and the costumic information they every where impart.

At this period of our National Architecture, the true Pointed Style, like other long esta! lished principles, gave way; when, in a manner as sudden and as strange, another mode of design was brought forward, evidently set on foot to drive for ever from the rising genius of the Country all bias or ankering after the fore-gone glories of our old masters of art. Before we proceed further on this topic, it will be needful in this place to advert to some common opinions, prevalent among my brethren, and which are thus maintained.

"There are three distinct species of Gothic (their pick-pame for our Antient Architecture) Church Gothic, Castle Gothic, and Mansion Gothic, each having its own peculiar decorations, (that is, as lancy may devise.) First; (scouting all styles and dates) externally, pointed doorways and windows, buttresses, pinnacles, &c. Internally, arches, columns, &c. Arrangement to take any form but that of the Christian one, a cross.—Second; externally, towers, battlements, loop-holes, &c. Internally, dungeons, rooms with little or no light, walls bare, and to carry more the sceming of a prison than that of a place of defence, accompanied with every splendid accommodation, both for war, and royal residence. — Third; externally, squareheaded doorways and windows, octangular turrets (for shew, not the incumbent uses, steircases); battlements, arched recesses (an internal church decoration), pinuacles, spices, &c. (church decorations). Internally, every part of the plan to assume a modern house-finishing appearance." (It must however be owned, that, in a few of these new apartments, some wiredrawn scraps are larded over the walls, taken from plaster casts on screens, monuments, groins, &c.) That the above "opinions" may not be thought coined for the present occasion, look at all the things "run up" in this way, serving for Chapels *, (no necessity to "do" a church), Castles +, and Altheys +, alias gentlemen's seats, produced within these iew years, in Yown and Country.

In contradiction to such unclassic ideas, I observe, that, in every æra, a particular style of building manifested itself, as successively shewn in this progress; and that the decorations seen on sacred elevations (excepting such as had a direct Scriptural reference) were also introduced on castellated and mansion-formed edi-And, although the plan of a castle has not the figure of a cross, ailes, chapels, &c.; yet it presents doorways, windows, arches, columns, and ornaments §, in like manner as. found on the lines of a church. withstanding but few mansions exist of a date prior to the sixteenth century; still, if we may conclude from ^{*} Tavistock Chapel, Chapel in Prospect place, St. George's Fields, &c.

[†] Kew. I Fonthill, &c.

[§] Rochester Castle, Durham Castle, Windsor in its pristine state (see Hollar), Caernarvon, Conway, &c.

in metropolitas and monastic churches, the like objects are invariably to be traced (on smaller scales) in most of the parochial erections throughout the kingdom. Castles and mansions, though not angly brought forth for discussion, hore a like tendency to the ascendant precedents, as above hinted at. Thus, around the land, ever shone one periodical blaze of Architectural pride, unrivalted and original. An Architect.

Mr. URBAN, Jan. 4.

I I AVING frequently been interested by theological disquisitions, which I have met with in your valuable Miscellany, I am desirous, by your favour, to lay before that class of your Readers some observations on the present altering state of the Jews, and the facility of disposition which certain departments of them on the Continent manifest in favour of emergence upon almost any terms.

alteration has been lately introduced among them, by a powerful Empire virtually devoid of any revealed religion. And if it is not superstitions to expect the swelling bud of vegetation to expand with the coming Spring, neither can I think it so to look forward to the fulfilment of the prophecies concerning that people, now that such steps are taking as will eventually bring them into action with the other powers of Christendom. And as the devices of human creatures become instrumental in the hands of Providence, may not the grants and immunities with which the French government allure the Jews. and the military laws under which they wilfully enlist, so far tempt them on to a compliance with customs abhorrent to their own law, as to cause one of the latter trials of their virtue, and prepare them for the great pruning they are to under-This go before their restoration. enbject subject is particularly treated on in a new exposition of the metallick image and the Apocalypse, though published under the title of the Revival of the Roman empire. It is there contended that the prophetic history of the Jews forms a much greater part of the Revelation of St. John than has hitherto been apprehended; and particularly that they are in the Oth, and several other chapters, described individually under the term man, and collectively by the appellative of men. But this appellative, when evidently given to a race distinct from other people then mentioned, is first educed as descriptive of the Jews, from prototypes in the Old Testament; and as they are found in their own scriptures, the dews themselves may do well to consider The only one which I shall mention is a passage that has often been brought forward, but I believe never in the same point of view; it is from the great compendium of all prophecy, the metallic image; Damiel there speaking of a certain people belonging to the last empire, foretels that they shall, at the time of the end, mingle themselves with the seed of men; and this does appear to signify that there is in prophecy a peculiar people denominated pre-eminently men; and though in another part of Daniel, ch. ii, 41, the same people are symbolized by clay; it is potters clay, which is a selection of the best sort of clay. We will now, therefore, view what the author of the Revival of the Roman Empire says in favour of the supposition that the term man, when emphatically applied, designates a Jew in the Apo-

" Revelations, chap. ix. ver. 4. • And it was commanded them that they should not hurt the grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree; but only those men who have not the seal of God in their fore-heads.

" In the latter part of this chapter it is also said, the four angels were prepared to slay the third part of men; but, as this is never apprebended to mean the third part of mankind, it must, in either sense in which it can be taken, designate some particular people distinguished by the denomination of men; which nesessarily puts us upon the endeavour to find out who are the people preeminently called men.

" It appears in the 7th chapter, that 144,000 Jews were sealed and in the 14th ch. when the 144,000 appear with the Lamb as the first fruits, it is said that they were redeemed from among men; and that no man except the 144,000 could learn the new song (new covenant); the insurmountable difficulty which the Jews in general find to learning the joyful Christian doctrine, or new song, is well known; but, as the Gentiles of all kindred and tongues can learn that song, does it not seem to follow that those men who could not learn the song were Jows, the blundness of whom is accounted for by St. Paul, Romans xi. 7. What then? Israel huik not obtained that which he toeketh for; but the election (the 144,000) heih obtained it, and the rest were And accordingly, the blindness of the Jews, though constantly mixed with Christians, continues a wouder to this day. The Jews, as selected by their Maker, are entitled to the chief distinction; and in respect to the term men may receive it in the following words, given as from the Deity himself: Ezekiel xxxiv. 31. And ye my flock, the flock of my pasture, are men, and I am your God, saith the Lord God."

Mr. Butt seems aware of some particular meaning of the word man in the Apocalypse, as he says, " omit the word man whenever it is not Tound in the Greek." He also says, "The same things are often exhibited in different views by various emblems at once;" that is, as we must conclude, "various emblems" in one chapter or particular section of prophecy. In his explanation of symbols, it likewise appears that trees and grass denote men having spiritual

"St. Paul, in Romans 11th, particularly describes the Jews by the emblem of the olive tree; and that the vine is in the Old Testament a chief type of the Jews, and that they may from thence in the Scripture language appropriately be called trees, has already been discussed in the preceding chapter; and if trees were there rightly apprehended to mean Jews, they must mean the same here. When, therefore, the above 4th verse says, the locusts were not to hurt quently called son of man, which may have a particular meaning, or may be camal; but in this part of the present chapter the term men is so evidently made use of to specificate and distinguish a certain people from their conquerors the borsemen, that henceforward, whenever that same term is emphatically applied, we cannot but conclude that it is one of the scripture appellatives of some peculiar race of people *."

That the term man is still further emphatically applied in the Apoca-Typse, will be found on turning to the 13th, 14th, 15th, and 16th chapters. In the 13th it appears that men will be allured to coalesce with, and worship a great Autichmitim empire or beast, while in the 14th there is a strong prohibition and warning against this very crime: 9th verse, If any MAN worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forchead, or in his hand, 10th verse, The same and if the person appointed to make them, were to do so in a serious and sensible manner, it would naturally follow that the congregation would do so also. A quiet, calm, and as our excellent exhortation expresses it, "an humble voice," would excite attention, and restore the lost custom of each person in the assembly audibly joining in the same manner. The dissonant voice of the Clerk, and his bad pronunciation, has probably been the cause, that he alone now is heard at all. Cierks, I believe, are usually chosen after their education (if such it may be called) is finished: they must certainly read and write; but would it not be desirable to have them. prepared for their office, and pains taken to impress on them the importance of it, and to instruct them in the manner they ought to follow the Clergyman ?

I do not think it would be beneath the Dignitaries of our Church to suggest the above in their Visitations. I am persuaded the happiest effects would ensue, not only in but out of the Church. The Clerk is more upou a level with the common people; and, if one in every parish were well instructed, they might be a means of stemming the present alarming dereliction from our regular Clergy. fine, no means, however humble, should be left untried to accomplish so desirable an end. The strenuous efforts of every Clergyman in the Realm, united with his assistant, might do much, both to reform the more notorious character, and to strengthen the unsteady, and bring back into his fold the wandering sheep. Let the Shepherd but do his duty, and depend upon it, "He that is an hireling and not the Shepherd" will not be able to lead them astray.

^{*} Revival of the Roman and Greek Empires, from p. 207 to 212.

Yours, &c. A Hinter.

Mr. Urban, Bristol, May, 1810. T FEEL much obliged to J. C. for A the information contained in his letter of June 10, p. 335 of the first part of your last volume: from that it appears, Thomas Wenman was fellow of Baliol College, and member of the Inner Temple. Quere, might not the public records of those places afford some farther information respecting him? As the edition of Browne, which I possess, does not contain the commendatory verses by Wennian, would it be troubling J. C. too much, were I to ask him for a transcript of the lines from his edition?

Some few months ago I edited a trifling work, "Selections from the Poems of Carew," which has in some measure contributed towards rendering that deserving but neglected genius more generally admired. I am now collecting materials at my leisure for a complete edition of his Works, containing some pieces hitherto unpublished. The materials for his life are few; it is possible, however, some of your numerous readers may be able to assist me with information from manuscript authorities tending to supply in some measure the deficiency. It appears from Oldys's MS notes to Langbaine, that the Prince of Wales then had in his possession a Vandyke containing a portrait of Carew. Quere, in whose possession is that painting at present, and are there any other Portraits of Carew in existence?

I wish also for some information respecting John Fry, Member in the Long Parliament, and one of the Judges of Charles I. who published two very curious pamphlets. 1. "The Accuser ashamed, or a Pair of Bellows to blow off the dust cast upon John Fry, a Member of Parliament, by Colonel Jo. Downes. 1648." 8vo. 2. "The Clergy in their Colours; or a brief Character of them. 1650." 8vo. These two tracts (the latter of which was answered in 1651 by J. D. and soon after burned by order of Parliament) I have never seeu; all my knowledge of them being gathered from Anthony Wood, who, with all his bigoted prejudice, allows the author to have been a man of great abilities. — If they ever come into my possession, I purpose, from respect to a relative who seems to have been roughly handled without much cause for it, to reprint them both, with memoirs of the author. If, therefore, any gentlemañ who has either or both the pamphlets, feels inclined to grant me the loan of it or them for a short time to transcribe, I shall be obliged to him.

A Correspondent, R. S. (in page 301) seems inclined to doubt the invention of watches previous to 1658: the following extract may throw some light on the subject. "The Emperor Charles the Fifth had a watch made in the collet or jewel of a ring; and King James had the like." Powell's Humane Industry, 8vo. 1661. From this it would appear that watches were known as early as, if not before, the commencement of the seventh century.

John Fry.

Mr. Urban, Jan. 12. T. BURIEN in Cornwall (see p. 246) of your last volume) is a Deanhaving jurisdiction over three Parishes, and the Probate of Wills therein. There are now no Prebends belonging to it, but two Stalls remain in the Church. It is in the gift of the Prince of Wales as Duke of Cornwall. The King having presented to it during the now Prince's minority, the Minister on the death of Dr. Boscawen, the last Bean but one, presented as in right of the Crown, before the Prince was informed of the vacancy, and he did not choose to contest it; but, that gentleman dying a few years after, the Prince presented Dr. Henry Jenkin, the present Dean. The Crown has nothing to do with it.

into prejudiced bands; as st is plain, from Mr. Salisbury's letter, that he has already made up his mind, not only on the species, but upon the merit of this Grass.

When Mr. Salisbury had the high honour conferred upon him, of being consulted by the Board of Agriculture, upon a question in his own department, it might be expected he would have taken some pains to inform himself on the subject; that he would have made himself acquainted with the treatises written upon this Grass, laid before him in so complimentary a manner.

Mr. Salisbury, it seems, thought otherwise; and succeingly tells us " it would not be of much consequence to read all the celebrated accounts said to have issued from Dr. Richardson's pen, on the subject of this Grass."

What? not even the memoir upon this Grass, honoured by the same Board of Agriculture with a medal, GRAT. MAG. January, 1811.

ough, printed by Philips, I have measured swords with other gentlemen who had declared war, ud internecionem, against this grass, even before it was suspected to have merit, and before it was known to have a protector.

Fortunately, Mr. Salisbury in his hostility lays open new matter, and relieves me from the irksome necessity of treading over the same ground.

Having so decidedly pronounced Agrostis Stolonifera to be Squiren, he lays down some positions relative to Squitch, which astonish me, as coming from a gentleman who boasts that he had studied the British Gramina for twenty years in an eminent school; these positions I should by no means have noticed, had they not been radically and essentially connected with the natural history of the Agrostis Stolonifera.

The Botanical School is much disposed to arrange its vegetables in classes classes and genera; but Mr. Salisbury is the first that I have met with, who has formed Quitch Grass into a genus, with its subordinate species, seven of which are known to him.

On the formation of a genus, a Disferentia essentialis is required to mark the difference between the members of this and other genera; here Mr. Salisbury is not deficient, he gives us the characteristic marks, the Differensia essentialis, by which the Squitch genus is distinguished; he tells us "the plants of both the Fiorin and the Agrostis Stolonifera began to creep on the ground, and to root at every joint, as the Couch Grass does, which is the property of at least seven different species of this genus."

This definition certainly includes the Agrostis Stolonifera, for which it was intended, but not any one variety of Squitch with which I am acquainted.

The Triticum Repens, the greatest nuisance of all Squitches, runs its mischievous roots horizontally, not on, but some inches under the surface; and from this root, at intervals, sends up its harsh erect stalks, not one of which ever creeps, or touches the ground.

The Avena Elation, called by the farmers Knobb Squitch, very injurious to standing corn, raises its coarse gigantic stem vertically, and never ereeps or roots.

The Agrostis Alba, White Squitch, less troublesome, but always erect, never creeps, its roots work under ground, and are so strong and sharp, that, as Dr. Withering tells us, they will penetrale a potatoe.

Agrostis Stricta, much cultivated in America; this grass has decidedly a Squitch root, from which it sends up a solitary erect stem with its panicle at the end.

Agrostis Nigra, black Squitch, little differing from the Stolonifera, involved with it in the common obloquy, from which I hope to relieve the whole Genus.

Mr. Salisbury's definition is, no doubt, good and descriptive; but, unhappily, it belongs to a genus very different from that to which he applies it, and by this error (were he able to establish it) would deprive the world of the most valuable food for their cattle, with which Nature has favoured them.

Had Mr. Salisbury, in the course of his twenty years study of the British Gramina under a celebrated master, paid proper attention to the physiology of Botany, and the classifications of Nature; he would have discovered that she had drawn a marked line of discrimination between two descriptions of her Grasses, the Culmiferous, and the Stoloniferous; a distinction which will be found decisive in the present question.

The Culmiferous tribe of Grasses, at their stated periods (mostly early in Summer) send up in vast numbers their erect Culmi, each bearing its seed panicle; these Culmi have hitherto chiefly composed the hay crops, for the portion of Root Leaf caught by the scythe is small in quantity, and of inferior quality.

The Stoloniferous tribe also send up their Culmi and panicles at their respective periods; but kind Nature has been pleased to endow the grasses of this genus with another production, whence they derive their name, and incalculable value.

Not far from the period at which their panicles appear, the grasses of this genus begin to project shoots (like the runners of strawberries) called by Naturalists Stolones; these, if supported, rise erect; but they generally creep along the surface, emitting small fibres from their joints, which catching the ground, take root, and form new plants.

These Stoloues, in uninterrupted vegetation, continue increasing their length until Christmas, and, I have reason to know, much later.

Hence it is plain, that when the ground shall be clothed with a crop of Stoloniferous grass, the proprietor must make option, whether he will avail himself of the Culmi, and mow them at the period of their perfection, as he has been used to do, with other grasses, or whether he will wait for the Stolones, until, in the course of their steady vegetation, they shall amount to a quantity sufficient to compensate for the loss of the Culmi.

Here then is a new field open to the Agriculturalist, whose prospect of deriving advantage from it rests on the comparative amount of the crops of Culmi and Stolones, on 'the comparative quality of their produce, and on the facility of saving Stoloniferous grasses are Squitch, " all injurious to the soil," and all " totally unfit for meadow."

I believe I am the first that attempted to save crops composed exclusively of the Stolones of this genus of grass; and am aware, that a claim to the credit of a new discovery is not agreeable to those, who, from their line, ought to have made it themselves; we find them, like prevish old Tiberius, rogitans

Reperiese provius quod divus Augustus non providerit?

You discover what escaped our sagacity?

Will Mr. Salisbury, after having (as he tells us) studied the British Gramina for twenty years, like to hear that some of the most common and most obtrusive of these Gramina, those particularly reprobated by himself, are discovered to contain properties of inestimable value?

That by these the Agriculturalist is made highly profitable by the aid of this accommodating vegetable, which thrives equally on the mountain and in the valley, in icrland and in indostan.

The powers too of this aquatic in sustaining drought have been fully tried this parching season; as I can now exhibit, between Tynone and Antain, seventeen acres of Fioria meadow; and Mr. Ryan of Bensure four, mostly in dry ground, and all of a luxuriance unequalled by the best meadows of our conutry in the most favourable seasons.

Nor has this unexpected property in an aquatic grass (as it has been supposed) escaped notice in England whence I have letters from several Correspondents, some of them of the highest rank, mentioning with astonishment the luxuriance of the Fioria I had sent them, in despight of the severest drought remembered.

W. Richardson, D. D.

Tithes.

churches to which the done

TITHES NO HARDSHIP. Dec. 26. Mr. URBAN, T is owing perhaps to dulness of A apprehension, that I either do not understand Agricola, p. 434 of your last volume, or cannot discover the " very serious evil," of which he complains. In one case, as he states it, he receives 60l. rent, and pays 6l. Property Tax. In the other, his rent is 811. and the property tax, 81. 2s. Where then is the hardship? To my apprehension, he reaps à material advantage, where he seems to think he sustains an injury.

The Tithe-owner and Agricola have a joint interest in the same estate. The interest of the former is estimated by Agricula at one-third of the annual value of the land, or 30% and his own interestat the other two-thirds, or 601. But, if the Tithe-owner is so moderate in his demands, that he is contented to receive 91. instead of 301. Agricola avails himself of that circumstance, by adding the difference, namely, 21% to the rent; and so he receives 81%. when his real interest, by his own statement, was worth only 60l. and the only deduction is, that he pays a proportional increase (namely two guineas more) of Property Tax. In this case who is the sufferer? Surely not Agricola, who receives annually twenty guineas (abating only two guineus for Property Tax) on account of property not his own. The real sufferer, if there is any suffering in the case, is either the occupier of the land, or the Tithe-owner, who is entitled to 30*l*. instead of which he receives 91. only.

As to the origin of Tithes in this kingdom, the undoubted fact is, that at a period of time far more remote than any land-owner of the present day can trace back his property, the then lords of the soil endowed the church with the tithes of their estates, amounting, as Agricola supposes, to one-third of the value of the whole. The other two-thirds, by bequest, by purchase, and other modes of transfer, have changed hands, perhaps a hundred times; each successive proprietor (whether by purchase, or otherwise) being invested with the right or title to these two-thirds, and to these The other moiety, in many instances, continues to this day the property of the respective parish churches, to which the donation was originally made; but about one, half of this property, or half the tithes in the kingdom, it is supposed, have passed into the hands either of bodies corporate, or of Laymen; and whenever the Laity are proprietors of Tithes, as I have heard intelligent Laymen themselves observe, they generally make at least a fifth or a sixth more of them, than the Clergy do: so that as far as Tithes are concerned, it is always an advantage to the occupier of land, when they are, as they were originally intended to be, in the hands of the Clergy.

Yours, &c. C. R.
P. S. I do not pretend to be a judge of Tithes; but, unless Agricola has rated them much too high, for every acre usually allotted to the Rector in lieu of Tithes, when an Inclosure takes place, he ought to have at least two.

Mr. Urban, January 12.

A WRITER in your Magazine for November last, p. 434, under the signature of Agricola, (whom I suspect to be an Irishman, from the terms "Tithe-proctor," and "Biddings" for Tithes, which he uses) begs leave to hint a very serious evil attending (the taking of) Tithes in kind, "which affects," he says, "landed property in general, and the Property Tax" upon them, and which "has escaped," he thinks, "general observation."

Now, Mr. Urban, I will take leave to offer him a hint or two in answer, which may be worth his observation, before he takes up his pen again upon the same subject.

If I may begin with his P. S. I confess'myself to be one of "the Clergy, who look upon Tithes," for the support of the Priesthood, "as (originally) a sacred appointment;" because it may be proved from Scripture. But, in this country, the right to the tenth part of the produce of the land, whether in Ecclesiastical Corporations, sole or aggregate, or in Lay impropriators, stands upon the same foot, viz. the Law of the Land, as the right to any other property whatever. is, therefore, talking nonsense (to use no harsher expression) to say, that the Legislature "permits the exaction of Tithes in kind." Many a "sensible man,"

the rent of a farm to be 90*l*, four rents will be 360*l*, one-teath of which produce, for the Tithe, will be 36*l*, but one-third of the rental is only 30*l*.

It remains for me, now, to point out the fallacy of Agricola's statement of the other branch of the evil that he hints, and I will do it from The Property the same example. Tax, which the fandlord, in this case, will have to pay, is 91. because he actually receives 90% a-year for the farm; although he would, no doubt, get more rent (and so would all landlords for theirs), if his lands could be let Tithe-free, or even Tithe-kind free, if I may use the term; and all tenants would soon find out this, to their cost, Now, the tenant, in the case supposed, Will have eighteen peace in the pound on 90% to pay for the occupation of the farm, and six pence in the pound on 30% only, for the occupation of the Tithes, if he should give as much, by composition, for them. Where, in the name of candour, I would ask, is the particular evil of all this? If " our legislators" have no other in-reform which this Rev. Gentleman bas proposed to be made in our Ecclesiastical Government would, practicable, be an excellent one; but I very much doubt whether it could be carried into effect in all its parts. without making too great an innovation upon the present system. I am not one of those who think that, because a certain system or plan has been in use for time immemorial, it should not be changed for a better, provided such an one could be devised; but I am afraid lest, by disturbing the old fabric, we should bring more of it down than we intend, and that, if we begin to make a great repair, we shall be obliged to prosecute it much farther than we at first intended.

The first and fourth propositions of your Correspondent would, in my humble opinion, be very difficult to carry into execution, and could not be rendered of any essential use, without a considerable alteration in our Statute Laws: these propositions are extremely good, provided their suggestions gestions could be adopted; and the present Ministry (the members of which have on several occasions evinced a praise-worthy regard for the welfare of the indigent Clergy) will, most probably, do every thing which lays in their power to introduce either your Correspondent's regulations, or else some other of the same mature, to the notice of Parliament.

It seems to me, that the first part of the second proposition of your Correspondent is rendered unnecessary, on account of the ability of the existing laws to remedy the evil: the Act of Sir William Scott (43 Geo. 111. c. 84.) was intended to enforce the residence mentioned by your Correspondent; and although it has partially failed in its design, yet, if it were strictly enforced, it would, in all probability, be found sufficient to answer the purposes which its highly esteemed projector intended it should; indeed it would bear extremely hard upon the beneficed Clergy, if the laws relative to clerical residence were rigorously put into execution, or rendered more minute than they at present are.

The third suggestion of this Rev. Gentleman has not been overlooked by our Legislators: the Acts of the 17th Geo. 111. c. S. and of the 43d Geo. Ill. c. 108, were made to assist the Clergy in the erection and reparation of parsonage houses, &c.; and, by taking away some of the difficulties which the Statute of Mortmain produced, to excite the generous to lend an helping hand in so laudable an undertaking. But, not with standing these Acts, something more certainly wants to be done with regard to this particular, especially when the emoluments of benefices are trivial, and the parsonage houses, &c. in a bad state, or when there are none: in such cases as these, the proposal of your Correspondent might be useful; but it must be admitted under certain restrictions, as in cases where the profits of benepoes are sufficient to crect, repair, or rebuild the parsonage houses, &c. which are either gone to decay, or extremely dilapidated.

In the fifth proposition of your respectable Contributor, I think every friend to our most excellent Establishment will perfectly coincide; the propriety (nay, the almost absolute necessity) of the Commutation of Tithes must be evident to every discerning man. That Tithes have done immense damage to the Church caunot be denied; that they have rendered the exertions of Clergymen nugatory, and alienated the affections of parishioners from their Ministers, is equally clear: ever since they were invented, they have been the occasion of innumerable evils; they have sown the baneful seeds of dissention in many parishes, and by so doing brought many of the Clergy into contempt; they have embroiled numberless incumbents in vexatious and troublesome suits, occasioned much uneasiness, and done more harm than an age will completely repair; the sooner, therefore, they are destroyed, the better; and until that destruction occurs, it is in vain to expect peace and amity to subsist between the Clergy and the Laity.

The sixth suggestion of "A Country Rector" is very seasonable; it is a pity that the reparation to which he refers is not more attended to than it. is; it is certainly a part of the Minister's duty to see that his Church or Chapel is kept in sufficient repair; but I apprehend that the Churchwardens are the persons who ought to superintend these repairs; and, if Churchwardens did but seriously consider the solemn oaths which they take at the Visitations of their Ordinaries, the importance of their stations, and the heavy punishments to which they expose themselves in case of neglect of duty, we should not see so many of our Churches and Chapels in that ruinous state, in which we have now 'sometimes the misfortune to find them. Yours, &c.

J. STOCKDALE HARDY.

Mr. Urban, Jan. 3. T has given me some satisfaction to observe that proposals have been issued, within these few months, for a republication of Dr. Thomas's edition of Dugdale's Warwickshire; which seems to be a topographical desideratum, because it will afford to many the possession of a valuable work, which the Bibliomania of the present day has placed beyond their reach. The appearance, however, of this Prospectus of the Editors induces me to enquire whether any of your Antiquarian readers, admirers of the County it appears that Mr. Gough was the purchaser of Dr. Thomas's copy of his own edition of Dugdale's Warwickshire, with his (Dr. Thomas's) MSS notes; and which was then most liberally offered to the use of any gentieman disposed to continue or improve Sir William Dugdale's work. This copy will necessarily be deposited in the Bodleian Library, in compliance with the will of Mr. Gough, together with the rest of this valuable collection of British Topography; and from this book, it is probable that much additional manuscript information might be obtained. I should also think it more than probable, that the Noblemen and Gentlemen of this County would be even anxious to furmish any gentleman inclined to such an undertaking, with the inspection of their family deeds, continuation of ad every other usevithin their power, alone can facilitate Dugdale's History of Warwickshire, than the lapse of time has rendered necessary; and I shall therefore conclude with an observation which has been made to me, that he neglected to take notice of any family, however respectable or antient, who were not the Lords of a Manor, or Patrons of a Church; and also, that amongst the very tew plates given of gentlemen's seats, that some were inserted of little comparative importance with others which were omitted. These hints are merely offered to the consideration of any of your numerous readers, who may be more competent to the object proposed than is deace.

Your constant reader, N. S. L.

LITERARY INTELLIGENCE.

The subject of the Hussan prize for the present year is, "A Dissertation on the Books of Origen against Celsus, with a view to illustrate the argument, and to point out the cyf.

dence they afford to the truth of Christienity."

The Provost and senior Fellows of Triaity College, Dublia, have conferred an honorary degree of LL. D. on Professor Davy, in testimony of their admiration of his genius and scientific attainments, and of the extraordinary discoveries made by him in his Electro-Chemical Philosophy, and communicated in his late Course of Lectures at the Dublin Society.

The Rev. Dr. T. D. Whitaker, the Historian of Whalley and Craven, has in the press a new edition of The Vision of Piers Plowman, printed from MSS. of higher antiquity than any which have yet been collates, and forming a Text almost entirely different from that of Crowley, together with a Prefatory Dissertation, a Paraphrase, Glossary, and Notes. We have great pleasure in taking this opportunity to contradict a report unguardedly circulated in some of the provincial prints, of the death of this learned Divine and elegant Antiquary.

Dr. Aikin has in the press, an octavo volume of Critical Essays on various subjects.

Mr. Winch has nearly ready for the press, the Flora of the Counties of Northumberland and Durham, of which the Botanist's Guide through those counties may be considered as a Predromus. It will comprise about 2000 indigenous plants, and be illustrated by some coloured engravings from drawings made by Mr. Sowerby.

Dr. Millar, Lecturer on Materia Medica in the University of Glasgow, has in the press, Disquisitions on the History of Medicine, exhibiting a View of Physic as observed to exist during remote periods, and among nations not far advanced in refinement.

Dr. Joseph Reade, of Cork, has in the press, Critical and Practical Observations on the Diseases of the luner Corner of the Human Eyes, with a new arrangement and method of cure.

Mr. Benjamin Gibson, Vice President of the Literary and Philosophical Society of Manchester, and Surgeon to the Manchester Infirmary, will shortly publish, illustrated by plates, Practical Observations on the Formation of an Artificial Pupil in several deranged States of the Eye: to which are annexed remarks on the extraction of soft cataracts; and those of the membraneous kind, through paneture in the corner.

Mr. Parkisson will shortly publish, Observations on the Act for regulating Mad-Houses, with remarks addressed to the friends of the insanc..

Mr. Trotter, of Montalta, pent Wicklow, has in the press, an Account, of the Travels of the late Mr. Fox, Lord St. John, and himself, in Flanders and France, during the late short Peace; with a variety of letters of Mr. Fox, and circumstantial particulars of the last four years of his life.

The Rev. Johnson Grant will shortly publish the first volume of a Summary of the History of the English Church, and of the Sects which have separated from it, from the carliest periods to the reign of James the First.

Sir John Carr bas in torwardness for publication, Descriptive Sketches of the South-east Parts of Spain, and the Islands of Majorea, Minorca, Sardinia, Sicily, and Malta, during a tour in those countries in 1809 and 1810, accompanied by engravings of views taken on the spot.

The Rev. T. F. Disdin bas in the press, in an octavo volume, the English Gentleman's Library Companion, being a guide to the knowledge of rare, curious, and useful books in the English language, appertaining to British literature and antiquities.

A Report of the late Mr. Fox's Speeches in the House of Commons, from his entrance into parliament, in 1768, to the close of the session in 1806, is preparing for the press.

The Rev. E. Cooper will shortly publish a second volume of Practical Sermons; and also a new edition of the first volume.

A reprint of the original work on Linear Perspective, by Dr. Brook

TAYLOR, will shortly appear.

Mr. Mudford (the translator of the Life of Fenelon, Archbishop of Cambray) has in the press a translation of the "Memoirs of Prince Eugene of Savoy, written by himself."

Exploratory Travels, through the Western Territories of North America, by Major Zebulon Montgo-MERY PIKE, will soon be published.

The Rev. John Mitford, A.B. will soon publish, "Agnes, the Indian Captive, a Poem," with other Poems.

A Volume of English and Latin Poems, by E. B. IMPEY, Esq. is preparing. 1. Literary persons who possessed some of his fugitive writings in proce and verse, as well as other papers, I offered to join my stock of materials with his, in raising some monument to the memory of so distinguished a scholar and animalic a man,"

The works of an author are generally said to be his best monument: but we have here another, reared with taste and care, which, we trust, will add very considerably to his fame. The "Literary Life of Mr. Stilling-fleet" forms one entire volume; and, to men of literature, to men curious in literary history, must form a very interesting memorial.

Benjamin Stilling fleet was the grandson of Edward Stilling fleet, bishop of Worcester. His father, of whom we have some authentic memoirs, was first a physician, but afterwards entered into Holy Orders. He died in 1708, leaving a son and three daughters; Benjamin, the subject of this article; Elizabeth, the eldest daughter, who espoused John Locker, esq.

GREE. MAG. January, 1911.

suppose it had some foundation, as Mr. Stilling fleet " seldom afterwards omitted an opportunity of testifying his resentment against Bentley." After this failure in his hopes of an establushment in the University, he attached himself wholly to his patron Mr. Windham, and to the education of his pupil; and at the mansion of Felbrig, one of the most pleasant residences in the county of Norfolk, passed the next fourteen years of his life, "beloved and respected by all who visited. or were connected with the family." Mr. Coxe gives some very interesting particulars of his instructions to his pupil, respecting the study of the antient languages. His letter to Mr. Windnam on his coming of age is an admirable composition. It comprehends the opinions of a wise and thinking men. opinions which universal experience has confirmed, and ever will confirm. But it is long, and we cannot give the whole; and it is so well connected in all its parts, that we know not well bow how to detach a passage that shall be a just specimen. No young man, especially young men of fortune, and who are destined for public life, ought to be without this useful document.

While Mr. Stillingfleet was "em-.ployed in the grateful task of instructing a youth of superior talents and amiable disposition," he was meensibly led into a tender attachment, in which he was not successful. : lady was a Miss Anne Barnes: "with the inexperience of youth, and the thoughtless gaiety of a volatile touper, she encouraged his addresses; and he passed several years in her so-.ciety, in the ardent hope that a favourable change is his circumstances .at no distant period would unite him with the object of his first and lasting passion. But an altachment apparently so durable did not escape those . fatalities to which this passion seems almost peculiarly exposed; and, after a long and hopeful courtship of ten years, the prudence of the lady outweighed her affection. As she was, herself, without fortune, and Mr. Stillingfleet without profession, employment, or means of establishing . himself in life, she listened to an ad-. vantageous offer, and soon afterwards espoused a Mr. Russel, a richer and more fortunate rival."

It appears that this disappointment made a deep impression; and his Biographer has given us some lines against Woman, which, as he justly observes, shew how anguish and disappoint-. ment could change the sentiments of a man so mild and amiable, so fond of domestic life, and so respectfully attached to the fair sex. The lines (for which we refer the reader to the volume) are certainly severe; but al-. Iowance must be made for the immediate provocation.

Soon after this disappointment, in 1737, he accompanied his pupil, Mr. . Windham, to the Continent. "The events of this Tour, and the connexjobs to which it gave rise, fixed the future course, and formed the happiness of his life. Mr. Coxe's account of it is highly amusing, and introduces us to the acquaintance of many persens, now, or lately, distinguished in the political or literary world. One of the results of this Tour was, "A Letter from an English Gentleman to Mr. Arlaud, a celebrated Painter at Geneva, giving an Account of the Glacieres, or Ice Alps of Savoy, written in the year 1741." This was written chiefly by Mr. Windham and Mr. Price (of Foxley in Herefordshire,) with the assistance of Mr. Stillingfleet, and illustrated with the drawings of Mr. Price. They are said to have been the first travellers who penetrated into these Alpine recesses. In 1743 Mr. Stillingfleet returned with his pupil to England. His pupil's father gave Mr. S. an annuity of $\mathcal{L}100$. which for some time was his principal support. He now resided partly in London and partly with some friends in the country; and his leisure hours were dedicated to literary pursuits, some of which Mr. Coxe has specified, particularly au edition of Milton, illustrated by notes, in which he had made considerable progress when the appearance of Dr. Newton's Proposals induced him to relinquish his design. His MSS, however, still remain in the possession of Bp. Dampier, and were obligingly lent to Mr. Todd, for his late excellent edition of our great Epic Poet. Mr. Coxe has also given here some valuable extracts, which induce us to think that his edition would have been very superior in critical acumen and taste to Bishop Newton's. About this time Mr. S. composed some of his poems, particularly those on Conversation, and Barthquakes.

In 1746 Mr. S. took up his residence at Foxley, the seat of the above-mentioned Mr. Price, or rather in a neighbouring cottage, where he was master of his time and pursuits; and passed his leisure hours with the family. An indifferent state of health first led him to the pursuit of Natural History, which forms his principal distinction as an author; and he soon became one of the first defenders and earliest propagators of the Linnssan system in England. On this occasion Mr. Coxe has introduced a very able and perspicuous sketch of the state of Botany in England at the time of Mr. Stillingfleet's publication, in 1759, of " Miscellancous Tracts in Natural History," with a Preface, which, Mr. Coxe remarks, "contains a spirited eulogium of the study of Nature, and a just tribute of applause to the talents and discoveries of the great Swede." The publication of the first clition of this Miscellany may be considered

tannica, and many other works."

The Journal of Mr. S.'s excursion into part of North Wales, which is here inserted, is illustrative of his character and observatious, and is curious as one of the first of those Local Tours which are since become so fashionable.

In 1760, Mr. S. received an addition to his income by obtaining the place of Barrack - master at Kensington, through the interest of his friend Mr. Price, brother-in-law to Lord Barrington, then Secretary at War. But in 1761 he had the misfortune to lose, by death, his friend Mr. Price, and also his pupil Mr. Wendham. The latter left him guardian to his only son, the late much-lamented statesman William Windham, esq. flis feelings were not a little tried also, about this time, by the death of his sisters and their husbands, whose history, as well as that of Messrs. Price, Windham, and Williamson, form a wery interesting part of these Me-moirs. That of his nephew, Capt. Locker, is particularly so, as he was same thing. By mute marks, I mean hieroglyphics or symbols; by the other, I mean an alphabet. The operations of the mind are employed in three several ways; for we conceive by intuition, by demonstration, or by deduction from analogy. Intuition and deduction are most known and practised by aditerate people, whose notions, being simple, corporeal, and confined within the narrow limits of the senses, they have very seldom, if ever, occasion or skill to employ demonstration. Intuitive knowledge among this sort of people shows itself in all those maxims which guide them so steadily in the common affairs of life. The spirit of analogy leads men to the figurative manner of expression, and among the valgar produces proverbs. Thus that part of a watch or clock which posits out the hour is naturally called the hand; we say also the wing of an army, the brow of a bill .- It is not at all surprising that men should use this figurative way of speech, because there are certain conveniences attending it. For first, the words of a language are much fewer in number by this me as, than if we had a primitive word for every different thing. Secondly, in many cases this method gives energy to the thought, as when we say we are overwhelmed with a torrent. of words. Thirdly, this method saves us from circumlocution, as when we say be deried upon his enemy, &c. Expressions of this sort are not adopted from hieroglyphics, but arise from the nature of the human mind in all countries, and are more popular than the dry and accurate terms of philosophy; and, though regarded as a part of rhetoric, and taught as such, yet they are by no means the product of art; for art only teaches how to use them with propriety. The less polished a people are, the more they abound in such expressions, and the impressions of the objects on our imagination with which we are much conversant are so stron₂, and tincture our ideas to such a degree, that we may almost conclude with certainty where any one has chiefly lived, by his ailusions. On the contrary, people who affect a sort of p ecision and philosophical language, and know little of the common and striking phenomena of nature, who live in ciries, and spend their time in retired speculations on the working of the passions, the intrigues of courts, the abstruce disputes concerning religion, and the productions of art, are extremely cautious how they employ figurative language, and cere nomously make an apology for using a metaphor, which their more manly neighbours would scarcely think bold enough — But even philosophical language itself is far from being free from figures He who should undertake to write upon morality, politics, law, or any subject but mathematics, without them, would soon find that he must frame a new set of words. Nay, even in mixed mathematics, he would be frequently puzzled to explain himself. Thus the rays of light, the twinkling of the stars, &c. mus: be given up, as not used in their primitive sense. The truth is, our first conceptions are merely of a corporeal nature, except those which arise from intuition; and, as we advance in our researches, and embrace intellectual ideas, we are naturally led to express the operations of our minds by analogy to those first impressions. Thus obliged by law, melied with pity, of a cool disposition, are all words taken from corporeal ideas.—As to the translation of the hieroglyphics into the sacred language, min joined by Clemens Alexandrinus, which has so much puzzled men of learning. I apprehend that it do s not mean putting the hieroglyphics into another mute character. which would serve no manner of purpose, but translating the hieroglyphic characters into the common alphabet. It may, perhaps, be asked, why are they then called sacred? Were the common alphabetical characters sacred? I answer, certainly not; nor is it said that the hieroglyphics were translated into the sacred characters, but into the sacred language*. Now the case seems to have been, that, after the alphabet was invented, the ease and conveniency of it were so striking, that even the priests thought fit to make use of it; and, in order to keep concealed the mysteries contained in the hieroglyphics according to their novel and corrupted interpretations, they invented an enigmatical language. I gather this from some few remains preserved in Plutarch, and Jamblichus, of the doctrines of Pythagoras, who confessedly borrowed his. method of instruction, as well as many of his doctrines, from the Ægyptian priests. The sentences ascribed to Pythagoras are, "ignem gladio ne fodias, fabias ne comedas, cor ne edas," &cc. These I suppose to be in a language resembling the sacred language of the Egyptians; for the meaning of these seutences remains as much a secret as if they had been delivered in hieroglyphics. This is sufficiently distinguished, both from the hieroglyphic and epistolary method, which are the two others mentioned by Clemens Alexandripus; for the epistolary I take to have been such as was used in the common correspondence between people at a distance, about the ordinary affairs of life, which most probab'y was the chief use made of writing.by the vulgar in a country where the priests engrossed all kind of learning."

"Obelisks.

"We are apt to adopt ideas that agree with our own customs and manners, when we go back to the beginnings of things, not considering that the first steps of an uncivilized people are few and slow. There is a simplicity among them that we overlook, or look down upon with contempt; and therefore wan to refine every thing we meet with when we are examining the remains of nations which have made a considerable figure. Tous as we see vast pillars raised to do honour to some conqueror, or to record some extraordinary event, and for no other purpose, we are induced to think that every other use of such structures is beneath their dignity. Yet, with all due deference to heroes and their admirers, I cannot help thinking that directions given to a whole nation about the chief and most essential concerns of life, I mean how to distinguish the seasons proper for doing every kind of rural work, deserve as much to be honoured with excessive and lasting structures as the triumphs of Trajan, or the are of London. Besides, we ought to consider that the old Egyptians had no other almanack to recur to. The name of au almanack-maker with us, raises the idea is to regret that a man of so much research and powers of thinking did not complete his intended work.

^{*} The existence of a sacred language is proved by the Shanscrit.

Among other pursuits Mr. S. cultivated and understood Music, both practically and theoretically; and this produced his "Treatise on the Principles and Power of Harmony," on which, says his Biographer, he seems to have bestowed unusual labour. is, in f.ct, an analysis or abridgment of Tartini's "Trailato di Musica," with such an addition of new matter, that it may justly be deemed the joint production of Tarton and Stillingfleet; and, in executing this, Mr. S. seems to have accomplished the wish of D'Alembert, namely, "that Tartini would engage some man of letters equally practised in Musick and shilled in writing, to develope those ideas which he himself has not unforded with sufficient perspicuity.

This was the last of Mr. Stillingfleet's publications; for he died, at his lodgings in Piccadilly opposite Burlington House, Dec. 15, 1771 (the our National Agriculture; to one of which we may particularly refer the reader, in the Memoranda for the History of Husbandry, pp. 599 to 601; where he displays the advantages conferred on practical Agriculture, by the researches and writings of men of science and letters. As a Poet, Mr. Stillingfleet is less known, because few of his compositions were ever given to the publick, and those were short, and confined to local or temporary subjects. The Essay on Conversation; the Poem on Earthquakes, the Dramas and Sonnets; will certainly entitle him to a place on the British Parnassus; but, when we consider his refined and classical taste, his command of language, his rich and varied knowledge, and the flights of imagina. tion which frequently escape from his rapid pen, we can have no hesitation in asserting, that if, instead of the haste in which he apparently prided himself, he had employed more patience and more ass duous correction, he would have attained no inconsiderable rank among our native Poets.-Independently of his m rits as a Naturalist and a Poet, he possessed great versatility of genius and multifarious know-His intimate acquaintance with the higher branches of the mathematics, and his skill in applying them to practice, are evident from his Treatise on the principles and power of Harmony; and all his works, both printed and manuscript, display various and undoubted proofs of an extensive knowledge of languages, both antient and modern, and a just and refined taste, formed on the best models of classic literature."

His personal character, which follows, is delineated impartially and with just discrimination. But, after so many specimens in his well-known works, it is somewhat too late to compliment Mr. Coxe on his excellence in this department of Biography*. It may be proper, however, to add, that these Memoirs are illustrated by an excellent Portrait and fac-simile of the handwriting of Mr. Stillingfleet, by Portraits of Mr. Price, Mr. Windham, and Mr. Neville, and an engraving of the monument in St. James's church.

We now proceed to notice the contents of Vol. II. which is divided into two Parts. The selection of Mr. Stillingfleet's works begins with his poetry, on the character of which we see no reason to differ from the opinion Mr. Coxe has given. The Sonnets and the Dramas are now printed for the first time. The latter were composed with a view to be set to music, in which state some of them were performed with various success.

The remainder of the Selection in this Volume, and in Vol. III., consists of Mr. Stillingfleet's "Miscellaneous Tracts on Natural History," already published, but now enriched by the Additional Observations of Professor Martyn. In the second edition of these Miscellaneous Tracts, published in 1762, the Observations on Grasses were accompanied by plates of the different species, most of them well drawn from Nature by his friend Mr. Price; it is now illustrated with a new series of engravings (which are coloured in the tine-paper copies) by the masterly hand of Mr. Sowerby, instead of the original plates, which were, Mr. Coxe observes, "rather intended for the ordinary observer than the Botanist."

Then follow, now first published, the "Memoranda for the History of Husbandry," consisting of an Introduction, on Savage and Pastoral Life -Proofs of the flourishing State of Agriculture in Egypt at an early Period-Memoranda on Subjects relative to the Husbandry of the Greeks and Romans-Eleusinian Mysteries-Hesiod - Theophrastus - the Vine, Miseltoe, and Cytisus - Geoponic Writers - Virgil's Georgics-Pliny-Remarks on early Agricultural Writers—Tu-ser—Turner—Heresbach— Harrison — Lord Bacon — Utility of such Writings-Maxims in Farming-Georgics of the Mind-Improvement of Land-Watering-Fences, and particularly the Bramble—Willows—Pillas, or naked Oats-Sheep-With an Appendix: No. 1. Of the Grasses mentioned by Theophrastns; and No. II. Index to the Calendars of Flora.

The value of these original and truly curious extracts cannot fail to be appreciated by every person conversant with the subject. Mr. S.'s remarks on Agricultural Writers are particularly valuable, and arc, as well as the other extracts, enriched by the learned and judicious notes of Professor Martyn and John Stackhouse, esq. a gentleman who is employed in illustrating the Works of Theophrastus.

Those of Mr. Stillingfleet will now attain the rank in every library to which they are so justly entitled.

2. The Life of Lord Nelson, by Mr. Clarke and Mr. M'Arthur, continued from our last Volume, p. 562.

WE shall resume this interesting publication by considering what may be esteemed the difficult and delicate part of a Biographer's task. No human being is perfect. In the brightest character some spots will be found; and to describe these without giving offence, and at the same time without violating the truth of history, is frequently no easy matter-" Hic labor, hoc opus est." And, in this part, to speak honestly, we are not so perfeetly satisfied with Mr. Clarke as in almost every thing else. At the same time, a partiality for his Hero may perhaps have biassed our judgment.

A Biogra-

^{*} As Mr. Coxe has said something of the Blue-stocking Club, of which Mr. S. was the most distinguished member, we are surprised that, instead of the short quotation from Bisset, who could know nothing of the parties, be did not give the elegant compliment paid to Mr. Stilling-fleet by Sir William Forbes, in his Life of Dr. Beattie, where he might have found an account of the Club from a member. See Life of Beattie, vol. I. p. 210, note, 4to edition.

neighbourhood; and it is but justice to say that, upon the whole, Mr. Clarke has preserved a great deal of delicacy.

There are, we well know, persons of considerable consequence, who have even highly commended Mr. Clarke for neither glossing over nor concealing either this unfortunate attachment or the death of Caraccioli; and the inculpation of both transactions is wisely and allowably put into the mouths of his best friends and advisers. It does honour, likewise, to the integrity of the Writer, that the presence of Lady Hamilton on-board the ship where Caraccioli was tried is not suppressed. We honour Nelson almost to idolatry; but should have been sorry if his Biographer had suppressed or concealed, or even palhated, his failings. But let the lact speak for itself:

"It was the opinion of Helen Maria Williams, and certainly of many other persons, that in these transactions Lady Hamilton took an active part. Of her delusion, which gradually brought on that fatal and highly-wrought attachment which sne formed for the Hero of Aboukir; for it was the hero, and not the individual, which had captivated her glowing imagination. Its ardour, as it increased, overpowered the up ural kindness of her disposition, and eventually involved her in an endiess succession of private altereation and public disappointment.—On his return to Naples, July 9, 1799, his Sierlian Majesty again held his Court and resided on-poard Lord Nelson's ship, under the secure protection of the British flag; where he enjoyed the constant loyalty, more particularly of the lower classes of his subjects, and renewed that courtesy and condescension to all ranks, which had retained so powerful an ascendancy over the arthices and calumnies of the French. About a week afterwards, a Neapolitan who had been fishing in the Bay came one morning to the Fondroyant, and assured the officers that Caraccioli had been seen, who had risen from the bottom of the sea, and was coming as fast as he could to Naples, swimining half out of the water. The story of the Nespolitan was slightly mentioned to his Majesty. The day being favourable, Lord Nelson, as usual, indulged the King by standing out to sea: the Foudroyant, however, had not advanced far, before the officers of the watch beheld a body upright in the water, whose course was directed towards Captain Hardy soon discovered that it was actually the body of Caraccioli, notwithstanding the great weight which had been attached to it; and it became extremely difficult to decide in what manner the extraordinary circumstance should be communicated to the King. This was performed with much address by Sir W. Hamilton; and, with his Majesty's permission, the body was taken on-shore by a Neapolitan boat, and consigned to Christian burial. The coxswain of the boat brought back the double-headed Neapolitan shot, with a portion of skin still adhering to the rope by which they had been fixed. They were weighed by Capt. Hardy, who ascertained that the body had risen and floated with the immense weight of 250 lbs. attached to it."

We have the rather cited the preceding particulars, as they afford a curious phænomenon for the cousideration of Philosophers.

After all, there are some points we could wish to have altered, and which might have been done without the impeachment of Mr. Clarke's credit as a Biographer; and these we shall now point out.

In page 134, from a Letter to Lady Nelson, Mr. Clarke takes occasion to say, that Lord Nelson had imbibed, whilst at Naples, seeds of suspicion of Lord St. Vincent. That Lord Nelson had imbibed such suspicion, is indeed clear from the letter; but there seems to be no proof that they had been infused into him at Naples, meaning, we suppose, by some person or persons at Naples; but what we think exceptionable is the introduction of such a letter at all. Such a suspicion might be only transitory in the breast of Lord Nelson, mentioned to his wife in a confidential letter; and it is, indeed, at variance with the very affectionate and cordial letters which are afterwards addressed by him to Lord St. Vincent; and, therefore, if these suspicions continued, it would impeach Lord Nelson's sincerity; and, if they did not continue, they should never have seen the light; and the Viscountess was somewhat to blame to have given up such a letter.

We are not quite satisfied with the defence of the affair of the capitulation at Castel Nuovo; but this is a very delicate business, and it is not quite certain that any blame attaches . to Mr. Clarke in this; the truth of History must not be violated. Perhaps, however, about this period Mr. Clarke says more than is necessary about the irritability of Lord Nelson's temper; such a term, we believe, does not in general belong to Lord Nelson's character. But what Mr. Clarke calls irritubility, in most cases seems to have been nothing more than a laudable anxiety for the public service, or a proper jealousy for his own honour and credit. In particular, we condemn the application of the term when alluding to the liberties Mr. Fox had taken in one of his Speeches respecting that very affair at Castel We think Lord Nelson Nuovo. showed no irritability on that occasion; but supposing, as no doubt he did, that the affair, as far as the English were concerned, was perfectly correct, he felt an honest indignation at Mr. Fox's abuse; and that seems the term which should properly have been used.

In one instance, Lord Nelson is not made suffic ently conspicuous; and that is in the Battle of the Nile. But Mr. Clarke has not often offended in this respect, and our veneration for Lord Nelson may mislead us.

After the Battle of Copenhagen (in which every justice is done to Lord Nelson) we do not recollect that his being made a Viscount, in consequence of it, is mentioned till a long time afterwards.

With all these exceptions, we still think Mr. Clarke has done great credit to himself, and made his Reader enamoured with the character of his Hero. Great care has been taken in the correction of the press, and we have noticed but one erratum, and that is in page 256, vol. I. where the date 1797 is inserted instead of 1796. Now and then, perhaps, a careless construction of a sentence appears, as, "He informed Capt. Lord Garlies that information," &c. &c.

Sed ubi plura nitent — we are not disposed to search for trifling ble-mishes.

Proposing to give some farther extracts hereafter, we only add, for the present, that this national work is founded on documents communicated to Mr. C. by his Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence, by Earl Nelson and ler, &c. &c.

3. Prayers collected from the several Writings of Jeremy Taylor, D. D. Bishop of Down and Connor, adapted to the Family, the Closet, the Sacrament, Sc. Sc. Sc. By the Rev. Samuel Clapham, M. A. Vicar of Christ Church, and Rector of Gussage St. Michael.

Mr. CLAPHAM frequently appears: as an Editor of books: much of his time seems to be employed in producing to the world writings which have the highest tendency to promote the interests of society, and which are not always accessible to the generality of readers. Such laudable endeavours, therefore, whilst they claim the approbation of the wise and the good, must afford abundantly more satisfaction to a mind so usefully employed, than is to be derived either from convivial pleasures or secular engagements. When a Clergyman, after discharging his pastoral duties, devotes the remainder of his leisure to the religious improvement of the world at large; when, in return for GENT. MAG. Jenuary, 1811.

end Communion. Dota see truty agmirable: the soul in a peculiar manner draws uigh to God, humbled, indeed, in the dust, yet encouraged to say, Why art thou cast down? The devotions appointed for the week after the Sacrament are well calculated to cherish religious principles. The Fifth Part comprizes Prayers suitable for every situation and cir-Whatever be the cumstance in life. necessities, whatever the occurrences, the devout mind will find a proper subject of address to God. Prayers, with Thanksgivings, are adapted to the several seasons of the Church: the Clergy are supplied with forms for their flocks, and for a blessing on their labours; Parents, likewise, for their children, whether hving at home, employed abroad, or serving in wars: in short, for every family, in sickness, in health, whether a part of it be living in the fear of God, or without religious impressions; where ther an increase is given to it, or it mourns the loss of a relative, the most appropriate and pious devotions are provided.

7

provided. We know of no publication which possesses such legitimate expressions of religious feelings as this now under our review. And, besides, each Prayer is not only adapted to the special occasion, but is so disposed as to be in its proper place.

In an advertisement prefixed, Mr.

Clapham says:

" I have endeavoured so to adapt them to the Family, the Closet, the Sacrament, &c. &c. &c. that every one, whether alarmed with apprehension, drooping with despondency, or rejoicing in hope, may hold communion with God; and, by perseverance in prayer, may at last find rest to his soul."—"I was farther encouraged to make this collection, in the hope that it will be esteemed an useful appendage to the Family Sermons I have published, and which, from the patronage they have received, have been found, I trust, , productive of good, in deterring from profligacy and vice; in discouraging lukewarmness and indifference in religion; in elucidating many passages of Scripture which perplex the generality of readers; and in demonstrating to the understanding, that the doctrines of the Church are indeed the doctrines of the Gospel."

Mr. Clapham next gives the character of his Author in the language of two celebrated scholars, the late Bishop Warburton and Dr. Parr.

"Bishop Taylor ranks in the very first class of English writers. The late Bishop Warburton * says, 'Tillotson is no orator, in the Greek and Roman sense of the word, like Taylor. You cannot sleep with Taylor; you cannot forbear thinking with Taylor and Barrow are incomparably the greatest Preachers and Divines of their age. But my predilection is for Taylor. He has all the abundance and solidity of the other, with a ray of lightning of his own, which, if he did not derive it from Demosthenes and Tully, has, at least, as noble and generous an original.' And a greater than Warburton has said +, Often has my mind hung with fondness and with admiration over the clouded, yet clear and luminous galaxies of imagery, diffused through the works of Bishop Taylor.' In the Prayers which compose this volume, I know not whether I shall have more exquisitely gratified taste, or more efficaciously assisted devotion. As specimens of composition, they exhibit the happy union of eloquence and piety."— I have, in various instances, appropriated to one service more Prayers than many people may have leisure to use, or can command attention to profit by them. Some of them, therefore, may either be entirely omitted, or occasionally changed, or may make two separate acts of devotion."—" May these Prayers become, in the family and the closet of every Member of our excellent Establishment, a principle of life, a support in sickness, a refuge in distress, and an admonition in prosperity l"

We have only to add that, solicitous as we are for the welfare of the Established Church, and the practice of the Gospel morality, we participate the feelings of the worthy Editor; and hope that this Volume will not only make a part of the library of every Churchman, but will be daily used both in his family and his closet. Could the Members of the Church once be brought to appretiate justly the value of their religion, and to practise it in its purity, Schism, which now triumphs, would shrink before the Truth.

4. Gratitude to God for National Mercies: a Sermon, preached November 18, 1810, by Robert Young, D. D. Minister of the Scotch Church, London Wall, being the Day set apart, by Authority, for the pubuc Acknowledgment of the Divine Goodness, in the Abundance of the Hurvest. Text, Psalm 107, Verse 8,—"Oh! that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works unto the children of men!" Williams and Smith; 8vo; pp. 30.

IN this Sermon, which we have read with pleasure, there evidently appears a tone of love to God, and regard for our fellow men. Among the blessings we enjoy, the Doctor thinks that, in this Country, we ought to be thankful, not only that we have lived so long under a merciful King and Governor, and that we enjoy the liberty of conscience, denied to many; but also that we ought to be thankful for the plenty we enjoy, in consequence of the abundant harvest; which are the principal topicks of the Sermon.

In speaking of the liberty of conscience we enjoy, the Doctor, in the Notes at the end of the Sermon, compares the present state of the Country with that of former times, and quotes these beautiful words of Graham on the Sabbath:

--- "O blissful days l When all men worship God as conscience ^{*} Warburton's Letters to Hurd. Letter L.

[†] Dr. Parr. See Tracts by Warburton and a Warburtonian.

That in the times of old had scathed the On England's banner, and had powerless struck Th' infatuate monarch, and his wav'ring Yet rang'd asself to aid his son dethrou'd), The lyart veteran heard the word of God, By Cameron thunder'd, or by Banwack pour'd In gentle stream: then rose the song, the Acclaim of praise; the wheeling player ccas'd Her plaint—the solitary place was g ad, And, on the distant cairos, the watcher s ear* borne note. Caught doubtfully at times the breeze-But years more gloomly follow'd; and no more array

most interesting literary period, no name would more immediately occur to him than that of the Biographer of Lorenzo de Medici and Leo the Tenth. To this consideration, he adds the recollection that Mr. Roscoe was the beloved associate of his youth, the object of his peculiar respect and esteem, and one of those remaining friends for whom he feels the "warmeest affection,"

The Translator's Preface observes, that it is barely possible the biographical narratives of eminent men, written by themselves, should fail to possess both useful instruction and

* "Sentinels were placed on the surrounding hills, to give warning of the approach of the military.

frose

^{* &}quot;The father durst not receive his son, nor the wife her husband: the country was prohibited to harbour the fugitives, and the ports were shut against their escape By sea. When expelled from their homes, they resided in caves, among morasses and monatains, or met by stealth or by night for worship. But, whenever the monatains-men, as they were styled, were discovered, the hue and cry was ordered to be raised. They were pursued, and frequently shot by the military, or sought with more insidious diligence by the spies, informers, and officers of justice: and, on some occasions, it appears, that the sagacity of dogs was employed to track their footsteps, and explore their lurking retreats.—Lang's listory, vol. 2," amusement. An author knows of his own history and mind numerous particulars which could not be obtained by even an intimate friend, supposing such only to undertake their memoirs; consequently, they may commence with a very early period of their history, and give interesting facts denied to others engaged in their "task only from acquaintance with the subject at a mature age, and who must content (themselves) with vague and defective accounts of all that passed before they were produced on the public stage." Self-biographers are particularly valuable as far as depends on the origin and formation of character. This Dr. A. illustrates by the instance of Dr. Franklin, the general outline of whose actions may be accurately given by a strauger to him; but who, he enquires, "besides himself, could have communicated those incidents of his childhood and youth which are so precious to a student of human nature, and, perhaps, afford more important lessons to the moralist, than all that he acted upon the open theatre of the world?" The Translator admits that this species of narrative is liable to one objection, from the facility it affords to those who wish to deceive; but he thinks a very slight degree of sagacity will enable the reader to detect an attempt of this kind. The motives on which a person acts who offers his life to posterity may be readily imagined; he wishes to appear to advantage, to inform the world of the merits of his mind and actions, which he supposes to be unknown or undervalued, and, finally, to remove prejudices, either real or imaginary; indeed, it is next to impossible that he should be entirely aree from these propensities. "Even they who appear the most frank and undisguised have their reserves and glosses; and it is a shrewd remark of Bayle concerning Cardan, that, freely as he has exposed many of his vices and frailties, a well-informed observer of his character and conduct, who should have written his life, would have made public much to his discredit that he has suppressed." Dr. Aikin thinks, besides, that there is an indiscreet loquacity apparent in the works of those who undertake to produce erroneous impressions in their favour, which will always serve to counteract their efforts. Unguarded disclosures will occasionally occur, affording a clue for the disentanglement of truth from deception. "The experienced reader will readily discover vanity beneath the mask of modesty, and selfishness beneath that of public spirit."

The Translator's observations on self-biography in general are extremely pertinent; and, in our opinion, useful in guarding the publick against the numerous ephemeral memoirs, the offspring of mere vanity and presumption. A man who writes of himself should possess a consciousness that he has a right to demand the attention of the discerning part of the community, by divulging facts not to be found in the common circle of life. "This may consist either in what is external, or what is internal; in the extraordinary events of which a man has been the subject or witness, or in the extraordinary operations of his own mind."

M. Huet was celebrated in the age in which he lived for his various works, the result of profound learning and excellent endowments of mind. At the same time, Dr. A. wishes that he may not be understood as advancing, that the subject of his labours ranked "among men of the first order of intellect;" but he filled one of those spaces in literary history which is too firmly associated with the durable monuments of lettered industry to be in danger of perishing. The incidents of his life differed but little from those of the generality of scholars and ecclesiastics; yet there were peculiarities in the manner of his training to each of the above characters, that render him a distinct individual in those orders of men. As he long enjoyed the controul of his own actions, he was enabled to choose his company, his studies, and places of residence. From his very youth he had been an enquirer on religious subjects; and, equally connected with Catholics and Protestants, "he imbibed a degree of learned Catholicism which did not entirely quit him even when become a Prelate;" causing a more general acquaintance with his literary contemporaries, than could have been the case had he been confined to a religious order, or destined to an exclusive priesthood. "On these way rious accounts, added to a life pro-

Salmasins, were a critical groupe which would " confer lustre on any period of philology." The literati of the country just mentioned had avoided theological controversy, till the progress of the Reformation compelled them to contend against the violent attacks of its promoters. In the foremost rank of the Roman Catholic champions were the Cardinals Baronius and Bellarmine, who were supported by many others; to whom, Dr. A. remarks, "the inexhaustible wealth of the Romish see administered substantial aliment." Sarpi maintained a dauntless front against Papal usurpations, but acquiesced in the general doctrines of his religion; and Grotius commented on the Scriptures with exquisite penetration and learning, without adopting the doctrines of any particular sect of Christians. Duplessis Mornai, and Dumoulin, pleaded the cause of the Reformed religion in France, and it had able advocates in different parts of the continent. The Separatists were at the same moment engaged in their own controversies, and Arminius and Gomarus ledge in general; but it does not sppear that their influence was imme-Natural philosophy had recerved due attention; and Tycho Brahe, of whom much is said in the Memoirs before us, had " ade many valuable discoveries in astronomy. At length Galileo diffused a "bright and unextinguishable light over physical science; and, being followed by Torricelli and other eminent disciples. introduced that broad day of knowledge which has since shone upon the world." Kepler, who deserved equal credit for his advances in the science of geometry, applied his skill with such success in investigating the laws which govern the motions of the heavenly bodies, that he afforded Descartes and Newton the basis for their sublime discoveries. Several eminent anatomists had carried their researches into the animal economy to a very prosperous length; " and that fundamental law, the circulation of the blood, had been demonstrated by Harvey a short time before the birth of our Author."

Dr. Aikin farther observes, that though, though, on the whole, the state of humau knowledge might be considered as then only in its infancy, compared with the consequences of subsequent efforts of genius, yet the impulse was given, and the mind directed into the true channel. The art of writing well was by no means unknown, and respectable models for imitation existed in nearly every species of composition; yet taste wanted greater refinement, and learning still continued debased by pedantry. the period of Huet's entrance into his literary career, Italy had lost the supremacy it once possessed, which induced the learned and candid Tiraboschi to remark, in the Preface to the Eighth Volume of his History of Italian literature, "that whereas he had found it necessary to employ three volumes on the literature of the sixteenth century, that of the seventeenth would occupy only one;" and he does not deny that this circumstance was in great part owing to the declension of letters in the latter period. the freedom of discussion was watched in the Papal dominions with scrupulous jealousy, Huct's acquaintance with the Italian literati was very limited.

Holland, having had the liberality and circumspection to confide their universities to men of known abilities alone, and to invite their professors from all parts of Europe, with the additional advantage derived from a free press, "seems to have been the magazine whence the greatest number of valuable publications issued, and the chief centre of learned communication throughout Europe." The thirty years war in which Germany had been engaged, was a sufficient reason for the decline of literature there; yet, with this dreadful disadvantage attending it, that country contrived to maintain the reputation which it had acquired for solid erudition, though many of her learned sons were compelled to seek that encouragement abroad which was denied them at home. The English language seemed, at the time Dr. A. is now treating of, to be universally neglected and despised on the Continent, where, he observes, it was as little understood and read, "as those of Denmark and Sweden may now he;" thus, though we had formed a flourishing school of literature, it was lost to every foreign nation; nor was the stock of our Latin currency of more account. The civil commotions of England were equally disadvantageous; and those whose minds were by this means diverted from learned pursuits fell insensibly into the prevailing infatuation for political and theologi-" Perhaps," says cal controversy. Dr. A. " lew British names, except those of Bacon, Camden, Buchanan, Selden, and Usber, were familiar to the scholars of the rest of Europe, in the earlier part of the seventeenth century." In France, the University of Paris had always possessed illustrious members; and Huct found many examples of literary eminence, who had "decorated the age of Richlieu, which was introductory to that of Lewis XIV." The civil law received much improvement by the labours of the professors of other French Universities; and many persons of the legal profession distinguished themselves as writers on various subjects. The language of the country under consideration attained great excellence; and Dr. A. is of opinion, that the celebrated "Provincial Letters" furnished Huet a specimen for imitation "which has scarcely admitted any subsequent improvement." The Latin, besides, was cultivated with equal success in prose and verse. this period Corneille furnished the French stage with master-pieces, which rendered it the rival of that of Greece; and the Literati were then commencing their long career of excellence in polite literature. The birth of Huet happening in a provincial town was not an unfavourable circumstance in the formation of his mind. "Caen. the seat of an University, and long one of the head-quarters of Calvinism, had imbibed a learned tincture, and had not lost the regularity of manners which usually accompanies a Reforming sect." The Jesuits, particularly celebrated for their ardent promotion of the interests of learning, had succeeded in securing the principal share of the arduous task of instructing youth, "and presented in their college those incitements and aids to early study, which have pre-eminently distinguished the seminaries of their order." Though it must be admitted that the cultivation of the mind had reached a greater degree of perfection in the metropolis of France, yet Huet

esca ped

guished among those in which the human mind has made the most sensible progress."

Dr. A. thus closes his introduction, of which we have faithfully detailed the purport, with specimens of his language occasionally interspersed. In so doing we feel confident of the approbation of our Readers, and are convinced they will confirm our assertion that we are much indebted to the Translator for this spontaneous illustration of the Memoirs of Huet.

thotick church service, and gave to the church, and consecrated to pions uses, the musical instruments which he had purchased for his own amusement: such were the consequences of religious zeal, a little tinctured with a sense of atonement.

M. Huet describes certain ornaments given to him by his godfather on the New Year's day next following his baptism, which furnish a curious idea of the fashion of the times; they consisted of a silken bonnet fastened by a circlet of gold, set with diamonds, and adorned with herons' plumes. " To this he added a belt embroidered with gold, from which depended a little sword, accommodated to my stature, and a gold chain so weighty, that when at a more advanced age I walked adorned with it, and swathed in its many coils, I was almost oppressed under the load." Alain Augée. a person in holy orders, was entrusted with the early part of his education, which was interrupted by the premature

ension to its true source: " Cherish," he exclaims, " with thy favour, this work, undertaken at thy instigation; that in writing and publishing it my ture death of his mother, who had not attained the 40th year of her age. This event proved particularly inauspicious for Huet, as he seems to have been transferred from guardian to guardian, with little ceremony, and less respect to his rights of relationship. He was at length fixed for six years at Caen, and "chained down" with several cousins to the rudin ents of language; from thence he went to the College of Mont Royal at Caen, under the tuition of the Jesuits, the rectors of the college, who for five years instructed him in polite literature, and for three in philosophy. The natural desire of improvement inherent to Huet, met with considerable interruption from his juvenile companions, who contrived every mischievous trick to impede his progress, and keep him as deficient as themselves: when he retired to a wood to escape them, they hunted him amongst the bushes, squirted dirty water at him, and pelted him with clods till he commenced a retreat; he, however, persevered and was successful, as at the age of thirteen he had completed his course of belies lettres, and appeared fit to enter upon that of philosophy. we have said on this head will serve to explain his ardent attachment to his studies, and the Reader will infer from it that he did not relax as he advanced in life. Before he attained manhood. Huet had nearly become a Dominican through mere enthusiasm; and the superior of the order, who had encouraged this infatuation, incurred the resentment of his relations and fellow-citizens, through a mistaken idea that he had attempted to ensnare an unwary youth: afterwards, he adopted the manners and pursuits of a fine gentleman, and speaks of his agility and strength with much complacency, and mentions a singular instance of his presence of mind, even when very young, which we would recommend for imitation to every youth in the kingdom under similar

"From childhood I had learned the art of swimming, without a master, and without corks, but accidentally. For, being, like other boys, accustomed in the hot weather to bathe several times in the day for the sake of coolness, it once happened that I ventured into a stream without first trying its depth, and immediately sunk to the bottom; when, being roused to the utmost exertion by the urgency of the danger, I struggled so hard with my hands and feet, as to raise myself to the surface of the water; and having thus discovered that I possessed a faculty with which I was before unacquainted, I swam across a deep river on that very day. From that time, by frequent practice, I acquired such a proficiency in this art, that I was able to dive to the bottom of the deepest streams, and take up oysters from the ground; so that none of my companions were reckoned to surpass me in this respect."

One of the first uses he made of his liberty, after he had reached his twenty-first year, was the gratification of an inordinate desire to collect the valuable works then extant, which he did with such excessive avidity, that his purse generally stood at a very low ebb. His was a motley collection with respect to external appearance, though excellent in the essential point; nor did he scruple to use his books lest they should be soiled, or neglect to mark favourite passages to preserve the purity of the margins ; the only uneasy sensation of his mind arose from the dread that a library so select should at length be dispersed in alleys and upon booksellers' stalls, and thus fall into the hands of the ignorant vulgar: this he contrived in due time to prevent. - In a work of so multifarious a nature, it is impossible to think of giving a complete, or even an imperfect outline; we have therefore noticed only such parts as may be known without injuring the interest. The numerous incidents of Huet's life with respect to literary affairs, are strong incentives to a perusal of his Memoirs; and the Biographical Anecdotes in the form of Notes will amply gratify more general readers: a specimen of the latter shall conclude this article.

"Antony de Garabi, sieur de la Luzerne, in a very uncomely body, lodged a mind possessed of many agreeable talents and accomplishments, which rendered his society welcome to the most distinguished persons of his time. He was born in 1617 at Luzerne, near Coutances in Normandy, and studied at Caen under Halle. He was much attached to the literary characters with which Caen then abounded, and was ready to do them all the kind offices in his power. Garabi was. the author of a number of French and Latin poems, and some works in prose, which displayed an easy and flowing style of composition, but without much depth

Poems of Henry Kirke White; XVII. Matrimonial Infelicity; XVIII. On Suspicion; XIX. Considerations on the Utility of the learned Languages; XX. Account of John Wilce, esq.; XXI. Self-knowledge.

Of these we are most inclined to praise No. I. III. VIII. XII. and XVIII. in all of which are many useful remarks, conveyed in a pleasing, alstyle. His re not the guent. In lifter from e another opinion is r any man m to taste the author in the following:

P. 86. "In reading the Essays of

d by ...moor by
He must,

ton is very just. The moral degradation of Burns and Chatterton ought never to be forgot in a comparative, estimate.

On these Essays we shall only add, that No. XVII. contains some opinions on the causes of matrimonial infelicity, which the Author would do well to revise; and that, in No. XIX. he appears to have imbibed the vulgar prejudices against classical learning, which were very becoming when brought forward by such a man as Cobbett, but are surely out of place in a work which emulates the taste of the British Essayists.

 The Reformer: comprising Twenty-te of Ermys on Religion and Morality. W the an Appendix; 12mo; pp. 360. Rivingtons. 1910.

IN these days of pretended Reformers, we are glid to meet with one to whose sentiments we can subscribe, and whose efforts we can applaud. The Author of these Essays appears to be a man who has thought much and deeply on those topicks of religion and morals which are most important to the happiness of mankind, and the well-being of society; and, in aid of his own sentiments, he has called in those powerful allies, Addille has son, Blair, and Johnson. also frequently quoted, and has given a perspicuous analysis of, Beattie's celebrated Essay on Truth, a work which, we agree with him, cannot be too frequently perused. Our Author's original opinions, if not always striking for their novelty, are not the less calculated to promote the valuable and generous purposes of his work, which we feel disposed to recommend to the attention of the young of both sexes.

gion

As a specimen, the following will perhaps not discredit our recommendation:

"Having thus stated the good effects resulting from industry, I shall now state an instance of the miserable effects of indolence. Idleness is so general a distemper, that there is hardly any person without some alloy of it; and thousands beside myself spend more time in an idle uncertainty which to begin first of two affairs, than would have been sufficient to The occasion of have ended them both. this seems to be the want of some necessary employment, to put the spirits in motion, and awaken them out of their leif I had less leisure, I should thargy. have more; for I should find my time distinguished into portions, some for business, and others for the indulging of pleasures: but now one face of indolence overspreads the whole, and I have no land-mark to direct myself by: Were one's time a little straitened by business, like water inclosed by its banks, it would have some determined course; but unless it be put into some channel, it has no current, but becomes a deluge, without either use or motion. When Scanderberg, Prince of Epirus, was dead, the Turks, who had but too often felt the force of his arm in the battles he had won from them, imagined, that, by wearing a piece of his bones near their heart, they should be animated with a vigour and force like to that which inspired him when living. I am like to be of little use whilst I live, I am resolved to do what good I can after my decease; and have accordingly ordered my bones to be disposed of in this manner, for the good of such of my countrymen as are troubled with too great a proportion of fire. All fox-hunters, upon wearing me, would in a short time be brought to endure their beds in a morning, and perhaps even quit them with regret at ten: instead of hurrying away to tease

a poor animal, and run away from their own thoughts, a chair or a chariot would be thought the most desirable means of performing a remove from one place to another. In a word, no Egyptian mummy was ever half so useful in physic, as I should be to these feverish constitutions. to repress the violent sallies of youth, and give each action its proper weight and repose. I can stifle any violent inclination, and oppose a torrent of anger, or the solicitations of revenge, with success. Although indolence is a stream which flows slowly on, it yet undermines the foundation of every virtue. A vice of a more lively nature were a more desirable tyrant than this rust of the mind, which gives a tincture of its nature to every action of one's life. It were as little hazard to be tossed in a storm, as to lie thus perpetually becalmed: and it is to no purpose to possess the seeds of a thousand good qualities, if we want the vigour and resolution necessary for exerting them. Death brings all persons back to an equality; and this image of it, this slumber of the soul, leaves no difference between the greatest genius and the meanest understanding. A faculty of doing things remarkably praise-worthy, thus concealed, is of no more use to the owner, than a heap of gold to the miser who has not the heart to make use of it. - To-morrow is still the fatal time when all is to be rectified: to-morrow comes; it goes; and still I please myself with the shadow, whilst I lose the reality; unmindful that the present time alone is ours; the future is yet unborn; and the past is dead, and can only live, as parents in their children; in the actions it has produced. The time we live ought not to be computed by the number of years, but by the use that has been made of it: thus, it is not the extent of ground, but the yearly rent, which gives the value to the estate. Wretched and thoughtless creatures! in the only place where covetousness were a virtue, we turn prodigals! Nothing lies upon our hands with such uneasiness, nor has there been so many devices for any thing, as to make it slide away imperceptibly, and to no purpose. A shilling shall be hoarded with care, whilst that which is above the price of an estate is thrown away with disregard and contempt. There is nothing. now-a-days, so much avoided, as a solicitous improvement of every part of time; it is a report which must be shunned, as one regards the name of a Wit and a fine Genius, and as one fears the dreadful charapter of a laborious Plodder: but, notwithstanding this, the greatest Wits any age has produced, thought far otherwise: such as Socrates and Demosthenes. All are acquainted with the labour and assiduity with which Tully acquired his eloquence.

prayers for a communicant at the point of death. He had ordered all his bed-curtains to be opened, and the window-saskes thrown open, that he might have air and space to assist him in his efforts. What they were; with what devotion he joined in those solemn prayers that warn the parting spirit to dismiss all hopes that centre in this world, that reverend friend can witness. I also was a witness and a partaker, and no other person was present at that hely ceremony. A short time before he expired, I came, by his desire, to his bedside; where, when taking my hand and pressing it between his, he addressed me, for the last time, in the following words: "You see me now in those moments when no disguise will avail, and when the spirit of a man must be proved. I have a mind perfectly resigned, and at peace with itself. I have done with this world; and what I have done in it, I have done for the best, I hope and trust I am prepared for the next. Tell me not of all that passes in health and pride of heart; these are moments in which a man must be searched; and remember that I die content." I know that I am correct in these expressions, which -Since that period," we proudly join Mr. V in observing, "a new iera has arisen in Classical Literature. The labours of Bentley, which had been either neglected or obstructed by his contemporaries, have been duly appreciated by a more enlightened age, and every succeeding year adds new bays to the wreath of his fame, His critical disquisitions have given birth to those of Hemsterburs, Rubnken, Valkenner, Villoison, Brunck, Dawes, Markland, Toup, Tyrwaitt, and Porson. these great luminaries a flood of light has been shed on the Classical world, and critical knowledge has assumed a meridian brightness, which even the gloom of pulttical desentions, or of revolutionary storms, can neither obscure nor diminish. The present time abounds with men of accurate taste, of critical sagacity, of rich and various information, and of splendid genius. .. ft has been thought," adds Mr. V. " that an attempt to collect their scattered rays would tend to cherish the blaze of literature by general communication. this view, the present Repository is offered to their patronage; and, if they will ho-neur it with their support, and adem it by their productions, a confident expectation of success may be formed. On them the fate of it depends. We profess to be only instruments in their hands. The experience of a few months has proved that our plan was not visionary. An inclination has been manifested to support it; and, if that inclination is fulfilled according to the specimens exhibited in the present volume, our task will soon become that of selection."

•

The specimens in the Volumes already completed, are creditable to the industry and the talents of Mr. Valpy, who is a Graduate in the University of Oxford, bred up in the seminary of his learned Father at Reading, and is likely to rank high among the Classic Printers of this Country.

The following is the bill of fare which the Reader will find provided for him in this Journa!; and as the whole is well seasoned with Attic salt, he may suit the taste of his own palate in the selection.

- "1. Critical Observations on Classical Authors; 2. Criticisms on new Editions of the Classics, and on Publications relating to Greek, Latin, and Oriental Literature; 3. Disquisitions on Classical and Literary Subjects; 4. Philological and Literary Anecdotes; 5. Classical and Oriental Autiquities; 6. Biblical Criticisms and Dissertations; 7. Grammatical and Etymological Researches; 8. Bibliographical Intelligence; 9. Collations of Greek and Latin MSS.; 10. Prize Poems, and other Academical Exercises; 11. Greek and Latin Original Poetry; 12. Republications of scarce and valuable Tracts on Critical and Philological Subjects, and of important Articles in Continental Jourmais."
- 9. The Elements of Astronomy, according to the Newtonian Principles, illustrated by several new and interesting Diagrams, and adapted, us far as the Science will admit, to the plainest Capacities: intended salely for the Instruction of young Ladies and Gentlemen. By George Reynolds. Sherwood, Lackington, &c.; 12mo; pp. 145.

THIS little Treatise, the Author tells us, was composed for the improvement " of two young Ladies, whose instruction maternal anxiety had confided to his care."—" In the willingness to sympathize with a parent's solicitude, he rejected all whim of conceit, and all novelty of invention;" his only endeavour was "to place old objects in a new light: by varying the mode of another's expression, he thought to give a greater clearness and precision to the same idea; and by adding occasionally some suggestion of his own, to inculcate with more efficacy the doctrine of another."

In this endeavour Mr. Reynolds has very happily succeeded; the subjects being well arranged, and rendered easy of comprehension. Four explanatory Plates illustrate the several Although many publipropositions. cations on this subject are now offered for the assistance of young Students, whatever can open to them an inlet into the field of Science, freed from the intricacies with which their imaginations are too frequently perplexed, must be considered as a valuable addition; and we recommend these Elements of Astronomy for the clearness and precision with which instruction is conveyed.

10. Introduction to the Science of Harmony; or, a Catechism, uniting, with the First Practical Lessons on the Piano Forte, the Rudiments of Thorough Bass. By S. Spence; 12mo. pp. 36. Harris.

THE Rudiments of Thorough Bass are in this short Musical Catechism rendered familiar to the comprehension of the Student; and the young Practitioner would find the acquirement of these easy Lessons a great assistance towards a progress in the Science.

INDEX INDICATORIUS.

J. W. L. B. feels much obliged to A. K.; and would, if his address were known, be less brief in expressions of gratitude.

D. D. S. would be particularly obliged to any Norfolk Correspondent for a view of Swaff ham Church in that County, and also an account of the Monuments and Monumental Inscriptions within the same. -His Query concerning the cleaning of Coins borders too much on the ludicrous.

A New Correspondent asks, "Whether Deans are entitled to impale the arms of their respective Deancries with their own, in the same manner as a Bishop impales those of his See? In some Cathedrals we may find instances of a Dean impaling the arms of his Office with those of his own Family."

We wish not to discourage young Writers; but the Lines of W. W. are really too bad.

We do by no means consider ourselves obliged to answer anonymous Correspondents; and still less those who foolishly attempt to deceive us by fictitious names. Such of these as are not post paid are in general returned to the Post-office.

ADDRESS

Again the murderous steel, Its wasteful vengeance, fraught with fate, The close-wedg'd legions feel.

See where in welt'ring heaps they sink, And yield their guilty breath; No righteous cause relieves their pangs, And makes them smale in Death.

The robber's spoils, th' assassin's gold, Have lost their lustre quite, Now the rack'd soul must quit its clay, And seek the caves of Night.

With prospects different far from these, My Country's Sons shall glow; When 'midst the battle's storm they fall Beneath the whelming foc.

The Pow'r that marks the gailing chain,
That hears the plaintive cry,
Where Rapine, Force, and Fraud prevail,
From his abode on high;

Shall bless the generous arm that saves
From wrongs a groaning land;
And, when the destin'd victim drops,
Support him with his hand.

And, once the painful struggle o'er,
Shall freshest laurels bloom,
And shed perennal verdure round
The British Soldier's tomb. F. D. B.

life

Burns inexhausted, and yet fades away, Dies and yet lives, decreases and renews, Illuminating still successive man So ever various and so still the same? We can but give the reason in the fact. O wondrous tissue of perplexing thoughts? If reason will not tremble and adore -For life is more than merely to exist, To waste some flutt'ring hours in idle mirth, And think that reason shines, a gilded tray, To charm the fancy, not to rule the mind. All is consummate wonder, all beyond The proudest efforts of inquiring Man; And shall be claim more rare intelligence Than Heaven has granted, and presume himself,

Such as he is, enabled to search out.
The veiled meanings of th' Eternal Cause?
Should Man, who when he wills is free to move.

Or, when he wills it, can remain at rest, Yet why his limbs, obedient to his will. Move, or remain quiescent, cannot tell—Should he do more than wonder and revere? This his to wait, obedient, till that life When time-shall cease, forgotten, and unknown,

And his bright eye, no longer thro? the glass

Of darken'd Nature looking, shall behold The veil remov'd, and he shall comprehend, And then be able to resolve, what now In vain he asketh—might there not have been Without probation, Paradise, and Heaven, A present world as sinless as the next, No deeds abhorrent to the feeling mind, No guilt triumphant, and no folly base? Here we are circumscrib'd—enough, to

That Heaven itself hath will'd it to be As we behold it, yet, in mercy, grants An ample range, by bounding reason safe, To human knowledge proper, and secure, Bids man exert the powers which are his own.

To prove him nobler than inferior tribes, And gives him, high prerogative! to strive, By Faith supported, not to live in vain! He, with submissive deference, should read, In virtue only bold, but not too proud, Should, like a duteous satellite, obey, Not, like a comet flaming thro' the void, Erratic wander, terrible and dire, Portentous gleaming o'er a troubled world! What are thy joys, Ambition! what the

Charm
Can scatter roses o'er thy flinty couch,
And give the tyrant, on his bed of down, Nature's soft slumbers, and a dream of peace? [path,

Ah, there is none!—Suspicion haunts his
In that his eyelids close, and wake in dread.
O with what more than joy the Muse directs
From scenes of desolation and dismay
Her tortur'd vision, to those happy realms
Where Britain's Genius faus the generous flame:

Nor to herself confin'd, but spreads it wide, Pours animation o'er a groaning world, And bids it trust, the Despot vaunts in vain! The flame, awhile restrain'd, is not extinct, From shore to shore it spreads, from clime to clime,

And longing nations catch the sacred glow. Ye shall not always suffer, the mild forms Of peace and comfort, tenderness and joy, Banish'd atpresent from their ravag'd seats, Again shall flourish there, when ardent

The patriotic firmpess, and resolve
To die or conquer in their Country's cause, Have taught insulted lands to burst the yoke;

Rise, like a phoenix, unsubdued, and strong, And nobly emulous of Britain's fire, And nobly conscious of her aiding hand, Taught them, to prove, that Freedom, fixing firm [isle,

Her home, enraptur'd, in her favourite

Where still she dwells, undaunted, and secure, [som'd lands,

May thence excursive range thro' ran-

May thence, excursive, range thro' ran-And other regions in her kind embrace Benignant folding, may with pride receive No alien greetings to her honest love! Welcome, fair visions! welcome to the Muse Who sweeps her fingers o'er the lyre of Hope!

O! may the fountain of all hope, all good Past, present, and to come! be gracious here!

Yet if his high disposing Wisdom wills
With adverse aspect that the tempest low'r,
Still may his aid be near, and give us grace
To bear the pressure, whilst the trust survives!

But, if his mercy shall dispel the cloud, And raise fair Peace more lovely and serene.

From the convulsions of the moral world, And, by affliction, teaching man to feel His highest pride, submission to that Pow'r Which can dispel the storm, shall grant him soon

With grateful transport to behold it pass—O never absent be the thought, whose hand Has caus'd domestic happiness to smile, I'eace o'er a liberated world to bloom, And hope, again, to cheer with joyful views!

To his great name be given the honour due,
To him alone, eternal and supreme!
His be the glory, and be his the praise!

Jan. 1.

H.

Mr. URBAN,

THE inclosed "Ode to Enterprize" was written on the eve of the 19th of May 1810, previously to the Author's setting out the next morning on his Travels through Sweden, Lapland, Russia, and the shores of the Euxine. That this dangerous and almost unbeaten track was undertaken by this accomplished Votary of Enterprize, every philosophic reader of taste and judgment has reason to rejoice; as the Literary World has been lately gratified by an account of these Travels, which have added much to the general store of information, and do equal credit to the Author's abilities as an able Writer. a scientific Observer, and an enterprizing Traveller. The little poem I inclose you a copy of, he in all probability has forgotten; or, at least, will never think it of sufficient importance to give it himself to the publick; but, if you be of opinion with me that it is written with so much originality, taste, and spirit, that it can not but be a most agreeable present to your Poetic Readers, I trust your insertion of it cannot give any offence to the learned and elegant Author; and its appearance in print will gratify some Friends, who equally admire and respect him, and uone more than,

Yours, &c. Amicus.

ODE TO ENTERPRIZE.

ON lofty mountains roaming,
O'er bleak perennial snow,
Where cataracts are foaming
And raging North winds blow.

Where

Shall check the gay career, And death, the still suspended, Begin to linger near;

"Then oft in visions fleeting, May thy fair form be nigh, And suil thy votary greeting, Receive his parting sigh!

"And tell a joyful story
Of some new world of bliss,
Echpang all the glory
Thou promudest him in this!"

AN ADDRESS TO THE DEITY.
Written during a Thunder-storm.

ALTHO' around thy awful thunders fly, And roll terrific thro' the vaulted sky; Altho' thy vivid lightnings blaze on me. Yet shall my hope, my trust be fix'd on Thee:

On Thee, the fountain whence our solsce flows, [woes. On Thee, the soother of our wrongs and Protect, I pray, if such thy blessed will, The mariner, who guides with wondrous

The mariner, who guides with wondrous skill

The unwieldy bank; oh! spare the adventurous crew, [sue! Safely let them their wonted course pur-Save too, I pray, the wanderers on the shore, [pest roar; Shield them from harm, the lond the tem-brave, [slave, [slave, The prince, the peasant, hero, captive Mingle together in one common grave.]

Here wretches moulder, from farm'd work-bonse fled. [bread; Who robb'd the paupers of their daily And parish quacks, who, for a paltry fee, The passport sign'd of dying misery; Churchwardens too, who left Gol's house

To cankering time, to rain and decay;
And schoolmasters, who hant endowments fair, [care;

Then leave their scholars to a hireling's Too proud to teach salvation's sacred rule, They banish Bibles from a Christian school; Instruct wild youth with Greek, rude clowns to please,

Nor copy Jesus Christ, but Socrates; Their corses lay-impropriators lend, [menc.]. To sap a chancel which they ne'er would From taverns, theatres, and brothels, come Thousands of thousands to untimely doom.

The servant hears no more his master's cail; [wall; The pris'ner freed escapes the dungeon The wicked cease from troubling; peaceful rest, [weary breast. With dove-like calm, broods o'er the The lofty palace, and the frowning gate, The pride of office, and the pomp of state.

And

And all the pageantry of human show, Are by the conquiring hand of Death laid low.

With note discordant in affection's ear, Slow tolls the bell; the sable crowds ap-

Harshly the cords beneath the coffin grate; And tearful eyes survey the sculptur'd plate, Which tells the age and title of the dead, Sunk in cold slumber in his narrow bed. Let "earth to earth, ashes to ashes" turn, And "dust to dust," till rise the Judgment Heavy as lead each mournful clod de-Yet grieve not without hope, surviving [quish'd tomb, friends, The dead in Christ shall burst the van-And live in endless bliss within the world to come.

Our days are quickly gone; in haste they fiee, Swift as a well-trimm'd vessel ploughs the Swift as the whizzing arrow cuts its way, Swift as the eagle pounces on its prey.

As the rude ploughshare crops the blooming flow'r, [no more; So falls our house of clay, to rise on earth The fairest face, the eye divinely bright, Are food for worms hid in sepulchral night. Wealth, honour, glory, beauty, soon decay, And nought abides, when man is call'd tains, away. Of all the caskets which thy house con-Save one poor coffin nothing now remains: Though of thy splendid dresses lately proud, | sbroud! They all are dwindled to one woollen Where are our sires? Gone to their silent And where the prophets? hid within the Our Saviour Christ himself resign'd his breath,

And paid man's forfeit by a painful death; Rose the third day triumphant o'er the to save;

And wav'd the banner'd cross, oinnipotent Ascended glorious to his uative skies, To teach his followers from this earth to (· [immortal prize. (And gain a heav'nly crown, their faith's

At the great dawning of the Judgment Day, [melt away, When heaven, and earth, and seas shall The King of Glory shall let loose his ire, And the world perish in a flood of fire;

All nature stands aghast; the mountains

Each trembling heart prepares to meet its The pomp and majesty of kingly pow'r Are all extinguish'd in that fatal hour;

The rich men weep, the great their fall de-And proudest conquerors now are proud no Rumours of wars throughout the world shall rise; skies; The sea shall roar, and stars forsake the The Son of Man, riding on clouds, shall

And send a summons for the gen'ral doom 3 The great arch-angel shall his trumpet bound, (Louder and 'louder shall its voice re-Till heav'n and earth shall echo all around.

The dead shall hear, on that tremendousday, This awful calk "To Judgment come away." Men of all ages, and of ev'ry clime; [time, Since the sun measur'd first the course of All in one moment from their graves arise, And open on the Judge their tearful eyes.

Christ sits upon his Throne; majestic sight!

And calls the volume of our doom to light. Rang'd on each side a diff'rent troop is

A void impassable extends between. On the right hand his saints elect are chaplets grac'd. plac'd, Cloth'd in white robes, their brows with "Come;" cries their Lord, "ye blessed " children come,

"And live for ever in your blissful home; "Ye cloth'd the naked, and the hungry "Fed;

" Home to, your board the weary pilgrim " Lur'd by soft Charity's benignant call,

"Ye pour'd the healing balm within the " dungeon wall. lfight, "Well have ye fought of faith a glorious

"Rul'd by my Spirit, cover'd by my " Might. prove,

"Your great Redeemer's sure protection "And reap your high reward—your "Saviour's love."

(To be concluded in our next.)

THE ROSE-BUD.

AN elegant Bud of a Rose On Margaret's bosom reclin'd; Her cheeks all its beauties disclose, In her lips all its sweets are combin'd.

Young Edwin, who longing survey'd Its charms as it lay on the shrine, With freedom addressing the maid, Said, " Lady, this bud shall be mine."

'Twas a pity,—'twas worse,—'twas a sin, Such an elegant Rose to displace From the sweet situation 'twas in, From a bow'r of beauty and grace.

He took it—yet felt some remorse Such pleasing companions to part, And using a delicate force, He plac'd the bud next to his heart.

There clinging too closely, he found, The Rose, which began to give pain, Had made an impression—a wound— Which he fear'd—yet he wish'd—would remain.

" And thus," the young moralist said, "Am I punish'd for robbing the bow'r: Yet I hope that the heart of the maid Is not quite so hard as the fore'r." R.P. INTEH-

9th corps have marched towards Madrid, where preparations were making for the assembly of a large body of troops. It is certain that all these troops, as well as Gardanne's detachment, have retired from the frontiers of Portugal.

Cartaxo, Dec. 11.

17,000 men, and consists, I should imagine, not only of Gardanne's division, but of some, if not the whole of the troops of the 9th corps.—By the last accounts I have of these troops, the advanced guard had arrived at Maceira, in the valley of the Mondego, on the 22d, and their progress has not been rapid. But if they have continued their march, they ought by this time to be in communication with the Enemy's post in the neighbourhood of Thomar.—General Silviera had retired with his division of troops to Monnento de Beira; but he gence.—By accounts from Estremadura, it appears that Generals Mendizabal and Ballasteros have had some success in their operations against a French division belonging to Mortier's corps, which had been stationed in Lierena. They have obliged this division to retire from Guadaleanal, with some loss.

Admiralty-office, Jan. 15. Admiral Bir C. Cotton has transmitted a letter from Capt. Stewart, giving an account of the capture of a French privateer, the Casar, of four guns and 59 men, by the boats of the Blossom sloop under the directions of Lieut. S. Davies and Messrs. Hambly and Marshall, midshipmen. She was carried in a gallant manner by boarding, in which, and in the chace, the Lieutenant and three men were killed, and Mr. Hambly and nine others wounded; the Enemy had four killed and nine wounded.—A letter from Capt. Ayscough, of the Success, stating the destruction, on the 4th and 6th Octof two of the Enemy's gun-boats, and 84 troop-vessels, on the coast of Naples, by the boats of the Success and other vessels, under Capt. Ayscough's orders. And a letter from the Hen. Capt. Waldegrave, of the Thames frigate, giving an account of the boats of that ship. and the Eelair sloop, having, on the 5th Oct. brought out ten of the Enemy's empty transports collected near Agripoli, in the Gulf of Salerno. — Capt. Tobin, of the Princess Charlotte, has, in his letter to J. W. Croker, Esq. of the 11th inst. given an account of his having, on the 9th, captured at sea the French privateer L'Aimable Flore, of Granville, mounting 14 six-pounders (pierced for 20), with 91 men on board.

PROCEEDINGS IN THE FIFTH SESSION OF THE FOURTH PARLIAMENT OF THE UNITED KINGDOM OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

House of Commons, Jan. 1. The House having resolved itself into a Committee, Mr. Rerogual, after a few preliminary observations, in which he dwelt upon the shock his Majesty's feelings would sustain upon recovery, if he found any material alteration in his Household, and declared, that, if a separate establishment for the Regent was thought absolutely necessary, the expence would not exceed 15,000% submitted the following Resolution: "That it appears to this Committee, that the care of his Majesty's Royal Person, during the continuance of his Majesty's illness, should be committed to the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty; and that her Majesty should have power to remove from and to nominate and appoint such persons as she shall think proper, to the several Offices in his Majesty's Household, and to dispose, order, and manage, all other matters and things relating to the care of his Majesty's Royal Person, during the time aforesaid; and that, for the better enabling her Majesty to discharge this important trust, it is also expedient that a Council should be appointed, to advise and assist her Majesty in the several matters aforesaid, and with power from time to time, as they may see cause, to examine upon oath the Physicians and others attending his Majesty's Person, touching the state of his Majesty's health, and all matters relative thereto."

Lord Gower considered the expence of the two separate establishments as highly unnecessary: during his Majesty's retirement he would have no occasion for his present Household; and it was besides dangerous, as tending to form a party in the country, which might weaken and impede the powers of Government. He should therefore propose, as an amendment, that that part of the motion from the words "Queen's Most Excellent Majesty" should be omitted, and to insert in its place, "together with such direction of his Household as may be suitable for the care of his Majesty's Royal Person, and the maintenance of the Royal Dignity."

An animated discussion ensued; the arguments urged turning on the danger of crippling the Executive Government, by restricting the powers of the Regent, and endeavouring, by the above Resolution, to embody an influence, under the pretext of being necessary for the protection of the reigning King, but with the view of serving the purposes of Ministers against the Government of his Representative.

Mesers. Canning, Stephen, and Milberforce, spake with much eloquence in favour of the Resolution; Lord Dysart, and Mesers. H. Addington and Fuller, also supported it: Sir S. Romilly, Lord Milton, and Mr. Whitbread, opposed it at great length; Lord Castlereagh, Mesers. Johnstone, H. Martin, and Rathurst, were against it.

The House divided on Lord Gower's Amendment, Ayes 226, Noes 213—Majority against Ministers 13.

Jan. 2.

The Report of the Committee on the State of the Nation was presented by Mr. Lushington. The Resolutions being read, the question was put, that the Report be received.

tion upon the first Resolution.

The Earl of Cartule decidedly opposed the Resolutions, and questioned the merits of Mr. Pitt's administration, alleging that it was one tissue of errors.

The Marquis of Lansdowne could not assent even to the first of the five Resolutions, without detaching from the concluding words. After consuming the Restrictions upon the Regent, he asked, Was it constitutional thus to make Parliament judges of the exercise of the prerogative? The power of rewarding merit was to be withheld from the Regent, while punishment, the most ungracious attribute of the State, was to be allowed him. He should move that all that part of the first Resolution, connected with and following the words "subject to such himitations and restrictions, as shall be provided," &c. be emitted.

Viscount Sidmouth, Lords Eldon, Gransille, and Harrowby, and Earl Clancarty, supported the Resolutions, which were apported by Lords Erskine, Holland, Scidish, and the Duke of Norfolk.—A divithe sum of 500,000% to be applied to the service of the Navy, and unable to obtain it out of the Exchequer, during the pre-sent indisposition of his Majesty, transmitted & warrant requiring the Auditor to draw upon the Bank of England for that sum. Lord Grenville declined; and a case having been submitted to the Avtorney and Solicitor General, they declared the warrant of the Treasury, which took all responsibility upon itself, not imperative upon the Auditor, and decided that he had no discretion. Sub-sequently Messri. John and James Larpent, Clerks of the Privy Seal, refused to sign the warrant, as the necessary and accompanying docket had not been returned to their office. The House having resolved itself into a Committee, the Chancellor of the Emchaquer moved, that three or four of the Lords of the Treasury be authorised and required to issue their warrants to the Auditor of the Exchequer for drawing the public money, and that the different officers of the Exchequer be requested to pay obedience to their warrants, during his Majesty's indisposition. After a discussion, in which Lord Temple, Sir J. Sebright, Messrs.
Rose, Ponsonby, Whitbread, Dundas, Tierney, Wynne, Horner, Yorke, and W. Smith, took a part, the motion was agreed to; with an Amendment, that the issues of public money should be confined to the Army and Navy, and to no other branch of the Government service.

House of Lorps, Jan. 8.

The Lord President and the Lord Privy Seal were appointed to attend the Prince of Wales with the Address, requesting his Royal Highness to take upon himself the Regency, in conformity with the terms of the Resolution; and Earls Harcourt and Morton to attend the Queen.

In the Commons, the same day, Messrs. Perceval, Ryder, R. Dundas, and the Master of the Rolls, were appointed to accompany the Lords President and Privy Seal with the Address to the Prince of Wales; and Lords J. Thynne, Clive, Palmerston, and Col. Disbrowe, to attend her Majesty.

Jan. 9.

Mr. Howard moved that the Speaker do issue his warrant for a new writ for the election of a Knight of the Shire for the County of Gloucester, in the room of Lord Dursley, now Earl Berkeley.

The Speaker asked the Hon. Member whether he was prepared to add to his motion, the usual words used on such occasions, "called up by writ of symmons to the House of Peers?"

Mr. Howard replied, that he was not, because, in point of fact, no such writ of suppress had been issued. He imagined, however, that no objection would be made to his motion, as it was an established fact that the representation for the County of Gloucester was despetive. That House, he was persuaded, would not consider itself bound to wait the forms of the other House respecting the issuing of such writ of summons, nor keep the County of Gloucester without representative pending the suspension of such summons. But, if a doubt could be entertained upon the subject, that doubt would be removed by the reference to the authority of a great man, who had filled the chair of that House (he meant Mr. Speaker Onslow), as it was to be collected from a note in Mr. Hatsell's valuable book of Precedents.

The Speaker professed great deference to the authority of Mr. Speaker Onslow, but stated, that upon reference to the Journals it would be found to have been the invariable practice to require the addition of the words "called up to the House of Peers."—He then put the quantion on Mr. Howard's motion, which, after a short discussion between the Chancellor of the Exchequer, against it, and Sir S. Romilly, Messrs. Whithread, Honner, &c. in its favour, was negatived on a division, by six.

Jan. 10,

The Deputation appointed to wait on her Majesty, proceeded to Windsor, with the Address of the Two Houses, expressing a hope that her Majesty would be graciously pleased to undertake the important duties proposed to be invested in her Majesty, as soon as an Act of Parliament should have passed for carrying the said Resolution into affect. Her Majesty graciously replied:

"My Lords and Gentlemen - That sense of duty and gratitude to the King, and of obligation to this Country, which induced me in the year 1789 readily to promise my most earnest attention to the anxious and momentous trust at that time intended to be reposed in me by Parliament, is strengthened, if possible, by the uninterrupted enjoyment of those blessings which I have continued to experience under the protection of His Majesty since that period: and I should be wanting to all my duties if I hesitated to accept the sacred trust which is now offered to me, The assistance in point of coursel and advice, which the window of Parliament proposes to provide for me. will make me undertake the charge with greater hopes that I may be able satisfactorily to fulfil the important duties which it must impose upon me.—Of the mature and importance of that charge, I cannot but be duly sensible, involving, as it does, every thing which is valuable to myspli, as well as the highest interests of a people endeared to me by so many ties and considerations, but by nothing so strongly as by their steady, loyal, and affectionate attachment to the best of Kings."

Jan. 11.

At two o'clock the Deputation from the Two Houses went up to Carleton House, to present to his Royal Highness the Resolutions to which the two Houses, after long discussion, had agreed to. The Lords and Gentlemen, all in full dress, were ushered through the superb suite of rooms to the Drawing-room, where his Royal Highness stood. His Chancellor, Wm. Adam, esq. and Earl Moira on his right hand; the Duke of Cumberland and Mr. Sheridan on his left; behind him four Officers of his household.

Mr.

Mr. Sheridan entered his Protest against the proceeding.

The Resolution was then agreed to, the Report brought up, and read a second time.

House of Lords, Jan. 15.

About five, the Lord Chancellor, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord President, the Lord Privy Seal, the Duke of Montrose, and the Earl of Liverpool, having taken their seats as Commissioners to open Parliament, and the Speaker of the House of Commons with a number of Members being in attendance at the Bar, the Lord Chancellor said, — " My Lords and Gentlemen, Forasmuch as for certain causes his Majesty cannot conveniently be present here in his Royal Person, a Commission has been issued under the Great Seal, authorizing the Lords in the said Commission named, to declare the causes of your meeting, and to do in all respects in his Majesty's name, which Commission you will now hear read."—The Commission was then read, after which the Lord Chancellor resumed—" My Lords and Gentlemen, in virtue of the Commission which has been now read, autherizing the Lords therein named to ' declare the causes of your meeting, and to do in all respects in his Majesty's name, we have only to call your attention to the afflicting circumstance of his Majesty's indisposition, and to the necessity of making due and suitable provision for the care of his Majesty's sacred Person, for the maintenance of the Royal Dignity, and for the exercise of the Royal Authority, in such manner and to such extent as the exigency of the case may seem to require."

In the Commons, the same day, Mr. Sheridan, alluding to the execution of Cardoza, the Portugueze, for murder, on Monday, observed that it had excited considerable sensation respecting the alarming suspension of the prerogative of mercy. He had communicated with the Right Hon. Secretary of State for the Home Department, and had to thank him for his attention. He did not intend to give any formal notice upon the subject now, but should certainly submit the question to the House in some shape or other.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer explained that the Act of Parliament required, that, in cases of conviction of murder, the execution of the convict should follow within a limited time, which had been strictly followed. The Judges might have respited the prisoner had they chosen; but their opinions had been taken, and no ground was left for supposing, that, if the fountain of mercy had been open to access, any thing would have been submitted in application for its exercise.

Mr. Sheridan replied, that the Royal prerogative of mercy had been twice extended to a convict (P. Ogilvie) in Scotland; for which, however, he did not blame the Rt. Hon. Gentlemen: the same necessity that justified issues of money for the Army and Navy, might justify that likewise. He put the merits of the case altogether out of question; but regretted that the first preregative of the highest magistrate of the realm should be usurped by a subject.

Mr. Ryder declared himself ready, when called upon, to state the motives of his conduct. He denied, indignantly, that he had usurped the preregative of mercy; he had merely suspended the operation of the law, until it could be known whether that mercy would or would not ultimately be granted. in the case of the unfortunate person lately executed, the Recorder had reported to him, that the two Judges who had assisted him in the trial had entertained no doubt of the guilt of the convict, and had seen no ground that could admit of an application for mercy; it was, in fact, a case of as foul murder as had ever been committed in England.

Jan. 16.

On the motion of Mr. Perceval, the last day for receiving Private Petitions was fixed for Feb. 1; that for Private Bills March 4; and that for Reports, April 29.

The Regency Bill was read a second time.

Jan. 17.

A Secret Committee of Nine was appointed to inquire what payments were ordinarily directed by his Majesty to be made out of his Privy Purse.

The House went into a Committee on the Regency Bill; when 13 of the clauses were, after much discussion, disposed of.

Jan. 18.

The House resolved itself into a Committee, when clauses in the Regency Bill were discussed, and the blanks filled up.

ABSTRACT OF FOREIGN OCCURRENCES.

FRANCE.

Conservative Senate. Sitting of Dec. 10. The sitting commenced at three in the afternoon; the Prince Arch-Chancellor of the Empire presided. Their Excellencies the Duke of Cadore, Minister for Foreign Affairs, and Counts St. Jean d'Angely, and Caffarelli, Mi-deaf to the voice of her interests, as well as to the cries of Europe. I was in hopes of being able to establish a cartel for the exchange of prisoners of war between France and England, and to avail myself, in consequence of the residence of two Commusioners at Paris and London, to bring about an approximation between the two countries. I have been disappointed in my expectations. I could find nothing in the mode in which the English Government negotiated but craft and decent .- The junction of the Valais is an effect long intended of the immense works which I have had performed in the Alps within the last ten years. At the time of my Act of Mediation, I separated the Valuis from the Helvetic League, foreseeing then a measure of such advantage to France and Italy.—So long as the war continues with England, the French people must not lay down their arms,--My finances are in the most flourishing state. I can meet all the expences which this immense empire requires, without calling upon my people for fresh sacri-(Signed) NAPOLEON. Paince of the Thuilleries, Dec. 10, 1810. By order of the Emperor, H. B. DUKE OF BASSANO,".

pire that has existed for twenty centuries,-At the peace of 1783, the power of France was strong in the Family Compact, which gloselybound Spain and Naples with her political system.—At that of Amiens, the respective strength of the three great Powers was increased by the addition of twelve millions of Polish inbabitants. The Houses of France and Spain were essentially hostile to each other, and the people of the two countries were removed: farther than ever from each other by the difference of their manners. One of the great Continental Powers had her strength less dimunished by the junction of Belgium with France, than it was increased by the acquisition of Venice; the secularizations also of the Germanic Body added more to the power of our ri-vals. Thus, at the conclusion of the Treaty of Amiens, the relative force of France was less than at the peace of 1783, and much inferior to that to which the victories obtained during the wars of the two first coalitions gave her a right to expect. This treaty, however, was scarcely concluded, when the jealousy of England displayed itself strongly. She took the alarm at the continually increasing prosperity and riches of the interior of France; and she hoped heped that a third coalition would wrest Belgium, the provinces of the Rhine, and Italy, from your crown. The peace of Amiens was broken; a third coalition was formed; three months after it was dissolved by the treaty of Presburgh. England saw all her hopes blasted: Venice, Dalmatia, Istria, the whole of the Adriatic coast, and that of the kingdom of Naples, fell into the power of France. The Germanic Body, established upon principles contrary to those upon which the French empire was founded, dropped to pieces; and the system of the Confederation of the Rhine transformed into close and necessary allies the same nations who in the first coalitions marched against France, and united them indissolubly to herself by their common interests. The peace of Amiens then became in England the object of the regret of every Statesman. The new acquisitions by France, which there were no hopes of wresting from her at any future time, rendered the fault that was committed more evident, and shewed the full extent of it. An enlightened man, who during the short interval of the peace of Amiens visited Paris, and had learned to know France and your Majesty, was put at the head of affairs in England. This man of genius comprehended the situations of the two Countries. He perceived that it was not in the power of any State to compel France to retrograde; and that the true policy consisted in arresting her progress. He perceived, that, by the success obtained over the coalition, the question changed; and that it must no longer be thought of contesting with France the possessions that she acquired by victory; but that it was necessary, by a speedy peace, to prevent those new acquisitions which the continuation of the war would render inevitable. This Minister did not sonceal any of the advantages which France derived from the erroneous policy of England; but he had in view these which she might still acquire. thought that England would gain much, if none of the Continental Powers lost more. He directed his policy to disarm France, and to have the Confederation of the North of Germany recognised in opposition to the Confederation of the Rhine. He perceived that Prussia could only be preserved by peace; and that on the fate of that Power depended the system of Saxony, of Hessia, of Hanover, the fate of the mouths of the Ems, of the Jade, of the Weser, of the Elbe, of the Oder, and of the Vistula, ports necessary for the commerce of England. Like a great man, Fox did not deliver himself up to useless sorrow for the rupture of the treaty of Amiens, and longs benceforth irreparable; he wished to prevent greater, and he sent Lord Lauderdale to Paris. The negotiations began, and every thing led to hope that they would have ended happily; when Fox died. From that time they languished. The Ministers were neither sufficiently enlightened nor temperate to perceive the necessity of peace. Prussia, excited by that spirit which England infused into all Europe, put her troops to march. The Imperial Guard received orders to set out; Lord Lauderdale appeared terrified at the consequences of the new events that were preparing. It was proposed to sign the treaty; that Prussia should be included in it, and that the Confederation of the North of Germany should be recognized. Your Majesty, with that spirit of moderation of which you have given such frequent examples to Europe, consented. The departure of the Imperial Guard was delayed for some days; but Lord Lauderdale hesitated; he thought it necessary to send a Messenger to his Court, and that Messchger brought him an order to return. In a few days after Prussia no longer existed as a preponderating power. Posterity will consider that period as one of the most decisive in the histories of Englatte and France. The Treaty of Tilsit put an end to the fourth coalition.-Two great Sovereigns, lately enemies, united in offering peace to England; but that Power, who, notwithstanding all the forewarnings she had received, could not bring herself to subscribe to conditions which would leave France in a more advantageous situation than she was after the Treaty of Amiens, would not enter into a negotiation, the unavoidable consequence of which would have been to place France in a situation still more to her advantage.—We refused, it was said in England, a treaty which maintained the North of Germany, Prussia, Saxony, Hessia, and Hanover, independent of France, and which secured all the outlets of our trade; how, then, can we agree at this time to conclude with the Emperor of the French, when be has extended the Confederation of the Rhine to the North of Germany, and to found on the banks of the Elbe a French throne; a peace, which, by the course of things, whatever the stipulations might be, would leave under his influence Hanover, and all the ports of the North, those principal arteries of our commerce?

[The Exposé dwells at some length upon the Coalitions — declares that a proposition was made to our Government to recal the Orders in Council, upon condition that the independence of Holland should be respected by the French, which was rejected—recommends the annexa-what excites the most dreadful alarms, are the ravages of the wolves. These ferocious animals, unable to subsist any longer in their native mountains, sally forth in flocks of many hundreds, and entering the villages, make the peasant and his cattle their prey. The villages on the open plains are entirely deserted; a number of the poor people having fallen sacrifices in defending their tame animals, and the survivors not choosing to expose themselves to similar danger. Our Prefect, with the humane view of reimbursing the sufferers, and preventing the Department being depopulated, has ordered an inventory to be made of the losses: the estimate almost exceeds belief: it is ascertained, that within the last month, 8000 sheep, 400 goats, and 300 horses, have been killed by these ferocious animals. In the departments of the Loziere, and the Higher Loire, the ravages are still greater."

A Gentleman passenger, who was lately washed on shore near Dunkirk out of the Elizabeth Indiaman, lashed to a piece of the wreck, was conveyed to a little hevel by a Frenchman who found bim along shore, to whom he gave 50 guineas, having saved 500: the Frenchman promised to come at night and take him to a place of safety; at night he went back accompanied by two others, each having a shovel; when, dreadful to relate, they heat his brains out with their shovels, plundered the body, then dug a hole and buried it in the sand. Three or four days after which, the principal, being troubled in his conscience. went and confessed what he had done to a Magistrate; when his two accomplices were taken up, and the dead body dug up greatly mangled. The three men have been committed to Dunkirk gaol, to take their trial for murder.

A ball of fire appeared in the commune of Chargouville, France, on the 23d Nov. which, bursting with a tremendous explosion, let fall three large stones, accompanied with smoke, and darted with such force, that they entered the earth to the depth of near 80 centimeters. One of the stones is covered with a crust of greyish black, while the inside is more clear. It is very compact, and hard enough to cut glass. It appears to contain globules of iron pretty large and brilliant.

The substitute for sugar in Brittany (France) is a syrup extracted from the Bedange apple, beat up with the whites of eggs, and boiled till three parts are wasted.

HOLLAND.

A Dutch Paper of last month announces the sale of 77 houses at Amsterdam; the proprietors of which had shut them up and absconded, being unable to pay the taxes.

SPAIN AND PORTUGAL.

Letters from Cadiz, of the 20th of December, state, that the Cortes had banished the late Regency; and Castanos, the head of it, had been exiled to Gallicia.

On the 16th ult. the Cortes ordered their decree of the 2d, for levying an armed force of 10,000 men, to reinforce the army in the Isle of Leon, to be carried into immediate execution. On the 19th a motion was made for "an eternal monument of gratitude to his Britannic Majesty, and the unconquerable British Nation, for the generous and magnanimous assistance afforded to the Spanish Nation;" which was carried unanimously, amidst general acclamations.

The intelligence from Madrid represcuts the Usurper as busily employed in sending plunder to Paris—a circumstance from which it is not unreasonable to infer, that he thinks he holds his capital by a very precarious tenure.—The accounts from Madrid and Seville represent the situation of the French in those places as truly deplorable. They cannot travel from one part of Spain to another without going in large parties, which have obtained the name of Caravans. In this manner, great numbers of male and female natives of France are daily returning to that country; and the Spanish patriots, like the Arabs of the Deserts, incessantly hover around these escorts, and carry off prisoners and booty to a great amount; in a recent instance it was deemed necessary to send an escort of 1500 soldiers, to protect a convoy consisting of pictures, wool, &c. on its way from Madrid to France.

Extract of a letter from Lisbon, dated Dec. 30.—"Great importance is attached to the seizure of a spy here by the Portuguese peasants, who are ever on the watch. This fellow had been sent on some important errand by Massena, but he was secured before his object was accomplished. As his traitorous intentions were manifest, he would have been shot after a summary trial, but for the important discoveries he made to Lord Wellington. Several of the officers who had obtained leave to embark for England, and were at Lisbon for that purpose, have been suddenly ordered back to the army; which at first induced an opinion, that the British Commander in Chief expected a movement on the part of the Enemy; but it is now said to be in consequence of the discoveries he made by the spy, but of what nature we do not learn."

ITALY.

to be a proficient in musick. He is a native of Lower Austria, and the son of a reduced Clergyman; for the last six months he has been blind. The Emperor Francis has settled a pension on him.

The base of the Carpathian mointains, near Makoustza, fell on the 6th of November, with a report so loud that it was heard at the distance of twelve miles. Six villages have been destroyed by this precipitation, and 34 lives lost.

M. Parea, inspector of woods at Ravenna, has discovered the secret of extracting from the plant-seed of the thorn (ramus pulcurus of Linngus) a clear sweet oil, without smell, and fit for domestic purposes.

PRUSSIA.

A letter from Berlin, dated Dec. 4, tays, "The embarrassments under which our Government labours, arising from the stagnation of trade, and the difficulty of finding money to pay the contribution, occasioned his Majesty lately to dispose the amount of hat his faithful ourthened with f consideration to the citizens; tion is on foot ce of f; c samy just resentment against your Court for the last three months. It has not ceased to give provocation to France since 1808, at one time preventing England from making peace for three years together; and at another, seeking the alliance and protection of France in order to descri it afterwards. I knew (added Buonaparte) how to provide against the hatred of Gustavus Adolphus -he was my declared enemy; while the present Government of Sweden has only sought my friendship for the purpose of recovering l'inland, an event that will never take place. It has besides continued to trade with Great Britain, in contravention of the treaty of peace with France, by permitting calonial produce to be introduced into Sweden, for the purpose of being afterwards re-exported to the Continent!

"In consequence of all this," continued Buonaparte, "my Minister at Stockholm has orders to domand, that war be declared against England—that English manufactures be burnt, and that colonial produce he subjected to a duty of 50 per cent., and, in case of refusal, he must quit Stockholm immediately. It is I who ordered it—such is my pleasure."—Whenever the Baron De Lagerbjelke attempted to reply, Buona-

parte

parte ordered him to be silent, crying

" Hold your tongue."

"The Council of State at Stockholm, and, which will surprise you still more, Bernadotte himself, were of opinion, that war should not be declared against England. The declaration of the Danish Minister, that he would depart from Sweden if Buonaparte's demand, through his own Minister, were not complied with, and the fear that the King would experience the fate of the unfortunate Gustavus Adolphus, should he have a war with France, Russia, and Denmark, produced submission to the pleasure of Buonaparte. The soundest and most numerous part of the nation highly disapprove of such a system.

"They cannot proceed to burn the English manufactures, and to impose a duty of 30 per cent. on colonial produce, without first convoking the States of the realm. The Baron de Lagerbjelke having mentioned that objection to Buonaparte, received for answer, "Let me hear no more of these silly (the expres-. sion is much more coarse in the French) laws of Sweden."

"It is believed here, that Buonaparte, during the spring, will put the Swedish fleet in requisition, for the purpose of making it act with that which he is equipping in the Texel; but it is the gemeral opinion, at the same time, that this Country will not act hostilely against England, if the latter does not attack her."

Letters from Anhalt assert, that not only is it designed to restore Finland to Sweden, but also to annex to the latter country the greater part of Norway. Denmark, it is said, however averse to compliance, will be unable to resist the mandates of France: her prompt obedience may procure her an indemnity, but resistance would seal her ruin. Other political arrangements were in contemplation; but they would not be made public for some time.

A new Decree has been issued by the Danish Government, by which all trade with England is prohibited, under more severe penalties than any yet inflicted by the cruel Napoleon. It is declared a felony, punishable by death, in the captain of a ship maintaining intercourse with England.

Norway is said to be in a state of revolution, in consequence of the attempt made there to enforce a conscription of seamen for the French service. The report rests on the authority of the Captain of the galliot North Star, of Pappenburgh, arrived at Aberdeen, from Christiansand; who adds, that the ports on the Norway coast were all in the possession of the insurgents, comprehending the whole military and naval force of the country.

TURKEY.

Extract of a Letter from Constantinople, Nov. 18.

"The Pacha of Bagdad had for several years past refused to pay the greater part of the contributions which he was bound to send to the Imperial Treasury. Government was in consequence obliged to resort to measures, secretly adopted, in order to reduce to obedience this rich and powerful Governor, whose distance from the centre of the Empire rendered him the more dangerous. Halet Effendi. formerly Ambassador to the French Court, was accordingly on this occasion charged with an important mission. He was sent to Mussul, where, in secret with the Pacha of that city, he concerted measures for surprizing the Pacha of Bagdad. Halet, very early one morning, appeared at the head of 6000 men, before the gates of Bagdad, which he found undefended, and immediately made his troops enter.

"The Pacha, who was generally detested by the inhabitants, observing that the alarm had spread through the whole city, took flight with a small number of his friends; but, a price having been put upon his head by the Pacha of Mussul, he was betrayed by his own servants, and massacred in a village where he had hidden himself. The Pacha at Mussul sent the head of this rebel to Constantinople, where it was exposed for three days on the gates of the Seraglio. It is asserted, that in his coffers upwards of thirty millions were found, which are expected to arrive soon at the Imperial Treasury. The Pacha of Damascus, suspected of intriguing with the Vechabites, would have shared a similar fate; but, having received timely notice, made his escape in disguise."

REBELLION AND MASSACRE OF THE JANIS-SARIES AT CONSTANTINOPLE.

BULLETINS.

" Constantinople, Dec. 2.

"The turbulence and sedition of those who should be our defenders, has once more stained the pride of cities with blood and slaughter. The events of the war with the Infidels are known to every true believer. Notwithstanding the great efforts made by his Sublime Highness (whom may God ever bless!) to inspire his army with an invincible spirit—to impart his foresight and skill to its valiant leaders; that success which may be merited, but which it is not in the power of feeble mortals to command, has not attended our arms. The Russians,

for negotiating a peace. We dispatched Officers to make known our conditions. we did not think that this, our laudable anxiety to procure so great a blessing, would be misinterpreted.

"But wicked and ungrateful men, forgetting the submission they owed to us as the lineal descendant of the Prophet, artfully prepared a tale for the ear of the credulous, that we had renounced the glories of our illustrious line, and destined the subjection of the crescent. Immediately these Jamssaries, those sworn foes to discipline and order, were seen hastening from every quarter with arms in their hands. They instructed their partizans to declare, that reform, and the removal of obnoxious men, were their objects; and when by these artipay of the army will be transmitted regularly in future. The Grand Vizier has been reinforced. The Pacha of Serai continues to defend Varna.

(Signed) IBRAHIM, Reis Effendi."
(From the Supplement to the Abeille du Nord, of Jan. 3.)
PROCLAMATION.

Constantinople, Dec. 4. By the blessing of the Prophet, the formidable rebellion which threatened even the existence of our Empire, and the maintenance of its holy religion, has been terminated. The streets of our capital were crowded with the carcases of the dead, who expiated their crimes by the scymeter; and the scaffold is yet recking with the blood of the victims sacrificed to the juctice of our cause. Ten thousand Janissaries suffered by the swords of our brave and loyal subjects, three thousand bled beneath the hands of the public executioner, and an equal number by the just laws of our sacred religion have been condemned to imprisonment, until they are released from the torment of this world to succeed to the tertures of the next. The blessed Prophet, who constantly watches over our welfare, knows with what appuish we beheld this scene of terror and desolation. knows that every Mussulman that fell gave a pang to our paternal heart; but Justice, who never calls in vain when she does demand satisfaction, must be obeyed; and to her dictates we bowed, while the fatal sentence was pronounced. It was thus that the Divine Power exterminated those who ventured to disturb our tranquility, and from whom we have now nothing to fear. On the love of our faithful people we shall always seeurely rely, to detect and expose those traitors, who, unawed by this dreadful example, may still endeavour, by their insidious art, to weaken that authority which the blessed Prophet has confided in our hands.

Peace being then restored in our capital, his Sublime Highness cannot avoid repeating his ardent wishes for the restoration of tranquillity to his beloved subjects in the distant provinces of his Empire. Terms were offered in our name to the Commander of the Russian armies, which it was expected would meet with immediate acceptance. But the hope was vain. Late successes made our Enemy haughty and untractable; and although the whole of the province of Moldavia was offered to be ceded to Russia, and to be annexed to her Empire, yet the proud and vain-glorious General rejected the offer, and insisted not only that Moldavia, but that the entire fertile province of Wallachia should be comprehended in the grant. Yet this was not all—the neutrality of Servia was not to be allowed; and she was to be compelled as a separate power to treat with Russia, and full indemnity was to be granted under her former seditious treason and impiety. Thus circumstanced, our faithful people will not be surprized, that in our name the Commander in Chief, the GRAND VIZIER, hesitated. He dispatched Couriers to our capital; and in return we commanded him to break off the negotiation, and to act on the offensive. Then at length it was that our Enemies repented of their presumption, and under this feeling they have again offered to treat. If, on any terms that are consistent with the glory of our Empire, the blessings of peace can be obtained, our dear people, whose interest alone is our guide, may remain in the perfect assurance that those blessings shall be secured to them.

(Signed) "IBRAHIM, Reis Effendi."

A forest in India, 65 miles in length, and 28 in breadth, was set on fire in June last, through the negligence of some wood-cutters. At the date of the account, the conflagration had continued five weeks, and 50 villages in the vicinity of the forest had been destroyed. Many of the unfortunate and idolatrous natives, believing the calamity to be a direct visitation of some vengeful deity, and not choosing to survive the loss of their property, precipitated themselves into the flames.

AMERICA AND THE WEST INDIES.

Intelligence has been received, via America, of an attempt having been made by French emissaries to shake the allegiance of the people of the Philippine Isles to Ferdinand the Seventh; which was, however, frustrated by the The emissaries came originally from the Isle of France, and, being furnished with the necessary instructions, obtained, in the disguise of Japanese merchants, permission to settle some time at Manilla. About 300 of the native inhabitants suffered themselves to be seduced: some of the soldiery were also bought over; but the number and competence of the conspirators were still unequal to the execution of their plan. They had been flattered with an assurance, that a French naval force would, in the month of July, visit the Chinese Seas, and give them both assistance and protection. Disappointed in this expectation, they made a premature effort to seize the arsenal, and disarm the garrison, but were easily counteracted by Don Ferdinand de Folgueras, the Governor. They then surrendered at discretion, and 70 of them had since expiated their treason with their lives.

The Presidency of Chili, according to advices from the river Plate of the 13th Oct. had declared itself independent, and renounced its allegiance to Fer inand VII. At the Caraccas, all the Europeans had been put into confinement.

Letters from various places on the island of Cuba give a melancholy detail of the combined effects of a hurricane and earthquake, experienced there at the close of October. The hurricane commenced at the Havannah on the 24th, by a gale from the Southward, which continued till the night of the 25th, when it fell for a few hours. On the following day two slight shocks of an earthquake were felt: the wind changed to the Northward, and during the ensuing 48 hours the contention of the elements was truly dreadful. The waves rose to a tremendous height, washing over the flag-staff of the castle, though 40 feet from the level of the sea, and sweeping the pier, a church, and 60 buildings away. Thirty-two vessels were driven on shore, and wrecked; out of. which number, four were carried three miles up the country, and two nearly and Civilians, Ship-Owners and Merchants, individually and collectively: and particularly the Honouvable East India, Russia, and Levant Companies, to the Consideration also of the African and other Societies, engaged in the Improvement of Geography, the Exploration of unknown Regions of the Earth, and all Manner of useful and liberal Investigation.

The reciprocal advantages of a commerce between Great Britain and the Coast of Barbary having become evident to Muley Solyman, the present Emperor of Morocco, who has the reputation of being more learned in the Mahomedan commentaries on the Koran, as well as of being of a more mild and generous disposition than any of his predecessors, wrote a letter with his own hand, not many years ago, to his present Majesty, our good King, on this subject. This letter remained in the Secretary of State's office here for some months, as no one could readily be found capable of translating it. This delay in returning an answer, naturally considered as a mark of disrespect, gave great offence to the Emperor.

An Institution of the kind now pro-

^{*} In this letter, Muley Solyman gives his Majesty the sacred title of Sultan, and shews him greater respect than had ever before been paid by any Mussalman to a Christian. This circumstance coming to the knowledge of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Right Honourable Spancer Perceval, that gentleman expressed a wish to a friend of Mr. Grey Jackson's to have a translation, and the letter was transmitted to Mr. Jackson for that purpose. "Dr. Buffe," says Mr. Jackson, who delivered it, "assured me, it had been sent to one, if not both Universities, and to the Post-office; but that, either from a difference in the punctuation of the characters; or in the language itself, no one could be found capable of rendering it into English. This statement, however unaccountable it may appear to many, was afterwards further confirmed by passports, and other papers in African Arabic, being sent to me for translations, the want of which had detained vessels in our ports, and caused merchants in London to suffer from a loss of markets,"—An Account of the Empire of Morocco, &c. By J. G. Jackson, Esq. p. 219.

posed was established at Vicnna by the Emperor Joseph II.; who, though justly accused of restless rash and innovation, is allowed by all candid men to have had a constant eye to the amelioration of the many and vast countries under his sovereign power, and to have made many improvements. In this academy of commerce, the pupils are instructed in a variety of foreign languages, and in the art of design and drawing. It is well known, that the Emperor was so intent on the extension of commerce, that he made an effort for the establishment of an Oriental Company at Embden. subserviency to his great commercial views, he founded the academy just mentioned. If there be a country on earth that has an interest in any academy for instruction in the languages of Maritime States, in different quarters of the world, it is Great Britain; and if there be one spot better adapted than another to its establishment, it is Malta. It were certainly to be wished, that instead of foreign interpreters and agents, often very imperfectly qualified for the business they undertake, and not always to be depended on for their fidelity and honesty, we should have faithful interpreters and agents of our own nation, whether for the purpose of mercantile correspondence, or the transaction of business in person, at factories or other stations; persons qualified to understand clearly, and both to speak and write with fluency Arabic, Turkish, Moorish, modern Greek, Latin, Italian and other languages, or dialects of the same original language. The policy of all civilized nations has generally provided for a due supply of public functionaries, in every department of importance, by furnishing the means of a suitable education; and, of late, the same measure has been resorted to by the East India Company, in establishing a college for the instruction of youth in the Persian and Arabic tongues, and in the history of the past and present state of Hindostan, and the Peninsula of India, and the countries with which our Possessions in the East have or may have most intercourse. Why should less attention be paid to the Mediterranean coast of Africa, so inviting to commerce, and the formation of new political connections? Should the appointment of Consuls, or other interpreters and agents, depend on chance? Or the interest that any person may have to procure a sitnation for himself under government, however unqualified? A man born and bred in the Western Isles, or the Highlands, and Northern parts of Scotland, cannot well be supposed to be master of either the English or African languages. Yet these have been for some time the great nurseries of our agents in Barbary. And it is much to be regretted, that though the Barbary powers have always signified an earnest desire to have well-bred linguists from Britain, they have not been treated with a proper degree of consideration in this respect.

If it were at all necessary to illustrate the connexion between a command of languages and a wide range of commerce, it might be mentioned, that it is the widely diffused language of the Koran, that has opened so vast a field of commerce to the Mahomedans.

The facilitation which such a ready command of agency and correspondence is calculated to afford to various and extensive commerce, would contribute, in the same proportion, to the increase of the public Revenue; so that, were an academy for instruction in the languages of all great commercial nations to be established wholly at the public expence, there cannot be a doubt that it would be ultimately refunded to the publick, with large increase. But at Malta, such an academy may be founded, without imposing any burthen on the publick. All the property in the island of Malta which belonged to the antient order of the Knights of St. John, has, in right, devolved to the Crown of Great Britain. This property may be converted into a fund for the support of proper masters and a few scholars. The grand Library and the public buildings are at the disposal of his Majesty's civil Commissioner, who is at liberty, with the consent of his Majesty's Ministers, to appropriate some part or quarter thereof to public halls, and the residence of the masters and scholars on the foundation. We say on the foundation, because it may be reasonably presumed that some, nay not a few, of the natives of Malta-will be disposed to send their sons to the proposed college; where they may be instructed in the English language as well as the others above mentioned; and thereby be well qualified to act in the capacities of consuls, commercial interpreters, and agents, and as travellers under the patronage of various literary and liberal individuals, or societies for the exploration of unknown regions, and the advancement of both natural and civil history. From Great Britain and Ireland too, ingenious and spirited young men might resort to the seminary at Malta, as the best preparative for such employment as has been stated; than which none can be imagined more creditable or more pleasant. In a word, besides the scholars on the foundation, others

A liberal and enlarged sphere of sympathy would contribute more to the extension of commerce, than the most successful arms.

That this seminary may be the more alluring to the different nations on the Mediterranean shores, it might perhaps be thought advisable in case of success in the first attempts, to add some professorships in the liberal arts and sciences. The zir of Malta is screne, pure, and sa-lubrious. From its local situation in the centre nearly of the antient civilised world (for a large portion of the North of Africa acknowledged the dominion and influence of the Romans), it is calculated to enliven a thousand recollections of the progress of civilization from the cradic of arts and sciences. No where could an university be more happily established for a citizen of the world.

If the colonisation of some islands in the Ionian Sea by the English, should go hand in hand with the establishment, and gradual improvement of a college at Malta, the advantages which might result from such joint establishments are incalculable. On this subject, the colobination of certain Greenan mlands, the civilization never prevailed, and into those of Asia, formerly civilized and polished, but now fallen into obscurity and barbarism; to explore regions on the Terra Firma, almost as much unknown to us as the islands were formerly in the Pacific ocean, and with whom we are more nearly connected by various relations, is . a design not less humane, wise, or glorious. By travels, as well as voyages, new objects are discovered—new phenomena, natural and moral; remains of antiquity are found, and new productions of nature discovered. Traces are found of nations now extinct; and tribes and. nations are found to exist in new and unheard-of circumstances or situations. Thus, the whole map of human nature, to use an expression of the late illustrious Mr. Edward Burke, ja unfolded; the superfluities, as well as the wants of different countries are found out .. new political relations are formed; and all the sons of men, brought back as it were again into one family, have it? in their power to co-operate for general improvement in all that gives grace, dignity, and comfort to life. Now, the establishment of a school for the languages ! of the nations around the Mediterranean and the Black Sea, would evidently serve as a means for the attainment of all these objects. Commercial, political, literary, and scientific correspondence, and journeys to remote countries, would be facilitated; travelling, whether for gain or more liberal ends, would be made easy; the sphere of commerce would be enlarged, and a thirst after knowledge more and more excited by gratification.

GERT. MAG. January, 1811.

It is not to be denied, that we are by no means so careful to cultivate an acquaintance with foreign nations, and thereby to extend our power by moral influence, as our neighbours the French. They have at this moment hundreds of emissaries in Persia, Arabia, and Africa, employed in cultivating an acquaintance, not only with the highest, but with all classes of the natives, for purposes commercial, political, and liberal. Their connexions and influence in Turkey are well known: the great number of travels in the Turkish dominions, published byFrenchmen,shews how attentiveFrance has ever been to this rich and interesting part of the world. The decline of the English factories * in Turkey is fully accounted for by trade with India, and the Americans having been for 20 years the carriers of Europe. This circumstance is somewhat unfortunate: inasmuch as it may appear in the sight of the Turks, with whom every thing is uniform, fixed, and stable, a mark of declining power. By the establishment recommended at Malta, seconded by settlements in the Grecian islands, our trade in the Levant would be naturally revived, and carried to great extent and great advantage.

It is proposed, that, even at the outset, the pupils shall be instructed not ouly in languages, but arithmetick and the art of drawing. The Professors of English and other tongues most commonly known, or most easily acquired, might consist of travelling Fellows from the Universities; one of whom might be in holy orders, and officiate as the priest of the college. Skilful assistants are to be had at Malta, and in the University of Catania in Sicily. But though it be the interests of commerce, in the formation of such political connexions as these may require, that is the only object proposed by the establishment of an Anglo-Maltese College, in the first place, if this should flourish to the extent reasonably to be expected, it might be improved into an University for all manner of literature and science; than which no Institution could redound more to the Interests of Britain, and the Glory of his present Majesty's reign.

Inisii News.

Jan. 13. Three female servants of P. Mahony, esq. near Killarney, having unthinkingly placed some coals of fire in a room which had no chimney, two of them were found lifeless next morning, and the third was with difficulty recovered.

Jan. 14. A desperate affray occurred in the streets of Howth between the labourers employed at the new harbour. The parties engaged amounted to 300 men; and, after a severe conflict, were parted by the exertions of Lord Howth and Mr. Lyster, aided by a detachment of the military. Many of the rioters are so severely cut and maimed, as not to be expected to survive; and six of the ringleaders are lodged in gaol.

Jan. 15. A horrid murder was committed this night near Causheen, county of Clare, on James O'Brien: the deceased, in company with his son, returning towards home, was fired at by some unknown assassin, who lay in concealment for him, near his own dwelling, when the unfortunate man received the contents of a loaded musket, and instantly fell; but the murderers not being satisfied that he was dispatched, and having heard him utter some sentences, they immediately approached him (the son having departed for assistance), and with savage brutality, before they retired, nearly severed the head from the body.

The Commissioners appointed by Parliament to enquire into the nature and extent of the several bogs in Ireland, with the practicability of draining and cultivating them, have made their First Report; in which they state, that the bogs comprize more than one-fourth of the entire superficial extent of Ireland, or about one million of English acres; that they form, as far as they have been examined, a mass of the peculiar substance called peat, of the average thickness of 25 feet, no where less than 12, nor found to exceed 42. This substance varies materially in its appearances and properties, in proportion to the depth at which it lies. On the upper surface it is covered with moss of various species, and. to the depth of ten feet composed of a mass of the fibres of similar vegetables in different stages of decomposition; generally, however, too open in their texture to be applied to the purposes of ther cabin; but, as soon as about 20 men had come on-board, the captain ordered the ship to be cast off from the privateers, and immediately, at the head of his men, rashed forward, and cleared the deck, the greatest part of the boarders being killed, and the remainder jumping overboard. This attempt was repeated four different times, and frustrated in like manner; and the privateers, at length finding that their threat to give no quarter only animated the crew to greater exertion, and having a mainmast and bowsprit carried away, desisted and sheered off. Mr. Caward. chief mate, was wounded in the shoulder, and one seaman has since died of his wounds. The Enemy is supposed to have lost 60 men : Capt. B. killed three himself. The Cumberland's crew consisted of 26 men; those of the privateers of 270. The Lords of the Admiralty have, as a mark of their satisfaction at the gallantry exhibited on the occasion, granted each of the crew of the Cumberland a protection from the impress for 3 years,

^{*} Some years ago, the English Levant Factory Company in Smyrna counted 300 merchants of great consideration, with their apprentices and servants. This company, computed at 14 or 1500 opulent persons in one city, made it cheerful and busy.

- 14. The Pavilion near Scarborough, the seat of R. Williamson, esq. occurred on-board the Jason, a vessel lying in a part of Boston Deeps, called Clay-pole, about four miles from the town. Business calling the Master away, before he quitted the ship he took the precaution to lock up the cabin, in which some swivel cartridges and a quantity of gunpowder were stored. During his absence, the mate of the vessel, to relieve the tediousness of waiting for a fair wind, imprudently forced open the cabin-door, took out some powder, and sallied forth to shoot sea-fowl, leaving on-heard only a lad, about 14 years old. The boy, thus situated, amused himself by fetching a handful of powder, and throwing it by small quantities into the fire; but having, it is conjectured, scattered some between the cabin and the fire-place, the flame ran along the train, and instantaneously communicating with the main body of the powder, produced a tremendous explosion, which blew away the whole of the stern of the vessel, and caused her to sink, with a full cargo of oats on-board.

Jan. 21. The Elizabeth brig, a Ply, mouth trader, loaded with bale goods, caught' caught fire while lying in Remsgate harbour, and though every exertion was used, the greatest part of the vessel and cargo were destroyed.

Jan. 21. The new aqueduct cast-iron bridge of the Grand Junction Canal, over the river Ouse, below Stoney Stratford, was opened with the usual ceremonies. The whole length of the iron work is 101 feet; it is wide enough for two boats to pass each other, and has a towing-path of iron attached to it. The bridge is firm and tight in every part, and displays not the least appearance of strain from the great weight on every part. The opening of this aqueduct, and the passage of trade over the embankment, are expected to add 5001. per month to the revenues of the Company.

Domestic Occurrences. Friday, Jan. 11.

Antonio Cardoza (a Portuguese), Mary Rogers, and Sarah Browne, were indicted at the Old Bailey Sessions for the wilful murder of J. Davis, a waterman, by giving him several stabs in the back with a The two latter were disreputable females; and, having quarrelled in the street with the deceased, called upon Cardosa, who was known to them, to espouse their quarrel, which he immediately did by stabbing the deceased. The learned Judge stated a distinction to exist between the cases of Cardoza and Sarah Browne. There was a quarrel and heat of blood between her and the deceased. but none between him and Cardoza. Cardoza was found guilty of Murder, Sarsh Browne of Manslaughter, and Mary Rogers acquitted.—Cardoza was executed on Monday the 14th, opposite Newgate. He persisted to the last in asserting his innocence. Previous to his being brought from the press-yard, he cried bitterly; but, on mounting the scaffold, he acted with becoming fortitwee. After being suspended the usual time, the body was conveyed to St. Bartholomew's Hospital for dissection.

Friday, Jan. 18.

This night a fire broke out in a sugarbaker's warehouse at Puddledock, which destroyed the premises, with a great quantity of goods.

Saturday, Jan. 19.

A snake, 14 inches long, and weighing. three-quarters of a pound, was shot in the fields between Primrose Hill and Hampstead.

Menday, Jan. 21.

This night a fire broke out in a house in Oakley-street, Lambeth, which totally consumed the same.

The same night a fire broke out, about seven o'clock, in some premises in Cockhill, Shadwell.

Monday, Jan. 21.

The baneful effects resulting from sleeping in a room with charcoal burning, were exemplified at Bayswater; where a poor woman, delivered but a few days before, with her husband, was, on the door being broken open, found suffocated, with the infant alive, and sucking at the mother's breast.

Wednesday, Jan. 23.

This evening a fire broke out on the premises of Mr. Bolland, hatter, in Jewigstreet, Westminster, occasioned by a bey leaving a candle burning near a quantity of shavings. The work-shop was entirely consumed.

Thursday, Jan. 24.

A fire broke out this morning, in an out-house at a baker's in Goswell-street, which destroyed the whole of the premises where it began.

Friday, Jan. 25.

A fire broke out this night, at a wheel-wright's yard in Whitechapel, which entirely consumed the premises.

Sunday, Jan. 27.

At 12 o'clock the Prince of Wales, accompanied by the Earl of Moira, Lords Dundas and Keith, arrived at the Chapel Royal, St. James's; when the service of the day began, which was read with great solemnity by the Rev. Mr. Pridden, and the Litany by the Rev. Mr. Hayes. On the Bishop of London (the Dean of the Chapel) and the Rev. Mr. Holmes. (the Sub-Dean) entering the altar, to read the Communion-service, they turned to the Royal closet, and made their obeisance to the Prince, as is customary when the King is present. A Sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Maddy, from Acts, iv. 12; after which the anthem of "God is our Hope and Strength" was sung; and at a quarter past two o'clock his Roya! Highness descended from the closet, and, followed by the three above Noble Lords, went up the aile of the Chapel, and took his seat under a canopy, and the Lords on the opposite side of the Altar; when the Sub-Dean. presented to the Prince a gold dish, and his Royal Highness put in his offering, and afterwards the same was presented The Dean, to the Lords attending him. after taking the sacrament himself, administered it to his Royal Highness, and to the three Noble Lords, and Mr. Maddy, who had preached. On his Royal Highness leaving the Chapel, he was again received with military honours.

Wednesday, Jan. 30.

We have great pleasure in saying, that his Majesty's health has much improved during the present month. He has been able to walk on Windsor Termos reveral: times, accompanied by his Physicians.

Births.

Lately. Lieut -gen. D. Wemyss, governer of Tynemouth, to Miss Tucker, the Tottenham beiress.

Rev. William Tremayne, rector of St. Mary's, Scilly, to Mary Richards, of St. Kevern, Cornwall.

1811, Jan. I. Jesse Gregson, esq. of Hawkhurst, Kent, to Catherine, eldest daughter of Henry Shuttleworth, esq. of Great Bowden, Leicestershire.

Jan. 2. John Francis Gunning, esq. of Brunswick-square, barrister, to Elizabeth Knight, great niece of Wm. Sollers, esq. banker, of Blandford, Dorset, and great grand-daughter of the late Abraham Gapper, esq. serjeant at law, of Balsomehouse, Somerest.

Jaw. 3. At Dunraven-castle, the Hon. Windham Henry Quin, M. P for Lemerick, to Caroline, only daughter of Thowas Wyodham, esq. M. P. for Glamorganshire.

Jan. 4. At Wellow, near Bath, Mr. Micah Gibbe, jun. of White Ox Mead, to Miss Martha Pownall, daughter of Mr. Thomas Pownall, Liston-grove.

Jen. 5. Nathanael Bogle French, jun. esq. of Dulwich, Surrey, to Elizabeth, ly chold of the late Hon. Wm. Jackson, Chief Justice of Jamaica.

DEATHS. 1810, AT Oxburgh, Norfolk, in con-Sept. 28. A sequence of a histocrrhage from the lungs, Mary-Margaret, last surviving daughter of the Rev. Joshua. White, rector of that parish. Her tender and unweared filial duty, her alscrity in kindness to her friends, her uniforin, discreet, and active beneficence to her neighbours, in their temporal and spiratual concerns, pruceeded out of a truly Christian heart, were aided by a sound and cultivated understanding, and adorned by the happiest temper. They made her life lovely, and will make her memory affectionately cherished. Her venerable parents, supported and cheered by her through a long old age, are thus left, one in his 87th, the other in her 83rd year, to sustain their infirmity, by the spirit of those holy hopes and consolations, which they diligently cultivated and successfully matured in her.

Oct. 8. At St. Anne's, Jamaica, Jennima, youngest daughter of Mr. Siocombe, ' of H. M. Customs, at Bratol.

Nov. ... At Kingston, Jamaica, of a fever incidental to the alimate, Mr. Townsend Usher, late of Bristok Dog.

Dec. 15. At Brentford, in her 70th year, Mrs. Sarah Trimmer, the well-known and respected Authoress of several excellent books. She was the only daughter of Joshua Kirby, esq. designer in perspective to their Majesties (of whom see some Memoirs, principally compiled by Mrs. Trimmuner, in our vol. LXXVIII. p. 4.) This excellent lady was summoned from a world of trouble and sorrow, by one-of the most gentle calls that ever was sent from Heaven to a human being: while sitting in her chair, perusing the letters of a deceased friend, she sank as it were into a tranquil slumber; and so peaceful was her end, that the moment when the soul was separated from the body could not be exactly ascertained.—It is an erroneous opinion among many persons, that Mrs. T. desired and prayed that she might be removed from this world in the very manmer in which she really was. This, however, was far from being the case; it is true, that she always wished to be spared the pain of a lingering illness, and had great dread of her faculties being impaired by age: she was, however, so fully aware of the many imperfections and errors to which buman nature is liable, that it was her earnest desire to have some time allowed her to prepare for death.—Though fortune had lavished no extraordinary gifts upon her, the poor ever found in Mrs. T. a friend who was always ready to supply their wants. Without those superior advantages of education which the females of the present day possess in so eminent a degree, she has, by her own diligence and application, contributed in a most wonderful manner to the improvement of the rising generation, through the means of those works which are approved of and admired by the most learned and distinguished persons of the age. Posses ed of a naturally good understanding, a clear perception, a sound judgment, a pious and benevolent heart, and a strong desire to be useful to others, she succeeded so well in the task which she had undertaken, that while the extreme humility of her mind prevented her wishing or seeking for fame, her character became known and applauded, not only in every part of her native country, but also in some of its most distant colonies." Her remains were deposited in the family-vault at Ealing, op Saturday, Jan. 5; and a Funeral Sermon was preached at New Brentford, Jan. 6, by Mr. Haverfield; which shall be more fully noticed in our next; and from which the foregoing extract is taken.— A correct list of Mrs. Trimmer's publications is here rubjoined: 1. "A little Spelling-book for young Children;" 2. "Easy Lessons; a Sequel to the above;" 3. "LXIV Prints taken from the Old Testament; with a Description, in a Set of easy Lessons;" 4. "LXIV Prints from the New Testament, and, Description;" 5. "LXIV Prints of Roman History, with Description;" 6. "LXIV Prints of English History, with Description;" 7. "A Comment on Dr. Watts's Divine Songs for Children;" 8. "An easy Introduction to the Knowledge of Nature, and Reading the Holy Scriptures;" 9-"An Abridgment of Scripture History; consisting of Lessons from the Old Testament;" 10. "An Abridgement of the New Testament; consisting of Lessons composed chiefly from the Gospels.;" 114 "A Scripture Catechism; containing an Explanation of the above Lessons in the Style of Familiar Conversation," in 2 vols. The four last articles were written originally for children in the lower classes of life; but they have been adopted into many schools and families, for the instruction of those of superior condition. "An Attempt to familiarise the Catechism of the Church of England;" 13. "An Explanation of the Office of Baptism, and of the Order of Confirmation in the Common Prayer-book;" 14. The same, with "Questions for the Use of Teachers;" 15. " A Companion to the Book of Com-. mon Prayer; containing a Practical Comment on the Liturgy, Epistles, and Gospels. This work, though principally intended for young persons, has proved satisfactory to persons of maturer years. 16. The same in two vols. with "Questions for the Use of Teachers;" 17. "Sacred History, selected from the Scriptures, with Annotations and Reflections." This work is executed upon a peculiar: plan, and was composed with a view of exciting in young minds an early taste for divine subjects, and of furnishing persons of maturer years, who have not leisure for the works of more voluminous Commentators, with assistance in the study of the Scriptures. The historical events are collected from the various books of which the Sacred Volume is composed, and arranged in a regular series; many passages of the Prophetic writings, and of the Psalms, are interwoven with the respective parts of the history to which they relate; and the whole illustrated by annotations and reflections, founded on the best authorities. 18. ", Fabulous Historics; designed to teach the proper Treatment of Animals." 19. "The Guardian of Education;" in 5 vols. This was a periodical work, which was published at first in monthly, and afterwards in quarterly numbers. It was undertaken with the pious and benevolent design of assisting young mothers in the education of their children, and was continued through twenty-eight numbers; when the . fatigue which attended so laborious a task, and a multiplicity of other avocations.

obliged few flowers are scattered over the grave m which female excellence is entombed. Miss Butler's superior understanding was invigorated by the pursuits of useful know-With antient history, as well sacred as profame, and with the annals of her native country, and of modern Europe, the was conversant. An extensive acquaintance with Geography, and with Biography and Chronology (employed as its auxiliaries), rendered her familiar with a multitude of circumstances, and of anecdates, that related to celebrated places, with the memorable characters who have appeared on the stage of life, and with the upportant uras which have marked its varied drama. Though she did not andervalue nor neglect the charms of French Literature, nor omit to avail herself of the opportunities of improvement which education and which conversation presented, it was principally by the perusel of historic works in our own lengrage, and of the productions of some of twitteost emmant of our Classicks and therefore, and how necessary is it (especially for females of a similar age, and of an equal sensibility) not only that those repulsive principles of our nature, fear, anger, and aversion, should be strictly regulated, but also those lovely passions, hope and joy, which sometimes successively delight, dazzle, and overwhelm us! That we should maintain the perpetual ascendancy of reason, and keep under controut even our mildest and most pleasurable emotions, is a maxim on which we should never cease to act. We are frail, and constantly touch the threshold of eternity. Even the sunshine of the soul may be converted into a destructive blaze.

Turn hopeless thought, turn from per: thought repell'd.

Resenting railies, and wakes ev'ry woe.

Snatch'd are thy prime! and in thy bridat hour! [smil'd;

And when kind fortune, with thy lover,

And when high-flavour'd thy fresh-op'ning joys; [complete."

And when blind man pronounc'd thy bliss

Αt

At Needham Market, Suffolk, Captain Rephenson Kitching, born March 19, 1738. He was the second son of John Kitching, esq. of Carleton, near Skipton, co. York, by Margaret, his second wife, who was daughter of John Stephenson, esq. of Old Laund, in the forest of Pendle, co. Lancaster. On the 21st of October, 1774, he entered himself a volunteer officer in the first West Riding Militia, Yorkshire, then commanded by Col. Sir Geo. Saville, bart. He married to his first wife, Anne, daughter of Henry Little, citizen of London, hy whom he had one daughter, who died Aug. 21, 1783, aged 19 years and a half; to his second wife (1770) Diana, widow of John Proby, of Elton, Northamptonshire, esq. who was M. P. for Stamford, co. Lincoln, and also for the county of Huntingdonshire, 1788; to his third wife, Anna Maria, only daughter of T. Burnett, of London, esq. and widow of Thomas Hartley, merchant, of Fish-street-hill, London; he married to his fourth wife, Jane, daughter of Mr. Tabor, of Brightlandsea, Essex, gent. and widow of James Peto, of Stratford-grove, Essex, esq.; he married to his fifth wife, Miss Beddingfield, of Needham Market, Suffolk, who survives

Mr. Thomas Baird, of the house of John and George Button and Company, Bread-street.

Endeared to her acquaintance for gentleness of manners, and sweetness of disposition, Mrs. Culliford, relict of the late Thomas C. esq. of Clifton.

At Cheltenham, in his 37th year, James Maxwell, esq. of Orange-grove, in the Island of Tobago; who had a few months ago returned to this country on account of ill health. His honourable and upright principles as a man of business, his pleasing and social qualities as a companion and friend, had long secured him the respect and esteem of a most numerous and respectable circle of acquaintance, who have to lament his early loss. Mr. Maxwell was of the family of Monteith, in Scotland, and first cousin to her Grace the Duchess of Gordon; and, what is rather an uncommon circumstance, was one of nine brothers, the whole of whom, except himself, have been bred up in the service of their country; in which service, a few years ago, he had the misfortune to lose two of his beloved brothers, both Captains in the army, of considerable reputation. Mr. Maxwell leaves behind him six brothers, three of whom are Post Captains in the Navy, who have eminently distinguished themselves in the service of their King and Country on several occasions; two are Captains of Artillery, and one is in the service of the Honourable East India Company.

Randle Ford, esq.

At Norton, near Stockton, aged 62, Francis Smith. csq. one of the people called Quakers.

Jan. 2. In St. Leonard's Hospital, Newark, Mr. Rob. Long, formerly an eminent corn-factor.

In his 18th year, Joseph Willis Heath, youngest son of Mr. Joseph H. of Standardhill, near Nottingham. He was accidentally drowned, while endeavouring to ascertain the strength of some ice on a fish-pond near Beeston.

Mr. John Stevenson, of Barton, near Nottingham.

At Edgehill, near Liverpool, in his 72d year, Mrs. Norris, relict of Thomas N. esq. merchant, formerly of that place.

Aged 50, the wife of Mr. Geisthorpe, farmer, of Upton.

Jan. 3. At Brompton, the Rev. Henry Hodges, vicar of Embleton, co. Northumb.

At Ryde, Isle of Wight, Alex. G. K. Shippard, student at the Royal Naval College, eldest son of Capt. A. S. R. N.

Of an apoplexy, Geo. Fryer, esq. of Chancery-lane.

At Trowell, Notts, aged 23, Augustus Parkyns, esq. nephew to Sir John Borlase Warren, of Stapleford-hall.

At Miss Garsed's, Shirehampton, aged 95, Mrs. D. Wilkinson; and on the 6th inst. aged 56, Miss Garsed.

Geo. Frederic, son of Mr. Lockley, surgeon, of Half Moon-street.

After a few days' illness, Mr. Wm. Guppy, of Chard, Somerset, last brother of Mr. G. of Bristol.

Aged 63, John Morley, esq. of Holme-hall, near Brigg.

Jan. 4. Aged 42, Mr. Wm. May, of Crispin-street, Spital-fields.

The wife of Mr. Benjamin Nind, jun. of Peckham.

On Clapham common, the wife of John Smith, esq. banker, Lombard-street.

At Knightsbridge, aged 63, Mrs. Elizabeth Delegal, relict of Henry Sacheverell D. esq. late of the Island of Barbadoes.

At Hammersmith, in her 64th year, Mrs. Phæbe Burnell.

At Glasgow, in the 63d year of his age, Mr. John Reekie, teacher of the Greek and Latin languages. Though his whole life had been laboriously devoted to the instruction of youth in the principles of Greek and Roman Literature, he yet found means to acquire a critical acquaintance with the antient Classicks, and a profound knowledge of the structure of their languages, which has not been surpassed in any period; and is perhaps without parallel in the present. A happy sagacity, aided by a memory uncommonly retentive, enabled his unwearied zeal to surmount many obstacles which had baffled the most celebrated scholars;

and

Aged 94, Mrs. Sedgley, of Bath, widow of Samuel S. esq. formerly one of the Corporation of Bristol.

Jan. 5. At Wolverhampton, in her 82d year, Mrs. Reynolds, widow. of the late Thomas R. esq. of Willen ball, Staffordsh.

Suddency, Anne, wife of Mr. W. Rees, of Park street, Marylebone.

At Whithy, aged 85, Mr. Rich. Watkins. And, about the same time, his son, Mr. William Watkins, author of "The Whitby Spy," "Fall of Carthage," and other ingenious performances.

At Hipckley, aged 63, Mr. Linke Wright; in whose character sobriety, industry, punctuality, and honesty, were predominant traits. He formerly took a very active part in instructing the Church choir; and though by no means eminent as a performer, knew well the theory of musick. As a composer, he was not below mediocrity; he never published any of his productions, yet they soldom failed, when performed, to give satisfaction to an audience. His anthems, as well as his other pieces, are written strictly according to rules of composition, and evidently prove, that the author of them possessed both ingenuity and fertility of inmgination.

Mr. Samuel Sharratt, jun. of Walsail. GENT. MAG. January, 1811.

to be made to the gallery of that antient edulice, for the purpose of receiving the pictures ; and an ample provision is made for keeping them in due preservation.

Mary Anne, wife of Charles Pope, esq. of Park-street, Bristol.

In New-street, Spring-gardens, the wife of John Proctor Anderdon, esq.

In her 75th year, Mrs. Roberts, widow of the late Rev. James R. rector of Wolverton, and vicar of Stoneley, Waiwicksh.

The wife of the Rev. Langham Rokeby, rector of Arthingworth, Northamptonsh.

Aged 71, Mrs. Goas, relict of Mr. John

G. of Park-street, Birmingham.

At Newport, Isle of Wight, in her 66th year, the wife of Sir John Pinhorn, of Southwark, and of Ringwood-house, Isle of Wight, Jan. 9. At Petworth, Sussex, Mrs. Spershott.

At Limehouse, aged 59, Mrs. Mitchell, relict of James M. esq.

Aged 79, Mr. Edw. Stevenson, framesmith, of Derby-road, near Nottingham, Aged 58, Mr. Rich. Stainton, of Hull, nearly 40 years clerk in the house of Wm, Williamson, esq.

George-street, Rutland-Io Great square, Dublin, the wife of T. Wallace, esq. barrister at law,

At Gilmorton, Leicestershire, William Chandler, gent.

Jan. 10. At Dudley, after a short illness, in his 35th year, Mr. Daniel Hughes, mercer and draper.

At Gretna-green, aged 79, Mr. Joseph Paisley, the celebrated Coupler. He was bern at Kerkandrew-up-Esk, in Cumberland, and early in life was bound apprentice to a tobacconist. He soon left his trade, to follow the employment of a fisherman; and he was allowed by his contemporaries, from his uncommon strength and agility, to be the most expert man in the use of the lister, for the destruction of salmon, of any ever heard His delight was in talking of juvenile feats of activity, and the immense quantities of brandy he could have drunk, without feeling the smallest effects from intoxication. He was accustomed to relate, in the presence of concurring witnesses, that he frequently swallowed a pint of unadulterated brandy at one draught. He dwelt with complacency on a celebrated achievement of which he shared the glory of a great brother drinker: they consumed, without any assistance whatever, no less than ten gallons of brandy in three days. For the last 40. years of his life he is supposed to have drank not less than two bottles of brandy daily, (See our vol. LXXVII. pp. 707, 802.)

Suddenly, aged 78, Mr. John Terry, ship-owner, of Brook-street, Hull.

In his 67th year, the Rev. Chas. Walker, rector of Simbridge, Gloucestershire, and in commission of the peace for that county. He was formerly fellow of Magdalen college, Oxford; M. A. 1769; B. D. 1783. .

Mr. John Hunt, second warehousekeeper of H. M. Excise of Bristol.

At Thoresby-park, near Ollerton, Notts, the Rev. Mr. Saltreen (a near relation of Lady Manners.) While he was skaiting in the park, the ice suddenly gave way, and he was drowned before any assistance could reach him.

At Annadale, co. Antrim, aged 61, the Hon. William-John Skeffington, Constable of Dublin-castle, and formerly M. P. for 30 years for the borough of Antrim. He as the third son of Clotworthy S. 4th Vis count and first Earl of Massereene, by Elizabeth, only daughter and heiress of Henry Eyre, esq. of Rowter, co. Derby, and brother of Clotworthy, the late, and of Henry, the present and third Earl of Massereene and sixth Viscount.

Jan. 1. In Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, the wife of Mr. Furbor, of Lewisham.

At Blackheath, Alexander Massen, eaq. In Castle-street, Leicester-square, in his 65th year, Thomas Thompson, esq.

In Berkeley-squ. James Adamson, esq.

In Red Lion-street, Holborn, Mr. Emanucl Thorley, many years an eminent linen-draper there.

In Cooke's-court, London, Mr. Thomas Ward, solicitor, brother of John W. esq.

of Mariborough.

At Brachead-abbey, parish of Paisley, aged 95, Marian Sproull, who mairled in: 1723 James Stevenson, by whom she had only one son and one daughter. She has left 15 grand-children, 40 great grandchildren, and 10 great great grand-child-She had seen seven generations, five of whom were alive at one time.

At Mansfield, aged 74, Anne wife of Mr. Thomas Parkin, sen. grocer and baker.

At Mansfield, aged 77, Mr. James Marriett, corn-dealer.

Jan. 12. Aged 77, Mr. Thomas Robinson, of Willoughby, near Sleaford.

Aged 82, Mrs. Smith, widow, mother of Mr. Joseph S. of the Royal-Oak, Lincoln.

The infant daughter of Andrew Lough-'nan, esq. of Bedford-place, Russell-square.

Mrs. Jackson, of Skinner-street, Somers-town.

At Windsor, in her 59th year, the wife of William Gorton, esq.

Mrs. S. Young, of Lewin's-mead, Bristol. Mrs. Eaton, relict of the late Mr. Peter E. of Bristol.

At Innox-hill, near Freme, John Vincent, esq. an eminent surgeon.

Jan. 13. At Cromwell, near Newark, at an advanced age, the wife of James Brudley, gent.

In Cleveland-court, St. James's-place, in his 76th year, Patrick Clason, esq.

Samuel, youngest son of Mr. Falbows, of Great Charles-street, Birmingham.

In Upper Guildford-street, Mrs. Hinckley, relict of the late Dr. H. many years treasurer of the college of Physicians.

At Westbourne-place, King's-road, aged 65, William-Thos. Lewis, esq. comedian. He was born at Ormskirk, in Lancashire, March 4, 1748-9. His grandfather was a Clergyman, rector of Trahere, in Caermarthenshire, and second son of Erasmus." Lewis, esq. (private secretary to Mr. Hate ' ley, minister to Queen Anne) the confidential friend of Pope and Swift, whose name appears so often in their correspond-His father, Mr. William Lewis, served his time to a linen-draper on Tower hill, but quitted business for the stage. He? performed in Dublin at the same time with Garrick, under the direction of the then manager, Mr. Sheridan. In 1749, young Lewis was carried to Ireland, and educated at a grammar-school at Armagb, kept by a Mr. Heapy, whose son lost a leg in the service of the East-India Company, and in consequence thereof obtained a considerable post in the India-house. Mr. Lewis went on the stage very young, and early distinguished himself at Edinburgh, under-so much suavity of manners towards his brothers and sisters of the sock and buskin, that when, in consequence of a severe fit of illness in the Spring of 1803, he was under the necessity of resigning the situation, he retired with the best wishes of all. Since his secession from public life, he became a joint proprietor with Mr. Knight in the Liverpool and Manchester Theatres; which have flourished under their superintendence, to the great advantage of the Company, and to the delight of several audiences.-As an actor, Mr. Lewis was unequalled in the sprightly cast of comedy, and there was an indescribable elegance in his deportment, which no modern actor could even unitate with success In the sestaining a part which comprehended serious dignity, such as Lord Townley, he was inferior to Mr. Smith and Mr. Holman, but in such fashionable and flippant characters as Sir Harry Flutter, Tom Shuffleton, and Sir Charles Rucket, he was em nently attractive, and left all rivalry at a mensureless distance. As a man, he was upright and good-as a husband, father, friend, he norted all those endearing qua-Lities which will make his loss irreparable to his afflicted widow, his affectionate children, and to an attached circle of acquaintance .-- Mr. Lewis's health had been one of the melancholy proofs, which we daily waness, of the yet infantile state of Medical science; as, of three professional gentlerffen of acknowledged skill and experience, who were consulted upon the case, two entertained opinions directly at variance with each other; while the third felt himself incapable of deciding, till the desease should have acquired a more distinct character. Thus, the unfortunate sufferer was deprived of the aid which she might possibly have derived from medicine, and, in one little wonth from the period of her first attack, she was snau hedfrom the agonized cinbrace of connubial affection, and consigned to her native dist, leaving, for " another and a better world," a circle of loving and beloved friends, to lament her early and premature departure, Deep, indeed, is their cause for lamentation, though not as those " without nope," for, to a natural sweetness and affability of disposition, the deceased united all tast can endear a wife and a mother, every grace that con lend-a charm-to-society, all the virtues that adorn and diguify her sex. & purer heart than hers, more void of offence to God or man, never animated the buman bosom.

. At an advanced age, Mrs. Parker, of Cholsea.

At Tottenham, aged 74, William Robinson, esq.

In Bernard-street, in her 77th year, Mrs. Esdai'e, relict of James E. esq. late of Hoddesdon, Herts.

In King-street, Bath, Mr. John Ring, a commissioner for taking special bail. He formerly kept the public-house called the Bell, in Monmouth-street, the sign of which bore this apposite inscription "I Ring."

Aged 47, Mr. Wm. Bromley, coast-waiter in H. M. Customs at Hull.

In the Market-place, Leicester, aged 85, Mr. Clarke, of Castle Donington.

Mr. Joseph Turton, of Olveston.

Found dead in his bed, Mr. Geo. Tar, upholsterer, of Bath.

At his mother's house, Bathwick, Mr. F. Jarman, son of the late Mr. F. J. of Bath.

After an illness of a few minutes, at the house of Col. Gilpin, where she was on a visit with her family, Mrs. Hampson, wife of Leonard Hampson, esq. of Luton, Bedfordshire.

At Brading, Isle of Wight, in his 78th year, Mr. Thos. Midlane.

Jan. 15. At Elby, co. Gloucester, the Rev. John Pettat, rector of Quenington, and upwards of 40 years vicar of Stonehouse, in that county; a man who conscientiously discharged the sacred duties of his office with fidelity and zeal. He endeared himself to his family and friends by his cheerfulness of temper, affability of manners, and a constant attention to their comfort.

At Edinburgh, after a long and painful illness, the wife of J. Bogue, esq. W. S.

In Broad-street, Oxford, Mrs. Tawney, relict of the late Rev. Braduam T., B. D. one of the minor-canons of Winchester Cathedral.

Jan. 16. At Francis Wilson's, esq. Battersea-rise, Major James Lloyd, of the 3d reg. Native infantry, on the Bombay establishment.

At Wigmore, Herefordshire, aged 86, Mr. John Oakley, many years the father of that place.

In New Bond-street, Mrs. Catherine M'Douall, the oldest inhabitant in the street.

At Huntingdon, Mrs. Bell, of ClinFord, daughter of Matthew Consett, esq. of Guildford-street.

In the Tower, Mrs. Breese, relict of the late Wm. B. esq.

Aged 59, the Rev. Dr. John Vardill, rector of Skirbeck and Fishtoft, Lincolnsh.

At her son-in-law's, Mr. Wells, merchant, of Hull, aged 62, Mrs. Yeoman, of Doncaster.

Whilst on a visit at Huntingdon, of scarlet fever, Mrs. Bell, a widow lady, sister to Mrs. William Johnson, of Stamford.

Jan. 17. In his 20th year, Robert Macfarlane Hammond, third son of Wm. H. esq. of Queen-square, Bloomsbury.

At Witney, in his 77th year, Mr. T. Dix. carpenter, and many years master of the Eell public-house there.

At Chiswick, James Mair, esq.

At Neston, Cheshire, Edmund Lyon,

Jan. 18. At Northall, aged 87, Mrs. Sarah Pott, relict of Percival P. esq. senior surgeon of St. Bartholomew's Hoss pital.

Aged87, Mr. Carter, of St. Ebbe's, Oxford.
At Duffield, Derbyshire, in her 86th year, Mrs. Gould, widow and relict of Edw. G. esq. late of Mansfield Woodhouse, Notts.

In Chester-place, Lambeth, aged 78, Daniel Golden, esq. formerly of the Strand, linen-draper. And, a short time ago, Dorothy, his wife. They had been married 53 years.

At his lodgings in St. Aldate's parish, Oxford, aged 86, the Rev. John Webb, formerly scholar of Wadham-college, Oxf.

Jan. 19. In Bloomsbury-square, in his 77th year, Edw. Ommanney, esq.

Mrs. Denham, relict of the late Robest D. esq. of Chigwell, Essex.

At Grantham, advanced in years, the wife of Rob. Calcroft, gent.

At Bath, Col. Luttrell, many years an inhabitant of that city, and brother to John Fownes L. M. P. of Dunster-castle.

Jan. 20. The wife of the Rev. Henry Plimley, vicar of New Windsor.

At Turner's-hill, Cheshunt, aged 78, John Relph, esq.

At Leicester, Mr. Wm. Leeson, cabinetmaker.

Aged 80, Mr. Croft, formerly a painter; but latterly on the establishment of the Charter-house. He was suddenly taken ill on Clerkenwell-green, and being conveyed home in a coach, expired on entering his apartment.

At Kirkby, near Sleaford, Mr. William

Fisher, an opulent grazier, &c.

Jan. 21. At Woodford, Essex, Mrs. Mathew, relict of Job M. esq.

In Harley-street, the Right Hon. Lady Elizabeth Lee, daughter of Simon Earl Harcourt, and relict of Sir Wm. Lee, bart.

At her son's, in Spa-fields, near Islington, aged 70, Mrs. Caley, of Walthamstow, Essex.

At her sister's, in Lower Seymour-street, Mrs. Sanford, relict of Henry William S. esq. of Walford, Somersetshire, and sister of Sir Geo. Yonge, bart.

Suddenly, Mr. Lyons, many years the first bassoon-player in the orchestra of Drury-lane Theatre.

Jan. 22. Aged 74, Mrs. Coltman, relict, of the late Mr. C. of St. Nicholas-street, Leicester. Though little known beyond her Aged 68, Jane, wife of Thomas Trundle, esq. of Crosby-square.

Jan. 24. At Stockwell, Surrey, Mr. Wm. Rich, many years venison-dealer on Ludgate-hill. He was a worthy benevolent man. His wife died not two months before him.

At South Lambeth, in his 36th year, James Julius Teush, esq.

The infant son of Mr. Dardier, of Burycourt, St. Mary Axe.

Most sincerely and deeply lamented, Mrs. N. Salomons, of Finsbury-square, mother of Mrs. Edw. Goldsmid, and sister of the late A. G. csq.

Jan. 25. At his father's house, after a few days' illness, Mr. J. B. Edmonds, son of Mr. J. E. of Tetsworth, Oxfordshipe.

In Thavies-inu, Holborn, aged 2 years and 2 mouths, William-Bowyer, second son of Mr. John-Bowyer Nichols, printer, of Red Lion-passage, Fleet-street.

Lately. In Sloane-street, aged 76, John Pennell, esq. of the Navy Pay-office.

In Dublin, Mr. M'Cready, merchant, father of Mr. M. manager of the Birming-ham Theatre Royal.

At Great Barr, Staffordshire, aged 84, Mr. Rawlms.

At Cork, T. Hewitt, esq.

Stonehewer, esq. of Cannon-street.

In London, Robert Coleman, esq. formerly of Leicester.

Rev. Milward Southall, of Churchill, near Stourbridge, Worcestershire.

Rev. Mr. Bowen, of Rhoscrowther, Pembrokeshire.

At Radley, Berks, in his 76th year, Mr. Greenaway.

Rev. Isaac Davidson, D. D. minister of Whitmore Manse; Scotland.

At Birmingham, aged 31, Mrs. Somerset Richings.

At Joan-hall, Pembrokeshire, W. Allen,

At St. Andrew's, Mrs. Gillespie, widow of the late Rev. Dr. G. principal of St. Mary's-college.

Aged 82, Mrs. Ewart, of Troqueer, Dumfries.

At Belfast, Mrs. Shaw, of Coohor, Kildars.

At Maldon, Essex, aged 76, W. Waltham, esq. one of His Majesty's Justices of the peace, and deputy beutenant for that county.

Charles, second son of N. A. Jaggers, esq of the East Essex militia.

Aged 50, John Walter, agent of the Victualling-office.

At

94"

At Salisbury, Jane, wife of Wm. Hussey, esq.

Mrs. Robins, relict of Thomas R. esq. of Trenure-house, Penzance.

Thus. French esq. of Cranlee-hall, Suff. At Flushing, near Falmouth, Major Moore, of the 4th dragoon guards.

In his 107th year, John Robinson, labourer, of Kirkby-Mallory, Leicestershire.

At Ward, Beer-Ferris, J. W. Foote, esq. At Heniton, aged 70, Mr. J. Tooze.

Mrs. Pogson, relict of John P. esq. late of Rougham-place, Suffolk.

In his 79th year, Avery Jebb, esq. of Tapton-grove, near Chesterfield.

At Ipswich, S. Abbott, esq. And, in his 85th year, John Dade, esq.'

- At Tonford-place, Kent, Wm. Willes, esq. late of Goring, Sussex.

Miss Phillips, only daughter of Philip

P. esq. banker, Haverfordwest.

In his 79th year, Thomas Hunt, esq. of Cockshort Lydiat, Herefordshire.

Mr. Thos. Swayne, of Steeple-Langford.
Suddenly, Rebecca, youngest daughter of Mr. Solomon Sweetapple, of WestHarnham, near Salisbury.

Mrs. Gardiner, relict of C. G. esq. of Minchinhampton.

At Scarborough, Geo. Salvin, esq. paymaster in 15th reg. of foot.

Lieut. W. Loley, of the East India Company's Marine service. He perished in the late calamitous wreck of the Elizabeth, off Dunkirk.

In Stanhope-street, after a lingering and painful illness, Thomas Goode, esq. Navyagent.

Aged 100, Hannah Garratt, of Rowley Regis, Worcestershire.

Aged 103, Mrs. Court, of Beaudescrt,

J.Carmichael, M.D. late of Birmingham.
Aged 84, Mr. James Highfield, of Wolverhampton; and within the week, aged 70, his brother Mr. W. H. of Bilston.

In the parish of Inch, co. Antrim, aged 100, Thomas Torney.

Aged 101, Alice Parker, of Hetton, near Skipton.

At Blyth, aged 104, Mrs. Blakey.

Aged 91, Mrs. Lamb, widow, of Newark. Aged 72, Capt. John Shilstone, one of the oldest ship-masters of Bristol.

Mrs. Calaway, St. Paul's boarding-school, Bristol.

At Exeter, Edw. Blagdon, esq. late of Blagdon-house, Devon.

Capt. Brayne, of Chester.

At Peterchurch, Herefordshire, T. De-

At Droitwich, Rob. Penrice, esq. son in of the late R. P. esq. solicitor.

At Rochester, aged 16, Mary, only daughter of Capt. Mansfield, R. N.

The wife of John Williams, esq. of Hawford-hill, near Worcester.

At the Catholic chapel, Worcester, in his 83d year. Rich. O'Farrel Caddel, esq. formerly of Harbourstown, co. Meath.

At Saffron Walden, aged 87, Isaac Gardiner, esq.

At Frampton-upon-Severn, Mrs. Hol- lings, relict of John H. esq. of Stroud.

At Exeter, aged 81, Mrs. Nutcombe, relict of the Rev. Chancellor N.

In his 75th year, John Hussey, esq. of Nash-court, near Marnhull, Dorset.

 The late Mary Verney, Baroness Fermanagh in her own right, (whose death. we have already slightly noticed in p. 591 . of our last volume) died Nov. 15, 1810, at May-place, Keut, aged 73. She was. born Oct. 23, 1737, the posthumous and only child of the Hon. John Verney, eldest. son of Ralph, Viscount Fermanagh, Baron of Bulturbet, and first Earl of Verncy, to which latter honour he was promoted after his son's decease. Her Ladyship's great-grandfather was Ralph Visc. Fermanagh, in which title he was succeeded by his son Ralph, created Earl of Verney, as before mentioned, who died Oct. 4, 1752, and was succeeded by his second, but eldest surviving son, Ralph, 2nd Earl, who was: one of His Majesty's Most Hon. Privy Council, a Fellow of the Royal Society. and successively M. P. for Wendover and Carmarthen. This Lord married Sept. 11, 1740, Mary, daughter and heiress of Henry Herring, of Egham, Surrey, a director of the Bank of England; but dying, without issue, March 23, 1791, the titles of Baron of Belturbet, Viscount Fermanagh, and Earl of Verney, became extinct; but the estates devolved to his niece, Mary. Verney, only daughter of his elder brother, the Hon. John Verney, who, as before stated, died in his father's life-time, without issue male. Mary Verney was created Baroness Fermanagh in 1792, in about a year after the extinction of the antient titles of her ancestors; but, deceasing unmarried,, the title of Fermanagh becomes again extinct, making the 12th Irish Peerage which. has failed since the Union in Jan. 1801, for default of male heirs.

BILL OF MORTALITY, from Dec. 24, 1810, to Jan. 22, 1811.

Christened.	buried.	2 and 5	140 50 and 60 136
Males - 938 ? 1000	Males - 770 } 1460 Females 690 }	g 3 5 and 10	50 60 and 70 144
Females 830 (1808	Females 690 (1400	0 (10 and 20	42 70 and 80 108
Whereof have died	under 2 vears old 401	1 5 (20) and 30	94 [80 and 90 41
Peck Loaf 4s. 11d.: 4s	.11d.; 5s.1d.; 4s, 11d.	30 and 40	146 90 and 100 6
Sait £1. per bushe	el: 41d. ver paund.	40 and 50	152

```
PRICES OF FLOUR, January 28 :
Fine per Sack 85s, to 00s. Seconds 75s, to 80s. Bran per Q. 14s, to 16s, Pollard 26s, to 30s.
    RETURN of WHEAT, in Mark-Lane, including only from Jan. 14 to Jan. 19:
     Total 8.584 Quarters. Average 95s. 94d.—8s. 24d. higher than last Return.
         OATMEAL, per Boll of 140ths. Avoirdipois, January 19, 49a 18d.
          AVERAGE PRICE of SUGAR, January 23, 45s. 94d. per Cwt. PRICE OF HOPS, IN THE BOROUGH MARKET, January 28:
Nutton......5s. 4d. to 6s.
                                    8d.
                                             Beasts about 1700.
                                                                     Calves 110.
Sheep and Lambs 12,770.
                                                                       Pigs 220.
                                    84.
                                    44.
Pock....... 5s. Ocf. to 7s.
     COALS, January 28: Newcastle 52s. 6d. to 60s. Sunderland 56s. 6d. to 60s. , Yellow 80s. Mottled 90s. Cand 94s. CANDLES, 12s. 6d. per Dox. Moulds 13s. 6d.
SOAP, Vellew 80s. Mottled 90s. Card 94s.
 TALLOW, per Stone, 81b. St. James's 4r.54. Clare Market 4r. 5d. Whitschapel 4r. 3d.
```

EACH DAY'S PRICE OF STOCKS IN JANUARY, 1811.

	22.5												_							_	6 Sup		_		242	. 1	D Stock	_
; 5.	44	дау	-		-	1	-	2404		_	-			2		#0	2		*	1.	Sunday			*		_		_
	66.0	2	$6	65	65	8	$	664	671	674	67	66	65	62	£00	66	66‡	66	664	¥99	4	2	662	199	5,	652	B. Red.	perci
Town Hand	65	- t	$6$	654	632	66	199	661	664	66	€66	664	8	647	100	66	664	664	664	66	e e	67	675	67	663	€7₹	Gonsols.	o per ca.
	108 404	2	831	83	83	82	83	25	8 95	831	83	B	802	2	80 k	20	892	82	# 2 2	824	-	90	89.	891	518	814	Cons.	4 perci
	984	005	186	-	$8	100	99.	982	166	₹ 6 6	99	186	98	280	20.24	9	186	98	186	F86		shot.	100	 	eb ut	shut		-
1									-			100								100			100	100	$		1797.	in rade
	174	144	1714	174	174	17	172	17.	17#	17	172	#11	ing i	17/3	$1.1		174	17	174	174			-1-	174	174	17.1	Ana.
	1774	140		178	178	1774	177			Ī	•••	1774	., .	•	1008	1774	shut	shut	1764	the		abut	sbat	$hut	3446	shut	Stock.	The state of
	25 a26pr.		25m 26pr.	26 a 25pr.	25 a 26pr.	25 a 28pr.	27 a 26pr.	27 a 28pr.	26 a27pr	26a 27pr	25 a 28pr	26a 27pr	28 a 26 pr.	28 a 27pr	1402 8 62	1dL3 t 95	27 a 26pr	26 a 2.5pr.	25 pr.	23 a 24pr.		29 a 24ur.	93a 25 pr	25 pr.	19a 21pr.	20 a 19pr.	Bonds.	- Line
•	$a.5 pr.	9 2 2		2 4 5	2B 6	9	4 2 6	Gaß pr.	Ja B pr.	, 64	77	7 a 12pr.	60	 	inder and		g.		6 3	Sa7 pr.			387 pr.	3870	~7	1 a 6 pr.	Bills.	- Charles
						-1 ••	Τ			101		111		shut	BELLIC			714		shut		_	shut			shut	Bills. Stock	1000
	66	661			60-		66‡	664	90	2	60‡	0.66	66						₹99					66	£ 3	65	Ann.
	65	456	4		65							Shut	657	654	400	6 F C	Juds	3008	00	65		shut	shut	sbut	ngr	shut	Anu.
The state of the s
F 建

Prizes
Prizes
Ditto
Ditto
Ditto
Ditto
Ditto

Ditto.

Ditte.
Ditte.
Ditte.

Ditte.

enhill, and S6, Haymarket.

Maysonalogical Diany for January, 1811. By Dr. Pole, Bristol.

-encore	M. 8 b.	Inches.	WEATERS.
1	26 28	30- 5	cloudy, ground covered with snow
	21 23	30-0	mostly clear
3	91 25	29-13	cloudy, light snow most of the day
i i	18 97	29-14	mostly cloudy, evening tempestuous
3	21 32	29-14	morning cloudy, afternoon clear, high wind
6	23 26	99-14	mostly cloudy, windy
7	22 24	29-14	cloudy at times
	20 24	29-14	cloudy
9	21 97	29-14	mostly cloudy
10	22 35	29-14	cloudy, afternoon rainy ŧι	97 40	29-12	cloudy at times .
18	42 47	29-7	rain most of the day
15	51 44	29. 9	cloudy at times, some showers
14	42 44	29. 9	cloudy, drizzling rain at times
15	34 39	29- 9	cloudy at times, rain and bail
15	53 39	29-16	cloudy at times, evening some light rain
17	46 49	29-12	cloudy, very ramy, windy
18	55 39	29-12	clear	- 1
19	31 39	30- 4.	clear
20	39.41	30- 4	mostly cloudy	•
$1	39 45	29.19	clear
$2 23 24	24 40	30-0	mostly clear
23	39 41	30-1	eloudy, rainy at times	· edig
24	28 36	30-6	morning clear, afternoon cloudy
95	31 44	30-8	mostly clear
26	31 39	50-3	cloudy, evening rainy, high wind
27	39 38	29-12	very clear, and cloudy alternately
28	24 3D	29-11	mostly clear
29	14 97	29-12	mostly clear
3 0	91 30	29-10	cloudy, evening considerable snow
31	31 37	99-1 I	rain most of the day

The average degrees of temperature from observations made at eight o'clock in the morning, are 28-77 100ths; those of the corresponding month in the year 1810, were 38-24 100ths; in 1809, 33-17 100ths; in 1808, 33-47 100ths; in 1807, 31-35 100ths; in 1806, 37-7 100ths; in 1805, 33-16 100ths; and in 1804, 33-50 100ths.

The quantity of rain fallen is equal to 2 inches 62 100ths; that of the corresponding month in the year 1810, was 90 100ths of an inch; in 1809, 4 inches 12 100ths; in 1808, 1 inch 5 100ths; in 1807, 2 inches 28 100ths; in 1806, 5 inches 97 100ths; in 1805, 2 inches 44 100ths; and in 1804, 4 inches 43 100ths.

METEOROLOGICAL TABLE for February 1811. By W. CARY, Strand, Maicht of Fahrenheit's Thermometer.

Lance Table 1811.

undertaking the Task are, an ardent Desire to do Honour to the Memory of its original Author, Mr. HUTcmins; - to the filial Piety of his Son-in law, the late General Bul-LARIS, who projected the New Edi-tion, and expended a large Sum towards carrying it into Execution;-and to the unremitted Exertions of my late excellent Friend Mr. Gough, in its Improvement. Under these circumstances, I confidently appeal to the Lovers of our National Antiquities; and the Volumes shall be put to the press as soon as ONE HUNDRED Cortes are subscribed for.

The Communication of any material Corrections, or Change of Property since the former Volumes were published, will be properly attended to, and incorporated with the Additions at the end of the Work.

J. Nichols. Yours, &c.

"Although aware of the Disappointment eccasioned by the fatal Destruction of the THIRD VOLUME Of Mr. HUTCHING'S VA-of the County more immediately interested in the Completion of the Work, without whose powerful Support it cannot with any degree of prudence be under-

" From the very considerable accession of Materials obtained by the unremitted exertions of Mr. Goven, and the Contributions of several respectable Gentlemen in the County, it will be found expedient to divide what was intended for the TRIED, into Two Volumes; which, uniformly printed with those already before the Publick, will consist each of about Five Hundred Pages; and will be embelished with more than Fifty beautiful Plates, besides numerous Vignettes; which, having been placed in the custody of Mr. Basias, are fortunately preserved. Among these are a great many new ones; several of which are only in part engraved, but all will be finished within the requisite time.

" The Work will be enriched with several elegant Plates of Shells and Fossils; and also with very full Catalogues of the Birds, Shells, and some of the more rare Plants of Dorsetshire; drawn up for the express purpose by the late excellent NatuNaturalist and benevolent Physician, Dr. Richard Pulteney, F. R. S. and F. L. S."

" As each Volume may be considered a complete and independent Work, so far as relates to the several Hundreds described in it; it is presumed that the Third and Fourth may be found interesting to many Gentlemen, "either resident in Donarrshire, or having Property in the County, who do not actually possess the First and Second; and more particularly so to those who have the original Edition of 1774, which the present one by no means supersedes, as, from the great increase of materials collected with indefatigable industry by Mr. Goncu, it contains more than double the Quantity both of Letterpress and Plates, and may therefore be considered, in some degree, a new Work, without which no Public Library, or Private Topographical Collection, can be complete.

P.S. Allow me, Mr. URBAN, to state to my Eriends in LEICESTER-SHIRE, that I have the fairest Prospect of completing the History of that County before Midsummer, having only Three Parishes at this time remaining to prepare for the press; and that any material Corrections in the former Parts will be thankfully received, if sont not later than the beginning of May.

J. N.

ARCHITECTURAL INNOVATION. No. CLIII.

(The Continuation of the Progress of Architecture is deferred.)

BING much amused this summer with the information that the Temple Church was under the hands of repairers, restorers, and beautifiers, I hastened to the spot on Sunday last, (Jan. 27) as the Church was then "opened" (as it it is called), for Divine Service. My curiosity was quickened, it being excited by the wish of some respectable friends that I should give my opinion on what professional operations had therein taken place.

After referring to my regular Survey of this Church in the year 1808, in its then state (Vol. LXXVIII. p. 997), I shall concisely state particulars, as follows:

West Front. Nothing done but oil painting the lower story, and yellow washing the upper ditto. Not one of the odious Wrenéan overlayings of door-ways, windows, entablature, and scroll-shores, discarded, in order to bring out to view the original decorations on the walls, as is yet to be Here I was much disappointed, as I expected to have seen something of this sort.

South Side. A few of the hovels crowding the line, pulled down; whereby the basement is on view, with part of some attached arches, &c. The rest of the uprights stand as in 1808; they have been yellow washed,

North Side and East Front still remain as in 1808; they have been yellow washed.

The boxes The Nave. Interior. biding the lower halves of the clusters of columns in the centre of the nave, taken away. The bases of these columus, consequently mutilated by such coverings, have been restored, not with an eye to the architecture of the Church, or to the various bases running round the circular side aile, but to some of Batty Langley's or Gibbs's Five Orders of Roman and Grecian Architecture. This masonic sinning is glaring in the hollow and fillet immediately proceeding from the shaft of the column. In the spandrels of the arches to the dado in side aile, are a succession of costumic heads; two of them modernised, by a very zealous copy from two cherubims heads, (Wrenčan school), on a murai monument, date 16 . ., stuck against the clusters at the South East turn of the The lower parts of the walls, columns, &c., oil painted, and the upper lines washed with stone colour, and grey tints. This tinting is the modern mode of finishing common apartments, stair-cases, &c. The three grand arches entering from the nave to the choir stopped up; the centre one by the organ (as in 1808), and the other two filled with lath and plaster, or some other the like mate-The three apertures for admission into the choir, left as in 1808.

What an excellent opportunity is here lost to give to this most admirative bir building its original scenic effect, whereby the lines might be on view uninterrupted from West to East! A monstrous Stentorian Organ that is performed upon, without due choral accompaniments, darkens and precludes communication from the lengthened sile, in one principal centrical part of the edifice; as doth an enormous and grotesque Wrenéan pulpit, from the eye of devotion, another important spot, anciently so arranged

selves having been altered and cased with modern decorations. Internally, the outline of the room to all appearance has not been treached upon; and those particular parts of the first construction yet visible are timber arches, portioning the length of the design into six large divisions: the rest of the framing for the open worked roof, appropriate to halls, is either destroyed or hid, as the space from arch to arch is filled with a frame of painted square panuels, coutaining flowers, in the style of 1760. The arches themselves tell the time of Henry VII. when, no doubt, the hall was erected. The original corbels from whence the arches sprung are also lost, or overlaid by the fantastic ornaments of James L's reign. The screen, notwithstanding the date 1680 embossed upon it, is evidently carpenter's work of the date 1760 also.

Immediately succeeding the West end of the Hall, is a most carious and uncommon construction of two stories of crypts, or arched chambers, in two livisions each; these are beyond a doubt in their style of work coeval the first speculation of the kind that has appeared from a certain quarter in the Public Prints. These restor rers may indeed hope for such a charming opportunity; but they can never seriously say to themselves, we shall reap a golden harvest in this way. The fallacy of the business may indeed be "found in a Vase" (a Roman utensil), or a nut-shell, but not explanatory drawings sufficient for such a professional enterprize : a Chest, or Chests (old English repositories for Rolls or Books, &c.) would have much better borne out the conceit, all know that working drawings needful on such an occasion would at least load an eight-horse waggon. But this "discovery" is a most ridiculous insinuation; for I presume there is not one Collector of Antiquities, who can produce the least architectural hint left by our ancestors towards aiding workmen in restoring the destroyed mutilated lines of Westminster Abbey, to say nothing of the absolute necessity of large and explicit outbacd drawings for such undertakings. J. Britton, some five or six years past, with with the Abbey work-people, announced, that they had obtained, somehow or other, all the original drawings for building Henry VII's chapel, which upon investigation turned out to be no more than two small wretched outlines of two compartments in the interior, scrawled, it is supposed, some 90 or 100 years back. As to the "reappearance of the Saints in the niches," this can mean no more than a series of fancy figures, done by some modern Sculptor, familiarized in the Pagan, Roman, and Grecian schools; but who, from the turn of thinking at this day, it cannot be expected would strike out any thing partaking of the superstitious costume, such as undoubtedly characterized the statues once occupying the said niches.

AN ARCHITECT.

Mr. Urban, Feb. 17.

THE following Arguments having relation to an important question now in agitation, which is also touched on in your last Magazine, I hope you will give them a permanent place in your Publication, though they have already appeared in a Provincial Newspaper.

Yours, &c. S. Y.

SIR JOHN SINCLAIR, AND HUSKISSON. It cannot be denied that one of the most important questions in Political Arithmetick which ever was agitated is the dispute regarding the excess and consequent depreciation of the paper currency of the Empire. The Report of the Bullion Committee has its strong advocates and its strong opponents: at the head of the former is Mr. Huskisson; of the latter, Sir. John Sinclair. It was not till yesterday that I saw either of their pamphlets, and at the same time the Review of both in the Quarterly Review for November (No. 8).—I happened to read the Review first; and laid it down with the impression that Sir John Sinclair's observations were among the most weak and ridiculous that were ever laid before the Publick. I yielded the more to this, because I already knew that the Baronet was not possessed of a good style; wanted accuracy of thought and compression of phrase; and was too much in the habit of putting forth je-June and indigested matter. I doubted still if it was not a right cause, which he had brought into contempt by his manner of treating it.

But what was my astonishment when I came to the pamphlet itself? I found that every passage extracted in the criticism had been garbled and perverted to an extent of which I know no other instance; and discovered it to be a production resulting from great knowledge and very comprehensive views, though deficient in elegance and precision of language.

What the object of the Reviewers may be in this most monstrous abuse of horse-play raillery I neither know nor care. Their work professed to commence on the basis of a necessary counterbalance to the democratic doctrines of the Edinburgh Criticks, promulgated with an ability which it required similar efforts to resist. But some of their own great encouragers have since, it seems, gone into violent opposition; and hence, perhaps, this change in themselves!

The pamphlet of Mr. Huskisson is very acute and very able. But I cannot admit it to be so triumphant and conclusive as he and his friends seem to feel it to be. In the first place he appears to take much too narrow a view of the subject; but even in establishing this narrow basis he takes assumption for proof; and if his foundation can be taken from him, or even brought into question, his whole superstructure must of course follow its fate.

The whole of his pamphlet is built on this, that the high price of Bullion is a proof of the depreciation of Bank Notes. He assumes it to be tantamount to a mathematical demonstration. Now, so far from a mathematical demonstration, this does appear to me, and to many others, to be an extremely doubtful point at least. Bullion seems like any other mercantile commodity, of which the price depends on the varying demand for it. The state of our trade, and the expenditure for our large armies and navies abroad, may have made the demand out of proportion to the supply, at a particular crisis; in which case the augmented price is caused by the scarcity of Bullion, not by the excess of Bank Notes. And here a question arises, whether, if they, who now are content with the substitute of Bank Notes, would not, without that substitute, raise this Bullion still higher by adding to the competition for it in the market?

An increase of the circulating medium to any extent is no proof of excess, in case the wealth of the Country has increased proportionally. Has it so increased in this Empire? I have a strong persuasion that it has. Wealth, and the representatives of wealth, whether coin or paper, must never be confounded. I mean, real wealth, population, manufactures, buildings, canals, shipping, commerce, agriculture, machinery. Can the vast increase, within thirteen years, of now pays double and treble his old rent, not because Paper is depreciated, but because Agriculture is improved, because his products are augmented; and the demand for them more keen. It is pretended that our Paper is depreciated a sucth; this surely will not account for double-and treble rents!

It is by our Financial System that we have been enabled to carry on for so many years the glorious and unexampled contest with the Great Scourge of Mankind at so incredible an expense a system which, if it was in part the consequence of our antecedent wealth, I suspect to have been equally the cause of our present wealth and strength.

It seems to be almost the sole secret by which we have supported without decay an Expenditure of which the tenth part would, 40 years ago, have created a National Bankinptey!

Does it not become us therefore to pause, before we are induced, by light Theorists and narrow Reasoners, to touch it? Is our National Prosperity, on the whole, great and progressive? If it be, let us rest on the sure test of practical wisdom, in defiance of the most subtle and plausible arguments!

For sentiments like these however (for found their way into this country?

Dr. Currie, in his Edition of the Works of Robert Burns (vol. 11. 2d edit. p. 176, note), speaks of "the beautiful Story of the Paria" being translated "in the Bee of Dr. Anderson." Qu. in which of the volumes of the Bee may that story he met with?

Dr. Johnson, in his Life of Pope (Murphy's Edition of Johnson's Works, vol. XI. p. 137), says, that in the "Memoirs of Scriblerus" "will be found particular Imitations of the History of M. Ouffle." Qu. what is the nature, and who was the writer, of that performance? and whese may a copy of it be procured? N.

PERMIT me to ask, Why England got the name of John Bull? Was it because the inhabitants loved Roast Beef, and taught their children to prefer it, as substantial food? Or was it that formerly there was something in the manners and external appearance of the inhabitants of England that led Foreigners to give the country so degrading a title?

James Hall.

METEOROLOGICAL JOURNAL, kept at CLAPTON, in Hackney, from the 16th of January to the 15th of February, 1811.

	Therm	ometer.	Baro	meter.	< 	i suri	Woother &c
Day of Month.	Max.	Min.	Max.	Min.	Ilyg.	Wind.	Weather, &e.
Jan. 16	38	31	30.06	29.88	1.12	W.	fair—cloudy [cloudy
E 17	51	58	29.82	29.75	2.3	S. W.	mistyand windy-rain,
18	41	31	29.96	29.80	1.21	S.WN.	overcast—clear
19	42	29	30.48	30.40	1.9	N.	clear
20	38	32	30.41	30-15	1.5	S.	foggy—clear & clouds
21	38	31	30.05	30.10	1.7	s. w.	fog-small rain
22	35	31	30.20	.30-20	1.7	S.	foggy
23	40	32	50/31	30.30	1.10	S. W.	misty dull day
24	40	31	30.50	30.47	1.9	N.	clear [clouds
25	37	26	30.54	30.51	1.9	E.	clouded-clear and
26	38	30	30.36	30.08	1.12	S. W.	white frost-cloudy
27	. 43	24	29.64	29.60	1.9	N. W.	clear and clouds
28	33	18	29.65	29.63	1.6	N. W.	clouded-clear
29	31	14	29.76	29 63	0.21	E.	misty
30	32	29	29.78	29.55	0.19	E.	fog-snow and wind
b 31	43	34	29 18	29.08	2.5	S.	small rain-windy
Feb. 1	45	36	29.43	29.29	1.16	S. S. W.	fair-rain&wind-fair
	45		29.68	29.55	1.15	E. S. E.	cloudy-clea. & clouds
. 2 3	46	30	29.90	29 60	1.14		showersclear&colouch
4	47	32	30.13	30.10	1-11		white frost-clear&clou.
4 5 6	40	39	30.05	29.72	1.11	8.	clear and clouds
6	50	45	29.65	29.52	1.15	3 S. W.	cloudy and calm-rain
7	50	39	29.82	29-60	1.9	s. w.	showers of hail & rain
O 8	50	- 39	29.74	29-58	2.6	s. w.	windy and cloudy
9	40	41	29.78	29.62	1.17		cloudy—fair
10	52	49	29.85	29.70	2.6	s. w.	foggy-small rain
11	53	46	29.55	29:37	1.21	s. w.	windy and small raim
12	49	34	29.34	29:30	1.16		windy—rain—clear
13	41	. 35	29.34	29.25	1.10	W. N.	clear, clouds, showers
. 14	44	33	29.68	29.21	1.9		clear & clouds—cloudy
15	39	37	29 80	29 15	1		misty-fair-rain

OBSERVATIONS.

Jan. 20. Cirri and Cirro-strati observed.

24. Evaporation since the 16th, 45°.

26. Cold increasing, although the wind was South-west; a white frost on the ground.

27. I observed an Arc of Cirro stratus to extend across the Zenith in the direction of the wind. Snow fell during the night.

Est O About OD M I absorbed a long H. I.

Feb. 2. About 9 P. M. I observed a Lunar Halo. I took the diameter of its area with a quadrant, which was about 40°.

3. Showery morning; towards evening I observed red-coloured Cirro-strati in an apparently calm region; while Fleecy-cumuli floated beneath them in the wind. The Cirro-strati refracted a fine red tint, while the Cumuli, passing under, and making the same angle with the Sun, appeared blackish.

4. White frost, succeeded by thaw. About 8 P. M. a Lunar Halo of about 40 diameter appeared for a few minutes during the passage of a Cirro-stratus before the Moon

5. Sky variously spotted, streaked and freckled with Cirro-stratus in the morning, and with Cirro-cumulus at night.

- 6. Temperature much increased. In the evening I observed a double Lunar Corona; that is, a small one within a larger one. I have observed that Coronæ as well as Halones are generally prognosticks of approaching rain, &c.
- 7. Cirrus, Cirro-stratus, and Cirro-cumulus precede showers of rain and hail.
- 8. Sky highly coloured at sun-rise; at night I observed, by the motion of the clouds, that there were two currents of air.
- 10. Frogs observed about. Thrush sings.
- 13. Hard shower of hail about noon.
- 14. Great rise of Barometer.

 Claston, Feb. 18, 1813.

THOMAS FORSTER.

. Repton Priory, from South West.

Mr. Undar, Nov. 13.

NCOURAGED by the ready admission which you have given in your Magazine, to the account of various Public Schools and Institutions, I request a place for a short description of Repton Priory, and the School new founded on its site.—

At so distant a period as the Saxon Heptarchy, Repton (or Responding us it was then called) is mentioned in the scanty Chronicles of the times, as we learn from the extracts preserved by Lelend, and given in his Collectanes. It was not only the Palace of the Saxon Monarchs of Mercia, but the seat of a noble Monadery of religious men and women, before the year 660; of which Palace, or Monastery, considerable foundations are discoverable, both in the Church-yard, we been made p, or vaults ch-yard. The planes, and in the year of Ranulph, d continued in till the Dimo-when it was found to be possessed of revenues to the amount of £107.18s. The site of the Priory, and its possessions in Repton, were granted to Thomas Thacker, esq. servant to Henry VIII. in whose family it continued till the year 1728, when, by the bequest of Miss Thacker, heiress to Gilbert Thacker, esq. the Priory estate in Repton was conveyed to the family of Burdett of Foremack, in which it still continues.

Sir John Port, of Etwall, Knight of the Bath (so created at the Coronation of Edward VI.) who was possessed, by marriage and inheritance, of great property in the counties of Stafford, Derby, and Lancaster, having lost his two sons at an early age, and being minded to bestow some part of his estates in charitable foundations for the repose of his soul, in the year 1556 devised to his executors, Sir Thomas Giffard, Richard Harpur, esquire, and others, certain estates in the counties of Derby and Lancaster; for the foundation of an Hospital at Etwall, and a Free Gram-Gunt. Mag. February, 1811.

mar School at Repton. These institutions were accordingly established after his death, in the year 1557, and continued by Queen Mary's licence, under the direction of the Harpur family, till the year 1621; when, by an agreement between Sir John Harpur on the one part, and the Earl of Huntingdon, Lord Stanhope, and Sir Thomas Gerard, bart, on the other, the three several descendants of Sir John Port's three daughters, the superintendance, after the death of Sir John Harpur; was conveyed to the right beirs of the Founder. By the Petition of the coheirs, the Hospital and School, in the year 1621, were made a Body Corporate, by the style and title of "The Master of Etwall Hospital, the Schoolmaster of Reptoo, Usbers, Poor Men, and Poor Scholars;" and, in consequence of that ectilement, the estates were conveyed by Sir John Harpur to the Corpora-tion, and in that body are now vested. The foundation, from the improved state of its sevennes, at present maintains a Master of the Hospital (in whom the power of receiving the rents, and paying the stipends, is vosted), a Master of the School, two Ushers, 16 Poor Men in the Hospital, and 19 Poor Scholars at Repton. The entire superintendance of the School and Hospital is hereditary in the families of the Earls of Chesterfield and Moira, and Sir William Gerard, the representatives and coheirs of Sir J. Port's three daughters, who have the power of regulating the Corporation, and electing the Master of the Hospital, Schoolmaster, and Ushers; but a grant of a fourth turn with them in the appointment only of Poor Men, and Poor Scholars, was made by the Charter to the family of Harpur of Calke.

The village of Repton is pleasantly situated in a valley, washed by a rapid trout-stream, that rises in the Pistern hills, about six miles distant Southward. At the Northern extremity of the village, on an elevation overlooking the adjacent country and river Trent, stands the Parish Church, of which a View is given in your vol. LXII. p. 409.

Adjoining to the Church, stand the remains of the Priory, now converted into a Grammar School, and houses for Masters. The entrance from the village village to the Monastery is through a gateway with a Pointed arch, into the School-yard (formerly called the Infirmary-yard); the Eastern side of which is occupied by a long range of with habitations at the building, Northern end for the School-master; and the Southern for the first Usher. In the middle is the School-room, ascended by a flight of steps at the South end, which was once the Hall, or Refectory, of the Priory. it was formerly lighted on each side by plain round-headed windows, in the Norman style, without mouldings or architrave, with narrow apertures out-, wardly, but inwardly more widely expanding. The Hall was supported by a row of massive round pillars, in the Saxon style, ornamented with capitals, carved in various patterns, evidently of very antient date, which formerly extended to the end of the Hall; but several were removed some years since, by alterations made in the first Usher's house.

The Dormitory was at the North end of the Hall, in which is remaining a small room, with a coved cieling of stone, in the Saxon style, and a carved key-stone in the centre. On the Eastern side of the Priory was placed the Cloister, the area of which is now converted into a garden, with some faint traces of apertures and doorways in the surrounding walls; one of these in the North-east corner opened from the Prior's lodge into the Cloister; the other on the East, into the Priory Church, which stood on the South side of the Cloisters, and, from the pillars now laid open, appears to have been an elegant structure, in the light florid style, that prevailed in the reign of Edward the Third.

At the West end of the Church is a square massive Tower, apparently of very antient date, now forming the entrance into the School, with marrow round-arched windows. Whether there was a corresponding Tower on the opposite side of the entrance to the Church, cannot now be ascertained, as much devastation has been made at the Western extremity of the The Priory Church was built in the form of a cross, with four large clustered pillars between the nave and choir; the lower part of three of which, about five feet high, arc still remaining. By admeasure-ment made from the remains, the Church appears to have extended 180 feet, and upwards, from West to East; the length of the transepts, from cross walls built on them, and ruin made of them, cannot be assertained.

them, cannot be ascertained. This structure was demolished in the beginning of Queen Mary's reign, by Mr. Thacker, as we are informed by Fuller, in his Church History, p. 358. In the adjoining paddock, inclosed on three sides by a strong stone wall, extending over several acres, are the foundations of other buildings belonging to the Priory. One vault only is remaining perfect; in which is a round-headed door-way, leading into the cloisters. At the Northern end of the Priory yard, on a deserted channel of the Trent, and appearing in the view through the trees, is a mansion, rebuilt by the Thackers about a century ago, upon the foundation of the Prior's lodge. The only unaltered part of the original building is a brick Tower, of the age of Henry the Sixth, which is to be ranked among the earliest specimens remaining, built with such materials as The lower room in it, bricks. now a kitchen, exhibits a cieling divided into square compartments, the intersections of which are ornamented with crests and badges of different Priors, carved in oak; one of these the rebus and initial letter of Overton, Prior in the reign of Henry the Sixth. In the windows are remaining several pieces of painted glass, all charged with the figure of an Eagle, the crest, perhaps, of some Prior or benefactor. The Prior's lodge, of late years, has been rented of Sir Francis Burdett, and appropriated to the residence of the Headmaster of the School.

That part of the Priory now remaining, and closely adjoining to the mansion-house, was sold by Mr. Thacker, in Philip and Mary's reign, to the executors of Sir John Port; and, with some of the old possessions of the Priory, appropriated to the advancement of learning; which, as was the case in several other religious houses, had, doubtless, some encouragement among the Canons at Repton; and which, by the care of the pious re-founder, has again taken root, and continued to flourish in the place, till the present time.

Yours, &c. Repronensis.

^{*} This word, as every body knows, is of doubtful interpretation; it being used of medicines in general, at least in the language of poetry, as also of colonys, balsams, cintments, philters, and magical potions.

[Cliss

feriut, which so many expositors, and even the translator Batteux, have not rightly apprehended. — Unquestionably it was well considered in Horacc here to make Trebatius (who speaks it in jest) deliver the seriously intended prophecies of his adversaries which had come to his knowledge, who could no otherwise give vent to their spleen at his intimacy with Mæcenas and other persons of the first rank, than by expressing their hopes, that it would prove of no long duration; and that he, precisely by that which rendered him so agreeable to these great men, by his wit and his satirical vein, would inadvertently ruin himself in their estimation, and fall the lower for having mounted so high. The best method of delivering these gentlemen so much concerned for his repose, from all anxiety, was, by shewing them, how calm and serene he himself could be amidst all their kind solicitudes.

– famosisque Lupo cooperto versibus?] It might not unreasonably, methinks, be presumed, that Horace in this dialogue, had likewise indirectly and very covertly his majores amicos in view, and by the exemplified relations that subsisted between Lucilius and his great friends C. Lælius and P. Scipio Æmilianus, or Africanus minor, intended to fortify those in which be stood to Mæcenas, P. Messala, Pollio, &c. by assuring them on 'his part in a modest but dignified, yet with regard to them in a no less delicate than flattering manner, once for all, that characters like theirs had never any thing to apprehend from a man like him. The example of Lucilius, to which he appeals, is here the more subservient to his design, as he in his own satires (agreeably to the demands of such a vast difference in the times) allowed himself much less liberty than his predecessor; who scrupled not to attack a person of such high consequence as Q. Cæcilius Metellus Macedonius, very scurrilously in his satires, and even to stigmatise Cornelius Lentulus Lupus, although (according to the scholiast) he was princeps senatus, in defamatory verses, — probably with the less restraint, as they were both enemies of his great patron and friend, Scipio.

Virtus Scipiadæ et mitis sapientia Læli.] I cannot think this line so flat as Warburton pronounces it to be in his annotations upon Pope's imitation of this satire; or that, as Baxter opines, it sayours of Ennius or Lucilius, and that Horace here incidentally ridicules the turgid style of those poets. Virtus Scipiadæ, sapientia Lælli, is a manner of speaking not unusual with our bard, being exactly of the same coinage with mens provide Reguli (Od. lib. iii. 5.) virtus Catonis (Od. iii. 21.) acumen Stertinii (Epist. i. 12.) and innumerable precedents for it are to be found in Homer, whom Horace seems herein to have followed. mode of speech, however, is here adopted with the greater propriety, since the Romans, at least throughout the seventh century of their city, had no man to produce, who, in all that they comprehended under the word virtus, had come nearer to perfection than this Scipio; and since Lælius, even during his life-time, had, by the tacit consent of his countrymen, obtained the surname Sapiens*. know that even Scipio's truegreatness, and the mild wisdom of Lælius, prevented them not, on privately quitting the theatre, from laying aside the dignity of their characters; and they thought themselves neither too great nor too wise sometimes to unbend their minds with him, and trifle away the time till the cabbage on the fire was ready." This translation of the passage, I conceive, would suit the poet's real meaning, and deliver him from the groundless censures of the two Biffish critics. — But ah! what god, or god-begotten, will be able to redeem him from another far more horrible imputation? from a crime, which in the eyes of a word-catcher is sufficient to efface the most conspicuous merits of an author; in a word, from the irremissible sin of having said, at two several times, Scipiades for Scipionides, which the great Priscianus had already alleged against him, although indeed Lucilius, Lucre-or the thousand by any dabbler in poetry. The long lapse of time to be sure, has made us tolerant to all these grammatical heresies: but we may imagine how the Bavii and Mævii, the Fannii, and Tigelin, the Orbiln and Scribonii, must have carped at him during his life, while antiquity had yet drawn no nimbus round his head.

^{*} Sunt ista vera, Læli; nec enim melior vir fuit Africano nec clarior; sed existimare debes, omnium oculos in te esse conjectos; unum te sapientem et appellant et existimant; non solum natura et moribus, verum etiam studio et doctrina, nec sicut vulgus, end ut eruditi solent appellare sapientem, &c. Cicero de Amicitià, cap. ii.

Infra Lucili censum.] "Most assuredly both in genius and in hirth, far beneath Lucilius, yet, &c." So Francis likewise has well translated census by Jirth.

What though with great Lucilius I disclaim All saucy rivalship of birth or fame, &c.

They were nearly of like import in the age of Lucilius; and Lucilius was in fact not only a Roman knight by birth, but, in behalf of his sister, great uncle to Pompeius Magnus. It is probable that the furegoing nestrum me-lieris utroque may relate simply to that circumstance.

Equidem nikil his defringere possum.] The MSS here leave it entirebe to imagine, that Trebatius, preserving the metaphor employed by Ho-whom a man was attacked in satirical verses in his civil honour and reputation was liable to an action at law, injuriarum, for damages; the plamtiff, however, must be unimpeachable of any notorious acts, infamia juris et facti. Lucilius happened to be in a singular predicament. Being publicly insulted by name from the stage by a dramatist, he brought against him a suit at law for it by an action for damages: but the prettor C. Calius acquitted the dramatist; probably because he had done no more to the satirist, than what the latter took the liberty of doing to all the world. - The witty conceit of taking the expression male carmina for bad verses, would have been but a flimsy evasion, if Horace could not have added, și quis opprobriis dignum laceraverit, integer inse: thus, however, he decides in three lines the whole attair. I allow it, if one makes mala carmina, says he; but if he have only fallen foul of such as are descriving of disgrace, if he himself lives irreproachably, and if his verses moreover are good, and even approved of by Cæsar: how will it then fare with the complainant? — To conclude, it cannot be denied, that the two words, laudatus Cæsure, here must have produced a sort of magical effect; it being just as if the poet presented himself to his adversaries clad in the impenetrable armour of Achilles and covered with the terrific ægis. Accordingly it appears that thenceforward he had no Arther attacks from that quarter. — I read with Bentley laceraverit instead of the usual latraverit. His arguments amount to a demonstration, and are not at all shaken by Baxter's and Gesner's flat contradictions.

Solventur risu tabulæ, tu missus abibis. "Then the process is brought to a laughable termination, and thou mayst walk off discharged." This is all that I can make of the sentence, confessing at the same time, that I have but a faint apprehension of it. That in the case which Horace, immediately before supposes, so violent a burst of laughter arose, that the roof of the court-house, or the bench whereon the judges sat, had nearly gone to pieces, (as a scholiast thinks) bcither Horace nor Trebatius can have Such an hyperbole might posbibly have been allowed to pass from a jester in a Plautinian comedy; but here it could not by any means be justified. Gemer says: cogitabam, tabulas esse tabellas judiciarias, in quibus scribi fingat sententias ludicres et hilares. — How the learned critic, by the word solvers could be led to this idea, is more inexplicable to me than the problem itself; however, this unsuccessful attempt emboldens me to hazard another, the sufficiency whereof may be determined by those who have a seat and vote in trials of such causes. Every judge, as is well known, on proceeding to give sentence on a trial at law, had three tablets delivered to him: the one marked with A (absolvo), another with C (condemna), the third with N.L. (non liquet). Now, may not solventur risk $tobul \alpha$, be as much as to say: the judges with laughing let the tablets drop out of their hands? However extraordinary this metaphor may be, it would certainly not be more so, than the synecdoche, which Cruquius adopts, when he says, that tabular has here the same signification as judicium.

ſ..

Ormond-street.

W.T.

Mr. Urban, Bristol, Jan. 28.

THE Review of my Poems in your Magazine for October, was very different in substance and spirit from the superficial, skimming comment, the "faint, damning praise," or the searching, witty malignity, by which they who exercise the functions of periodical critics have sometimes chosen to signalize their indolence or their ill-nature. To no part of the Review do 1 consider myself more really indebted, than to that in which the writer, with a liberal candour of construction that lends a grace to rebuke, urges his objections to a particular passage, in a style of reasoning equally sound and eloquent. That the impression conveyed by this pagsage is not confined to the Reviewer, appears from an excellent letter in December last on the indispensable duty of attending public worship. — The author appears to regard the verses in question as justifying an imputation of prosclytism to the modern philosophy; by which, I suppose, is meant the deistical philosophy, or pure, natural religion, professed by Breath'd from a gloomy spirit, rise to Him Who spread this verdure o'er the fields, who bade [s.m.; These violets spring, and lighted up the Be mine with silence of the heart to praise His mercies, and adore his name of love.

Now, I readily admit that in these lines there is a confusion of thought, arising from the want of steadily contemplating and separating the ideas that presented themselves, and arranging them in the connexion necessary to give clearness and precision to their meaning. " The fanatic groans breath'd from a gloomy spirit" have no affinity to the prayers chanted or rather gabbled, by the choristers. They belong to a different and more enclancholy superstition. But the whole passage in its present crude order seems to throw a slight on Church worship in general. The leading idea in my mind was, that outward observances were of none effect, if unaccompanied by the religion of the heart - and I meant to illustrate this prin-walks of a forest did not suggest the idea of the primutive Gothic architecture (introduced, not by the Goths but by the latter Romans, at the time of the Gothic invasion of Italy) is evident from the fact, that the early Gothic (called also the Saxon from its adoption by the Anglo-Saxons, but more properly the Roman) and the Norman architecture, which differed from it only in magnitude, could not be said to bear any resemblance whatever in the form of its round-headed arches, and the massive rotundity of its pillars, to the pointed intersections of an avenue of trees. It was at a later period that the vast round columa was split into slender shafts, the arch pointed, and the capitals and roofs carved with foliage. These innovations were gradual; and the new style (called by some the Saracenic, for no better reason than the former was styled Gothic; namely, because it arose at the time of the Crusades) is, I think, well expressed by the characteristic racteristic term affixed to it by Warton, of the florid, or ornamented, Gothic.

To return to the verses: I trust it will appear that neither allusion was levelled at the general institution of social worship, of whose reasonable necessity, divine authority, and apostolic example, every man must be fully convinced, who studies with attention the Gospel history and the early annals of the primitive Christian Church.

The lines are not as they originally stood: they were altered in that not unusual mood of restless dissatisfaction, which though it often leads to the amendment of a bad passage, no less frequently tempts a writer to refine away all the merit of a good one. I shall transcribe the original passage from the fifth volume of Dr. Aikin's Athenæum; in which the verses were first printed; and it is my intention to restore it in the event of a second edition of the Poems.

O native Isle belov'd! by sounding waves Bosom'd remote, and hallow'd from the world!

The spirit meek of sanctity now walks
Thy flowery meadows, and thy thickets green.

I love thy pieus reverence of the day; It whispers hope; it breathes the secret pledge

Of preservation, while Earth's kingdoms fall.

I love thy pure and simple rite: there are Who love thee not: there are who barb'rous deem [cern

Thy manliest virtues, and whose eyes dis-In this thy cheerful holiness, a gloom Sullen and sad: There is no sullen gloom, O England, in thy Sabbaths! gayer climes [sports, May smile derision: leave them to their Their masones, and blasphemous idola-

Their masques, and blasphemous idolatries:

Be this thy stedfast anchor: be this day
No common festival; no tide profane
Of dance and feast, and revelry and song.
Be thine the joy of spiritual things,
Deep-felt, serene; the joy Religion loves.
CHARLES A. ELTON.

Mr. Urban,

Jan. 14.

CIVE me leave to solicit a column in your next Number for the insertion of Decker's description of the human head, which I have transcribed from his Gul's Hornz-Booke, a publication of considerable rarity, abounding in allusions to the follies and manners of his day, and written in a style of pleasant irony, well adapted to the subject chosen by the author, which was the instruction and reproof of the young gallants in the early part of the seventeenth century.

"The Head is a house built for Reason to dwell in, and thus is the tenement framed. The two Eyes are the glasse windows at which light disperses itself into every roome, having goodly pent-houses of haire to overshadow them, As for the Nose, tho some (most iniuriously and improperly) make it serve for an Indian chimney, yet surely it is rightly a bridge with two arches, under which are neat passages to convey as well perfumes to aire and sweeten every chamber, as to carry away all noisome filth that is swept out of uncleane corners. The cherry Lippes open like the new painted gates of a lord mayor's house to take in provision. The Tongue is a bell, hanging just under the middle of the roofe; and lest it should be rung out too deepe (as sometimes it is when women have a peale) whereas it was cast by the first Founder, but onely to tole softly; there are two even rowes of ivory pegs (like pales) set to keep it in. The Eares are two Musique roomes, into which as well good sounds as had descend downe two narrow paire of staires, that for all the world have crooked windings like those that lead to the top of Powles steeple; and, because when the tunes are once gotten in, they should not too quickly slip out, all the walls of both places are plaistered with yellow wax round about them. Now, as the fairest lodging, tho it be furnisht with walles, chimneys, chambers, and all other parts of architecture, yet if the seeling be wanting, it stands subject to raine, and so consequently to ruine: so would this goodly palace, which we have moddeld out unto you, bee but a cold and bald habitation, were not the top of it rarely covered. Nature, therefore, has plaid the tyler, and given it a most curious covering, or (to speake more properly) she has thatcht it all over, and that thatching is haire."

Yours, &c. P. B.

Mr. URBAN, Bedford Place,
Jan. 15.

It is one of the characteristics of the present enlightened age, that the publick are always ready to pay a proper tribute of respect to the memory of departed excellence. If this be due to Poets, Warriors, and Statesmen, how infinitely stronger is the claim for those who have passed a long life in one uniform series of active virtue and benevolence!

, of his left foot, and feeds himself in the like manner with a spoon.

The above account has been transmitted from Ireland, and its accuracy may be depended on.

THE NORTHUMBERLAND HOUSEHOLD BOOK. Continued from Vol. LXXX. Part II. p. 219.

P. 103. My Lord's Boord-end. In the houses of our antient Nobility they dined at long tables. Lord and his principal guests sat at the upper end of the first table in the Great Chamber, which was therefore called The Lord's Board End; the Officers of his Household, and interior guests, at long tables below in the hall. In the middle of each table stood a great salt-cellar; and, as particular care was taken to place the guests according to their rank, it became a mark of distinction whether a person sat above or below the sait. and the following section, which relate to the order of serving up the victuals, will be much illustrated by the following memoir:

An Account how the Earl of Worcester lived at Ragiand Castle before the Civil Wars. (1641.)

"At eleven o'clock the Castle-gates were shut, and the tables laid: two in the Dining-room; three in the Hall; one in Mrs. Watson's apartment, where the Chaplains cat, Sir Toby Matthews being the first. [This was probably the noted Sir Toby Matthews, enumerated among Lord Orford's Painters, who wrote the famous character of Lucy Piercy, Countess of Carlisle, printed by Fenton in his notes on Walter's Poems.— He was son of an Archbishop of York; but, turning Papist, had probably accepted the place of Chaplain in this great Earl's family, who was a Roman Catholic.] Two in the House-keeper's room for the Ladies' Women. The Earl came into the Dining-room attended by his Gentlemen. As soon as he was seated, Sir Ralph Blackstone, Steward of the House, retired: The Comptroller, Mr. Holland, attended with his Staff; as did the Sewer, Mr. Blackburn; my Lady's Gentleman-Usher, Mr. Harcourt; my Lord's Gentlemen of the Chamber, Mr. Morgan and Mr. Fox, with the Daily Waiters, who were gentlemen worth from two to seven hundred pounds a year, bred up in the Castle. At the first table sate the Noble family, and such of the Nobility as came there. At the second table in the Dining-room sate Knights, and other honourable Gentiemen, attended by footmen. In the Hall, at the first table, sat Sir Raiph Blackstone, Steward, the Comptroffer. the Secretary, the Master of the Horse. the Master of the Fish-ponds, my Lord Herbert's Preceptor, with such Gentlemen as came there under the degree of a Knight, attended by footmen, and plentifully served with wine. At the second table in the Hall (served from my Lord's table, and with other hot meat) sate the Sewer, with the Gentlemen-waiters and Pages, to the number of twenty-four. At the third table in the Hall sate the Clerk of the Kitchen, with the Yeomen Officers of the House, &c. &c."

Then follows a list of the Officers of the Household, ending with footmen, grooms, and other menial servants, to the number of 150. — Some of these footmen were brewers and bakers.

P. 104.] In looking over the list of birds and fowls which are enumerated in the XIXth section we find that Cranes, which are now judged to have forsaken the island (Pennant's British Zoology), were then almost as common as the Heron and Heron-sew. Wypes are now called Lapwings; Wipa is still the Swedish name. The Term is the Scu-Swallow. In the list of birds here served up to the table are many towls which are now discarded, as little better than rank carrion; as, for instance, "Item, - It is thought good that Seegulles be hade for my Lorde's owne mees, and non other, so they be good, and in season, and at jd. a pece, or j d. ob. at mostc."

P. 114.] By way of supplement to the warrants for Deer, may not improperly be added from an antient Inquisition, - "An Account of all Deer in the Parks and Forests in the North, belonging to the Earl of Northumberland, taken in the IVth year of Henry VIII." (1512.) The names of the parks, and the number in each, are specified. They amount to. In Northumberland, 4 parks, 1 forest, 1912. Yorshire, 8 parks, 1 wood, 1896. Cumberland, 4 parks, 3 places for Fallow and Red Deer, 1763, Total then bigger may mean more impregnated with big.

557 L

P. 220. William Worme, my Cofferer and General Receyvour. This William Worme, who is herein vested with such great trusts, and whose name occurs before so familiarly as to be used instead of his office (p. 56), continued to be employed under the wixth Earl of Northumberland, when he had the still more important post of Earl's Treasurer. At length he fell under a suspicion of treachery, and of betraying his master to Cardinal Wolsey, who appears to have treated that young Lord in a very arbitrary and imperious manner. lu a letter written by this sixth Earl of Northumberland (son of the Author of our Household-Book) he mentions a very particular instance of the Cardinal's tyranny, in seizing upon the furniture of his Father's Chapel, particularly the fine Service-books, and applying them to his own use. As this letter favour with the King, that he admitted him sometime to be his bedfellow; in whose fidelity the King reposed much trust." Vide Chron, sub an, 1415.

" Bedfellow, After my moste harti recomendation: Thys Monday the iii off August I reseved by my servanut lefters from yow beryng datt the xxth day off July, delyveryd unto hym the sayme day at the Kynges town of Newcastell: wher in I do perseaysf my Lord Cardenalls pleasons ys to have such Boks as was in the Chapell of my lat Lord and Ffayther (wos soll Jhu pardon). To the accomplyshement of which, at your desyer, I am conflormable, notwithstanding I trust to be able ons to set up a Chapel off myne owne. But I pray God he may look better upon mee than he dothe. But methynke I have lost verry moche, ponderynge yt ys no better regardyd: the occanon wher off he shal persayff. - Fyrst, the long lycug lyeng off my Tressorer *, with Hys very hasty and unkynd words unto hym, not on my parte desservyd. — Also the news off Mr. Manyng, the which is blon obroud over all Yorksher, that neyther by the Kyng † nor by my Lord Cardenall I am regardyd: And that he wil tel me at my metyng with him, when I come into Yorksher: which shal be wythyn thys month, God wyllynge; but I ffer my wordes to Mr. Manyng shal displeas my Lord; for I will be no Ward. — Also, Bedfellow, the payns I tayk and hav taykyn sens my comyng hether, are not better regardyd: but by a fflatterynge Byshope off Car'ell [Carlisle] and that fals Worm ‡, shall be broth [brought] to the messery and carffulness that I am in: and in such slanders, that now, and my Lord Cardenall wold, he cannott bring me howth [out] ther off.

I shall wyth all sped send up your letters with the Books unto my Lordes Grace; as to say, iiij Antestonars &, such as I thynk wer not seene a gret wyll; v Gralls; an Ordeorly; a Manuall; viijth Prossessioners. And sfor all the residew, they not worth the sendyng, nor ever was occupyed in my Lord's Chapell. And also I shall wryt at this time as ye have wyllyd me.

"Yff my Lord's Grace wyll be so good Lord unto me as to gyff me lychens [licence] to putt Will. Worme wythyn a Castell off myn off Anwyk in assurty, unto the tyme he hav accomptyd ffor more mony rec'd than I everrec'd; I shall gyff his Grace ijcli. and a Benyffis off a C. worth unto his Colleyg ||, with such other thynges resservyd as his [Grace] shall desyre; but unto such time as myne Awditors hayth takyn accompt off him: Wherin, good Bedfellow, do your best, ffor els he shall put us to send myselff, as at owr meetyng I shall show you.

"And also gyff secuer credens unto this Berer, whom I assur yow I have ffonddon a mervellous honest man, as ever I ffownd in my lyff.

"In hast at my Monestary off Hul Park the iij day off August, in the owne hand off

Yours most assured.

H, Northumberland.

To my bedfellow Arundell."

I know not whether the above offer was accepted, or the said William Worme committed to durance in Alnwick Castle; but there is a tradition in the place, that an Auditorwas formerly confined in the dungeon under one of the towers till he could make up his accounts to his Lord's satisfaction.

(To be continued,)

Mr. Urban, Birmingham, Jan. 24.

BEG to offer an elucidation of the antient Scal found at Redwick in Monmouthshire, and engraved in the second part of your last vol. p. 617, from the communication of J. W. By favour of that ingenious Correspondent, I have obtained an impression of it; with which your Engraving perfectly agrees, except in the fourth letter, which, in the original, has a somewhat longer tail, and is clearly intended for a Y. The legend is doubtless Norman, or old French, and may be thus read:

IE SUY SEL D'AMUR LEL.

Conceiving the last word to be the same as loial or laiel, the whole may be translated (though at the loss of the charming jingle), lam the seal of the charming jingle), lam the seal of true love: this being allowed, it will naturally follow that the two pairs of Birds in the device are Doves, the usual emblem of Constancy, and correspondent with the sentiment of the circumscription.

Its date may be referred to the time of Edward I. or the preceding Reign; as I conjecture from comparing it with Seals appended to deeds of that æra.

Yours, &c. Wm. Hamper.

Mr. URBAN, Coventry, Jan. 25.

I STRONGLY suspect that the Portrait engraved for Mr. Dallaway's Heraldic Enquiries 1793, and there called Sir William Dugdale, is in fact the Portrait of his Son Sir John Dugdale.

^{*} His long continuance with the Cardinal.

[†] He had probably disobliged the King by his attachment to Anne Bullen.

[‡] He mentions this William Worme in a former letter, as the person who betrayed him.

[§] These terms will be explained hereafter.

^{||} The College which Wolsey had new-. ly founded at Oxford, originally "Cardipal College," now "Christ Church College."

represented in Mr. Dallaway's picture perfectly well agree with Sir John D. at this period; and, when it is recollected that the Portrait was presented to the College of Arms by Sir William Skeffington, a descendant of Thomas Skeffington, Esq. who married one of Sir John Dugdale's daughters, I think there will remain little cause for hesitation in pronouncing the Portrait to be that of Sir John and not Sir William Dugdale.

S.

Mr. URBAN, Napton Vicarage, Aug. 24, 1810.

THE progress in the building of the Free Church of Birmingham is suspended, on account of the pecuniary Fund being exhausted; and a Letter soliciting additional Subscriptions has been sent by the Trustees to the Nobility, Gentry, and Clergy of the neighbourhood. It has for many years past been regretted by the Friends of the Betablished Church, that the contributions by Briefs for rebuilding those sacred edifices which the pious zeal of our Ancestors erected for the worship of God, are,

Total of Patent Charges Salary for 9986 Briefs Additional Salary for London	249	13	6 0 0
•	330	16	6
	614 330		_
Clear Collection	283	16	3
Collections		. 99	86
Total number of Briefs .	. :	104	89

From this statement it appears, that nearly half of the sum collected is paid in fees of office. If a compensation were made by the Government to the individuals receiving those Fees, I would suggest that a Circular Letter be written (instead of the Brief) under the authority of the Bishop of the Diocese in which the Church is required to be erected (after baving adopted the same measures to ascertain the expence which is now resorted to by employing a Surveyor), and forwarded, post free, to the Minister of every Parish in the kingdom.

This Letter communicated by him to a Vestry, stating that the money subscribed would be transmitted to the Parish about to rebuild their Church or erect an additional one, would call forth the pecuniary aid of many Friends of the Established Church who now withhold it on similar applications by Briefs, in consequence of the excessive deductions which are made from their contribution (as appears by the above statement), and in some instances so small as to leave very little for the good purpose for which the Brief was granted.

A Brief was granted about sixty years ago for repairing the Church in the Parish in which the Writer resides; the collection, as appears by the account of one of the Trustees, was about 5001.; and the sum paid to the Parish, after deducting Fees, &c. 1801.

If there are 10,000 Parishes in England, may it not be reasonably calculated that as many pounds would be collected on each well-grounded cause of application? and might not the overplus money be appropriated to the increase of Small Livings, in conjunction with the sum lately voted by Parliament for the same purpose under the directions of the Governors of Queen Anne's Bounty?

T. R. BROMFIELD.

Mr. URBAN, Feb. 4.

A S the Rev. Mr. Shaw did not live to complete his History of Staffordshire, and the hundred of Pirchill was not published by him; I take the liberty of offering the following particulars respecting the Parish of Woolstanton, for insertion in your pages. I could considerably enlarge upon the description here sent; but by entering into farther detail, my letter, by reason of its great length, would become inadmissible in your Miscellany.

Yours, &c. UU-S.

The Parish of Woolstanton is situate in the North division of the hundred of Pirehill, in the county of Stafford; and on the South side it adjoins the parish of Newcastle under Line. It has two principal divisions, termed the North and the South side.

The North Side comprehends the townships of Chell, Wedgwood, Brieryhurst, Stadmonslow, Thursfield, Oldcote, Ravenscliff or Ranscliff, and Tunstall.

The South Side comprises Woolstanton, Knutton, Chesterton, and Chatterley.

The length of the parish may be about six miles, the average breadth not quite two. The population, I imagine, may be stated at not less than. 5000; the return in 1801 being 4679. Several respectable Manufactories of earthen-ware, china, &c. are established on the North side; particularly in the township of Tunstall: and in the South side near to Newcastie, on the road from thence to Chesterton, is a cotton-work, which, from an inscription on the front, appears to have been erected in 1797; and which employs a great number of hands.

Clay, Iron, Stone, and Coal, abound in various parts. The principal brick and tile-works are at Chesterton and Tunstall; whence the proprietors frequently send their tiles, pipes, &c. to a considerable distance; being able to execute distant orders upon reasonable terms, by means of Water-carriage. The Grand Trunk Canal * passes a

^{*} The following extract respecting this Canal may not be unacceptable to some of your Readers: "This county (Stafford) is famous for its Potteries, and for its Canal, Grand Trunk or Staffordshire Canal; a work begun in 1776, under the direction of Mr. Brindley, in order to form a communication between the Mersey and the Trent, and, in course, between the Irish Sea and the German Ocean. Its length is 92 miles; namely, 31 miles on the North side, from Harecastle Hill, where it was begun, to the Duke of Bridgewater's Canal at Preston on the Hill in Cheshire, and 61 miles from the South side of the hill to Wildon Ferry in Derbyshire, where it communicates with the Trent. To effect this work, 40 locks were constructed on the South side, there being 316 feet fall. On the North side there is only 1 lock, which is near Middlewich, and is 14 feet wide. The Canal is 29 feet broad at the top, 26 at the bottom, and the depth four feet and a half. It is carried over the river Dove, in an aqueduct of 23 arches, and the ground is raised above a mile, to a considerable height: it is also carried over the Trent by an aqueduct of 6 arches. At Harecastle Hill (in Woolstanton Parish), it is conveyed under ground 2880 yards; at Barton in Cheshire, a subterraneous passage is effected of 560 yards in extent; and, in the same neighbourhood, another of 350; at Preston on the Hill, where it BELOL

Ridge Tiles, about 6rl. each.

From the fluctuating prices of almost every article, perhaps in the course of thirty or forty years the then current price may afford a striking contrast to the above statement!

Three cubical yards of clay are considered sufficient to make 1000 bricks; and 2s. or 2s. 6d. per thousand, a fair mine-rent; so that, when a Proprietor knows the extent and thickness of a bed of clay, he may hence form a tolerably accurate idea of its real value.

Coal differs in quality, thickness, and inclination; some strata burn dull, and leave a considerable residue of ashes, others clear, with a quick consumption; the thickness is from extent, is diverted from its usual course; and the car is thrown out of the channel, from whence the water has been turned off, upon the adjoining banks; where it remains till dry. Sometimes small pits or ponds are made on the adjoining banks, and the car is scooped from the bottom of the channel, and thrown into them, without diverting the course of the water.

When it is sufficiently dry, it is sold at the rate of one guines per cartload.

Iron Ore is smelted near Golden Hill in the North side, and at Apedale in the South side of this parish; at the latter place is established a respectable foundery; and oftentimes thirty tons of iron is there smelted weekly.

The Agriculture of this country has of late years been considerably im-joins the Duke's Canal, it passes under ground 1241 yards. From the neighbourhood of Stafford, a branch is made from this Canal, to run near Wolverhampton, and to join the Severn near Bewdley; from this again two other branches are carried, one to Birmingham, the other to Worcester. Mr. Brindley died in 1772, and left this Canal to be Saished by his brother-in-law, Mr. Henshall, who completed it in 1777.

proved

proved by the establishment of Limekilns on the banks of the Canals: the lime-stone is conveyed by water, from the quarries in or on the confines of Derbyshire, to these kilns, where it is burnt, and from whence the farmers are supplied.

Land, owing to the improved and improving state of Agriculture, as well as to the great population in this and the adjoining parishes, is an article of great and increasing value. The highest price given for a quantity together which I have heard of is 1201. per acre; and for the purpose of building upon, it is frequently sold at 2s. and 2s. 6d. the square yard. I have heard of 5s. being given in particular situations.

THE CHURCH.

Woolstanton Church is an antient stone building, situate about a mile from Newcastle, on the road from thence to Burslem and other parts of the Pottery. It consists of a tower and spire, which is a conspicuous object to the country around; a nave, side ailes, with a small South porch, and a chancel. The nave and ailes are embattled. The tower is situate on the side of the North aile at the East end. It contains a clock, and six bells. The bells formerly belonged to the parish of Trentham; and are thus inscribed, in capital letters:

- 1. "Abr: Rudhall cast us all. 1714."
- 2. "Richd. Marlow, Wm. Hall, Ch. Wardens. A. R. 1714."
- 5. "Jeffrey Williams, A. M. Minister. A. R. 1714."
- 4. "George Plaxton, Rector of Berwik in Elmet. 1714."
- 5. "Richd. Asburie of this Town, Blacksmith, gave me in 1623. Recast, 1714."
- 6. "John Lord Gower. Kath: Lady Dowager Gower. 1714."

On the East side of the tower is a modern built VESTRY ROOM; wherein parish meetings are held, and business transacted.

In the interior of the Church, the Nave is separated from the ailes by four pointed arches on each side, supported on plain pillars: it also communicates with the Chancel at the East end through a pointed arch, over which is a painting of the King's arms, and two tables containing the Lord's Prayer, Belief, and Ten Commandments; below which are two Tables of Benefactions.

First Table.

"BENEFACTIONS to the Parish of Wooz-STANTON.

Queen Elizabeth of famous memory, late Queen of England, left Five Pounds yearly for ever, to be disposed of among the Poor Householders of the Parish of Woolstanton; which said sum is charged upon the Corn Tithes of the said Parish.

Mrs. Edward Unwyn, late of Harding's Wood, gave unto the poorest Househelders of the Parish of Woolstanton, that are no beggars, upon every Good Friday, the sum of Thirty Shillings amongst twenty of them.

Mr. Dale, late of Mowle, left Three Shillings yearly for ever for and towards the Repair of the Parish Church of Woolstanton.

William Abnett, late of Audley, Geut. left Four Shillings to be paid yearly, out of a Field at Winbrooke, called Up Smith-Hill, to be dealt in Groat Loaves by the Church Officers of Woolstanton, on Good Friday for ever, to Twelve Poor Householders.

John Cowell, late of Knutton, gave unto the Poor Householders of Chesterton and Knutton, Thirty-two Shillings yearly for ever; and also to the South side of Woolstanton Parish the sum of Twenty Pounds, to set Poor Children Apprentice.

The Honourable Lady Frances Noel gave one large Silver Cup and a large Silver Salver to the Parish Church of Woolstanton, for the Communion Service.

John Turmore, late of Woolstanton, gave the sum of Forty Pounds, the interest to be paid yearly for the use and benefit of the Poor Children of Woolstanton aforesaid, to keep them to school or buy books.

Jane Brett, widow of Edward Brett, Esq. of Dimsdale, in the Parish of Woolstanton, gave to the Poor of the South side of the said Parish, Twenty Shillings yearly for ever, to be dealt in Groat Loaves upon the next Sunday to the Seventeenth of February; which said sum is charged upon Little Dimsdale estate.

Ralph Bagnall, late of Woolstanton, gave to the Poor of the Township of Woolstanton, Ten Shillings; to be paid yearly in Bread, and to be distributed, and given in the Parish Church of Woolstanton aforesaid, by the Person that shall inherit his estate for the time being, upon every Good Friday and Christmas Day."

SECOND TABLE.

"Mrs. Adderley, late of Blake Hall in this County, left by her last Will and Testament, the sum of Fifty Shillings per Annum to the Poor Householders in Tunstall, which is charged upon certain Lands in the Parish of Burslem.

Robert Hulme, late of Sandbach in the County of Chester, Physitian, left by his last Will and Testament, an Estate in Odd pursuits. I cannot agree at all in opinion, that his being appointed to the rank of Lieutenaut-General would be no hardship on the service': I think, on the contrary, his return to the Service, and his subsequent speedy attainment of his present rank and situation ought to be a matter of selfcongratulation to the General; and that his promotion to any superior situation would be a peculiar injustice to the Army, that they would all feel, and that the heads of our Military department could never think of countenancing. The business at Buenos Ayres, and the affair at Coa, have afforded a variety of opinions among the warmest wishers to the prosperity of the British arms. Your Correspondent, in wishing to establish the fame of his Hero, and by specifying his midnight labours in tactical knowledge, has implied an invidious comparison.

Rhode,

GERT. MAG. February, 1811.

A Syou have lately indulged us with a beautiful View of the West Front of Lichfield Cathedral, and formerly with a view of the Church of Hanbury, the living of which is annexed to that See, it puts me in mind of a favour I have long had to beg of some of your contributors, of being informed what issue Dr. Wm. Overton left, who was Bishop there from 1580 to 1609, the time of his death.

Mr. Lodge, in his " Illustrations of British History," notes the birth of the Bishop 1525; and from his advanced age I fully expected to have found, either at Lichfield or in London, a Will, which I have made several searches for without success. The Will of bishop Barlow, whose five daughters were all married to Bishops, one of which was Overlon, affords me no information. The Will of Agnes, 1603, who directs her body to be buried by her late husband John Overton, in the church of Hanbury, induces me to think he might be a son of the Bishop. The Will of Christopher Overton, 1604, the Bishop's shop's nephew, mentions his Cozens Edward and William Overton; but, as the Bishop had several Brothers, they might also be his Nephews. His Mother's Will, 1540, who died a widow, is too early to serve me. By mentioning something farther of his family, it may better aid, perhaps, in serving me. The Bishop's father was Guthlake Overton, one of the Auditers to Henry VIII. He is mentioned by Mr. Lysons, in his "Environs of London:" also occurs in the Heralds' Visitations of Hunts 1575, and in an Inquisition 1596. The Heralds describe him of Swineshead, Lincoln, being the son of Thomas, and grandson of William, who appears by the office Post mortem to have died Jan. 2, 1487, seised of lands in Swineshead, Wigtoff, Milton, and Overton Plane, which last probably might be the antient inheritance of the family. Christian name of Guthlake, perhaps, may imply that the Overtons that appear of Croyland Abbey were ancestors of the Bishop's father Guthlake. The Bishop's brothers were Edward, John, Anthony, and Richard; probably Anthony Overton of Croyland, a prior there 1523, might be his uncle; and Thomas Overton, abbot there, who died 1413, the linear ancestor. Any thing that would illustrate these latter persons would oblige, as well as to be informed respecting the Bishop's N. N. 188116.

The School at Newchapel is a plain brick and tile building, near the Chapel, and is further endowed with a few small annuaties. The reputed value is about 50% a year.

Feb. 4. Mr. URBAN, THE eloquent panegyric of Philalethes in your last Supplealethes in your last Supplement, p. 601, is well bestowed upon the affectionate tribute paid by Mr. Mathias to the memory of his departed friend. But, in the conclusion of his letter, I am sorry to see such an undeserved stigma cast on that most learned performance "The Pursuits of Literature." "Dark and nameless venom" applies rather to a false and malicious libel, than to a dignified and judicious satire. The Pursuits of Literature has levelled its shafts only where they ought to be aimed against presumptuous ignorance, and against political principles vitally hostile to Church and State. Every impartial reader of that admirable work will allow its candour in allotting to every eminent character which is noticed in it, its due share of praise or blame, and, where the occasion demands it, of both. If he is acquainted with the parties, or their works, which are animadverted upon in that critical review of Literature, he will acknowledge the justice and truth of its remarks. The anonymous Author of the "Pursuits," in the introduction to the Poem, assigns a wise and most satisfactory reason for being "nameless." R. O.

Feb. 4. Mr. Urban, T is much to be lamented that gentlemen of property and real consequence, derived from a long and respectable line of ancestry, should be so backward in taking upon themselves the honourable office of High Sheriff of a County; which they ought rather to consider as an important duty necessarily devolving upon them, and which they should be ambitious to fulfil in a proper and dignified man-When such gentlemen as are fit for the office have chosen to fill it, ,I am sorry to observe, that I have witnessed, in several Counties, a sad depreciation of the consequence annexed to it, in the eyes of the populace, by the shabby and mean appearance which their equipages too often ex-A High Sheriff should bear in mind the respect due to public justice, and which must be in some measure testified by external splendour; and he should also recollect, that he entertains the Representative of his Sove-Laying aside forms and shows has a tendency to encourage those levelling principles but too much prevalent in these times.

Let me remark, too, that it reflects no honour upon a County, when, at a public meeting, its Sheriff is scarcely able to put the question, or state the business in grammatical terms.

Surely the Judges would do well to inquire more circumspectly into the character and education of those who are inserted in their lists; and it might not be impolitic to levy a very heavy fine for refusing to serve the office; such as might equal the expences attendant upon its execution; as too many, who are very well able to bear the expences, shrink from the office upon the plea of the charges attached to it.

R. O.

Mr. Urban, Feb. 4.

THE design of your Correspondent
Clericus is laudable; but his proposal for founding a new Hospital is rather find the fullest and most satisfactory account of Elizabeth Canning, in the State Trials, vol. X. p. 205, (Hargrave's edition; whence he may collect for himself a just opinion of the whole transaction, which is but partially and maccurately detailed in most publications upon the subject.

Yours, &c. INDAGATOR.

Mr. Urban, Fcb. 4. HE Correspondent who enquires after poor Belly Couning, cannot, perhaps, do better than refer to your volumes for the years 1753 and 1754. It is remarkable that among the numerous collections of your late respected Friend at Entield, no collection of the Pamphlets on the subject occurs. He was a zealous Anti-Canningite; and he has, in conversation with me, rediculed to the last degree, every body who could swallow the story. My father, on the other hand, was a zealous Cunningite, and I have often heard him say, that he went to see the poor girl in Newgate, and was so taken with her apparent artlessuess and simplicity, that he gave her all the money in his pocket. I have two Pamphiets on the subject;

every menth hears of somebody whom he once knew, dropping into the grave, is ready to say, with the Messengers to Job, "I only am left alone to tell thee."

Yours, &c.

Mr. URBAN, Jan. 5. ARY Squires had two daughters; one of them was married to a Mr. William Clark, carpenter, Newington Butts; her sister for many years resided with them, and I believe is still living with Mr. John Clark, son of the above. "An Enquirer" may meet with some information respecting Elizabeth Canning's affair from these persons.

There are several others with whom I am acquainted, who have some recollection of the subject. I shall endeavour to procure all their anecdotes, and send them at a future time for " An Enquirer's" use ; although I think Mrs. Squires and Mr. Clark can render them unnecessary, if they are so disposed.

Should" An Enquirer" be successful in his enquiries into this affair, I shall he very glad to see it placed in its proper light in your impartial pages.

Yours, &c.

Mr.

Mr. URBAN. Feb. 12. THILOMATHES, vol. LXXX. Part II. page 611, having expressed a wish to receive an elucidation of some lines from a poem of Dr. Watts, I beg leave to offer the following, which I conceive to be the true one. lieve it to be an established fact, that Metal, but particularly Iron, cooled to a considerable degree, and applied to the skin, produces an effect very similar to what would follow the application of a hot iron; or, if one might so say, a cold burn.

A similar mode of expression occurs in Milton, where he says,

..... "The earth burns frore, And Cold performs the effect of Fire."

Yours, &c. R. E. R.

Feb. 14. Mr. URBAN, VOUR Correspondent Philomathes is desirous of knowing to what fact in nature these lines, in a lyric poem of Dr. Watts's, allude: "Cold Steel exposed to Northern air, Drinks the meridian fury of the midnight bear,

And burns the unwary stranger there."

It is no uncommon thing in the Winterseason of the Northern regions of Europe, for strangers to be invited to put their tongues to cold iron, which has the instantaneous effect of the sensation of burning; and, if the tongue was not instantly withdrawn, the skin would be raised to a blister. I have heard, that a soldier, in a Guardroom of Prague, having, during a severe trost, warmed his hands to a glow, and, on the guard being suddenly turned out, having taken hold of the harrel of his musket, which was exposed to the external air, had the palm of his hand blistered; and I am inclined to think that I was informed that some of the skin adhered to the

'indeed most of our philosophers will be able to explain this natural fact to Philomathes; but at present I have neither inclination nor ability to in-

I make no doubt but some or vestigate it. I avail myself of this opportunity to send you an article extracted from the old black letter Chronicle of Master Edmond Howes; which may possibly engage the attention of some of your learned Heraldic Correspondents, who, some few months ago, oc-queries and discussions respecting degrees of Precedence, Rank, and Gentility. The following extract is from Chap. xi. "On the Colleges of the Municipal or Common Lawyers;" which we now call the Inns of Court.

"And because that by auncient .custome, and by old orders of the houses of Court and Chancery, all those which were admitted into these houses were, and ought to be Gentlemen, and that of three discents at the least, as Master Gerard Leigh affirmeth; therefore they which are now admitted are registered by the stile and name of But yet, notwithstanding Gentlemen. this, if they be not Gentlemen, it is an error to thinke that the sonnes of Graziers, Farmers, Merchants, Tradesmen, and Artificers, can be made Gentlemen by their admittance or matriculation in the Buttrie Role, or in the Steward's Booke, of such a House or Inne of Court; for no men can be made a Gentleman but by his father. And be it spoken (with all reverent reservation of duty) the King who hath power to make Esquires, Knights, Baronets, Barons, Viscounts, Earles, Marquesses, and Dukes, cannot make a Gentleman, for Gentilitie is a matter of race, and of blood, and of discent, from gentile and noble parents and auncestors, which no Kings can give to any, but to such as they beget."

This is indeed, Mr. Urban, a very hard sentence pronounced on many of our Titled Men of the present day; but which, I trust, will be easily removed by the learned Gentlemen of our Heralds' Office; who, I make no doubt, can procure documents among their archives, of much higher antiquity and authority than the said Master Edmond Howes in his auncient Chronicle, to confirm the privilege of the Sovereign, of uniting Gentility with Rank or Title.

I have heard an old saying, that the King may make a Duke, but not a Gentleman; and this I always understood to be only in reference to the behaviour, and not to the rank, of the man on whom the title had been conferred; but you see it is plain that Edmond Howes and master Gerard Leigh think otherwise. RECORD.

Mr. Urban, Jan. 28, THE pleasure which I have derived from the nerusal of your Miscelfrom the perusal of your Miscellany has arisen from a great variety of sources contained in it. If the Classic, the Antiquary, the Naturalist, should find great satisfaction in concupied a portion of your columns with sulting your varied pages for commuand includes the following distinguished mountains: Black Comb in Cumberland, Snowdon, Cader Idris, the Wrekin Hill in Salop; and it extends into Staffordshire, and even Derbyshire. On this grand station, the two above-named Counties determined to shew their loyalty, by erecting a Jubilee Column, to commemorate the happiness they felt, in common with the whole Nation, at the completion of Fifty years of the reign of their benign and revered Patriot Monarch George III .- The 5m shone upon the undertaking; and the thousands who attended seemed all animated with sympathetic joy on the occasion. The Committees and Gentlemen of the two Counties met about noon at the Bwlch Penbarras, between Ruthin and Mold; where, also, a detrehment of the Flintshire and Deubighshire Loyal Militias, under their respected Colonels Garnons and Peirse, headed a procession of the principal Gentlemen of the Counties to the top of the mountain, a distance of nearly two miles, most of them on horseback. Lord Kenyon (having previously, with the approbation of the Flintshire Gentlemen, applied for and obtained the the Architect several coins and medals alluding to and commemorating the great occurrences and glories of the Reign, and deposited one of each in an earther wase of the country, under the foundation stone.

The Noble Lord then, in an excellent speech, in which, from his heart, flowed the most noble and truly loyal sentiments, alluded to the leading incidents in our Gracious Sovereign's character—his auspicious conduct on his succession to the crown—his invariable affection for his people, and ardent attachment to their interests, and the glory of the nation—his firm and kingly conduct at the time of the Riots in 1780-his patriotic determination to head the Regular, Militia, and Voluuteer Army, should an invasion take place—and his marked and uniform support to the great cause of Religion, Morality, and the Constitution of the Country, in Church and State. After recalling to the minds of the crowd assembled the blessings they had enjoyed, his Lordship invoked the protection of Providence on the Brunswick succession, trusting that the love which our Gracious Sovereign's merits had obtained from his subjecta subjects would be inherited and deserved by his latest posterity. Lord Kenyon then distributed more medals; and, according to the gracious commands he had received, laid the first stone of the intended column in the name of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales*. Instantly a burst of joyful acclamations made the welkin ring; and the reverberation from mountain to mountain produced a most awful and impressive sensation. The Military then fired several rounds, and a feu de joie; and the musick breathed forth our national pathetic air of God save the King, with a most enchanting effect. The Military and most of the assemblage then began to descend the mountain to the respective towns of Denbigh, Ruthin, and Mold, where dinners were prepared, and the evening passed with the utmost hilarity and loyalty. Fire-works, oxen given away, and every thing suitable to the occasion, completed this testive day, dedicated to such a memorable national object. A day so noted in the annals of the Principality has perhaps never occurred; and the unanimous sympathy which prevailed could be produced only by the feelings of affection, duty, and gratitude, to the merits of a deservedly beloved and Patriot King.

It is impossible for him who has the honour of communicating this give the publick transaction, to an adequate idea of the impression made by the speech of Lord Kenyon, or the substance so accurately as could be wished: but he has the greatest satisfaction in reporting that which struck the whole of the circle around him; namely, the many excellent observations in the noble Lord's speech; and the affectionate loyalty so conspicuous in the delivery, clearly proved they emanated from a heart truly fraught with loyalty, religion, and gratitude. The Architect selected for the building is Mr. Harrison of Lancaster, already known as a man of the first classical taste, which the Castle of Chester, with its noble Hall of Justice, and other works most fully prove. It is said, his idea is to erect on the very apex of the mountain a lofty embattled tower, hearing some affinity to the turrets of Caernaryon Castle. Mr. Harrison then read the following inscription, to be fixed into the stone:

"This Stone was laid by George Lord Kenyon, Baron of Gredington in Flintshire; he being graciously deputed by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, for and in his name to lay the same; when the Right Hon. Earl Grosvenor, and Sir Watkin Williams Wynne, Bart. were Lords Lieutenants of the Counties of Flint and Denbigh, in the Sheriffalty of Richard Lleyd, of Fron Hawlog, and Francis Richard Price, of Bryn-y-pys, Esquires, in the presence of the Nobility, Gentry, and Yeomanry of each County. It being part of the foundation of an Edifice to be erected by Voluntary Subscription, in commemoration of our much beloved and revered Monarch GEORGE THE THIRD. King of the United Kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland. completing the liftieth year of His Glorious Reign, and upon the 25th day of October,

It ought not to be omitted, that Lord Kenyon*, upon this occasion, desirous that the Poor should participate in the general joy that prevailed, ordered a fat ox to be distributed in the neighbourhood of Mold, and likewise one in and about the town of Hanmer, in which parish his Lordship has lately built an elegant residence by the same ingenious Architect; and several sheep he also distributed in smaller districts in the country.

After dinner, " God save the King" was sung, concluding

"When to its kindred skies
His blessed spirit flies,
May future Georges rise
Like George our King.

The following additional stanzas were also composed for the day:

"O Lord our God, arise, Scatter his enemies, And make them fall.

^{*} II's Royal Highness, with his usual munificence, presented 1004

^{*} This very promising young Nobleman has been able since to purchase the mountain. This gives a happy opportunity to his loyalty and zeal to proceed and improve this romantic and delightful spot; and which, we understand, he will immediately undertake by enclosure, and by planting the rugged steeps that surround the sacred Editice.

7,

Unnerve t Confound To thee o God

the Statue erected at Birmingham to his glorious memory.

tines ;

" Alas! on this auspicious day, When Cambria's sons their zeal display, That with remorse, disease, and anguish, A Bard on his sick bed should languish ! Though none more loyal were than he, How could be shew his loyalty? Lo! Fate decreed, for ends unknown, Left to lament, to pine alone, In sickness, silence, sadness, incurning, With heartfelt disappointment burning; Unconscious of the glorious sight Upon Moel Famma's awful neight, Where Cambria told, with joy unfeigh'd, How long her gracious King had re gu'd; Though here my languish'd cody try, My heart was there as blithe as May: In thought I saw the jovial rout, In thoog at I to aid the loyal shout, In to detail it and Moel Fainma ring, Load eco one. Long live the King. And come one spars of I fe remains, Still will I join the loy il strains, And never, never cease to pray To Heaven to bless this happy day."

The come and medals deposited ander the first stone were put into a vase, and consisted of the following:

A Guinea of George III.

A Half Gumea after the Union with fre-

A gilt Medal of his Majesty, on his completing the 50th year of his reign, with the motto." We praise thee. O God."

A white Medal of his Majesty on the same occasion, expressing also the Union with Ireland, and the universal joy of the Nation.

Mr. Unban, Feb. 4. OUBTLESS Quarent, (volume LXXX. Part II. page 621.) thought there was no more occasion to collate one Edition of the Common Prayer Book with another, than to compare the King's Printer's copy of an Act of Parliament with the Parliament Rolls; yet such is the fallsbility even of Publications receiving the sanction of Authority, that had Que-Common Prayer (I mean of 60 or 80 years ago), he would have found that • Easter day is always the first Sunday. after the first full moon which happens next after the one and twentieth day of March." That the introduction of the words "upon or" previous to those of twe ty-first of March, is an interpolation in the latter Editions, is evident, because the result of a calculation by the Table, in the very same Edition in which the latter words are introduced, shewing in each year the day on which Easter falls, contradicts the rule itself, so altered -Thus for 1810, Dominical Letter G, Golden Number 6 🛊 against which stands 22d April for Easter day, which, as stated by Quærens, would be incorrect if calculated according to the altered rule. Practice, therefore, is in unuson with Mr. Reeves, in his my conclusion. valuable and beautiful Edition of the Common Prayer, has fallen into the same (presumed) error as in those issuing from the Clarendon Press.

With respect to the year 1802, Querens has mis-stated the fact.— Easter day was celebrated on the 18th, in conformity with the Rule, and not on the 15th. A Constant Reader

ADVICE

ADVICE TO YOUNG LADIES

LEAVING SCHOOL, AND ENTERING INTO THE WORLD.

No. II.—DISRESPECT TO SERVANTS.

Eloisa and her Maid.

LOISA GRANDCHAMPS, the daughter of a respectable merchant, was bred at one of those public seminaries which are established for the education of ladies of the first rank; but where, at a great expence, they commonly learn little else than pride, envy, and selfishness. The celebrated Madame Campan, who has educated most of the Princesses of the present Dynasty, and who keeps the most expensive seminary at St. Germain, near Paris, was the Governess of Eloisa. Italian singers and musicians, opera dancers, and artists of the first rate, were called in, to initiate the young Ladies in music, dancing, and drawing. Manners, deportment, and haut ton, were the principal pursuits of the young Ladies; and geography, history, and composition, were considered as secondary attainments, which might be acceptable in a young woman entering into the world, but which were by no means to be put in comparison with the fascinations attached to the knowledge of taste, fashion, and grand monde. Having remained there about ten years, and being turned of fifteen, her parents, supposing her education to be nearly completed, thought proper to take her home. Eloisa was tail, and finely formed; her features were regular, her complexion delicate, and her person tout ensemble, even among ladies, allowed to be truly elegant.

Her parents, who affected to be very fond of her, were proud of introducing her to the fashionable circle of their acquaintance. With her personal accomplishments they were so charmed, that they paid very little attention to those of her mind: indeed, had she possessed any, they would soon have been overpowered by Mr. and Mrs. Grandchamps; who, from a desire to display their riches, surrounded her with all the superficial embellishments of grandeur and-fashion. Besides a maid and footman, who were under her immediate orders, she could at any time command all the numerous retinue of servants belonging to the family. The young lady, thus surrounded, began to exort all her faculties in schemes of with the splendour of riches, she considered them as sufficient to command respect; she treated her servants, and those of the family, with hauteur; never spoke to them but in an imperious tone and with looks of disdain; and really behaved to them in all respects as if they had been of a nature inferior to that of brutes.

Mr. and Mrs. Grandchamps, who affected to love their daughter (I repeat the words, affected to love, because I cannot believe, that parents who are truly fond of their children would part with them for ten years without once seeing them), were so. entirely devoted to Eloisa's fancies and whims, that they hardly gave her time to desire, before her desires were gratified. As they were very rich, and had retired from business, their principal thoughts were turned towards the well-marrying of Eloisa. For this purpose they took a large house at Paris, increased the number of their servants, and began to adopt a princely mode of life, by giving grand dinners to persons of quality, from which they excluded their old acquaintance, as being unqualified, by their commercial habits, for associating with persons of rank and fashion. To be honoured with the company of Dukes, Marquisses, and Counts, who, at the very time they were feasting at their table, despised them as being so much their inferiors in rank, they shunned the society of some honest merchants, formerly their intimate and most faithful friends. In a short time, therefore, their house was crowded with adventurers, who, with real or fictitious titles, found it very comfortable to have a house, where, at any time, and without being invited, they could partake of a splendid dinner, in which magnificence, daintiness, and profusion, were always united.

Among those who frequented the house of Monsieur Grandchamps, was a young man named St. Clair. He was one of those coxcombs who esteem nothing but themselves; and, being of bold and impudent manners, his noise and flutter was soon observed by the frivolous Eloisa. After they had exchanged some glances at each other, St. Clair made a declara-situation in life, with the addition of many other remarks, which greatly astonished Fanny. " Do you love me, Fanny?" said Eloisa. — "You know ! do," was the reply of the maid. -" Should you like me to supply you with all the fine things which I promised you?"-" I want nothing, Muss, but to remain in your service, and to be well treated." - " But if I were to give you a good deal of money and better?" — " No, Miss; not at all more than I do now." - " Well, but if somebody were to give you a letter for me, or if I were to send you with one, would you not do it?"—" That I would." — " But you should say nothing to my mother." - " Why not? I hope you don't mistrust your mo-ther. My duty, you know, is, to do nothing without informing her of it; if, therefore, you put into my hands a letter to carry, I must show it to your mother; and, if she consent, I will deliver it immediately." At these GRET. MAG. February, 1811.

racter, she intened to all the proposals of kloisa, and conducted them with all the privacy which a secret correspondence requires. By the intrigues of this servant, whose views were entirely interested, the way was paved for their private interviews, which terminated in the ruin of Eloisa. Circumstances were so far advanced before the disclosure was made, that Mr. Grandchamps was obliged to consent to the marriage of his daughter to Count St. Clair, who was soon discovered to be of a most dissipated and abandoned character. In a lew years he squandered away the large dowry which he had received with his wife, and died in a prison, wherein he had been confined for debt, forsaken by the gay companions of his convivial hours - the common lot of extravagance, debauchery, and folly. Eloua, being thus destitute of relief, and abandoned by those very friends, who, when the was in the sunshine of her prosperity, and in the bosom of affluence, had had protested eternal friendship, and had displayed a generous emulation with each other in the tender of their services, was now obliged to return to her father's house, a miserable spectacle of disobedience and ingratitude.

About that time, or a few weeks after, it was discovered, that Mr. Grandenamps was one of the subscribers to the loan which had been opened in England for the Pretender (as he was called) Louis the XVIIIth. He was consequently arrested, with several of the most respectable bankers and merchants in Paris, who were and sent to prison, with their wives, children, and relations. It is well known, that on the second of September, 1792, a great massacre commenced in the prisons of Paris, which lasted five days and nights, during which time they murdered all the prisoners without any trial. Mr. Grandchamps, his wife, and daughter, were in the gaol called St. Pelagie, and were expecting every minute to share the dreadful fate of their fellow prisoners. During the two first days and nights, they heard nothing but the groans of expiring victims, and saw nothing but executioners besmeared with the blood of those unfortunate wretches who had fallen sacrifices to republican fury and madness. The sustenance which they received was black bread, and water dyed with the gore of the numerous sufferers who were incessantly butchered to gratify the insatiable desire for blood which actuated the revolutionary chiefs. A horrible thought this — a thought at which human nature recoils, that, at the time we are receiving that food designed by the Supreme Being for the support and nourishment of our bodies, we are imbibing the blood of some dear relative, on the extinction of whose existence depends our own.

On the third day, about 3 o'clock in the morning, they heard the bolts of their dungeon fly open, and, being persuaded that their last hour was arrived, kneeled down and prayed, embracing each other, as for the last time. Their prayers were fervent; their tears, their sighs, their groans, were mingled. Three men of fierce aspect, covered with rags dipped in blood, with their arms bated above the elbows, and holding their hands large swords recking with blood, followed a killed of whiter of small stature, dressed which like his companions. Scarcely had they entered this dangern, and in a placeing voice called for Mr. Graphchamps, his wife, and daughter, whose Mrs. Grandchamps and Elema: When had only a glance at them, fainted away, and fell motioniess on the floor. Mr. Grandchamps recommended his soul to God: aud, taking his last adien of his wife and daughter, who were almost intensible to his endearments, was dragged out by one of the murderers, while the twoothers carried in their arms Mrsi Grandchamps and Bloiss. The little officer led the way.

When they arrived at the door, which had been made the usual place of execution, they were stopped by the executioners, who with visible pleasure were unmercifully sutchering every one that was brought the ther. The little officer, being asked whither he intended to take these three wretches, boldly answered, "Citizens! we are going to ound her them to the Place de Grève *. The punishment which you would inflict upon them here would be too mid: they are to be quartered, and divided among the people." Speaking in a nrm tone, he continued to lead the victims forth, and they were suffered to pass freely. As there were few people in the streets so early in the morning, they proceeded unmolested. and at length arrived at the middle of a long narrow lane. Mere the ... officer ordered the men to stop; and . taking the two ladies, who were mor yet recovered, into a coach standing purposely on the spot, gave a purso to the three men who had assisted him, and bade them adicu.

The men went away very peaceably, and the pretended officer ordered the coachman to drive to hip, house in the suburbs. They alighted: at the entrance of a small court; and the ladies, who had by this time recovered, were shown, with Mr. Grandchamps, into a small room on the fifth story; where a cheerful fire, clean clothes, and a good breakfast, were prepared for them. They were struck with astonishment at the simgularity of the proceedings, but die not dare utter a word; whom all al

^{*} The ordinary place of execution.

vided a passport for them, by which they could travel all over France. Out our controversy, labours hard to induce Readers to believe, that my defence defence of Henry VIIth's Chapel is but a disguise to cover the "foul" workings of my mind, fraught with "falsehood," envy, and detraction; that my knowledge in the art of Masonry, which I presume to illustrate (notwithstanding I have passed the early part of my life in that particular branch), is trifling and contemptible. This is the end and aim of all his efforts, instead of entering fairly into professional discussion. He denounces me (page 26) as standing convicted of "four falsehoods," am at a loss to know what they are. It I must be the "Red Cross Knight," surely the sacred badge with which I am adorned, should prevent me from descending to such mean and despicable aids to bear me out in the combat in which I am cagaged,

Was it a falsehood, when I said that gnore care was taken of a paitry Aireen-house, than the South front of the Jerusalem Chamber? Was it a Jalschood, when I said the Cloisters were turned into a Tennis-court for the recreation of the unrestrained College Youth, to the utter despoil of their beauteous decorations? Was it a falsehood, when I said the Abbey-Church was destitute of a Font? .Was it a falsehood, when I said Abbot Islip's architectural memorial at the West end of the Nave was destroyed? Was it a falsehood, when I said the College Youths turned their backs to the Altar during Divine Service? Was it a falsehood, when I said Thomas of Woodstock's grave was broke open and violated, under the pretence of securing a foundation to set over It a modern monument? Was it a falsehood when I said the Turrets of Henry's Chapel were destroyed? And it was no falsehood, when I said, as my friend the Architect has informed you, Mr. Urban, that the Masterworkman thought of "knocking up a Sky-light," &c. Of this I am ready to make affidavit; and willing to meet him and An Old Correspondent (who, surely, as a "defender" of an Artist, will make one of the party) at any time, and on any ground, as a faithful Knight should do. And, be assured, Sir Knight of the Blood-Red aspect,' I rejoice to accept this your challenge, whether you come in an assumed character, or your own proper person. Ward's animated and enthusiastic description of the Chapel is not the language of "impicity," but hely much Could a mind fraught with uncentified tentiments compose; a. "History OF THE REFORMATION ?" This question my opponent will, no doubt, apply to certain private memorandama.

Let my antagouist turn the East window of Henry's Chapel into ridicule, if, in reality, he can divert himself with such a business, which, however, it is not impossible in the end may cause as much tamentation as it now excites mirth. Whatever my "ignorance" may be in the art of Masonry, this I am bold to maintain: mullious, transoms, and tracery to antient windows, were always worked in with the openings, and made a part of the general upright, as the mouldings of the mullions, transoms, and tracery, were so constructed as to unite and make one conjunctive form with the architrave surrounding the opening of the windows. This cannot honestly be denied, even by "An Old Correspondent" himself, if he can so far turn from his learned habits as to pry into the mysteries of the unities of antient Masoary. In truth, I withessed the cutting-away the multious, transoms, and tracery from the main body of the opening and arch of the window of Henry's Chapel. If no accident takes place for want of the "supports" the "Architect" regrets were withheld, no thanks to the Restorers for their peglect of due care in this respect. Consequences do pot always occur upon the moment; but, perhaps, the hour is not very distant, when we may see who will have most cause to "contemplate" on Henry's Chapel in a state of ruin ! Yours, &c. J, GARTER.

Feb. 10. Mr. URBAN, / UCH having been said lately on LVA the subject of Asthma, or rather on its Antidote, the Stramonium; I submit the following Case as very successfully treated without the use of that herb, as perhaps worthy the notice of those of your Readers who are " afflicted with this distressing disorder, and have not the means or opportunity of procuring it,

About five years ago, my Wife became afflicted with violent attacks of spasmodic Asthma; the paroxysms returned, with some exceptions, every fourteen or fifteen days, lasting violently for about four days, during s lincture asarchida, nait an ounce; a This to P. P. Peroum sai. M. U.

Dr. Pors's Thermometrical, Barometrical, and Udiometrical Statements for the Seven preceding Years; from daily observations made at BRISTOL.

The average temperature of each month, from observations made at 8 A. M.

ا. _{تة}		1804		1805		1806		1807		1808		1809		1810
order nths.	Months as		deg.		ep.		deg.		deg.		deg.		deg.		100
cat orde	denominat-		a d		a deg		क दे		Ď d		ည် ရေ		ğ		a deg.
_	ed in the	8	90	Degrees	9	Degrees	of a	Degrees		Degrees		8	ੋਂ ਹੈ	8	ő
furmer of the		Degrees	S.C.	150	2	50	100ths of	15	FOOths of	250	100ths of	Degrees	OOths	Degrees	100ths
20	Calendar.	å	100ths	ឝ	00ths	Ã	8	Å	Ö	Å	00	Ã	8	Ă	8
			P-]	944		*L
1	Jan	33	50	33	16	37	7	31	33	33	47	33	27	52	24
2	Feb,	36	33	35	86	37	75	35	75	34	15	42	11	34	57
3	March.	36	33	40	20	37	94	33	46	33	66	30	56	39	45
- 4	April	37	99	42	87	43	80	42	33	43	10	39	77	45	50
5	May	57	_	57	50	54	17	55	66	56	90	36	78	50	19
6	June	62		57	50	61	80	59	45	59	90	58	85	60	53
7	July	62	_	61	52	63	_	64	44	66	22	61	90	61	74
8	August	60	53	63	33	62	22	63	52	63	17	61	44	61	32
9	Sept	56	32	58	_	54	52	48	27	4.5	80	56	76	56	40
19	Oct	49	99	43	-	48	66	51	46	44	3	46	17	47	71
- E1	Nov	42	10	36	_	45	30 j	34	55	42	52	36		40	_
18	Dec	33	50	37	_	44	44	31	55	33	10	37	94	38	32
	The												Cho

lowest Temperature of the Atmo-here, indicated by the Thermo-ster, on the Two coldest Days in a last Seven Years, according to servations made at 8 o'Clock in Morning.

X.

The	he average state of the Berometer for each month, from observation made at eight o'clock in the morning.											tions
- 1-å 1 1804				os	1806		1807		1808		TACH		1910
Numerical order of the menths.	Months, as denom- nated in the Ca- lender.	Inches	100 of an inch	Inches	100 of an inch	Inches	100 of an inch	Inches	100 of an inch	Inches	100 of an inch	Inches	100 of an inch	Inches	100 of an inch
* 234567 * 90118	Jan Peb March April May July August Sept Oct Nov Doc	99 30 99 99 30 99 30 30 99 30	60 25 70 80 40 55 90 65 75 90 85	29 29 30 29 50 30 30 29 30 29	60 85 90 5 35 5 95 50 60	29 30 29 30 30 30 39 30 29 29 29	52 50 90 3 20 90 10 90 85	30 99 30 30 30 30 30 29 29 29 30	5 91 15 30 95 7 15 75 90 10 75 15	30 30 30 30 30 30 30 39 29 29 29	10 5 30 15 15 95 45 45 63 60	30 29 50 31 31 31 31 31 31 29	11 75 58 30 10 30 42 49 40	30 29 29 29 29 29 29 29 29	75 91 67 35 72 80 94 89 37
	Nov Dec cach year	4 1 2 2 0 3 2 0 5 1	43 48 80 27 75 78 95 96 96 44 45	f th 2 2 0 2 1 2 2 2 1 1 1 3 5	e qui 43 50 98 78 43 58 60 94 59 73	1 1 1 3 6 1 1 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5	y of 97 14 29 50 32 87 81 44 56 39	Rait 2 0 0 5 0 4 2 3 2 5 2 3 2 5 2 5 2 3	fall 28 15 34 49 89 15 55 69 14 44 51	en it 0 0 5 2 1 2 3 4 5 3	5 59 35 37 99 75 76 6 56 8 52 8	5 1 1 1 4 4 0 1 9 9 9 9 9	nth. 19 96 97 75 75 75 98 16 -8 54 58	0191499555	90 50 63 40 55 55 58 68 45 80

SENIOR OPTIMES.

Grace, Pemoroke
Haggut, Christ
Frazar, Trunty
Lloyd, duto.
Abday, Jesus
Wilson, Pembroke
Edwards, St. John's
Campbell, jun. do.
Smyth, Caius

Rogers, Sidney
Commeline, St. Joh.
Bickersteth, Trin.
Wallis, Magdalen
Dury, Pembroke
Buck, Ca us
Feild, St. John's
Wilkinson, Trinity

JUNIOR OPTIMES.

Baker, Cath hall, Barlow, Trin ty Storrey, Queen's Maynard, Trinity Bligh, St. John's Cart, Trinity Kitchingham, C. hall Yate, ditto. Backhouse, P. hall Willats, Trimty Way, ditto.

Combridge, Jan. 28. Dr. Smith's two prizes of 251. each, for the two best proficients in Mathematics and Natural Philosophy, are adjudged to Mr. Thomas Edward Dicey, of Tribity College, and Mr. William Farner, of Caius College, the First and Second Wranglers.

Three Parts. The First contains an Alphabetical List of the several Plants, with their notices and descriptions, as they occur in the several parts of the two great works of that Author: "The History of Plants, and of their Properties," brought into one point of view. The Second contains a systematic Table of the several species according to the Linneau system. The Third, a Lexicon, explaining all the technical terms made use of by that Author, together with those of less familiar occurrence. This work is from the pen of Mr. Stackhouse, the Author of "Nereis Britannica." (See Gent. Mag. vol. LXXII. p. 1042.

The authorised Version of the Book of Psalms, corrected and improved, and accompanied with notes critical and explanatory, by the late Bp. Heasley, F. R. S.; with a prefatory Essay on the Nature, Design, and Subject of the Book of Psalms, by his Son, the Rev. HENEAGE HORS-LEY, will shortly be published in a large quarto volume.

The new Edition of the Rev. Mr. DIBDIN's "Bibliomania," which is now intituled, "A Bibliographical Romance," will make its appearance in the course of the month of April. It is in six Parts; and will contain upwards of 600 pages: being a review of our most eminent scholars, and book-collectors, from King Alfred, to the late Mr. Gough; with an account of their libraries. In the course of the volume, there is a copious list, with particular notices of the most valuable Foreign Catalogues, including the public ones of our own country. The Third Part, called the Auction Room, describes some of our chief Bibliomaniacs who attend public sales of books. The work is elegantly printed, with upwards of forty embellishments; comprising borders, vignettes, and Among the latter are portraits. those of Wolfius, Leland, Bale, Abp. Parker, Sir Thomas Bodley, Anthony Wood, and Hearne, &c.

We are requested to correct a statement which has appeared in our last, respecting the publication of Mr. Dibdin's "English De Bure." This work will not be published these two years: at the same time, we are authorised to state, that the second volume of the new edition of "Ames's Typographical Antiquities" is already gone to press.

A Selection from the Sermons of the late Dr. Charles Webster, the eloquent and admired Lecturer at St. Peter's Chapel, Edinburgh (and afterwards Physician to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and to the Forces in the West Indies) is in the press, and will be published by Subscription, for the benefit of his Orphan Daughters.

Mr. NICHOLAS CARLISLE has sent to the press his "Topographical Researches in Wales;" which he hopes to lay before the publick in the beginning of May.

J. CARTER, we are given to understand, has nearly completed a collection of Drawings under the patronage of T. L. Parker, esq., in order to illustrate the Costume of England, from the most remote periods down to the present day. The subjects consist of Statues, from Niches, Tombs. Basso-relievos; Effigies from Brasses, Paintings on walls, illuminated Missals, and from authenticated Public Historical Paintings. The number of representations amount already to three hundred and fifty.

Miss MITFORD, who lately published a voiume of Poems, has in the press, a Poem, in four Cantos, founded on the events which arose out of the Mutiny of The Bounty, which is intituled, "Christina, the Maid of the South Seas."

A new and improved Edition of Dr. Valpy's Greek Grammar will be published in the course of March.

The Tenth Volume of the Encyclopædia Londinensis will be ready for the Subscribers early in March.

The Second Volume of Mr. Moone's "Tales of the Passions," containing
"The Married Man," being an illustration of the passion of Jealousy, will appear soon.

An ingenious work from the pen of Mad. de Genlis will appear in the course of a few days. It is intituled "La Botanique Historique et Literaire," suivie d'une Nouvelle, intitulée "Les Fleurs, ou les Artistes."

A work of M. Depring's, "Sofrees d'Hiver," is nearly ready for publication, written on a new and improved plan: which has met with great success at Paris.

"A winter in Paris, or Memoirs of Mad. de C, written by herself," will appear soon, comprising a view of the present state of society and manners in that Capital, and interspersed with a variety of authentic anecdotes.

Mr. Wilson has in the press a second edition of "The Analysis of Country Dancing, with numerous additions and improvements," consisting of a great number of new figures, with some entire new Reels, and a Plan for composing to any tune, 1000 different Figures, together with the complete Etiquette of the Ballroom: embellished with nearly 260 Engravings on Wood by Berryman.

Two Hunting Prints of the Fox breaking Cover, and the Death of the Fox, from the celebrated original Paintings by S. Gilpin, R. A. and P. Reinagle, A. R. A. will be speedily published. They will be engraved by the no less celebrated Mr. Scott.

11. Dr.

water than five feet; the engance is at the made the haughty Catherine his suppliant, same time excessive y narrow. The sands had not the distinction possessed by the GRNT. MAG. February, 1911.

^{* &}quot;Cherson is gradually sinking into decay, from the unhealthiness of its situation, and still more from the preference given to Odessa. Yet tumber, corn, hemp, and other articles of exportation, are so much cheaper and more plentiful here, that many foreign vessels still prefer this port, though they are onliged by Government first to perform quarantine, and unload their cargoes at Odessa. Corn is cheap and plentiful; but tomber much dearer than in the North, as the cataracts of the Dnieper generally respecte its being floated down. There is a noble forest which we saw in Podolia, not far from the Bog, a beautiful river, unincombered by cataracts; but, as some land carriage would be necessary, it is as yet almost 'intacta securi.' The arsenal at Cherson is extensive and interesting, it contains a monument to Potemkin its founder. Two frigates and a seventy-four were building, on account of the bar, they are floated down to the Liman on Camels, as at Petersburg Nothing can be more dreary than the prospect of the river, which forms many streams flowing through marshy islands, where the masts of vessels are seen rising from aimid brush wood and tall reeds. In these islands are many wad boars, which are often seen swimming from one to the other. No foreign merchants of any consequence remain here; those who transact business at this Court, do it by clerks and supercargoes. My information respecting Cherson was chiefly from a Scotchman named Geddes. The tomb of Howard is in the desert, about a mile from the town; it was built by Admiral Mordvinof, and is a small brick pyramid, white-washed, but without any inscription (see the Vignette to this Chapter). He himself fixed on the spot of his interment. He had built a small but on this part of the Steppe, where he pussed much of his time, as the most healthy spot in the neighbour-hood. The English Burial-service was read over him by Admiral Priestinan, from whom I had these particulars. Two small villas have been built at no great distance; I suppose also from the healthmess of the situation, as it had nothing else to recommend it. Howard was spoken of with exceeding respect and affection by all who remembered or knew him, and they were many."-Heber's MS Journal.

lowest and the poorest of the human race. The particulars respecting the ultimate disposal of his body, as they were communicated to me upon the spot by the most credible testimony, merit a cursory detail. "The corpse, soon after his death, was brought to Cherson, and placed beneath a dome of the small Church belonging to the fortress, opposite to the altar. After the usual ceremony of interment, the vault was merely covered, by restoring to their former situation the planks of wood which constituted the floor of the building. Many of the inhabitants of Cherson, as well as English officers in the Russian service, who lived in its neighbourhood, had seen the coffin, which was extremely ordinary; and the practice of shewing it to strangers prevailed for some years after Potemkin's decease. The Empress Catherine either had, or pretended to have, an intention of erecting a superb monument to his memory; whether at Cherson, or elsewhere, is unknown. Her sudden death is believed to have prevented the completion of this design. The most extraordinary part of the story remains now to be related; the coffin itself has disappeared. Instead of any answer to the various enquiries we made concerning it, we were cautioned to be silent. 'No one,' said a countryman of ours living in the place, 'dares mention the name of Potemkin! At last we received intelligence that the Verger could satisfy our curiosity, if we would venture to ask him. We soon found the means of encouraging a little communication on his part; and were then told, that the body, by the Emperor's command, had been taken up, and thrown into the ditch of the fortress. The orders received were, to take up the body of Potemkin, and cast it into the first hole that might be found. These orders were implicitly obeyed. A hole was dug in the fosse, into which he was thrown with as little ceremony as a dead dog; but, as this procedure took place in the night, very few were informed of the fate of the body. An eye-witness assured me, that the coffin no longer existed in the vault where it was originally placed; and the Verger was . actually proceeding to point out the place where the body was abandoned, when the Bishop himself happening to arrive, took away my guide; and, with menaces which were but too likely to be fulfilled, prevented our being more fully informed concerning the obloquy which at present involves the remains of Potemkin.—Let me now, therefore, direct the Reader's attention to a more interesting subject; to a narrative of the last days, the death, and burial, of the benevolent Howard; who, with a character forcibly opposed to that of Potemkin, also terminated a glorious career at Cherson. Mysterious Providence, by events always remote from human foresight, had wonderfully destined that these two men, celebrated in their lives by the most contrasted deeds, should be interred nearly upon the same spot. It is not within the reach of possibility to bring together, side by side, two individuals more remarkably characterized by every opposite qualification; as if the hand of Destiny had directed two persons in whom were exempified the extremes of vice and virtue, to one common spot, in order that the contrast might remain a lesson for mankind: Potemkin, bloated and pampered by every vice, after a path through life stained with blood and crimes, at last the victim of his own selfish excesses; Howard, a voluntary exile, enduring the severest privations for the benefit of his fellow-creatures, and labouring, even to his latest breath, in the exercise of every social virtue.

"The particulars of Mr. Howard's death were communicated to me by his two friends, Admiral Mordvinof, then Chief Admiral of the Black Sea fleet, and Admiral Priestman, an English Officer in the Russian service; both of whom were eye-witnesses of his last moments. had been entreated to visit a lady about twenty four miles from Cherson, who was dangerously ill. Mr. Howard objected, alleging that he acted only as physician to the poor; but, hearing of her imminent danger, he afterwards yielded to the persuasion of Admiral Mordvinof, and went to see her. After having prescribed that which he deemed proper to be, administered, he returned, leaving directions with her family to send for him again if she got better; but adding, that if, as he much Seared, she should prove worse, it would be to no purpose. Some time after his return to Cherson, a letter arrived, stating that the lady was better, and begging that be would come without loss of time. When he examined the date, he perceived that the letter, by some unaccountable delay, had been eight days in getting to his hands. Upon this, he resolved to go with all possible expedition. The weather was extremely tempestuous, and very cold, it being late in the year; and the rain fell in torrents. In his impatience to set out, a conveyance not being immediately ready, he mounted an old dray-horse, used in Admiral Mordvinef's family to carry water, and thus proceeded to visit his patient. Upon his arrival, he found the lady dying; this, added to the fatigue of the journey, affected him so much, that it brought on a fever. His clothes, at the same time, had been wet through; but he attributed his fever entirely to another Having administered something to his patient to excite perspiration; as soon as the symptoms of it appeared, he put his hand beneath the bed-clothes to feel her pulse, that she might not be chilled

DE DOK DOM CHO SOCO & DISU SO I ZIU lower his diet, who has been accustomed for years to exist on vegetables and water, a little bread, and a little tea? I have no method of lowering my nourishment, and therefore I must die. It is such jolly fellows as you. Priestman, who get over these fevers.' Then, turn ng the subject, he spoke of his funeral, and cheerfully gave directions concerning the manner in which he would be buried. 'There is a spot, said he, ' near the village of Dauphigny, which would suit me nicely; you know it well, for I have often said I should like to be buried there; and let me beg of you, as you value your old friend, not to suffer any pomp to be used at my funeral, nor any monument, or monumental inscription whatsoever, to mark where I am laid; but lay me quietly in the earth, place a sun-dual over my grave, and let me be forgotten.' Having given these directions, he was very carnest in soliciting that Admiral Priestman would lose no time in securing the object of his wiebes, but go unmediately, and settle with the owner of the land for the place of his interment, and propare every thing for his buried. The Admiral left him upon he passed his time in the country, and giving great reason to hope that he would recover from the disorder with which he was afflicted *. His servant read this letter aloud; and when he had concluded, Mr. Howard turned his bead towards him, saying, ' Is not this comfort for a dying Father?' He expressed great repugnance against being buried according to the rites of the Greek Church; and, begging Admiral Priestinan to prevent any interference with his interment on the part of the Russian Priests, made him also promise, that he would read the Service of the Church of Fugland over his grave, and bory him in all respects according to the forms of his country. Soon after this last request, he ceased to speak. Admiral Mordvinof camp in, and found him dying very fast. They had in vain-besought him to allow a physician to be sent for; but, Admiral Mordvinof renewing this solicitation with great earnestness, Mr. Howard assented by noddong his head. The physician came, but was too late to be of a in service. A rattling m the throat had commenced, and the physician administered what is called the Musk-draught, a Medicine used only in Russia in the last extremity. It was given to the patient by Admiral Mordvinof, who prevailed on him to swallow a little; but he endeavoured to avoid the rest, and gave evident signs of disapprobation. He was then entirely given over, and shortly after breathed his last. He had always refused to allow any portrait of himself to be made; but, after his death, Admiral Mordvinof caused a plaster mould to be formed upon his face, which was sent to Mr. Wilherforce. A cast from this mould was in the Admiral's possession when we were in Cherson, and presented a very striking resemblance of his features. buried near the village of Dauphigny, about five versts from Cherson, on the road to Nicholaef, in the spot he had himself chosen; and his friend Admiral Priestman read the English Burial-service, according to his desire. The rest of his wishes were not exactly fulfilled; for the concourse of spectators was immense, and the order of his funeral was more magnificent than would have met with his approbation. It was as follows:—

^{* &}quot; Mr. Howard's Son laboured under an attack of Insanity."

"1. The Body on a Bier, drawn by Six Horses with Trappings.—2. The Prince of Moldavia, in a sumptuous Carriage, drawn by Six Horses covered with Scarlet Cloth.—3. Admirals Mordvinof and Priestman, in a Carriage drawn by Six Horses.—4. The Generals and Staff-Officers of the Garrison, in their respective Carriages.—5. The Magistrates and Merchants of Cherson in their respective Carriages.—6. A large party of Cavalry.—7. Other persons on horseback.—8. An immense concourse of spectators and people on foot, amounting to two or three thousand.

"A Monument was afterwards erected over him, which, instead of the sun-dial he had requested, consisted of a brick pyramid, or obelisk, surrounded by stone posts with chains. This of course will not Jong survive the general destruction of whatsoever is interesting in the country. The posts and chains began to disappear before our arrival; and when Mr. Heber made the sketch from which the Vignette to this chapter was engraved, not a vestige of them was to be seen; there remained only the obelisk, in the midst of a bleak and desolate plain, before which a couple of dogs were gnawing the bones of a dead horse, whose putrifying carcase added to the disgust and horror of the A circumstance came to our scene. knowledge before we left Russia, concerning Howard's remains, which it is painful to relate; namely, that Count Vincent Potocki, a Polish Nobleman of the highest taste and talents, whose magnificent library and museum would do honour to any country, through a mistaken design of testifying his respect for the memory of Howard, had signified his intention of taking up the body, that it might be conveyed to his country seat, where a sumptuous monument has been prepared for its reception, upon a small island in the midst of a lake. His Countess, being a romantic lady, wishes to have an annual fete consecrated to Benevolence; at which the nymphs of the country are to attend, and strew the place with flowers. design is so contrary to the earnest request of Mr. Howard, and at the same time so derogatory to the dignity due to his remains, that every friend to his memory will join in wishing it may never be fulfilled. Count Potocki was absent during ' the time we remained in that part of the world, or we shonld have ventured to remonstrate; we could only therefore entrust our petitions to a third person, who promised to convey them to him after our departure."

Dr. Clarke's description of the farfamed metropolis of the Turkish Empire is concise and interesting.

"Considering the surprising extent of the city and suburbs of Constantinople, the notions entertained of its commerce, and the figure it has long made in history, all the conveniences, if not the luxuries, of life, might be there expected. Previous to an arrival, if any enquiry is made of merchants, and other persons who have visited the place, as to the commodities of its markets, the answer is almost always characterized by exaggeration. affirm that every thing a stranger can require may be purchased in Constantinople, as in London, Paris, or Vienna; whereas, if truth be told, hardly any one article good in its kind can be procured. Let a foreigner visit the bazars, properly so called; he will see nothing but slippers, clumsy boots of bad leather, coarse muslins, pipes, tobacco, coffee, coolis shops, drugs, flower-roots, second-hand pistols, poignards, and the worst manufactured wares in the world. In Pera, where Greeks and Italians are supposed to supply all the necessities of the Franks, a few pitiful stalls are seen, in which every thing is dear and bad. Suppose a stranger to arrive from a long journey, in want of clothes for his body; furniture for his lodgings; books or maps for his instruction and amusement; paper, pens, ink, cutlery, shoes, hats; in short, those articles which are found in almost every city of the world: he will find few or none of them in Constantinople, except of a quality so inferior as to render them incapable of answering any purpose for which they were intended. The few commodities exposed for sale are either exports from England, unfit for any other market; or, can vessels, to or from the Mediterranean, exchanging the produce of their own countries for the rich harvests of Poland, the salt, honey, and butter, of the Ukra as, the hides, tallow, hemp, firs, and metals, of Russia and Siberia; the whole of which exchange is transacted in other ports, without any interference on the part of Turkey. Never was there a people in possession of such advantages, who either knew or cared so little for their enjoyment. wise government, the inhabitants of Constant nople might obtain the riches of all the empires of the earth. Situated as they are it cannot be long before other nations, depriving them of such important sources of wealth, will convert to better purposes the advantages they have so long neglected."

The following detached extracts will doubtless be acceptable:

"The Don Cossacks are polished in their manners, instructed in their minds, hospitable, generous, disinterested in their hearts, humane and tender to the poor, good husbands, good fathers, good wives, good methers, virtuous daughters, valiant and datiful sons; such are the natives of Tscherchaskoy. In conversation the "A remarkable Phænomenon occurs, during particular seasons, in the Sea of Azoff, which effers a very forcible proof of the veracity of the Sacred Scriptures. During violent East winds, the sea retires in so remarkable a manner, that the people of Taganrock are able to effect a passage on dry land to the opposite coast; a distance of twenty versts: but when the wind changes, which it sometimes does very suddenly, the waters return with such rapidity to their wonted bed, that many lives are lost. In this manner, also, small vessels are stranded."

We cannot conclude this article without expressing our obligations to Dr. Clarke for the great pleasure which the perusal of his Travels has afforded us; and shall look forward with impatience to the publication of the succeeding volumes.

12. A Sermu Church of 5, 1810, Grose, and son, Judg Charles To of Wendover, and Domestic Chaplain to the Right Hon. Lord Carrington. 410, pp. 15. Brooke, at Lincoln.

AS this Sermon (inscribed to the Preacher's worthy Brother, Edmund Turnor, Esq. F. R. S. and F. S. A. Sheriff of the County of Lincoln) is not intended for " the eye of public criticism," but " has been printed merely with the view of more readily submitting it to the inspection of a few friends, whose partiality induced them to express a desire to see it;" we shall only observe, that from Psalm xxii. 28. " the consoling doctrine of the superintending Providence of God," is ably deduced; and the condition of other Nations in some important points, is thus contrasted with our own:

" While the Gospel is preached among us in all that simplicity which forms its leading and genuine character, other kingdoms are involved in ignorance and darkness: while we are safe in our persons and our property, others are insecure in both: while we enjoy the utmost degree of liberty which is consistent with the subordination that a wise and civilized government requires, others have been compelled to bead beneath the yoke of the most abject slavery: while we have been exalted to an unexampled height of power and wealth in the general scale of nations, others have been reduced to poverty and ruin. While we have been defended by the merciful hand of Providence from many dangers, both political and personal, others have been exposed to the most cruel sufferings. In short, amidst the general rage of rival and contending polities, amidst the convulsions that have torn and distracted surrounding kingdoms, in the midst of the wrecks of desolated nations, England rises still superior, still she maintains her unexampled pre-eminence among the kingdoms of the earth, unsubdued by hostile arms, unshaken by the storm."

13. Reflections on the Shortness of Time; a Sermon, suggested by the General Mourning for her Royal Highness the Princess Amelia; and delivered at the Octagon Chapel, Bath, on Sunday, Nov. 11, 1810, by John Gardiner, D. D. 8vo. pp. 26, Rivingtons.

THIS excellent Discourse on the Shortness of Time (from 1 Cor. vii. 29.) is thus appropriately introduced:

"Such is the unusual appearance of this assembly—such the general gleom diffused around us by the sable ensigns of Mortality, that I imagine I shall only fulfil your expectations in reminding you of what has occasioned a scene so seldom, in the ordinary course of things, to be witnessed in this place. Besides, as Ministers of the Gospel, in consulting the welfare of their hearers, may lawfully seize. the public or domestic occurrences of the day, and convert them to some useful purpose; how can the former more effectually exercise their zeal, and how are the latter more likely to acquire improvement, than in meditating on that event which is appointed unto all men - an event from which a recent instance brings it home to our conviction that the Prince in bis palace is not more privileged, by an exemption, than the Peasant in his cottage? However, as, agreeably to the ideas which I have suggested, our business is more with the living than with the dead-as the spiritual wants of mankind ought more to stimulate our efforts than their posthumous fame; in a word, as it is your instruction more than your entertainment which we ought to wish to promote; on these principles, you will not expect me to consume your time in amusing you with a panegyric on the exalted Individual for whom the nation professes to mourn; you will not expect me to enter into a detail of her character as to those dispositions, manners, and habits, for which, like one of the lowest of the human race, she is gone to account — and, we would fain hope, to receive a glerious reward. It is not that we are altogether destitute of the information requisite for such a task. The public voice has represented her as possessed of the amiable qualities in general, which form the chief ornament of her sex-humility, meekness, picty, and benevolence-more especially it has extolled her display of these virtues so characteristic of the true Christian, resignation and patience—for these she had an ample scope of exercise in sufferings, induced by a remarkably tedious and painful illness: - but all the severityof such a discipline could not weaken her faith and submission to the dispensations of her Heavenly Father, nor suppress the effusions of her grateful heart to an earthly one—it could not suspend her efforts in the discharge of the duties of devotion, nor prevent her from giving the most tender proofs of filial affection. It was thus, we are told, that she closed the trying scene of mortality, manifesting the principles early instilled into her by the prudence, and confirmed by the example, of her august Parents."

The sound advice which pervades the remainder of this Sermon, entitles it to our warmest commendation—particularly the solemn admonition to reflect that the Time is short at the period of retiring to rest, and in the morning when we first awake.

"Nigh

aggravation of sin never perhaps was there an age when youth was surrounded with more dangers of a moral kind, and dangers more imminent—when there were so many dissolute and depraved characters, so many stoffers and mockers, gamesters and intriguers, trying to seduce others, and to lead them to irreligion by the paths of vice and dissipation."

We need not add, that the serious Preacher goes on to recommend the proper antidotes to poisons so alarming.

14. A Sermon, occanoned by the Death of Mrs. Frimmer; preached at New Brentford, Middlesex, on Sunday, January 6, 1811, by the Rev. Thomas Toustall Haverfield, A. M. Fellow of Corpus Christi College, Oxford Published by Deare. 8vo. pp. 28. Hatchard.

FROM Psalm exii. 6, "The Righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance," Mr Haverfield takes occasion to observe, that of the Discourse, Mr. Haverheld says,

" Nothing can afford greater pleasure to

" From her infancy she had imbibed the purest principles of virtue and religion, which the example and instruction of the best of parents, acting upon a mind well fitted to imitate and receive them, easily brought to the highest pitch of perfection. At an early age the duties of a wife and a mother called into action those inestimable qualities with which her mind was stored, Now it was that the blossoms of those plants, which had sprung up in her heart, began to expand, and the fruit which they produced was indeed of the fairest and most excellent description. Never was the arduous task of forming the minds of childhood and youth performed with more unremating zeal and alacrity. Well knowing how strict an account will be required of all who have such a charge entrusted to them, she left no one point unattended to, which might hereafter prove of consequence. What was the success of her labours in this respect, you who are here present are, to your great happiness, well aware; and there are those who, having received their first ideas of parental duties from her example, have fulfilled them in the most conscientious manner, and have become the best, the fondest, and the most affectionate of mothers."

Without dwelling on the strictness with which this excellent person fulfilled her other domestic duties, Mr. H. passes on to those parts of her conduct, in which the interests of her country and her religion are concerned.

"Adhering strictly to every precept of her Saviour, precepts which she had made her chief and constant study, she did not hide her light under a bushel; but her virtues and talents diffused their genial influence round a wide and extensive sphere. Anxious to promote in every way the interests of religion, and improve her fellow creatures in the knowledge of their Creator, and the principles of his holy Religion, she took the surest means of bringing about the important end which she had in view, by addressing her lessons to those, whose minds, as yet unformed, and untainted with vice, were capable of being easily modelled after the pattern of wittue, and which, she well knew, would, by having the precepts of religion and morality mixed with the soft and pliable matter of which they were at first composed, become in time strong and firm, and fit to resist the allurements of sin, and guard themselves against the attacks of the evil Nor did she ever defeat this object, so dear to her, by making her instructions dry and irksome: all her lessons were given in the most pleasing form, and such as was best calculated to attract and fix the attention of youth, and by no means useless to those of a maturer age. The holy Scriptures, with which no one was better acquainted, were by her adapted to the capacity of an infant mind, and rendered familiar by the clearest illustrations, and plainest expositions. This it was which claimed her first and chiefest care; and as it was the most important part of her labours, so was it the one to which she applied herself with the greatest diligence and assiduity. But, in the midst of all this, she did not neglect objects, of less consequence indeed, but nevertheless highly useful and instructive. Every branch of knowledge, which might be advantageous to the minds of childhood, has been embraced in her works; the first of which laid before them the wonders of the creation in a beautiful and entertaining manner. Her last most important publication was one which cost her many hours of labour, and much fatigue; which shews at once a versatility of genius, an extent of information, and a soundness of judgment, which are seldom possessed by any but those, whose whole lives are passed in the most intense study and application: at the same time that it evinces a benevolence of disposition, and an anxiety for the public good, and the welfare of the rising generation, which are truly admirable and praiseworthy. This is a work which every parent ought to possess; and, if they study it with attention, adhere strictly to the maxims which are contained in it, and copy the pious example of her who was the author of it, they cannot fail to ' train up their children in the way they should go, so that when they are old they shall not depart from it.

"Though her writings were so very numerous, there is not one which appears to have been undertaken with a view to promote her own fame, or to gain applause for herself; all were performed with the most benevolent design, that of promoting the happiness and everlasting salvation of her fellow creatures. Never indeed was there a character in which talents and meekness, knowledge and humility, were more happily blended; and although gifted by nature with the most exalted inind, the most superior understanding, though her life was one continued scene of activity in all good works, though she may almost be said to have done even more than was required of her as a member of society, she never considered herself as performing any thing beyond her duly.

"However eminent her virtues were, their lustre was rendered far more brilliant by the meekness and humility with which they were set off and adorned.

" Exclusive of the many excellent books which she published, for the express purpose of instructing the children of the poor in the principles of religion, and the duties of their station, a neighbouring parish can bear witness to the fatigues which she underwent, to rescue the lower orders from the misery and wretchedness of ignorance and vice *. And here also the happy effects of her assiduity have shewn the solves; for we may say, that it is to her instructions and example, that the poor of this parish are indebted for the excellent establishment which has been lately formed, to save their children from that dreadful state of implety and wicked-

^{* &}quot;The charity schools, and schools of industry at Old Brentford, were originally established by Mrs. Trimmer, and were carried on under her personal superintendance. A few years ago, a new school was built by subscription, adjoining the chapel; and the plan of education was brought to the highest pitch of perfection by its venerable conductress. Dr. Bell's system is followed in the instruction of the children."

respect, and excite in their bosoms the same holy fervour which inspired her own breast.

"After a life thus spent in performing her duty both to God and man, it appears to have been a peculiarly gracious dispensation of Providence, that she was removed to a better world, without experiencing the infirmities and weakness of age, or the pain and suffering of a previous illness."

For a farther account of her, see our last month's Obituary, p. 86; and add to the last of her publications:

1. "Sermons, for Family Reading, abridged from the Works of eminent Divines."

2. "Instructive Tales, collected from the Family Magazine."

and to because entermittances. The former, whose name the Greeks derived from their own language 🗻 non, et μαζος, because they had but one breast, (see Peter Petit's Dissertation on the Amazons, and the Etymologicum Magnum) were a community of women, as their true name in the Persian language imports, and signifies, Altogether Women, Hem zen. They embodied themselves, as Justin tells us, p. 23, Ed. Paris, 1581, lib. ii. c. 4, on the massacre of their husbands. a colony of exiled Scytbians established on the coast of the Euxine Sea, in Cappadocia, near the river Thermodon; their motive was, to revenge the ill treatment their lords and masters had met with, and to preserve their children, whom they proposed to fight for till they could defend themselves. Of the Gryphins we cannot say (as the Dutch Ambassadors did to Charles II. when his Majesty complained that they had shown Croinwell greater respect than they had paid to him) C'est toute autre chose; since in fact the Gryphins were men, and not monstrous birds, or four-footed animals, that kept the gold-mines in their own claws. Beyond the Issedones were the Arimaspians, and the Gry-The Arimaspians, we read in Herodotus, had but one eye, and the Gryphins four feet. Now Mr. Combe has very well explained, from Eustathius, the phænomenon of the Arima Spue, or one eye, in the Scythian language, by saying, that the Arimaspians were so called from shutting one eye when they took aim in shooting their arrows. So, we may say, were the Miners denominated Gryphins, from working with crooked bills on their knees, to dig out the gold. Pliny and Philostratus, when properly explained, will support us in this interpretation. I look upon Pegasus, says Pliny, with the head of a horse, and the body of a bird, as a fabulous animal, and a Gryphin, aurita aduncitate rostri, equally so. A beak hooked like an ear, it must be allowed, is complete nousense; but, if we read auricida aduncitate rostri, with a beak cutting out gold with its hook, at is the very sense we are looking for, and answers to the word huboromes? in Philostratus, who, speaking of the Gryphins who dig gold out of the rocks, says, rocks, which the beast cuts through by the strength of his In Pliny the expression is, the Gryphin cuts through the gold; in the other, the stone that holds the gold.

^{* &}quot;A near relative of Mrs. Trimmer, who is resident in New Brentford, perceiving that the charity school in that place was madequate to the instruction of more than a small part of the poor who reside in the parish, of her own accord opened a school, about the beginning of last year, for the instruction of an unlimited number of poor boys; and being warmly and liberally supported by the other inhabitants, the school has now become a regular establishment, where above seventy poor children are daily taught their duty to God and man. This school is also conducted after Dr. Bell's system. It may with truth be said, that the example of this benevolent lady has greatly contributed to excite many others, in various parts of the kingdom, to promote as much as possible the education of the infant poor. How many thousands will, at the great day of trial, be found to owe their salvation to her exertions, under the mercies of God, and the merits and mediation of our Lord and Saviour!"

The first and earliest Smith of antiquity was called a Cyclops, from having but one eye, and that in the middle of the forehead; which may be easily explained, by supposing that he wore, when he was hammering Jove's thunderbolt, a defence of linen or canvas with an opening in the middle, such as is used in some of our own great irou-works to protect the forehead, give light, and keep off the sparks from the eyes.

The XXXVth and XXXVIth bas reliefs are Egyptian Antiquities from that part of Adrian's villa destined for the deities of the Nile. In a small room set apart for hieroglyphics of this sort in the Capitol at Rome were formerly, and perhaps still, curious idols of the God Canopus, who, Ruffinus tells us, came off conqueror in a fiery trial with his brother divinity of Persia. The victory, it seems, was owing entirely to the superior ingenuity of the Egyptian The trial was, which of the Priests. divinities could best resist the fire. The Priests of Persia, not in the least suspecting the power of their God to subdue the fire, committed him without ceremony to the flames, to which he fell instantly a martyr. The Egyptians, doubting the natural abilities of their deity to get the better of the ordeal, prepared him accordingly. They made him of terra cotta, or baked earth, and drilling holes in his bottom, filled them with water, and stopped them with wax. On being thrown into the fire, the wax was melted, the water let out, and the flames extinguished. See Pliny, lib. Philostratus vit. Tyan. lib. 10-49. 3---48.

16. The Conquest of the Miso-tse.

AN imperial poem by the late Emperor of China, Kien Lung, kuown by his talent for poetry in his own country, and celebrated by Voltaire in an epistle which opens thus—

'' Reçois mes complimens, charmant rei de la Chine, [colline.*] Ton trone est donc placé sur la double

The little work before us is a translation from the Chinese, and intituled, "A choral Song of Harmony for the first Part of the Spring;" or literally, Hy. tchun. Konang. tsien. tsong. yo. tchong. ho.

Joyous. spring. brightness. first. part. choral. music. concord.

This title, however, we learn from the Author in his preface, must not be interpreted ad verbum; as the Chinese play all the same part, and have no idea of counterpart, or musick in parts, and of course strictly none of harmony. P. 10.

The Conquest of the Mino-tse is dedicated to Sir George Staunton, who furnished Mr Weston with the Manuscript. The work consists of 50 pages, royal octavo, and six copper-easily be supposed that materials like these can admit but of little poetic embellishment, and cannot be written, as Cicero says to Atticus of Geography, in a very flowery style, "non possunt arenjoypatioedai."

As a specimen we shall give the XVth Stanza in the Author's paraphrase, and the exact meaning of each of the 28 characters.

" Dangerous, places, othous, mountain. river, levelled, msects, serpentme, decp. trap, cross-roads, through inclosures, cut off, broke up, roots of trees, branches, mountain, top now, pass com nand, govern, all, hold as subjection, towns, province, in security, eat drink abundantly. theafs of corn in future commodiously have (enjoy).

" The mountains full of dangerous rocks and frightful precipiess are levelled. Siao and Kin are taken, their deep fosses filled up, their snares detected, and their ambushes destroyed. I have them now all in subjection. My people shall inhabit the country bereafter in perfect security, eat and drink, and reap the fruits of their labours, and return and bring their shoaves with them.

900. Longman and Co. 1010.

A LARGE coloured map, beautifully engraved by Cooper, and presented to the Author by C. Mackenzie, gives the Country of Mysoor to the Reader's view with uncommon clearness and precision.— The work is dedicated to Col. Birry Close, whom the Author describes as " a friend whose instruction and affectionate attachment have been the pride and delight of the best years of his life;" besides being the principal source whence he derived " whatever he may have deserved or attained of distinction in its progress."-An Advertisement prefixed to the Preface is to the following purport, and intended to explain the difficulty of devising any plan free from objection for the orthography of Asiatic names. seems that the scheme of Sir William Jones would be considered unexceptionable, were it fully understood by the English Reader; but, as that is unfortunately not the case, Mr. Wilks thinks its adoption might " The letter & in Hinda, mislead. for example, would be the correct orthography orthography for Italy; but to convey the proper sound to the mere English Reader, we must write Hindoo." Different persons, and the same person at different times, will express a variety of sounds by different English letters; and it is not in Mr. W.'s opinion necessary to be fastidious in our choice for practical purposes. The publick will decide for themselves on the propriety of the succeeding sentences: for our own parts, we had rather they had been omitted; as examples of this description, if adopted, would render our language most erroneous and "Whether we write Ali, Alee, or Aly, seems to be quite indifterent; the second syllable will probably be pronounced in the same manner. Where it is to be decided whether errors familiarized to the English ear should he rejected or retained, the rule which I have proposed To myself is, to retain the error where it has been uniform, and to reject it where the spelling has been various."

The Lieutenant-Colonel then proceeds with an illustration, by which it appears that the true orthography of Seringapatam is Sree-rung-puttun: were he to have given it thus, he supposes he should have been liable to a charge of affectation, besides causing confusion. In this we differ from him; for he must deserve most honour and commendation who, after such an explanation as the above, has the courage to face and combat error: for who will deny that every nation has not a right to maintain the orthography and sounds attached to their mative places? The French call our metropolis Londres; and why? because they have the vanity to suppose their termination more proper or more pleasing than ours; and in this respect we have no right to complain, as we convert the soft sound of Livourne into Leghorn. Much more is advanced on this subject by the Author, to which we refer the Reader.

The Preface informs us, that the materials of these historical sketches were collected merely for the purposes of the Author's public duties, and not with the most distant view to their publication. Without farther definite object, he continued to pursue the subject; and, feeling a strong desire of rescuing from oblivion oral information, he was led to a farther examination if of written authorities, as a necessary and almost imperceptible consequence of what had already been done." Mr. W. thinks the extensive opportunities he possessed of observing the character and manners of the people whose transactions he describes, may compensate such defects as may appear in the perusal of his labours; especially when it is remembered, that the profession of Arms has little connexion with that of Letters. He acknowledges the . necessity. Authors are under in the Western World of citing their authorities; but he considers himself exempt from that necessity in the present instance, as those he consulted are almost wholly unknown in Europe; and were it of material importance, he would have found it a laborious task to refer to each manuscript used on this occasion. As many of those, however, and particularly the Mackenzie collection, may hereafter be deposited in some public institution, he has " in some cases, where the fact is either remarkable in itself, or liable to be controverted, endeavoured to state the authority where either memory or written reference has enabled him to trace it."—Mr. W. then gives a cursory account of the sources of his work, which were, a Memoir compiled at his request under the direction of Poornia, Minister of Mysoor, and Butcherow, his assistant, equally distinguished and intelligent; the former of whom assembled and consulted the best-informed Natives of the country known to possess family MSS. or historical pieces, and thus composed the basis of the Memoir. A Second was a Persiant Manuscript found in the palace of Seringapatam in the year 1799, intituled, "An historical Account of the Antient Rajas of Mysoor, purporting to have been translated in 1798 by Assud Anwar and Gholaum Hussein, assisted by Pootia Pundit, from two Books in the Canara Language, at the Command of the Sultaun." Brig.-gen. Malcolm procured a copy of this curious document for the Author, which he had the satisfaction of reading in 1807; the original was given in 1799 by Col. W. Kirkpatrick, one of the Commissioners for the Affairs of Mysoor, to Lieut.-col. Colin Mackenzie, and has since been translated under his direction with scrupulous care, consists of two portions: the first containing is preserved in a case made of silk or cotton, or tied with tape or riband: the ornamental part varies according to the means of the party to whom The book opens at they belong. either side, and, when unfolded, draws out to the full length. The writing on it may be compared to that done on a state, as the marks made by the pencil, balapum of lapis ollaris, may be rubbed out, and renewed at "This mode of writing pleasure. was not only in antient use for records and public documents, but is still uniwersally employed in Mysoor by Merchants and Shopkeepers." And Mr. W. declares he has seen a bond written on the Cuddultum of a Merchant, regularly witnessed, offered, and received as legal evidence. Mr. Crisp translates the word Kirret conjecturally, in his regulations of Tippoo, palm leaves. The Sultann, considering the facility this mode of writing afforded to the fraudulent in the execution of their schemes, prohibited its use in recording the public accounts. He, however, pronounces it, even with these disadvantages, " a much more of the large apartments were filled with books principally composed of palm leaf and Cudduttums: and enquired what were to be their fate: "Transfer them," said he, " to the Royal stables as fuel to boil the coltee" (grain on which horses are fed); and this was accordingly done. pious artifice of a Bramin saved a small miscellaneous collection, who begged the apartment which contained them might be spared as enclosing the penates of his family. Finally, the principal part of the contents of this room came into the possession of a British Officer; and by various means the Author has had an opportunity of consulting most of the historical tracts; amongst which was "The Record of a curious Enquiry into the State of the Family about the year 1716, for the purpose of ascertaining which of the branches had preserved the true blood of the House unpolluted by unworthy connexions; when, out of thirty-one branches, thirteen were pronounced to be legitimate, and eighteen were excluded from the privilege of giving wives or successors meration of his authorities, Mr. W. mentions several MSS. and Memoirs in different languages, and of various length and merit, which he received from different sources; particularly a "Memoir of the late Mahommedan Dynasty, prepared at his request by the officiating priests at the Mausoleum of the Grandfather of the late Tippoo Sultaun at Colar; characters of Hyder Ally and Tippoo Sultaun from the pen of his valuable friend Seyed Hussein, Persian Secretary to the Rajah of Mysoor, &c. &c." Lieut.-col. Colin Mackenzie indulged Mr. W. with the use of his valuable collection of grants, principally relative to religious affairs, which are inscribed on stone and "These antient documents copper. are of a singularly curious texture," and generally fix the chronology, and frequently describe the genealogy and military history of the donor and his ancestors, including the most remarkable events which have occurred in their civil institutions or religious reforms; " and the facts derived from these inscriptions are illustrated by a voluminous collection of MSS. which can be only trusted with confidence so far as they are confirmed by these authentic documents." MS. of Pootia belongs to this collection, and seemed to merit a separate description. When the Author departed from Madras, it amounted to seventeen hundred grants and six hundred MSS. Antient History in the East must be considered nearly an absolute blank, as it is deformed by fable and anachronism; which defect can never be wholly eradicated except through the means afforded by the above described documents. lect such is, therefore, of high importance; and "Lieut.-col. Mackenzie has devoted to this pursuit the leisure which he has been enabled to take from a long course of active and meritorious service; and has formed, under numerous discouragements, a stupendous and daily increasing collection of all that is necessary to illustrate the antiquities, the civil, military, and religious institutions, and antient history of the South of India," which the Author hopes he will at some future time communicate the substance of to the publick. To this gentleman Mr W, is still farther obliged, for many valuable communications on particular periods of history, written expressly for his purposes, besides an unreserved display of general assistance and friendship.

[To be continued.]

18. An Essay on the Military Policy and Institutions of the British Empire. By C. W. Pasley, Captain in the Corps of Royal Engineers.

WE follow the example of a respectable daily paper *, by introducing a pamphlet with the above title to the knowledge of our Readers, though the Author of it is entirely unknown to us. The work has, we learn, excited greater attention among the higher classes of Political Readers in the country than any since the time of Mr. Burke, without even excepting Mr. Walsh's celebrated performance on the affairs of France.

The Author's general object will be best understood by the following extract from his introductory chapter:

" However various may be the reception of the opinion, that we shall most probably lose, in a limited number of years, our present preponderating naval power, every man must allow that it is an event at least very possible. Consequently it is the duty of this country to be prepared for such an event, and to take measures for meeting the calamity before it is too late. Let us, whilst it is yet in our power, embrace the opportunity of preparing for the worst; or our posterity, who may find themselves enslaved beneath the iron yoke of a foreign despot, may have reason to weep in tears of blood the improvidence and errors of their fathers.

" If, on the contrary, we do not improve our system of defence, either from a supposition, that as our little Island is now superior by sea to the whole world, it is always to continue so; or, from a hope, that although the royal house of Bourbon, the Republic of France, and now its selfmade Emperor, have all successively attempted our destruction, and outdone each their predecessors in their efforts for that end; yet, if we can be so happy as to maintain our independence during the life of Napoleon, we may see him succeeded in his government by a set of mild unambitious rulers, who will preserve perpetual peace with us; or, if we trust that, when his presiding genius shall no longer guide that vast Empire, it is to fall to pieces, and be divided among his generals, as among so many successors of this new Alexander, ^{* &}quot;The Times," Feb. 11, 1811; from which this whole article is borrowed. EDT, instead

"In modern times we console ourselves, by the example of our revolted colon es in North America having been able eventually to succeed in asserting their independence against the efforts made to keep them in subjection. But we forget the grand causes of their success; the feeble and temporising half-measures employed by our government; the smallness of the force sent, and the great distance from whence it was to receive its supplies, as well as the general inactivity of our Commanders; added to the combination of superiority of force; yet where was the free government that Prussia could boast

^{* &}quot; Charles XII. etant à Bender, trouvant quelque resistance dans le Sénat de Snede, écrivit qu'il enverroit une de ses bottes pour commander. Cette botte auroit commandé comme un Roi despotique.' De l'Esprit des Lou; l. v. chap. xiv."

^{† &}quot;Montalembert's Letters give & striking picture of swedish affairs at that period."

of at that period? Had she not a Trenck immured in her dungeons at the time when her heroic military efforts were the admiration of the world? In our times, were not the same Prussians at Jena defeated and dispersed by Buonaparte, with scarcely a shadow of resistance, although their country has neither lost nor gained in political freedom since their fathers drove the French before them, with almost as little difficulty in the battle of Rosbach *?

" Since, then, nations, which have either peen free, or have been animated with the most enthusiastic desire of liberty, have often been subdued, or have been kept in subjection, by foreign armies; since nations, that have been formidable in war under an absolute government, have even sometimes become insignificant when they had acquired a more free one; and since the armies of the same nation have, without any change of constitution or domestic government whatever, been at one time almost invincible, and at another time cowardly and contemptible; it is evident, that we ought not to lay too great a stress upon the freedom of any nation, which is a secondary consideration in war, unless its rulers have the wisdom to play, and possess, or are entrusted with full powers for enforcing the most effectual measures in order to ensure its success; unless, in short, its military institutions and policy are equal or superior to those of its enemies.

"We must, therefore, whilst we glory in the freedom, the public spirit, and patriotism of this country, not give way to the empty delusion that by them alone we are to be invincible. It is our duty to make preparations for fully meeting invasion, exactly such as any other government, that had no confidence in the patriotism of its subjects, would make. Then, when the day of invasion arrives, the enthusiasm of the nation will be an useful aid, and may accelerate or contribute to the success of measures wisely planned.

"But if, previous to invasion, we trust to enthusiasm, in itself, as a great or principal agent of defence, it will do us infinitely more harm than good, by inducing us to relax, instead of increasing, the vigour of our preparatory measures; whereby we shall lose all the advantages of patriotism, which, it is evident, cannot be of the smallest utility in war, as long as it is confined to speeches and sentiments, and does not lead to action. Besides this great evil, I need scarcely add, that the self-sufficiency and confidence derived from this kind of enthusiasm, which induces men to overrate their own powers, in looking forward to situations in which they have not been tried, and to undervalue the force and powers of unknown enemies, is, of all other feelings, when the hour of trial comes, the most likely, on the least unexpected reverse, to sink into panic, terror, and despondency."

The following comparison will, we presume, be deemed rather too unfavourable to the stability of British greatness.

"If my reader will therefore enter into the subject of this chapter, with the same unprejudiced spirit with which his father would have viewed the question thirty or forty years ago, or with which a German or an American may now view it; he will probably own, that the conquests of the French by land, which add to the power and resources of their Empire in every respect, may be compared to the growth of a goodly tree upon a mountain; which, as its trunk and branches increase in size and beauty, strikes its roots deeper and wider into the earth; whilst, on the contrary, the naval power of Great Britain, which has been founded upon an extraordinary series of victories, that do, in themselves, add nothing permanent to the resources of the nation, resembles an oak planted in a flower-pot; which the more rapidly it increases in size, beauty, and apparent strength, is only hastening so much the sooner to the period of its final decay and dissolution."

The author having then, in a chapter displaying infinite knowledge of the subject, shewn the inferiority of colonial possessions to continental territories at home, enters upon his grand subject, the insufficiency of the present system of our martial policy, and our consequent want of success; and this he happily illustrates by a comparison with our naval system, of which the results are so different.

"In order to illustrate this proposition, let us suppose that such an event were, to happen, as the destruction of a British fleet o fforty sail of the line; and let us consider what would be the consequence of it, under two different suppositions.

"First,

^{* &}quot;It is curious to look back to the utter contempt which the Prussians of those days entertained for the French army. Tempelhof, in relating a dashing enterprize of fifteen hundred cavalry, who drove eight thousand French out of Gotha, enumerates, amongst the prisoners made by the Prussians, a number of actors, lacqueys, cooks, friseurs, milliners, &c. and amongst the booty, all manner of scents and essences, besides powdering gowns, parasols, ruffles, parrots, &c. provided by the French officers to please the ladies!!! (Geschichte des siebenjahrigen Krieges. Erster Theil, 231.)—Times are now wonderfully altered!"

A not upamiable sentiment of humanity; a consideration of this man's former services; pity for that man's wife and children, aided by all the powers of parl.amentary interest, and by favour of every kind, would be set actively to work to screen the guilty. The people might be indignant for a time, but their anger would die away into regret, or, at most, it would only vent itself in peevish complaints against Ministers, for ever having wasted the public money in such an useless and chimerical attempt as that of forming a Navy capable to cope with the fleets of so great a power as France: a measure, which, under the circumstances that have been imagined, would appear superfluous to the safety, and might be represented as dangerous to the liberty, of the British nation. Such would be the consequence of our military policy being suddenly transferred to navai war. After the first serious disaster, we would abandon ourselves to despair; and shutting ourselves up in our own island, we would give up maritume affairs for ever.

"Let us now reverse the scene; and, according to the second supposition, let us consider what would be the consequence of the desiraction of a great British fleet, Ossit Mac. February, 1811.

happen in spite of every human precaution; for what Nation can reasonably expect always to command such wonderful success as we have hitherto emoyed on the inconstant ocean? At all events, every exertion would be used to repair the loss, in order once more to meet and give battle to the victorious enemy: the warehouses and timber-yards of merchants and of builders would be ransacked, to supply the necessary stores; the parks and forests throughout the country would be stript of their trees, all the shipwrights of the king-dom would be collected in the royal dock-yards, and the dock-with artific and rayed ng rapidly from the interior to fend their aid. The work would go on night and day; a new fleet would speedily be bunt and equipped; the merchant-vessels in all our ports would be emptied, in order to ful it with fighting men; large detachments, or volunteers, from the artiflery, the regular army, and militia, would be hurried on board, to supply the place of marines; quotas of men would be furnished by al. the counties; and the commanders, if such there had been employed, whose sole or whose principal claim was their parliamentary interest, would be thrown upon the shelf, in order to make room for a Rodney, or a Nelson. In the near time, the cities, the fields, and manufactories, would be thinned; and the citizens of England, converted into soldiers, would be assembled with arms in their hands, in camps or cantonments near the coast, in order to repel the formidable invasion, to which the country would lie open.

8

"Such, in all probability, would be the consequence of the destruction of a great British fleet in the present times. Instead of sinking under such a calamity, we should only rise more determined, and more terrible. And why? Because every man amongst us sees, that our naval superwrity, which formerly might have been considered merely as an object of national pride and ambition, has, by degrees, become the only safe-guard of our existence as a state.

" If the principles upon which we have reasoned in the two preceding chapters were generally allowed to contain a just view of the state of the world, the British Nation would see, that the best or perhaps the only sure mode of preserving its independence is, to auticipate the Buemy, and either to destroy him, or to weaken him in such a degree, as to pince our naval power funtil we lose which, we can scarcely be conquered) in permanent security against his attacks. This would at once lead us to adopt a new system of martial policy, such as has been recommended in this chapter, not contrary to, but more enlarged than our present one, upon which it would be founded, and with which it is in fact identified, both in spirit and in Object.

"Then the same feeling would be excited, and the same consequences would arise, from the failure of a military expedition, which I have pictured as likely to ensue from the destruction of a fleet. Instead of resigning ourselves to womanish despair, after an unsuccessful attempt to free any part of the Continent, or any great Island, from the yoke of France, we should only be roused to greater exertions; and the World would be astonished at seeing or bearing of a British army, more commanded, making its appearance on the spot, which might have witnessed some former lumiliation, cager to avenge the national wrongs, and to wipe out the memory of past disgrace.

war, as we have done in naval, and as we should most probably do in defensive war, what Nation upon earth could resist us? The Usurper of Europe, bold as he is, might have cause to tremble on his throne; and the people of the world, who have hitherto had so little reason to place confidence in us, since they have generally seen our armies re-embark and leave them to their fate the moment that the bour of serious danger drew near, would flock to our standards by myriads; and would look up to us with respect and veneration, as their saviours, their instructors, and their models, in the art of War, and in every manly art."

[To be continued.]

19. Memoirs of Prince Eugene, of Savey.

Written by himself. Translated from the French by William Mudford, and containing all those Omissions which have been detected in the recent Parisian Editions. Embellished with a correct Likeness.

8vo, pp. 254. Sherwood and Co.

THESE Memoirs extend from the year 1683 to 1734, comprising a long and eventful period in Military History; and that they are genuine, there is strong internal evidence.

"There is perceptible," says the French Editor, "in the style of the Prince, a military air which coincides well with his actions and character. Another proof of the authenticity of this manuscript is, the tautologies of an old man; the repetitions, which an author could not commit; the negligences, which do not belong to a man of letters; while there is nothing which does not agree with the soldier: a tone which would ill become another, but which is pardonable in a military man; not always excellent, and sometimes too familiar. His style, such as it is, is clear and concise, like his conversation."

Let us, however, transcribe the Prince's own Preface:

Italian and German manuscripts respecting me, which I have neither read nor written. A panegyrist, whose name is Dumont, has printed a large folio volume, which he calls My Battles. This gentleman is sufficiently turgid: he ingratiates himself at the expence of Turenne, who, according to his assertion, would have been taken at Cromona in 1703, or killed at Hochstet in 1704, if he had been opposed to me.—What stuff!

"Some future historians, good or bad, will perhaps take the trouble to enter into the details of my youth, of which I scarcely recollect any thing. They will certainly speak of my Mother; somewhat the intriguing indeed, driven from the Court, exiled from l'aris, and suspected, I believe, of sorcery, by persons who were not themselves very great conjurors. They will tell how I was born in France, and how I quitted it, my heart swelling with enmity against Louis XIV. who refused me a company of horse, because, said he, I was of too delicate a constitution; and an abbey, because he thought (from

"I received one to make peace, if they would great me ad I wanted. I returned on the 8th of April to the Hague, where I found the plempoten across of the king of France. Famine, the cold of a winter that was unexampled in severity, and the want of men and money, rendered him desirous of peace; but the conquered forget that they are conquered, as soon as they begin to negotiate. They mistake stubbornness for firancess; and they fluish by being still more conquered.

"There were a hundred thousand men in the Low Countries, under the orders of Maribocough and mine; and a hundred thousand men under hose of Villars. 'I go,' said he to the King when he parted, 'to drive your enemies so far, that they shall never see again the shores of the Scheldt; and to regain by a battle, when I arrive, every thing that has been taken from your Majesty.'

"Without wishing to avoid it, for he was brave in body and mind, he took an extremely advantageous position: that was one of his great talents; he wanted very few things to become a perfect warrior. With reinforcements which came to us from all aides, we were stronger than he; but there and though I made, with regard to myself, the reflection that the young ones form but too quickly (an advantage which they have over every nation), we decided upon the battle of Maiplaquet. On the 11th of Sep ember a thick fog which arose conceated our arrangements from the Marshars: we dissipated it at eight o'clock in the moraing by a general discharge of artillers. To the military music succeeded that of all the bantbuys, drums, fifes, and trumpets, with which I reguled the two armies. We then saw Villars walk ng along all the ranks. As they must always speak about the King to the Preach: " My friends," said he to them as I heard, the King commands me to fight; are you not all g ad?' They immediately shouted, Long live the King and M de Villars! Lattacked, without any shouting, the wood of Sars. I railied the English Guards, who, at the commencement, were scattered, some from conrage, and some from a contrary cause -My German battaliëns supported them. Notwithstanding this, however, we should have been overthrown but for the Duke dargyle, who, climbing courageous-ly on the parapet of the entrenchment, rendered me master of the wood. This me a ball behind the ear, which induced all those who were about me to advise me, on account of the blood which I lost, to have my wound dressed. 'If I am beaten,' said I, 'it will not be worth while; and if the French are, I shall bave time enough.'

"What better could I have done than to have perished after so much responsibility as I had taken upon myself on this occasion also? I must be pardoned this digression and personal history; it is human. To endeavour to repair the faults which we have committed, is, I confess, more noble; but to survive one's glory is terrible. My affairs on the right going on well, I wished to decide those of Marlborough's on the left, which went on It was in vain that the Prince of slowly. Orange had planted a standard on the third entreachment. The Dutch corps were almost all lying on the ground, either killed or wounded. During six hours, Marlborough fought with the centre and the left, without any particular advantage. My cavalry, which I sent to his aid, was · routed in the way by the household troops, which last were served the same by a battery which took them in flank. borough, at length, without me, had gained some ground; hence it was easy for me to turn the centre of the French army, which was exposed by the defeat of the wings. Boufflers did for Villars, what I did for Marlborough: and when he saw him fall from his horse dangerously wounded above the knee, and the victory escaping them, he thought only of making the finest retreat in the best possible order. I think it is not over-rating it to say, that the loss of the two armies amounted to forty thousand men: those that had not been killed, died of fatigue. I let the remains of my army repose themselves, interred all I could, and then marched to Mons.

"I had only five thousand men. opened the trench on the 25th of September, and, ready to make an assault on the horn-work of Bertamont, the 22nd of October Grimaldi capitulated. Our troops entered into winter-quarters; and I, obliged to post along the roads without ceasing, went with Marlborough to the Flague, to win over the States General, upon the point of escaping us. I advised them to say, at the conferences of Gertruydenberg, that they would not hear any talk of peace, unless it were a general one. That it is a good way to continue the war; for, it is an even wager, that out of four or five powers, there will be one whose interest it will be to have uo peace. I was sure of Queen Anne, because I was sure of Marlborough; he seconded me ably. I went to give an account of what I had done to the Emperor. I drew him a hasty sketch of Europe, of whose state I saw that his Council had not the smallest idea. I shewed the eager desire which there was in many Powers to quit us. We are courageous at a distance. They told me that I had made a fine campaign. I replied, that I had killed more than they could give me but I would try could give me, but I would try.

"I collected 300,000 floring for my army, which, for a long time, had not been paid; and as many recruits as I could, to reinforce Heister against the Robels of Hungary, whom they had neither the talent to beat, nor the skill to appease. returned, soon after, into the Low Countries, by Berlin, whither I repaired, to descend on the 1st of April (1710) along with my friend the Prince of Anhalt-Dessau. was necessary to hinder the King of Prussia, who imagined that the King of Sweden would find him plenty of work, to withdraw his troops from Italy, where the Duke of Savoy, meditating an irruption into Dauphiny, had need of him.

"Frederick William promised me. I proved to him, that, since Pultowa, there had been no longer a Charles XII. and that he was the prisoner of his friend the Turks.

"I was sorry; for he could not be a Gustavus Adolphus, who made the whole Empire tremble; but I wished that Russia should be prevented from aggrandizing herself, and I considered Sweden as a counterpoise for the equilibrium of Europe. The King of Prussia presented me with a handsome sword, and a fine snuff-box, worth 24,000 florins, which was a great deal for a poor and avaricious Prince. I went to the Hague on the 15th of April, to meet Marlborough; and when we arrived in Flanders, we found the lines of the French, extending from Maubege to Ypres, taken by Cumberland. We went to lay siege to Donai.

"My baggage, coming from Holland, was taken by a French privateer, near Anvers: all my plate, strong boxes, and the presents I had received. Louis XIV. sensible, apparently, of all that I had said respectful to him through the Marshal de Boufflers, had every thing returned to me. I gave 500 florins and a gold mounted sword to the Captain of the privateer. I opened the trench on the night of the 5th or 6th of May. Albergotti made a vigorous sortie on the 8th, which greatly deranged me. No commandant ever made so many as he did. Sometimes he even made four in a day.

"Villars, recovered from his wounds, arrived from Paris to make us raise the siege. We took up a good position; and, though it was not so strong as that which he had taken at Malplaquet the preceding year, he respected it. So many battles and so many places lost since the commencement of the century, had rendered

the

rough; and I returned to Vienna on the 26th of January." - [To be continued]

20. The Economy of a Christ an Life; or, Maxims and Rules of religious and moral Conduct, arranged from the Sucred Scriptures, and adapted to Christians of every Denomination. With short explanatory Notes. By the Rev. W. B. ngley, A. M. F. L. S. In two Volumes, 8vo. pp. 432. Stockdale.

been to collect into small compass some of the leading maxims and rules of conduct, that are laid down in the Sacred Writings: to arrange them under appropriate heads, in such manner that they should read connectedly with each other (preserving, as nearly as it was possible, the integrity of the text); and to accompany all the difficult passages with short explanatory Notes."

has very well succeeded; and his Work may form a safe and useful addition to a Family assortment of Religious Books.

Wye has been repeatedly described, and the Monumental Instructions preserved; particularly in the Quarto Volume of the Rev. Philip Parsons, the worthy Incombent of that Church.

H. C. B. requests that some ingenious artest will favour us with a view of the Caurches of Willingehall Donard Willingehall Spain, near Ongar, Essex, remarkable for their being both situate very near each other in one Church-yard.

The two old Farthings of "A Bit of AN A." are worth exactly one new Halfpenny.

His Lima viver is so called from having been part of the conquest of that place.

To "An Occasional Connespondent" at Landguard Fort, we answer there are no such General Regulations in Public Offices; but to Index, who recommends a Triduan Newspaper, "that there is (or lately was) just what he w shee."

CUPIDUS COGNOSCENDS IS referred to his Schoolman'er, and An OLD SUBSCRIBER, to No. 56, Gerrard Street.

A. Z.'s Tracts were not received till efter the Enquiry.

The View and Account of Allington Castle in our next; with Mr. Booken's Communication; A Boaneses, &c. &c.  We

 We have been favoured with a Copy of the following exquisite Lines, sent by an affectionate Father to the Instructress of a savourite Daughter; and make no Apology to either Party for presenting them to the Publick.

HOW oft, with patient love, thy searching sought; Deep in its bed the pearl of mind has Gently thy touch the shell of Nature broke, And in the precious drop the colour woke: Else had that pearl been fated there to Shell! And mix'd with shells obscure, itself a Instructress! as thy gentle spirit bends, And with my Sarah's first emotions blends, When her heart flutters and her eyes look bright llight, With sudden knowledge and with new de-Oh! teach beyond what Learning's page inspires, Teach home affections and subdued desires; While her young eyes the moral volume [the deed, read, Guard that she think the thought, she act And thus become the pupil of thy heart; . Taste, Temper, Morals, like thine own, impart.

IMPROMPTU,

THE morning dawn'd serenely bright
When first my Anna saw the light.
Oh, may it, each revolving year,
More bright, more beauteous: still appear!
Till the Great Power, by whom 'twas given,
Recall the gentle soul to Heaven!
N.

To the Memory of the late JONAS DRYANDER, F. R. S.

Librarian to the Right Hon. Sir Jos. BANKS, Bart. K. B. and to the Royal Society of London; Vice President of the Linnean Society, &c. &c.

A SWEDE'S remains beneath this marble lie, [the sky.
Whose fame on Merit's wings has reach'd
His soul no narrow selfish ends could move;
All partial views, all party schemes above.
With Learning's amplest, richest treasures
grac'd, [doms trac'd.
He Nature's paths through all her kingHigh honour'd by all scientific ranks,
Prince of Linnean lore, the friend of BANKS.
DRYANDER'S loss long, long shall Science mourn,
And heap fresh garlands on his sacred urn.

And heap fresh garlands on his sacred urn. Sad Suzera too her fav'rite son deplores, And wails, from Holmia to Lapponia's shores:

In vain she raves, and spreads her arms, and weeps—

He in the land he lov'd, in Britain sleeps. But, great thy Son, fair Succia; cease thy woe, Long shall his honours ernament thy brow.

His works Britannia midst her treasures guards, [Bards.]
Nor will his fame remain ussung by British Dec. 21, 1810.

DEATH, JUDGMENT, HEAVEN, AND HELL. By Sam. Elsdale.

(Concluded from page 64.)

THE left-hand rank a different picture show;

Despair and terror, wretchedness and woe. Sad signs of anguish in each face appear, While dismal yells and howlings rend the air:

Hell yawns beneath; above, a thundering cloud.

Of livid vengeance murmurs hoarse and Flashing confusion from his angry look, Their sovereign Judge in dreadful accents spoke:

"Depart, ye cursed, into hell's domains, For endless ages groan in galling chains While flaming brimstone gnaws with never-dying pains.

Still as they was:e, your burning limbs shall grow,

And feel no intermission of their woe;
The partners of your guilt your anguish share.

And howl upbraidings in your frighted ear; Strange sights are seen, and hideous shrieks resound, [around.

And Hell's black fiends deal forture all Hence, to your dungeous, wretches, hence depart, [mangled heart; Wail, gnash your teeth, and base your

Feel now that pain your cruelty devis'd,
And dread that vengeful God your furious pride despis'd."

Sentence pronounc'd, the Demons seize their prey.

And drive the yelling ghastly crowd away.

Involv'd in sulphurous smoke, they foam along,

Sharp whips of Scorpions urge the flying Hell opes her gaping jaws with tenfold

And pours a fetid flood of dark red fire.

Back they recoil; but driven by vengeful might, [endless night;

Leap the wide-yawning gulph, and sink to There in deep dungeons feel outrageous woe, [know.

Which spirits damn'd, and they alone, can Here impious Atheists (Atheists now no more!)

The fury of Omnipotence deplore;

Their harden'd necks and knees so stubborn bent, [ment. And own God's justice in their punish-

And own God's justice in their punish-See midnight Murderers, and the cumning Thief,

The sturdy Villain, and the cruel Chief Who rul'd o'er empires with an iron rod,. While deathless beings trembled at his nod.

Here

crew,

Countless as drops in wide-expanded dew; Or dancing motes in sunbeam's shifting ray; Or tints of morning breaking into day; Or waves in rearing Ocean's bollow bed, When furious tempests rouse its hoary bead;

Or grains of saud upon its shores that lie; Or twinkling stars that grace the spangled sky:

Innumerous, deathless multitudes were hurl'd [world.

To torture and despair, in that infernal But haste, my Muse; fly, fly this cursed coast,

And join the triumph of the ransom'd host.

Apostles, Prophets, Martyrs — splendid train!

New reap in glory what was sown in pain. Unmov'd the cross and tort'ring stake they view'd, [dew'd,

The rack with mangled habs and gore be-The shining are, the club, the pointed upear,

The tiger tierce and fell, the shaggy bear, The grating saw, crimson'd with Christian blood,

While from the victim flows the vital flood,

And five in light and love to all eternity.

No more shall death, or pain, or grief,
aunoy,
[109];
But each revolving hour awake increasing
Seated on royal seats, the feast they join.

Seated on royal seats, the feast they join. A banquet spread by grace and love divine. With scraphs and with scraphim unite, Around the throne of God's eternal light.

To silver harps symphonious hymns they sing,

Wardling the praises of th' Almighty King, Who gave his only Son for man to die, And open by his death the portais of the sky;

To lead his followers to their blest abode. The mercy-seat of Heav'n, the bosom of their God.

All praise to Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, [ly host] From man redeem'd, and from the heaven-

LINES

On seeing a Snowdrop in the Shrubbery at the Hyde, near Ingatestone, Essex, Feb. 4, 1811. Written in the Hermitage.

RETURNING months a milder season bring;

I greet the Snowdrop, harbinger of Spring!

And Flora gladly sees her favourite flower, Nurs'd by the soften'd breeze and tepid shower,

O'er the cold earth its modest leasiets rear, And prove the earliest promise of the year. Here, shelter'd from the frost and pelting storm,

Securely may arise its slender form, And to the morning rays its blossoms

Emblems alike of Innocence and Hope!
T. M. H.

EPITAPH FOR ROSA,

A favourite Dog, brought from Egypt by J. W-b, E.q. whose Medical Skill can be equalled only by his unwearied Humanity.

STRANGER, attend! nor pass with heedless eve

This spot where faithful Rosa's ashes lie.

From Egypt, Learning's antient clime, first brought, [sought;

With her lov'd master distant realms she Happier than Argus, still his steps pursued, And féarless still War's dreadful havock 'view'd

In Walcheren, where, lost to Hope's bright ray, [day; Impumber'd deaths still mark'd each rising

Unnumber'd deaths still mark'd each rising When e'en that Master's skill had fail'd to save

Thousands of Britons from the silent grave.

Worn-out with anxious toil, he sinks opprest, [breast;

And Life's last sigh seems issuing from his stretch'd on his bed with watchful faithful love, [move;

No threats or coaxings could poor Rosa

No threats or coaxings could poor Rosa And when returning Health by slow degrees Glow'd in his cheek, and conquer'd fell disease,

Rosa with artless tricks and simple joy For some short moments would his thoughts employ.

Now grateful Friendship grants a last retreat.

And Rosa's ashes there due honours meet.

HOMER'S HYMN TO PAN.
UNLOCK thy stores, sweet Melody, to praise

Cyllenian Mercury's wild and shagged son, Well arm'd with horned front, and feet of gnats,

Patron of noise and revelry, who loves
With woody Pisa's buskin'd Nymphs to lead
The festive dance, or rouse the echoing song.

They with unweary feet each craggy brow Frequent ascend, and Pan, the shepherds' king, [woods, Call ceaseless, Pan, the Monarch of the Lord of the pastur'd plain, the snowy rock,

Green mead, and tangled brake, and silver-

Oft on the sunny precipice he flings
His hoary length, and vigilant surveys
His own peculiar care, the sportive flocks
That feed and frolic in the vale below.
Nor this his only joy;—transfixt in death,
Full many a victim mourns the unerring arm

[to scale

That stretch'd him low—for Pan delights The rugged steep, and range the spacious mead, Chasing with eager quest his panting prey. Sweet too the sound, when thro' the listening glen

He pours his rural descant. Not so sweet.
The winged choristers of flowery Spring
Warble their tuneful minstrelsy—for oft

Nymphs [the dance Calls from their mountain-caves to weave By some clear fountain's dark descending wave, [midst Or swell the song symphonious. In the He moves conspicuous in discoloured garb, Spoir of the slaughter'd Lynx. Then Ju-

Big with tumultuous joy, fills every gale, "Echo the mountains round," and every hill

And every vale is vocal. Then on beds
Of hyacinth, that thro' the ambient air
Breathes incense, they in holy concord

Jove first—next all the blest inhabitants.

That tenant the immortal scats of Heavin;
But chiefly thee, O Mercury, of Heavin
Prime Lacquey, thee their tuneful pipes adore, [plains Sire of their King! thou erst the fruitful Of Arcady with heavenly footsteps trod'st Guarding with vigilant eye thy fleecy care, What time fierce-flaining love consum'd thy heart

For blooming Dryope,—she, not unkind, Breath'd mu ual flame; from whose soft nuptials sprung

An uncouch birth, on legs of goats upborne, Forth from whose infant front two budding horns

Sprout horrible; confounded at the view; The starting Mother fled—but him his Sire Saw with parental eyes, and its weak frame, Sheltering with pleasing care from every blast,

Bore to the gates of Heaven—there scated Amongst the Sons of Jove. The laughing

The stranger-child with looks of joy caress'd—

All call'd him Pan, for unto all he gave Joy and delight. Thee then, celestial King, Pleas'd I invoke, and hail thy name in song.

Oxford, May 7, 1810. Soszino.

Prio-

Castlereagh.

House of Lords, Jan. 23.

The Lord Chancellor this day moved his four Resolutions respecting Proxies; which stated in substance the general right of every Noble Peer to vote by proxy, except only in such cases where a standing order, or previous determination of their Lordships, forbade the use of it; and that, in putting such previous question on their use, Peers present in person, and Peers present by proxy, had an equal right to give their votes.

Earl Moura conceived the present to be an unnecessary and mischievous question; and should therefore move that the House do now adjourn.

The Earls of Rosse and Mansfield supported the Resolutions; and the Duke of Norfolk and Earl Stanhope the Amendment. On a division for the latter, the numbers were — Contents 68, Proxies 27 — Non Contents 67, Proxies 26 — Majority of two against Ministers.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, accompanied by a number of the Commons, presented at the bar a Bill to provide for the Administration of the think it constitutional to take away such an amount of Patronage from the Executive Government, and place it in hands where it might be turned against the Administration of the Regent.

GENT. MAG. February, 1811.

Mr. Lambe protested against the Restrictions

Messrs Adam and Sheridan dwelt at length upon the indelicacy of instituting an examination into the disbursements of the Privy Purse.

Mr. Witherforce supported the Bill. Mr. Giles expressed his disapprobation of several of the clauses.

Mr. Perceval replied. The Bill was then passed.

House of Lords, Jan. 25.

The House resolved itself into a Committee on the Regency Bill.

On the clause limiting the period of the Restrictions to the 1st of February 1812, Lord Grenville, alluding to the experience which they had acquired of the nature of his Majesty's disorder, with the opinion of the Physicians, that, should it unhappily exceed the former periods of his recovery, they should then begin to entertain unfavourable apprehensions, proposed to insert August instead of February, which would give six months for the duration of the Restrictions.

Earl

Earl Grey disapproved of the Restrictions; but supported the Amendment, upon the principle of rendering this baneful system as little pernicious as possible to the country.

Viscount Sidmouth shortly spoke; after which the Amendment and several other clauses were agreed to.

On the Clause respecting the House-, hold being read, the Marquis of Lansdowne, after stating the grounds of his Amendment, moved, that after the words " vesting the care of his Majesty's person in the Queen, together with the sole direction of such portion of his Majesty's Household as shall be deemed requisite and suitable for the due attendance on his Majesty's sacred person, and the maintenance of his royal dignity," should be inserted, " and as shall be specified in an Act of Parliament to be hereafter passed; and that, until the passing of such Act, no officer of his Majesty's Household shall be removed; and that, if any vacancy shall happen in any office in his Majesty's Household, it shall not, during such time, be filled up."

The Earl of Liverpsol denied the inconsistency of the Resolution; and hoped their Lordships would not think it advisable to after the course prescribed by the Bill; particularly as, by rendering the Officers of the Household irremovable by the Queen, all objection upon the ground of influence had been done away.

Earl Grey, in a speech of great length, animadverted upon the evasion of the preliminary Resolutions; and asked, was the House prepared to abandon the conditions on which his R. H. the Prince of Wales had been induced to accept the awful and weighty trust of government? Could they, after this, call upon that illustrious Person for a rigid performance of his duties and obligations? It had been said, but, he conceived, with very little colour of reason, that he, as one of those who had formerly been of opinion that the influence of the Crown might be diminished without disadvantage, was now inconsistent in opposing an abridgement of it in the person of the Regent. He denied the truth of this observation. If the power and influence of the Crown was exorbitant, if it did exceed those limits which the Constitucion dictated and the liberties of the people required, they should be diminished upon a full exposition of their danger, and upon the application of general principles. He could not see or recognize the propriety of curtailing them to serve a partial or a temporary The noble Lord concluded with beseeching their Lordships to pause before they lent their sanction to a measure so pregnant with evils.

The Lord Chanceller, in an energetic and manly speech, repelled the marked insimuations which had been thrown out; and declared, that neither the reports of the Physicians, nor threats in or out of doors, should operate to prevent his exercising his own judgment, in whatever regarded his interests.

Feb.

Lord Grenville thought the Clause before their Lordships so inconsistent with their former Resolutions, upon which they had grounded their Addresses to the Queen and to the Prince, that he should feel it to be his duty to vote that the Clause shall not stand part of the Bill.

Lords Redesdale and Sidmouth opposed the Amendment; which was supported by Earl Stanhope and Lord Clancarty.

The Committee then divided on the motion "that the words of the original Clause should stand part of the Bill;" when the numbers were — Contents 96 Non-Contents 108 — Majority against Ministers 12.—On the Marquis of Lansdowne's Amendment; Contents 107, Non-Contents 98—Majority against Ministers 9.

Jan. 28.

The order of the day being read, for taking into consideration the Report of the Regency Bill, the Duke of Susses addressed their Lordships at great length, and with much warmth, against the Bill.

Lord Grenville moved an Amendment to the clause for limiting the period of the Restrictions till the 1st of Feb. 1812, by proposing that the word "August" be inserted instead of the word "February."

Viscount Sidmouth was not so sanguine in his expectations of his Majesty's recovery as the noble Mover, and therefore considered the longer period for the duration of the Restrictions as the most applicable to the case. He felt gratified that the Noble Lord had proposed six months from the present time, instead of six months from the lst November last, but should oppose the Amendment.

The Earl of Coventry observed, that, situated as he was, he was not ambitious of delivering his sentiments, but that he could not divest himself of an anxiety to declare the grounds upon which he differed from those Noble Lords with whom he had hitherto had the honour to be in unison. My Lords, (said he) I have been actuated in my vote by no other motive than a conviction in my own mind, that the prosperity of the British Empire, the dignity of the Crows, and the liberties of the People, cannot be maintained under a restricted Regency. With this impression, I beneficer within a reasonable time. This was a species of disorder as to which he had little confidence in the opinions of physicians. If all the physicians on earth were to tell him that his Majesty's recovery would be speedy, he would not believe them. Upon the same grounds, were they to declare that his Majesty's recovery would not be speedy, he would be equally incredulous. The restoration of the Sovereign to the full exercise of his mental powers depended upon other causes than mere medical aid. In the language of the Scriptures, if it was the pleasure of God that "there should be light" in the royal mind, "let there be light." He would act upon his oath, in ment.

The Dukes of Kent and Gloucester? Earls Buckinghamshire, Westmorland, Stanhope, Moira, Liverpool, Marquis Lansdowne, Lords Boringdon, Clanearty, and King, shortly spoke. A division on Lord Grenville's Amendment then took place.—Contents 84, Proxies 38—Non-Contents 88, Proxies 51. Majority for Ministers 17.—Six other divisions followed, the result of which was, that the Amendments made in the Committee, where Absentees were not allowed to vote by proxy, were all over-ruled; and the Bill restored to the state in which it came from the Commons, with the exception of some verbal alterations.

Hover

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Jan. 29.

The Regency Bill was passed, and sent to the Commons, with a message desiring their concurrence to the Amendments.

Jan. 31.

A petition from the Corporation of London, praying for certain alterations in Smithfield Market; another for continuing the improvement near Temple Bar; and a third from certain persons praying for the erection of a Theatre in the City of London, were presented.

The Amendments to the Regency Bill were agreed to.

House or Loaps, Feb. 1.

The Regency Bill, with Amendments, was brought up....The Earl of Liverpool laid on the table the proposed form of the Commission for giving the Royal Assent to the Regency Bill, and gave notice of his intention to move a Resolution on the subject to-morrow, if no observations were likely to be made that would lead to dehate; or of postponing it till Monday, if a discussion was likely to arise.

Feb. 9.

The Earl of Liverpool proposed a Resolution authorizing certain Lords to apply the Great Seal to a Commission for granting the Royal Assent to the Regency Bill.

Earl Grey, without objecting to this specific proposition, begged once more to eater his protest against the whole of the proceedings which had been adopted by Ministers in the course of this business.

Lord Holland also entered his protest against the line of conduct pursued by Ministers. The course adopted in this business had, to his conception, been equally calculated to produce delay and difficulty, as it was undoubtedly unconstitutional and illegal.

Lord Redesdale supported the Resolution, as being the only regular and constitutional mode of proceeding.

After some farther conversation between Lord Holland and Lord Redesdate, the Resolution was agreed to.

House of Commons, Feb. 4

Subsequently to a conference with the Lords, Mr. Dunday appeared at the bar with a Resolution of the Lords, in which they desired the concurrence of the Commons to the following Resolution:---That it is expedient and necessary that Letters Patent, under the Great Seal, be issued for the purpose of giving an assent in the King's patte to the Regency Bill."

The Chanceller of the Exchequer stated that, in pursuance of the course on while the House had entered, it had now become necessary to consider the best mo of giving the Royal sanction to the BM which had passed the two Houses; and with this view he should move, that the House do resolve itself into a Committe of the whole House on the Stam of the Nation.

Sir T. Turton rose, in this final stage of the proceeding, to reiterate his strug est condemnation and protest against in The Hon. Baronet thought that those who had supported the proceeding by Bill, had ill maintained the character of superior loyalty and attachment to the interests of the Crown.. The Right Hort.

Gentleman opposite his zeal for poetical gotten to notice one trious Bard, where I some incidents not present occasion. conduct of a Corde seen that those who make the most upox those who give to M than is ascribed in th allegiance-

Who love his Majorty According to their hond; nor more n

were, in the hour of real peril, infinitely more to be depended on, than the court flatterers who profess

To love him more than words can wield the matter,

Dearer than eye-sight, space, and ILberty."

Thus : say, in and sin felt by tailmen tives ; he shou der tha might t

The Speake. lor of t solution

> Mr. . Mr.

those c spoken

of the proceedings a " iranument notion," which defied and trampled upon the Constitution.

The Speaker (Mr. Abbot) soid, that, after the strong protestations made by gentlemen on this question, and which were so disparaging to the character of the proceedings adopted by that House, he confessed he could not prevail on him self to give a silent vote on this q the time of the Restoration, the two Houses of Parliament, surrounded as they were by difficulties, did for a time wield the sceptre of the absent Monarch, for the purpose of enabling that Monarch to resume his throne. They passed acts, and caused money to be assued for the public service; and all they did then was afterwards confirmed by law. Similar proceedings took place at the Revolution, when the two Houses appointed a new King. He therefore felt convinced that the present proceedings were just and right; and that no other could be so effectual for the purposes the two Houses had in view. He would now content himself with expressing his approbation of the opinion given twenty two years ago, by the then Speaker of the House, In the course of these debates, it was agreed on all hands, that the Houses had the right of filling up any vacancy in the Throne. If the Throne was full, the Houses could not proceed to elect a second King; but in a state of affairs like the present, where in the very vacancy there was a living Monarch, it was the right and duty of the House to provide in the manner recently done, and not by Address. The House should take that which the Resolution was carried, and the amendment negatived.

House or Lords, Feb. 5.

Another conference took place be-tween their Lordships and the Commons, which was followed by an announcement that the Resolution of Saturday, Feb. 2, had passed the other House. Their Lordships afterwards temporarily adjourned; when the Lord Chancellor, entering in his robes, stated that a Commission had issued under the Great Scal, for giving the Royal Assent to an Act which had passed both Houses of Parliament.—The Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Chancellor, Earls Cantden and Westmoreland, and the Duke of Montrose, afterwards took their seats as Commissioners for giving the Royal Assent to the Regency Bill. The Speaker and a number of Members of the House of Commons being in attendance at the bar, the Lord Chancellor said:

"My Lords and Gentlemen, Inasmuch as, for certain causes, his Majesty cannot conveniently be present here this day, a (ommission has issued under the Great Seal, to us and other Lords directed, reciting the Letters Patent of the 15th

Jan.

Jan. for opening and holding this present Parliament, and the passing of an Act agreed upon by both Houses, and notifying the Royal Assent to the said Act.

The Commission having been read, the Lord Chancellor declared, that in obedience to the commands, and by virtue of the powers vested in the Commissioners, they gave his Majesty's Royal Assent to the said Act.

Feb. 12.

The Lord Chancellor, the Archbishop of Canterbury, Earls Camden and Westmoreland, and the Duke of Montrose, having taken their seats as Commissioners; and the Speaker, with many Members of the Lower House, being in attendance; the Lord Chancellor said, that it not being convenient for his R. H. the Prince of Wales, Regent, to be personally present that day, a Commission had issued under his Majesty's Great Seal, anthorising the opening and declaring certain further causes for holding that Rarliament.

The Commission was then read proferma; after which the Lord Chancellor delivered the following Speech:

delivered the following Speech: " My Lords and Gentlemen; — In execution of the Commission which has now been read to you, we are commanded by his Royal Highness the Prince Regent to express, in the strongest manner, how deeply He laments, not only in common with all his Majesty's loyal subjects, but with a personal and filial affliction, the great national calamity which has been the occasion of imposing upon his Royal Highness the duty of exercising, in his Majesty's name, the royal authority of this Kingdom. In conveying to you the sense which his Royal Highness entertains of the great difficulties attending the important trust which is reposed in Him, his Royal Highness commands us to assure you, that He looks with the most perfect confidence to the wisdom and zeal of Parliament, and to the attachment of a loyal and affectionate People, for the most effectual assistance and support; and his Royal Highness will, on his part, exert his utmost endeavours to direct the powers with which He is invested to the advancement of the prosperity, welfare, and security of his Majesty's Dominions. We are directed to inform you, that his Royal Highness has great satisfaction in being enabled to state, that fresh opportunities have been afforded, during the late Campaign, for distinguishing the valour and skill of his Majesty's Forces, both by sea and The Capture of the Islands of Bourbon and of Amboyna have still further reduced the Colonial Dependencies of the Enemy. The attack upon the Island of Sicily, which was amnounced to the world with a presumptuous anticipation of success, has been repulsed by the persevering exertions and valour of his Majesty's Land and See Forces. The judicious arrangement adopted by the Officers commanding on that scation, derived material support from the zeal and ardour which were manifested during this contest by the Inhabitants of Sicily, and from the co-operation of the Naval means which were directed by his Sicilian Majesty to this object. In Portugal, and at Cadiz, the defence of which constituted the principal object of his Majesty's exertions in the last Campaign, the designs of the Knemy have been hitherto frustrated. The consumimate skill, prudence, and perseverance of Lieutenant-general Lord Viscount Wellington, and the discipline and determined bravery of the Officers and Men under his command, have been conspicuously displayed throughout the whole of the Campaign. The effect of those distinguished qualities; in inspiring confidence and energy into the troops of his Majesty's Allies, has been happily evinced by their general good conduct. and particularly by the brillient past which they bore in the repulse of the Enemy at Buzaco. And his Koyal Highness commands as further to state. that He trusts you will enable him: to continue the most effectual assistance to the brave Nations of the Peninsule, in the support of a contest which they manifest a determination to maintain with unabated perseverance; and his Royal Highness in persuaded, that you will feel, that the best interests of the British Empire must be deeply affected in the issue of this contest, on which the liberties and independence of the Spanish and Portuguese Nations entirely day We have it likewise in command to bequaint you, that discussions are not depending between this Country and the United States of America; and that it is the earnest wish of his Royal likelyness that he may find himself cashled: bring these discussions to an amicab termination, consistent with the Hankly of his Majesty's Crown, and the may time Rights and Interests of the United Kingdom.

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons. We are directed to acquaint you, that his Royal Highness the Prince Regard has given his commands that the Estimates for the expenditure of the current year should be laid before you, and his Royal Highness has great satisfaction in acquainting you, that although the difficulties under which the commerce of this Kingdom has laboured, have in some

firmsy, and would not pledge himself to the extent proposed by the Address respecting the war in the Pennsula.

Lord Grenotte complimented noble Mover, not only on his eluquence, but the judgment he had evinced regretted, that throughout the Address there was not one personal compliment paid, nor one mark of personal respect shewn to his R. H. He did not approve of the mode in which the war was carried on in the Peninsula; and should enter his protest against it, that he might not be supposed to yield an acquiescence to doctrines of which he disapproved. His Lordship concluded by expressing his surprize that no allusion had been made to the state of the Bullion in the country

Lords Elliot and Radner spoke a few words, and the Address was then agreed to.

In the Commons the same day, the Speaker and the other Members having returned from hearing the Speech of the Prince Regent read, Mr. Metnes, in a lengthened but neat speech, moved an Address to the Prince Regent. Mr. Wellesley supported it, and, in the course of his observations on the war in the Petansula, paid some compliments to the talents and services of his noble Relative to the Prince Regent.

Mr. Possonby cordially agreed with the

Mr. Hutchinson had no objection to the Address, as pledging the House to nothing; but thought it deficient in not reminding the Prince Regent how great a portion of our Empire had been already lost by mischievous and unwise councils, as also in not stating the disturbances and dissatisfaction which had frequently prevailed throughout this reign in Ireland, and then continued unhappily to prevail. The Hon. Gentleman concluded by accusing Ministers of neglecting the interests of Ireland, and treating the Irish Members, who rose in behalf of their country, with contempt.

Sir T. Turton regretted that the Speech of the Regent had not expressed any desire to bring about an honourable

Mr. Whitbread condemned the policy which had been pursued in regard to Portugal and Spain, but professed himself averse from withdrawing the British army from thence until the probability of success had diminished.

Mr. Perceval replied.

Sir J. Newport charged Ministers with hazarding the safety of Ireland by with-drawing a great part of the military force.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer denied the assertion.—The Report was then brought up, and agreed to.

INTERESTING

INTERESTING INTELLIGENCE FROM THE LONDON GAZETTES.

Downing-street, Jan. 29. The following are extracts of Dispatches addressed to the Earl of Liverpool by Lieutenant-General Lord Viscount Wellington.

Cartaxo, Jan. 5.

My Lord, The reinforcements to the Enemy's army in this country, which I informed your Lordship, in my dispatch of the 29th December, were on their march in the Valley of the Mondego, arrived upon the Alva at Murcella on the 24th, which river they crossed by a ford on the following day, and continued their march to join the army. Col. Wilson, who had retired from Espinhal, and crossed the Mondego, upon hearing of the advance of these troops, lest he should be involved in an unequal contest in front and rear at the same time, repassed the Mondego on the 25th, and annoyed the Enemy's rear on his march of the 25th and 26th from the Alva towards Espinhal. He took some prisoners, and cut off some of their small detachments, which fell into the hands of the Ordemanza. The division which had marched to Pinhel, and the advanced guard of which had been at Trancoso when I last addressed your Lordship, was still at Pinhel on the 26th December, when I last heard from Gen. Silveira, whose head quarters were at Torrinha. I have letters from Cadiz of the 23d and 29th December, stating that Marshal Soult had marched from the army engaged in the operations against that place, with 4 or 5,000 men, on the 20th and 21st of December. Gens. Mendizabel and Ballasteros are still at Llerena and the neighbourhood of Monasterio, and Girard's division of Mortier's corps at Guadalcanal. No material alteration has been made in the position of the Enemy's army since I addressed your Lordship last. The detachment which marched to Castello Brancho returned immediately, and was sent either for the purpose of escorting a messenger or to obtain intelligence.

I am, &c. Wellington. Cartaxo, Jan. 12.

My Lord, Since I addressed your Lordship on the 5th inst. I have learnt that the detachment of the Enemy's troops which joined the army in the end of last month, consisted of 11 hattalions of the 9th corps, and a body of troops, which, under the command of Gen. Gardanne, had before attempted to penetrate through Bera Baxa. The whole are stated to be 8,000 men, by some of the Officers who saw them, but I should think they must be more. The other division of the 9th corps had not passed the frontier when I last received accounts of them; but I learn from an intercepted letter from Gen. Drouet to Gen. Claps. rede, that this division has been ordered to take a position at Guarda. Their advanced guard broke up from the neighbourhood of Trancoso in the night of the 3d inst. There has been no alteration in the position of the Enemy's army since I last addressed you, excepting that Gen. Drouet's head-quarters have been fixed at Leyria with the troops which joinal with him. The Enemy continue to construct boats in the Zezere; and have shewn much jealousy of the measures adopted by our troops on the left of the Tagus to command by their fire the communication between the Zesere and the Tagus. I have now to inform you that Martial Mortier arrived at Ronquillo. with a division of the corps under-his command, on the 3d inst. He has since continued to advance into Estremadora having formed a junction with the division which had been at Guadaleanal under the command of Gen. Girard : and I am concerned to add, that I have just learnt that he obtained possession of Morida, and of the bridge over the Guadiana at that place, on the evening, of the 8th inst. the Spanish troops having They have left Gen. Bellesteros's division on their left flank, between Xeres de los Cavalleros and Olivenza, with his communication observed with Badajos; and it is reported that Mortier's corps is followed by other WELLINGTON. troops.

[This Gazette also contains an account of the capture of the Danish privatear Restorateur, of six 12-pounders and 19 men, by the Gallant gun-vessel, Lieut. Crow.]

Admiralty-office, Feb. 5. Vice Admiral Campbell has transmitted to J.W. Croker, Esq. a letter from Capt. Dirby, of the Theban, giving an account of the boats of that ship having, on the 3d inst. under the directions of Lieut, Meynell, and supported by the Skylark sloop, brought out, in a very gallant manner, a merchant brig, from on shore under two of the Enemy's batteries Dieppe.—And also a letter from Lieut. Gedge, commanding the Locust sunvessel, giving an account of his having. on the 26th of last month, captured, close to Dunkirk, a French national armed vessel, carrying two long 19-pounders with small arms.

Downing-street, Feb. 6. Extract of a Dispatch received by Earl Liverpool, from Lieut.-Gen. Lord Visc. Wellington.

Cartago, Jan. 18.

Since the Enemy obtained personies, of the bridge over the Guadiana, at Me-who commands in the North, has moved the divisions commanded by Gen. Miller and Col. Wilson upon the flank and rear of the Enemy, which it is expected will check this movement, and oblige him to fall back again towards the frontier. A part of Claparede's division was still at Pinhel.

Copy of a Dispatch received by the Earl of Laverpool, from Licut. gen. Visc. Wellington, dated Cartazo, Jan. 26.

My Lord,-The Enemy has continued the blockade of Olivenza, and obtained possession of that place, either on the 22d or 23d inst. Notwithstanding the positive assertions, that a large body had crossed the Bridge of Merida on the 9th, it does not appear that the French have yet had any large body on the right of the Guadiana. They have a train of six 24-pounders, and other ordnance of large calibre, and a large quantity of stores and carriages, on the left of the Guadiana, but it is not yet considered decided that they propose to attack Badajoz. I am concerned to have to report to your Lordship, that the Marquis de la Romana died in this town, on the 23d inst. after a short illness. His taleuts, his virtues, and his patriotism, GENT. MAG. February, 1811.

Lamego, and to retire across the Douro on the 13th inst. Gen. Bacellar then took up a position on the Pavia, on the Enemy's left flank, while Col. Wilson was upon their rear at Castro Dairo, and Gen. Silverra prevented them from crossing the Douro. These positions appear to have induced Gon. Claparede to retire again; as I have heard, from another channel, of his arrival at Trancoso. The Enemy have made no material alteration in their position in front of this army since I last addressed your Lordship. They appear still to enter-tain a great jealousy of all our movements on the left of the Tagus, and they have recently removed some of the boats which were in the Zezere. They detached a body of 2000 men from the rear of their army into Lower Beira, on the 22d inst. apparently to escort a courier towards the frontier. They drove our picquets through the town of Rio Mayor on the 19th inst with a strong body of cavalry and infantry; but retired again (mme.hately. It is reported that Gen. Junot was wounded on this occasion Our light detachments, under the Hon. Capt. Cocks, of the 16th Light Dragoons, and others, still contimue their operations with suggest, and send send in many prisoners. My last accounts from Cadiz are of the 15th inst.

10

WELLINGTON. I have, &c. [This Gazette also contains a Dispatch from Capt. Rogers, of the Kent, dated off Palamos Bay, Dec. 15, in which he states that, having determined to attempt the destruction of the convoy at Palaanos, laden with provisions, in order to deprive Barcelona and the French army of the supplies which it would otherwise convey to them; he formed a plan of attack, which Capt. Fane volunteered to carry into execution, having under his command 350 seamen, 250 marines, and two field pieces. About one o'clock in the afternoon of the 13th, this small detachment was landed on the beach, under cover of the Sparrow-hawk and Minstrel sloops, the Enemy having posted themselves in the town; soon after, our men moved forward to take the town and batteries in the rear, when the Enemy withdrew to a windmill on a hill, where they remained almost quiet spectators of our people taking possession of the batteries and vessels in the Mole. The mortars and cannon were spiked, and thrown from the heights into the sea; the magazine blown up; the whole of the vessels burnt and totally destroyed, save two, which were brought out; in short, the object had succeeded to admiration, and at this time with the loss of no more than four or five men from occasional skirmishing; but in withdrawing our post from a hill, which we occupied to keep the enemy in check until the batteries and vessels were destroyed, our people rétired with some disorder, which encouraged the Enemy, who had received a reinforcement from St. Felice, to advance upon them, and, by some unhappy fatality, instead of directing their retreat to the beach where the Cambrian, Sparrow-hawk, and Minstrel lay to cover their embarkation, the · brave but thoughtless and unfortunate men came through the town down to the Mole; the Enemy immediately occupied the walls and houses, from which they kept up a severe fire upon the boats crowded with men, and dastardly fired upon and killed several who had been left on the Mole, and were endeavouring to swim to the boats.- Capt. Fane was at the Mole, giving directions to destroy the vessels, when our men were withdrawn from the post on the hill, where he remained with firmness, and is amongst the missing; but satisfactory · accounts have been received that he is Capt. Rogers particularly mentions the good conduct of Capt. Pringle of the Sparrow-hawk, Capt. Campbell of the Minstrel, and Lieut. Conclly of the Cambrian, who commanded that ship in the absence of Capt. Fanc.—The convoy consisted of 8 merchantmen, and 3 small ships of war.]

Admiralty-office, Feb. 9. Admiral Lord Gambier has transmitted to J. W. Croker, esq. a Letter from Capt. Bedford, Captain of the Fleet under his Lordship's command, reporting the capture, by his Majesty's ship Rhin, of the Brocanteur French letter of marque, of 16 guns and 52 men.

Admiralty-office, Feb. 13. This Gazette contains a Dispatch from Vide-Admiral Bertie, Commander-in Chief- of all the vessels at the Cape of Good Hope, with inclosures from Commodore Rowley and Capt. Gordon. The Dispetch of Admiral Bertie, which is dated Africanae, isle of Bourbon, Oct. 13, refers to the ·late gallant but unfortunate attack ou the Isle de Passe, the details of which have already been published. The Admiral observes, that the momentary maperiority obtained by the Enemy it comsequence of that unfortunate event, in been promptly and decisively crushed by the zeal, skill, and intropidity of Capt. Rowley, of the Boadicea, who, bift alone, and unsupported but by the neverfailing energies and resources of his will've and intelligent mind, in a few bottly lifet only retook his Majesty's shipe Africaine and Ceylon, but captured also the largest frigate possessed by the Enemy in the Indian seas, and had thus restored the British naval pre-eminence in that quiteter. To the gallant Corbett of the fifticaine, whose meritorious cagerness: to check the triumph of an exulting Escury impelled him to an unequal contest; in which he nobly fell, the Admiral pulp a just tribute of praise. The capture of the Ceylon and Wyndham Indianics, by the Enemy, is also noticed.—The list Dispatch from Capt. Rowley, which is dated Paul's Road, Sept. 21, meticin his having been chased off the late of France. —The second Dispatch relates that the Boadicea, in company with the sloop and Staunch gun-brig, sailed to attack the Astrea and Iphigenia frigues, then in the offing, and that, being joined during the chace by the Africaine, the latter, by her superior sailing, closed with the Enemy; and, becoming unmanageable under the fire of both ships was, after a gallant contest, compelled to strike, the Boadicea being prevented by light and variable winds from affording her the least assistance. The Andreine had 36 killed, and 71 wounded, intelieding Capt. Corbett among the former.

the Ceylon, while we took the Venus in tow, and they are both arrived in these roads, where I trust we shall, in a few days, have them and the Africaine in a state for service, which will again restore us to our accustomed ascendancy in these seas, Col. Keating having, with that zeal he has manifested on every occasion, offered to complete their complements from the force under his command. It is with much satisfaction I have again to eall your attention to the gallantry and zeal manifested by my officers and ship's company in presence of the Enemy; to which I have also to add that of Lieut. Ramsay of the 86th, with his detachment doing duty on board -To Lieut, Langhorne I feel much indebted for his able assistance, in taking charge of and conducting into port the Africaine and La. Venus; and beg you will have the goodness to recommend him to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty. -- I think it my duty to mention the active zeal shewn by Capt. Tomkinson, of the Otter, and Lieut. Strut, commander of the Staunch gun-brig, both on the present service, and on those in which we have lately been engaged; the latter is Admiral Bertie's Dispatch is dated Dec. 6, and merely states that the Expedition destined to act against the Isle of France, had assembled at Rodriguez by the 22d Nov. with the exception of the troops from the Cape, which did not join at all. That on the 2ath, the flect, consisting of '0 sail, anchored in Grande Baye, 12 miles to windward of Port Louis, and having disembarked the troops, artillery, &c. advanced alongshore, keeping up a constant communication. On the 2d Dec. Gen. Decaen. proposed a Capitulation, which was signed on the following morning-The Admiral warmly praises the conduct of Capt. Beaver, of the Nisus; of Capt, Patterson of the liesper; Lieut. B. Street, commanding the armed vessel Emma; and Lieut. E Llovd, volunteer.

A List of Ships and Vessels of War present at and assisting in the Capture of the Isle of France.—Africaine, Capt. Graham,

^{*} The Isle of France is about 21 miles broad, and 33 long. The Abbe Raynal says of this island, "What a misfertune for France should she suffer herself to be deprived of it!"

Broughton; Boadicea, Rowley; Nisus, Beaver; Cornwallis, Caulfield; Clorinde, Briggs; Cornelia, Edgell; Doris, Lye; Nereide, Henderson, acting; Psyche, Edgelmbe; Ceylon, Tomkinson, acting; Hesper. Paterson; Hecate, Rennie, acting; Eclipse, Lynne, acting; Emma, Government armed ship, Capt. Street, acting; Staunch gun-brig, Lieut. Craig, acting; Egremont, Government sloop, Lieut. Forder; Farquhar, Mr. Hervey, midshipman; Mouche—; Phæbe, Capt. Hillyer; and Acteon, Viscount Neville.

By the Capitulation, the land and sea forces, officers, subalterns, and privates, are to retain their effects and baggage—not to be considered prisoners of war—but to be conveyed at British expence, with their families, to some port in European France. Private property to be respected, and the inhabitants maintained in their religion, customs, and laws.

The following is a List of vessels found at Port Napoleon:-Frigates: La Minerve, 52 guns; La Bellone, 48; L'Astree and La Manchee, 44's: Iphigenia and Nereide, 36; Le Victor sloop, 22; L'Entrepenant, and another brig, 22; Charlton, Ceylon, and United Kingdom, English East-Indiamen; 28 merchant versels of various burdens, from 150 to 1000 tons; besides five gun-brigs.—This Gazette concludes with two General Orders, issued by Major-gen. Abercromby, acknowledging the services of the 12th and 22d regiments; of the detachment of seamen, commanded by Capt. Montague; and of Captains Beaver, Briggs, Lye, and Street. A General Memorandum by Admiral Bertie congratulates the officers and crews of the squadron in the successful issue of the attack, and thanks them for their exertions.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE LONDON GAZETTE EXTRAORDINARY.

A Dispatch, of which the following is an Extract, has been received from the Hon. Major-Gen. Abereromby by the Barl of Liverpool, dated Port Louis, Isle of France, Dec. 7, 1810.

[The introductory Dispatch of Gen. Abercromby states the surrender by capitulation, of the Isle of France, on the 3d Dec. to the united force under the command of Vice-Adm. Bertie and himself, mentions his having placed Mr. Farquharin charge of the Government by desire of Lord Minto; and refers to his Aidde-Camp, Capt. Hewitt, and the following Dispatch, addressed to the Governor-General of India, for farther particulars.]

To the Rt. Hon. Gilbert Lord Minto, &c. &c.

My Lord,—I had the honour to inform your Lordship in my Dispatch of the 31st ult. that, although the divisions from Bengal and the Cape of Good Hope had not arrived at the rendezvous, it had been determined that the fleet should proceed to sea on the following maching, as from the advanced season of the year, and the threatening appearance of the weather, the ships could no longer be considered secure in their anchorage at Rodriguez; and I did myself the honour to state to your Lordship, the measures which it was my intention to pursue, even if we should still be disappointed in mak being joined by so large a part of the armament.—Early on the morning of the 22d, Vice Admiral Bertie received a communication from Capt. Broughton, of H. M. S. Illustrious, announcing his arcival off the island with the convey from Bengal. The fleet weighed at day-light, as had been originally arranged; and in the course of that day, a junction having been formed with this division, the float bore up for the Isle of France. The greatest obstacles opposed to an attack on this island with a considerable force, have invariably been considered to depend on the difficulty of effecting a landing, from the reefs which surround every part of the coast, and the supposed impossibility of being able to find anchorage for # #6 of transports.—These difficulties were fortunately removed by the indefatigable exertions of Commodore Rowley, assisted by Lieut. Street, of the Staunch gunbrig, Lieut. Blackiston, of the Madrae Engineers, and the Masters of H.M. ships Africaine and Boadicea. Every part of the leeward side of the island was menutely examined and sounded; and it was discovered that a fleet might anchors in the narrow passage, formed by the small island of the Gunners' Coin and the main land; and that at this apoc there were openings through the rees, which would admit several boats to enterabreast. These obvious advantages fixed my determination, although I regretted: that circumstances would not allow of the disembarkation being effected at. 🚓 shorter distance from Port Louis. Qw., ing to light and baffling winds, the fleet, did not arrive in sight of the island until the 28th; and it was the morning of the following day before any of the ships: came to an anchor.—Every arrangement for the disembarkation having been pres viously made, the First Division, consider ing of the Reserve, the Grenadier Company of the 59th Regt. with two 6-pomer ders, and two howitzers, under command. of Major-Gen. Warde, effected a landing in the Bay of Mapon, without the smallest opposition, the Enemy having metired from Fort Marlastri, situated at the head of Grand Bay, and the nectors. port to us which they occupied.-........ as a sufficient part of the European by a corps of the Enemy, who, with several field-pieces, had taken a strong position, very favourable for attempting to make an impression on the head of the column, as it snewed itself at the end of a narrow road, with a thick wood on each flank. The European flank battalions, which formed the advanced guard, under the command of Lieut-col. Campbell, of the 33d regt, and under the geperal direction of Gen Warde, formed with as much regularity as the bad and broken ground would admit of, charged the Enemy with the greatest spirit, and compelled him to retire with the loss of his guns, and many killed and wounded This advantage was gained by the fall of Lieux.-col. Campbell, a most excellent and valuable officer, as well as Major O'Keefe of the 19th regt, whom I have also every reason sincerely to regret. -In the course of the foremoon the army occupied a positaon in front of the Enemy's lines, just beyond the range of cannon-shot. On the following morning, while I was employed in making arrangements for detaching a corps to the Southern side of the town, and placing myself in a situation to any engagement.—In every other particular, we have gained all which could have been acquired, if the town had been carried by assault.

[Major-Gen. Abereromby then praises, in the warmest terms, the cheerfulness and patience with which the officers and men submitted to many privations, not being able to procure a sufficient supply of water for 24 hours -Appropriate acknowledgments are also made to Lieut cols Picton, Gibbs, Kelso, Keating, Mike al, and Smyth, who commanded the different brigades, to Dr. Harris, the superintending surgeon, and the Medical staff in general, to Major Caldwell, of the Madras Engineers, who is particularly recommended for prometion; and to Major Gen. Warde, who ammated the soldiers by his personal example. The Major-General also declares, that the utmost harmony and cordiality existed between the army and navy, and that every assistance was afforded by Vice-Adm, Bertie. He particularly notices the services of Capt. Beaver, of the Nisus frigate; and makes grateful acknowledgments to Capt. Briggs, of the Clorinde; Capt. Lye of the Doris; Capt. Montague and Lieut. Lloyd, of the Africaine; and likewise the battalion of marines under Capt. Liardet. Lieut. M'Murdo, of the Bombay Est. is charged with the dispatches.]

(Signed) J. Abercromby, Major-Gen. Total Officers Killed: Lieut.-colonel Campbell, of the 33d, and Major O'Keefe, 12th regt.—Wounded: Lieut.-col. Keating, 56th; Major Taynton, Madras Artillery; Lieuts. Ashe and Keappock, 12th;

and Lieut. Jones, 34th, slightly.—Total Subalterns and Privates, 26 killed, 89/ wounded, and 45 missing.

[Here follows a return of ordnance: taken, of which the following is an abstract:—29 36-pounders, 81 24-pounders, _ 46 18-pounders, 22 19-pounders, and 81 mortars. Total ordnance, which is in excellent order, 209.—All the batteries are completely equipped with shot, aminnition, and every other requisite for service.

ABSTRACT OF FOREIGN OCCURRENCES.

FRANCE.

The Pope, it appears, has so far incurred the displeasure of Buonaparte, that the Office of his Holiness, reduced and confined as it has of late been rendered, will probably be altogether abo-His Holiness, it seems, has issued a Brief, which Napoleon has most vengefully denounced; and all persons instrumental in its circulation are ordered to be punished as guilty of a crime tending to disturb the State by a civil This seeming death-blow, even to the spiritual authority of the Pope, it is not unlikely, may produce a most serious sensation, not only in the other Catholic countries of Europe, but in France itself. •

The Parisian Board of Longitude has given the following statement, in round numbers, of the Population of the Empire for 1811, distinguishing the inhabitants by the language they speak, and excluding the military: the French language 27,916,000; Italian 4,922,000; Flemish or Dutch 4,411,000; German 4,100,000; Lower Britany 1,075,000.— Total inhabitants 42,424,000.

At the Lyceum, at Pau, a new system of artificial memory is taught, different from all preceding ones, and which, it is pretended, enables students, in three lessons, of two hours each, to undergo examinations in the most difficult and abstract sciences.

Buonaparte has decreed that all the penitentiary houses in Paris, for the reformation of Prostitutes, shall be placed under the protection of Madame, his mother.

The Moniteur contains a decree for calling out 80,000 of the Conscripts for the present year. The first detachments are to march from their respective departments on the 10th of April.

Buonaparte is indefatigable in his exertions to collect marines to equip his squadrons. A corps of 1200 seamen, obtained in the different ports of Italy, lately passed through Leige, as was understood, for Antwerp. They were said to be volunteers, but were nevertheless escorted by 150 horse and 300 foot soidiers.

We have fresh proofs of Buonaparte's hostility to the diffusion of political knowledge. It appears, that he has lately been employed in issuing decrees and ordinances limiting the public press in France, and regulating booksellers shops in Holland. In the latter country we find, that all Dramatic Societies are shut up, as being injurious to the interests of the National Theatres.

SWITZERLAND.

The Decree for uniting the Value, under the name of the Department of the Simplon, to the French Empire, has been productive of much bloodsbed. The inhabitants, who enjoyed peculiar privileges, and who relied on the faith of former engagements, expressed great dissatisfaction on its being communicated to them; and requested permission of Gen. Count Cæsar Berthier, the Emperor's commissary, to suspend its execution until they should send a deputation to Paris. Berthier told them, that his orders were peremptory, and that he dared not disobey. The Decree was accordingly carried into execution. Qp the 3d Dec. intelligence was transmitted from Paris, that the Deputies had been put under arrest. The populace immediately collected at Sion, before the residence of Berthier, who, finding it impossible to divert their indignation, deaired the troops to charge and disperse them. Before this order, however, could be effected, he was brought to the ground by a stone, and the troops, in attempting to punish this insult, were repulsed by the populace, with a loss of 20 killed and wounded on both sides. The flame of insurrection rapidly extended to Martuyry and Leuch, and many excesses were committed. Troops were at length collected from the neighbouring departments. The bridges had been broken down, and many of the insurgents at Sien had arms. It was not was til the 6th that a body of about 1,100

Its garrison, consisting of 9500 men, are prisoners of war; and, in consequence of this event, the Enemy immediately marched to invest Tarragona. -- The failure of a small English expedition sent against Palamos, a small part to the Eastward of Barcelona, is also stated in this report. It is said to have consisted of 1400 English, who landed from two ships of the line, a frigate, and two other vessels; and the result, according to the Enemy's statement, was, that we lost 800 men killed, and 150 taken prisoners; among the latter of whom are Captain Fane, of the Navy, and several Midshipmen. This affair is stated to have taken place on the 13th of December.—The official report of the operations in Spain coucludes with saying, that the spirit of insurrection is nearly extinct, and that " the inhabitants call loudly for being united to the French [It is not unusual for Buona-Empire." parte to announce projects of the greatest importance in this incidental manner.] PROCEAMATION OF THE SPANISH CORTES.

Know that in the Cortes general and extraordinary, assembled in the Royal listen to any proposition for accommodation, of whatever kind it may be, which shall not be preceded by the total evacuation of Spain by the troops which so unjustly have invaded them; since the Cortes, as well as the whole Nation, are resolved to right meessantly till they have secured the holy Religion of their ancestors, the liberty of their beloved Monarch, and the absolute independence and integrity of the Monarchy. The Council of Regency, that this may be known and punctually observed throughout the whole extent of the Spanish dominions, shall cause this to be printed, published, and circulated.

" ALONZO CANEDO, President.
" J. MARTINES, Secretaries.
" J. AZNAREZ,

" Isle of Leon, Jan. 1, 1811." GERMANY.

The phænomenon of a thunder-storm on Christinas-day was not confined to this Country, but was experienced at several places in Germany, and followed by so dreadful a gale of wind, that at Frankfort, Nersheim, &c. many churches and houses were blown down, and the heavy

heavy laden waggons on the public roads overturned.

Banks of the Maine, Jan. 30. The States which compose the Confederation of the Rhine contain 5,703 square leagues, with a population of 14,935,265 souls. The contingent to be furnished by the Kings, Grand Dukes, Dukes, and Princes (in all 39), is 118,682 men.

Cassel, Feb. 4. The Jews now enjoy all the civil rights which the liberality of the Emperor Napoleon has granted them in France. They form part of the National Guard which has been established here: the guard of the King contains many officers of that nation; in the regiments which have been sent to Spain are many Jews, who are distinguished by their bravery, and who have been promoted in recompence for their services. The artists and mechanics in this city take Israelitish apprentices, and the merchants of that nation are now permitted to buy houses and estates. The number of Jews in the Kingdom of Westphalia, including the Country of Hanover, is reckoned at 18,000; they have a well-organised Consistory, and many charitable institutions for educating poor children. M. Jacobson is President of the Consistory.

RUSSIA.

A Russian General is said to have been arrested at Petersburg, and thrown into confinement, on the charge of having traitorously disclosed to Caulincourt, the French Minister, the strength, positions, and resources of the Russian military.

SWEDEN AND DENMARK.

The slightest intercourse between England and Sweden is sufficient to excite Buonaparte's anger, and to awaken the activity of his agents. The French Consul at Gottenburgh recently transmitted a memorial to M. Alguier, at Stockholm, complaining that Count Rosser, the Governor of the former place, connived at a clandestine intercourse between the British shipping at that port, and implicating the customhouse officers in this charge. The Court ordered the allegations to be inquired into; but, though they were declared to be unfounded, it was deemed necessary to make some sacrifice, and Count Rosser has been recalled.

Letters from Stockholm notice the arrival of a courier in that Capital from Paris, with a peremptory order for the return of all the Officers in the suite of the Crown Prince. The Swedes are apprehensive, from the nature of this mandate, that Bernadotte has incurred the displeasure of the French Ruler.

Letters from Sweden of the 15th inst. hold out an expectation of an early assembly of the States of Sweden, to discuss some important business which will be laid before them. Other letters say, that Russia, Denmark, and Sweden, are at length convinced of the ruinous tendency of the measures which they have been pursuing, and that they only wait a favourable opportunity to restore commerce to its usual channels.

By communications from Copenhagen of the 12th instant has been received a copy of a Danish Decree, of so favourable a nature, as fully to justify the belief that a change has taken place in the sentiments of the Court of Denmark:

1. All Swedish vessels, detained on account of the bill of sale not being on board, shall be released without farther process.—2. Every Swedish vessel, detained merely because her destination was an English port, but which is furnished with documents from the Swedish Government, as well as Swedish vessels now returning from England, laden with salt, or which are returning in ballest, shall neither be detained, nor condemned.—3. Swedish vessels, which esiled for England before the declaration of war was known at the Swedish port from whence the vessel was dispatched, cannot be detained, much less condemnet. -4. A Swedish vessel cannot be condemned merely for having used an Kinglish licence.—5. Swedish vessels, suspected of having availed themselves of English convoys, cannot be condemned without proofs the most incontestible.

TURKEY.

Letters from Constantinople of the 8th ult. received at Vienna, mention, that an attempt was made on the 36th of December, by the Russians, to surprise the fortified town of Varna. Apr inferior officer, who guarded the sallyport, won by the liberal offers of the enemy, undertook to introduce a chosen body of men into the heart of the town. This perfidious act was to have been completed on the 26th. Fortunately, the officer was suspected, his design developed, and he was compelled, under threats of being impaled, to proceed in the execution of his design. Accordingly, at the appointed hour, 300 picked men silently advanced to the sally-pert, and were followed at a distance by a numerous corps, who awaited a fixed signal. The detachment, immediately on its entrance, was cut to pieces; and their companions advancing under the walls, the Governor ordered a sortie; when the Enemy, being overwhelmed by massbers, and disordered by the nature of the ground, had 1500 slaip, and 600 which took place at Quito, on the 2d of August last, another sangumary scene took place. The nobility of the country were invited to assemble, in order to celebrate the suppression of the consuracy. As soon, however, as they were assembled in the Town-house, they were to a man treacherously shot by the military. The troops were then let loose upon the mhabitants, whom they butchere I to the number of some hundreds. The Viceroy of Santa Fe, who was a chief instigator in this cruel transaction, was soon after apprehended, tried, and executed.

The Roman Catholic Archbishop and Bishops of the United States of America have signed a Protest against the treatment received by the Pope, and the aggressions committed upon the Halv bery and, at the same time, ordered a Form of Prayer to be offered up, for the deliverance of his Holmess from the power of his enemics.

IRELAND.

Jun. 8. A most daring attempt was made by a party of country people at Garr, Mag. February, 1911.

night in Gardiner street, attacked by a posse, knocked down, and when on the ground, a carbine, loaded with several balls, was fired at him. Two balls passed through his hat without injury to his person; a third wounded him in the head, but not mortally.

Dubin, Feb. 13.—Mr Pole, Chief Secretary, has addressed a circular letter to every Sheriff and Magistrate in Ireland, giving directions for the arrest of all persons who shall be guilty of giving notice of the election and appointment of any representative, delegate, or manager, to act in an unlawful assembly, setting in Dubin, calling itself the Cataobic Committee. This measure has not been reso ted to, until the utmost necessity existed for its adopt in; and until called for by every loyal man in Ireland, of every religious persuasion.

COUNTRY NEWS.

Jan. 19. Late y, a furner's son at Paul, in Holt. Incss, of the name of Bir, ning, while thrushing, having a loaded gun by him to shout pigeons, just as be was firing out of the barn at one, a young woman, his cousin, who lived in the family, passing the door received the whole contents of the piece in her head, which was literally blown to pieces.

Jan. 27. Lately, a nailor, of the name of Belpor, while in the act of carrying a bag of nails across the pavement into a hard-ware shop in Derby, slipped down, and one of the nails entering his head, he died in a few minutes.

Feb. 6. In one of the most violent hurricanes of wind, accompanied with rain, ever remembered at Carlisle, the walls of Messrs. Robson and Co's spinning-mill there, which was some time ago consumed by fire, were blown down with a tremendous crash.

Feb. 8. This night a fire broke out in a cottage at Ramsbury, Wilts, which consumed the same, and two houses adjoining; in one of which, occupied by a school-master, there were 40 boys in bed, but they were all saved, and very little of their clothes or books lost.

Feb. 9. The following melancholy accident happened a few days since at Cam, near Dursley: a man having a sharp clasp-knife in his hand, whilst in the act of preventing one of his children from taking hold of it, incautiously threw it from him, when it penetrated the temple of an infant lying in its mother's lap, and caused its death in a few hours.

Feb. 15. The Amethyst frigate, while lying at single anchor this night, at Plymouth, parted her cable in a heavy gale of wind, and drifted on the rocks under Mount Batten (near the spot where the Pallas was lost), where she now lies a complete wreck. Five of her boats were swamped, and 13 of her crew, including a midshipman named Harris, drowned. Most of her stores are expected to be saved.—A boat belonging to the transport James, in going to the relief of the Amethyst's crew, was upset, and all hands in her drowned.

A letter from Plymouth states, that the Monkey gun-brig, Lieut. Thomas Fitzgerald, has been lost off Belleiste, by striking on a rock; and that immediately after she had struck, Lieut. Fitzgerald ran to his cabin, and bringing his pistols on the deck, he shot the master, pilot, and then himself. Lieut. Fitzgerald bore the character of an amiable man, and was just'y esteemed a brave and meritorious officer.

The Rev. Fobert Bingham, the curate of Marcsfield in Surrey, whose house we noticed in our last, p.83, as having been burnt, has been committed to Horsham gaol, on the charge of Arson. We forbear at present from detailing the particulars.

Oxford, already one of the most beautiful cities in the Empire, is about to provements. A great number of indifferent houses belonging to, and in the vicinity of, Christ's and Brasenous Colleges, are, on the early expiration of the present leases, to be pulled down, and the streets are to be widened, &c.—It is also proposed to open a grand avenue to Christ's College, by throwing down the nest of dirty houses which at present obscure its front.

It appears that the light on the Bell Rock, is to be distinguished from all others by, a new and ingenious device; the light being to appear alternately of a bright yellow and of a deep red colour, by means of coloured glass. From the great height of the building, and its prominent station, twelve miles advanced into the German Ocean, it is confidently expected that the light will, in ordinary weather, be visible at so great a distance, as greatly to assist in preventing the recurrence of such mistakes as have this winter happened, in what seafaring people term Berwick Bay. The tolling of the bell in misty weather is a happy addition.

Domestic Occurrences. Wednesday, Jan. 30.

The stables of Mr. Morrison, in the Hampstead Road, were consumed this morning together with two horses. The fire was occasioned by a candle dropping from a lantern.

Thursday, Jan. 31.

A boat-builder's at Nine-Films, Batter-sea, was destroyed by fire this day.

Wednesday, Feb. 6.

This being the day appointed for swearing in the Prince of Wales as Regent, about a quarter before two o'clock, all the Dukes, and a very numerous assemblage of Privy Councillors, met at Carleton-House. The whole of the magnificent suite of state apartments were opened, and the illustrious Persons were ail ushered into the Gold Room (so called from the style of the ornaments.) Almost every Privy Councillor in town was present—and they were above an hundred in number.——A Message was brought from the Prince to the President of the Council, Earl Camden, desiring his attendance on the Prince in an adjoining room, according to the usual form, to communicate to him officially the return to the summons, &c. After his return, the Prince approached in grand procession, preceded by the Officers of his Council.—They passed through the room where the Privy Councillors were assembled, through the Circular Drawing-room, into the Grand Saloon (a beautiful room in scarlet drapery, embellished with portraits of all the most distinguished

administer, according to law the power and authority vested in hie by virtue of the said Act; and that I will in all things, to the utmost of my power and ability, consult and maintain the safety, honour, and dignity of His Majesty, and the welfare of his people. So help me God."—And the Prince subscribed the two oaths .- The Lord President then presented to His Royal Highness the Declaration, mentioned in an Act made in the 30th year of King Charles II. intituled " An Act for the more effectual preserving the King's Person and Government, by disabling Papiers from sitting in either House of Parliament," and which Declaration His Royal Highness audibly made, repeated, and subscribed. The Lord President signed first, and every one of the Privy Councillors in succession signed these instruments as witnesses, and the same were delivered into the hand of the Keeper of the Records. -The Lord President then approached the Regent, and had the honour to kiss his hand. The Royal Dukes followed, and afterwards the Archbishop of Canterbury; and all the rest, according to the order in which they sat at the long table, advanced to the chair on both aides. During the whole of this cereof King's Bench. The libel was co ed from a provincial print; and pur pried to discuss the propriety of anothing the degrading punishment of flogging the military, and cited many cases where 1000 lashes had been afficied, ... The Attorney-General contraded that the object of the libel was to alienate the minds of the soldiers from the service of the Country.-Mr. Brougham (M. P.) defended his Clienis in a luminous, argumentative, and eloquent speech; and cited the writings of SrR Wilson and others, who had used much stronger language on the sucject or flogging the military than the author of the rool in quest on -Lord Ellenborough, afte tating the right of every Englishman to discuss topics of public importance, , i/e his opinion, that the publication in question was a libel.... The Jury, after remning some tune, requested permission to peruse the newspaper containing the lock, and after an absence of two hours, teturned with a viriliet, finding both defendants Not Guaty.

Thursday, Feb. 28.

The Reports of the Physicians during the present month have continued to a riably favourable to the hopes of Majesty's perfect recovery.

SHE AFTS

SHERIFFS appointed by the PRINCE REGENT in Council for the Year 1811. Bedfordsh.—J. Howell, of Market-street, esq. Berkshire—William Wiseman Clarke, of Ardington, esq.

Buckinghamshire—William Bernard, of Nether Winchendon, esq.

Cambridge and Huntingdonsh.—Wm. Dumn Gardner, of Chatteris, esq.

Cheshire—BoothGrey, of Ashron Hayes, esq. Cornwall—W. L. S. Trelawney, of Penquite, esq.

Cumberland—John Losh, of Woodside, esq. Derby hire—Godfrey Meynell, of Meynell Langley, esq.

Devonshire—A. Champernowne, of Dartington, esq.

Dorsetshire—Edw. Greathed, of Udden, esq. Essex—Charles Smith, of Suttons, esq. Gloucestersh.—Rob. Gordon, of Kemble, esq. Herefordshire—Phil. Jones, of Sugwas, esq. Hertfordshire—Rob. Taylor, of Tolmer, esq. Kent—Sir John Courtenay Honywood, of Evington, bart.

Lancaste:—S. C. Hilton, of Moston, esq. Leicestershire—R. Norman, of Melton Mowbray, esq.

Lincolnshire—Sir John Trollope, of Casewick, bart.

Monmouthshire—Hugh Powell, of Llanvihangel, esq.

Norfolk—Charles Lucas, of Filby, esq.
Northamptonshire—Walter Strickland, of Brixworth Hall, esq.

Northumberland—Wm. Burrell, of Broomepark, esq.

Nottingham—Thomas Wright, of Norwood park, esq.

Oxon.—Sir John Reade, of Shipstone, bart.

Rutlandshire—The Hon. George Watson, of Rock ngham Castle.

Shropshire—Geo. Brooke, of Haughton, esq. Somer.et.k.—John Leigh, of Comphay, esq. Stayordsh.—Jas. Beach, of the Shaw, esq. Southampton—Sir Robert Kingsmill, of Sidmonton, bart.

Surrey—G. Tri ton, of West Hil., Wands-worth, esq.

Sus.ex—Wm. Dearling, of Donnington, esq. Warwicksh.—F. Newdigate, of Arbury, esq. Willsh.—Harry Biggs, of Stockton, esq. Worcestersh.—T. Hawkes. of Dudley, esq. Yorkshire—R. Watt of Bishop Burton, esq. South Wales.

Brecon-Walter Wilkins, jun. of Alexanders one, esq.

Carmarthen.h.—Hamlyn Williams, of Edwinstord, esq.

Cardigunshire—William Brookes, of Neyari, esq.

Glamorgan—Sir R. Lynch Blosse, of Gabalva, bart.

Pembrokeshire—Lewis Mathias, of Langwarren esq.

Radnor—John Cheesment Severn, of Languenio, esq.

NORTH WALES.

Anglesey—Hen. Williams of Frearddur, esq. Carnarcon.h.—Thomas Parry Jones Parry, of Madryn, esq.

Denbighshire—John Wynne, of Garthuulio, esq.

Flintshire—Sir G. W. Prescott, of Ewloe, bt. Merioneth—Hugh Reveley, of Brynygmin, esq.

Montgomery, hire—Edward Heyward, of Crooswood, esq.

CIRCUITS OF THE JUDGES.

chuise (Manager	Nonne	l Harris		. O	Western.
SPRING	MIDLAND,	Norfolk.	Номв.	Northern.	Oxford.	WESTERN.
CIRCUIT.	LdEllenbro' B. Wood		L. C. Baron J. Heath	B. Thomson Le Blanc	J. Lawrence B. Graham
Sat. Mar. 5 Monday 4 Wednes. 6					Reading Oxford	Winchester
Saturday 9 Monday 11		Aylesbury	Hertford	York & City	Glou. & City
Wednes. 13 Thursday 14		Bedford	Chelmsford		Monmoutb	Dorchester
Monday 18 Tuesday 19		Huntingdon Cambridge	Maidstone		Hereford	Exeter and [City
Thursday 21 Saturday 25	Derb y	Thetford		Lancaster	Shrewsbury	Launceston
Monday 2. Tuesday 26 Wednes. 27			Horsham Croydon
Thursday 28 Mond. Aprl. Tuesday 2					Stafford Wor. & City	[aunton
, ucsuay 2	f as or where		,	1	unit or city	WEST A.

Gen. Wm. Keppet, Major-gen. Francrs-Thomas Hammond, and L.eut.-col. Wm. Congreve, Equerries.

Foreign office, Feb 15 Lord Wm. Bentinck, Envoy Extraordinary and Munister Plempotentiary to the Court of Palermo.

Augustus-John Foster, esq. Envoy Extraordinary and Min ster Piempotentiary to the United States of America.

CIVIL PROMOTIONS.

Rev. Wm. Wilson, M. A. of Queen's college, Oxford, Master of the Grammarschool at St. Bee's, Cumberland, vice Rev. John Barnes, deceased.

The Earl of Canthness, Postmaster general for Scotland, sice Earl Grey, resigned

Dr. Edward Collins, Physician to the Devon and Exeter Hospital, vice Dr. Parr, * deceased.

Major Barclay, Private Secretary to 1 the Commander in Chief.

Rev. John Brereton, LL. B. Head Master of Bedford school.

ECCLESIATICAL PREFERMENTS.

Rev. ----— Moore, M. A. Baxley and Pramingham-Earl consolidated R. R. Norfolk.

Rev. E. Frank, Shelton with Hardwick R. Norfolk.

Rev. Wm. Manning, M.A. Disa R. Norfolk.

Lincoloshire.

Rev. James Currey, Thurning R. Norfolk, the Rev. P. Sandiford, resigned.

Rev. S. Hudson, Hutton R. Cumberland, vice Lewthwaite, deceased.

Rev. Marwood Tucker, Harpford with Fen Ottery V. Devon, who Luce, deceased. Rev. Joseph Cotterill, Ampton R Suf folk.

BIRTHS,

Jan. AT Coiffield-house, Airshire, Lady Anne Montgomery, a son and heir. Jan. 28. In Grosvenor-square, the Countess of Harrowby, a daughter.

Jan. 29. The w.fe of George Kinderley, esq of Lincoln's-mn-fields, a son.

Feb. 3. In Great Marylebone-street, the wife of William Gordon, esq. M.P. a son. Feb. 5. At Dodington, Gloucestershire, the Hon. Mrs. Codrington, a daughter.

Feb. 9. The Countess of Mansheld, a son. Feb. 12. At knolefield, Blackheath, the wife of Major-gen, the Hon. Alexander Hope, M. P. a daughter Lately. In Grosvenor-place, the Marchioness of Douglas, a son and beir.

At Permoy, Ireland, Lady Sondes, a dau. The Lady of Sir Edward Synge, bt. 2 son. At Beech house, Hants, the wife of C. Jenkinson, esq. M. P. a daughter.

The wife of the Rev. Dr. Maltby, a son The wife of H. C. Compton; esq. of Manor-bouse, near Lyndhurst, Hants, a son and hear.

Marriages.

Jan. JAMES O'REILLY, esq. eldest son of Sir Hugh O'R. bart. of Ireland, to the only daughter of the late Baron D'Arabet, of the Holy Roman Empire.

Jan 15. Lieut. Turner, of the Leicester Militia (son of F. T. esq. Chief Magistrate for the borough of Grantham), to Eliza, dau. of ——— Jefferies, esq. of Pixton-house, Sussex.

Jan. 20 In Dublin, Joseph Atkinson, esq. to Sarah, second daughter of the Hon. Baron George, and niece of Sir Rupert G. bart.

Lately. By special licence, the Hon. .Windham Henry Quin, M. P. for the County of Limerick, eldest son of Lord Adare, to Caroline, only daughter of Thomas Wyndham, esq. of Dunraven Castle, Glamorganshire.

At Burnham, the seat of Lord Ventry, his grand-daughters, Anne and Eliza, daughters of the Hon. T. Mullins, of Montague-square, the elder to W. Orpen Townsend, esq. of Artully; the younger to Capt. Crommolin of Antrim, Ireland.

In Dublin, John Flood, esq. of Floodhall, co. Kilkenny, to Sarah, eidest daughter of the Right-hon. the Attorney General of Ireland.

T. Forster, esq. cf Roydon-hall, to Miss Sarah Holland, of Rising-lodge, Norfolk.

Lieut.-col. Thomas Marriott, of the Madras army, to Anne, youngest daughter of John Becket, esq. of Meanwood, near Leeds, and of Somerby-park, Lincolnsh.

William-Edward Powell, esq. of Nauteos, Cardiganshire, to Laura Edwyna, eldest daughter of James Phelp, esq. of Cottrell-house, Glamorganshire, and Coston-house, Leicestershire.

Prideaux John Selby, esq. of Twizellhouse, to Lewis Tabitha, sister of Bertram Mitford, esq. of Mitford Castle, Northumberland.

At Norwich, Lieut. Charles Pitt, R. N. to Matilda, only daughter of the late Sir G. Walcott, bart.

Rev. John Glasse, rector of Pencombe, Herefordshire, to Mrs. Charlton, widow of Nicholas Lechmere C. esq. of Ludford Park, near Ludlow.

Rev. E. Meyrick, rector of Ramsbury, Wilts, to Mrs. Habersham, of Lansdown Crescent, Bath.

Rev. Humphrey Sandford, B. A. eldest son of Folliot S. esq. of Up-Rossal, near Shrewsbury, to Miss Holland, only child of the late Rev. George H. rector of Hanwood, Salop.

Charles Pearson, jun. esq. of Greenwich, to Eliza, only daughter of the late Col. Hill, of the Royal Artillery.

J. Dearlove, esq. of Cuxcaton, Hants, to Margaret, second daughter of Mr. . Francis Holland, of South Lopham Hall, Norfolk.

Feb. 1. Thomas Hughan, esq. of Devonshire-place, to the eldest ter of the late Rovert Milligan, Hampstead.

Feb. 6. Rev. Robert Walpole, son of the late Hon. Robert W. En traordinary at the Court of Lis Caroline, youngest daughter of t John Hyde, esq. one of the Judges Supreme Court of Calcutta.

At Wirksworth, co. Derby, Joh esq. of Park-house, near Macc to susan, eldest daughter of Charle esq. of Worksworth.

Feb 7, Rev. George Hulme, c field. Berks, to Elizabeth, eldest d of the Rev John Symonds Breedon of Berecourt.

Feb. 11. Capt. Ambrose Lane, 4 to Elizabeth, daughter of the lat Le Mesurier, esq. Governor of A.

Feb. 12. Richard Jennings, Portland-place, and of Ridge, I Louisa, youngest daughter of Paul Jodrell, esq.

At Bath, Thomas White, esq. to eldest daughter of Robert More, Linkey Hall, Shropshire.

At Ugbrook, Humphrey Wel (brother of Thomas W. esq. of I Castle, Dorsetshire) to the Hon. (Clifford, eldest daughter of the Rig Lord C.

Feb. 21. At St. Stephen's, C John Evans, esq. alderman, and his Majesty's Justices of the Peac borough of Saltash, to Miss Mugg the Rev. H. Mugg, of Chudleigh, Additions and Correction Vol. LXXX. Part II. pp. 396 It is universally allowed that no sional man ever rendered more su services to the agriculture of his than the late Mr. Kent. The g at Norfolk, in acknowledgment for t fits derived by that County from ertion of his talents, presented hin with an embossed silver goblet, or ed with the emblems of Agricul cover surmounted with the figure o holding the antient stilyard. ing held for this purpose, March! Angel Inn, Norwich, was attended mas William Coke, esq. presider Norfolk Agricultural Society, at gentlemen of fortune in the coun most respectable body of yeomer dining together, Thomas Dusy rose, and, addressing himself to I in a short but appropriate speecl that he was deputed by the far friends to Agriculture in the C Norfolk, to present him with this token of their respect and cite his integrity and importiality landlord and tenant, in his profe-

It was he who impressed me with the imnortance of taking Nature for my guide, and of learning to deduce my ideas of the value of land, not from local enquiry which might mislead my judgment, but from the wild plants and grasses; as these would invariably express the voice of Nature. Accordingly, where I found the oak and elm as trees, and the rough cock'sfoot and meadow fox-tail as grasses, I was assured that such land was good. And where I found the birch tree, the jumper shrub, and the maiden-hair, and creeping bent-grasses, I was equally certain that such land was poor and sterile. In 1775, I published my " Hints to Gentlemen of Landed Property," in which I characterized and described a great number of different sorts of land, by what grew upon them, and suggested the most obvious means of improving them. I flatter myself this book has been the cause of considerable improvement, and will of more when I am mouldered into dust. I now found myself employed as a land-valuer upon a large scale; but it is my satisfaction to reflect that I did not undertake this office till I had satisfied my own conscience that I was ca-pable of it. When a gentleman put his estate into my hands, I considered it was the P. 485, read Richard Dawson, esq. late knight of the shire for Monaghan, nephew and presumptive heir of Thomas Viscount Cremorne.

P. 592, read At Castle Bytham, co. Lincoln, the Hon. William Moore, of Saperton, co. Waterford, second son of Stephen Viscount Mountcashel, prother of the first, and uncle of the present and second Earl of Mountcashel. He was formerly member for Clonmel in the Irish Parliament, married Anne, daughter and cubairess of Digby Fowkes, esq. by whom he has left issue, 1. Stephen Moore, esq of Saperton, member for Clonmel previous to the Union; 2 William; 3. Elizabeth.

P. 593. Lady Edward O'Bryen was Diana, eidest daughter of General George Hotham (by Diana, daughter of Sir Wartou Pennyman, bart); and misce of William Lord Hotham, Admiral of the Red She married Feb. 14, 1805, Lord Edward O Bryen, Captain in the Roya, Navy, and Secretary to the first Lord of the Admiralty, second brother of the Marquis of Thomond, K.T. by whom she has left no issue.

P 594. The late Colonel Blennerhassett possessed extensive influence at Arabella, co. Kerry. 'He formerly commanded one of the Irish Fencible regiments, and has been twice a representative for Kerry in the Irish parliament. By his death, Arthur Blennerhassett, esq. of Elmgrove, near Tralee, receives an increase of fortune of 5000l. per annum.

P. 595. b. The late Dr. Parr died in his 60th year, at his house in the Bedford Circus. He was a fellow of the Royal Societies of London and Edinburgh, and an emment leader of the medical profes-His extended career was brilliant and successful: acute in medical perception, decisive and correct in practice; his active mind penetrated the hidden recesses of Science: his literary ardour surpassed the accustomed bounds of human industry. Not only in anatomy and medicine, but in the studies of natural history, chemistry, general literature, and criticism, his numerous publications decidedly confirm the fertility of his genius. In private life, his temper was conciliating, his deportment unostentations: his professional humanity to the poor, gratuitous and unbounded. Towards his medical competitors his conduct was undeviatingly candid and liberal. His loss will be long and severely felt by those whom his judicious treatment has frequently raised from the bed of sickness, and who now live to deplore the loss of a valued friend and a skilful medical practitioner.

P. 596. Frederick William de Ginkell, seventh Earl of Athlone, and Baron of Aghrim, deceasing issueless, those honours devolve to his next surviving brother, the Hon. Rynand Diederick Jacob, now 8th Earl of Athlone.—The family never enjoyed the title of Viscount, nor any such bonour as Baron of Ballymore.

Pp. 597, 659. The following is a more correct account of the late Duke of Queens-berry's Will than that we have before published: the Will is dated the 16th of January, 1809. His Grace devised all his freehold and copyhold estates to Lord and Lady Yarmouth for their lives, and the life of the survivor of them; and after their death, to Frances, daughter of the said Lady Yarmouth, then of the age of eleven years, or thereabouts, and the children of the said Lady Yarmouth, born or to be born, and their heirs for ever.

BEQUESTS BY THE CODICILS.

Annuities.—Burrell, 200/. Brown, 5/.
Mrs. Corri, 200/. General Chas. Craufurd, 500/. Col. Dickson, 200/. C. Diacon, 100/.
Dubois, 300/. Gen. Pizpatrick, 500/. M. Gummar, 500/. G. Haydon, 15/. 12s. Herrenswand, 200/. Lady Hamilton, 500/. Mark Jackson, (porter) 200/. Haughton James, 500/. J. Retteridge, 200/. A. Negrmi, 100/. Rosselli, 100/. J. Radford, 200/. with all his horses and carriages, &c. at London and Richmond. Cath, Robertson, 20/. C. Sims, a footman, 150/. Janet Shellis, 4/. M. Sal Pietro, 100/. Colunel Thomas, 100/. Martha Walker, 5/. 5s.

Legacies. - Bissot, 100/. Colonel Robert Crauford, 10,000% Miss Connor, 2000% Col. Douglas, 10,000l. Captain Douglas, 10.000%. Andrew Dickie, 5000%. Edward Bullock Douglas, 150, Q004 Major Douglas, 10,0001. Madame Dorton, 10001. Mrs. Elliott, 5000/. Pere Elizée, 5000/. Lady Suvan Fincastle, 10,000% Gen. Fitzpatrick, 10001. Richard Goodisson, 10001. Lord W. Gordon, 2000l. Lady W. Gordon, 10,000l. Lady Anne Hamilton, 10,000/. Rev. P. Hamilton, 10,000%. Lady Hamilton, 1000%. Lock Hospital, 50001. Sir James Montgomery, 10,000%. Lady E. Montgomery, 10,000*l.* Wm. Murray, 50004 Madame Martinville, 50001. Major-General Picton, 50001. F. Rettig, 2001. Counters D. Ranault, 5000/. Sam a footman, 200/. Duchess of Somerset, 10,000%. Viscount Sidmouth, 50001. Col. M. Sharp, 10,0001. St. George's Hospital, 5000l. Colonel Thomas, 5000l. Captain Woodford, 10,000% Mr. Wraxall, 1000%. Mrs. Wravall, 1000%. Mr. Veitch. 10,000l. Earl of Yarmouth, 50,000l. Lady Yarmouth, 100,000L besides the houses in Piccadilly and Richmond, and stables in Brick-street, for her separate use. Lady Yarmouth's daughter, 50,000. Lord Yarmouth's youngest son, 50,000%.

The residue of personal estate to Lady Yarmouth's daughter and Lord Yarmouth's youngest son, at twenty-one, with beneat of survivorship; if both die under twentyone, to Lady Yarmonth and her eldest By his Grace's will (says a Correspondent), which is legally executed, and attested by three witnesses so as to convey freehold property, he devises all his freehold and copyhold esintes to Lord and Lady Yarmouth and their children. This devise is, however, revoked by the codicits and pecuniary legacies to the amount of 250,0001, given them instead: but, as the codicils are only so many sheets of note. paper, most of them in his Grace's handwriting, and not attested legally, they are insufficient to revoke the devise legally made by the will; so that, by this informality, which his Grace does not seem to have been aware of, Lord and Lady Yarmouth and their family will receive to an enormous amount more than his Grace seems to have intended.—Times.

P 660. a. Anne, sister to Mrs. Lee, was married to the Hon. John Grey, brother to the late (not the present) Earl of Stamford.

P. 661. a. Mr. Pulton was a graduate of Pembroke-college, Oxford.

P. 667. b. The late William Bayly, esq. died aged 73. He was a man of acknowledged abilities, possessing strong natural talents, and a large portion of scientific and acquired knowledge: as a mathematician and astronomer by profession, he was of considerable eminence, and highly esteemed by some of the first astronomers of the age. Other circumstances of his life rendered

Commander. After returning to England, having by the several voyages he had undertaken rendered the most essential ser-Trees to his country and the world, in accurately determining the latitude and longrtude of the several places discovered by his various surveys and astronomical obmervations, Mr. Bayly was in 1785, on the decease of Mr. Whitkell, appointed by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, head master of the Royal Academy at Portsmouth, which situation he held with great credit to himself, and equal advantage to the institution, until the new establishment of the Royal Naval College in 1807, when his Majesty in Council, in conuderation of Mr. Bayly's long, meritorious, and emment services, granted him a handsome pension, on which be retired from public service.

P. 666. Richard Cassan, esq. and his brother the late Stephen Cassan, esq. M.P. were fifth in descent from the first Earl of Mulgrave, seventh from the first Lord Howard of Effingham (1553) who was inneally descended, through the heiresses of Mowbray Duke of Norfolk, and Lord Segart. Mac. February, 1811.

farther account of the late Mr. Cunning-ton, of Heytesbury, Wilts, (misprinted Cunningham, in the page referred to.) Possessed of good natural abilities, his mind, in the early period of life, took a turn to scientific pursuits; and, though brought up in the bustle of trade, it was ever assiduous to obtain knowledge. This occasioned a sedentary mode of life, which deranged the nervous system; and for the last twenty years he become a victim to a debility which nothing but air and exercise could prevent from proving fatal. Thus called upon to support nature, his daily rides and excursions on the Wiltshire Downs led him to consider the numerous remains of Antiquity that he scattered over that interesting district; and here it was that the foundation was laid for that splended History of Antient Wiltshire, now carrying on by Sir Richard Colt Hoare, of Stourhead. With a nobleness of mind that stamps the character of the Baronet. he has thus addressed Mr. Cunnington, in the first part of his Work, prefixed to which is an excellent portrait of him: " Men illustrious either for their noble birth, conspi-LUCUS enous character, or distinguished literary abilities, have in general engrossed the homage of Dedications; but on the pre-sent occasion I shall deviate from this long established custom, and gratify my prival feelings by paying a tribute that is due to Justice and Friendship. To you, there-fore, Sir, who first projected the plan of this History, and by your interesting col-lections, and important discoveries, encouraged me to pursue it, this Work is most gratefully dedicated." Mr. Cannington in this pursuit had procured a collection of British Antiquities that were not, and perhaps never will be, surpassed by any in the Kingdom; and, when this subject was somewhat exhausted, his mind led him to that of Minerals and extraneous Possils, of which he had procured a beautiful and interesting collection. The ready access that was given to view his Cabinets, and the pleasure he always experienced in affording information, drew many Virtuosi to his house, where they were no less charmed with the Museum than they were with the affability of the Possessor. In his demestic character he was all that could call forth "the food perental soul;" and the present Biographer has frequently been one of the happy circle round his fire-side. Here he diffused among his young audiditors those precepts of virtue, those principles of knowledge, and those maxims of men and manners, that will ever remain on the minds of those who heard them. Here also it was, that Parental Affection saw the rising virtues of the Child-bere implanted those seeds that bloomed around the parent stock-and here Religion instructed the infant mind to look through Nature up to Nature's God. He died in his 57th year; and his death was of that nature so calm and pure, which the good man hails an his real existence.

Vol. LXXXI. p. 39. b. l. 39. For seventh, read seventeenth.

P. 62. b. l. 26. The beautiful " Ode to Enterprise" was written in 1799, not 1810.

P. 89. b. The late Sir Francis Bourgeois was the descendant of a family of respectability in Switzerland, where, it has been said, many of his ancestors filled offices of considerable trust in the state. The father of young Bourgeois, however, resided for several years in England, it is believed, under the patronage of the late Lord Heathfield; and the person we are now noticing was boru in Landon in 1756. His early destination was the Army; but, having been instructed, while a child, in some of the rudiments of Painting by a Foreigner of inconsiderable merit as a Painter of Horses, he became so attached to the study, that he soon relinquished all thoughts of the military profession, and resolved to devote his attention solely to the art of Painting. For this purpose he was placed under the tuition of Mr. from his cos access to mai collections in considerable and sea-piec through Italy his correct & ech country, his address, (versation, pro the best socie citories of the his return to] several speci Royal Acader putation and appointed pa whose brothe been much pl during his res at the same t of knighthood was afterwar Majesty, who scape-Painter this be bad, h ber of the R kince, by the fans, hé bec Property to re his profession time he had d iog in the circ loved and u Sir Francis's temporary pu say little,—H merour; but, we confess we cond rank of (tion of his sut of his figures inly with Nat colouring, he be more than medium, his vital powers were so diverted from generous or social objects, by the prevailing passion of gold, that he could discover no trait in any character, nowèver venerable or respectable, that was not seconded by riches; in fact, any one that was not rich be considered as an inferior animal, neither worthy of notice, nor saic to be admitted into society. This extraordinary feering be extended to female society, and, if possible, with a greater up gree of disgust. A woman he considered only as an incumbrance on a man of property, and therefore he could never be prevailed upon to admit one into his con-adence. As to wedlock he utterly and uniformly rejected any idea of it. wife was the public funds, and his children guineas; and no parent or husband paid more deference or care to the comforts of his family. He was never known to sensrate his immense hoard, by rewarding a generous action; or alleviating a premature or accidental misfortune, by the application of one shilling to such purposes. It could scarcely be expected he would bestow a gift or extend a gratifule to others, he was so niggard of coinforts to himself. The evening before he died, its improved state, to be at the disposal of the heirs he has chosen.—For the regulation of his fast Will and Testament, he appointed Walter Nangle, Esq. and Major O'Farrel, late of the Austrian army, his executors, and the Right Hon. David La Touche and Lord Fingal Trustees.—Oxford Herald.

P. 90, a. 70 P. 93, b. l. lcklingham.

1810. ON his April 29. Was Alian Cameron, giment, son of I Royal Veteran more than 16 year regimental colour and though them Enemy's shot, he remain untouched with the bettalion tant to the battalithe Isle of Wight dition, where he the fatal disorder ful victim.

Dec. 7. Drowned in going to Spithead, Mr. R. hardson, midsh pinan, of the Hussar, His body was picked up on Hayling Island, and interred in the chapel at Portsmouth.

Dec. 25. At Ellesmere, Salop, Mr. Richard Legh, many years the faithful steward of John Kynaston Powell, esq.

Dec. 27. At Passley, of which place he was a native, aged 97. Robert Ferguson. By his discharge, dated 1761, it appears, that he had, previous to that date, served twenty years in the 32d foot; and afterwards served eight or ien years in garrisons. He was admitted an out-pensioner of Chelsea Hospital in 1763, and is supposed to have been the oldest person of that description in that part of the country. He had ocen in many engagements, particularly those of Foniency and Detengen; and preserved, as a precious relick, a cost, with several member-shot holes in it; but he never received the slightest wound.

Lately. At Dunkirk, Lieut. Teach, of the 5d Ceylon regiment, who had saved himself from the wreck of the Elizabeth, noticed in our last volume, page 656. While he lay on the heach, exhausted with cold and fatigue, a garda costa, or French soldier, came up to him, to whom he offered six guineas in gold to carry his to some place of shelter. Another soldier then came in right, and it would appear that the two agreed to murder the unfortunate officer for the sake of his money, the body having been found with several wounds upon it. The circumstance transpired in consequence of the assassine having quarrelled about their booty, and one of them confessed the fact to his pricet, at the same time describing Lieutenest Tench's dress and person so minutely, that -due set no beniaries of bluce arduch on ject in the mands of his companions. The two soldiers are in custody, and the French efficers at Dunkirk are exerting themselves to precure more formal evidence than the confismon above alluded to, in order to bring the culprits to condign punishment. The wretch who confused the fact new denies it, and says he was in a delirium when he told the story.

At St. Cruz, Teneriffe, Mark Wylin, youngest sen of Alexander W. esq. M.D.

Edinburgh.

Jon. S. At Trocifel, after an illness of nine days, of an inflammatory fever, Brig.-gen. William Howe Campbell, of the Portuguese service, Colonel in the British army, and Lieut.-colonel of the 31st foot. His remains were interred on the 5th, with the highest military honours, beneath the Block-house battery, at Torres Vedras.

Jan. 4. At her palace at Belem, the Marchioness of Anjaga.

Jan. 6. At Liebon, of a typhus fever, smoorely humanted by all who know him, Col. James Wynch, of the 4th reg. or King's Own, who was promoted to the command of a brigade, and placed on the staff a short time before his decease, This gallagt officer had long distinguished himself by his uniform exertions and bravery; and had served successively in every expedition of importance during the war. At the Helder be was severely wounded, and at the battle of Corunna was shot through the body; from which latter wound he never entirely recovered.

Jon. 8. Aged 35, Mary, the eldest daughter of Mr. Joseph Bacon Appelbas, of Hinckley.

Jon. 9. At her uncle's, in Brunswicksquore, aged 19, Elizabeth, daughter of James Stey, eeq. of the Hyde, near Up-ton-upon-Severn, Worcestershire.

Jen. 11. 'At his son in law's, Lieut,- gup., Nicholfu, agus Grucu, bert. lets who had served I during a period of at the memorable s om. 19. At Roston, near Winchest aged 94, Mr. John Bucksey, a well-kno pipe and tabor player, who had said in promoting the merry dence for at his three generations of the gay and sprightly Jes. 13. In Spital-Seles, in his 775 year, the Rev. Robert Hood, M. A. cases of Guyhira chapel, in the parish of T both St. Mary, and master of the Grai mar-school at Holbeach, Lincolnshire; which latter he was appointed on the d of the Rev. Richard Gibson, in 1783.

The wife of Mr. (Royal Exchange.

At Cromwell, near Newark, at an ad venced age, the wife of Jonnes Bradley,

Mr. Murgan Gould, of Ludgate-Mill, hatter.

At Hinckley, Mito Heathcoat, do of Mr. John H. hesier.

In Portugui, Mr. Bradnock, or and paymenter of the Royal Artiflery. It had been 17 years in the depaytment, in served in the expeditions to Holland Egypt, Sicily, Spain, and Portngal. Jez. 14. At Hinton St. Goorge, B.

setshire, the Right-hon, the Cu

Poulett.

At Franch, near Kidderminster, wife of Mr. John Woodward.

Jan. 15. In his 926 year, Mr. Wathn niel Kemp, of Hinckley. He was huptined Dec. 28, 1719, by the Rev. With Bilby, of the Presbyterian persuasis that place, before the present mostly 100 was built,

In his 73d eyear, the Rev. John Pelish rector of Quenington, Gloucestarchire, and in the commission of the peace for the

At Loughren, Ireland, aged 39, Dr. J. Peter Blake.

Aged 80, Mr. Bescoby, a Physicial farmer, of Baraby, near Newark, Neste

Jan. 16. Muss Cole, daughter of M Wm, C. fermer, of Morton, Lincolneller,

At Cambridge, aged 76, Mrs. Gus relict of the Rev. Henry G. Sermely vi of Triplow, Hauxton, and Mouton, in Cambridgeshire.

At Crumford, Notte, aged 38, 3

Samuel Wragg, coal-dealer.

At Bawtry, Yorkshire, aged 25, 15. Thomas Smith, one of the propriets Sonk friend.

Jen. 17. At Rothery, Duncan Ho. son, who was born in 1715, at Dalori near Inversey. He emissed into the t regiment in 1744, under Lieut. cel. Il guld Compbell; was present whir the regiment in all the builden and the a bearty supper, and was found dead in the morning.

Jan. 21. Aged 66, the Rev. John Malkin, son of the late Rev. Gilbert M. rector of Thornham, Suffolk.

At Gramthorpe, Lincolnshire, aged 80, Mrs. Blowe.

Jan. 22. Miss H. Williams, of Bristol. Jan. 23. At Jersey, aged 86, Mrs. Elizabeth Beuzeville, widow of the late Rev. Samuel B. of Bethnal-green, and sister to the late Adm. Ourry.

John-Charles, only son, and on the 24th Sophra, youngest daughter, of William Spurling, esq. of Betton-hall, Shropshire.

At Heyden, Essex, Julia, youngest daughter of the Hon. William-Frederick Wyndham, brother to the Earl of Egremont.

Mrs. Barratt, relict of the late Mr. Paul B. painter, of the High Pavement, Notts.

At the head-quarters at Cartaxo, after a short illness, occasioned by an aneurism of the heart, and the bursting of a large blood-vessel, in his 49th year, the Most Excellent Senor Don Pedro Caro y Sureda, Marquis de la Romana, Grandee of Spain, Grand Cross of the Royal Spanish Order of Charles III. and Captain-General of the Armies of his Most Christian Majesty. He was born in the city of Palma, in the island of Majorca. After an educa-of the Army of the Left, which he soon obtained, he executed the most skilful movements and retreats, suspending and frustrating the plans of the always superior forces of the Enemy. By his conduct and military skill, he finally succeeded in expelling them from Gallicia, even to their own astonishment, and to the surprise of all who knew the small means he had at Soon after he was sumhis disposal. moned to the Central Junta; where he presented himself, not as a victorious General, but as an unassuming representative, displaying all the force of his character only in that vote which he gave in October 1809, on the necessity of forming immediately a Council of Regency .- On the 24th of January, 1810, the Supreme Government being dispersed by the entrance of the French into Andalusia, he returned to take the command of the army of Estramadura. His presence was of so great importance, that to it was owing the enthusiasm displayed in Badajoz, and in the whole province. The efforts which the Enemy have made since that time are well known, and likewise the skill with which the Marquis contrived to keep them in check, and frustrate their plans. Estramedura being at last cleared of the Enemy, and Massena having advanced in front of the lines at Torres Vedras, the Marquis marched in haste, with two divisions of his army, and had since constantly been by the side of his illustrious friend Lord Wellington, who has so justly approciated his merit and virtues (see p. 169), and whose eulogy will serve to mark the loss which Spain has suffered by his death, as well as the common cause of the allies, even though we had not numerous proofs of the public enthusiasm which his name and fame inspired in all quarters.—The barge which brought down the hody of this celebrated General reached Lisbon on the night of the 25th of January. On the morning of the 26th, it was put on-board the Portugueze frigate Perola. On the 27th, about mid-day, the body was landed at the quay of Belem, accompanied by the barges of the Portugueze Admiral and several English officers, among whom was Adm. Berkeley, and many other naval officers. The great square of Belem, and the ground reaching from the quay to the Monastery of St. Jerome, were lined with English and Portugueze cavalry, by the 12th Portugueze regiment of the line, a corps of the Royal Volunteers of Commerce, a battalion of the Royal Brigade of Marines, and a regiment of English infantry; a squadron of the 6th Portugueze regiment of cavalry, another of English dragoons, and a battalion of English infantry, led the procession. The body followed on a bier, carried by the privates of the Royal Carbineers; the cords of the pall, which covered the bier, were held by the superior officers of the Staff of his Excellency, and by English officers; on each side were servants of the Royal Household, with wax tapers. The English and Portugueze officers, both naval and military, fullowed—the Spanish and English ministers, and a great number of officers of the three nations; two state-coaches of the Royal Household closed the procesin the chapel of the Mouastery was erected a scaffold, on which the bier was placed, while the funeral service was performed, and from thence it was carried to the house where it is to be deposited till conveyed to Spain. The bowels, which were put into a box, were buried close to the high altar. The ceremony being ended in the church, a battalion of the Royal Volunteers of Commerce, the park of Portugueze artillery placed near the Monastery, and the park of English artillery near the square of Belem, fired each of them three rounds. In this manner were closed the funeral solemnities; exciting, under all the circumstances, the most lively emotions to the memory of this great man.

Jan. 24. At Cappaghyicar, near Castlebar, aged 110, Mr. Edward Maley. In Penton-square, of the wound he received on-board an enemy's ship, Lieut. Robert Tryon, of H. M. S. the Phipps.

Jan. 25. At Bath, aged 78, Col. Robert Brooke, of the East India Company's service, who eminently distinguished himself by his military conduct in India; and in the station of Governor of St. Helena, manifested his zeal for the King and Country by the seasonable aid he gave of troops, money, and military stores, to assist at the first conquest of the Cape of Good Hope; and by fitting out and equipping a squadron of Company's ships, to act under Captain (now Admiral) Essington, for intercepting and capturing a fleet of homeward-bound Dutch East India-men.

At Morton, aged 73, Mr. John Frudd, formerly landlord of the White Lion, Gainsborough.

In the City-road, the wife of the Rev. Dr. Thomas Coke, general superintendant of the Irish, Welsh, West India, Nova Scotia, and Newfoundland Missions in the Methodist connexion.

Jan. 26. At his seat at Bevere, near Worcester, in his 86th year, Treadway-Rus-ell Nash, D. D. F. S. A. Rector of Leigh. And on February 4, his remains were interred in the family vault at Saint Peter's, Droitwich (of which rectory himself and ancestors have been patrons a long series of years.) He was of Worcester College, in Oxford; M.A. 1746; B. and D. D. 1758. He was the venera ble Father of the Magistracy of the County of Worcester; of which he was an upright and judicious member nearly fifty years; and a gentleman of profound erudition and critical knowledge in the several branches of Literature: particularly the history of his native County; of which he was very fond, and which he illustrated with indefatigable labour and expence to himself. It has long been before the publick, and is rising in reputation daily. In exemplary prudence, moderation, affability, and un-Ostentatious manner of living, he has left. no superior: of the truth of which remark, the Writer of this article could produce abundant proof, from a personal intercourse of long continuance with him; and which he sincerely laments has now an

In Arlington-street, Piccadilly, Thomas Nichelson, esq. of Bishop-Wearmonth, Durham.

In the Temple, Steward Kyd, esq. Barrister at Law, and author of several useful publications on the Laws of England.

At Totnes, Devon, aged 18, John Haynes Harrison, eldest son of John H. H. esq. of Copford-ball, Essex.

In Devonshire-street, Portland-place, Philip Stimpson, esq.

At Brighton, Lieut. Arthur, 84th reg. son of Mr. James A. of Copthall-court.

The wife of Benjamin Severn, esq. of Queen-street, Cheapside.

In Basinghall-street, after a long and painful illness, borne with exemplary fortitude, Mrs. Woodthorpe, wife of Henry W esq. Town-clerk of London. She was a good wife, an excellent mother, and her loss will be deplored by all who knew her.

Aged 88, Mrs Shepheard, of Kelvedon, Essex, relict of the late Rev. George S.

Aged 56, the wife of John Browne, esq of Kennington.

At Bath, William Kennedy Lawrie, esq. of Red Castle, Galloway, formerly of Wood-hall Estate, Jamaica.

At Hammersmith, Mr. Charles Grover. Of consumption, aged about 32, Mr. John Blankhorne, of Heckington, Oxfordthire.

At Forres, N. B. the wife of Colin Robertson, esq. of Russell-square.

At Bristol, Mr. William Williams, many years Master of the Merchants' Hall School, Passing over the draw-bridge, he fell into the river; and although taken out immediately, and conveyed to his home; died within a few bours.

Martha, wife of Mr. John Hill, of H. M. Castoms at Bristol.

ciety of the fair sex.

In Southampton-buildings, Nathanael Huson, esq. Barrister at Law, and a Commissioner of Bankrupts.

At Hackney, Mrs. Mary Malkin, widow of the late Thomas M. esq.

At Clewer, Berks, the infant son of Capt. Hirst, of the Blues.

In her 24th year, Sarah, eldest daughter of Mr. Rich. Dixon, of Fenchurch-street.

At Kingston upon-Thames, Elizabeth wife of Mr. Thomas Taylor, grocer.

Aged 66, Mary, wife of Mr. William Collier, of Park-s reet, Bristol.

In Mount-row, Lambeth, A. Van Yzendoorn, esq.

Jan. 51. At Putney, Miss Pettiward, daughter of the late Roger P. D. D.

Aged 64, Mrs. Sarah Williams, of Frederick's-place, Hampstead.

At his father's, at Barnack, Northamptonshire, aged 29, John Lloyd, esq. of Lime-street, merchant.

At Ipswich, aged 96, Mrs. Toosey.

At Lincoln, Mr Holmes, a respectable tradesman. After eating a hearty breakfast at his own house, he set out on foot in, order to go to ingham, within a short distance of which place he was found dead in the road. It is supposed that he was taken in a fit, similar to what he had twice before suffered; and that, for want of help, he was suffocated in some mud into which he had fallen.

At Plymouth, aged 49, the Lately. Lady Rachael Sandford. Her Ladyship was the eldest daughter of Alexander, the fifth Earl of Antrim, and sister of the late Marquis of Antrim; born May 4, 1741, married Sept. 1777, Joseph Sandford, of Ninehead, co. Somerset, esq. The house of Antrim has been twice honoured with a marquisate, first in 1644, in the person of Randal second Earl of Astrim, who deceasing without issue, the marquisate became extinct, but the earldoin devolved to his brother Alexander, whose great grandson, Randal William, sixth Earl, was created Marquis of Antrim by his present Majesty, but deceasing without male issue, the marquisate, together with the antient earldom of Antrim, and the viscounty of Dupluce, became extinct; but his Lordship's eldest daughter, the Lady Anne-Catherine M'Donnell, succeeded to the title of Countess of Antrim, and Viscountess Dunluce, in virtue of a new patent of those honours confirmed upon the Marquis in 1785, with remainder to his daughters in failure of male issue.

Aged 40, the Rev. John Rawleigh L'Ans, rector of Bicton, Devon, and incumbent of North Tamerton, Cornwall.

Rev. John Paus, rector of Whitstone, mear Stratton.

Rev. Dr. Neil Roy, minister of Aberlady Manse, Scotland.

Rev. Francis Paddey, 40 years vicar of Kellington, near Ferrybridge.

Rev. Charles Walker, rector of Slymbridge, Gloucestershire, and in the Commission of the Peace for that County.

At Dolgelly, Wales, the Rev. E. Vaughan Evans, curate of Meliden, near St. Asaph.

In his 39th year, Mr. Bland, solicitor, of Newark.

At Spondon, Derby, aged 60, Samuel Richardson, gent.

At Eyam, Derbyshire, in his 75th year, William Longsdon, esq.

At Tissington, Derbyshire, aged 87, Francis Johnson, esq.

In Park-street, Bristol, Thomas Hobbs,

r

Of a decline, Miss Susanna Colmer, youngest daughter of the late Mr. John C. stationer, of Bristol.

At Downend, near Bristol, in his 76th year, Mr. Thomas Burchell.

Mr. J. G. Warmington, attorney-at-law, of Birmingham.

The wife of the Rev. F. Annesley, of Hydon lodge, Notta.

At Coldstream, Capt. William Reid, of the 8th Royal Veteran Bettalion.

Elizabeth, wife of the Rev. L Hinde, vicar of Shiffinal, Salegal

At Aldborough, the wife of Capt. Lord. Jane, youngest daughter of the Rev. James Rouquet, of West Harptree, Semerset.

At Cirencester, Miss Harden, sister of . Mr. H. surgeon.

At Monmouth, in her 91st year, the wife of T. Johnson, esq. one of the senior. aldermen of that town.

Aged 24, Emily, wife of R. Gooch, esq. of Croydon, Surrey.

In her 42nd year, the wife of Mr. George Loraine, of Wallington, Surrey.

At Stockwell, Surrey, Frederick Mol-ling, esq.

At Aberdeen, aged 42, Robert Eden Scott, esq. Professor of Philosophy in the King's College, which office he had afficial for 15 years (having previously officiated as Assistant Professor.)

At Huntingdon, in her 96th year, Jane, widow of William Bell, caq. of Belfall house, Essex. Her five children - (1886) eldest but seven years of age) were secovering from a scarlet fever; but during her attention to them she received the fection, which caused her death.

Aged 87, Mrs. Sarah Wallen, of World-ingham.

At Kirby Malory, Leicestershire, :m 107, a labourer, named Robinson.

The wife of Robert Hurst, eq. eff Huntingdon.

Capt. Diamond, sen. of Swansee.

Aged 79, Pryce Buckley, esq. of Gleabafrèn, Montgomeryshire.

In his 78th year, Mr. David Griffith. of Twyning, Gloucestershire.

Aged 79, Thomas Rode, esq. of Beccies. The wife of the Rev. William-Carpenter Ray, of Boreham, Essex.

Capt. John Saunders, a capital burgess of Harwich.

At Painswick, Miss Baylis, daughter of the late Benjamin B. of Gloucester.

At Hempstead, near Gloucester, Mr. John Bayley, a respectable farmer.

At Handsworth, Staffordshire, aged 16, Capt. W. Green, R. N.

At Newcastle, in his 53d year, Mr. William Tate, of the Trinity-house of that town, where he was much respected for his faithful services. After being one of the crew of Admiral Byng's ship, in the unfortunate expedition for the relief of. Minorca, he had the satisfaction of being more successfully employed under Adm.

Pococke, at the taking of the Havannah in 1762. Miss Langford, eldest daughter of the late R. L. esq. of Ellesmere Grange, Soland At Bridgnorth, Mr. Alderman Ballet. 1 At Hereford, Mrs. Olivia Mainwaring third daughter of the late Cavendieh Tyre. rei M., esq.

originally a barber and wig-maker; but for some years had left off business. With lus twin brother, who died many years before him, he had carried on that business at the end of the Haymarket towards Piccadilly. His integrity was unquestioned, and I know an extraordinary instance of generosity of sentiment and conduct in him and his brother. From very early life he became attached to experimental philosophy. He made exceedingly good barometers and thermometers. He also made electric machines, and taught the use of the globes. When the balloons were first introduced, he turned his thoughts to that interesting discovery, and was very expert in making and filling them. He was an accurate observer, and one of the principal of the transits of Mercury, and two eclipses of the Sun, the most considerable since I have uved here, we observed together at Troston. One of the two letters apprising me of the beautiful Comet of 1807 (and watch arrived here both together) was from him. He was 76. He had read not very many books, but some of the best in the different branches of natural philosophy. He had a most clear, strong, and acutelydiscriminating judgment, with an excel-GENT. MAG. February, 1311.

and Earth, during the expected visible part of its orbit. Few persons who had paid any attention to experimental philosophy, ever visited Bury, within these last 20 years or more, without calling on Mr. Mills. No man could be more naturally unaffected and unassuming in his conversation: though not correct in his language (he had been too attentive to facts and experiments, for inferences to be drawn from them, to find time for attain-ing to an equal exactness in words) he was exceedingly clear in his ideas. In polities he was a friend to peace, freedom, and humanity, to a reform in the representation, and to the abolition of the slave trade. This imperfect and hasty sketch may seem to give some idea of a man whose memory well merits to be preserved, and who is among the examples what has tural aptitude and persevering application is capable of performing." - Capel Luft.

At Willoughton, near Gainsborough, at an advanced age, Mr. Daniel Dawber, Aged 82, the widow Clayton, of Sieaford.

At Llanvaughan, Cardigan, John Thomas, esq. admiral of the white.

At Sibsey, Lincolnshire, of a typhus fever, fever, aged 57, Mr. Richard Plunt, farmer; and the third day after, of the same disorder, at Louth, aged 7, his grandson.

At Lynn, Norfolk, after a long and afflicting ilmess, occasioned by sleeping in a damp bed, aged 33, Mr. Samuel Kent.

At Bawdsey, Suffolk. Mr. Thurston Whimper, of Alderton-hall. In consequence of the hurricane that prevailed on the 10th of November, and the high tide that followed, a vessel had come on shore, and was wrecked. About seven o'clock in the evening, Mr. W. and another gentleman, went down to the beach, for the purpose of rendering any assistance in their power upon the occasion. Too much engaged by the humane object which they had in view, they remained on the shore till the tide, which was unusually high, came in, and beating over the beach in a tremendous manner, and in some places making breaches in it, impeded their retreat. The other gentleman, by the strength and spirit of his horse, escaped, though very narrowly, with his life; but Mr. W.'s horse stumbled, and afterwards came down in one of the breaches, and dismounted him. Being unable to swim, he could not reach the wall, though at a few yards distance only, but was lost between that and the beach; and thus fell sacrifice, in the prime of life, and full enjoyment of health, to the benevolent design of affording aid to his fellowcreatures, suffering under the afflicting circumstances of shipwreck. His body was found next morning.

At Bosvige, near Truro, Cornwall, aged 76, Mr. Gilbert Hele Chillcott. had been the land-steward of Francis Gregor, esq. the late county member, for upwards of 20 years, and had filled the same situation to the present Sir Christopher Hawkins, bart., his father, and grandfather, for more than half a century; the latter of whom appointed him one of the guardians of his infant children. his character as agent he united a zeal the most fervent for the benefit of his principals, to an unwearied diligence and unstillied integrity. His merits will be inferred, on considering the length of his services, and the confidence reposed in him by his employers.

At St. Petersburg, in his 82d year, Mr. Raikes, well known in the mercantile world.

M. Nicolai, the celebrated Prussian author. He edited the Bibliotheque Universelle, from 1764 to 1792. From the multiplicity of his works, and the influence which his opinions once had among the German literati, he was nick-named the God of Paper, and the Idol of Philosophers.

At Lisbon, of an intermittent fever,

Gen. Campbell.

At Gibraltar, of the epidemic fover, Lieut. Paty, agent of transports:

At Earlung, the celebrated German Maturalist, Schroeder.

On his passage from the West-ledler Col. Tomlinson, of the 13th reg. foot.

On board the John West Indiaman, in consequence of a shot received in an engagement with a French privateer, aged 30, Mr. George Cunningham, only surviving son of the late Mr. David C. of Alnwick. His integrity to his employers, intrepidity and courage in the hour of danger, and his suavity of temper, endeated him to all his connections:

In the late attack on the French vessels in the Mole at Palamos, Lieut. Pecking.

Royal Marines, of the Ajax.

Feb. 1. In South Parade, Leeds, aged 61, Wm Cookson, esq. senior aidentisis of that Borough, and one of his Majesty's' Justices of the Peace, and Deputy Lieutenants of the County of York. To a mind peculiarly acute and intelligent, he addid a soundness of judgment, which readered. him extremely useful to that Borough; in whose councils he took an active and leading part for upwards of thirty years, His commercial knowledge and opinious were held in high estimation and respect by Mr. Wilberforce and Mr. Pitt; to whose presence he was frequently admitted as a delegate from the town of Leeds. 'In his judicial capacity, justice was always tempered with mercy; and to his activity and ingenuity, the town of Leeds stands chiefly indebted for many of its ornaments and improvements. He was a most affectionate husband, a kind and indulguat parent, a warm, steady, and sincere friend; and had a heart and purse ever open to the calls of the needy and distressed. Zeglously attached to his King, Church, and Constitution, he was equally liberal and generous in religious and political opinique; insomuch that he was looked up to as the bond of union betwixt parties of dispit tenets and different opinions, as well as the friendly and judicious umpire in cases private feuds or domestic brolls. After a life well spent in acts of picty and charity, he died, as he lived, in peace and charity with all mankind; carrying with him to the grave, the prayers, bl and lamentations of thousands of individuals.

In New-road, Fitzroy-square, aged 75, Paul Barbot, esq.

In Upper John-street, Fitzroy-squares, J. Newey, esq. late of the Plantation-office, Customs.

At his son's, in Birmingham, John Hutford, esq. of Hagley; formerly a coalmerchant in Upper Thames-street.

In Stephen's-green, Dublin, the Right Hon. Sir Hercules Langrishe, bart.

At

At his mother's house, at Homerton, aged 18, Edward Knapp, e.g., jun. grand-son of Edward K. esq. of Winchester, banker.

In his 86th year, Mr. Wm. Gilbert, of Great Bowden, Leicestersbire.

In her 16th year, Jane, youngest daughter, of the Rev. Dr. Coombe, of Hertford-street, May Fair.

In Bedford-square, Mrs. Mary Tatnott, of Theobalds, Herts.

Judith, wife of the Rev. T. H. Bullen, rector of Kennet, near Newmarket, Northamptonshire, and lately master of the grammar-school at Oundle.

In her 77th year, Mrs. Barbora Masters, relict of the late Mr. John M. of Bristol.

Aged 70, the eccentric Tom Brown, of Garstang. Tom was an occasional useful assistant in the kitchens of the neighbouring gentry; he could either please the taste or mend a sole with any man of his day: but Tom would neither make nor mend for the Lords of the Creation, he would only take the measure of a female foot. A short time previous to his death, he selected thirty-six female acquaintances to attend his funeral, all of whom attended, and were regaled at Mr. Henry Woods ter of Capt. Whitmore.

Samuel l'abor, jun. esq. of Colchester.

At Laytonstone, Mrs. Parsons, widow, well known by her literary works. She was reduced from a state of affluence to the hard necessity of writing to provide for a numerous family. She published in 1790, "The History of Miss Meredith," 2 vols. 12mo.; and wrote also "The Errors of Innocence;" "Ellen and Julia," "Lucy," "The Voluntary Exile;" and "The Girl of the Mountains;" novels, all of which are respectable performances; and "The Intrigues of a Morning," a farce.

Mrs. Sarah Bevan, widow of the late Mr. Joseph B. saddler, of Bristol. Being of a letnargic habit, she feel upon the fire, and was so much burnt as to survive scarcely more than an hour.

At Glasgow, aged 84, Mrs. Maclean, relict of the sate Dr. John M. and mother of Dr. L. M. of Sudbury.

of Dr. L. M. of Sudbury.

Feb 6. The wife of Mr. Charles Druce, of Billiter-square.

At Montpelier, Mrs. A. Gore, only daughter of the late Sir Booth G. bart. of Lissadeli, co. Sligo, and sister to the present Sir Robert Gore Booth, bart.

Much

Much lamented by his relatives and numerous friends, Mr. Samuel Taylor, of Northwich in Cheshire, bookseller.

At Islington, Mr. W. Upton, many years clerk at the Police-office, Hattongarden.

Aged 41, the wife of Mr. Ellerby, of Ave-Maria-lane, and sister to Mr. Manningford, banker, of Bristol.

In Argyle-street, Christopher Coates Porter, esq. Major of the West London

miliția.

In South-street, Finsbury-square, aged 77, Mrs. Child, relict of the late Mr. John C. of Winchester.

Mr. Ames Hellicar, jun. ironmonger, St. Thomas-street, Bristol.

At Weston-house, Lincolnshire, Mrs. Leadbetter, relict of the late Roger L. esq. of Brigg, and mother of Mrs. Uppleby, of the former place.

Feb. 7. In Powis-place, Elizabeth, wife of the Rev. John Cracroft, and eldest daughter of James Lewis, esq.

At Leyton, Essex, the wife of Henry Wildman, esq.

At Uckfield, Sussex, Mrs. Newton, relict of the Rev. G. N. rector of Isheld.

At Bath, the wife of Robert Reynolds, esq. of Battersea.

Mr. Robotham, watchmaker, of Leicester.

The wife of Mr. Chr. Phillips, Whitehouse, Bedminster.

At Norton-place, near Lincoln, aged 78, John Harrison, esq. He rose in the morning, apparently in good health, and his servant had assisted in dressing him; but wanting something from below stairs, he left his master for only a few minutes, and on his return to the chamber found him lying on his bed a corpse. Mr. H. sat in two Parliaments, as member for Grimsby, co. Lincoln, and was twice also returned for Thetford, co. Norfolk, till age and infirmity rendered it necessary that he should decline the public service. As long as he bore a public character, he was invariably the friend of popular rights, and was celebrated for his inflexible opposition to the administration of his day. He has left two daughters, the one unmarried, the other the lady of Sir Montague Cholmeley, bart. of Easton-hall, in the county of Lincoln; whose children, it is supposed, will inherit the greater part of his fortune.

Aged 76, Rupert Clarke, esq. one of the magistrates of the Police-office, Shadwell, and above fifty years in the commission of the peace, and a Deputy Lieutenant for the county of Middlesex.

Mr. George Baker, late of St. Paul's He was born at Hun-Church-yard. gerford, in the County of Berks, in January 1747, where his father, the Rev. Thomas Baker, (whose worth still survives in the memory of the inhabitants) was vicar for nearly thirty years. At the age of fourteen he came to London, and was placed in the counting-house of a West India merchant, whence he removed in 1767 to St. Paul's Church-yard, under the patronage of a maternal aunt, at that time engaged in the business of a lace-merchant; which commerce he continued till the time of his decease with unimpeached integrity.—Early in life he shewed a taste for the Arts, and afterwards became a zealous and liberal collector of drawings and engravings, and of many valuable works of literature, in the choice of which he evinced a most accurate discrimination. This pursuit engaged much of the time that could be spared from business; and together with the society of certain eminent artists, formed the chief source of his pleasures. In the works of Hogarth, Woollet, and Bartolozzi, and in the publications which issued from the press at Strawberry Hill, his collection can hardly be surpassed.—Blessed with a majurally good constitution, he had been customarily inattentive to the ill effects arising from wet feet; and from this cause, it is believed, originated, towards the end of December last, a complaint, which in its progress assuming the character of a typhus fever, baffled the aid of medicine, and terminated the life of a respectable member of society.

Feb. 8. At Clifton, aged 17, Susanna, youngest daughter of the late Mr. Comer, of St. George's, co. Somerset.

At the house of her daughters, the Miss Barrows, Bristol, aged 71, Mrs. Helen Collins.

John Fitzgerald, esq. of Dysart, co. He was the first Roman Catholic in that county who had been appointed to the commission of the peace, after the law which permitted that distinction to be extended to persons of his persussion in Ireland.

Feb. 9. At Bishop's-Stortford, the wife of Mr. Walker William Wilby, of Little-Britain.

At Morden, in Surrey, aged 24, deeply and most descreedly lamented, the Rev. Frederick Henry Papendick, M. A. late of Trinity-college, Oxford; in whom, to an amiable disposition, were united a solid understanding and a strict probity of, heart; and whose earnestness and piety in the exercise of his sacred duties, during the short period of his ministry, gained him the esteem and attachment of his numerous and respectable neighbourheod. 🚰 In Morden-college, Blackheath, aged 78, Capt. Henry Coupar, many years are active Commander in the New-York Trade.

At Nottingham, the wife of Major Corell, late of the 76th reg.

Aged 84, Mr. Cole, father of Mr. C. of Greenwich.—In our volume for 1778, p. 320, we have given his account of the prematic micrometer.

Fcb. 10. At Welton, Yorkshire, aged about 60, Mrs. Lowthorpe, daughter of the late Rev. Mr. Edmonds, of that place Aged 63, Elizabeth, wife of the Rev. Colby Bullock, of Shipdham, Norfolk.

At her brother-in-law's, Mr Key, surgeon, of Fenchurch-street, M vs Barry, daughter of the late Mr. Charles B. of Ingram-court.

Aged 69, Mr. Thomas Lowther, of Britanua-row, Islangton.

Aged 63, Elizabeth, wife of Mr. Strachan, of Oxendon-street.

In her 28th year, Mary Anne, wife of Mr. Austin, silversmith, of Oxford street.

Mr. Henderson, of the Cannon Tavern, Portland-road.

On the Lower Mall, Hammersmith, the Rev. Dr. Keith.

M.ss Bush, only daughter of R. B. esq. of Tracey Park, Gloucestershire.

At Lady Saltoun's, in New Cavendishstreet, in his 22d year, the Hon, Smoon Fraser, banker. This gentleman had lately arrived from his travels through Scotland, and enjoyed apparent good health, though for a few years he had been subject to fits. His death was very sudden; he rang his men of that place.

Feb. 13 Of croup, the attack of which proved fatal in 32 hours, John Ruspini Warren, aged seven years, a most promising and beloved boy, the only son of J. T. Warren, esq. Dep. Inspector of Military Hospitals.

At half-past eleven at night, in Portman-place, Edgeware-road, in his 37th year, his Excellency the Duke de Alburquerque, Ambassador Extraordinary from Spain, Grandee of the First Class, General of the Spanish Army, &c. &c. The Duke, who was a man of great military ardour, and of the purest spirit of patriotism, and who felt ind gaant at some insinuations and neglect of the Junta of Cadiz, had been almost incessantly employed. for some time past, in drawing up a vindication of his conduct, which he had just printed in 4to, under the tale of " Manifiesto del Duque de Alburquerque, acerca de su Conducta con la Junta de Cadez, y Arribo del Exercito de su Cargo a aquella Plaza;" when, on Friday the 15th of February, he was seized with a most alarming paroxysin of mental derangement, for which he was attended by Père Elisée, and other foreign medical gentlemen. But the next day his complaint was become so violent, that further assistance was requested; and Dr. Simmons and his son were called in; and soon afterwards Sir Walter Farque har was added in consultation—but medical aid was of no avail; the severity of the paroxysms baffled every attempt to relieve the patient, and this high-spirited and excellest Nobleman died at the time we have above stated.—The Duke had passed his life in military service: he was distinguished in the late war between Spain and France; and during the present he had not for an instant quitted the service of his Country. Being with the Spanish forees in Holstein at the time of the first rising of his countrymen, against Buonaparte, he immediately left that army; and travelling through the whole of France, with great personal hazard, joined the armies of the Patriols. He was present, and distinguished, in all the principal battles that have been fought since that period; and had the singular good fortune never to have sustained a defeat, when he had the power to direct his own operations. Cadiz was preserved by a rapid and skilful march, which he copducted in January 1810. It was some consolation to the Duke, who added to all the qualities of a good officer, the purest and most ardent affection for his Country, to have received, in his latter moments, the approbation of the Cortes : who owe to him the seat of their deliberations.—The Duke of Alburquerque will be lamented by. Spain, as an ardent Patriot and a gallant Soldier; by England, as a firm Friend and Ally; and by Mankind, as an honest Man.

Feb. 19. At Great Stanmore, Middlesex, universally lamented and respected, aged 65, Mr. William Parker, a clerk in the Brewery of Mr. Clutterbuck of that place, who, during the space of 53 years of faithful and active service, devoted to the interests of a family from whom he received his early education, has uniformly maintained the character of a strictly, upright and bonest man.

^{*} The following extract from the proceedings of the Cortes in the sitting of Jan. 13. proves the high estimation in which his character and services were held by that notriotic assembly: "A memorial from the Duke of Alburquerque was read, in which be expressed his ardent desire to devote himself to the defence of his Country. He observed, that honour was the most powerful impulse in the career of arms; and therefore he was anxious, by means of the accompanying memorial, to remove the doubts. excited against him and the army under his command, by the publication of a paper, of the Junta of Cadiz on the 16th of March. The memorial concluded thus: " I wish effectually to continue my services in defence of the country in my military capacity, and thus to render myself more useful than I can be in my present state." Senor Luxan then spoke, and proved, that without the skilful retreat of the Duke, then. Isla and Cadiz would no longer have been free, and the nation in fact without existence a that he marched thither, notwithstanding the orders which commanded him to return a second time to Seville. He related various traits of generosity and devotion on the part of the Duke and his troops; and concluded with demanding, that they should be declared to have deserved well of the country. After a discussion of some length, in which other members spoke loudly in praise of the Duke (Senor Laguna proposing that he should be immediately tent for, and invested with the command of the army. and Senor Perez offering with the Americans to be at the expence of a medal in bostour of the Duke and his army), the proposition of Senor Garos was at last carried, which, in substance declared, that the Duke and his army had deserved well of their country by their services, and particularly by having covered the points of the Isla and of Cadiz; and that the Regency be informed, that the Duke wishing to continue in the military career, he should be sent for to receive a command in the army."

AVERAGE PRICES of Navigable Canal Property, Dock Stock, Fire-Office SHARES, &c. in February 1811 (to the 21st), at the Office of Mr. Scott, 28, New Bridge-street, London:—Trent and Mersey, or Grand Trunk Canal, 1170% without Half Yearly Dividend, at the rate of 451. per Share clear, per Annum.—Birmingham, 10401. dividing 421. clear.—Coventry, 8501. dividing at the rate of 321. per Share.—. Swansea, 1671. the last Dividend 81. per Share.—Monmouthshire, 1291.—Grand Junetion, 270l. to 272!.—Kennett and Avon, 42l. 10s.—Wilts and Berks, 45l. to 46l. 10s.— Rochdale, 52l. 10s. 55l.—Western Junction Subscription, 5l. Premium.—Rliesmere, 80/.—Uniou, 110/.—Grand Union, 71. Discount. — Lancaster, 26/. — Ashby-de-la-Zouch, 24/.—Worcester and Birmingham Old Shares, 40/.—Croydon, 30/. to 31/.— West India Dock Stock, 167/. ex Half Yearly Dividend of 51.—London Dock 1291. ex Half Yearly Dividend of 3l. clear.—Ditto Scrip, 26l. per Cent. Premium.—Albion Assurance, 571.—Globe, 1201. ex Half Yearly Dividend of 31.—Atlas, Par.—Rest London Water Works, 1871.—West Middlesex Ditto, 1141.—New Ditto, 201. Pres. mium.—Kent ditto, 281. Premium.—Grand Junction Ditto, 121. 12s. Premium.—' London Institution, 681. 5s.—Surrey Institution, 231. 2s.—Covent Garden New Theatre-Shares, 470% without Admission.—Strand Bridge, 12%. Discount.—Dover Street Road, 104. to 1/. Premium.—Commercial Road, 135/. per Cent. ex Half-Yearly Dividend of 31. BILL

PRICES OF FLOUR, February 25: Fine per Sack 85s, to 00s. Seconds 75s, to 80s. Bran per Q. 14s. to 16s, Pollard 26s, to 30s. RETURN of WHEAT, in Mark-Lane, including only from Feb. 11 to Feb. 16: Total 5,075 Quarters. Average 92r. 6d.—0s. 04d. higher than last Retura. OATMEAL, per Boll of 140Kos Avoirdupois, February 16, 47s. 11de AVERAGE PRICE of SUGAR, February 98, 42s. 14d. per Cut. PRICE OF HOPS, IN THE BOROUGH MARKET, February 45: AVERAGE PRICE OF HAY AND STRAW, February 25: St. James's, Hay 7l. 1"s. 6d. Straw 3l. 16s.—Whitechapel, Hay 8l On Clover 9l 9s. Straw 31, 14s. - Sm.thfield, Clover 81, 18s. 6d. Old Hay 84, 19s. 6d. Straw 31, 10s. SMITHFIELD, February 25 To sink the Offal-per Stone of 6lbs. 0d.Head of Cattle at Market this Dave ₽ď. 0d. to 6s. Beasts about 2715. Calves 90. Veal...... .. 5s. 6d. to 7s. Get. Sheep and Lambs 12,770. Pigs 240. COALS, February 25: Newcastle 48s. to 56s. 6d. Sunderland 47s. 6d. to 48s. 6d.

SOAP, Yellow 80s. Mottled 80s. Curd 94s. CANDLES, 12s. 0d. perDoz. Moulds 13s. 0d. TALLOW, per Stone, 81b. St. James's 4s. 44d. Clare Market 4s. 6d. Whitechapel 4s. 4d.

EACH DAY'S PRICE OF STOCKS IN FEBRUARY, 181

P _I	29 S	74 76 76 76 76 76 76 76 76 76 76 76 76 76	1004667		. U & _ U	Days
Printed by 1	243	$545 $45 $45 $45 $45	946 946 946 148 1646 1646	250 249 § 251 250 Simday	$414 Holiday Sunday	Bank Stock.
NICHOLS a	99 99		9 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6	0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0	4 99	SperCt B. Red.
and Sox, Red	##### 0.00	######################################	2017年2017年20日本本 60 60 57 57 57 57 60 60 60 60 60 60 60 60 60 60 60 60 60	0.00 0.00 0.00 0.00 0.00 0.00 0.00 0.0	65 1	S per Ct. Consols.
	80.77 80.77 81.78	00 00 00 00 00 00 00 00 00 00 00 00 00	ထား ထာ ထာ တာ တာ ယူ ယူ လူ ယ ယူ များ	2 2 2 2 2 2 2 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3 3	8 8 4 6 4 6	4 perC
Passag	98	4444 48 70 00 00 00 00 00 00 00 00 00 00 00 00	######################################	######################################	#86 #86	SperCi Navy.
e, Flect	101		101	101	1004	A perCt 5 perCt 5perCt Cons. Navy. 1797.
Lien Passage, Flect Street, London. J		1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1	1 1 - 1 - 1 - 1 - 1 - 1 - 1 - 1 - 1 - 1	177 177	17 4 17‡.	Long Ann.
den.]	177 176‡	1774 178 178 177	177 3 179 1 178 1	1784	177 † 178	India Stock.
•	25 a 22pr. 23 a 24pr.	26 a 27pr. 25 a 26pr. 26 pr. 25 a 26pr. 25 pr. 24 a 25pr.	26 a 27pr. 26 a 27pr. 27 a 28pr. 26 a 27pr. 24 a 25pr. 25 pr.	25 a 25pr. 24 a 25pr. 24 a 25pr. 26 a 27pr. 26 a 27 pr.	26 a 25pr. 24 a 25pr.	India Bonds.
BRAN	10a 6pr. 6a 10pr.	5a7 pr. 5a7 pr. 5a9 pr. 5a9 pr. 5a9 pr. 6a10pr.	3 a 5 pr. 4 a 5 pr. 4 a 6 pr. 5 a 4 pr. 4 a 6 pr.	3 a 6 pr. 3 a 6 pr. 3 a 6 pr. 3 a 6 pr. 1 rg	Забрг. Забрг.	Exchequ. Bills.
SCOMB a	70*	71½ 71 70¾	7714	712	715	Exchequ. South Sea Bills. Stock.
nd CO. Sta	657	657 661 661	664 65 8 65 8	66‡	66	Ann.
ck-Brok		651	66 1	66 65 3		Aug.
BRANSCOMB and CO. Stock-Brokers, 11, Hol	51 dis.	5 dis. 47 dis. 48 dis. 45 dis. 5 dis. 5 dis.	44 dis. 5 dis. 5 dis. 4 dis. 4 dis. 4 dis.	4½ dis. 4½ dis. 4½ dis. 4½ dis.	4‡ dis. 4‡ dis.	Om-lbern, 3			$77	91 96	96‡	Irish Imp. 5perCt. 3perCt.
, Comb	645	65 4 65 64	65 647 647 65	654 663 654 65	653	Imp. SperCt.
ill, and 38,			Ditto. Ditto. Ditto.	Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto.	22 15 0 Ditto.	Eng. Lott. Tickets.
born, 37, Cornhill, and 38, Haymarket.	Dirto.	Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto.	Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. 9 pr Ct. Dis.	Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto. Ditto.	FullMoney. Ditto.	English Prizes.

GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE

General Evening M. Post M. Herakl Morning Chronic, Times-M. Advert. P.Ledger@Oracle Brit. Press-Day St. James's Chron. Sun-Even. Mail Star-Traveller Pilot-Statesman Packet Lond, Chr. Albion--C. Chron. Courier-Globa Eng. Chron. -- Inq. Cour d'Angleterre Cour, de Londres 13otherWeeklyP. 17 Sunday Papers Hue & Cry Police Lit, Adv. monthly Bath 3-Redford Berwick-Boston Birmingham 3 Blackb. Brighton Bristol 5, Bury Camb.—Chath, Carli.9—Chester 9 Chelms, Cambria.

M A R C H, 1811. CONTAINING

Meteorol, Diaries for Peb. and Murch 1811 902 Montanent proposed for Mrs. Trimmer . . 903 Lord Woodhouselee's Essayon Life of Petrarch 241 Extracts from " FourCenturies of Maxims" 204 Westminster Abbey and Henry Y II 's Chapel 205 Literary Anecdotes-Lord Middleton . . . 207 Mr. Blore's Collections for Hertfordshire . ibid. Meteorological Journal kept at Clapton . . 208 Allington Castle, Kent; and its Owners. . 209 Calamy's " Ejected Ministers" corrected . 210 Hedgehogs harmless—Wasps and Micc . . 2111 Confessions of a Naval Officer, continued . 212 Errors in the RoyalKalendar -- Tetular linshops 215 Manner of passing Christmas in old Times, 216 Portland Lighthouse-Dugdale's Warwick, 217 Errors of FrenchW riters on Euglish Customs 218 Proposals for the Alfred Theatre-John Bull 219 Illustrations of Horace, Book II. Saure II . 224 Brownesof Irelandderivenotfrom Vi. Montagu 227 Iron Roofsrecommended -- Pibroch explained 229 AuOld Correspondent's Remarks on J. Carter 230 Henry VIIth's Chapel—Employ for the Blind 232 The Propriety of a Commutation for Tithes 233 The Rule for Easter-day-Watts's Poems . 23-1 Advice to Young Ladies, No. Ill.; Prule. 235 Mr. Stillingfleet—Supplements to Books . . 239 Obstuary, with Anecd. of remarkable Persons293 Writers in the "Biographia Britannica", soid. Bill of Mortality-Prices of Markets. . . . 303

Wakefi,--Warw, Wore, 2-Your 3 IRECAND 37 SCOTLAND 24 Sunday Advertiser Jersey 2. Guern. 2. REVIEW OF NEW PUBLICATIONS; viz. Memoirs of Prince Eugens of Savoy 243 Pastey on Military Policy of British Empire 234 Wilks's Sketches of the South of Ind. 1 . . . 247 Jee's Sermon on Observance of the 88b .ad. 250 Chirol's Enquiry into Female Education, it di Parkinson's Observations on Med houses ".c., 54 Britton's Architectural Anti-quities, vol. 1, 11, 253 The Old Bard's Farewell, by Mr. Jernsugham 256 Revival of the Greek and Loman Emp res &c 5. Vassar on Mil tary is tablisminents, &c . 1259 Appeal to Public, on Case of Capt. Foskett. ib Marrat's Introduction to Mechanics ib.d. SELECT POETRY for March, 1811 . . 261-64 Proceedings in present Session of Parlian ent 160 Interesting Intell, from the London Gazettes 270 Abstract of the principal ForeignOccurrences 273 Constant News-Domestic Occurrences . . . 28 3 Theatrical Register, Promotions, &c. . . . 87 Births and Marriages of emment Persons . 288 Additions and Corrections in former Optionnes 289

Cumberland 2

Doncaster -- Derb.

Dorchest. -- Essex

Exeter 2, Glouc, 2

Hahfax—Hants 2 Hereford, Hull 3 Ipswich I. Kent 4

Loncast.-Leices, 2

Leed-2, Liverp. 6

Maidst. Manch. 4

Newc.3.—Notts, 2

Norfolk, Norwich

N.WalesOxford2

Portsea—Pottery

Preston-Plym. 2

Reading —Salisb.

Salop-Sheffield2

Sherborne, Sussex

Staff,-Stamf. 2

Tannton—Type

Shrewsbury

Northampton 2

Embellished with a Perspective View of the Interior of Atlancton Castle, Kent; and with a View of Portland Lighthouse.

SYLVANUS URBAN

Printed by J. NICHOLS and SON, at Cicero's Head, Red Lion Passage, Fleet-street, Localon where all Letters to the Editor are desired to be addressed, Post-PAID. 1811,

FLE, Bridge

The average degrees of Temperature, calculated from observations mode at wint o'clock in the morning, are 38-39 100ths; those of the corresponding month in the year 1810, were 34-57 100ths; in 1809, 42-11 100ths; in 1808, 34-15 100ths; in 1807, 35-75 100ths; in 1806, 37-75 100ths; in 1805, 35-86 100ths; and in 1805, 36-33 100ths.

The quentity of Rain fallen is equal to 2 inches 37 100ths; that of the oppressioning month in the year 1810, was 2 inches 50 100ths; in 1809, 3 inches 26 100ths; in 1807, 2 inches 15 100ths; in 1806, 2 inches 14 100ths; in 1806, 2 inches 14 100ths; in 1806, 2 inches 15 100ths; and in 1804, 2 inches 48 100ths.

James's Square, Bristol, 3d. month, 17th, 1811.

30

Z)

7

METEOROLOGICAL TABLE for March, 1811. By W. CARY, Sirand, Height of Fal

00E 106

TV.

The expense of a monument will probably amount to between at and eight thousand pounds; and that sum, I am fully persuaded, would be raised almost as soon as the notice of a subscription was made public.

All that seems wanting to the accomplishing of L. S.'s wishes, is to convene a General Meeting of the friends of the late Mrs. T.; and then to adopt resolutions, and to appoint a Committee for carrying them into execution.

G. H.

Mr. URBAN, Oxford, March 8, VERY friend to Virtue and Religion must approve of the hint offered by L. S. in your last Number respecting "a tribute to the memory" of the late Mrs. Trimmer. There are very few of your Readers, I am sure, who are not well acquainted with her merits, and who will not readily Maxims, Political, Moral, and Divine; divided into Four Centuries." The book has neither preface, dedication, or advertisement, nor Author's name. There is merely prefixed to it an Index. containing, in alphabetical order, the subjects discussed in each Century, with references to the Maxims, one or more, which treat of them respective-The first Century consists chiefly of political advice or reflections; the other three are of a more mixed in sous nature. I subjoin a few specimens; and shall esteem it a particular favour, if any of your numerous Readers can inform me who was the Author or Compiler of the Work.

"It is very dangerous to try experiments in a state, unless extreme necessity be urgent, or ponous, utility he palpable, it is better for a state to connive a while at any inconveniencies, than too suddenly to rush upon reformation." Cent., Max. 25, In the Index the title is "Experiments."

, " II

204 Four Centuries of Maxims.

"It is very requisite for a Prince to have an eye, that the Clergy be elected and come in, either by collistion from him, or particular patrons, and not by the people; and that their power hold dependence upon home, and not foreign authority. It is dangerous in a kingdom, where the oversionreceive not their power from the Rhyal-Sword." Max. 33. Clergy.

Pocaive not their power from the Rhyal-Sword." Max. $3. Clergy.

" Charity is a Naked Child giving Honey to a Bee without Wings: asked, because excuseless and simple; a child, because tender and growing; giving hobey, because tender and growing; giving hobey, because honey is pleasant and comfortable; to a bee, because a bee is laborious and sloverving; without wings, because helplant and wanting. If thou deniest to such, thou killest a bee; if thou givest to-other than such, thou preservest a drone. Cent.

il. Max. 2, Charity.

"The way to subject all things to thyself, is to subject thyself to Reason; thou shalt govern many, if Bleason govern thee. Wouldst thou be growned the Monarch of a little world? Command thyself," Max, 19. Reason.

"If any hard affliction hath surprised thee, cost one eyo upon the hand that sent it, and the other upon the singther brought it. If thou thankfully receive themeseage, he that sent it will discharge the messenger." Max. S8, Affliction.

of if there take pains in what is good, the pains vanish; the good remains; if there take pleasure in what is ovil, the evil remains, and the pleasure vanisheth. What art them the worse for pains, or the better for pleasure, when both are past? Cont. in. Max. 1. Pains.

"If then desire the Eucharist should be thy supper, let thy life be thy chaplain: If thy own worthiness invites thee, presume not to come; if the serrowful sense of thy own sms torbid, presume not to forhear; if thy faith be strong, it will confirm it; if weak, it will strengthen it. He only that wants faith, is the forbidden guest," Max, 59. Eucharist.

"Let not thy table exceed the fourth part of thy revenue; let thy provision be solid, and not far fetched, fuller of substance than art. Be wisely fragal in thy preparation, and freely cheerful in thy anterta nment: if thy guest be right, it is enough, if not, it is too much; too much is a vanity; enough is a feast," Max. 66, Table.

"Whoever thou art, then hast done more evil in one day than thou caust expects in any; and caust thou think the evil of any days can require less than one? God hath made us rich in days by allowing six, and himself poor by reserving but one; and shall we spare our own flock, and shear his lamb? He that hath done nothing but what he can justify in six days, may play the accepth," May, 76, Sabbath.

the ve baller good, if the enong too in " H pare t 25 84 Death COTTRAL 44 II matte follow pleasi plansi keep honeu shame ended, Maz. . "6 STYPE e ball thee : the en * 14 is the vard mayeri ponen the gir

neper J is to git

WEITHING CHAPPE, AND HEART TO

notice - hile the late clearance was in execution, were many Houses constructed in the Tudor times, though much altered in succeeding periods; they becoming on this occasion objects of much curionty, as in them were laid open, to explorators in antient lore. rich chimney-pieces, ornamented euameled hearths, carved wainscottings, cornices, and ciclings full of rich armorial and foliaged embellishments; and in taking down an old wall at the back of the Mitre Tavers, Unionstreet, was found .mmured within the rubble a capital of a column, rich with Historie sculpture. On the first plane of the square of the capital was William Rufus seated, in order to present a Charter to Gislebertus, Abbot of Westminster. Second plane, the Abbot receiving the Charter. Third plane, a Consecration. Fourth plane, have it, restored, yet not with an eye to the masonic precision of the splays, or to a faithful imitation of the fohaged finials still existing on the apex of the other unrestored buttresses, but to the likeness of the cap of some unadorned Roman vase, which has been thus substituted. The noticing of this buttress restoration may be called a repetition, as it has been so frequently adverted to, as well as the inattention paid to the South front of the Jerusaiem Chamber by the workmen, and their very great care shewn to a neighbouring Green-houss upon the occasion : but it is necessary my survey should preserve a regular course. The Cloisters continue to suffer under the outrage of tennis and cricket ball This cruel practice can players. never be too often reprobated. The architectural memorial of Abbot Islip

[•] This ingenious Actust, previous to the general extermination of the buildings, took a series of views in all directions, that the memory of them might at some future day be thought of some interest and some price.

at the West rad of the Nave of ther Church destroyed. See a view, Vol. LXXVIII, Plate-II. May. And what, \ I pray, now occupies its site? A ponderous modern monument, set up for the second time: " Beware of a third removal!" This note on the Islip innovation is certainly a repetition on my part a but oppose such repetition to the ingratifude shewn to his memory by others. -- My Survey next points to the seats thrown across the Choir for the accommodation of the Scholars, who thereby are pecessitated to turn their backs to the Altar, when heretofore they observed a less in-decorous attitude. The grave of Thomas of Woodstock opened, the grave-stone broke in half, wood and lead colling disturbed, and the remains of the unfortunate Prince exposed. No more of this tale need now be dragged into repetition, as on that occasion the whole adventure was wit (setting gravity at odds with buffoonery) of some of the patronizers of such an useless (to say no more of it) experiment.

Attention is next directed to HERRY VIIth's CHAPEL,

Before I proceed to give my long promised Survey of the repair, or restoration, at the East end of the Chapel, I must repeat once more (repetition, when called in to aid a true confession, can surely never be an unwelcome, or a tedious auxiliary) that I have no interest to serve in the undertaking, but that of the welfare of our Antiquities — no envy to those entrusted with the work; for, believe me, not any pecuniary recompense could lure me into a combination to do away the original features, either by refacing, re-cutting, orre-constructing of the design. I might indeed wish to see the mutilated mullions repaired, where there was absolute necessity, and other the like suffering particulars; but no farther. Malice I have none; unless reprehending, and presuming to correct, the masonic errors of my good friends employed, can be twisted into such a distorted character, Falsehood! (though thrown over me by Sir Blood Red, in his usual random way, in order to run-down the force of my professional observations) I despise the despicable repource. Conscions innocence in this foul charge in the second Edition. I was equally disappointed in both. In the latter case I own I do not comprehend the " point of Honour (which sometimes supersedes both Religion and Morality) to leave that copy untouched, which his first purchasers are in possession of, and acknowledge his faults, and ask pardon of the publick, rather than make the second copy better, by the amendment of a single word, than that which they have bought at twice the price." Mere "verbal Correction" here was not the question. I like better the language of another part of the Memoirs: that "he would never knowingly permit a word to stand, inconsistent with that veracity to which he was so solemuly engaged." Neither do I understand the merit or "morality" of confessing, with an avowed determination of persevering in, a fault; whilst he expresses his "thanks to his kind Reviewer in the British Critic for giving him an opportunity (not indeed first wife was a daughter of the late Lord Pelham, by whom he had a daughter only, now the wife of largo Thomas, eq. of the County of Sussex. It was the Grandfather of the young Gentleman you mention, who was in the East Indies.

W. B.

Mr. Urban, March 27. In consequence of a letter published in your Magazine vol. LXXIX. p. 693, declaratory of the intention of Mr-Clutterbuck to publish " the History and Antiquities of the County of Hertford," and from a deference to my engagements as to the Counties of Rutland and Derby, I have been induced to surrender my Hertfordshire Collections to Mr. Clutterbuck, in whose hands I doubt not they will be so used as to render our compromize a matter of congratulation to those who feel an interest in encouraging the production of a good History of the County of Hertford. THO. BLONE.

* They were from another R. E. Entr.

A METEOROLOGICAL JOURNAL, kept at CLAPTON, in Hackney, from the 16th of February, to the 15th of March, 1811.

7	Therm	ometer.	ometer. Barometer.	. 	, 972:3 v) White the control of
Day of Month.	Max.	Min.	Max.	Miu.	Hyg.	Wind.	Weather, &c.
F. (16	41	24	29.95	29.36	1-10	N. N. W.	wind and flying clouds
17	37	34	30-20	30.18	0.21		clear—a few clouds
18	42	30	30.14	30.05	0.21	S.	clear and clouds
19	37	29	29-99	29.82	0.19	8. S. E.	clear & clouds—clear
20	40	3.5	29.74	29.70	0.17		cloudy and calm
21	44	41	29.51	29-27	1.5		overcast—showers
⊙ 2	50	33	29 18	29-99	1.21	S.	clear and clouds
@ 23	44	40	29.25	29.25	1.1	S.	clear—rain
57	45	39	29-18	56-07	1.6	s.	overcast—showers
25	47	40	29.40	29 14	1.3		foggy—fair
26	56	44	29:30	29.25	1.5	s ww.	sun and showers
27	50	47	29.65	29:50	1.		sun and showers
28	52	39	29.78	29-50	1.9		fair and showers
Mar. 1	50	58	29.78	29.58	1.10		clear—showers—clear
D 2	53	1	29.80	29 80	1.5	w. s. w.
3	53	48	30.00	30.00	0.21	The state of the s	clear and clouds
4	56	45	30.02	30.00	1-10		windy and misty-clear
5	52	41 ;	29	$4.35	1.3	s. w.	fair and showers
6	50	42	$9.6º	29.46	1.16		clearshowers & winds
7	54	46	29·3 9	29-30	1.17		windy & hard showers
8	48	34	29.78	29.33	0.17	S.—W.E.	small rain—showery
9	46	36	30.46	39-20	1.6	NW.	clear
O 10	54	42	30.52	30.47	0 15		fog-clear and clouds
11	53	45	30.48	30.46	0.17	W. S. W.	clear and clouds
12	53	38	30.46	30-42	0.16		clear and clouds
13	48	40	30.40	30.34	0.16		clear and clouds
14	47	38	30.38	30.34	0.15		cloud.—clear—clouds
15	46	35	30.39	30.35	0-6	S. E.—E.

OBSERVATIONS.

- Feb. 17. This afternoon appeared Cirro-stratus of various figures and patterns, Cirro-cumulus and fleeces of Cumulus.
 - 18. Various modifications of cloud again to day.
 - 24. Gentle showers with clear intervals.
 - 25. The moon appeared of a deep brazen colour.
 - 28. A Lunar Corona succeeded by showers.
- Mar. 1. Cirro-stratus as usual prevailed between the showers.
 - 3. Cirro-stratus and Cumulus prevail. A Lunar Corona round the moon all the evening, and sometimes a Halo.
 - 4 & 5. A few Cirri and Cirro-strati; windy.
 - 6. I observed Cirrus, approximating to Cirro-stratus, disposed in faint whitish transverse bars and forming a kind of reticular plexus, or net-work in the Zenith: a windy night.
 - 8. The wind got the N. E. and was high at night.
 - 10. Fleeces of Cumulus richly coloured by the rising sun.
 - 13. Clear morning: as the day advanced I observed Cirri of various shapes ramifying in all directions, Cirro-strati and Cirro-cumuli. In a lower region Cumuli floated along in the wind. The general appearance of the clouds to-day indicated a great disturbance of the electric state of the atmosphere revery similar kind of weather prevailed during last September, and a curious circumstance which then took place, happened again on the return to-day of the same kind of weather; namely, the irregular pulsation of the electric bells of De Luc's Column*.
 - 14. Only Cumuli passed over with the wind. The electric bells of De Inc's Column pulsate very irregularly.
 - 15. Clear night, falling Stars seen. Clapton, March 18, 1811.

THOMAS FORSTER.

^{*} For an Account of this Column I refer the Reader to Nicholson's Journal, the present Volume.

Mr. Unnex. March 4. Tisa circumstance to be regretted A that an able Genealogist and Historian- is not always an accurate Tepographen. The Castle of Allington near Maidstene in Kent is, perhaps, one of the most perfect remains of the feudal age in that county; although described by Mr. Hasted, in his very laborinus and valuable listory, as having "been long in rum, a very small part being left, now used as part of the adjoining farm-house, which seems to have been built out of the ruins of the house erected here by Sir Thomas Wyatt*."

The annexed view of the interior of the Castle from the entrance gateway will, perhaps, give you a somewhat different idea of its present estate; in fact, the site is perfect, no .part of the exterior wall having been eradicated. Many of the Towers are but little injured. The Moat has water in it half round the Castle; and the other half has been no farther filled up, than was needful to adapt it to the purposes of agriculture; and the changes which have been made, with a view to convenience, in the hiterior buildings, leave them still sufficiently intelligible to the Antiquary. (See Plute 1.)

This manor, and as some say, castle, was held in the Saxon times by Earl Godwin's 4th son Unoth, and since then, successively, by William the Conqueror's half brother Odo Bishop of Baicux, by William Earl Warren, by the Lord Fitzhugh, by Sir Giles Allington, knight (from whom, of course, the Manor and Parish must have taken their present name), and by Sir Simon de Penchester, who is the first person recorded to have built a Castle here, in the reign of Edward 1.; it was after him named Allington Penchester. His daughter carried it in marriage to Henry de Gobham, Lord of Roundle in Shorn, in whose descendants it continued till alienated to Robert Brent in the beginning of Edward IV. Brent's grandson, Wil-Jiam, alienated it to Sir Henry Wyatt, knight, in the reign of Henry VII: Wyatt's grandson Thomas, forfeited it together with his head to the Crown, by taking the lead in the insurrection raised by the Kentish gentlemen in the first year of Queen Mary, in consequence of the projected marriage of that Princess with Philip of Spain.

* Hasted's Kent, folio, vol. II. p. 185. GENT. MAG. Merch, 1811.

Spain. · It is not improbable that the te-'nantry and followers of the disaffected chief first assembled in this Castle, previous to their taking Rochester, which lies about seven miles lower down the Medway, where, according to Stow, the force sent against them under the Duke of Norfolk, joined them, leaving to the Duke nothing but a precipitate escape. Thence they ·advanced·to·Dartford, Woolwich, and Deptford, where halting in great confidence of success, the Queen and citizens prepared to meet them by breaking down the bridge. This compelied them to seek a passage over the Thames at Kingston in Surrey; and the news of the unexpected failure of the Duke of Suffolk's enterprize in the West reaching them at that time occasioned such a falling off of their partizans, as to leave the leaders, particularly Wyatt, an easy prey to their incensed adversary. · Porhaps the piety and penitence which Wyatt-is stated to have exinced on the scaffold, or perhaps (and more proba-'bly) a predilection to the cause which he espoused, has induced our English imartyrologist Fox to bestow upon him a place among his Worthies.

Queen Elizabeth gave this estate to Sir Jacob Astley, master of her jewelhouse, from whose descendants it came to the Marshams; and Lord Romney is the present owner.

The situation of the Castle is somewhat romantic, all the approaches rural; the Medway winds round its North West angle, and the gently rising hills in its vicinity are for the most part covered with wood. The entrance is under a low arch with grooves for portcullis, flanked by two circular towers. The whole scene will seldom fail to bring to the recollection of the intelligent traveller whatever tales of chivalry may have been imprinted on his mind, in the desultory readings of youth.

Yours, &c. T. Fisher.

Mr. Urban, Feb. 1911.

I AVING been long conversant with the history of the Nonconformists, my aftention was attracted to the paper in p. 21, respecting some of the Ejected Ministers, and particularly Mr. Charles Procter, vicar of Whitkirk, whom your Correspondent S. S. at first conjectured to have been one of them, but whom he afterwards supposed, from some circumstances, to have been removed to another living. I request your leave to inform him and your Readers that I have reason to apprehend that both his conjectures are right. amining the Index of the "Nonconformists' Memorial," (which is an improved edition of Dr. Calamy's "Account of the Ejected Ministers") I found the name of Mr. Procter. Upon turning to vol. iii. p. 473, 2d. Edit. I was disappointed in finding nothing more than his name, excepting the name of the place from whence he was ejected, which is WELL, a small vicarage in Yorkshire. This, however, appears sufficient to ascertain both the facts, that Mr. Procter was an Ejected Minister, and that he had been removed from Whitkirk before the Act of Uniformity took place, Aug. 24, 1662: for 1 take it for granted that this is the same person whom S. S. mentions, as both the places are in the same county.

I beg leave to refer those who are possessed of the Nonconformists' Memorial to the curious particulars which you have given the publick of this Mr. Procter, in order to supply the deficiency in Dr. Calamy's work, and in my edition of it; recommending it to them to make a reference under the name Procter to the above page in your Magazine.

Yours, &c.

The Articles which S. S. has teanscribed from the Churchwarden's account of Mr. Procter's going to York "to answer the warrant from the Sheriff, about the Ejected Ministers, in 1659, I do not understand; as this was three years before "the ejectment," as it is commonly termed, though I think not with strict propriety, since those clergymen were valuntary in resigning their livings, in which they might have continued if they had complied with the new terms of conformity. The following articles relating to the distress which many of them suffered, do credit to the humanity and candour of your Correspondent.

Mr. Urban, March 1.

A NDREW Knox, Parson of Paisloy, (vol. LXXX. ii. 433) was consecrated Bishop of the Isles in 1605, and translated to the see of Raphoe in Ireland, by privy scal, 12th August, 1610; he was called into the privy council; and 22d June, 1619, made a free depizen of that kingdom. died March 7, 1632, leaving an only son, Thomas Knox, Bishop of the Isles in 1622, who died issueless before Andrew Knox was not, theretore, as your Correspondent, strangely asserts, ancestor of the ennobled family of Knox scated in I reland, though he certainly derived from the same common ancestor, Knox of Ranfurly, and that lik; of which antient house Lord Northland is now the chief representative in the male line. This Andrew Knox Bishop of Raphoe was the secoud son of Uchter Knox of Ranfurly (by Isabel Conyngham, grand-daugh- 🕟 ter of Alexander Earl of Glencairn), and brother of Uchter Knox, of Ranfurly, whose grandson, Uchter Knox, of Ranfurly (the seventh of that Christian name), married Elizabeth, daughter of William Muir, of Rowallan, by whom having no male issue, he sold his antient estate, in 1665, and with him terminated the male line of the cider branch of the family. The family of Silvyland became then the representatives of this house; their descent was from William Knox, second son of Uchter Knox, of Ranfurly, by Janet, daughter of William, Lord Semple, who married the heiress of the actient family of Silvyland, in the Shire of Renfrew. His grandson William built the house of Silvyland in 1601, as appears by his name and arms thereon engraven : he was grandfather of Thomas Knox, esq. who left issue 3 sons, viz. 1. Thomas, who purchased large estates in Ircland, and resided at Dunganuon, co. Tyrone, and deceasing without issue male, bequeathed his estates to his daughters, Mrs. St. George and Mrs. Echlin, with remainder to his brothers. 3. William, who resided at Glasgow, John, the second and died issueless. son, also settled in Ireland; he married Elizabeth, daughter and heiress of Hugh Keith, esq., and had an only son, Thomas Knox esq., who succeeded to the estate of his uncle William of Glasgow, and also to the Dungannon estate, on the decease, without issue, of his first cousins Mrs. St. George and Mrs. Echlin, pursuant to the will of Thomas Knoz, of Dun gannon,

& PALMER.

depressed with sorrow to allow of my sesuring that Gentleman, that neither the remarks of the little Naturalist, nor my own, concerning Hedgehogs, were meant to have any particular application to him. And even if they had been so meant (to use the words of your intelligent Correspondent Dr. Sherwen), "I can see no reason why two persons of different opinions may not convess a question thoroughly, and at the same time steer clear of wrath and hostility. Truth being the object of their inquiry, they ought to be a mutual aid to each other." (Gent. Mag. for Jan. 1810, p. 9.)

If Hedgehogs be the injurious animals which Mr. H. affirms them to be, instead of pleading their cause, I would say, Perish the whole race! But be must pardon me if I still retain my former opinion, not only respecting their innocence, but their metuhens: and that opinion is conveniented by the coincident one of many farmers, of long experience and acque coherenties, to whom I have know me if he thinks I would suppress any one important fact, from a feat of giving offence, or of theoreting consure: according to the haw making. Veritae nikil veretur tool absorati.

There are depredators, however, which we unanimously admit to be such; and, from whose pilferings, every one who is liable to be injured by them must wish to be scence. I shall therefore trespass a little longer upon yourpage (as the matter is not foreign to the preceding subject), to say something concerning Wasps and Mice. Last autumn, my Wall-fruits were so assailed by the former winged plunderers, that I almost despaired of preserving even a single dessert for some highly valued friends, whom I shortly expected to favour me with a visit: and to solitary gratifications I am a stranger; for

"In vana does Heaven its choicest giftà prepare,

If no kind Friend the generous bounty

Ket I began to think I must either cat, my Nectarmes, &c., myself, or consent to see them eaten by insects, which neither "toil nor spin" for the benefit of man: when, one day, after looking at themsome time with no very friendly eye, a saving idea occurred to me, which was instantly and successfully adopted. I fetched my box of waters, and a wine-glassiof water, and wetting, separately, a few waters, I placed them upon the holes which the wasps had made in the fruit, softly pressing each wafer close round the edge, both to exclude air, and to preyout the little iclons from getting at the juice. I first tried the experiment upon a Nectarine tree, which had a fine sprinkling of fruit; and the next day, was glad to see the experiment answered; for the waxps forsook their favourite repast, and resorted to some Peaches; which (wherever they had made punctures) I also watered, in a similar manner; and thus preserved my fruit from their gepredations, in a state of ripeness, for a considerable time. As. several of the waters were red, quære, Whether Red, Lead (which I believe is a component part that gives the colour), was what the freebooters took disgust at? Perhaps, Sir, others of your Readers will be induced to try my experiment upon a larger scale, and to favour the publick with the resuit.

Now, concerning the other voracious plunderers, Mice. On observing my cheese day after day, as it was brought to table, much purloined by them, I: made some inquiries relative to my cheese-room; and was told that neither hanging-shelves, nor any other means which the dairy-maid could devise, were of the least avail against them. Necessity, bere, became the parent of invention. I ordered three or four dozen of empty green glass quart bottles to be carried into the cheese-chamber, and immediately followed to give directions about their use; which was thus. All over the Hoor, I placed bottles in triangular forms, and upon the tops of every three buttles put a cheese or cheeses, according as they were dry, the new ones singly, and the others four or five together, taking care that one triangle should not be too near another, and placing the bottles of each about six or eight inches munder, naturaling to like oir-camference of the offectes which they were to stistain. The consequence has been the perfect watery of my dairystore: for the mice cannot climb the perpendicular shippery surface of glass, which protects it. They may look at it, and long for it, as a vertain great Plunderer may, from his vassal shores, look at and long for Britain: but both they and he may look and long in vain. To compare this modern Senzacherib to a Mouse, may be offensive to his pride. the vulgar translation of the motio upon which he has acted, aut Caser, aut nullus, "I will be cither a Man or a Mouse," must furnish an excuso for associating him with so despicable a reptile; and the similarity of their habits must authorize its propriety.

Mice naturally make us think of Cuts. By desire, therefore, of a worthy old bachelor neighbour, who is fond of his Cat, for want of something better to share his affections, I solieit an answer to the following question: Why are tortoise-shell-coloured Cats always Females :-- He tells me a Male of the colour was never known: and certain it is, I never saw one. A friend of mine, some years ago, had a young one of that colour, which was declared to be of the masculine gender, and accordingly was called Dick: but, after a while, Dick produced a very line litter of kittens.

In a future number, I shall solicit the favour of half a page for a pleasing anecdote of your late Friend and mine, Mr. Urban, the truly-worthy Mr. Ayscough, of the British Museum.

L. Booker.

CONFESSIONS OF A NAVAL OFFICER. (Continued from Vol. LXXX. Partil. p. 528.) CEA-story books make buys in ge-) neral hanker after similar acreetures: owing very much to this kind of authorship, all my years of vigour and spirit were spent afloat. That we have some comforties hours cannot be denied, with sudden changes, however, to the sunshine of deliverance. The moments of grandeur are not few .--- ideal, I mean, and in what else does it stand? A gentleman of a liberal education may conceive such an officer's mental enjoyment, who, pacing the quarter-deck, in a midnight watch, looks back toproud Rome, to ter intendid processional triumphs, and each monthly portion must not only be presently perused, but I am sent-back with a renewed wish to read all the foregone numbers.

It is a common saying in a Black Nation of Africa, "you dashee me, master, I dashee you:" so possibly, my free opinion may be considered one scribbler's lure enticing a superior grey-goose quill down towards his own shabby pinion pen-worn stump. To such I say, Sailors flatter but little. Besides we are, most likely, both of us advanced on a pilgrimage beyond any guide-posts to a new acquaintance.

This country seems now fixed to fight for its continued existence as an independent people upon that element, where accidents, irresistible at the moment, may cause heavy reverses; and against those we should provide. In this rising generation the provision must be made. If a little boy in Spain statches up his water's broken fan-stick, and shouldering it, seldier-like, gains out Make a new vessel to proceed on their wicked design. Captain Kirby and I, concluding it might be of great service to the East India Company to destroy such a nest of rogues, were ready to sail for that purpose the 17th of August, about eight o'clock in the morning, when we discovered two pyrate ships standing into the bay of Juanna, one of thirty-four, and the other of thirty guns. I immediately went on board the Greenwich, where they seemed very deligent in preparations for an engagement, and I left Captain Kirby with mutual promises of standing by each other. I then unmoored, got under sail, and brought two boats a-head to row me close to the Greenwich; but he, being open to m valley and a breeze, made the best of his way from me; which an Ostender in our company, of 22 guns, seeing, did the same, though the Captain had promised heartily to engage with us, and I believe would have been as good as his word if Captain Kirby had kept his. About half an hour after twelve, I called several times to the Greenwich to hear down to our assistance, and fired shot at him, but to no purpose. For though we did not doubt but he would join us, because when he got about a league from us, he brought his ship to, and looked on, yet both he and the Ostender basely deserted us, and left us engaged with barbarous and inhuman enemies, with their black and bloody flags hanging over us, without the least appearance of escaping being cut to pieces. But God, in his good Providence, determined otherwise; for, notwithstanding their superiority, we engaged them both about three hours, during which the biggest received some shot betwixt wind and water, which made her keep off a little to stop her leaks. The other endeavoured all she could to board us, by rowing with her oars, being within half a ship's length of us above an hour; but by good fortune we shot all her oars to pieces, which prevented them, and by consequence saved our lives. "About four o'clock, most of the officers and men posted on the Quarter-deck being killed and wounded, the largest ship making up to us with all diligence, being still within a cable's length of us, often giving us a broadside, and no hopes of Captain Kirby's coming to our assistance, weendeavoured to run ashoar; and though we drew four foot water more than the pyrate, it pleased God that he stuck fast on a higher ground than we happily fell in with; so was disappointed a second time from boarding us. Here we had a more violent engagement than before. All my officers and most of my men behaved with unexpected courage; and as we had a considerable advantage by having a broadside to his bow, we did him great damage, so that had Captain Kirby come in then, I believe we should have taken both, for we had one of them sure; but the other pyrate (who was still firing at us) seeing the Greenwich did not offer to assist, he supplied his consort with three boats full of fresh men. About five in the evening, the Greenwich stood clear away to sea, seaving us struggling hard for life in the very jaws of death; which the other pyrate that was affoat seeing, got a warp out, and was hauling under our stern; by which time many of my men being killed and wounded, and no hopes left us from being all murdered by enraged barbarous conquerors, I ordered all that could, to get into the long-boat under the cover of the smoak of our guns; so that with what some did in boats, and others by swimming, most of us, that were able, got ashoar by seven o'clock. When the pyrates came aboard, they cut three of our wounded men to pieces; I, with a few of my people, made what haste I could to the King's Town, twenty-five miles from us, where I arrived next day, almost dead with fatigue and loss of blood, having been sorely wounded in the head by a musket ball.

"At this town I heard that the Pyrates had offered ten thousand Dollars to the Country people to bring me in; which many of them would have accepted, only they knew the King and all his chief people were in my interest. Mean time. I caused a report to be spread, that I was dead of my wounds, which much abated their fury. About ten days after, being pretty well recovered, and hoping the malice of our enemies was nigh over, I began to consider the dismal condition we were reduced to, being in a place where we had no hopes of getting a passage home, all of us in a manner naked, not having had time to get another shirt, or a pair of shoes.

"Having obtained leave to go on board the pyrates, and a promise of safety, several of the chief of them knew me, and some of them had sailed with me, which I found of great advantage; because, notwithstanding their promise, some of them would have cut me, and all that would not enter with them, to pieces, had it not been for the chief Captain, Edward England, and some others I knew. They talked of burning one of their ships, which we had so entirely disabled, as to be no faither useful to them, and to fit the Cassandra in her room; but in the end I managed my tack so well, that they made me a present of the said shattered ship, which was Dutchbuilt, called the Fancy, about three hundred tops, and also a hundred and twentynine bales of the Company's cloth. They would not give me a rag of my cloaths.

They sailed the third of September; and with jury-masts, and such old sails as they left me, I made shift to do the like on the 8th, together with forty-three of my ship's crew, including two passengers and twelve soldiers, having but five tons of Water aboard; and after a passage of forty-eight days, I arrived here October 26, almost naked and starved, having been reduced to a pint of water a day, and almost in despair of ever seeing land, by reason of the calms we met with between the coasts of Arabia and Malabar. had in all thirteen men killed, and twentyfour wounded; and we were told, that we had destroyed about ninety or a hundred of the pyrates. When they left us, they were about three hundred whites and eighty blacks in both ships. I am persuaded, had our consort the Greenwich done his duty, we had destroyed both of them, and got two hundred thousand pounds for our owners and selves; whereas to his deserting us, the loss of the Cassandra may justly be imputed. I have delivered all the bales that were given me into the Company's Warehouse, for which the Governor and Council have ordered me a reward. Our Governor, Mr. Boog, who is extreme kind and civil to me, has ordered me home with this Pacquet; but Capt. Harvey, who not occur to me that "some men have greatness thrust upon them," possibly to please the congregations at their Meeting-houses, as was the case with Malvolio in the comedy of Twelfth Night, when he was about aspiring to the hand of his lady Olivia.

In the mean time, the real supporters of the venerable Church in that nation by law established, the Ministers of the Chapel Royal, come four pages after, following the Botanist and the Limner.

As the Compiler seems so peculiarly fond of those who are decorated with the title of Right Reverend, no matter by what means, why does he leave out Moravian Bishops, whose claims to Diocesan authority, provided they take out Licences at our Quarter Sessions, are as well founded as those of any nominal Caledonian Prelate? The utmost ingenuity of the latter cannot trace their tolerated existence quite they have heretotore touchy deprecated. Like the gigantic calf which sucked the milk of two cows, the Ministers above alluded to may perhaps fancy themselves sprinkled with a double portion of Aaron's consecrated oil: but I must take the liberty of reminding them, that the inferiority of a wandering Methodist, to the Dean and Chapter of an English Cathedral, is not more evident than their inferiority to every Pastor of an Orthodox Scottish Kirk, however smallhis emoluments.

Yours, &c.

L. L.

Mr. Unban, Feb. 14.

I OOKING over your Magaziner have inserted "a newly invented Game of Cards for a Winter's Amusement." The Christmas entertainments of the present day differ widely from those of old. Chatterton has given "the Antiquity of Christmas Games,"

Games," which may amore those of your Readers who are unacquainted with the Manners of our Ancestors, and with the writings of Chatterton.

Yours, &c. R. S.

" In the days of our Anosstors, Christmas was a period sacred to mirth and hospitality. Though not wholly acglected now, it cannot boast of the bosours it once had; the veneration for religious seasons is fled, and old English hospitality is long since deseased. The antient Christians gambols were, in my opiniou, imperior to our modera spectacles and amusements; wrestling, burling the ball, and denoing in the woodlands, were pleasures for men; it is true, the conversation of the hearth-aide was the tales of superstition: the Fairies, Robin Goodfellow, and Hobgoblins, never failed to make the trembling audience mutter an Ave Maria, and cross their chins; but the laughable exercises of blundman's buff, ridding, and question and command, sufficiently compensated for the few audden starts of terror. Add to these amusements, the wretched roices of the chauters and sub-chanters; howling carols in Latin; the chiming of consecrated bells; the burning consecrated wax-candles - curiously representing the Virgin , Mary ; praying the Saint whose monastery stood nearest; the muoching consecrated crossleaves, sold by the monks; all which effectually erailicated the spectres of their terrific stories. Nor were these the only charms against the foul fiends and nightmare; slorping cross-legged, like the effigies of Kuights Templars and Warners, and the holy bush and Church-yard yew, were certain antidotes against those invisible beings. After this representation, I may he thought partial to my own hobby-horse, as an Antiquary, in giving the preference to the amusements of the days of old; but let the rentimental reader consider that the tales of superstition, when believed, affect the soul with a secsation pleaaurably horrid; we may paint in more lively colours to the eye, they spoke to the heart .- The great Barons and Knights usually kept open houses during this neason, when their village or vassels were ontertained with bread, beef, and beer, and a pudding, wastol cake, or Christmas hitchel, and a groat in silver at parting; being obliged, in return, to wave the full flaggon round their heads, in honour of the master of the house. Sometimes the festival continued till Twelfth day, when the baron, or his steward, took the dels, or upper seat of the table, and after dianer gave every man a new goen of his livery, and two Christmas ketchels. —This hind of liberality endeared the bareau to the common people, and made them one boody to take up arms under their beaming

A register of the numery of Reynshota relates, that William Barl of Gioncest entertained two hundred Enights with tilts and forthnys at his great menor of Keynshem, provided thirty pies of the Eals of Avon, as a curious dainty; and on the Twelfth-day began the Plays for the knights by the monks; with mirecles and maumerics for the henchmen and servents. by manstrels.—Here is plainly a distinction made between manmeries and miracies, and the more poble representating comprehended under the name Plays. The first were the holiday entertalnmen of the vulgar; and the other of the Barons and nobility. The private exhibitions at the manors of the Barona were usually family histories; the monk, who represented the master of the family, being arrayed in a tabard (or herald's post without sloeves) painted with all the hatchments of the names. In these domestic performances, absurdities were mayoidable; and in a play wrote by Sir Tibbet Gouges, Constance Counters of Bretagne and Richmond marries and buries her three husbands in the compass of an bour. Sometimes these pieces were merely relations, and had only two characters of this kind; so that in Weaver's Paperal Manusconta. None but the patrons of Monostgries had the service of manks in performing plays on holidays; pravided the strang contained nothing against God or the Church. The public exhibitions were su perior to the private; the plot, generally, the life of some Pupe, or the Brand of the Abbey the Monks belonged to I have been several of these pieces, wallstly Lette, and cannot think our electeturs so ignorant of dramatic excellence as the generality of modern writers would represent: they had a good moral in wha and some of the manuscrips abound with it, which though low now, was not so there. Minutre next cl had tw who we tertain pation; followin

> * Doc And

K 10

218

by such other circumstances as may be more convenient to themselves. "The superintendence and correction of some one gentleman" would indeed be desirable; but little less than the ability and perseverance of a NIchols, a Whitaker, or a Lysons, is sufficient to qualify the proposed Director for the weighty duties and responsibility of his Office.

M. R. Yours, &c.

Mistakes of French Writers upon English Customs and Manners.

March 4. Mr. URBAN, IN a French edition of a work inti-💄 tuled, Le Voyageur François, du la Connoissance de l'Ancien et du Nouveau Monde, printed at Paris in 1774, there appear to be several statements which some of your Correspondents better acquainted with History than I am, may probably confirm or correct .- Speaking of Christmas, the writer, the Abbé Delaporte, says, "The English keep Christmas in the same manner as we distinguish the first day of the new year, by mutual presents.or gifts. On Christmas day the publicans afford bread and cheese gratis to their customers, which, being toasted, and highly seasoned to increase their thirst, makes them pay well for this generosity." The Author alludes to a very early part of the reign of George II; and it is certain that if ever there was any such custom among the London publicans, it has quite declined.—He next describes the making of mineed pies in terms correspondent with the following:

"In private families, the English make large pies of heeves' tongues, cut very small, and mixed with eggs, sugar, currants, lemon-peel, &c., seasoned with all kinds of spices. also serve up on the same day a mixture of dried raisins and boiled prunes. of which they make a detestable pottage."—Is not this what used to be called plumb pottage?

"The English have several festivals, but which are only observed at Church, for the shops remain open.— Those who are esteemed good-livers among them, in order to prepare for Raster, fast during Lent: I speak of Church-people only; and, as we do, keep abstinence on a Friday. There are other Fast days appointed by the Parliament, such as the Thirtieth of January, &c."

" On the eve of Twelfth-day, games of chance are played at St. James's, when all his Majesty's winnings are divided among his chamberlains: On the morrow, the King offers the gold in one purse, the silver in another, and incense in a third. Before the Reformation, he washed the feet of twelve poor persons on the day he received the Sacrament; and this ceremony was performed much the same as in France. It is now no longer practised in England; but on Eddy Thursday, in one of the apartments of Whitehall, as many poor persons are assembled as the King is years of age, each of whom receive a plate of hsh, six small loaves, a bettle of wine, and another of beer. They may either eat this dinner, or carry it away; with the cloth which is given them to make a garment, with linen for two shirts, a pair of shoes and stockings, and two purses of red leather, in one of which there are as many small pieces of silver as the King is years of age, and in the other as many shillings as will answer to the years of the Prince of Wales."

" Of all the Saints' days in the English Calendar, St. Valenting's, which happens in the month of February, is that which is kept with the greatest gaicty by the young people. On Valentine's eve, a number of young men and women assemble in a convenient place, and write their names uponseparate slips of paper, which they very carefully roll up, and afterwards draw them by lot. The young men draw the slips containing the names of the young women, and the young women draw those of the young menso that each name thus drawn is considered as the Valentine of the person drawing it. These Valentines give balls, and make feasts, to which those are invited whom chance has thus thrown in their way; they likewise wear each other's names, the women on their bosom, and the men upon the coat-sleeve."

But I fear I shall fatigue you with these details; you will, however, admire the general traits of the English character. "In the eyes of the politician and the philosopher, there cannot be a spectacle more interesting. than England. The spirit of equipmee and grandeur, which is become the predominant spirit of the inhabitants,. with their morals, from which much riches, proceeding in one form, re-enter in another, thus laying the whole globe under tribute, and bringing into one country the riches of many.

Yours, &c. SCRUTATOR.

Mr. URBAR, March 5. N the improved state of information in this country, it is I own matter of surprize to me, that your Correspondent James Hall should have to enquire the origin of the ap-pellative John Bull, and how it came to be affixed to the English character. That the ingenious Author of the Tale of a Tub' was led to use it from some appropriate quality I cannot doubt, but I do not believe it was ever in common use till that time.-Nic Frog too is sufficiently characteristic of the canals and low situation of Holland. But whether any thing more was meant than a mere play on the name of the Bourbon family, or whether with Voltaire he considered the designation of Louis Baboon so generically applicable to the Preach, it is not now easy to determine. At all events, I should recom

200 Life Subscribers at 50 Guineas each10,500

Capital £52,500

Annual Payment of 400 Proprietors 10 Guineas each4	,200
Ditto of 200 Life Subscribers
at 20 Guineas each	,200
Annual Subscribers, say5
Transferable Tickets, say2
Monthly Tickets, say5
	-

Annual Income £21,000

 Local Situation.—In Marybone or St. George's Parish.

III. PLAYS, &c. -- To be on three Evenings m the week, from the first of November to the first of July : consisting of two of the best and most unexceptionable English Comedies or Tragedies, and of one Musical Entertainment.

IV. Hours.—The Performance to begin precisely at Eight in the Evening, and to end about Mevey. The Rehearsals to be at Noon, and open to the Proprietors and Subscribers.

V. Proprietors and Life Subscripers.--Members of the Alfred subscribing on or before the first of March 1811, to have a preference, and to be admitted without Ballot. Other Persons to be eligible by Ballot. The Annual Payment on the Proprietors' and Life Subscribers' Tickets, to be annually fixed by the Directors in July; but never to be more than the Sums stated in the first Article.

VI. Deposit.—A Deposit of 10 per cent. on the Subscriptions of Proprietors and Life Subscribers to be paid on subscribing; and the rest by Instalments, to be fixed by the Directors. In case any Instalment be not paid within two months, notice being sent to the Subscriber, the name of such Subscriber making default to be struck out of the List, and the Payments aiready made by him or her to be forfeited.

VII. Annual Subscribers.—To be admitted by the Directors as far as convenient. The Subscription not to imply a continuance of the Subscription, or Admission, another year. The amount of the Annual Subscription to be annually fixed for the ensuing Season, by the Directors, in the month of July.

VIII. MONTHLY SUBSCRIPTIONS.—On the 15th of each month, from October to May inclusive, the Directors, in case they shall think there is sufficient Accommodation, may issue Monthly Tickets to Persons of respectable Characters, at prices varying according to the Season; fixing the Price of Subscription, and the Number of Subscribers to be admitted, for the ensuing month, or for more months than one.

IX. Ladies Subscribers.—No Lady to be admitted as an Annual or Monthly Subscriber (the Wives, Sisters, and Daughters of Proprietors being excepted and having a preference) without the Recommendation of three Ladies who are Proprietors, or Subscribers.

X. PRIVILEGES.—Every Proprietor, Life Subscriber, and Annual Subscriber, taking out their Annual Tickets, and every Mont'ly Subscriber taking out the Monthly Ticket, to have Admission to the Pit and Boxes, on the days of Performance. The like admission to the Upper Boxes, for the transferable Tickets.

XI. Admission.—No Money to be taken at the doors for Admission, or on any pretence whatever.

XII. THEATRE.—The Pit and Boxes to be calculated to hold 800 Persons, the Upper Boxes 200. The Committee may permit the Theatre to be made use of on the days when there is no Performance, upon such Terms as they shall think fit.

XIII. GOVERNMENT.—To be under a Committee of Directors; who in their turn are to have the direction of the Performances, each attending on his night, and having power to give two I ckets of Admission into the Upper Boxes, when he personally attends. The Directors to be elected by the Proprietors out of their own Members: but no Director or other Proprietor to be capable of any Salary, Emolument, or other Advantage from the Funds.

XIV. Directors.—The number of Directors to be 13. The three first in the list to go out annually, but to be capable of re-election. Such of the Directors also, who have not been able in the preceding year personally to attend more than bulf the Meetings of the Committee, are also to go out at the time of the Annual Election; but to be capable of re-election.

XV. DIRECTION.—In case the Person who has the Direction of any Performance, cannot personally attend, he shall give notice to the Committee (or Sub-Committee), which shall provide a Director to attend, who shall have the same Privileges as if he had attended in Rotation.

XVI. MANAGEMENT.—The Committee to appoint a Conductor of the Performances, and such other Persons as shall be requisite.

XVII. Pran.—A Premium of 100 Guineas shall be advertised for the Architect, whose Plan (with an Estimate annexed) shall be approved by the Directors, as most proper for the intended Theatre.

XVIII. EXPENDITURE.—The Committee shall arrange the scale of Expence of the Performances, so as to keep the Annual Expenditure within the Income.

XIX. CHARITABLE FUND.—The Sum of 1000l. to be applied annually, to form a Fund for the relief of such Actors and Actresses as may, in the opinion of the Directors, have Claims, either from length of Service, Merit, or Misfortune.

XX. VACANCIES.—On the death of a Proprietor, the other Proprietors shall elect a Successor; he paying to the general Fund the Sum fixed for the qualification of a Proprietor.

XXI. VARIATION.—If any material Variation be made in the Plan, any Subscriber not approving thereof, may withdraw his Name, and immediately receive back any money he may have paid in respect of his Subscription.

18th January, 1811.

Explicit as these proposals appear, Mr. Urban, many things are wanting to render the whole intelligible to your distant readers. This defect I shall endeavour to supply, having regularly attended the meetings for the purpose of carrying the plan into execution, and being likewise a member of the Alfred.

The first explanation necessary, respects the name of this new Theatre. As our great and illustrious King Alfred, the restorer of learning, and the founder.

In this society, then, the plan of the New Theatre originated; and the projector, conceiving that the name of the Club might serve just as well for the Theatre, thought that, in pursuit of another, he might go farther and fare worse. This emanation, therefore, from the Alfred Club, became the Alised Theatre.

But-a more important matter to be explained, is the real purpose to be effected by this new Theatre; and this, owing to the peculiar modesty of the projectors, is but imperfectly hinted at in the above proposals. Be it my grateful task to set the matters in a more clear light.

Although the King of the West-Saxons is the nominal Founder both of the Club and the Theatre, I have reason to think that the Right Hon. Joseph Addison is the real suggester of the plan; and although what he proposed has lien dormant (like another theatrical patent) for above a century, let us rejoice that the glorious period is come when it will be carried into effect. The words of that celebrated of the Theatre, and make it contribute its assistance to the advancement of morality and to the reformation of the stage. As matters stand at present, multitudes are shut out from this noble diversion, by reason of those abuses and corruptions that accompany it. A father is often afraid that his daughter should be ruined by those entertainments, which were invented for the accomplishing and refining of human nature. The Athenian and Roman plays were written with such a regard to Morality, that Socrates used to frequent the one, and Cicero the other."

These remarks, Mr. Urban, form the basis of the new Theatre; but, as it is much easier to display a fine plan upon paper, than to realize it by practice, the contrivers of the Alfred Theatre have entered into many deep and solemn discussions on the proper method of establishing a play-house that shall be a Chapel of Ease to the Church. For this purpose, at one of the early meetings, the following question was debated, "In what does the immorality of the Stage consist?" Without taking up too much of your room, I shall briefly state, that it was unanimously resolved, that the immorality of the Stage resulted, 1. From the Play; 2. From the Players; and 3. From the Audience; or, as a very learned Dignitary, a member of the University of Cambridge, remarked, it was in a ratio compounded of all three. As soon as this mathematical solution was given and agreed to, the Committee proceeded to pluck up by the roots all possible immorality in the Alfred Theatre. And this you may perceive, Mr. Urban, is done by Law III. which enacts, that the Plays on three evenings in the week, from Nov. 1, to July 1, being exactly eight months, shall consist of two of the best and most unexceptionable English Comedies and Tragedies, and of one This, you Musical entertainment. may perceive clearly, does away all immorality in the Plays. Secondly, as to the Pluyers, the question being as yet sub judice, I shall for the present say nothing of the matter. But as to the Audience, the third repository of immorality, you see an ample provision made in Law IX. which respects the Ladies, who are the grand templations and incitements, &c. It is there enacted, that " no Lady is to be admitted as an Annual or Monthly Subscriber without the recommendation of three Ludies who are Proprietors or Subscribers;" who, after due and careful examination into such applicant's moral conduct, &c. are to return her admissible or rejected, according to the proofs she shall exhibit before this jury of Matrons. There is an exception, you may perceive, in favour of the wives, sisters, and daughters, of Proprictors; because these Proprietors, according to Law V. being nicinbers of the Alfred, that is a sufficient security, not only for their own morality, but also that of their wives, sisters, and daughters (cousins, especially from the country, are virtually included), unless they should neglect to subscribe before the first of March 1811, after which they forfeit all those privileges of unsuspected virtue which are inherent in the members of the Alfred. With respect to the examination of the applicants above-mentioned by three Ladies Proprietors, as for obvious reasons it will be private, it would be impertinent to disclose its nature; let it suffice that, as it will be strict, the decision, when favourable, will be honourable, and a satisfactory security, in all time coming, for the character of the party, whatever station of life she may be called upon to fill. Whoever wishes for domestic happiness, and the genuine comforts of the married state, must feel a peculiar pleasure and safety in paying his addresses to a lady who can prove that she was once admitted to the Alfred Theatre.

But I must now revert to the Plage to be performed on this Theatre. has already been stated that, as one grand source of immorality is in the Plays, the Projectors have bent the whole force of their ingenuity to eradicate that evil. The Law III. already quoted, is very wise and proper, as far as it goes; but it is rather the outline of a plan for luture legislators, than a specific remedy for the This was, however, foreseen in the first concoction of the scheme; and a Committee, open to all the Subscribers, is to be appointed, who are to sit de die in diem, upon the whole body of English Concdies and Tragedies, until they find out two of the best and most unexceptionable English Comedies and Tragedies (besides a musical entertainment) for each week irom Nov. 1. to July 1.

This Committee have had various sittings, and long and scrious consultations, all which have as yet only ended in a complete conviction of the vast difficulties they have to encount Not disheartened, however, by embarrassments, they have obeyed the instructions of their constituents, by ordering the booksellers to lay before them a complete collection of English Comedies and Tragedies, from the earliest times to the reign of John Kemble; including Beil's Theatre and Mrs. Inchbald's late copious collection, the Rev. Jeremy Collier's Correspondence with Congreye, Vanburgh, and others on the immorality of the Stage, and the Row. Rowland Hill's letter to Mr. Tattersall on the beauties of some of Mrs. inchbald's pieces, together with the lives of dramatic writers and performers, from the time of Shakspeare to that of the horses in Covent-garden Theatre inclusive.

These have, in a great measure, heen

as to things in general : as to things in the abstract; if a dinner for example (such as was then providing for the Committee) was the best dinner, it would be also the most unexceptionable; but on the stage, we must take things relatively, with a queed: and in point of fact, said this speaker, many of the best plays in the collection are the most exceptionable, and vice versa. An appeal was then made to the works of Congreve and Vanburgh, and the argument allowed. It was, therefore, agreed, that the general Committee should sit for the purposes of expurgation; and it was remarked that, as, according to Law IV, the rehearsals were to be open to the Proprictors and Subscribers, all would have an admirable opportunity of Fearing what they were to hear again in the evening; and among such a number of persons, watchful of the interests of Morality, it would be utterly imposmble that any thing naughty could escape unnoticed, whether it were to be attempted totidem verbis, totidem syllabis, or tolidem literis. Another duct the affairs of this Theatre are. you perceive, to be called Directors, an office still honourable and dignified; and as they give attendance in person, what can be more edifying? The whole of the scheme, indeed, appears to be digested with such accuracy and deliberation, that it must be the fault of the audience themselves if it That it should fail, however, fail. will appear highly improbable, when we consider, that (money excepted, a trifle in these times) nothing more is wanting than a series of the best and most unexceptionable Comedies and Tragedies (to say nothing of the Musucal Entertainment), such as shall last for eight months; and a set of Performers, who, by the purity of their morals, shall be able to give effect to the reformation expected from the Alfred Theatre.

Yours, &c. A Subscriber. Pall Mall, March S, 1811.

P. S. I had almost forgotten to mention, that as jumping, kicking, and plunging, are the inlets to all evil, neither dancers nor horses will be permitted on this stage.

LLLUSTRATIONS

ILLUSTRATIONS OF HORACE. Book II. Sat. II.

Toduces to our acquaintance, in the person of his Ofellus, a true Socratic peasant, a sort of old-romish Poor-Robin, if I may give him that name, since he causes him to deliver the little moral lessons which he wished to communicate to his countrymen on the subject of that prodigality, luxury, and intemperance which was becoming more general from day to day. This happy conceit gives to the whole piece a truth, a fitness, and an interest, which it could scarcely have acquired by any other contrivance. What in Horace's own person would have had the air of a trite and vapid declamation, is by the artless style of the honest countryman Ofelius, lively, impressive truth. Horace (how much soever he had been in earnest), would have looked as if he were dogmatizing in a lecture, which he had learnt ten years ago in the school of some Stoic, or Peripatetic at Athens: whereas Ofellus delivers no maxims but such as those he had been practising all his life long. From him, a satire on the luxurious tables of the Romans, and a warm recommendation of the old Roman frugality and simplicity, come with strict propriety; and both proceed from his mouth with a much better grace, than from that of a poet, who himself was almost every day carousing with Mæcenas, or other grandees of Rome. By means of this fine turn, on the contrary, Horace

(to whom that good cheer which drew upon him the envy of many a hungry poetaster, was perhaps often burdensome enough) might commodiously tell his great friends some wholesome truths, without offence, and thus take as it were a sort of jocular revenge, which they might handsomely let pass, for many an indigestion and many a morning headache, which their sumptuous boards had cost him. For no doubt, to them, this Ofellus, with his rustic simplicity, frankness, and honesty, and with his patriarchal manner of life*, presented as diverting a picture as the shepherds in Gessner's Pastorals do to a class of people, atleast as luxurious and as far removed from the artless simplicity of nature, in our days. The contrast such pictures form to the modes of living in great and opulent cities, affords them the greater entertainment, as the heart and affections imperceptibly mingle in the scene, and the beholders cannot refrain from contemplating the unostentatious happiness of these unspoilt children of nature, with an eager but ineffectual longing, for what to them is a forbidden and inaccessible. fruit.

Suffice it to say, that our bard, in the character of honest Ofellus, has expressed the sentiments of his own better understanding (if I may use the term), no one will be inclined to doubt, who has formed an intimacy with him from his writings: and the epode, Beatus ille qui procul negoties, and that heartfelt exchanation, O noctes cænæque deûm! in the sixth satire of this second book, would alone be sufficient to convince us of ^{*} Every one conversant with the history of the Old Romans, knows, that during the five first centuries of that wonderful Republick, the principal families and the greatest characters, consuls such as had been imperatores, men who had won whole provinces to the state, and led kings in triumph, were not more rich, and lived no better than Horace's Ofellus. Of this even the sixth century affords us an instance almost incredible in our times. Ælius Tubero, a man honoured by his countrymen for his virtues, and who, according to the expression of Plutarch (in the life of Paulus Æmilius) excelled all the Romans in uniting poverty with a true greatness of mind (μεγαλοπειστατα Ρωμαίων ωυνα xensumeros) lived with fifteen other Ælians, his next of kin, together with their wives, and a troop of chubby children, either at Rome in a small house their joint property, or on an undivided family estate in the district of Veiæ, so little, that (as we are told by Valerius Maximus) it had more masters than it needed labourers to till it. Nevertheless the great Æmilius Paulus (who, with Fabius Maximus, and Scipio Africanus, composed a triumvirate of the noblest and greatest characters of the age), thought this same Tubero worthy of being his son-in-law, by giving him his daughter Æmilia in marriage: and this daughter of a patrician of the most antient and illustrious nobility, of a man who had been twice consul, and twice had triumphed, was yet proud of being the wife of one who was virtuous enough, at a time when the lust of acquiring riches at the expense of the country and the conquered nations, like an evil dæmon, had possessed the hearts of almost all, to remain poor.

peasant, probably living somewhere in the district of Sabinum, in the vicinity of Horace's farm. tus and Cassius, after the murder of Julius Cæsar, finding it necessary to raise recruits in Italy for the defence of the republican party, and for the security of their own persons, Ofellus is reported (upon the authority of an antient scholiast) to have enlisted as a soldier under Cassius, and thus came under the general proscription, which Antonius and the young Casar, after having made themselves masters of Rome, and of the senate, issued out against the adherents of the accomplices in the murder of Casar. This report of the scholiast, however, has apparently no other foundation, than the circumstance, that Ofellus (as well as all, both countrymen and citizens, who had espoused the party of Brutus and Cassius), at the partition of the lands amongst the old soldiers or veterans of Cæsar, instituted by the young Caesar Octavianus in the year 713, on his return to Italy, was stripped, like GRET. MAG. March, 1811.

all ages, as sports peculiarly suited to a warlike people as the Romans were. Even in that respect the Romans of his time had greatly degenerated from the usages and discipline of their ancestors. From the modern Greeks, whose habit of life and manners they were insensibly copying, they had adopted many things which foresed a striking contrast to the simplicity, bardiness, and stern character of their forefathers, and amongst them a variety of diversions unknown in former times. Many of these were indeed bodily exercises, but of a less strenuous and dangerous nature, and more calculated for that softness and effeminacy into which the Greeks, since the loss of their independence, had gradually sunk. This from the whole contexture of the passage, is what Ofellus understands by græcari, as contrasted to the romanu militia, not se avocare & convicits operum dare, as Baxter expounds it. At the same time I deny not, that græcari in its largest construction, is equivalent to imitating the manners of the Greeks, or even the extravagances of their licentious youth, and in the mouth of a Roman of the old rough downright cast, might have carried with it a sort of contumelious taunt. The admirers of Plautus know what congræcari and pergræcari imply with him.

Pete vedentem aëru disco. | The discus, in its original design, was by no means a game for tender and delicate people. It consisted in hurling a sort of round plate or disk of brass or hard stone into the air, so that the disk should fall within a stated space marked out upon the ground. ing therefore from the weight of the disk and the span of the arc in which it was to be thrown, we may easily perceive how this game which appears already in Homer as a military practice, might gradually decline into a very moderate bodily exercise, and at last become a mere boyish play.

Tu pulmentaria quære sudundo. "In this expression Horace seems to allude to a saying of Socrates, who, on being asked by one that saw him, protracting his walk till late in the evening, why he did so, replied: 'Όψον συναςω,' says an antient scholiast, and translates that answer, pulmentarium quæro. The cookery book of the Greeks and Romans comprehended under the terms opson, opsonion, pulmentum, pulmentarium, in their most extensive import, all that came to table besides bread; in the stricter sense, all kinds of viands, flesh and fish, ragouts, puddings, and the The answer of Socrates may therefore very properly be thus construed: I am dressing for myself a goodsupper (that is, by strenuous motion and the appelite which it procures.)

Scarus. The Scarus is a fish of the Ionian sea, for which the Romans got their taste, as they did all their delicias and cupedias, from the Greeks. Archestratus, who compiled an Encyclopædia of all edible substances in hexameter verse, under the title of Gastrology, informs us, that the best scari were caught on the coasts of Carthage and Byzantium. According to Pliny, the scarus was held in his time the most delicious of all fish: it is found, he says, most abundantly in the Carpathian sea, never instinctively venturing above the promoutory Lecton, in the plain of Troas; and adds, that a freed-man of Emperor Claudius conveyed a number of them along the Campanian coast, and thus enriched that sea with a set of new inhabitants, so that they were new captured pretty frequently in those parts. — I know nothing further concerning this fish; not even how it should be called in English; for, that it is no other than the well-known bream, or the French surget, is not at all credible.

Lagois here denotes, as we are told by Baxter, the same bird which by the Greeks is called lagopus, by the Italians and French francelin, by the Germans birkhuhn or berghuhn, and by us the heathcock or powte; though by others it is made to signify a fish, called the sea-hare: but as the wordis not found in any other author that! I know of, I am unable to determine on either side.

Posito pavone.] The peacock; which prior to Alexander's campaign in the East was utterly unknown in Europe, constituted with the Romans. of this period, not only the ornament of the poultry-yard, but one of the principal dishes on the tables of the nch and extravagant. The famous orator Hortensius was the first Roman (Pliny says) who taught his country men to eat peacocks. In a short time this viand grew so much into fashion, that the price of one fowl was fifty denarii, or £1. 128. 6d. A certain Asildius Lurco, the first who fattened peacocks for market, sold a flock of a hundred, at a dearer rate, £822. 180. 44. and made annually a profit of 60,000 H S, or £484. 7s. 6d. by his peacocka; ' Cicero pleasantly says, he had: the boldness to invite Hirtius to sup with" him, even without a peacock. See ... vide audaciam. etiam Hirtio cænem" dedi sine pavone. The peacocks maintained this high culinary consequence: during/some centuries, and, according to the books of chivalry of the middle ages, composed always the chief dish. at the cours plenieres of the principal in those times, and as the romancers: tell us, the proper and noblest diet of ... heroes and lovers*. The knights and noble dames of that heroic age, had however, a different encolure, and diffe terent stomachs from those of their descendants in the XIXth century 1 35" ters. "The senator Montanus, the greatest eater in my time (says Javenal) could tell at the first bite, whether an oyster was fetched from the Circeian foreland, or taken up in the Lucrine lake, or at Colchester; and at the first sight of a John Dory knew from what coast it was broughtt." The people of nice chops arrived at such a high pitch of virtuosity on these points, that they could even taste the difference between a pike caught at the mouth of the Tiber and one taken between the two bridges; and this it is on which the worthy Ofellus here descants.

^{*} Curne de St. Palaye sur l'Ancienne. Chevalerie, Memoire iii. au commenc. Ponteene

Laudas, insane, trilibrem multum.]
Next after the scarus and the lamprey in point of precedence among the piscine nobility (says Pliny‡), come the multi, as the most admired and roost plentiful, although they are scatom caught above two pounds in weight, nor do they in general grow larger in the ponds and conservatories. He, notwithstanding, in the very next find that Richard Browne, of the Neale, first High Sheriff of the county of Mayo, temp. Q. Elizabeth (stated in some of the Irish Peerages as a younger son of Anthony first Viscount Montagu) was in fact the son of Wilham Browne, who resided at the Neale, co. Mayo, whose Will is duly registered in the Prerogative Office, and in which no relationship to the Montagu family is even glanced at. lf any additional proof was wanted, 1 might mention that none of the early English Pecrages take notice of a collateral branch settled in Ireland; that none of the first Lord M's sons were named Richard; and that Lord Kilmaine has, never claimed the honours. of Viscount Montagu, which he would of course do, had he any fair hope of success, possessed as his Lordship is of an ample fortune, and powerfully connected. I do not here riean to deny that William Browne of the Neals (father of the Richard Browne in question) might not be descended from ^{*} Gell. Nect. Attr. vii. 16. † Sat. iv. lin. 140, & seq. ‡ Lib. ix. cap. 17. § Conf. Juv. Sat. iv. & Seneca, Epist. xcv.

228 Visc. Montagu. - Iron Roofs, Prese

the same original stock as the Lords Montagu; on the contrary, I think it very probable he was, both from the similarity of the arms, and the family tradition to that effect: I only say (and I leave your Readers to determine whether I am borne out by facts) that the noble families of Browne in the sister kingdom do not derive from a Viscount Montagu, and consequently (though of the same blood and descent as is supposed by some) have no claim to the Viscounty granted to Sir Anthony Browne, with remainder to the issue male of his body—no such image male now existing.

I agree with your Correspondent in admitting that though the Dean of York was restricted from marriage, he might yet have descendents.

Yours, &c. BIOGRAPHICUS.

Mr. Unnan, Hilltop, March 4. S your useful and entertaining Miscellany is never backward in inserting any thing beneficial to mankind, I will trouble you with a line on a recent invention that seems to be of the utmost importance to the world — the prevention of Fire.

When we reflect on the many fatal accidents that constantly happen by this dreadful scourge; the loss of life to multitudes; the destruction of the finest buildings, with their contents, often still more valuable; every attempt to prevent such scenes for the time to come, deserves our grateful thanks, and the most serious attention.

It often happens that large buildings are frequently set on fire from the roof: By the carelessness of work men, this was actually the destruction of Cowdray House in Sussex ; and such is recorded to have been the fate of a former St. Paul's in London; also Westminster Abbey was very lately set on fire by the plumbers; with many others I could mention. But whether a fire begins internally, or externally, the moment the roof falls in the whole is destroyed. With this idea, and stimulated by motives of humanity, a centleman in Shropshire (Thos. Botfield, esq.) thought it possible to have the entire roof of buildings made of tron. Accordingly, he had a small house crected for trial, and when the walls were at the proper height, a roof (made of iron plates, joined together so as for the whole to become one piece) was placed upon them, and not th Neith cept storm joised

The able is adopt partal those cities, of fir the ir may (yel ito have I inside the ou also at cation ther, the ro dreadi think I can that is SITC 1 some I men tued, is nec ble sa terialı when the ge the ve built iron 🔢 buildi clear, which painte Anoth pence AUTO (all th wantii when a with very tiresome and tedious process, but the latter, when made, is fixed on a house in a very short time. 'All th considerations are very great advantages; and when we reflect on the very great lowes that have happened in the City of London alone within a very few years, were an estimate to be a it would undoubtedly amount to more money than the securing every bon in the Metropolis from such distre ing accidents.

This consideration classly shows t

P. S. Mr. Botheld has obtained a patent; therefore any one now may be supplied with Roofs of any size. And were it generally adopted, what security and happiness would it give to thousands! For it is well known, that from the frequency and alarm of fire, there are numbers of people, that nothing on earth could induce to sleep a night in London; and thousands, and tens of thousands, that for a moment would never trust themselves in a Theatre.

priety? 'Or, is it an unreeling instrument, that obeys the hand or breath of the master, itself indifferent whether grief or joy?"

Now for a word or two with Candidus. After following S. E. Y. through the greater part of his criticism, he proceeds thus (p. 612):

"His next observation is upon the manner the Pibroch is introduced, a martial sound being attributed to it in one instance, and a merry one in another. But what of this? Does your Correspondent suppose that a musical instrument must necessarily be confined to one species of musick? Does he imagine that what produces a martial sound cannot be made to produce any other? I would have him consider if many of the instruments composing a martial band are not often used to direct and give spirit to the sprightly dance; or, whether he has not, even in the streets, heard a slow and solemn air immediately succeeded by a lively one? This observation of your Correspondent is certainly contemptible in the extreme, and would lead us to think he knows as little about Musick, as he appears to do about l'oetry. But I must here beg leave to inform S. F. Y. that he himself has been guilty, at least in my opinion, of the very same fault with which he charges the Authoress of 'Wallace; '-that is, Obscurity! I cannot comprehend what he means by asking the question, whether the Pibroch is 'an unfeeling Instrument that obeys the hand or breath of the master to any tune, indifferent whether grief or joy?' I never knew, for my own part, that any instrument was otherwise than this. Does your Correspondent unagine, when he hears a musician play a bold, a lively, or a plaintive air, that it proceeds from the Instrument's incapacity to produce any other? What, S. E. Y. does not know then that the strings or keys of an instrument are entirely under the controul of the musician, and, that lively or plaintive notes, discord or melody, are all to be produced, and only to be produced, by the method of playing! I hope your Correspondent will another time be more cautious in giving his opinions, and not, in the rancour of animosity, forget the distinctions between sense and nonsense."

* The following is the passage alluded to by our Correspondent .

[&]quot;The Connoisseurs in Pipe-musick affect to discover, in a well-composed Pibroch, the imitative sounds of march, conflict, fight, pursuit, and all the 'current of a heady fight.' To this op mon Dr. Beattie has given his suffrage in the following elegant pas tage: "A Pibroch is a species of tune peculiar, I think, to the Highlands and Western Isles of Scotland. It is performed on a Bagpipe, and if fiers totally from all other musick. Its rythm is so irregular, and its notes, especially in the quick movement, so mixed and huddled together, that a stranger finds it impossible to reconcile his ear to it, so as to perceive its modulation. Some of these P brochs being intended to represent a battle, begin with a grave motion, resembling a murch, then gradually quicken into the onset, run off with noisy confusion and turbulent rapidity, to imitate the conflict and pursuit; then swell into a few flourishes of triumphant joy; and perhaps close with the wild and slow waitings of a funeral procession." Essay on Laughter and Ladicrous Companion, chap, in, note." Scott's Lady of the Lake, p. 321. Lair.

l confess myself equally ignorant with Candidus of any instrument that did not entirely "obey the hand or breath of the master." But if S. E. Y. has discovered, or shall discover, one in itself possessed of such exquisite sensibility, as to be affected with 'grief' or joy' independent of the powers of the performer, I for one will without hesitation leave my snug retreat on the banks of the Tweed, and wait upon S. E. Y. wherever he may appoint, to witness so great a curiosity. That the Pibroch at least, is not such an Instrument, I hope presently to shew; for it may be interesting to some of your Readers, and will, I am sure be useful to these two Correspondents to be told: that the Pibroch, about whose powers as an Instrument they have wasted so much argument, is no other than a martial air performed on a Bagpipe, to represent the dif. ferent stages of a battle; usually commencing with a slow movement, to represent the marching of the troops; increasing in rapidity and confusion with the encreasing ardour of the conflict; and generally concluding with the flourish of Victory, or the cries of the defeated. It is peculiar to the Highlands of Scotland. The compositions are various, and a well-composed Pibroch is reckoned the acmé of Bagp:pe Musick; though the movement is so mixed, and confused as to be hardly intelligible to an ear unaccustomed to it. The performers of a Pibroch generally march about while they are playing the air, quickening the step as the rapidity of the composition increases. avoid, in conclusion, applying a passage from this extract of Candidus to himself and his opponent; and earnestly entreat them to miorin themselves better on the subjects of which they treat; "to be more cautious another time in giving their opinions, and not, in the rancour of animosity, forget the distinctions between sense and nonsense." A BURDERER.

Mr. URBAN, Murch 2. HE end and aim of all my efforts, according to John Carter, is to induce Readers to believe his detence of Henry Vilth's Chapel is but a disguise to cover the foul workings of his mind, fraught with envy, malice, and detraction; and that his knowledge in the Art of Masonry is trifling and contemptible. Be it known then, that I avow the sentiment, though I disclaim the language. I have never used such terms in my correspondence with John, however provoked by his petulance, or goaded by his insolences but I have no hesitation in maintaining mycharges in any language that can be used in the company of Gentlemen.

and malevolent detraction—indiscriminate, because no professional man living*, but one, ever obtained his commendation—malevolent, because his censure increases in proportion to the eminence of the artist, or the importance of his undertaking.

I charged him with ignorance both in the Art of Masonry and the Science of Architecture, because he maintained

^{*} Some years back John did praise an Artist before he was dead; when he added, "remember I have praised a living Artist." He has never had occasion to repeat the memento.

of his opponent.

Such of your Readers, Mr Urban, is may have paid any attention to this controversy, must have been satisfied with a single reading of all that has passed; and I do think it a most unreasonable act of presumption in J. C. to expect his friends to take a retrospect of such a contention after so many years as it has continued, while they have received no information in its progress—but I have done. On this point one word of idvice from an antient Author will be sufficient, "Diskram Bethan Atos;" which Heave John to interpret and apply.

After this settlement of our general account, let us proceed to the list reply of the Knight.—" If," says John, "I must be the Red Cross Knight"—he must, certainly, not by may appellation, but by his own assamption, or by the fittle conferred upon him by one of his retainers. I never made him a Knight; I never thought him qualified for an Esquire: I never called him by any name, at any time, but of his own or his party's choosing; and though he trea's me as the Knight of the Blood-red Aspect, I neither dener than John had supposed; for he said it ought to fall; he prophesied, or he expected, that it would fail; and if it had fallen, what joy! what triumph! what exultation and congratulation among the brotherhood! but alas! it stood: and then, how tame is the expression! Consequences do not always occur upon the moment (and Consequences, in order to be consequential, was printed in Capitals); yet the spirit of Prophecy is still unchecked, but now quairfied with a perhups-" perhaps the hour is not very distant, when we may see who will have most cause to contemplate on Henry's Chapel in a state of ruin,"---Good John, why will you prophesy? -I do believe you are as bad a Prophet as an Architect.

To be serious, Mr. Urban, any professional man who shall be disposed to visit this work in its present state, will have every opportunity afforded him of examining the mode of process, the attention paid to the correctness of style, the precision of imitation, and the security of the whole Edifice; when it is to be presumed that justice, by the body of the protession, will be done to the character of an Artist, who for years has been exposed to the persecution of a party, and defamed by the malevolence of an individual: if ever he should feet his professional credit injured by this malevolence, assuredly he will apply to the laws of his country for redress. In the mean time the work must plead for itself. If it is condemned by the well-informed Affliquary, amends for the affront which you have just received from my thought less sister." Caroline was unable to answer such an exquisite declaration of friendship; but, embracing Sophia, requested her to mix with the company.

When they had returned home, Felicia, who had watched her sister's intimacy with Caroline, began to repeat before Mr. and Mrs. Hartley the sad history of Caroline's family, and ventured to say, that it was shameful for sophia to appear so in imate with her—" Why so?" asked the mother. "I have also o' served Caroline; I find that she is a modest virtuous girl; and am very happy to see my Sophia delight in her company." Felicia's pride was much hurt when she saw Sophia commended by her mother. The matter was dropped that night, to the great satisfaction of the amiable Sophia. But during the three following weeks, Felicia did not let a day pass without endeavouring to persuade her sister to break off with Caroline. Having met once more in a , large company, Felicia had contrived, by means of a friend of hers, to humiliate Caroline publicly, by whispering an audacious lie concerning, that virtuous girl. All this, far from altering the sentiments of Sophia towards her friend, increased their mutual aftertion to such a degree, that they could not spend a single day without seeing each other, or at least without writing. As the time of their separation was near at hand, they agreed upon a plan of corresponding together.

The separation took place to the great sorrow of these two sincere friends, but to the satisfaction of Felicia, who thought that, when Sophia should see Caroline no more, would soon forget her, and contract a friendship with some of the young ladies of the convent to which they were going.

In this, however, she was disappointed; for never was a correspondence more regularly observed; never were friends more faithful. During the two years that Sophia was at St. Omer, not a week had elapsed in which Caroline did not receive a letter from her dear Sophia.

About this time a favourable change took place in the affairs of Caroline; she was to be sent back to France, to he married to the son of a rich merchant of Paris, who had been formerly an intimate friend of her father's. You may imagine what was Caroline's joy when she embarked for France. the took her way through Flanders, and, on the third day after her depurture from London, arrived at St. She hasted to the convent, where she found her dear Sophia; spent three whole days with her, and would have remained longer had it been in her power.

On the second morning after her arrival, as she was asking at the gate of the convent for Miss Harlley, the servant called Felicia instead of Sophia. -When Felicia was introduced to Caroline, she started back, and articulated some broken words; but Caroline, perceiving the mistake, took that opportunity of being reconciled to Felicia, and, with great good nature, said: "Dear Miss, it is an agreeable mistake, since it furnishes ma with. an opportunity of paying my respects to the sister of my dear friend." Augother than the proud Felicia would have behaved with decency, and made i at least a polite reply; but she was so perfect a bigot to vanity, as to take that for an offence which displayed. the greatest goodness of heart: she, therefore, answered with an abrupt... nes which is certainly not characteristic of good-breeding: "I have no w business with you, Madam; so I must. retire." Caroline was not disappoint. ed, for she expected such treatment from a girl whose pride was so uncopquerable. She knew that of all faults ... to which young people are addicted; . pride is the most difficult to eradicate; and that nothing is more disgusting in youth than petulance and malice. In the company of her lavely Sophia, she forgot this new affront.

A few months after Caroline's marriage, it was decreed, that all the Enge of lish of every description, who were at: that time in the territory of France, should be arrested, and confined in prison, or in other places of security. Several thousands were accorde ingly imprisoned. At the same time. the convents were broken open, and the nuns driven away: Felicia and her sister were sent, with many others, into the strong castle of Ham in Picardy.

When the news of this general are ... restation arrived in England, but, in spite of all his solicitations, he was sent to Paris as a spy, stripped of all his property, and torown into a dungeon.

In the mean while, Carolate, who was oot ignorant of all, the disasters that had befallen the English in Universal had been deprived for say weeks of hearing from her dear Sophii, was unable to remain any longer in a state of incertitude. She was informed that Sophia and her sister had been sent to Hain. Having procured thenevessary papers, and a particular recommendation from the Secretary for the Home Department; she went thinner, and was allowed to visit her unfortunate friend. Good Heavens! in what a distressing condition she found her! -A dark damp little hole, about seven fett long and four broad, was the cell in which she found poor Sophia, who was tying upon a has dful of straw, wrapped in an old dicty blanket; she had literally no clothes on, but a few tattered rags which did not half cover her hakedness; and these were full of vermin. Her scanty allowance was black bread, with some ject to obtain for you-But bere are clothes and linen-let me wash you, and put them on." "I thank you. my dear friend, ' said Sophia, " and will accept taem, but not for my own My poor sister, who is very ill, shall have them - let us fly to her rehef, and, if possible, save her life," They went into the intrmary, where another scene of wretchedness presented itself to the eyes of Caronne. An old chapel, an hundred and fifty feet long and forty broad, without any cieling, formed the hospital. In this dreary place were three partitions, caca spread with straw, and containing about sixty patients, lying without distinction of disease, or even of sex.--- A putrid air pervaded the whole hall, in which there was no fire to purify it, though in the depth of winter, Every day ten or twelve of these wretched beings perished through want of attendance and proper nonrishment, and were suffered to lie in a corrupting state for several days, No drugs were administered, but what were of a had quality. The nurses who attended the unfortunate crestures they passed. Being arrived at Paris, Coroline obtained leave for them to be sent to the Luxembourg, where a great number of English were contined, and those who had money were pretty well treated. Here Caroline took a small room for them, and brought them fresh provisions herself every day: she dined with spent in their company all the time that she could spare from her domes-them twice a weck, and moreover rocious than the wild beas so the forest. Such was the frightful place where Caroline found the once proud and haughty Felicia. When they approached the place where she was lying, they found her in a swoon, of the duration of which nobody knew any thing. Sophia, in this deletal condition, lose superior to her misfortunes, and did all she could to recover her sister; she succeeded so far, that when they had changed the foul rags which she had about her, Felicia, in a low tone of voice, said she felt so comfortable that she thought herself in Paradise.

tures were more unrelenting and le-

After they had recovered Felicia, Caroline said to Sophia, "Go, my dear Sophia, clean yourself; I will stay here until you return." Sophia, wher she came back, found that Caroline had, by means of money, prevailed on one of the servants to procure a basin of excellent broth, which she was endeavouring to make Felicia swallow who with some trouble, drank it. Soon after the same servant brought a bottle of wine, some white bread, and some meat. Felicia could partake of nothing, except a glass of wine. As a fresh demonstration of Caroline's affection, in order to engage her Sophia to eat, she consented to partake of the repast which they had provided, notwithstanding the noxiousness of the place.

Night drawing on, Caroline was obliged to part from her Sophia. But the next morning she came again, and spent the whole day in the same manner. She observed the same attendance during three weeks; and, by her care and attention, I elicia recovered. When Felicia was able to distinguish the author of her restoration to life, she dissolved into tears, and, under a heavy consciousness of her former unworthy conduct towards Caroline, expressed her gratitude only by sighs and tears.

In the mean time, Caroline's husband, by his friends, had procured an order for the removal of the two young ladies to the prisons of Paris. They were accordingly removed in an uncovered cart, the usual mode of conveyance, with a little straw at the bottom. Caroline accompanied them, and patiently supported the injuries and insults which they received in all the towns and boroughs through which tic concerns. While Felicia and Suphia were cajoying all the comfort that they could expect from their situation, their isther, who had been arrested as a spy sent over by Mr. Pitt (as it was incationed in his indictinent), was on the point of taking his trial; and it was evident that the mercenary jury, who were hired by the tyraut, would find This unfortunate man him guilty. had written several letters to Caroline's hushand; but they had all been intercepted; so that he must inevitably have perished, had not Caroline by chance seen the name of Mr. Hartley in the list of those who were to be arraigned. She immediately applied to a minister of police, but the monster giving her an ambiguous answer, she had recourse to Roberspierre himself, and was happy enough to succeed in deferring the trial. She was even more successful; she had him transferred to the Luxembourg, where she hired a room for him hear that of his daughters, who thought the prison a terrestrial Paradise when they were united to their dear father. On the 28th of July 1794 the tyrapt, who had plunged France in the deepest miseries and horror, being overthrown, the prisons were thrown open. and Mr. Hartley and his daughters liberated. Before their departure from France they spent a few days at the humane, the tender-hearted Caroline's. Felicia was unhappy the whole time, as every thing revived the récollection of her past conduct. Her heart expanded with gratitude toward the lovely object who had saved the life of her father, sister, and self; but she could never reconcile her contemptuous disdainful treatment of Caroline, to Caroline's humane and extreme generosit.. She was so impressed with these reflections, that although a very advantageous match was proposed, she determined to ret, in which the candour and sound ment of Dr. kappis are so emply displayed, and to the improveof which so general an interest seen excited.

P. R.

ibutors of entire Articles in the Five Volumes of Bugraphia Britannica.

Volumes of B ographic Bristency Beaufry, Esq.
William Bray, Esq.
Iohn Caider, D. D.
Seorge Chalmers, Esq.
Sission of Dromore.
Iohn Discey, D. D.
John Discey, D. D.
John Discey, D. D.
Richard G ug., Esq.
Or George Gregory
William Hayley, Esq.
Ismuel Johnson, LL. D.
W. Norem
John Nathols, Esq.
Ir. Professor Richardson
Edmund Tarnos, Esq.

Rev. Mr. Hall Sir John Hawkins Thomas Brand-Hollis, E.q. Messes. Heskel and Toulmins EARL OF HARDWICES Mr. Herschell W tham Hayley, Esq. Dr. William Hunter Rev. Mr. Huntingford Joshua Iremonger, Etq. Dr. Johnstone George Keate, Esq. Wil iam Loundes, Esq. Rev. Dr. Lort Sir Wm Musgrave, Bart. John Nichols, Esq. Rev. Mr. Pope Rev. Mr. Penneck Sir Hagh Palliser Isaac Reed, Esq. Sr Paul p Stephens, Bart. Joshua Stevens, Esq. George Steevens, Esq. George Lewis Scott, Esq. Rev. Charles Towgood Dr. William Watson Mr. J meph Wilkinson Messes. Wedgwood and Bentley William Wharton, Esq. John Wilker, Esq. LITE-

LITERARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons, of the City of London, with their characteristic liberality, have directed that the Proceedings in Common Council, authenticated by the proper Officer, and superintended by a Committee, shall in future be printed, for the use of the Members of the Corporation,

Mr. Bawdwen has completed his Translation of the whole of the larger Volume of Domesday Book; and has a Volume nearly ready for the press, which comprises the Counties of Middiesex, Heris, Bucks, Oxon, and Gloucester. The modern Names of Places will be adapted, as far as possible, to those in the Record. There will be an Index to each County; and the Editor proposes having part of the impression made up for sale in separate Counties, for the convenience of those whom it may not suit to purchase the whole Volume. maining Volumes, Five in number, will be published in due succession; as will also the Counties of Essex. Suffolk, and Norfolk, which are comprised in the smaller volume of the Original.

J. Bucklen, under the encouragement of Sir R. C. Hoare, Bart. has completed a series of Drawings of Views of all the Churches and Chapels, antient Mansions, &c. in the County of Wilts; being more than 400 in This undertaking, which number. forms a collection of the finest specimens of Anticut Architecture, at once does honour to the memory of our former Architects, and to the worthy Patron of so laudable a pursuit. May such a noble example be followed, for every County in the United Kingdom! By such means English Topographical labours would be carried to a pitch of excellence unknown in any other Nation.

Mr. Henry Jacob, the Author of a Hebrew Grammar, and Mr. A J. Valpy, have it in contemplation to superintend a new Edition of the "Hebrew Bible," with points, and with the Latin translation of Arius Montanus interlined. The Hebrew text will be taken from Vander-Hooght. The work will be comprised in two handsome Volumes royal octavo. It is intended to publish it in six Numbers, the whole to be completed in eighteen months.

Mr. West's painting of the Miracles of our Saviour, has been purchased by the Subscribers of the British lustitution, for 3000 guivess. The sum was raised by a subscription of 50 guineas each individual. The painting was originally destined for America.

The Rev. H. B. Wilson, B. D. in preparing for the press. A History of Merchani Taylors' School, London, from its foundation to the present time, including the Lives of the officent Men who have been educated at it, to be comprised in one 4to volume. It is designed to embellish the work with engraved portraits of Archbishops' Juxon, Dawes, and Boulter, and (in proportion to the degree of patronage conferred upon the undertaking) of other distinguished scholars of the School.

The Rev. Thomas Junvis, of Levils, has a Volume of Sermons in the press.

Dr. REARSON'S Warburtonian Lectures, preached in Lincoln's Inn Chapel, wil soon appears

Mr. Montagu Pennington has nearly ready, "Redemption, wra View of the Christian Religion, from the fall of Adam to its complete establishment under Constantine," Svo.

The Rev. Thomas Scott, Rector of Aston Sandford, Bucks, is preparing for the press, " Detached Remarks on the Bisney of Lincoln's Refusation of Calvinism."

Dr. Richard Banen, Rector of Causton, Nortolk, is about to publish "The Fraims Evangehzed, in a continued Explanation."

Sol rge a part of the Edition of the Rev. RICHARD (ECIL'S Works, kind been be poke by his friends, that not copies will be advertised for public sale; but Names are yet received by the Editor, the Rev. Josean Prayer, Doughty-street.

The State Papers and Letters of Sir Walter Aston, afterward Lord Aston, ambassador in Spain in the reigns of James 1. and Charles 1. are printing uniformly with those of Ser Ralph Sadler, in two Quarto Volumes.

ARTHUR CLIFFORD, esq. editor of the State Papers of Sir Ralph Sadjer, has in the press, in a quarto volume, Tixall Poetry; with Notes, &c. &c.

A variety of curious, scarce, and valuable articles, may be expected in the Catalogue of Rushen, of Banbuty.

The Third Part of Four's Cutalogue, of Manchester, will soon superar.

91. Aq

tical aurmadversion in the present Essay. Whether from the love of a favourite hypothesis, or from the vanity arising from a boasted relationship of the family de Sade with that of Laura, the Abbé has much injured the moral character both of Petrarch and the lady, and diminished that esteem which we should otherwise feel for them, by supposing the lovely Laura to be the wife of Hugh de sade, and the mother of cleven children. calls her the daughter of Audibert de Noves, and relates that she was born A. D. 1307 or 1308 at Avignon, where she died A. D. 1348, having been mar-ried A. D. 1325. We pass over the canons of Criticism respecting the examination of evidence which are of a general nature, and applicable to all cases of the same kind. We omit also the ridiculous farce of opening the grave in the Capella della Uroce of the Church of the Cordeliers at Avignor,

Mrs. Dobson's Life of Petrarch, 2 vols.
 2 vo. is a good apstoma of this work.
 Gart. Mac. March, 1811.

was near the hills that rise above the fountain of Vauciuse, the spring of the Sorgu, as may be ascertained by another Sonnet (viii, Part 1.):

"A piè de' colli, ove la bella vesta Prese delle terrene membra pria La donna, che colui ch' a te ne 'nyia, Spesso dal sonno lagrimando desta; Libere in pace passavam."

In several other Sonnets there is an allusion of the same nature; but we think the evidence already adduced conclusive on that argument. The next is derived from the Latin Poems of Petrarch, in one of which he complains, after enlarging on his unhappy passion, and mentioning that he sought the solitude of Vaucluse as a retreat from care, that he finds to his sorrow that the image of Laura was ever present to his mind, and pursued him into her own native fields.

"Hoc proculaspex: secreto in littore saxum, Naufragus tutumque meis aptomqua putavi; [tus istis,

Ruc made vela dadi, nune monthip abdi-

Flens mecum enumero transacti temporis annos; [retentans, Insequitur tamen illa iterum, et sua rura Nunc vigilantis adest oculis, nunc fronte minaei

Instabilem vano ludit terrore soporem."

The Abbé de Sade has given a translation of this very passage, but has thought proper (no doubt, for good reasons) to omit the "sua rura retentans." Many parts of Petrarch's writings contain likewise decisive evidence that Laura died in the same place where she was born, and where she had lived the most of her time.— Thus in Sonnet liii. Part 2.

"E questo 'l nido in che la mia Fénice Mise l'aurate e le purpuree penne; Che sotto le sue ali il mio cor tenne.....

E me lasciato hai qui misero e solo, Tal, che pien di duol sempre al loco torno Che per te consecrato onoro e colo.

Veggendo a' colli oscura notte intorno Onde prendesti al ciel l' ultimo volo."

So likewise, in that beautiful Sonnet written on his return to Vaucluse, we have the clearest and most satisfactory evidence that the grave of Laura was in that very place, and amidst the same scenes where he had so often enjoyed the pleasure of her company:

"Valle, che de' lamenti miei se' piena; Fiume che spesso del mio pianger cresci; Dolci sentier, che sì amaro riesci; Colle, che mi piacesti, or mi rincresci, Ben riconosco in voi l'usate forme, Non, lasso! in me.....

Quinci vedea 'l mio bene; e per quest

Torno a veder, ond' al ciel nuda è gita Lasciando in terra la sua bella spoglia.—"

The same truth is elicited from the Latin Poems of Petrarch. In one of his Eclogues he celebrates Laura under the name of Galatea. Three nymphs are introduced under the names of Niobe, Fusca, and Fulgida; and one of them asks of the other to point out the place where Galatea was buried; which Fulgida does in these words—

"Carpe iter, qua nodosis impexa capistris Colla boum, crebrasque canum sub limine parvo [molossos:
Videris excubias, gilvosque ad claustra
Hic locus tua damna tegit: jamque aspice contrà,

Hic Galatea sita est."

These passages all concur in proving that the place of Laura's birth and burial was in the country near source of the Sorga and Vauclu The MS note in Petrarch's Virg contradiction to this testimony well as the Sonnet before mentiwe consider of no authority what

We shall content ourselves noticing only two of the lea Abbé's arguments in support o weak hypothesis, and which air tended to prove that Laura v married woman.—1st. He obs that Petrarch, in speaking of L in Latin, always uses the words lier and fæmina, and never vir, puella; and in Italian always ap to her donna or madonna, and 1 vergine or denzella. But this is a 2dly. The Abbe obs sophism. that Petrarch in one of his Diale with St. Augustine, in speakir Laura, says, that her body wa hausted by frequent child-bear " corpus ejus crebris partubus ex tum." It is true, he adds, the partubus is thus abbreviated i MS. ptubs, Upon this abbrevi the argument is founded. But withstanding the confidence of Abbé, that it should be read part we are quite of a different opi He does not prove that the which have this contraction an most antient: and we know all the old printed Editions of trarch's works render the contra not partubus, but perturbation which agrees with the sense o passage: for Petrarch replies t Augustine, Ego quoque et curu vior, et ætate provectior factus s which M. l'Abbé, for very reasons, has suppressed. The co sion that Petrarch evidently mea draw was, that he, having sul from the same cause (mental an and uneasiness) more than she had being the older of the two, if most probable she would survive This is all perfectly natural and sistent; and nothing can be more and extravagant than the fancifu fictitious notion of the Abbé de i Here then we will conclude the ject. In favour of the Abbé's l thesis we have only conjectura very suspicious arguments; in it of the truth of the sentiments exp ed so forcibly in the present H we have the most unquestionable unsophisticated evidences.

His assiduity towards Miss Masham, a new favourite of the Queen in the place of the Duchess of Marlhorough; his address in society; and his presents of Burgundy and Champagne to Right Honourable Members of Parliament, who were amateurs of it, changed the face of the affairs of Europe; and afterwards, a M. Menager, who was sent there by Louis XIV. The consequences will be seen.

"Mariborough played during the rest of his time in the Low Countries. Yet he found means to finish his military career with glory: he forced the lines of the French behind the Senzee, and took the town of Bouchain.

"They found a thousand faults in him, the Duchess being disgraced; his pride they converted into insolence; and of his rather too strict economy, they made him a peculator and extortioner. His friends, as may be easily imagined, conducted themselves as such; that is saying every thing. He was recalled, which was a thunderbolt to me. The French assembled on the Rhine; I made Vehlen return from the Low Countries, with a large detachment; and, setting off from the Hague on the 19th of July, I assembled quickly, at Frankfort, all the troops I could

I made presents, for much may be bought in England. I offered to have Gallas recalled. I presented a memoir upon this subject, and begged the Queen to adopt other determinations at the Cougress of Utrecht, whither her plenipotentiaries were already gone, in order that the Emperor might be able to send his there. They gave me so vague an answer, that, if the Court of Vienna had believed me, they would not have relied at all upon the feeble succours of the Duke of Ormond, who set off to command the English in the place of Marlborough; and I should not have lost the battle of Denam."

Thus far we have contemplated the Princely Writer of his own Memoirs as a Warrior and a Politician. Let us now accompany him to what appear to have been almost his last thoughts.

"I have been happy in this life: I wish to be so in the next. There are some old dragoons who will pray to Heaven for me; and I rely more upon their prayers than upon those of all the old women of the Court, or the clergy of the City. The fine simple or lond music of divine service is pleasing to me. The one has something religious in it which affects the soul; the other other recalls to me, by the noise of trumpets and kettle-drums, which has so often led my soldiers to victory, the God of armies, who has prospered our battles; without believing however (as I have already said was sometimes asserted at Court) that it was what they called the Miracle of the House of Austria. I have hardly had any time to sin; but I have set bad examples, perhaps of scandal, without knowing it, by neglecting the practices of Religion, in which, however, I have always believed, and which I know very well. have sometimes spoken ill of my neighbour; but then I was obliged to do it, in saying such a one is a coward—such a one is a rogue. I have sometimes been in a passion; but who could help swearing, to see a general or a regiment which did not do its duty, or an adjutant who did not understand an order! I have been too thoughtless as a soldier, and lived as a philosopher. I wish to die a Christian.— I have never been fond of boasters, either in war or religion; and perhaps it was from having seen, on the one hand, frivolous impieties, like those of the French which I have mentioned, and, on the other, Spanish bigotry, that I have always kept myself distant from both. I have often seen death near enough to be familiar with it. But now it is no longer the same thing. I once sought it; now I wait for it; and in waiting I live tranquilly. I look upon the past as upon a delightful dream. I never go to Court but on days of ceremony, nor to the Theatre but when there is an Italian Opera, serious or comic, or a fine ballet. If there were a French company, I should go to see Athalie, Esther, and Polieucte. I love the eloquence of the pulpit. When Bourdaloue fills me with fear, Massillon fills me with hope. We were born in the same year; and I knew him at his entrance into life, perfectly amiable. Bossuet astonishes, Fencion touches me. I have seen them also in my youth; and Marlborough and I showed every possible honour to the latter when we took Cambrai. I have forgotten the epigrams of Rousseau, and even his ode to me; but I often read his psalms and his canticles. My memory is still good, you sec; and I believe I have forgotten nothing but my enemics in this country, whom I pardon with all my heart. A stranger and successful !—that was too much for them. I am tolerably well in health, though my seventy-second year, the fatigues of I know not how many campaigns, and the effects of I know not how many wounds, weigh upon me: the Chevalier Carelli, my physician and friend, gives me a certain remedy to cure, as he says, the radical moisture which he finds a little dried up. I have a great many things yet to do, for the embellishment of my gardens and palace: for example, in the front of that which I inhabit, and where I have employed fifteen hundred workmen (because it was a time of scarcity, and it did good to the city of Vienna), I wish to purchase all the grounds to make a fine square, and in the middle a superb fountain. If I live a little longer, I shall commit to writing all that I can remember, or that comes into my head, which I still find sound enough, though they take care to tell me that it is a good deal bowed down. It has been strong enough not to die with vexation when I have been thwarted, as my friend Prince Louis of Baden did about thirty years ago. I have shrugged up my shoulders, and gone on. For example, if I were still to interfere with affairs, I should say to the Emperor, 'Take every precaution for your succession: it will be devilishly embroiled. Two or three different powers will support their pretensions. Prevent it all while you are alive. This is an occasion for travelling post, as I did in my time, running to Munich, Berlin, London, the Hague, &c.' The army and the artillery are falling into decay. They will not be in a state to resist, if they do not arrange together to prevent all that will happen; and if, before that, on the death of Charles VI. they do not refuse to go to war with the Turks. I wish great good fortune to the House of Austria, which will soon be Austria-Lorraine, and I hope that she will extricate herself. I have written enough for to-day, and I shall now mount my horse to go and see a lion which has arrived at my menagerie on the road to Schweikelt."

In palliation for occasional negligencies in the present volume (of which there are a few), we are informed "that the Translation was begun, carried on, and completed, in intervals of a painful disorder, which left little opportunity for the exertion of mental vigour, and which necessarily retarded the appearance of the work."

23. Capt. Pasley's Essay on the Military Policy and Institutions of the British Empire. (Continued from p. 154.)

THE following interesting extract relates to the Peninsula of Spain and Portugal, countries upon which British feelings have not yet ceased to be alive:

"Those, however, who ascribed the misfortunes of the Spaniards to any thing but a want of good-will in their own cause, were soon confirmed in their favourable opinion of that Nation by the most convincing facts. What stronger proof could be desired of patriotism in any country, than that the people of Asturias and Galiscia, after they saw themselves abandoned wast resources, and having nothing to fear at home, we cannot take the field, even with more than a hundred thousand soldiers, in any one point abroad, when the safety of Europe, and eventually our own, may depend upon the effort."

"Unquestionable, however, as the merits of the Spanish Patriots may now appear, we have seen nothing yet, which, in my mind, warrants us in hoping that they will be able to save themselves. They will probably persevere, as they have done hitherto, in attempting to raise new armies, after every new disaster. A number of excellent officers and soldiers may be formed during the contest; but it is impossible, as long as they have to deal with such a vigorous adversary, that the great body of their armies, however liberally we may supply them with money and arms, Whatever may be can ever be good. imagined, on a hasty view of the subject, by men in England, a constant series of repeated defeats in great battles; after which, the military stores, which we may have given them, fall into the hands of their enemy; whilst they themselves wander, in small corps, about the mountains, despising or despairing of our allies, but deriving all the aid from them which they are capable of affording us, and using all our influence and power to improve them. In the mean time, our present force in the Peninsula seems inadequate for any permanent object; it is barely adequate to prolong the war, and to maintain its ground, for a certain time, after which the chances are that it may be destroyed."

"The risks which we have already incurred in the Spanish Peninsula have certainly been great; but they only prove to nie the necessity of acting in future on a grander scale, in order to avoid similar situations, from which we may not always be able to extricate ourselves by such hair-This line of conduct breadth escapes. may, by some men, also be considered very hazardous; but every measure in war is attended with its danger, and we shall have grand objects and noble hopes before us. Half-measures, on the contrary, will extinguish hope, and lead us not merely into danger, which is the element of the warrior; but experience has proved, that they must always end in disgrace or destruction +."

[&]quot;Such was our force in December 1808, before we began to retreat."

^{† &}quot;The hope of success, in any kind of warfare, must be exactly preportioned to the magnitude

The following extract relates to important topics, which we are the more anxious to insert, because the policy pointed out in the latter part of it, in relation to Danish Zealand, may not, even now, be too late to be adopted:

"A-kin to the policy of encouraging the people to take up arms in some country, which you find yourself suddenly obliged to abandon from the inadequacy of your force, is that of conquering a possession, and immediately afterwards evacuating it.

"When we made our appearance the second time at Alexandria, our former conduct, compared with that of the Mamelukes, the Turks, and the French, had reudered us so popular, that the people of Egypt universally favoured our views. From the period that General Fraser, abandoning his schemes of farther conquest, confined his troops within the walls of Alexandria, our adherents began to fall a sacrifice to the fury of the Turkish and Albanian soldiers, which, after we finally evacuated the country, had neither limit nor check of any kind. The villages, which had shewn great zeal in our cause, are said to have been in part if not totally destroyed, and in some cases, man, woman, and child, put to the sword.

"In 1807, we made an attack upon Danish Zealand for the purpose of seizing the fleet in the harbour of Copenhagen; and we succeeded in that object, immediately afterwards evacuating the island. What has been the true nature of the war in which we have been engaged with Denmark ever since that period? The government of that country has expressed great animosity against us, and would no doubt destroy us, if it could; but as it has not the power, at present, of injuring us more seriously than by the occasional capture of a few ships, which are to the marine of England as drops in the sea, all the effects of its impotent revenge, as well as of our retaliation, in short, all the sufferings of the war, fall solely upon its own subjects, particularly on the poor Zealanders. numerous trading vessels fitted out by that people have been swept from the face of the ocean: their mariners (excepting a small portion serving in gun-boats or in privateers) are either pining in dungeons and prison-ships in England, or out of employment at home: many of their merchants, it may be presumed, are ruined: and their commerce and navigation are thus not only totally extinguished, but, from the present prospect of affairs, it must seem to them extinguished for ever. Besides which, they can never for a moment think themselves safe from a new attack upon their island, equally destructive with our former one, whenever the increasing naval equipments of their government may again excite our apprehension and jealousy. Is it possible to conceive a kind of warfare more calculated to keep alive the eternal terror and hatred of the people of Denmark?

"If we had, on the contrary, completely conquered and kept possession of Zealand in 1807, I see no reason why the inhabitants of that island might not be, at this moment, as quiet subjects as any in his Majesty's dominions.

" It must be observed, that although we do not seem either to know or to feel our national strength, except upon what we call our own element (and there we fancy we are always to drive the universe before us) —the Zealanders had too convincing proofs of it, not to see that the superiority of Great Britain over Zealand is irresistible and overwhelming — and, therefore, although we had left only a small garrison amongst them, it is not likely that they would have ventured on so rash a step as to attempt the destruction of that garrison. Had they looked forward to the prospect of succeeding in such an attempt, how could they know that we might not revenge the fate of our soldiers, by returning in greater force, and exterminate them? They well know that we would have the power to do so, if we pleased.

"All this has been said in supposition of the Zealanders remaining actuated by an implacable spirit of hatred against us, had we kept possession of their island—but why should this have been the case?

"It would have been no disgrace to them, no disparagement either to their valour or patriotism, to yield to our irresistible force. That force, wielded with moderation and justice, would have commanded obedience and respect: and these feelings must gradually have ripened into attachment; for it would have been, and is, the true interest of every man in that island, rather to submit to the dominion of Britain, and to partake of our commercial prosperity, than to be subject to the French under a nominal independence — a situation rumous in the extreme, and not less degrading than the former.

"It has been regretted by a great number of very worthy men in this country, that we should ever have been involved in magnitude of the force employed. The greatest army which we could send to Spain, if events disappointed our hopes, would in all probability only lose its rear guard. A small army, on the contrary, by which we can destroy nothing, may itself be destroyed. Acting on a grand scale is, therefore, not merely the boldest, but, it appears to me, even by far the safest policy for Great Britain."

hostilities

them nominally independent we are their bitterest enemies. Who can say that they may not, at this very moment, ascribe our not having conquered them to our own base and selfish views as traders; for by so doing, we should have been obliged to protect their commerce, their wealth, and prosperity; which by the principles of the laws of nations, of which we profess ourselves such zealous advocates, we now have the privilege of destroying for ever."

The subjoined little extract, and the note annexed, present us with a curious piece of intelligence:

"We have never condescended to purchase a peace of our enemies; but we have often done something very like it: for example, at the commencement of the present war, when Naples became tributary to France, instead of declaring war against that Power, as a vassal of our enemy, we (at least, so it was generally understood) agreed to pay it a subsidy, in order to enable it to make good the demands of Buonaparte; so that we were actually sub-

WOLK . AND I SUTCIL TO THE HENRIL, continues Mr W. " in the hope that it may attract the attention of those who ought to patronise and promote it." Another source of information was the records of the Government of Fort St. George; to which the Author had free access through Barl Powis, under whom he held confidential situations; to which was added the obliging permission of Lord William Bentinck. The results, he laments, are less satisfactory than he could have wished, as the earlier records are very defective. "Of the labour itself, Mr. Orme has correctly observed; that it probably exceeds the conception of any of his readers, excepting the Keeper of the Records." The official records of the Dynasty of Mysoor were removed from Seringapatam to Calcutta, which occurrence deprived Mr. W. of much valuable matter. He had hoped, that through the interposition of a friend, and the permission of Sir George Barlow, when Governor-General, which the latter readily granted, that the removal would not have operated to his disadvantage; "but," he adds, "I am aware that the labour is greater than can be expected from Gentlemen fully occupied by their official duties, on whom I have no personal claims." The hopes he had formed were finally extinguished; and though severe indisposition compelled him to leave India sooner than the plan he had formed permitted, he has contrived by other means to authenticate most of the facts, for which he was desirous to refer to those authorities; and, since his arrival in England, he received from Col. William Kirkpatrick, a gentleman who long filled important situations with distinguished abilities in India, "some unexpected lights on the subject of a portion of these records, which will demand a more particular acknowledgment in the second volume, to which they chiefly apply." Mr. W. declares, it would require space for a long list of names, were he to give those to whom he has been indebted for assistance, at length: he, however, particularises Col. Close, Col. Agnew, Mr. Hodgson, Mr. Thackery, and Mr. Hurdis, each holding important public offices. doubts how far he was at liberty to include the name of Sir James Mackintosh, but he expresses a hope that he shall be forgiven for thus declaring his gratitude to that Gentleman, for perusing detached portions of the work in India. Mr. W. employed Abbas Ali, the field secretary of the late Hyder Ali Khan, to consult the most antient and intelligent officers of the late Dynasty, in two distinct assemblies; and from their written memoirs, and oral testimony, the above Abbas compiled two military histories in the Persian language, descriptive of events within their knowledge. "Over one of these presided Budder u Zeman Khan, an old Officer of distinguished talents and cultivated understanding, well known to the troops of Bombay by his respectable defence of Darwar." The second meeting was under the direction of Luft Aly Beg, who had been one of Tippoo Sultaun's Ambassadors to Constantinople in 1785, and the defender of Nundidroog in 1791, till death terminated the labours of this venerable chief, after which the task was transferred to Jehan Khan, "the Officer who repulsed the flower of Sir Eyre Coote's army from the fortified Pagoda of Chillumbrum in June 1781, and was desperately wounded in the breach of Seringapatam in 1799; a plain unlettered old soldier, of clear and distinct understanding, and a niemory uncommonly retentive and correct."

^{* &}quot;I have often heard this transaction publicly talked of in Malta and Sicily, and the truth of it never once called in question. Mr. Leckie, who mentions it in the second edition of his work, states that, by order of the Neapolitan Government, the money was paid direct, by the British Agent, into the hands of the French banker, at Naples."

The present Raja of Coory wrote a history of that place, which is used upon this occasion; and the Author observes, that though the Raja has small pretensions to profound historical research, "his romantic character and adventures are well known in India;" and it is valuable for "some characteristic traits of the Mountaineers of the West part of India, which are singularly curious." The last document mentioned, is a Work written under the immediate direction and inspection of the late Tippoo Sultaun; and, as so singular a circumstance must necessarily excite curiosity, the Author gives the following account of The title is Sultaun u Towareekh: or, the King of Historics. The facts were dictated by Tippoo, and the arrangement belongs to Zein-ul-ab-u-Deen Shusteree, who was brother to Meer Aalum, late minister at Hyderabad. It is written in the Persian language, and furnishes a proof of the false taste introduced by modern writers. But, however faulty it may be in th s respect, "it is the style of a person well skilled in that sort of composition, and accomplished in the literature of Persia." The commencement, as usual, is devoted to the praises of the divinity Mahomet, and the approved associates and dependants of the latter; yet they are so contrived as to hold a middle course between the faith of the Sultaun and his Secretary, who were of different sects of the Mahommedan religion. A dissertation succeeds, founded on the gradations of creation, which the Writer. traces in the inequality of men's minds and the variations of their exterior appearance, observable even in the Apostles sent to enlighten mankind. "It exists also, says the brother of Meer Aalum (whose long name prevents our repeating it), among the inferior orders of men: government is requisite for the protection of mankind, and Kings have existed in every ture of the Sultaun; and accordingly declares in the sentence following the above, in terms particularly inflated, as if to conceal his purpose, " that many passages of the work are of the express dictation of the Sultaun himself." The first of the two his Secretary, proceeds to the early youth of Hyder, which is followed by a blank; and the second commences with the accession of Tippoo in 1783. Proceeding till 1789, other blank leaves occur; then proceeds a second edition of the genealogy. Both of them, adds Mr. W. are equally remote from the truth; but the narrative of those of his military operations which were successful, are given with precision and clearness. "Those in which his armi were unfortunate, can scarcely be recognized in the turgid and ' fabulous shape which the Sultaun has assigned to them." The English, when mentioned as not immediately opposed to him, are termed Nazarence; on other occasions they are GENT. MAG. March, 1811.

them himself, without hazarding some offence against propriety. He then gives a specimen of the King of Histories, part of which, we suppose, will be an acceptable present to our readers ; and this relates to a supposed proposal from General Macleod, on his second Volumes proposed by the Sultaun and - appearance before Mangalore, to decide the fate of the contest, by a combat of an equal number of soldiers of each nation; and the purport of the whole is, to establish the exclusive right of the Sultaun, by descent from the Prophet, to bravery, beroism, holy war, and the destruction of infidels. "But," he observes, "your Apostle, the holy Messiah, according to universal admission, was not invested by the Almighty with the power of the sword, and never did undertake a holy war. It is evident, moreover, from authentic books, that you falsely arrogate to yourselves the religion of the Messiah; that you support the doctrine of the Trinity, absolutely associating other Persons with God, and thereby enroll yourselves with idolaters :

idolaters; and that you perpetrate forbidden things, such as drinking wine, eating swine's flesh, gaming, usury, and every other act which, by the universal consent of mankind, is held to be a vice. Therefore God, and the Apostle of God, that is, the Messiah, and all his elect, abominate and abhor you, and you have incurred the wrath of the throne of God."

In concluding his preface, Mr. W. acknowledges his obligations to the Court of Directors of the East India Company, for admission to their records, and the library at the India House, where he received every attention from the officers employed in their preservation and care. In recurring to what we have written as the substance of the Preface, we find that we have already given cogent reasons for the encouragement of this Work, not by assertions of our own, drawn from a hasty perusal of the contents of the two volumes, but by affording our Readers the means of judging for themselves whether it is possible so many authentic records can have been consulted, and their contents compressed, to no important purpose. For ourselves, we contess that we experienced great pleasure in the retlection, that we were reading the labours of a Gentleman, who has proved that he has had every assistance from the best of sources which could be expected in a History of Mysoor.

25. The due Observance of the Sabbath-Day; a Sermon. By the Rev. Thomas Jee, M. A. late of Pembroke-hall, Cambridge, Vicar of Thaxted, and one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the County of Essex. 8vo. Stanes, Chelmsford. 1809.

THE Commandment, Exod. xx. 8. "Remember the Sabbath-day, to keep it holy," is in this Discourse plainly, but energetically, enforced.

"Prayer, both private and public, hearing, reading, and meditating on the word of God, are the particular parts of our duty on the Sabbath. If we begin the day with prayer to God, we may expect that it will end well. We may hope to obtain the blessing and the grace of God; and we may hope to obtain assistance and comfort in the performance of our duty. In the next place, the public worship of God requires our attention; and we should be very careful not to absent ourselves from it for frivolous reasons and vain excuses."....." To visit the sick, to comfort the afflicted, to relieve the distressed, to instruct the ignorant, to correct the erroneous, and to reclaim the vicious; are acts both lawful in themselves, and wellpleasing to him who bath declared that 'he will have mercy, and not sacrifice." —By works of necessity, we are to understand whatever is unavoidable. cattle must be supplied with food, and taken care of; our health and safety must be consulted, and moderate refreshment must be provided for our families: but it is neither lawful nor right to make our cattle labour at their usual work, nor to detain our servants from the worship of God, by ordinary employments on the Sabbath-day."

After observing that

"God hath 'blessed the seventh day," and hath promised to bestow his blessing on that day, in an especial manner, on those who duly observe it;"

Mr. Jee enforces his argument by the following quotation from a letter of Lord Chief Justice Hale:

"I have, by long and sound experience, found, that the due observance of this day, and of the duties of it, have been of singular comfort and advantage to me, and doubt not but it will prove so to you. Almighty is the Lord of our time, and lends it to us: and as it is but just that we should consecrate this part of that time to him, so I have found, by a strict and diligent observation, that a due attention to the duty of this day hath ever had joined to it a blessing upon the rest of my time, and the week that hath so begun hath been blessed and prosperous to me. And, on the other side, when I have been negligent of the duties of this day, the rest of the week hath been unsuccessful and unhappy to my own secular employments; so that I could early make an estimate of my successes in my own secular engagements in the week following, by the manner of my passing of this day: and this I do not write lightly or inconsiderately, but upon a long and sound observation and experience."

26. An Enquiry into the best System of Female Education; or Boarding School and Home Education attentively considered. By J. L. Chirol, one of His Majesty's Chaplains at the French Royal Chapel, St. James's Palace. 8vo. pp. 363.—Cadell and Davies. 1809.

so many books have been written on the subject of Female Education, that we are not surprised Mr. Chirol should think it necessary to apologise for adding to the number. But he observes that those publications which either treat of the advantages of education, every rate and description, from one end of the empire to the other;" and although he has scrupulously abstained from local or personal allusions, he has no hesitation in expressing his firm, unshaken opinion, that the best of them is good for nothing. As this will no doubt appear a harsh sentence, our Author qualifies it in the following manner: - " Be it remarked, that I pretend not to affirm positively, that there is no exception whatever, for many schools must certainly have escaped my notice; what I mean is, that I am not acquainted with one which is good for any thing. It would, bowever, be a very singular circumstance, if, notwithstanding all my trouble, inquiries, expence, and impartiality, those schools which have been tinintentionally overlooked were all precisely such as form honourable exceptions." In this we cordially agree with our Author, and must acknowledge that if we had instituted such an inquiry, and found five hundred schools good for nothing, we should met have been inclined to go another step in the pursuit.

When, however, we say that some things are expressed incautiously, our meaning must not be supposed to go farther than a gentle intimation that his female Readers may think him inclined to undervalue the sex. observes, for instance, that " woman is physically less strong and robust than man, that her frame is more delicate, and the structure of her body more feeble; hence the almost incessant infirmities under which she labours." This, in our opinion, is not consistent with fact. Women do not labour under "almost incessant infirmities;" and although we allow that they are less robust than men, we really believe that, taken collectively, they exhibit as many remarkable examples of bealth and longevity as men, and that, too, among the poorer and more laborious classes. But this difference of opinion is of less consequence than what follows-

"It is also generally allowed, that her intellectual powers are as different from his, as her physical properties: hence her incapacity for intense application, cation, and her little aptitude for the study of the sciences. She thinks, but she can rarely meditate: she improves, but does not create: she feels more profoundly than man, but has not sufficient energy to depict her acute sensations." We shall not extract more of these opinions; but these are enough to prove that the Author has formed a judgment rather too low, than too high, of the female capacity.

With regard to the destination of the sex, we agree with him, that "they compose one half of the species, and are destined to constitute the happiness of the other half." About this there can be no great difference of opinion, and a proper education will undoubtedly prepare them to fulfil their destiny in the best manner.— This brings our Author to his Chapter II. in which he points out the evils of Boarding-School Education. this he asserts that, as far as relates to the three principal points, the health of the body, cultivation of the mind, and improvement of the heart, the best boarding-school is, at least, good for nothing; or, what amounts to the same thing, that it is not adapted either to the constitution or the destination of woman.

In Chapter III. he considers the subject of Health, under the heads Food, Cleanliness, Exercise, Pure Air, Fire, Sleep, &c. in all which respects he endeavours to maintain that boarding-schools are grossly deficient; but m some instances he seems to rest too much on such reports as the following; that a young lady "declared she had seen forty girls fed for two successive days upon a single leg of mutton. Not that the allowance of food was absolutely limited in this case, but the calls of appetite were suppressed from shame." Unless this had been a common case, it should not have been introduced.

In Chapter IV. on the Cultivation of the Mind, our Author reasons with more effect, as far as he contends that it is not in the power of governesses to pay so much attention to the children of a numerous school as is necessary to form their minds in many particulars. We hope, however, that the following character of Governesses and Teachers admits of many exceptions.

"If we enquire, what situations these persons originally occupied, we shall find that many of them were only chamber-maids and common servants, who, by means of considerable assurance, and a little money, have raised themselves to their present condition. That assurance has succeeded; it has supplied all their deficiencies; or, rather, it has covered their gross ignorance and want of manners.

"Some have been kept mistresses, cast off when the bloom of youth and beauty began to fade. Placed in a situation of reputed respectability, they soon make their fortune, through the encouragemen and patronage of their former protectors, who obtain a right of admittance to the young ladies committed to their care, and thus, not unfrequently, indemnify themselves with these, for the loss of the charms of their quondam mistresses.

"Others have, themselves, received merely a boarding-school education; and, from the loss of their husbands, embarrassed circumstances, or family disagreements, are compelled to have recourse to this vocation, which few, who are acquainted with its duties, would embrace from choice, or inclination; but which is the only one left for a woman, if we except that of a milliner or mantua-maker.

"This being the general qualification of the Heads of our English seminaries, such is now their carelessness (I speak again with the persuasion that there are exceptions) that, being content with fancying themselves fine ladies, and merely issuing orders respecting the domestic concerns, they indulge in the arms of Morpheus till late in the morning; in sacrifices to Bacchus nearly the whole of the afternoon; and in scribbling wretched poems, and doleful love-stories, in the evening: while the important duties of the school devolve entirely upon the teachers. And what is the general character of those teachers?

" I am still under the necessity of speaking uupleasant truths. They are a set of people (very few indeed excepted) as ignorant and ill-bred as the governesses. people who think themselves very clever, when they are constantly finding fault, scolding and speaking in a harsh, rude, imperious manner; people who make their pupils suffer still more from their illhumour, than they themselves suffer from the dull, monotonous, uncomfortable, and servile life which they lead in every respect; people who, if they feel a pernicious propensity (as is too often the case) to bestow an undue proportion of pains on those children, whose abilities and quickness point them out as most likely to do honour to the instructress, and to neglect such as are slow and backward in their

"But there is one species of punishmentso particularly absurd and permatious, that, if there existed no other objection against board ng-schools, that alone would be sufficient to make any sensible person despise and abbor them. I allude to the practice of giving the young ladies portions of the Holy Scripture to learn by heart.

"Who, indeed, could believe it possible, if it were not proved by too numerous facts, collected from schools of all descriptions, that Christian Governesses, who ought to inspire their pupils with a love of Religion, which is really so amiable, and the most precious guit that Heaven, in its infinite goodness, has bestowed on mankind, should do all that hes in their power, (though unintentionally, I trust) to render it an object of hatred, terror, and contempt! " If a girl, who has made use of any improper expressions, or has been guilty, either of pride, cruelty, immodesty, or a disregard of truth, were commanded to Bearn such passages of holy writ as point but either some exemplary punishment mficted by God on the particular fault she bas committed, or others in which it is condemned, I should not find fault with such a method. It would be a lesson which would tend to deter her from relapsing into the same error, which would acquaint her esses? The practicability of giving education in any branch, is one thing: the inclination is quite another; and those mothers, to whom a religious education is a matter of indifference, if not of absolute neglect, will never be able to adopt our Author's opinions of the evil of boarding-schools, nor will they feel much gratified with his Chapter VI. in which he examines, and endeavours to refute, the objections against private edication.---Yet this chapter we do not hesitate to recommend as the best in the book. more conclusive in its arguments, and more useful in its tendency. Indeed, where a private education is practicable (and there certainly are cases where it is not), we are clearly of opinion that it has superior advantages; and that the remainder of this volume, which consists of " Directions for rendering private, education easy to the Teacher, and beneficial to the Pupil," contains many salutary precepts and much excellent advice to all classes. Upon the whole, although the Author will be thought rather inveterate inveterate in his prejudices against boarding-schools, the general train of argument employed is well deserving of serious consideration. The practice of sending young ladies to boarding-schools is so common in this country, and so completely established by fashion, that it may require more powerful arguments than are here employed to bring private education into general use; yet the Author's motives are so amiable, and his treatment of the subject for the most part so judicious, that we are persuaded his labours will not be wholly lost.

27. Mad-houses. Observations on the Act for regulating Mad-houses, and a Correction of the Statements of the Case of Benjamin Elliott, convicted of illegally confining Mary Daintree: with Remarks eddressed to the Friends of Insane Persons. By James Parkinson. 8vo. pp. 48. Sherwood, Neely, and Jones. 1810.

THIS pamphlet originates in a Laudable, and very natural, desire on the part of Mr. Parkinson to vindicate himself against certain misstatements of a trial in which he was called to give his evidence. The trial, which took place in October last, was that of Benjamin Elliott, Elizabeth Anne Elliott his wife, and Sarah Bodkin, for a conspiracy to deprive Mary Daintree of her liberty, by confining her as a lunatick. Mary Daintree had been confined in consequence of a certificate from Mr. Parkinson, and in our opinion very properly. But the most valuable part of this pamphlet are the remarks Mr. Parkinson has made on the Act of Parliament respecting Mad-houses, its want of proper provisions to remove the difficulties that lie in the way of the medical faculty, as well as of the keepers of Madhouses, and the absolute necessity there is of a revision of it. Many curious cases are related, which corroborate these remarks, and which seem highly deserving of the attention of the Legislature. The Act, as it stands, affords a very incompetent protection either to the publick from the mischievous disposition of cumning lunaticks, or to the physician that may be called to give his opinion, the relations who may think confinement necessary, or lastly to the keepers of Mad-houses, to whose care they must nitimately be committed.

The following case, from its peculias singularity, may not be an uninteresting specimen of the light thrown on maniacal cases in this very sensible pamphlet:

"A gentleman farmer was brought to a house for the reception of lunaticks, his friends grounding the necessity of his confinement on his conducting his affairs in such a manner as must soon bring him to ruin. On speaking to the patient, he said, if his friends could state any circumstance which he could not defend on principles of reason and equity, he would consent to be confined for the rest of his days, He was then asked, Do you not give more wages than other farmers?—Yes. Why do you?—Because I am of opinion that the standing wages of Jabourers is much toe small; and the neighbouring farmers agree with me in that opinion, but have not integrity enough to follow my example. although they know their labourers to be almost starving. But have you not had it clearly demonstrated to you, that this proceeding must terminate in your ruin ?-Yes, but—a question in my turn, Am I to be deemed a madman because I will not save myself from ruin by starving a number of my fellow-creatures? Well, but your friends say, that you have thoughts of leaving your farm to your servants, and to make a tour over Scotland, setting out with only a crown in your pocket. Is that a rational intention?—Yes. I have cartainly a right to make what tour I please: it will be a more rational tour than your sparks of quality make, for I go to inform myself of the agriculture of the country I pass through. But you leave your farm to the mercy of your servants.—So do other farmers, and more madly than I should, since, by my generosity, I have assured myself of the fidelity of my servants. But was it not madness to think of setting out on this excursion, with only a crown in your pocket?—So, extravagant generosity is first brought as a proof of my madness, and, this failing, you mean to prove it by my parsimony. But I can explain this part of my conduct also. know I injure myself by the wages I pay, and therefore I judge I can spare but little for myself—so much for my parsimony. But how is this crown to carry you through ?—Thus—I shall take one of my horses for the first thirty miles, and theu travel on foot the next twenty; and thus, with care, my five shillings will carry me fifty miles from home. Now the object of my journey is agricultural knowledge, and my wish is to obtain it as cheap as I can: therefore I will hire myself as a labourer until I have got five shillings more, and then set off again. I have got such recommendations

seriously hurt his professional character."

28. The Architectural Antiquities of Great Britain, represented and illustrated in a Series of Views, Elevations, Plans.
Sections, and Details of various antient English Edifices; with historical and descriptive Accounts of each. By John Britton, F. S. A. Vols. I. and II. 4to.

THE work now before us must prove particularly acceptable, and indeed interesting, to a large class of our Readers; for many of the buildings that have been often incidentally referred to, or cursorily described, in our pages, are herein amply illustrated, and their histories and architectural features fully developed. The Architectural Antiquities of Great Britain must always prove interesting; for the various classes of antient buildings, with which this Island abounds, present an almost inexhaustible source of enquiry for the Antiquary, and at the same time will be found useful and amusing subjects of study, to the Artist, Historian, and Philosopher.-Whilst the imperious Castle is demonstrative of the unhappy state of society in former ages, and developes per of the last No. (xiii.) he promises to publish a Supplemental Volume, to consist of Architectural details, classed in a chronological order, and calculated to display the progressive and gradual variation in the shapes, ornaments, and enrichments of Windows, Door-ways, Arches, Columns, Buttresses, Turrets, Niches, &c. &c. This will certainly constitute a very useful and desirable work 1 and, if properly executed, will prove a sort of grammar, or elementary display, of Anticut Architecture.

The Two Volumes before us contain one hundred and thirty one engravings, representing several different buildings; and each edifice is amply described, and its history fully detailed.

The Author appears to have been favoured with communications respecting some of the subjects from several eminent Antiquaries; and acknowledges his obligations in the prefaces or in notes. Among the names we perceive some of our old friends and Correspondents:—Messrs. Gough, King, J. A. Repton, T. Sharp, Charles

Clarke,

Clarke, Dr. Sayers, the Reverend J.

Ingram, and W. Hamper.

The First Volume of this Work is dedicated to the Marquis Stafford, and the Second to Thomas Hope, esq. who, though not English Antiquaries, are considered as generous patrons of Literature and the Fine Arts. In the First Volume are historical and descriptive Accounts, with several Engravings, of the following buildings: St. Botolph's Priory Church, at Colchester, Essex; Dunstable Priory (hurch; the Manorhouse at Layer Marney, Essex; King's College Chapel, Cambridge; a series of Stone (rosses, with an Essay on the subjects, and Views and Descriptions of those at Winchester, Waltham, Northampton, Geddington, Glastonbury, Malmsbury, Chichester, Stourhead, &c. A Series of Round Churches, with a copious preliminary Essay on Temples, &c. also Accounts, with Plans, Views, &c. of the Round Churches at Cambridge, Northampton, London, and Little Maplested. Malmsbury Abbey Church, that interesting pile of ruins, is illustrated by ten Plates, and by a particular Description.

The Second Volume embraces a very copious History and Description, accompanied by nineteen Engravings, of Henry the Seventh's Chapel at Westminster; also, a Series of fortythree Engravings of antient Houses, These are preceded by "an Essay towards a History and Description of the Rise, Progress, and Characteristics of Domestic or Civil Architecture in England, from the earliest Period to the End of the Seventeenth Century." In the course of this disquisition the Author takes a concise but clear and perspicuous View of the Domestic Buildings peculiar to the Britons, Romans, Anglo-Saxons, Normans, &c.; and illustrates his general Essay by a more detailed account of several large and eminent Mansions. This Essay may be referred to as the most complete and comprehensive that has ever been hitherto published on the subject.

29. The Old Bard's Farewell; a Poem. By Mr. Jerningham. 4to. Clarke.

THE valedictory Poem of so respectable a Veteran excites an interesting sensation: the various little poems of Mr. Jerningham are all impressed with a glow of sensibility peculiarly adapted to his subjects. The tranquil melancholy that runs through the Poem now before us, springs from the heart, and leads to it.

We shall transcribe the Old Bard's Appeal to the Bishops, which concludes with a beautiful simile respecting the Established Church and the State.

"Ye high-exalted Pastors of the realm, Whose skilful hands direct the sacred helm, Whose spotless mind with wisdom's lore is fraught, [thought.

Whose white investment figures heav'nly Your awful task invariably pursue,
To your tremendous duty dare be true.

"'Tis yours, ye leaders of the holy train,.
To guard with jealous eye the intrusted fane:

'Tis yours to perfect with a gradual hand. What the first great Reformer boldly plann'd.

From the blest dome undauntedly efface
Each mark'd deformity, each fancied grace,
The borrow'd columns of the Roman pile,
Each ling'ring semblance of the elder style.

"Still may the sainted Ark secure remain From the defiling touch of hauds profane: Through all her progress may she ever

The unremitting sanction of the Throne!
As on one stem two kindred flow'rs arise,
And breathe their blended incense to the skies,

Together smile beneath the cheering gale,
Together droop beneath the batt'ring hail:
Thus the two sacred forms of Church and State

Must ever join in one involving fate,
Glow in one sun, and with one grief consume;
[tomb.
One mind, one heart, one peril, and one

We have now only to observe that though this Poem is the production of an advanced period, it gives no indication of an "Evening Mind."

30. Revival of the Greek and Roman Empires; being Observations on the Prophet Daniel's Metallic Image; also an Investigation of those Raits of the Apocalypse which appear to be derived from and illustrative of the Prophecies of Daniel, and the antient Types of the Old Testament, indicative of the present opening Signs of the Times. 2 vols. vo. Rivingtons.

AS the interpretations of Prophecy cannot, perhaps, be brought within the general rules of Criticism, but may be thought rather to depend second sense. But, in the pursuit of these observations, we find such bad arrangement when any peculiar line of prophecy is interspersed in different chapters, that, for the sake of brevity and perspicuity, we must frequently depart from the original method, and collect, rather than follow them.

UPOD

The First Part opens with the consideration of the figure of the Prophet Daniel's Metallic Image, comprising the four empires of Assyria, Persia, Greece, and Rome, which rose in succession, North-west of each other, from the Arabian Sca to the Atlantic Ocean; from which, and from Daniel's own interpretation that the image pourtrays from the first empire to the second coming of our Saviour, it is concluded to be a compendium of the events of that space and period, and that the outline and the four sections of the metals are primarily to mark that predicted part of the earth, or peculiar station, whereon the scheme of Prophecy is to be exemplified; and that the different nations of this given and well-known space are, and will be, even these first hints warrant us in the apprehension, that the four original Monarchies will be in existence in the very latter days! But several more direct prophecies will appear to countenance this conjecture, which leads to a doubt whether, among the seeming repetitions concerning the image, a twofold account is not included, and thereby the early and the latter state of the whole scheme of the prophecy concisely given, as is necessary to the nature of a compendium; and undeed to the mention made to Nebuchadnezzar in the 28th verse, But there is a God in Heaven which revealeth secrets, and maketh known to the King Nebuchadnezzar what shull be in the latter days.

GENT. MAG. March, 1811.

Here it appears that there are more consequences attached to what shall be revealed concerning the LATTER days than the former."

From these premises it is argued, that, as a compendium of the tract and period specified, the image and the interpretation must hold forth a chronological prophecy; and that, in the more detailed prophecies of both the Old and New Testament, there must also be a chronological line of prefigurement amouable at times to the prototype bints of the image, though representing much more at large and in varied terms the revolutions taking place within his outline, flown to the time of the end. And to prove the confinement of the probetic scheme to that particular s the Author looks forward to the illustrations of the Apocalypse, where, after a lapse of five hundred years, St. John is found again to pourtray the Metallic Image under the varied form of a great beast, exhibiting all the attributes of the four beasts which were synonymous to the four metals of the image, and particularly bearing their seven beads, the leopard having four, and the other three, one each; and these seven heads of the fourwellknown empires, being combined together under one body by the universality of the Roman power in St. John's time, according to this Author elearly forms the beast of the zilith chapter of the Apocalypec, and identifies the Metallic Image of Daniel in the latter period of Christian Proshocy. But our first attention must be to the presumptions drawn from the Old Testament, concerning the respectation of the four empires before the consummation of the prophetic scheme.

The First Chapter brought forward as indicative of the fall of the Assyrian Monarchy, and the remaining vitality of the empire, is the ivth of Daniel; the purport of which is ushered in at a sign and mighty wonder, of great moment to all people, nations, and languages, by Nebuchaduezzar, who had previously in the iid chapter been styled the Golden-head; that is, he there stood for the whole empire. And in this chapter he, the same Golden-head, is represented by a flourishing tree, which is hown down, but his roots are preserved mfe in the ground, and therefore capable of re-dourishing when that which binds them down is removed.

It is next observed upon this subject, that when Daniel in his viith chapter again describes the same empire by the figure of the liou, he still mentions that he beheld till his wings were plucked, and subsequently fator, that the lien was lifted up from the surth; which is looked upon as correboration of the past deputal and supposed future revival, of the more partially as in no indexes it is necessarially as in necessarial and indexes in necessarial and especially as in no justance it is no ed, has the empire get been liften since its subjugation by the Pa

After the lien, the second beast (the Persian empire) is profigured by a bear; the third (the Grecian) by a loopard; and the fourth (the Ros by a beast with ten berne, wh beast (as it is did) destroy: three. All i4 given in a in securing twenty-one down the f when the g shall be give: of the Most thus reachin lengium, cer of the Rom time; but, p empire hav take place, e And if, amo inhabiting th supremacy 1 heretofore (ONLY WE GROUP the Roman Domet, of head it to be of that predi the goven an plagues ! Re the Angel said unto me, When didst they marvel; I will tell the tryofery of the woman, and c deast that carrieth her, which he seven heads and ton horns. You The beast that they sawest was j not, and thall excend out of the be fees pit and go into perdition. further explanation of this to place when the Apocalyses o under consideration.

Having thus far shows the reemigraed in support of the suprei ad revival of the liqu and the fe boast, we come next to enquire a the fate of the bear and the loop or Persian and Grecian empires. nothing more than their being stamped to pieces appearing in this chapter, the Author concludes that their history, or the first stage of it, is h finished, and lays great stress upon A circumstance of finding in the follows significant individual Antiochus Epiphanes, who certainly is not likely to form an epoch in the grand scale of prophecy or of empires: yet, from his time, all the eventful centuries which have already succeeded him are thus supposed to be passed over in this chapter, until the great coming of Antichrist towards the end of the world. And it is true that all Commentators who have interpreted this prophecy in like manner, have been unable to proceed any further than the time of Antiochus, or to account for the immense chas a between that and the time of the ead, "But," says our Author, "let the section of this chapter be placed as future to the present time, and every object correspondent to the conjectures concerning the revival of the four empires will then appear."

(To be continued.)

31. Copies from a Correspondence, and Substance of Communications, with Mr. Huskisson, Mr. Perreval, &c. &c. on the Subjects of the Weste and Abuses in of our jurisdiction; and we are not quite certain that much advantage is to be reaped from such appeals to the publick, wherethe more regular tribunals have refused redress. At the same time, we must acknowledge that Capt. Foskett has made out a case which is more seriously deserving the attention of Government than any we have met with, and, taking for granted that what is here asserted is true, more imperiously demanding a remedy.

33. An Introduction to the Theory and Practice of Mechanics, in Five Books, for the Use of Schools, illustrated by Examples. By W. Marrat, Teucher of Mathematics, Boston, 8vo. pp. 451. Lackingtons. 1810.

AS every attempt to explain and familiarize the theory and practice of Mechanics is highly to be commended in a commercial Nation like ours; so every attempt to introduce a know-ledge of this science in schools must be accounted particularly worthy of encouragement. In schools, in general, are always to be found a considerable proportion of youths whose ultimate destination destination will require an acquaintance with mechanics, whether they are to be concerned in the laborious or the superintending part of business; and as few books on the subject are at present in circulation, the Author of the present Work appears to us to have rendered a very important service. Neither Emerson's nor Parkinson's works were intended as school-books: Wood's concerns only the theory, and Gregory's, although a valuable performance, is better calculated for those who have made a considerable proficiency, than for mere beginners.

The present work is divided into Five Books, the first containing the elements of Statics, the two first sections of which are taken, although with considerable alterations, from La The second Statique de Mouge. book treats of Dynamics, the third of Hydrostatics and Hydrodynamics; the fourth of Pneumatics; and in the fifth, several branches of the preceding books are considerably extended, with the theory of the motion of machines, and their maximum effects, an account of water-wheels, experiments on friction, and the theory of wheel-carriages. An accurate and minute Index adds not a little to the value of the work, and renders it, like an Encyclopedia, easy to be consulted by general Readers. The Plates, thirteen in number, are neatly and clearly engraved; and we have little scruple to recommend the work, aithough professedly a compilation, as answering the valuable purposes of an elementary and scientific illustration of the various and important subjects introduced, and highly creditable to the talents of the Author.

34. The Husband and the Lover; an historical and moral Romance. In three Volumes, 8vo. Lackington.

THIS tale is founded "on the circumstance of John Sobieski, after ascending the throne of Poland, having so far acknowledged a son of the Marchioness de Briscacier to be his, as to exert his influence with Louis XIV. to confer on that Son the title of Duke." It is rendered extremely complex by the number of persons, introduced, and by the long period of time it includes; and they must be most determined Novel-readers who can find pleasure in incidents which so greatly mock probability. Many of the descriptions, however, are not devoid of merit; and some of the characters excite a considerable degree of sympathy.

35. Felissa; or the Life and Opinions of a Kitten of Sentiment. pp. 131. Harris.

IN relating her own amusing adventures, Felissa brings us acquainted with the characters of her various possessors.

We have a young Lady, whose Mother, being too much engaged in fashionable dissipation to attend to her Daughter, leaves her at full leisure to romp with the Servants, and londle her Kitten. "The most charitable woman living, but whose good deeds are only performed to catch popular applause."—" The best sort of People in the World, but who have no compassion for a poor starving Kitten." At length Puss finds a snug retreat with a kind Lady, who allows her every indulgence but that of catching Mice; for, in order to prevent their being tortured, she has them destroyed by traps:

INDEX INDICATORIUS.

J. S. H. would be obliged by some Account of Dr. Henry Swindune, a very eminent Civilian, Judge of the Prerogative Court of York, and Author of several valuable Workson the Civil Law, who flourished in or about Queen Elizabeth's reign.

In Pierce Plowman's Visions, T ij p. I, Edit. 1561, Chichester is mentioned as Lord Mayor. What was the date of his Mayoralty?

We are obliged to W. B. and to some other Correspondents, for Impressions of Coihs, Tokens, Lockets, and Trinkets; but such articles are rarely worth using.

The Correspondent in our last Volume, page 426, who possesses the Miniature of Sheffield Duke of Buckingham, will oblige J. Catheart, D. D. near Berkhampstead, by any private communication, so directed.

The Correspondent who favours us with at least twenty Letters in a Month under fictitious signatures, and dated from various places, cannot be surprized if only a few of them are used.

J. M. will be told "the properties of Magnesia," by any Nurse he may meet with.

AARON BICKERSTAFFE is received, and will be thankfully used — if no farther Conditions are appended.

ACTON BURNELL, &c. very soon.

Two Views of the curious Round Church of LITTLE MAPLESTED in Essex, in our next; with LICINIUS; A COUNTRY PARISH PRIEST; CIVIS; M. &c. &c. &c.

T

To the Memory of MRS. TRIMMER.

MY honour'd friend, the o'er thy sacred beer [allays;
A Christian's grief a Christian's hope Still shall the harp, once pleasant to the ear, [praise.
Attempt its late forbidden theme, thy ral to bestow thy judgment hest rratitude I owe, 'd, aided, prais'd, he words of truth, ritannia's name is to youth,

virtue to record.

wy's tainting gall,
and careless of re-

'Tis mine to paint Humility unfeign'd, Enlighten'd Zeal without fanatic Leav'n, Candour engrafted on a life unstain'd, And universal as the care of Heav'n.

Still does my soul amid Affliction's void On Memory's curtain those lov'd features paint,

Which spoke the inexpressive peace enjoy'd, [Saint. That blissful foretaste of the expectant

No flaming chariot bore thy parting soul, Nor was it through the gates of anguish torn:

An Angel whisper'd, "Thou hast reach'd the goal," [moin.
And darkness brighten'd into endless

Like Prophets and like Patriarchs fam'd of old [asleep, Didst thou not walk with God and fall

And thus thy offspring grieving, yet consol'd.

Like Jacob's sons, Affection's vigil keep?

From the pure joys that gold the Eternal's throne,

The brightest lot of life lies distant far; Por seventy years thy lamp benignly shone, And thousands hail'd it as a guiding star.

No hands prophane its lustre shall impair; But o'er thy tomb immortal shall it beam,

Blaz'ning to times remote thy virtues rare, The Christian's model, and the Poet's theme

Such themes the harp of enlogy sublimes, And frees the spirit from its earthly mound;

When, "fall'n on evil tongues and evil times," [crown'd. We look to those who suffer'd and are

A fellow-labourer in Religion's shrine,
Who now in Kedar's tents a pilgrim strays,
Musing on happier moments spent in thine,
Thus on thy grave a sister's a off 'ring lays.
March 8, 1811. Janz Warr.

Execta in mortem augustissima Principio America, filia natu minima Georges Tertii, Britanniasum Regis.

Cur plores mortem, quam vivgo augusta

Ad superos, terră fessa, migrare volens. Ærumuns vitm varias toleraverat mgra,

Qualis eras olim, & qualem sub morte videbat,

Te fingit meditans, téque redire jubet.

Tum votum revocat, mandátque manere beatam

In cœlis, quò mox ipse venire volet. Morbus ubi, mœrorque aberunt, & luctus, & angor, Cúmque suis salvis ipse beatus ent.

Per miseros casus solantur talia regem Fluctibus angorum cum prope mersus erat.

Non lugere pudet, sed non incidere luctum : Sunt lacrymæ rerum, gaudia sunte quoque. S. P.

Bushop Wearmouth, 8th Jan.

Curet, et votis puerorum amicas
Applicet aures,"

AUDI vota favens Cynthia da tuum Numen supplicibus.—Quid, sine Te, valet

Hastas ferre minaces; Frustrà aut credere retibus?

Hûc nobis adeas, qualis apud jugum Dilectum Arcal æ; cùm fuit Herculi, Visum Numen, eunti; Per rupes Erymantheas.

* "Sister Authors may we ever be."
An expression used by the deceased in her letters to Mrs. West.

Qualem

Qualem Hic Te nitidam vidit, et inclytis Cinctam virginibus;—cernere sit quoque Nobis.—O! sacra Proles, Cum telis levibus veni!

Tu gaudes canibus, solliciti canes En! adsunt;—calamos, si cupias (licet Hic nec Creta, nec Ide est;) Nostres accipias libeus.

Monstres que rabidum lustra tenent aprum,

Setis horriferum;—quêis habitat locis, Frendens dente lezna; Tygris quêis latebris furit.

Tu vincas pedibus flamina.—Quis leo, Sub tali auspicio, quis fugiet lupus ? Cui non vulnera telum Fert, si Tu modò torqueas ?

Sunt et digna Dea talia; Diis quoque Dextram haud dedecorat, figere tigrides; Dulce est ferre triumphos, Cæso sub jaculis apro.

Sed cervis timidis parce.—Pericula
Cur cervus metuat?—Nam neque bellua
Pastoria petit agnos;
Nec strages animo placet.

Ergo parce! precor.—Quo ruis! Horrida Fædas morte manus!—Nonne vides ferox, Ut Te supplicat, ingens Ardet dum lacryma in genis!

Ah! multò canibus sevior;—Haud tibi Flectunt dura preces pectora! Te tulit Tristi niza labore Mater, apud Scythicas nives.

Nidum ut quùm volucris spectat ab aëre, Subversum pueris;—sollicitus dolor Matris pectora complet; Et pennæ subitò tremunt.

Sic cervus queritur;—sic tremit omnibus Membris;—era canum dum videt.—Ah, miser!

Nil vitæ innocuum decus,
Nil prosunt tibi questus!
Feb. 5, 1811. W. C. LANG FON.

LINES,

In the old Bluck Letter, in a Cell, or Cave, belonging to Mr. D. PARKES, of Shrewsbury. This cell was discovered in 1802, in a remain of the antient fortification, on the North-west side of the town, and is fitted up with shields of arms, stained glass in the windows, and the floor laid with curious ornamented tiles or quarries.

O TECHE mee to foregoe this world is care, The vauntinge vanities of humanekynde;

Yet teche mee to forgyve eche errour there, That myne elsewhere may lyke forgivenesse fynde.

Thys antique Celle, for toyle and tumult made [towres, When hestyle arms oppos'd Salopa's

Is nowe to mee the sweets and sacred shade Of peacefule thoughtes in-solitarie houses.

May thus my hearte, disturb'd by manie a storme.

Eche foe to love of humanekynde repelle:
Soe shall Contente life's latest eveninge
warme,

Like settinge sunbeames warme this Westerne Celle.

And may I, when lyfe lingers in the Weste, Looke backe serenelie on this susne-gilt shore;

Then streche my sayle to where the wearie reste, [no more! Where toyle and tumulte vexe the mynde J. F. M. D.

SONNET,

Written among the Ruins of LUDLOW CASTLE, Shropshire, in the Autumn of 1810.

HERE MILTON sung—what needs a greater spell [walls? To lure thee, Stranger, to these far-fam'd Tho' chroniclers of other ages tell

That Princes oft have grac'd fair Ludlow's halls;

Their honours glide along oblivion stream,
And o'er the wrecks a tide of ruin drives;
Faint and more faint the rays of glory beam [survives.

That gild their course—the Bard alone
And when the rude unceasing shocks of Time [pile,

In one vast heap shall whelm this lofty
Still shall his genius, tow'ring and sublime, Triumphant o'er the spoils of grandeur
smile;

Still in these haunts, true to a Nation's tongue,

Echo shall love to dwell, and say—here.

Milton sung. R. Rylance.

Although the following is assigned to the Mistress of Shakspeare, we will not undertake to vouch for its authenticity.

To the Beloved of the Muses and Mar.

SWEET Swanne of Avon, thou whoose art.

Can mould at will the human hart,

Can drawe from all who reade or heare

The unresisted smile and teare—

By thee a vyllage maiden found, No eare had I for measured sounde; To dresse the fleese that Willie wrought, Was all I knewe, was all I sought.

At thie softe lure too quicke I flews,
Enamoured of thy songe I grewe;
The distaffe soone was layd aside,
And all my woorke thie straynes supply.

Thou gavest at first th' enchanting quill.
And everie kiss convey'd thie skill:
Unfelt, ye maides, ye cannot tell
The wondrouse force of such a small.

Mor marve) if this breath profuse

A charme repleate with everic Muse:
They cluster rounds the hippes, and thyse.
Distill theire sweetes improved on mine.

Anna Hargaway.

T

SONG.

e power

are keen,

wain

1

HTMR FOR GOOD FREMAY.

BY cruel wounds and bruises torn, The blessed Jesus dies; Lo l on the cross he hangs forlorn, Man's bleeding sacrifice.

See how he bows his sacred head, And breathes his soul away! Earth shakes, and graves give up their dead, And darkness hides the day.

Such dreadful suff rings, gracious Lord,
Thy wondrous goodness prove?
Oh! may our hearts receive thy word
With gratitude and love.

10 689

SONG.

O DAMON, to say if I love you or no, Why press me, and kindle my cheek? There are those mute tell-tales you very well know,

Of whom you may find what you seek.

Alas! but I fear they have told what's to tell.

And all further concealment were vain; In a language my Damon interprets too well,

Which speech cannot better explain.

Yes! yes! I'm betray'd : conscious blushes will rise,

And the mask that I wore I resign;
For now i with transport behold in your eyes

What they have collected from mine.

On a FLY seen in the Depth of Winter to settle on a Lady's Cheek.

WHEN Heat from Winter's sey chains
Had set at large a captive Fly,
His wing no sooner he regams,
Than be alights near Calia's eye.

That cheek has blushes which excel
Whatever Flora can disclose:
Child of the Summer' thou might'st well
Mistake it for the damask rose.

Yet stay not there, rash insect, shun That torrid zone ere 'tis too late; For in that eye there flumes a sun, Which to approach is instant fate.

But if on this delicious coast
It is thy doom to die by fire,
Th' Arabian phænix cannot boast
'Midst sweets more fragrant to expire.

More blest the youth, whose nobler fire As conscious of its worth, the body's chains! Spurns the weak bands Mortality can tie, Tramples on Death, and claims its native Sky!

And see! he mounts, whilst heavinly hosts admire

A mortal glowing with seraphic fire '
Angelic strains his burning breast prepares,
And bids his Hallelujaha equal theirs.

So when in larger plumes her pinions spread, [mead, The rising Lark contemns the humbler Pursues her dam, to imitate her note, And catch the trembling accents as they float;

Till high in air she cuts her liquid way,

You high in air she cuts her riquin way,
And sings triumphant 'midst a blaze of day.
Yet oh! thus blest, thus rais'd from frailer earth

To full-blown gloties, and immortal birth, Forgive, dear Saint, that thus with sigh sincere, [tear;

Heaves the sad breast, or swells the rising We still, by Nature's tender pow'rs constrain'd, [tain'd;

Look weeping back on what thy clay sus-See thy last pangs with inward anguish torn, Forget the Angel, and the Mortal mourn,

Such be our grief; but ah! what words can show [wee?

The poor lost Parent's doubled weight of Whe

Clapton.

Who far from thee (for whom his fancy wrought

New schemes of bliss in luxury of thought)

Nor clos'd thy dying eyes, nor anxious hung [tongue.

On the last accents struggling from thy

Pensive he seeks some solitary gloom, Whilst his first hope turns downward to the tomb,

Dwells on that dear-lov'd name, or fondly wild, [absent child.

Forms some ideal shade, and grasps his Here from thy Heaven thy tend'rest cares employ, [joy!

Sooth his swoln breast, and tune his soul to Then oh! (for sure amongst the sons of light [bright)

Not all shine forth like thee supremely Bid some superior power awhile forego His seats of Rliss, to grand thy friends

His seats of Bliss, to guard thy friends below,

To curb each thought, where Sin that tyrant reigns, [veins. Beats in the pulse, and mingles in the Then when at length life's pageantry is o'er, And air-dress'd bubbles charm the sight no more High o'er you azure vault expetiate free, And point the way to Happiness and Thee! RUGBEENSIS.

Occasioned by the Death of the Hon. SIMON FRASER, Feb. 10, 1811.

SCOTIA—from thy mountains drear Speed thy choicest minstrels here, To grace our much-lov'd Fraser's bier, With requiem song!

Genius of the Bard of Ayre*,
To the Lowland scene repair,
And sooth us with thy mountain † air—
Funereal strain!

Scorr ‡—that canst from sea or strand Cull every spell at thy command— Oh! hither bring thy magic wand, Our griefs to lull!

And Thou §—the darling of the Nine—
That didst thine own death-chaplet || twine,
Come—gentle spirit—come and join
Our notes of woe!

Yet—what avails the sweetest strain! A seraph voice—alas!—were vain,
To waken up the dead again—
To second life!

And, ah! how vain the polish'd lay
To charm the sense of grief away—
Or the deep-rooted pang allay
In troubled breast!

Then let us to the sovereign ned

Assent—and own the hand was God—

And—as we bend—salute the rod

That strikes the blow!

Commete muittee in 1000

Sonnets written in 1800.
TO ABSENCE.

TIME was, the very mention of her name, Or e'en a spot she trod, would in my soul

Rudely awake the fev'rish burning flame
That Reason long had laboured to controul.

Now, like a Mariner, I hear those sounds
As distant winds which threat ning die away:

So, from the beach the dashing surge rebounds,

Or wastes its fury in the whit'ning spray...

But, as the Seaman would from danger's coast

Steer his trim vessel to ards the open sea,
So I mistrusting time and reason's boast,
Dread near her form to dwell:—As Circe,

Again might see frail resolution cross'd, or in the rising tide of giddy passion lost.

II.

IF, fir'd with wrongs, some Patriot should leave [rage,

His native soil, and brave the Ocean's Seeking his bleeding bosom to relieve,

Connections new his anguish might assuage.

And the 'bright scenes should 'tend his days' decline, tender string;
Yet Home, by fits, might strike some

Some love of country round his heart still twine,

And even to his parting moment cling. So Absence works upon this alter'd breast, And wrongs suspend the flame, that else would burn.

Yet should it feel Death's icy hand impress'd,. [return;

Doubtless the passion would once more
And life's last effort then be strain'd to tell Of her whose love decay'd; of him who lov'd too well.

W. H. R.

On seeing a French Watch round the Neck of a beautiful Young Woman.

MARK what we gain from Foreign Lands,
Time cannot new be said to linger;
Allowed to lay his two rude hands,
Where others dare not lay a finger.

+ See his beautiful poem, intituled, "The Mountain Daisy," &c.

The well-known Author of "The Lady of the Lake," &c.
The Scottish poet, Michael Bruce, who died at the age of twenty-one.

^{*} Robert Burns, frequently styled, "The Ayreshire Ploughman."

See his pathetic "Elegy on Spring," composed in the full and near prospect of his own dissolution.

were wholly ignorant until Thursday night that such a measure had been resorted to. Though the information from Ireland was not complete, yet he was satisfied that the Government were fully justified in the steps they had taken, it appearing that there was a deliberate and systematic plan for the violation of the Law. His Lordship had no objection to the motion, provided the circular letter issued by the Secretary of the Catholic Committee at Dublin was before the House.

The Marquis of Lansdown felt great satisfaction, with a view to the future hopes of Ireland, on learning that this measure had not emanated from the Regent.

The Earl of Limerick defended the Irish Parliament from the charges made by a noble Earl (Moira.)

The Earl of Ross read a part of the proceedings of the Assembly of Delegates on the 2d Feb. whence he inferred that those Committees had by no means the confidence of the majority of the Catholicks, who might not disapprove of this interposition on the part of the Irish Government.

The Earl of Buckinghamshire defended the conduct of the Irish Government.

The Earl of Donoughmore, in a short GENT. MAG March, 1811. grounds for appeal, he proposed that there should be a Court of Appeal for this single purpose, consisting of one Judge from each of the Courts of King's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, to be appointed by these Courts themselves; which would secure the attention to the convenience of the Courts, and to the due execution of this duty, while it would keep the whole within the principles of the established Law

Earl More and Lord Holland exhorted the noble Mover (Redesdale) not to relax in his efforts to carry these Bills through the different stages.

House of Commons, Feb. 20.

The House having formed itself into a Committee of Supply, Mr. Yorke said, that, notwithstanding the numerous and brilliant successes of the Navy, the situation of affairs in the North of Europe rendered any reduction impracticable in the Navy Estimates in the course of this year. He then moved that the number of men for the service of the Navy during the current year be 145,000.

Mr. Whithread thought our recent conquests in India would enable the country to dispense with a considerable number of vessels.—The following sums were then voted for the various branches of naval service: wages 3,345,875l.; victuals 4,453,3121. 10s.; wear and tear 3,675,7501.; and ordnance 659,7501. Also three millions for land forces, and two millions for militia. Ten millions and half, for the discharge of Exchequer Bills: and the further sums of one and a half, and eight millions, for those issued in 1810, were also voted; and 107,650/. ' for payment of five per cent. annuities.

Feb. 21.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer stated, that, having during the discussions on the Regency Bill given notice of his intention to move for some provision with respect to the Household of the Regent, and that such provision would not exceed 12 or 13,000l., he had submitted his plan to his Royal Highness; who declared that he would not, for his own personal magnificence, add another burthen to those already imposed upon the people. This opinion his Royal Highness had embraced in 1789, and referred him for further communications to an Hon. Gentleman opposite (Mr. Adam), who was authorized to make this statement in case he (Mr. Perceval) should submit any motion on the subject of the Regent's Household. He concluded by stating, that it was evident from the character of the Regent, that he had submitted to this instance of self-denial for the sake of the country; that he had refused all personal state out of an economical consideration for the people. Such a determination would, he was convinced, throw around him more real splendour; a splendour, not in the eyes of the multitude, but in the minds of the thinking; than any regal establishment whatsoever.

Mr. Adam confirmed the statement of the Hon. Gentleman; and added that his Royal Highness would not, during a temporary Regency, accept that which ought to belong to the Crown.

Mr. Creevey moved for papers respecting the proceedings in the Civil Courts at Madras, which gave rise to a discussion on the merits or demerits of Sir G. Barlow's administration.

Mr. Creevey, Sirs T. Turton and H. - Montgomery, and Lords Folkestone and A. Hamilton, inveighed severely against it; and Messrs. Grant, Dundas, Parry, Wallace, and Sir J. Anstruther, were equally strenuous in its support. The papers were ordered.

House of Lords, Feb. 22.

The Marquis of Lansdown, not conceiving the papers laid before their Lordships to have warranted the Government of Ireland so suddenly to revive the Convention Act, proposed, if Ministers did not choose to give publicity to the information in their possession, to refer the business to a Secret Committee: or, if this did not meet the noble Earl's: (Liverpool) approbation, he should movefor the Copies or Extracts of such Dispatches as had been received from, or sent to, the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, which referred to the putting of the Convention Act in force.

The Earl of Liverpool contended, that the information already before their Lordships fully justified the measure. that had been adopted; and asserted that the great body of the Irish Catholicks, who were peaceable and loyal. subjects, viewed the conduct of their Committee with suspicion.

Lord Grenville saw no proof of any. intention on the part of the Catholicks to: assemble a Convention of Belegates, which would certainly be a violation of the Law. He thought Ministers bound to take the commands of the Prince Regent on such an emergency; remarked that the Circular of Mr. Pole was informal; and undignified; and that the proper course, would have been for the Lord Lieutenant to have issued a Proclamation.

Lords Holland, Grosvenor, and the Earl of Donoughmore, spoke; shortly after. which the motion was negatived without a division.

In the Commons, the same day, Mr. Ward rose, and, after an introductory. speech, moved for extracts of such dispatches as had been received by the Secretary of State from the Lord-Lieu, tenant of Ireland, relative to the putting in execution the Convention Act.

A discussion of some length followed. The friends of Ministers urged, that such information had been afforded, by the production of the letter written by Mr. Hay, Secretary to the Catholic Committee, as justified the enforcement of the Convention Act.

Their opponents contended, that the delegation from the Catholic Body had been permitted to exist since the year 1809, without notice; and that to suppress it by means of the Convention Act, passed during a period of actual rebellion, was barsh and rigorous, and would drive them from complaining to plot in secret. That the enforcement of this Act would ... also deprive them of the right of petitioning, which was a constitutional privilege, equally enjoyed by all classes of his Majesty's subjects. 🕠

The speakers were Messrs. Yorke, Perceval, Grattan, Whithread, Pour sonby, Hutchinson, Sir J. Newport, Sig. H. Montgomery, Gen. Loftus, &c. The H. Montgomery, Gen. Loftus, &c.

House

respect-

dishire office. Curus, or the O wno, he stated, have compassed to his Colonel of the tan-roper detention of pay by the Lieut.-colonel, and some abuses in the Quarter-Master's department, was severely threatened, and ultimately tried for wearing coloured clothes, and being a mile distant from bead quarters. His sentence was, to be reduced to the ranks. He was afterwards tried on charges of mutiny and discontent, and for speaking disrespectfully of his Colonel, and sentenced to receive 1000 lashes: these were inflicted while he was so sick and weak, that he was obliged to be supported while tied up to the halberts; during his punishment, he fell into frequent fainting fits, and having received one fifth of the quota, the remainder was commuted to service in the West Indies. What Mr. W. particularly complained of, was the severe treatment which this man had received in his request for a General Court Martial not being in the first instance acceded to, in order that be might make good his charges; as also that, when tried, his two witnesses had been intimidated, and his Counsel refused communication with him. He concluded by moving the appointment of.a Committee to take into consideration the case of Corporal Curtis.

Sir F Burdett seconded the motion.

Sir F Burdett seconded the motion, Mr Manners Sutton entered into explanations tending to shew Curtis's guilt; and read some letters which had passed between Mr Wardle and the Commander in Chief, and which were characterized as being singularly arrogant

Lord C Somerset, General of the District, and Col Gore Langton, Commonder of the Oxfordshire Maitia, strengthened by their testimony the statement of Mr. Sutton, and proved that the trial had been fairly conducted.

Mr. Percent complained of the mischievous and inflammatory harangue of the Hon. Mover, and censured his attempt to creet himself into a walking Committee of the House. In his application to Sir D. Dundas, not to send Curtis abroad, he had requested the suspension of the law, but denied all information as to the grounds of his request, and declared that he solicited it as a Member of that House by whose vote the soldier was raised and paid. On a division, there were only Mr. Wardle, Sir F Burdett, and Col. Langton, for the motion.

House of lords, Feb. 28
On the subject of the Berkeley Peerage, the Lord Chancellor proposed that the Prince

order to procure, as preliminary to another inquiry, the appointment of a Committee to examine the Lords' Journals for the evidence of the Physicians. respecting his Majesty's state in 1804, and to report the same to the House.

Lord Castlerent h declared hunself willing to take his full share of responsibility, as belong a g to the Ministry of 1804. He said that the Ministry of that day did not take a single step without consulting the Physician as to his Majesty's espacity, which was certified by them. After noticing the critical state of the country at that time, threatened with an invasion, and the difference of opinion which prevailed among the leading men in both Houses, he concluded by stating his conviction that the conduct of the Ministry would not merely experience an acquittal, but approbation.

Mr. York, expressed his concurrence in all that had falten from his Noble Friend; and was followed by Mr. Bathurst.

Sir F. Burdert was in favour of inquiry, which, though long deferred, was no argument that it should be totally abandoned.

Mr. Whithread replied, after which the House divided: for the motion $1-against it 198.

Prince Regent should be petitioned to appoint a Law Officer to represent, in the pending discussion before their Lordships, the claims of the eventual heir, who was a minor.

Lord Holland moved for a copy of the verdict of a Coroner's Inquest, which sat on the body of a man named W. Colner, who had been confined for a debt of 71. in the prison of the Marshalsea, and died of hunger. The deceased was found in a place where there was neither door nor window. He had been reduced to such a state of misery, that he had been seen gnawing the refuse hones in the yard, in order to obtain some means of prolonging a wretched life. Two shillings had been found in his pocket, which had either been put there after his death, or given when such helps were far too late to afford any relief. The motion was agreed to.

In the Commons the same day, on the order of the day for the second reading of the Marine Insurance Corporation Bill, seven counsellors appeared at the bar, of whom Messrs. Garrow, Dauncey, and Best, alone spoke. A short discussion afterwards ensued, as to the propriety of its being read in order to commitment, when Messrs. Baring, Adam, Grenfell, Morris, and A. Baring, and Sirs J. Anstruther and T. Turton, contended for the second reading; and Messrs. Maryatt, Perceval, Stephen, and the Attorney General, opposed it.

On a divison for going into the Committee, there were, for it 25—against it 26. The Bill was therefore lest.

March 1.

Mr. Dundas brought up the Report of the Committee appointed to investigate the facts respecting Colville, the prisoner in Coldbath-fields. The report stated briefly, that, on mature examination, there appeared to be sufficient grounds for the confinement, and that nothing appeared in the circumstances of the confinement deserving of censure.

The Committee, however, thought that Coldbath-fields prison was not the most suitable for this person, who was to be kept from all communication with others. The report concluded with saying, that from the peculiar and public nature of the circumstances, it was not thought proper to go further into detail.

Lord Folkestone said that the Committee was unanimous.

The Chanceller of the Exchequer, after stating that various applications had been made to him on the subject of commercial inconveniences, arising from the suspension of credit, and the stoppage of various foreign markets, market the appointment of a Committee of 21 Gentlemen — the surviving Metabors of the Committee on the same subject in 1793, should be on it, to consider the present state of Commercial Credit in this country. Mr. P. said, he made the motion rather in compliance with numerous solicitations from Merchants of the first respectability, than from any inpression on his mind of its necessity: he denied that these difficulties were in any degree owing to the state of unit relations with America. — The metion was agreed to:

House of Lords, March 4.

Lord Holland, in moving for a list of all the individuals prosecuted on ar-alligio informations for libel from Jan. 1991 💠 Jan. 1811, and of the number of person convicted in consequence thereof there that period, stated, that from 1801 1807, there had been only 14 informattions filed ex-officio, and that during the last three years there had been no lewer than 42 - of these only 16 had been brought to trial, and the remaining as were suspended. In former periods, exofficio informations were used as the means of extertion — in later times, as the means of oppression—and now, co the means of influence. •

Lord Erakine, Earl Grovener, and the Marquis of Landown, supported the motion, which was opposed by Lords Ellenborough, Eldon, and Redecials, as generating a groundless distrust in the great officers of justice. On a division, there were — Contents 12 — Non-contents 24.

In the Commons the same day, in consequence of a Petition from this Printers, Publishers, &c. of the United Kingdom, Mr. Martin gave notice of his intention to move this day fortnight for leave to bring in a Bill to explain and amend the 39th of the King respecting informations.

Lord Palmerston brought forward. the Army Estimates. His Lordship. having stated the details, said, he selv a satisfaction in thinking that our army was in such a state as to render it unnecessary for us to do more than provide the means of supplying the yearly casualties, amounting to from 20 to 38.000 men. The Recruiting for the Regular Army amounted to about 11,000; of foreign troops we could command 8 or 4000 each year; and to supply the exacts, he should propose that a proportion of the Militia should be allowed to volunteer each year into the Regular Military Force. The Militia was now 92,000, obtained under promise of forgiveness, was deemed inadmissible to prove the fact of adultery, and negatived.

and

In the Commons the same day, the House having resolved itself into a Committee of Supply, Mr. Wharton pro-posed the following grants: For the support of French Protestant Dissenting Ministers in England and Ireland, 9,280%; maintenance of convicts at home, 78,7001; for the relief of the poor of St. Martin's-m-the-Fields,1,3281.; towards defraying the extraordinary expences of public prosecutions, 2,2171.; for defraying the expences of prosecutions relating to his Majesty's coin, 4,0001.; for defraying the fees on passing public accounts, 5,000%; for foreign and secret services, for the year 1811, 175,0001.; for defraying law charges for 1811, 20,0001; for the support of the Public Office in Bow Street, 12,000/.; for the Journal Office of the House of Lords, 21,000L; for defraying the incidental expences of the two Houses of Parliament, 3600t.; for printing Journals 6,000L; ; for reprinting Journals and Circular Letter enforcing the Convention Act'; and concluded with moving for a variety of papers and dispatches between the Lord Lieutenant of Ircland and the Government of this Country, relative to the assembling of the Catholicks.

Mr. Wellesley Pole made an able and luminous reply; his speech comprised a narrative of the proceedings of the Catholicks for some time past.

Messrs. Whithread, Parnell, Elliot, and Tighe, spoke at some length in support of the motion.

On a division there appeared, for it 48—against it 133— Majority 85.

House of Lords, March 8.

The Royal Assent was given by Commission to the two Exchequer Loan Bills, Malt duty, Treasury, and several private Bills.

Their Lordships, after hearing Mr. Dallas in support of the marriage between Lord and Lady Cloncurry, decided that sufficient evidence of that fact had not been established; and adjourned the farther consideration of the case to the first Friday after the Easter recess.

In the Commons the same day, the Chancellor of the Exchequer requested leave to bring in a Bill to equalize the duties on malt and sugar: he explained, that, by his proposed plan, the duty would be upwards of 2,000,000*l*. and a gain to the publick of 380,000*l*.

Mr. Curwen contended that there could be no saving to the publick, the advantage which sugar possessed over barley being so great, that an equalization would ruin the counties which grew the latter. These counties also sent 4000 head of cattle to the metropolis; which supply being cut off, would add a half-penny per pound to the price of meat, and raise the price of milk.

Messrs. Adam, Barham, Marryatt, W. Smith, Foster, Parnell, Sir J. Sinclair, Sir J. Sebright, and Sir J. Newport, also spoke; after which the House divided, and the resolution was carried by a majority of 49.

(To be continued.)

INTERESTING INTELLIGENCE FROM THE LONDON GAZETTES.

Admiralty-office, Feb. 16. This Gazette contains the Copy of a Letter from Capt. Bourcher, of the Hawke sloop, noticing the capture of Le Furet French privateer, of 14 guns and 86 men, from St Maloes, after a chace of 19 hours.—Likewise the Copy of a Letter transmitted by Vice-Adm. Bertie, from Capt. Paterson, of the Hesper sloop, mentioning the capture on the 15 Nov. of the Mouche French schooner, by the boats of the former vessel, under Lieut. Nixon, in which Mr. N. and two seamen were wounded; and on the part of the enemy, the French Captain and two seamen were killed, and five wounded.

Admiralty-office, Feb. 19. This Cazette contains the copies of two letters—one from Capt.-Rowley, in reply to the Secretary of the Admiralty, giving it as his opinion that the name of Capt P. Parker of the Menelaus, was omitted by mistake in Vice-Admiral Bertie's Dispatches, and bearing testimony to Capt. P's gallantry and zeal, he being employed under his direction off Port Louis, and a detachment of a hundred seamen and marines of his crew being landed to co-operate with the troops. — The other letter is from Lieut. R. Barton, temporary commander of the Blanche, noticing the capture, in August last, of La Confiance French Privateer, of two six-pounders and 30 men, in the Indian seas.

Downing-street, Teb. 26. The following dispatch has been received at the Earl of Liverpool's Office, addressed to his Lordship by Lieut.-gen. Viscount Wellington, dated Cartaxo, Feb. 9.

The Enemy have continued in the neighbourhood of Badajoz, and have broke ground before the place on the left of the Guadiana, and have thrown some shells into the town. The bad weather, however, has obliged them to draw in the greatest part of their cavalry from the ground between Badajoz and Elvas, and the communication has keen re-established. — Gen. Mendizabel sent orders to Gen. Venies to advance, which measure I had before recommended to him: and Gen. Mendicabel himself met the troops at Elvas on the morning of the 6th inst; they marched on and passed the Caya; and the infantry entered Badajoz and the Fort of Christoyal on the right of the Guadiana, on the afternoon of the 6th. The French cavalry retired, and passed the Evore and were pursued some distance by the Spanish Cavalry, and a brigade of - Fortuguese cavalry, under Brig-gen. Mailden, who took some cattle, baggage, del. but the attack, if any was intended to be made, upon the French troops on the left of the Guadiana, was deferred till the following day. I have received from Gen. Ballasteros a letter dated Jan. 27, from which it appears that his action of the 25th was very well contested; that the loss of the Enemy, who were much superior in numbers, was 2000 men killed and wounded; and that the retreat of the Spanish detachment was made in good order.

By the last accounts from the frontiers of Beira, it appears that a part of Chparede's division of the 9th corps:was still upon Guarda on the 4th inst. with advanced guard upon Belmonte. This was the position he was ordered to take on the 5th of Jan. by Gen Drowet. referred to in my dispatch of the 19th alt. Gen. Foix arrived at Salamenca from Paris, with letters for Massena, on the 13th Jan; and I imagine that he yesterday reached the head-quarters of the army. He had with him an escort of between 2 and 3000 men. Col. Graht. who commands the Ordenanza in Lower Beira, had followed to the neighbourhood of Sobugal the detachment which escorted the couriers which marched from the Zezere on the 22d of Jan. and had taken much baggage from them, and several prisoners. On his return, he attacked Gen. Foix's escort with a fresh detachment of Ordenanza, at Engalerda, at the entrance of the Estrada

French soldier that has not much of what he has pillaged about him, and he is always a good prize for his captor. I have, &c. W. C. Bernestonn, Marshal.

Enraba du, entraire of the Fstrada Nova, Feb. 2.

Sin, Be pleased to state to his Exaellency the Commander in Chief, that yesterday, the 1st, a column of the Enemy under the command of Gen. Le Forx, consisting of 3000 cavalry and infantry from Cadad Roderigo, passed for the Estrada Nova to join Massena, .They slept on the 31st at Alcana near Fundao. On the 1st, with #0 of the Ordenanza from Alpedrudia, I took pgssession of a height near tins village, by which they must pass, a well-directed fire was kept up for two hours, and only terminated by the night, the result was 18 killed on the road, a very considerable tanither wounded, and ten prisoners, several of the wounded were found dead this morning, from the extreme inclemency of the weather; several cars with grain, and a considerable number of bullocks, were also taken; and, having sent parties to annoy their front and rear, I have reason to think they must suffer considerably

Godby, of the Prospero sleep, reporting the destruction of a Danish cutter privateer, of 2 guns and 25 men, on the 17th of last month, off Christiansand.

Docume-street, March 11. A dispatch, of which the following is an extract, was received yesterday at the Earl of Lacerpool's Office, addressed to his Lordship by Lleut-gen. Lord Viscount Wellington, K. B. dated Cartaso, Feb. 16.

Since I addressed your Lordship on the 9th instant, I have received further detruis of the analysis at and near Bad ye ; from which it appears that the Porteguese cavalry having been unsupports t in their passage of the Evert on the (th instent, were obliged to retire a rets the Evora, in which operation they sustained a are last. The whole of the cavalry and infantly were then drawn into the fort of Endagoz, and, on the 7th i.u.t. they made a sortic upon the Li enzy, in which they succeeded in obtaning possession of enc of the Fuerry's batteries, but they were obliged to retire again, and, unfortunately, the gars of the battery were not spiked, or otherwise destroyed or injured. Their loss was not less than 85 officers and 500 soldiers killed and wounded, I am informed, including the Brig. Gen. Don Carlos D'Espagne among the latter. It appears that the Spanish troops behaved remarkably well upon this occasion. While the troops were in Badajoz, the French cavalry again crossed the Evora, and interrupted the communication between that place and Elvas and Campo Major. They came out of Badajoz, however, on the morning of the 9th instant; and the French cavalry were obliged to retire across the Evora. The troops have since taken up a position on the heights between the Caya, the Evora, and the Guadiana, by which they will keep open the communication between Badajos and the Country on the right of the latter river. The Enemy have continued the siege; and, on the night of the 11th inst. they attacked the redoubt of Pardalleiros, which they carried; but they had not, on the 13th, been able to establish themselves within the redoubt on account of the fire from the body of the place. They have likewise constructed a work on the left bank of the Guadiana below the place, to fire upon the bridge of communication with the right bank, but the fire of this work had had but little effect. A great number of the inhabitants have taken advantage of the communication being opened, to leave the place; and I understand that it is not ill supplied with provisions. General Claparede's division of the 9th corps was still upon Guarda on the 10th inst. when I last heard from that part of the country.

Although I have observed and heard of various movements by the Enemy in the interior of their position, I have not found upon the whole any material alteration; and I imagine that these movements have been made principally to endeavour to obtain subsistence. The difficulty in finding any, increases daily; and the inhabitants of Torres Novas and Thomar, who alone had generally remained in their habitations upon the Enemy's invasion, are now coming into this part of the country nearly starving.

This dispatch concludes with stating a gallant atchievement of Ensign Strenuwitz, of the 1st Hussars, who in the night of the 9th, at the head of 20 men, approached the Enemy's centinels in front of Alcanhede, made them prisoners, then advancing with ten soldiers, attacked the cavalry picquet of 20 men, cut the greater part down, and subsequently charged the infantry picquet in the rear, killed ten, and made the remainder prisoners. A third picquet, of 50 infantry, fied precipitately, and Strenuwitz was thus enabled to rejoin his corps in safety, his prisoners exceeding his small party in numbers, none of which were either killed or wounded.]

The following is an Extract of a Dispatch received from Lord Wellington on the 11th instant, dated Cartaro, Feb. 23, 1811.

I am much concerned to have to inform you, that the French attacked Gen. Mendizabel on the 19th inst. in the position which he had taken on the heights of St. Christeval, near Badajos, and totally defeated him.

The Ecnemy had to cross the Guadiana and the Evora, but surprised the Spanish Army in their camp, which was standing and is taken, with baggage and artillery. The Enemy have not been able to establish themselves within the redoubt of Pardalleiros, since they carried it on the 11th inst; and have made no progress in the operations of the siege. Their position, however, on the right of the Guadiana, gives them great advantages, of which they will know how to avail themselves, and they actually commenced to entrench it on the evening of the day on which they ob tained possession of it. I am informed that there are 9000 good troops in Badajoz, some having retired into that fortress from the field of battle; and that the garrison is well supplied with provisions, which have been left there by the inhabitants, who quitted the place when the communication with it was recently opened. The works are still untouched, and the Enemy's fire has hitherto done but little damage to the town.

[The dispatch then proceeds to state, that Gen. Claparede's division belonging to the 9th corps, continued at Guarda; that its advanced guard, consisting of 2500 men, was detached to Belmonte; and marched from thence to attack, on the 12th, the town of Covilhao, but was repulsed by Col. Grant, at the head of the Portuguese, and 400 ordenanzas. The Guerrillas are also said to have been successful of late in their skirmishes, and to have intercepted several convoys of biscuit on its passage from Ladesma to Ciudad Roderigo.]

A letter from Sir. W. Erskine to Col. Murray, dated Mammelleira, Feb. 21, mentions another exploit performed by Ensign Strenuwitz, on the night of the 19th, by means of a patrole. This brave and enterprising officer allured two picquets of infantry and dragoons, about 40 men, with two officers, into an ambuscade, killed or made the infantry prisoners, and compelled the dragoons to fly. His party did not exceed 30 men, attack this very superior force. In order as well to explain to your Lordship the circumstances of peculiar disadvantage under which the action was begun, as to justify myself from the imputation of rashness in the attempt, I must state to your Lordship, that the albed Army, after a night-march of sixteen hours from the camp near Veger, arrived in the morning of the fifth, on the low ridge of Barross, about four miles to the Southward of the mouth of the Sauti Petri river. This height extends inland about a mile and a half, containing on the North the extensive heathy plain of Chiclana. A great pine-forest skirts the plain, and circles round the height at some distance, terminating down to Sauti Petri; the intermediate space between the North side of the height and the forest being uneven and broken. A wellconducted and successful attack on the rear of the Enemy's lines near Santi Petri, by the van-guard of the Spanish army under Brig.-Gen. Ladrizabel, having opened the communication with the Isla de Leon, I received Gen. la Pena's directions to move down from the position of Barrosa to that of the Torre de Bermesa, about half-way to the Santi GENT, MAG. March, 1811.

204

edge of the wood, within cannon-shot. A retreat in the face of such an Enemy, already within reach of the easy communication by the sea-beach, must have involved the whole allied army in all the danger of being attacked during the unavoidable confusion of the different corps arriving on the narrow ridge of Bermesa nearly at the same time. Trusting to the known heroism of British troops, regardless of the numbers and position of their Enemy, an immediate attack was Major Duncan soon determined on. opened a powerful battery of ten guns in the centre. Brig.-Gen. Dilkes, with the brigade of guards, Lieut.-Col Browne's (of the 28th) flank battahon, Lieut.-Col. Norcott's two companies of the 2d rifle corps, and Major Acheson, with a part of the 67th foot (separated from the regiment in the wood) formed on the right. Col. Wheatly's brigade, with three companies of the Coldstream Guards under Lieut.-Col. Jackson (separated likewise from his battalion in the wood), and Lieut.-Col. Barnard's flank battalion, formed on the left. As soon as the infantry was thus hastily got together, the guns advanced to a more favourable position, and kept up a most destructive

The right wing proceeded to the attack of Gen. Rufin's division on the hill, while Lieut.-Col. Barnard's battalion and Lieut.-Col. Bushe's detachment of the 20th Portuguese, were warmly engaged with the Enemy's tirailleurs on our left. Gen. Laval's division, notwithstanding the havock made by Major Duncan's battery, continued to advance in very imposing masses, opening his fire of musquetry, and was only checked by that of the left wing. The left wing now advanced, firing; a most determined charge by the three companies of guards, and the 87th regiment, supported by all the remainder of the wing, decided the defeat of Gen. Laval's division. The Eagle of the 8th regiment of light infantry, which suffered immensely, and a howitzer, rewarded this charge, and remained in possession of Major Gough, of the 87th regiment. These attacks were zealously supported by Col. Belson with the 28th regiment, and Lieut.-Col. Prevost with a part of the 67th. A reserve formed beyond the narrow valley, across which the Enemy was closely pursued, next shared the same fate, and was routed by the same means. Meanwhile the right wing was not less successful: the Enemy, confident of success, met Gen. Dilkes on the ascent of the hill, and the contest was sanguinary; but the undaunted perseverance of the brigade of guards, of Licut.-Col. Browne's battalion, and of Lieut.-Col. Norcott's and Major Acheson's detachment, overcame every obstacle, and Gen. Rufin's division was driven from the heights in confusion, leaving two pieces of cannon. No expressions of mine could do justice to the conduct of the troops throughout. Nothing less than the almost unparalleled exertions of every officer, the invincible bravery of every soldier, and the most determined devotion to the honour of His Majesty's arms in all, could have achieved this brilliant success, against such a formidable enemy, so posted. In less than an hour and a half from the commencement of the action, the Enemy was in full retreat. The retiring divisions met, halted, and scemed inclined to form: a new and more advanced position of our artillery quickly dispersed them. The exhausted state of the troops made pursuit impossible. A position was taken on the Eastern side of the hill; and we were strengthened on our right by the return of the two Spanish battalions that had been attached before to my division, but which I had left on the hill, and which had been ordered to retire. These battalions (Walloon guards and Ciudad Real) made every effort to come back in time, when it was known that we were engaged. I understand, too, from Gen. Whittingham, that with three squadrons of cavalry he kept in check a corps of infantry and cavalry that attempted to turn the Barrosa height by the sea. One squadron of the 2d hussars, King's German Legion, under Capt. Busche, and directed by Lieut.-Col. Ponsonby, (both had been attached to the Spanish cavalry) joined in time to make a brilliant and most successful charge against a squadron of French dragoons, which was entirely routed. An eagle, six pieces of cannon, the General of Division Rufin, and the General of Brigade Rosseau, wounded and taken; the Chief of the Staff, General Bellegrade, an Aide-de-Camp of Marshal Victor, and the Colonel of the 8th regiment, with many other officers, killed, and several wounded and taken prisoners; the field covered with the dead bodies and arms of the Enemy, attest that my confidence in this division was nobly repaid. Where all have so distinguished themselves, it is scarcely possible to discriminate any as the most deserving of praise. Your Lordship will, however, observe how gloriously the brigade of guards, under Brig.-Gen. Dilkes, with the commanders of the battalions, Lieut-Col the Hon. C. Onslow, and Lieut.-Col. Sebright wounded, as well as the three separated companies under Lieut.-Col. Jackson, maintained the high character of his Majesty's household troops. Lieut.-Col. Browne, with his flank battalion, Lieut-Col. Norcott, and Major Acheson, deserve equal praise. And I must equally recommend to your Lordship's notice Col. Wheatly, with Col. Belson, Lieut. Col. Prevost, and Major Gough, and the officers of the respective corps compesing his brigade. The animated charge of the 87th regiment were most comspicuous; Licut.-Colonel Barnard (twice wounded), and the officers of his make battalion, executed the duty of skirmich. ing in advance with the Enemyin a masterly manner, and were ably seconded by Lieut.-Col. Bushe, of the 20th Portsguese, who (likewise twice wounded) fell into the Enemy's hands, but was afterwards rescued. The detachment of this Portuguese regiment beliaved admirably throughout the whole affair. I owe too much to Major Duncan, and the officers and corps of the royal artillery, not to mention them in terms of the highest approbation; never was artillery better served. The assistance I received from the unwearied exertions of Lieut. Col. Macdonald, and the officers of the Adjutant-General's department, of Lieut.

Hope, (to whom I refer your Lordship for further details) will be promoted, on being permitted to lay the Eagle at His Majesty's feet.

Thomas Graham, Lieut.-Gen.

P.S. I beg leave to add, that two Spanish officers, Captains Miranda and Naughton, attached to my staff, behaved with the utmost intrepidity T. G.

My Lord, Ista de Leon, March 10. I have the honour to transmit to your Lordship the return of the killed and wounded in the action of the 5th mist. and I have the satisfaction to add that the wounded in general are doing well, By the best account that can be collected from the wounded French officers, the Enemy had about eight thousand men engaged. Their loss, by reports from Chiclana, in killed, wounded, and prisoners, is supposed to amount to three thousand; I have no doubt of its being very great. I transmit, too, a return of the ordnance in our possession, and also the most accurate note that can be obtained of prisoners, most of whom are wounded. They are so dis-persed in different hospitals, that an exact return has not yet been obtained.

THOMAS GRAHAM, LIEUT.-Gen.

Rank and Names of Officers Killed and worded.

Killed. -Staff, Energy Eyre, 1st Guards, acking Aide-de-camp to Colont! Wheat-lev 1st Reg. of Guards, Energy Commercil. Coldstream Guards, Energy Watts. 3d Guards, Capt Swann. 47th, 2d Bat. Energy Delacherous 67th, 2d Bat. Energy E. E. Kough. 95th, 3d Bat. Capt. Kmpe.

Severely Wounded.—2d Hussars, King's German Legion, Capt. Voss (since d. ad.) Royal Artillery, Lucots Martiand and Pester 1st Guards, Lieut.-col Schright, Capts, Stanies and Colquitt, Eusigns Sir H. Lambert, Cameron, and Vigors. 3d Guards, Lieut-col. Hepburn. 1st Bat. 9th Foot, Capt. Godwin, and Leut. Seward. 1st Bat. 28th Foot, Hon. vapt. Mullins, Lieuts. Wilkins at, Moore, and John Anderson. 2d Bat, 82d och, Lieut. M'Koy. 3d Bat. S th floot, Lieut.-col. Barnard, Livet W. Compbell. 2d Bat 67th Foot, Capt. Patri kson, Ensign Sutherland. 2 : Dr. 5/th Foot, Major Maclaine, Capt. Somerrait, Lacuts, J. G. Fennell, and J. C. Sarton. 2d Bat. 95th Foot, Licuts. Cocnrane and Hope.

Dangerously

Dangerously Wounded.—Royal Artillery, Lieut. Woolcombe (since dead.) 1st Bat. 9th Foot, Lieut. Taylor. 1st Bat. 28th Foot, Lieuts. Knight and Bennett, (since dead.) 20th Portuguese, Lieut.-col. Bushe.

Slightly Wounded.—2d Hussars, King's German Legion, Lieut. Bock. Royal Artillery, Capts. Hughes and Cator, Lieuts. E. Mitchell, Brereton, and C. Manners. 1st Guards, Capt. Adair, Ensign Fielde. Coldstream Guards, Ensigns Bentinck and Talbot. 3d Guards, Ensign and Adjutant Watson. lst Bat. 9th Foot, Lieut. Robinson. 1st Bat. 28th Foot, Capt. Bradbey, Lieut. Blakeney. 2d Bat. 82d Foot, Capt. Stewart. 3d Bat. 95th Foot, Lieut. Hovenden. 2d Bat. 47th Foot, Capt. Fetherstone. 2d Bat. 67th Foot, Lieut.-col. Prevost, Lieut. W. Ronald. 20th Portuguese, Capt. Barrieras, Lieuts. Dom. Estavan, Pantalchao de Oliviero, Ensign Felix Antonio Miranda. Staff, Capt. D. Mercer, 3d regiment of Guards, Aide-de-Camp to Brig.-gen. Dilkes.

John Macdonald, Lieut,-col. D. A. G.

Supplement to the London Gazette Extraordinary.

Admiralty-office, March 25. Capt. Carrol arrived at this Office last night with the following dispatches from Sir R. G. Keats, K. B. Rear-Admiral of the Red, addressed to Admiral Sir Charles Cotton, Bart.

Sir, Milford, Bay of Cadiz, Feb. 20.

An Expedition having been determined upon by the Spanish Government, to which Lieut.-Gen. Graham has consented to give his personal assistance, together with that of a considerable portion of the troops under his command, I have felt it my duty, after fully stating in Council the uncertainty and risk to which, at this season of the year, all measures connected with naval operations on the coast are subject, to lend the expedition all the aid and assistance in my power; and a body of troops, exeeeding three thousand, including cavalry, various military stores, and provisions, are at present embarked either in his Majesty's ships named in the margin *, in such transports as I could avail myself of, or in Spanish men of war, and small transports of our ally; and the whole, together with a numerous fleet of Spanish transports, in which a body of seven thousand troops of that nation. are embarked, are waiting in this bay a favourable opportunity to proceed into the Straits, with a view to force a landing between Cape Trafalgar and Cape de Plata, at Tariffa, or at Algestone, in failure of the two former places: • La Pena is the Commander-in-Chief. of. this expedition; and as the edject is to unite the Spanish forces at Saint Ruche with the troops sent from hence, with a... view to make a combined attack on the rear of the Enemy's line before Culi at the same time some demonstrations, and an attempt to open a community tion with our troops, are to the same from this quarter, which is thought to . require my particular attention : I have therefore placed the execution; of the British naval part of the expedition under the able command of Captain Brace. of the Saint Alban's. R. G. KERTE.

Sir, Milford, Bay of Ondia, Feb. 39. I have the honour, in farther reference. to my letter, No. 20, of the 20th instant, to inform you, that it being determined to let the troops of the expedition proceed by the earliest opportunity; and it being conceived, from the appearance of the weather, that the Spanish wast. would be able to get out on the alternation noon and night of the 21st, the British ... naval part, under Capt. Brace, put to men. ... accordingly, and with the exception at one transport, got into the Straits, but, it being impracticable to make a landing either in the vicinity of Cape Tranfalgar or Tariffa, Captain Brace personis ceeded to Algesiras, where General Green ham and the troops were landed ender marched to Tariffa, to which place (the roads being impracticable for carriages). the artillery, provisions, stores, &c. ewing, as the General is pleased to express; to the extraordinary exertions of the Navy, were conveyed in boats, netwith... standing the unfavourable state of winds. and weather. The Spanish part of the : expedition, though it twice attempted;: to get out, was driven back to this hage... and it was the 27th, before it was emerge R. G. KEATS. abled to reach Tariffa.

Milford, Bay of Cadiz, March Y. I have the honour to inform you, that the combined English and Spanish army, under their respective commanders. Gen. La Pena and Lieut.-Gen. Graham moved from Tariffa on the 28th ultime towards Barbate, attended by such naval means as circumstances of weather would permit. Preparations were made by me and our ally, and acted upon, to menace the Trocadero and other points, in order, as the army advanced, to favour its onerations; and arrangements were -made for a landing, and real or feigned attacks. as circumstances might determine; and to this end the regiment of Tolodo was embarked on board his Majesty's chips in the Bay. On the 1st inst. Gen. Zayas pushed

^{*} St. Alban's, Druid, Comus, Sabine, 'Tuscan, Ephira, Steady, and Rebuff,

ther was of too threatening a cast to venture a landing; and which, as the army was engaged by noon, according to the telegraph, would not have fayoured its operations. Under such circumstances our measures were necesparily confined to feints, whilst that of the British troops, led by their gallant and able Commander, forgetting on the sight of the Enemy their own fatigue and privations, and regardless of advantage in the numbers and situation of the Enemy, gained, by its determined valour, (though not without considerable loss,) a victory uneclipsed by any of the brave achievements of the British armies. R. G. KEATS.

Sir, Milford, Bay of Cadiz, March 7. I have the honour to inform you, that the wind having come off the land, and the sea much abated, two landings were effected by way of diversion, yesterday morning, between Rota and Catalina, and between that and Santa Maria's, with the Royal Marines, commanded by Captain English of the Implacable, two hundred seamen of the squadron, and eighty of the Spanish Marine, one division of which was under the direction of taken in the Redoubt that was stormed, the rest making their escape. Lieut. W.F. Carrol, whose conduct on all occasions has been conspicuous, having had his gun-boat sunk before Catalina, and thereby sustained a considerable loss, I have given him six weeks leave of absence, and with it duplicates of my dispatches.

R. G. Keats. Return of the Killed and Hounded in an Attock on Santa Maria's, March 6. Milford.—Samuel Allen, seaman, killed ; Wilham Spillar, marine, ditto ; John Bayly, Lieutenant of marines, wounded: William Nash, Serjeant of marines, dangerously wounded (since dead); James Darby, private marine, mortally wounded (since dead); Joseph Peters, private marme, wounded; James Gill, private marine, ditto; William Billings, private marine, ditto. Alfred. John Ingleby, corporal of marines, wounded. St. Albans. John Johnson, seaman, killed; Peter Dass, seaman, wounded; William Baldwin, seaman, ditto. San Juan. John Cato, seaman, wounded. Hound. John Allen, ordinary seaman, wounded; William M'Donald, able seaman, ditto. Diadem Transport. George Garbutt, seaman, wounded .- Total -3 killed, 13 wounded. R. G. KEATS.

Abstract

ABSTRACT OF FOREIGN

FRANCE.

The Empress was safely delivered of a son, on the 20th last.

The Moniteur of the 26th uit. contains, in a series of notes, a long and temperate discussion of the principal pasauges of the Speech delivered to both Houses of Parliament on the 12th ult. in the Prince Regent's name. It commences by noticing the captures of Martinique, Guadaloupe, and the Isles of Bourbon and France, which are stated to have been garrisoned by not more than 2000 men, and the loss of which is asserted to be an advantage, as they furnished nothing to the parent state, and cost it more than twenty millions a year. This sum, it is computed, would build 10 ships of the line; which, at the end of the five or six years that the war may last, would produce 50 ships of the line. The produce of the above Islands are represented as a drug to us; and their garrisons, by dividing our military force, as tending to make us vulnerable in a reat number of points. In respect to Sicily, it is denied, absurdly enough, after what has been stated, that any attempt to invade that Island was ever made. The policy, the present state, and the probable issue of the Expedition to Portugal, are next discussed; and it is maintained that we shall never be able to support a contest with France in that country. The remarks on our Orders in Council, which close the series, are as follows: "The English Government can have no credit when that of its trade It feels every private bankdeclines. ruptcy. The French Government, on the contrary, has a credit independent of that of bankers or merchants. Nine hundred millions of revenue, collected in specie, constitute the proper revenue of the Empire, represent the riches of its soil, and are more than sufficient for all its expences; while 17 or 1800 milllons, necessary for the expences of England, can only be collected through the medium of a paper circulation, which, supporting itself by that immense currency, through Amsterdam and Hamburgh, embraced the whole Continent of Europe; while these 17 or 1800 millions are not the consequences of the riches of the soil, or the revenues of the Country, but of industry and of a system of credit, which is not sufficient to provide for the wants that it has to satisfy, the moment it is prevented from extending to the Continent. The French Exchange for the last four years has been constantly improving, and that in all the Commercial Towns

οf thæ la e thre 40.1 plot ₿да of t ven 93d Por gali pon WOI bet SOB and pei āani αť and TEN poq

M. Labouchere, a menchant of șterdam, has obtained a pași to London, on the business of his t A report was circulated in a that proposals of Peace winemade to England. We are on to contradict these rame have been no communications the two Governments; nor be any so long as the present I Administration exists, wh those of perpetual war, are all Europe. The journey of chere relates entirely to his concerns: It can have no a ever upon commercial affairs. March 7.

A private letter from France mentions that the Sulpicians, letterly the helicipals of orthodoxy and discipling in that Country, have been suppressed in that seven hundred Priesse, taken in the different parts of Spain, have been menished to the mountains in Valeic, with an allowance of only three sole per day for their support. The Cardinals, matives of the Ecclesiastical States, are imprisoned, and not permissed to appear in any part of their costsume dasse, for refusing to swear allegiance to Bunnaparte as their sightful asversign.

Buonaparte has decreed, that the knowledge of the dead languages is not necessary for holding any public altantion, or taking any degree, in the Notional Institutions of France. All public proceedings are to be conducted, and registered in the France language, and conchire) no longer shines with splendour, and the sounds of the lute and harp have given way to the clangor of the watchmen's rattles, as alarms to the affrighted house-keeper to guard his property against the nocturnal acts of masqued depredators. All dramatic and harmonic taste is fied:—The only remaining Theatre Royal being deserted, is turned into a Maison de Cheval (Ruding-House), and Mesdames Bristington (Billington and Catalams, sing now at the Sadler's Wells, the chief resort of entertainment for sailors, and the common handy-craftsmen of the day!"

the

HOLLAND.

The suspicious tyranny of the Police in Holland may now vie with that of France. At Amsterdam, the "City of Brussels," and two other Inns, have been shut up, as a punishment to the owners for not having given an exact description of the persons of their nimates.

Monthret, the principal Director of the Douaniers in Holland, has fleeced the inhabitants in the following manner: He wrote to 150 bouse-keepers, offering of the French, to rally the troops under his command, and induce them to face the enemy again; but in vain. A Colonel of the 5th Spanish Regiment, and four officers, were arrested at Elva. Col. Brown, in the Portuguese service, was wounded in this affair. Accounts have been received from Figueira, stating the arrival of Col. Trant with 11,000 men at Colmbra.

An establishment is said to be now forming in Majorea, for the purpose of training the Spaniards under British Officers; a measure rendered necessary, as in several late engagements the Spanish Officers have been the first to set the example of flight to their trooper Arms, accountements, and clothing are preparing in England for the equipment of 30,000 men in Majorea, all Spaniards, who are to be sent into Spain, 10,000 at a time, when they are perfect in the use of arms, and the necessary manœuvres.

On the 5th met an attack was made by General Graham, with the division under his command, upon the army under Marshal Victor, before Cadiz, composed of the two divisions of Rufin and Laval. The contest was severe, and its result, we are rejoiced to state, most brilliant and victorious on our part. Marshal Victor's force consisted of 8000 men, that of General Graham, 5000 British and Spanish troops. The loss of the Enemy was very considerable; the field was covered with their slain, and not less than three thousand men are supposed to have fallen. Besides which, we took prisoners Generals Rufin, Rosseau, and Bellegrade, the former of whom was wounded, and the second has since died, and about 420 rank and file; together with an Eagle and six pieces of cannon. The loss on the side of the allies consisted of 1243 killed and wounded; but most of the latter were expected shortly to recover. Graham's dispatches will be found in p. 273, as published in an Extraordinary Gazette.

composed

A Supplement to the Extraordinary Gazette (see p. 276) contains dispatches from Sir Richard Keats. When the Expedition against the rear of the French was planned, an arrangement for an attack on the French batteries in Cadiz Bay, for the purpose of operating a diversion, was made. This attack, on account of the unfavourable weather, could not be executed until the 6th inst. the day after General Graham's action, when it was carried into effect, with all the bravery and coolness of British seamen. All the batteries on the East side of the Bay, from Rota to St. Mary's, with the exception of Fort Catalina, were carried by storm, the guns spiked, and the works destroyed. Our loss on this oceasion was insignificant.

An intercepted letter from Junot's wife, who was lately brought to bed at Ciudad Rodrigo, after announcing to her husband the birth of a son, descants at length upon the poverty and misery to which the inhabitants were reduced in Spain; and represents provisions to be so scarce and dear in most of the Districts, as nearly to amount to a famine. An extract of the letter, referring to family and domestic matters, at Lisbon for medical advice.

Accounts have been brought by the Ganges, of Massena having retreated from Santarem, and being closely followed. The French army, it appears, broke up on the 4th inst. Massena is said to have employed one of the ordinary ruses de guerre to conceal his retreat; but the stratagem was soon discovered, and he was vigorously pursued. The eapture of a considerable convoy of provisions is assigned as the ostensible cause of Massena's retreat, which is said to be in the direction of Spain.

GERMANY.

Letters from Hamburgh, of the 17th ult. state, that the French Governor, Davoust, had arrived there, and that one of his first acts of authority had been to dissolve the Senate. The Hamburgh Letters assert, that a Decree has been issued by Buonaparte for uniting' the Duchy of Oldenburgh with the French Empire; and that the Duke and his family had in consequence repaired to St. Petersburg, to lay the proceedings already had before his brother-in-law, the Emperor Alexander.

Accounts of a late date from Hamburgh mention, that an interview was expected to take place at Koningsberg, at the latter end of February or the beginning of March, between the Emperor Alexander and the King of Prussia. The avowed object of the meeting is a marriage of the latter with one of the Arch-Duchesses; we believe the same Princess whose hand was solicited by Buonaparte. Although we have no great confidence in the sincerity of these Regal alliances, yet we are not sorry to see his Prussian Majesty form a connexion which may secure to him a future asylum.

A Shepherd, of the village of Kappel, near Klangenfurt, Carinthia, found 'accidentally, during the last Autumn, a vein of quicksilver: this discovery will in part compensate to the Austrian Monarchy for the cession of Taria; there has likewise been discovered in Transylvania, a mine of quicksilver, which produces annually 700 quintals of this mineral!

An extraordinary Decree has been issued by Buonaparte, which sufficiently denotes the suspicious nature of the Tyrant. Other Sovereigns are usually desirous of promoting a communication between all parts of their territories; Buonaparte, on the contrary, dreads the least interchange of sentiment between those whom he oppresses, and adopts the most rigorous and tyrannical means to prevent it. His new Decree forbids the Postmasters, Booksellers, and others, was forwarded to Junot, who continues to circulate in the departments of Holland and those of the Eins, any Newspapers, Periodical Journals, or Musical Works, printed in the department of the Mouths of the Rhine; and also interdicts the introduction of similar works. printed in the two first-named territories into any part of the latter department.

Hamburgh Letters of the 9th inst. state, that notice has been given in the Hanseatic Towns, that no passports will henceforth be granted to persons wishing to quit the country for Prussia or lege of War. He has retired into Finland.

Russia

Accounts from Sweden say, that an attempt had been made upon the life of Bernadotte, and that he had a very narrow escape. It is added, that nothing can exceed the detestation in which be is held in Sweden; and his profession of a disposition to support the independence of that country against France is universally considered as nothing but a deep scheme between him and the Tyrant of Europe. The Letters notice the recent arrival of several Couriers at Stockholm, with Dispatches from Paris, which were said to be of such a nature as to leave the Sovereign no option between complying with their contents, or drawing down upon himself the immediate hostility of the French Emperor.

RUSSIA.

The letters from the North of Germany for some weeks have announced the total decline of the influence of Caulincourt, the French Minister at the Court of St. Petersburg. Whether this disfavour arose from the insolent and overbearing demeanour of this ruffian, we know not; but the fact of his recall Esset. Mag. March, 1811.

quitted by a majority of perhaps one. In a late discussion in Congress on the policy of admitting New Orleans into the Union, the Speaker (on being appealed to) declared three members, at separate times, to be out of order. They required the sense of the House to be taken, and the judgment of the Speaker was found to be erroneous. The last Member, in resuming his speech, said, that though he had too much generosity to trample upon a fallen Enemy, yet that the Chairman, if he presumed to censure him again, must not reckon upon his forbearance! These words excited a slight murmur, but passed without any comment,

A company of Gentlemen and Book-sellers have been incorporated at New Jersey (United States), under the trile of the Franklin Society, with a capital of 750,000 dollars, and the liberty of importing and printing books, and establishing a paper manufactory and type-foundery.

Plaster of Paris is used with success upon the poor soil in Maryland. It cements and prevents it from being blown or washed away in violent winds or rains.
It likewise attracts mossure from the atmosphere.

11 atmosphere, and is therefore very beneficial in hot and dry summers. The Americans use from one to three bushels on a statute acre, scattering it like corn, generally upon hilly land.

The Bahama islands experienced in the month of November, some of the severest gales of wind ever known to have prevailed in that quarter-200 vessels were lost, many souls perished, and incalculable damage was sustained by the planters.

A chain bridge has been cast over the river Merrimack, three miles above Newbury port, in the state of Massachusetts. It consists of a single arch of 244 feet. in length. The abutusents are of stone, 47 feet long and 37 high; the uprights, or framed work which stands on the abutments, are 35 feet high, over which are suspended ten distinct chains, the ends of which, on both sides of the river, are buried in deep pits, and se-cured by large stones: each chain is 516 feet long, and where they pass over the uprights, and where the greatest strain rests, they are treble, and made in short links. The four middle joiets rest on the chains; all the rest are suspended to the main chains, to equalise the floor. This bridge has two passageways, of 15 feet in width each, and the floor is so solid as to admit of horses, earriages, &c. travelling at any speed, with very little perceptible motion of the floors.

ASIA.

Gen. Malcolm was to return to India Brom Persia in Nov. last. The Persian King, at his audience of leave, conferred on him a new Order, the insignia of which is a start having in the centre of It alion and the sun. At the same time, a firman was made out, appointing him a Khan.

The Madras Papers state the loss of the country-ship Charles, Captain Dennison, with a cargo of fine Arab horses, treasure to the amount of three lacs of rupees, and a quantity of salt. The ship having sprung a leak, the sait unfortunately cheaked the pumpe, and the wa-ter gaining upon them, the vessel went down with 41 Lescars and Mr. Askwith, the chief efficer, who were all drowned.

A ship arrived a few days since from Abyssinia, which brought some acceptable particulars of the result of the yes age as far as related to the political object with which it was undertaken. King of that country received Mr. Salt, the British agent, (who accompanied Lord Valentia in his travels,) with perticular distinction, and the Battor" ; position in the pertender on wheat the ous French itinerants; but the English prevailed, and for the first time in the remote Christian country, prayers a offered up for the life of George t Third, on the Sabbath-day, in the ti service with those for the native a reign. Mr. Pearce, an associate of I Salt, who was left at Masswith to h the language of the country, was feet by him in perfect health. Mr. Sait w introduced to the King of Abyndele : bls capital, Antalow: and an opmade for commercial intercourse.

Ireland.

Pel. 10. The Har Plymouth, bound t foundered off Corl rished, including a Artillery drivers, They reached with Tagus, when a dre to the mercy of whi several days, and to the coast of Irelians.

At the late Assizes for the County of Meath, held at Trim, Roger O'County who now occupies the paternal stat at estate of Marquis Wellesley, in the county, was convicted of an assault deil Ogle, Esq. There was nothing political says a Dublin paper, in the business; a curious altercation took place betw Lord Norbury, the Judge who preside and Mr. O'Connor.

COUNTRY NEWS.

Feb. 1. A during robbery was on mitted a few nights since, by some wi lains who formed a raft, and crossed this moat which surrounds Leeds Castle, 😃 seat of Gen. Martin : procuring the bon they rowed round, and getting in at t window of the kitchen, proceeded to t butler's pantry, whence they took i quantity of plate.

Feb. 4. The boiler of the steam-on at Providence Mill, Shipley, near Di ford, burst this day, at the mo when the work-people were about to renew their labours after didners explosion was tremendous; the buller was carried seat against considerable lamentable, mear the spot that four of and the fifth mily at Stratford. Mr. Flight was an eminent miller and mealman of that place; and nearly a month ago he spent his evening at the sign of the Harrow, which house he left late in the night, and is supposed to have fallen into the river.

March 9. Twelve of the felon prisoners, confined in the borough good in Liverpool, lately effected their escape by knocking down the turnkey when he came to lock them up for the night. One of them stood over him with a pistol, till the rest escaped, and he thin followed.

March 19. This night some boys set fire to the furze bushes near Pound Farm, Ditton March, which so alarmed the mistress of the farm, that in going down stairs to call her daughter, one fell, dislocated her neck, broke her leg, and expired before surgical aid could arrive.

March 13. A barn and several outhouses, at Monk's Hall, near Kesmick, were entirely destroyed by fire last week, together with a quantity of timber, 700 bushels of com, &c.

March 17. A fire broke out at Norwich, about one o'clock this morning, in the warehouses of Messrs. Calley, grocers, which, with a quantity of stock, was not long before the neighbourhood and many friends of the parties were upon the alert, and several engines soon arrived, together with detachments of the Militia regiments and Volunteers and their exertions were so speedy, judicrous, and efficacious, that we are happy to add, though several times the skirts and roofing of the distillery were on fire, the flames were at length subdued with the loss of only the outhouses, countinghouse, piggery, &c. Owing to the firmness of some gentlemen who were present, not a single gallon of the immense quantity of spirits that were in the storehouses was, we believe, broke into; and the damage sustained is really trivial in comparison of what seemed mevitable when the fire first broke out. Two of the firemen received much injury, and were conveyed to the lufirmary. The premises were maured.

March 26. The election for Chancellor of the University of Cambridge, in the room of the Duke of Grafton, deceased, closed the day; when the numbers were for the Duke of Gloucester, 476; the Duke of Rutland, 356. The former was of course declared duly elected.

of course declared duly elected.

Horsham, March 26 The Rev. Robert Bingham was arraigned on a charge of sending

sending a letter without a signature, threatening to burn the houses, barns, &c. of Richard Jenner. The case for the prosecution being closed, Mr. Bingham read a written defence, in which he very feelingly commented on his unhappy situation, and argued, on the improbability of his writing a threatening letter to his friend without any motive. Lord Sheffield, Mr. Archdeacon Doyley, I. M. Cripps, esq. Rev. Mr. Turner, Rev. Mr. Bradford, Mr. Claude Matte, of Trant, and the Rev. Sackville Bayle, all spoke of the prisoner in terms of the highest praise, both as a Gentleman and a Clergyman. The Lord Chief Baron then summed up the evidence with great minuteness, and impressed the Jury strongly with the necessity of their being perfactly satisfied, as there was no motive, in evidence which could induce the prisoner to send this letter. The Jury, after considerable deliberation, found the prisoner Not Guilty.—Immediately afterwards the same prisoner was indicted for setting fire to his house, with a view to defraud its owner the Rev. Mr. Rivett, his rector, and the Union Fire Office, in which he had insured furniture, &c. to the amount of 500%. The evidence on this trial was long and complicated. It was proved by the prisoner's brothers, the Rev. Richard Bingham, Incumbent of Gosport Chapel, and Magistrate for the county of Hants, and Captain Joseph Bingham, R. N. that the prisoner's books and furniture were worth from 9001. to 10001. and that he was in far from distressed circumstances. The prisoner on this occasion also read a written defence, and the learned Chief Baron recapitulated and commented on the whole of the cyidenee, adopting the prisoner's expression, that he must have been mad to have committed the crime of which he was charged, if the testimony of his Hon. Brothers were to be at all gredited. The Jury found the prisoner -Not Guilty. The trial of these indictments lasted from 8 o'clock in the morning till nearly 9 at night.

March 27. As a gardener and another man were going in a cart from Old Bridge to Blandford, it is supposed they both fell asleep; and in passing Kingston-bridge, the cart was thrown into the river, and the gardener drowned.

A peacock, belonging to Mr. Henwood, of Carlinham, near Bodmin, was lately attacked by a ferocious hog, and torn to pieces. The venerable bird was 90 years old.

Winchester Palace.—This noble pile, which was erected by King Charles the Second, from a design of Sir Christopher Wren, was used in the American war, as a French, Dutch, and Spanish prison. afterwards formed the reception of French emigrants, and till of late served as military quarters, until from dilepidations, the too great height and also of some of the rooms, and other camees, it was condemned as such. It is now withverted into a permanent barrack for the reception of 1,800 infantry, in editiontable lofty rooms, to contain 13 men each. with some convenient bedsteads (so constructed as when turned up to affect a good seat), large stove-grates, tables, forms, arm-racks, shelves, cleasts, &c.: &c. for the comfort of the soldiers; and excellently ventilated, by means of a simple tube perferated with holes p and what is particularly convenient, in had weather the whole of the troops was be paraded with case under cover, in the different extensive galleries, The wings are fitted up in a very superior manner for the Officers. The extent of the building from East to West in 216 feet, from North to South 328 feet.

> 113 July 274 Domestic Occurrences: Friday, Feb. 8.

· The Printing-office of Mr. Barnard, in Skinner-street, was, early this: evenling, burnt. The fire broke out in the pressroom, where a number of specia were hanging, and the flames spread with such rapidity as scarcely to afficial time for the inmates to escape. The Butbutcher and Gunsmith's houses, addinging, were partially injured.

Sunday, Feb. 10. A dreadful fire broke out this meening at some oil and colour warehouses near Limehouse-Hole Stairs, by which four warehouses and 12 dwelling-houses were destroyed. The damage is estimated at upwards of 60,000%

Wednesday, Feb. 20. At a General Court of the Governors of Saint Luke's Hospital, held this day, Charles Shaw Lefevre, Esq. M. Principe Chair, the Secretary read the following

" Poland-street, Feb. 20, 1013. " Sir-After having had the honeur to officiate during thirty years as Phy of St. Luke's Hospital, I flatter myself I shall not be suspected by the Governors of any diminution of seal to serve them and the Publick, if feeling, as I do, that my age and state of health require source relaxation from professional avocations! than I deem compatible with the duties of my office, I abould be desirous to relinquish it.—I consider it as a mose. respectful and suitable return to the Governors for the confidence they have, during so long a period, been ple taxont the Aith' as Aeff at mose present the tenderness and humanity which he has always mainfested towards them, as well in the various periods of their disorder, as in their progress towards recovery—for the prompt and essential assistance which he has, on all occasions, afforded to the Governors of this Institution—and for his kindness and urbanity to every person connected with its establishment.

"Resolved unanimously, That the thanks of this Court be given to Dr. Richard Simmons, Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, for the able, beneficial, and gratuitous assistance which he has afforded to the Hospital in aid of his father, our late much-valued and respected Physician.

John Webster, Sec."

Friday, Feb. 22.

J. F. Cordosa, and L. Jolta, natives of Portugal, were inducted at the Old Bailey, under Lord Ellenborough's Act, for stabbing J Starling, on the 23d Dec. last, at a public-house in Shadwell. According to the evidence, the only offence which Starling gave, was his attempting to sit down in a box occupied by the Prisoners and two females, on being pushed away, he retired with his two companions, without saying a word, to another part of the room; and afterwards, when leaving the public-and Lords Dundas and Keith, had the honour of presenting the individuals of this distinguished assembly. His Royal Highness appeared in good health and spirits, and received his visitors with the utmost affability. The Royal Dukes, with a select party of Nobility and Gentry, afterwards died with his Royal Highness."

Monday, March 18. The meeting of the Electors of Westminster in Palace Yard, was very numerously attended. Major Cartwright stated the objects of the meeting; and observed. that though it was necessary they should address the Prince Regent, their only topics of congratulation must be, that access was again open from petitioners to the Throne, and that they had to address a Prince whom they hoped and believed to be favourable to a redress of the grievances of the people. He concluded by stating the substance of the Address, and moving some Resolutions, -- Mr. Walher, in an eloquent speech, seconded the Resolutions .- Mr. Mallet then read the Address in an impressive manner; and Mr. Wishart moved a resolution of thanks to Sir Francis Burdett; who thanked them for their approbation of his conduct.

The amiversary of St, Patrick was colebrated this day, at the London Tavers. Mr. Sheridan's compliment to Commodore Rowley was happy; he said that the thunder of a British scaman did not lie in his tongue—he dealt not in words, but in deeds. Mr.Grattan, sen. was absent through indisposition. The collection at the tables amounted to 14564.

Tuesday, March 19.

A rise of ten per cent. in the current value of the stamped dollars in circulation, took place this day. The increase in the price of silver has become so great, that the dollars or tokens issued by the Bank, sell for more as builton than they are current at as coin. The Directors of the Bank of England therefore gave notice that they would in future receive in payment all Bank dollar tokens at the pate of five shillings and six-pence each; and that all such tokens would henceforth be issued at the same increased rate.

Wednesday, March 27.

A Coroner's Inquest was held at St. Bartholomew's Hospital on the body of Cornelius Leonard, who died in consequence of being run over by a cart, on March 25, in Upper Thames-street. Verdict, Acceidental Denth.—The deceased was a labourer in the employ of Mr. Eames, bricklayer, on College-hill; and had, by his industry, accumulated upwards of 30%, which he had hid in the area of a house belonging to his master at Stoke-Newington, the secret of which he carefully kept till the moment proceding his death, and which was afterwards found according to his directions.

Thursday, Morch 28.

The Report of the Select Committee on the State of Commercial Credit has been printed. We have only room to state its principal heads:—The Committee find, that the statements of the Cotton Manufacturers in Glasgow and Paisley, complaining of distress, are founded in fact.—That the principal part of this distress had arisen from excessive speculation at the opening of the South American markets.—That there was no want of disposition in the Scotch Banks to afford accommodation.—That great distress was also felt among the imporcers of produce from the West-Indies and South America, the returns from the former of which came home, in great part, in sugars and coffee, not immediately convertible into money .- The great extent to which the system of warehousang the goods of foreigners had arisen, is also assigned by the Committee as another cause of the distress. To relieve this, the Committee recommend an issue of Exchequer Bills, as in 1793; the amount not to exceed six millions, and to be repaid in four instalments—the first in January next, and the rest at three, six, and sine months.

A new Dock has intely been opened at. Botherhithe, near the King's Victualling-office, called the East Country Dock, capable of holding about 80 ships, intended for those from America, the Baltic, the Fisheries, and others containing naval stores.

The seven General Officers who served under Lord Wallington at the bettle of Visceira, have presented him with a superb piece of plate, value 1000 getness, as a token of their affection and respect. It is from a design of Planmail, and is composed of an antique vasa; supported by a palm-tree; and three beautiful female figures; representing Victory on a base, on which are three British Lions, with trophics and appropriate inscriptions.

Fridey, March 29.

We are happy in being anabled to state that his Majesty is so rapidly advancint; in recovery, that the Physicians have discontinued, as unnecessary, the delig Bulletias, and they are issued now only thrice a week. His Majesty, it is understood, will shortly return to the dispatch of the Royal functions. In the small while, his medical attendants in the the terior have been places supplied by jesty, generally beach day, walks. The Physicians to that the precise ti dergoing the oper arrived, and that lity of the experim

The Board of grant licences to Baltic, on conditu the Captain, that burthen, be insert loading port in the be East of the Od with convoy from the same rendervous as last year.

Official orders are now giving for assembling the Local Militia in Great Britain for fourteen days' training and exercising, exclusive of the day of marchoing. All the men who have not have trained in any preceding year, are to be assembled for seven extra days praceding the assembly of the rest of the carrel. No corps to be permitted to assemble harfore the first of April, or subsequently to the first of October. The exercise to be performed at one period. Every corps to be assembled at its own head quarters, or as mear to them as circumstances will permit.

THEATBACAL

tice J. Burnett, esq. deceased.

Carlton-house, Feb. 26. His Excellency Hadje Hassan, Ambassador from the Dey of Algiers, had his first private audience of the Prince Regent, to deliver credentials for his Majesty.

Carlton-house, Feb. 28. The Prince Regent made the following amendments upon the roll of Sheriffs. Bucks - William Bernard Morland, of Nether Winchindon, esq. — Flintshire — Sir George Beeston Prescutt, of Ewlee, bart.

Wm. Pinkney, esq. Minister Henipotentiary from the United States, had an audience of leave of the Prince Regent.

Downing-street, March 2 Robert Townshend Farquhar, esq. Governor of the Islands of Mauritius and Bourbon, and their dependencies.

Downing-street, March 8. Lieut.-gen. Sir John F. Cradock, K. B. and K. C. Governor and Commander in Chief of the Cape of Good Hope.

Downing-street, March 14. John Hodgson, esq. major-general in the army, Governor and Commander in Chief of the Island of Curaçoa. — Sr James Cockburn, bart. Governor and Commander in Chief of the Bermuda Islands, Rev. John Brocklebank, Bolton - ie-Moors V. Lancashire.

Rev. John Wolvey Astley, M. A. Quennington R. Gloucestershire, vice Pettat, Rev. T. S. Talbot, M. A. St. Mary Perpetual Curacy at Constany, Norwich.

Rev. Murton Cameron, Crick Church and Parish, presbytery of Durnock, Scotland.

Rev. C. Nicholson, Whithbrn Church and Parish, presbytery of Wigton, vice Davidson, deceased.

Rev. N. Maclean, Small Isles Church and Parish, presbytery of Sky, Inverness, vice Donald Mackean, deceased.

Rev. Edward Fleet, Tarrant Muncton V. Dorsetshire.

Rev. Wm. A. Morgan, Lewannick V. Cornwall.

Rev. Wm. Rayer, Tidcombe Portion R.

Rev. Benj. Capel Heming, D. D. North and South Hayling V. Hants.

Rev. Nicholas Roch, M. A. St. Mary's Tenby V. Pembrokeshire, vice Hughes, deceased.

Rev. Kyrle Frole Money, B. A. vicar of Much Marcle, Herefordshire, Chaplain in ordinary to his R. H. the Prince Regent.

Rev. Frederick Beadon, M. A. North Stoneham R. Hants, rece his father, deceased, who had been rector for 45 years.

Rev Mr Moysey, Martin Worthy R. near Winchester.

Rev Henry Thompson, B A. Mistley cum Manningtree R. and Bradfield V. both co. Essex, one Rev. J. B dlock, resigned.

Rev. Cuarles Turnor, Deeping St. James Lancoin.

Rev. John Simpson, Fishtoft R. Lincolashire, tice Vardill, deceased.

Rev. Joseph Smyth, Kirby-Moorside V. Yorkshire.

BIRTHS.

Jan. AT Ockham-park, in Surrey, Lady King, a son.

Jan. 27. At the Government house, Madeira,

Madeira, the wife of Major-gen, the Hon. Robert Meade, a daughter.

Feb. 25. At Colchester, the Hon. Mrs.

Ponsonby, a daughter.
Feb. 26. In Portland-place, the wife of Henry Bonham, esq. M. P. a daughter.

March 3. The wife of Wm. Jones, esq. Marshal of the King's Bench, a daughter. March 6. At Wanbledon Common, the wife of Geo. Rush, esq. z son and heir.

March 7. At Mitcham Villa, the seat of Thomas Smith, esq. the wife of Thomas Kennedy, esq. a daughter.

At the Viscounters Downger of Hereford's, Hanover square, the Hon. Mrs. Edward Stewart, a son.

March 12. In Portland-place, the wife of William Curtis, esq. a daughter.

March 15. At Reigate, Lady Georgiana

Barnes, a daughter.

March 16. The wife of John Gosling, esq. of Gloucester-place, New-road, a son. March 17. In Seymour-street, the wife of Major the Hon. Henry Murray, a dau.

MARRIAGES.

Feb. AT Guernsey, Geo. Hounsom, esq. 9. Pnymaster 2d battalion 45th reg. to Miss Elisa Le Mesurier, of Guernsey.

Feb. 12. In Dublin, Rob. W. Phayre, esq. eldest son of Col. P. of Killoghram Forest, co. Wexford, to Sarah, eldest daughter of T. Driscoll, esq. of Harcourtstreet, a King's counsel.

Feb. 13. Rev. Edmund Wm. Estcourt, rector of Newinton and Shipton, to Bertha, second daughter of Thomas Wyatt, esq.

of Wargrave, Berks.

Feb. 14. Edward Bullock Dougha, esq. of Devonshire-place, to Harriet, youngest daughter of the late Rev. Dr. Bullock, rector of St. Paul's, Covent-garden, and of Streatham, Surrey.

Feb. 16. John Rose, esq. Captain in the East India Company's service, to Lilliss, second daughter of Jas. Frazer, esq.

of Ravenhead-house, Lancashire.

Feb. 20. J. F. Buckworth, esq. Lieut.col. in the Royal Cheshire militia, to Lady Mary Payne, of Wooton, Bedford, widow of Sir John Payne, bt. of Timpsford-hall. Feb. 22. Henry Watson, esq. of Leighlin-bridge, co. Carlow, to Emily, second. daughter of the Rev. George Maunsell, Dean of Leighlin.

Lieut, Nicholas Colthurst Travers, 94th rifle reg. to Eliza-Jane, eldest daughter of Jackson W. De La Cour, esq. of River View, co. Cark.

Feb. 25. Sir John Twieden, burt. of Bradburn-park, Kent, to Catherine-Judith, eldest daughter of the Rev. Wm. Coppard, rector of Graveby, Cambridgeshire.

Feb. 26. At Buckingham bouse, Pallnall, the Hon. Capt. Arundel, son of Lord A. to Lady Mary Grenville, the only daughter of the Marquis of Buckingham,

Her ladyship's fortune is said to be 100,000 (

At Glympton-park? Oxfordrige, mas Perrott, esq. Lient, col. of the O fordshire militin, to the only daughter, the late R. Davies, esq. of Kytheny Glamorgansbire.

Feb. 28. At St. George's, Haper equare, Lord and Lady The matrie Late eldest H. M.

Dr. daught Rev.

Wiltz, Berks.

Mar ion of France Willis ampto

At ? dangh of Cas

Αt Lowe, to Lou Butlet

Ma esq. of daugh Llang

Ma low of third Bruce

Rev 45Q. 0 Cathe gustici Lie:

Chath

4$ 1 ton, t Kemb Ma

mante Rich.

Ma

to M Conke M_4 Charl Hon.

Sopbi and s ingak

Me equa: Suese late (

Rob. to Le of th

eldest son, now Sir Robert Langrishe, bart. Sir Hercules enjoyed the friendship of Burke; and his "Letters on the State of the Irish Catholics" are addressed to the Baronet.

P. 197. a. In addition to the account of the Hon. Simon Fraser already given, we have been favoured with the following: " Reb. 10. At the house of his mother, Right Hon. Lady Saltoun, New Cavendish-street, Portman-place, in his 25d year, the Hon. Simon Fraser, brother of Lord altoun. He expired after a few hours illness, deeply regretted by his famaly and numerous connexions. His removal is severely felt by his alone surviving maternal parent, for he ever proved biniself a most dutiful and affectionate son, as well as a kind and tender brother; and his decease may be pronounced an irreparable loss to the community. His more immediate associates in the commercial world, who knew the mildness of his disposition and the urbanity of his manners, will not easily forget the virtues by which his character was distinguished.-He was interred on Monday, Peb. 18, in that vast repository of the dead, Bun-hill-fields. The 'well-plumed hearie' was: followed by seven mourning coaches, to-GENT. MAG. March, 1811.

Piety, can shield their possessor from the ravages of the Grave. The boasted vigour and characteristic energies of juverale years ensure no security. Death levels every distinction, and teaches the vanity of all sublunary possessions. But the Christian religion bath brought life and immortality to light! We have a better state of existence—a more durable sphere of being beyond the tomb. Thisther let us direct our thoughts—there let us fix our best affections:

'All—all on earth is shadow, all beyond Is substance; the feverse is Folly's creed. How solid all—where Change shall be no more.'

'Honourable age is not that which standeth in length of time, nor that is measured by number of years. But wisdom is the grey hair unto men, and an unspotted life is old age †.'

" Islington, Feb. 18, 1911. G. E."

* *	s de tra
ccase,	y huga, sa
et an	ruse, -
was p	y me 🛫
with	much good	Bot−_ (
1659es
1	PUNERAL

12

FUNERAL OF THE DUE

ON the 2d of March, the honours dueto the Sirth, character, and services of the late brave and lamented Duke of Alburquerque, were paid to his remains.
The Chanel Royal of Spain, in Spanishplace, Manchester-square, was fitted-upun this occasion for the celebration of a solumn dirige for the repose of his sent, with much mournful magnificence. The country which had been deposited the night before in the vanit undermeath, was placed on a bier, in the centre of the chapet.
If was covered with crimson velwet, richly ornestented with gift handles,

S. M. con Exercicio; Taniente Conerat de los Réales Exércitos; Embachadur

Ex Tan Ol At Tan II Tan II

1

1

. .

every window and balcony crowded that afforded a view. The general appearance and expression of the publick spoke the sense they entertained of the loss sustained by our Allies, and the feelings excited by the cause of Spain.

The tribute paid by the Members of our Government, and other distinguished persons, to the merits of the lamented Duke, by their personal attendance at the solemnities of the Spanish Chapel, and at his temporary interment in Westminster Abbey, reflects credit on themselves, and on the national character. Indeed, from the corresponding accounts of all who have known, or have said any thing of this distinguished Nobleman, his merits must have been eminently conspicuous in his zeal for his country's service, and his death must be to that country great and heavy loss. He appears to have been animated with a proper sense of what was due to the patrician rank he held imhis own nation, to have felt a just indigns tion at the atrocious attempts of a foreign. Tyrant, and to have seen with shame and scorn the timidity and treachery of others of his own order and station. He fell prematurely, the victim of a sensibility too acute and too refined. Had it pleased Providence to have protracted his existence but a few days longer, and to have restored him to health, the recent decree of the Cortes would have again placed him where he wished to be, and have cheered his heart with the gratifying experience, that he had not bestowed his services on an ungrateful country.

MEMOIR OF THE LATE MR. HENRY HOPE.

Feb. 25. Died in Harley-street, Henry Hope, esq. the most eminent merchant of his time. He descended from a branch of the noble family of the same name in Scotland, and was born at Boston, in New England, in 1736. At the age of 13, he came to England, to complete his education; and in 1754 entered into the house of Gurnell, Hoare, and Co. There he remained till 1760; when, making a visit to his uncles, who were great merchants in Holland, they were so pleased with his amiable manners and disposition, as well as with his talents, that they engaged him to quit the house in London, and become a partner with them in Amsterdam. On the death of his uncle Adrian Hope in 1780, the whole business of the house devolved upon him; and he managed it in so high a style of good conduct and liberality, as to draw the attention and raise the admiration of all Europe. Though he constantly refused to take any office, yet he was always held in the highest consideration by the Government: he was visited by all distinguished travellers, even by crowned heads. His acquaintance was courted by all ranks of people: at the Exchange he was the chief object of attention; the men of business formed themselves in a circle round him, and foreign ministers pressed forward through the crowd to speak with him on the financial concerns of their respective countries. The magnificence of his table, and his general mode of living, were suitable to the splendour of his situation. From Holland he made occasional visits to this country, partly for health, and partly to keep up his connexion with many friends and eminent persons here; and, particularly, he employed the summer of 1786 in a general tour round this island, accompanied by two of his nieces, the daughters of his sister, Mrs. Goddard:

the eldest of whom married Mr. John Williams Hope, son of the Rev. Mr. Williams, of Cornwall; who, during the latter years of his residence in Holland, assisted, and now succeeds him in his important commercial concerns. The second daughter married to John Langston, esq. of Sanden House, Oxfordshire; and the youngest to Admiral Sir Charles Pole. When Holland was invaded by the French, in 1794, he determined finally to quit that country, and settle in England. Not long after his arrival here, he purchased of Lord Hopetoun the large bouse in Harley-street, where he deposited his noble collection of pictures, and resided to the day of his death. On settling in England, he considered himself as totally disengaged from business, though he assisted the house in Holland with his advice on momentous occasions; and he devoted himself entirely to the encouragement of the Arts, of which he was a munificent patron, and to the enjoyments of society among a large and most respectable acquaintance. His temper was so singularly even, mild, engaging, and amiable, that he was beloved by all who had access to him. The kinduess of his heart appeared in every action of his life: he anticipated the wishes of his friends, and seemed to employ all his faculties in contriving opportunities of doing what he thought would give them pleasure. His charities were, in a manner, boundless; he had many constant pensioners, besides those whose occasional wants be was ever ready to relieve; the applications made to him for pecuniary assistance were innumerable; he was not without discrimination in attending to them: it is believed, however, that no real object of charity ever solicited him in vain. But his good offices were not confined to grants of money; his advice was freely given to Many sisters, ditto 160,000 To Mr. Williams Hope, his houses at Sheen and Cavendishsquare, with the fine collection of pictures in each, rich furnitures, &c. and all his other residuary property, together estimated at 550,000

Total...... £.1,160,000

DEATHS.

1810, AT her cousin, Æneas Barkly's, Oct. 13. esq. Highbury-grove, London, aged 17, Mus Sophia Alexandria Urquhart, fifth daughter of the late Rev. John Urqubart, of Mount Eagle, Ross-shire; a young lady whose goodness of heart, gentieness of temper, quickness of apprehenston, and engaging manners, most justly endeared her to her family and friends.

Nov. 14. At St. Helena, in his way to this country for the recovery of his health, m his 21st year, Lieut. Henry Thomas, Carusc, of the Bombay Military Establishment,

Dec. 8. At Mogadore, on the coast of Barbary, aged three years and five months, is supposed, quitted the vessel with the Mate and five seamen, who all perished. His remains were found on the 15th, and interred the next day, his friends Mess. C. having made every previous arrangement for the purpose. He was much respected by every one who knew him, and his untimely fate deeply lamented by his friends.

Jan. 22. At the Navai Hospital, Mr. Rose, gunner of H. M. ship Neptune. On opening the body, it appeared that his death had been occasioned by an inflammation of the heart; on inspecting which, a pin of the common size, without a head, was discovered in the muscular part, supposed to have been taken into the stomach with his food, Jan 26. At Hunger-hill, near Ripley, Surrey, in his 89th year, John Capelin, the oldest mhabitant of that place.

Jan. 28. In Molesworth-street, Dublin, in his 73d year, the Hon. H. Browne, fifth son of John Earl of Altamont, and uncle to the late Marquis of Sligo.

Jan. 30 (Old Stile). At Riga, aged,87, Thomas Greathed, esq. of Lincolnshire.

Feb. 5. Aged 99, Elizabeth Woodcock, a poor widow, who for the last 30 years has subsisted subsided principally on a small, possion given to her by the Company of Stationers, and the dutiful attention of a herd-working and affectionate duaghter, who is hernelf a Moor widow.

Feb. 8. At Morton, co. Buthon, in her That your, Mrs. Gregory, reliet of Capt. G. and daughter of the late Admiral Taylor, both of the Royal Kavy, Feb. 10. At Buffron, Scattered, in b 30th year, and 96th of his ministry, th Rev. William Puller, Paster of the Asse ciate Congregation there. His death was sudden; and the decumetances attending if rendered it impressive in no common degree. He had just finished the servious of the day, which inshility had compelled Nime community to abridge, and parted with his Session, who had not for a few minutes on some business: when, after having advanced a very abort way towards home, he such down, and expired in the arms of , one of his Elders, without a group, and almost without a word.

Reb. 11. At Fonton, Lincolnshire, aged 25, Josiah Gill, gent: Reb. 12. At Bright Walter, aged '77, Mrs. Helmes, late of West Hunney, Berks. Reb. 14. At Eastbourne, aged 11, Peter Heavy, youngestson of Nathaniel Hardent, etc. merchant of London. Aged 77, Rismboth, wife of Mr. Her-vest, of Paradiso-row, Cha

Aged 80; Mrs. Sustains Allen, of St. Mortin's, Stamford, a maiden lady.

In the Close, Norwich, in his 67th year the Rev. Philip Wodehouse, M. A. Pre-bendary of that Cathedral, and rector of Hiogham and Barnham-Brouse, with Bickerton and Kimberley, all in that county, He was second son of the late für Artnina W. bart. and brother to Eard Wodshouse, and was formerly of Emergel-colleg Cambridge, where he proceeded A.B. 1707, A, M. 1778.

In the prime of life, of the small-post, Mr John Long, of Granthem, co. Lincoln, At St. Nacts, Huntippdombirs, Goorge

Powler, esq. At Bury, Suffolk, aged 39, Mitt Elienboth Grisp, formerly of Lyan.

Pec. 15, At Walworth, aged 81, Abrau ham Canuadine, esq. fermorty a surgeouin the Royal Favy.

Aged 20, Frederick, fourth son of the.

late Henry Northcote, esq.
At Lovell's-hill, Window-Percet, in his 65th year, the Bev. Edward Stone, M. A. rector of Homendon, Bucks, vicus of Stagsdon, Bedfordships, perpetual curate of Princes Risborough, in the commission: of the peace for the counties of Oxfordand Buckingham, and formerly of Wadham-college, Oxford, M. A. 1767.

Aged 63, Mr. Especie Gillet, of Rast-

Hanney, Berte.

Sir J. W. Jervis, bart.

Feb. 19. Mrs. J. D. Wheelock, relict of Anthony W. esq.

At the Bishop of Chichester's in Wigmore-street, Chas. Buckner, esq. Admiral of the Ros.

In Oxford-street, in an apoplectic fit, Capt. William Roberts, R. N.

At Godeby-hall, Leioestershire, in his 67th year, E. Manners, esq.

In Lower Grosvenor-street, in her 35th year, Mary Anne, wife of the Rev. J. C. Marphew, of Walpole, Norfolk.

In Fitzroy-square, in her 84th year, Mrs. Dallas,

At Spaiding, the wife of Mr. Midnes, of that town, and an occasional preacher at the Methodist Chapel there. She attended at Chapel the preceding Sunday, and was taken ill there during Divine worship.

At Hampton Court Palace, Louisa Mary, youngest daughter of Lieut.-Col. Braddyll, of the Coldstream Guards.

At Bath, the Hon. and Rev. Frederick, Hamilton.

At St. Werburgh's, Chester, aged 56, William Probart, esq.

At St. Osyth, Essex, aged 49, the Rev. John Robert Kirby, formerly of Caius-college, Cambridge.

his important duty as a military officer, none have ever been more pobly distinguished by a constant, humane, and anxious attention to the health, the interests, and the feelings of the soldiers who were so happy as to serve under his command. Frank in his temper, kind in his disposition, ardent in his feelings, condescending and obliging in his manners, just and honourable in his general conduct, he attached to himself, in no common degree, the affectionate regard of his friends, especially of his gallant companions in arms, and the sincere esteem of all to whom he was known. Seized, the preceding evening, with an apoplectic fit, this estimable and amiable man suddenly expired, in his S4th year, to the inexpressible grief and consternation of his family, and of all h s acquaintance, and to the deep and lasting sorrow of the whole regiment to which he belonged, and on which he reflected so much honour. In his religious profession he was a Catholick; and if individual character for loyalty, and high and ardent love of his country, might be pleaded against a law, which forbids to all such, however meritorious, the attainment of military honour in its higher dogrees; certainly that plea might have been urged, in the present instance (and in how many others?). with great truth and with great effect...

Feb. 20. At Ray-house, Woodfordbridge, Francis, the infant son of J. V. Parrier, esq.

After a short illness, John Cartwright, esq. of Hatton-garden.

In Lamb's Conduit-street, the infant son of P. M. Lucas, esq.

At Hoxton, in her 63d year, Mary, widow of the celebrated William-Julius Mickle, esq.

In Upper Grosvenor-street, John-Henry: Burraw, esq. of Hill Park, Kent.

At her brother's (the Hon. A.-Cochrane Johnstone's) Lady Elizabeth Heron, widow. of the late Patrick H. esq. of Heron.

In his 33d year, Frederick Grant, esq. of Barnard's-inn.

Mr. William Hopkins, of Greek-street, Soho, Ironsmonger. .

At Crockerton, near Warminster, aged 94. Mrs. Hinton, mother of Mr. Joseph H.

At Hampstead, aged 66, the Rev. Charles Grant, vicar of Hinton Parva, co. Dorset, curate of Hampstead, and Minister of the chapel in that village for 30 wears. Educated at Westminster school, he became afterwards a Member of Trinity Cellege, Cambridge, where he proceeded to the degrees of A. B. and A. M. He was truly a labourer in the vineyard during the greater portion of his life; and the village of Hampstead for a greet number of years testified his punctual attention to every parochial duty, which was rendered extremely burthensome during the last years of his ministry, by its devolving almost entirely to his care, the incumbent. taking a very small share of it. To the poor be was a benevolent friend and adviser; and few clergymen, ever possessed so extensive and intimate a knowledge of the inferior order of his parishioners. By his more opulent neighbours he was sincerely esteemed and most deservedly respected. Indeed, his gentlemanly and unassuming manners, his correct deportment, and the honourable principles upon which he uniformly acted, were sure to make every one his friend, of which nothing could be a stronger proof, than the respect paid to his remains, which were followed to the grave by a large number of the most respectable inhabitants. He was buried in the church-yard of Hampstead; and the funeral service was read by Dr. Watson, at the particular request of the deceased. Mr. Grant has left a widow to lament the loss of a valuable domestic • • • companion.

Feb. 21. Aged 83, Mr. William Wright, butcher, and one of the Members of the corporation of Oxford.

Without a minute's previous indisposition, aged six months, Richard Robinson Bentley, son of Mr. B. of Highbury-house.

Aged 43. StephenisTimethy West, lain attorney at law, of Caistor, Lincolnehica. . At Newark, Notte, eget of Sile Spragging Godfrey, conven Aldermals of that borought, he were an a lynd stails w

At Mevagispay, in his 57th years, it. Ball, esq. principal Distributer of Stale in Cornwall, and Steward to the Marcu of Buckingham. A the hand and of

. Feb. 29. In Upper Seyapour-strict, Post-t .At Hammersmith, " then Hope wide Granstoun, mother of Lord Campia larget

Mr. if. Lewis, of St. Paul's Charoli-yacks Feb. 23. Suddenly, in Blanch square, Lieut.-Gen. Gerret: Hobit. i- pl.

At Walworth, in his 1904 general line. Henry Young, formerly a goldsmitte and dealer in coins in Ludgate-street, .- 1747 . 175

In East India-buildings, in her Gift: posts Lucy, wife of Robert Gear, caq. Colu ny's Husband and Salt · Petre Warehouse A keeper of the East India-house.

in Curzon-street, May Fairy Veltinia Nott, esq. • • • and the state of t

At Gainsborough, aged 79, Mrs. Malegy Morley, widow, one of the people stalled aray Land 😘 Bruck 🚓 😹 Quakers.

In Lincolnshire, aged 70, Mrs. Priduct. Newby, spinster, sister to the late direct Henry N. many years clerk of the parish

F. Taylor, esq. merchant, of Mull, Louise shire. · 1 . - - 1 . - 2 A

In his 79th year, Francis Gonday ghatis of Cossington, Leicestershire. - Ho man. deservedly esteemed by a numerous and most respectable acquaintance as a ve honourable and worthy man.

Feb. 24. Mr. Charles-Forster Business. of Hendon-street. His illness was lines ing, yet sustained by principles straigs. Christian, and cheered by the passificati eternal felicity. He bore it with mailt at ... emplary patience and realguation of Office most affectionate natural disposition; tenderly beloved by all his friends; it w no inconsiderable proof of the influence of . Religion on his mind, that he animipated the separating stroke of Douth with qualimoved constancy, and was able as reliaquish every worldly prospect with::pica submission to the divine will.: His pa through life was short. It was chasque ind? by scenes both of pain and case, called tion and prosperity. But the influence both, under a divine direction evidently tended to urge him forward to shall haven of rest into which he at last obtained and entrance. He was the second social that late William Burder, edg. and hinther of Mrs. Anne Gouldsmith, whose death thereil corded in our Vel. LXXX: Part II p. 18964.

Feb. 24. In Grosvenor-street in his 86th year, James Brudenell, Red offCurdigan, Baron Brudenelly: of Books accl. Northampton. His Lordship duld the! places

During his mayoralty, a thorough investigation took place thro ghout the town in weights and measures, and we well recollect more than a waggon load of the latter being publicly out up in the market place by the town servants; a samilar tovestigation at the present period would be attended with great public good." Lenester Journal.

Mr. William Recs, of Park-street, St. Mary-le-bone.

After a long and severe illness, the wife of William Praed, esq. of Tyringham, co. Buckinghau.

The wife of Mr. Wybourn, solicitor,

Craig's-court, Charing-cross.

At Plymouth, of apoplexy, aged 25, Mr. Richard-Heavy Howell, of Upper Thames-street.

In Berkeley-square, Mrs. Johnson, relict of the late Mr. J. wine-merchant.

At Measham, Derby, in her 76th year,

Mrs. Jewsbury, relict of Mr. Thomas J. Mr. Thomas Broom, of Market Deeping, superintendant of the locks on the river Welland.

At Hull, Yorkshire, in her 64th year, Lady Maria Constantia, wife of Sir Henry GENT. MAG. March, 1811.

East India Company with the highest ingrity and credit.

The wife of Henry Collins, esq. of Norton-street, Portland-road.

At Ashgrove, co. Cork, Richard Frank. land, esq. barrister at law and King's counsel.

Feb. 28. Aged 40, W. Watson, esq. of Whitechapel, brewer.

At Tupholme, near Lincoln, ---- Pell, esq. many years Captain in the North Lincoln militia.

At Heavy Tree, near Exeter (whither, on his return from the West Indies, he was sent by the faculty for the benefit of the air), in his 24th year, Samuel Tappen, esq, late First Lieut, of H. M. snip that Rainbow.

In Russell-square, aged 30 years, John Harrison, esq. On the 8th of March his re; nains were interred in a new vault in the Parish Church of Send, near Ripley, in Surrey.

At Newton Kyme, near Tadcaster, Yorkshire, John Fairfax, esq. of the Circus, Bath.

In Greenwich, in the 69th year of his age, Mr. Richard Brain, apothecary and druggist druggist to her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales.

13

Letely. Rev. S. Horsfall, formerly rector of Gressenhall, Norfolk.

In his 68th year, Rev. John Jackson. vicar of Morland, Westmoreland.

Rev. Edward Hughes, rector of Tenby. Rev. Dr. Bancroft, rector of Bolton.

Rev. E. Davies, M. A. master of the grammar-school at Wrexham, Denbighshire, and rector of Liaenarmon Dyffryn Coiriog.

Rev. N. Morgan, rector of Dean, Northamptonshire, and master of the grammarschool at Bath.

Rov. Hanway Lucas, lately of Hartshead, near Huddersfield.

Aged 76, Rev. John Baron, Roman Catholic Priest of Claughton, near Garn-

In his 21st year, Rev. W. Crabtree, pastor of the Baptist Church in Bradford, Yorkshire.

Rev. Mr. Stamper, M. A. of Queen's College, Oxford.

Rev. M. Atkinson, B. A. vicar of Kippax, Yorkshire, and lecturer of Leeds.

In Southampton-row, Russell-square, aged 87, Stevens Totton, esq. barrister at law; a man of considerable mechanical talent, and famous for having introduced barreled arches into the sewers of the metropolis.

At Brompton, in her 78th year, Mrs. Martha Bryckner.

At Bath, Lady Liddell, widow of Sir theorge L. bart. of Ravensworth Castle. Durham.

In Broad-street, Oxford, in her 36th year, the wife of S. Collingwood, esq. Procurator of the Clarendon Press.

In his 80th year, John Wood, esq. of Gunston Court, Kent.

Mary, daughter of Mr. Pritchard, of Milford.

The wife of Mr. Edward Gattey, solicitor, of Exeter, and niece to Mr. Justice Heath.

Mrs. Troyte, relict of William T. esq. of Huntsham.

John Lacon, esq. of Yarmouth.

Mrs. Griffith, relict of John G. esq. of Garn, near Denbigh.

Mr. Woolmer, apothecary, of Market Lavington.

At Maddington, Mary-Anne, daughter of the Rev. Mr. Legge, and niece of the Rev. F. Gibbs.

In Fitzroy-street, John Rodbard, esq. son of the late Henry R. esq. of Merriott,

The wife of Admiral Aplin.

Thomas Bond, esq. of Newton Bond, co. Longford.

> ld, co. Leicester, Mrs. Throswas taken suddenly ill, and in a expired.

Mr. Gee, surveyor, of Herncustle, Lincolnshire:

Aged 84, Mr. John Stration, formerly a respectable farmer and gardener, of Bicester, Oxfordshire.

At Cirencester, Robert Timbrel, eaq. deputy lieutenant aci weting magistrate for the county of Glassester.

John Sheppard, esq. one of the pertuersum of the Oswestry bank, and mayor of that

Mrs. Russell, of Swallow-street.

At Milford, William Jones, who was crushed by the brig Favourite.

At Exmouth, Devon, aged 55, Rob. Shaw, esq. formerly a general in the East. India Company's service.

At Exmouth, Orlando Lockyer, esq. 10rmerly of Plymouth.

In Queen Anne-street West, John Odeli, esq. of Waterford.

Anthony Woodhouse, gent. of Wood-Dalling, Norfolk.

Mr. Henry White, attorney at law, Tewkesbury.

At Horsley, John Hervey, gent.

James Barlow, esq. of Westleigh, Lancashire.

Hugh Taylor, esq. of Rock house, Breck, near Liverpool.

At Bradford, Yorkshire, in her 81st year, the wife of the Rev. John Cross, vicar of that parish.

In Devonshire-place, Sarah, youngest daughter of James Campbell, esq.

James Hartley, esq. deputy-governor of the Bank of Irelaud.

At Mauldslie-castle, the Right hon. Thomas Earl of Hyndford.

In consequence of injuries sustained by a fall from a horse during an exhibition. the female equestrian Miss Saunders.

Aged 61, Mr. Robert Loder, bookseller, of Woodbridge, Suffolk. Mr. L. was known to the publick, not only as a beekseller, but as an author; his " History of Framlingham," and several other antiquerian tracts, displaying considerable industry and research.

At Brighton, the lady of Lieut.-gen. Sir Robert Stuart, bart.

At Barkston, near Grantham, aged upwards of 80, Mr. William Mackinder.

Aged 68, Mr. William Prince, gurgeon, of Bottesford, near Grantham.

Mr. Jenkinson, of Holbeach, Lincolnshire, lately an eminent common-brewer of that place.

Aged 96, Mr. Blakey, of Lincoln.

Aged 92, Mrs. Dales, of Withern, Lincolnshire.

At Woodbridge, Suffolk, the son of Ms. Denney, surgeon, of Lincoln.

Aged 88, Mr. Knight, sen. of Abingdon. Miss Reading, late post-mistress of Bicester, Oxfordsbire.

Robert

At Hackney, aged 38, Mr. Roberts, of Iver, Bucks.

At the House of Industry, Onehouse, Suffolk, aged 34, Capt. Samuel Bird, formerly captain heutenant and quartermaster in the West Suffolk Militia during the American war.

in Curzon-street, May-fair, Charles-John Crowle, esq

Mr. George Packwood, of Gracechurch-street, mzor strop-maker.

Aged 90, Edmund Mashler, alias Old Honey, of Bolton, near Lancaster. He had been a beggar 70 years; and was justly entitled to the appellation of King of the Beggars. His fath r was a school-master at Halstead, in Yorkshire, who gave him a good education; but, after his father's death, he preferred the wandering life of a mendicant, and pertinationally persisted in it; nor could threats or intreaties make him desist, till within the last four years, during which time he had been bedridden.

At Bratoft, Lincolnshire, aged 82, Mr. John Smith, farmer

John Smith, farmer.

At Louth, Lincolnshire, aged 96, Mrs.
Scargail.

Aged 72, Thomas Hancock, gent. of Palbourn, Cambridgeshire.

to his Excellency Sir A. Cochrane.

On board H. M. sloop the Crane, on his passage from Jamaica, in this 26th year, Mr Israel Addison, master of the Elk-sloop of war, and son of Mr. Jacob A. of Hull.

Gen. Miller, a most active and enterprising officer, of the Portuguese service. He died in the country on the right bank of the Douro, at some distance from Oporto. The immediate cause of his death was not known; but the excessive hardships and anxiety which he had suffered for many months are supposed to have contributed in a great degree towards it. His remains have been conveyed to Oporto, and interred with full military homours.

March 1. The Right Hon. Charles Marsham, Earl of Romney, Viscount Marsham. His Lordship was born Sept. 28, 1744, and for many years represented Kent in Parliament, and was the whole time an active and useful member, always supporting the popular and constitutional side. On the death of the Duke of Dorset, he was appointed ford lieuténant of Kent. He entertained the King at his seat at the Mote near Maidstone, at the review of the Kentish volunteers, Aug. 1, 1799.

QB

On the spot in his lordship's park where their Majesties dined, a pavilion was erected, inscribed "A Tribute of Respect from the Volunteers of Kent to the Earl of Romney, Lord Lieutenant of the County." On this occasion 5319 volunteers were entertained at the tables. And on the the 21st of April 1802, an elegant sword was unanimously voted at Maidstone to the noble earl, by the officers of the West Kent militia, "as a token of the deep sense they entertained of his lordship's uniformly polite attention towards them, and of the zeal be has ever displayed in promoting the real interest and welfare of the regiment." He was created Viscount Marsham and Earl of Romney June 22, 1801. He married, 1776, Lady Frances, sister of the Earl of Egremont, by whom he has one son and three daughters. He is succeeded in his title and estates by his son Charles Viscount Marsham.

Iu her 35th year, Mary, wife of Wm. Banbury, esq. of Finsbury-place.

Suddenly, in Upper George-street,

Portman-square, the wife of Major-gen.
Tolson, of the East India Company's service.

At High Wycombe, Bucks, Sarah Louisa, only daughter of the late Capt. C. Douglas, and niece of Col. Sir H. D. bart.

Mr. Richard Poole, bosier, late keeper of the Mitre and Keys inn, Leicester.

Dropped down, and expired immediately, on board a vessel in Grimsby harbour, J. Ainsley, formerly captain of the Commerce, of Grimsby.

R. H. Lewin, esq. of March, Isle of Ely.

March 2. In Hertford-street, David Ste venson, esq.

in Portman-square, Mrs. Mosfatt, relict of the late John M. esq.

In his 77th year, Mr. Edmund Wright, of Leicester.

Aged 84, Mr. Wm. Springer, mathematical instrument maker, Charles's-street, Bristol.

At Colemore, Hants, aged 75, Anthony Chase, one of the last survivors of those who fought under the celebrated General Wolfe, and who was within a few paces of him when he fell.

At Colney-hatch, Middlesex, aged 23, after a painful affliction of nearly three years' continuance, Charles-James, youngest son of Mr. Sutton, of that place.

At Spilsby, Lincolnshire, aged 40, the wife of Mr. James Hall, joiner.

Major Busby, Sussex militia, late Lieut.col. of the 15th regiment.

At Auchinroth, North Britain, aged 18, Isabella, daughter of the late Robert Grant, esq. of Elchies.

At Sutton, near Shrewsbury, Mr. John Southern, agent to Lord Berwick, the Hon. Chas. Cecil Cope Jenkinson, and several gentlemen of the county of Salop: a man of sound judgment in business, and of the strictest probity in all his dealings. His loss will be much and extensively felt by all for whom he was employed, and his death sincerely lamented by those who had witnessed his fidelity and friendship. His remains were interred in Saint Giles's church, near Sutton, on the 6th, in the presence of several of his respectable employers, who, as the last mark of their attention and respect, followed his remains to the grave with the profoundest sorrow and regret; dismay and tears pervaded the countenance of every neighbour present, for the loss of the man who had at all times made himself so acceptable to them, and who, in their time of distress, had assisted with the necessary balm to heal the anguished mind.

March 4. At St. Alban's, Mrs. Anna Maria Jones, spinster. Her father is said to have been an officer in the army, who served under John Duke of Marlborough. It is acknowledged that she was 96 or 97 years of age, but it has often been asserted that she was born in the year 1712. She retained her eye-sight in particular, and all her faculties mental and corporcal, in an extraordinary and uncommon degree, considering her great age, till 1st February last, when she was struck with a paralytic stroke, under the effects of which she languished near a month, when a second stroke perfected the work that the former had begun, and a few days put an end to a life which had lost all remains of comfort and enjoyment. She was buried in the chancel of the Abbey-church.

Aged 58, Richard Dalton, esq. of Camberwell-green, Surrey. Mr. Dalton was in business as a wholesale stationer in the house in Abchurch-lane to which he went, when a lad, in the year 1770, from Wigtown in Cumberland. His masters, and afterwards partners, were Messes. Wright and Gill; of whom it is remarkable, that they were both Aldermen and Lord Mayors of London, were in connexion together for nearly 50 years, were brothers-in-law by marriage, were within a few months of the same age, and were buried in the same yault, one a fortnight or three weeks only after the other. Mr. Dalton was deservedly high in the confidence of both; and received a substantial proof of it in each of their wills. For some time he withdrew wholly from business; but such was his natural aversion to being unemployed, that he again entered into partnership in the old house in Abchurch-lane, with the four eminent and opulent brothers, Messrs. Key; who had purchased the immense stock after the death of the aldermen, and the elder of whom, now resident at Denmark-hill, is in the commission of the peace for the county of Surrey. Mr. Dalton was a man of unaffected manners, and of great sincerity

and

where he established a School; and after ten years' residence there, he, on the death of the Rev. Mr. Evans (who succeeded the Rev. Mr. Gibson, at Bishop's-Waltham), removed to that place, carrying many of his pupils with him, and where he raised by his character a respectable Seminary, in which he was assiduously assisted by his Brother before named, and also by his Son. His death was sudden: but it was only a removal from the Church Militant to the Church Triumphant leaving not only Relatives, but a School and a whole Parish, to lament his loss! The Sunday preceding his death, he preached an animated discourse to an attentive audience on Repentance. On Tuesday, he went to the extremity of his parish, to adtransister the Sacrament to a sick gentle-tran, and afterwards partook of a cold meal with the lady, who communicated ber griefs to him, and received from him the balm of consolation; he returned to his famuly to tea, cheerful—(he was remarkable for cheerfulness, with a pious subsisting between Ministers and People. It is mentioned to shew, where such harmony exists, what an excellent tendency it has to promote the happiness of a Parish. The separation was as affectionate as the Apostle Paul experienced, when the Church wept at his departure, on his saying they would see his face no more!

"Each pensive hour shall thee restore, For thee the tear be duly shed, Belov'd till life shall charm no more, And mourn'd till Pity's seef be dead."

March 8. At Broomwell-house, near Bristol, in his 88th year which he had entered in the full possession of his vigorous faculties, the Right Hon. John (the 8th) Lord Colville, of Culross, Scotland. His early life was passed in active military duty; he was at the expedition against Carthagena in 1740, when his father, the 6th Lord Colville, commanded a regiment, and where he lost his life. He was at the battle of Fontency in 1745; of Culloden in 1746; and of Lafeldt in 1747; and in 1761, he accompanied his regiment (the Scotch South Pusitees) to the slope of Belleisle. On the peace of 1963, he quitted the army after 26 years' service; and retired to the privacy of domestic life. On the douth of his brother, Alexander, Vice-Admiral of the White, the 'this Lord G. of Onjrose, he succeeded to the honours of his boine. The title now devolves upon his eldest son, John, a Captain in the Royal Blavy, now Lord Colville of Culross. His remains were intersed in Bristol cathedral.

March 15. At Chickwoll, in the parish of Claverlay, Salop, his autoent family residence, Edward-Farmer Taylor, esq. in the flat year of his age, gradually work out in constitution, after an enjoyment of long established good health. He was the yeungest sen of the late John Taylor, pent. of that place, by Sarah Farmer, his wife; and, as is ween in the mode of descent in the manor of Claverley, became proprietor of his mother's family possessions there, which his ancestors had enjoyed upwards of 200 years. His maternal ancestor, Edward Farmer, gent, married Elizabeth, the heiress of a family of the name of Petter, the former possessors of Chickstell, on 13 Dec. 1609. He was descended from many wealthy and respectable families residing in that and the neighbouring parish of Worseld, at a very remote period, even within a few reigns of the Conquest. He became more wealthy, from indefatigable attention to an extensive and lucrative concern, in just and lawful commerce, carried on through a long period of his life in the grand emperium of the United Kingdom, for which city, a few years ago, he was nominated Shariff; but, being far advanced in the decline of life, he chose rather to submit to the payment of the monel fine for non-compliance, and the heavy expenses consequent thereon. His wealth enabled him to increase his real property around his maternal home with great profit and advantage to himself and the present possessor, his only son. He, tentry, &c. He is succeeded in the title's and estates by his son George-Retry; Bittle of Ruston; in consequence of whicher telegraphy taken place in the Parinthetatory Representation of the University of Cambridge, for which his Lordship was out of the Members.

36.5

AVERAGE PRICES of NAVIGABLE CANAL SHARM, &c. in March 1811 (to the 25th), Bridge-street, London:--Trent and Mersey, Half Yearly Dividend at the rate of 45L per ! 10601. dividing 421. clear, per Amum.—Cove per Share.—Swanses, 1671, the last Dividend Stand Junction, 2711. 2701.—Warwick and N Warwick and Birmingham, dividing 9/.—Stre Avon, 451. 10s. 421.-Wilts and Berks, 451. to mere, 801.—Union, 1104.—Grand Union, 84 I of 1/. per Share .- Ashby-de-la-Zouch, 24/.-401.-New ditto, 11. 10s. Premium.-Croydon 1651.—London Dock 1291, to 1871.—Ditto Sc. cial Dock Old Shares, 159L with New Share, -Glotte, 1201.-Atlas, Par.-Rock, 11 1s. t Works, 1891.-Grand Junction Water Works tion, 684, 5c .- Strand Bridge, 194, Discount.-Street Read, 10s, to 11. Premium,-Commercia Dividend of 34,

PRICES OF FLOUR, March 25:

Pine per Sack 85s. to 00s. Seconds 75s. to 80s. Bran per Q. 14s. to 16s. Pollard 26s. to 30s. RETURN of WHEAT, in Mark-Lane, including only from March 11 to March 16: Total 4,253 Quarters. Average 94s, 24d,-5s. 74d. higher than last Return.

OATMEAL, per Boll of 140fbs. Avoirdupois, March 16, 48s. 1d.

AVERAGE PRICE of SUGAR, March 20, 43s. 7d. per Cwt.

PRICE OF HOPS, IN THE BOROUGH MARKET, March 25:

бø. Os. to 71.

AVERAGE PRICE OF HAY AND STRAW, March 25:

St. James's, Hay 7l. 16s. 6d. Straw 4l. 5s.—Whitechapel, Hay 8l. 0s. Clover 9l. 0s., Straw 3l. 18s.—Smithfield, Clover 8l. 14s. Old Hay 8l. 18s. 6d. Straw 3l. 12s. 6d.

SMITHFIBLD, March 25. To sink the Offal—per Stone of 8lbs.
..............4s. 8d. to 6s. 4d. | Head of Cattle at Market this Day: Beef......4s. 8d. to 6s. 4d. Mutton.....5s. 4d. to 6s. 4d. Beasts about 2120. Calves 100. 0d. to 7s. 4d. Sheep and Lambs 11,650. Pigs 270. Pork....... 6s. 0d. to 7s. 0d.

COALS, March 25: Newcastle 44s. 6d. to 55s. 0d. Sunderland 45s. 3d. to 47s. SOAP, Yellow 80s. Mottled 90s. Curd 94s. CANDLES, 12s. 0d. per Doz. Moulds 13s. 0d. TALLOW, per Stone, 8lb. St. James's 4s. 6ld. Clare Market 4s. 7d. Whitechapel 4s. 4d.

EACH DAY'S PRICE OF STOCKS IN MARCH, 1811.

Printed by Nic	27 shut shut	shut	۰	2+ Sunday		shut s shut s	shut shut shut Sanday	Fast Day shut shut shut shut Sunday	shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	shut shut Past Day shut shut shut shut	Sunday shut shut Fast Day shut shut shut shut	shut Sunday shut shut Fast Day shut shut shut Sunday	shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	shut shut shut shut Sunday shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	sbut shut shut shut shut shut Sunday shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	shut shut shut shut shut shut Sunday shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	Sunday shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	shut Sinday shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	shut shut shut Sinday shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	Sunday 245‡ shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	Sunday 245‡ shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	Sunday 244 Sunday shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shu	Sunday Sunday Shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut s
Printed by Nichols and Son, Red	644 824	644 shut	-	(6+3 shut		·		·			-		-	######################################	කැශ්කයක් මාකකේ †්කාය†්තාවේ ආ ආ ආ ආ ආ වා වා වා වා වෙවල වල වලව වලව ව		mpg m 1年 m mpg ppg ppg ppg ppg ppg ppg ppg ppg p	Service of the servic	######################################	## ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ### #
Red Lion Passage,	97	t 963 shut				962	967 97 967	967 967 968	962 7962 7962 7962	96 97 70 96 70 70 70 70 70 70 70 70 70 70 70 70 70 70 7	96 97 60 60 97 810 96 810	96 97 97 96 96 97 96 97 96 97 96 97 96 97 97 97 97 97 97 97 97 97 97 97 97 97	97 97 97 97 97 97 97 97 97 97 97 97 97 9	96 97 97 97 97 97 97 97 97 97 97 97 97 97	$ 000 000 000 000 000 000 000 000 000 0	1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1	44-44-48 48 50 60 60 60 60 60 60 60 60 60 60 60 60 60	000 00 000 000 000 000 000 000 000 000	0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0	THE HEAT TO THE PIE	000 000 000 000 000 000 000 000 000 00					000 000 000 000 000 000 000 000 000 00
e, Fleet Street, London.	shut	shut			shut	shut	shut shut shuk	shut shut shut	shut shut	shut shut shut shut	shut 173 shut shut shut	shut 173 shut shut shut shut	shut shut 175 shut shut shut	shut shut shut 173 shut shut shut shut	shut shut shut shut 175 shut shut shut	shut shut shut shut shut shut 173 shut shut shut shut	shut shut shut shut shut shut 173 shut shut shut	shut shut shut shut shut shut 173 shut shut shut	shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	1742 shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut	172 172 shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut sh	1724 172 174 shut shut shut shut shut shut shut shut
London.		shut 23 a 22pr.			shut 23 a 21 pi		 																				1 6
BRANSCO		∵ ∪ 99 1→ ∪3			2 a 4	7 a 4	275 282 447	275 292 244 744	4 72 C C C C C C C C C C C C C C C C C C	2 m m m m m m m m m m m m m m m m m m m	2 4 4 10 2 4 4 10 2 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4	2 4 4 7 7 7 7 7 7 7 7 7 7 7 7 7 7 7 7 7	01 4 70 00 00 00 00 00 00 00 00 00 00 00 00	3 a 10 a 2 a 4 a 5 a 6 a 6 a 6 a 6 a 6 a 6 a 6 a 6 a 6	8 11 2 9 1 1 1 2 9 1 1 1 2 9 1 1 1 2 9 1 1 1 1	11 a 9 8 a 11 8 a 9 4 a 6 7 a 7 2 a 4	10 a 9 a 10 a 10	10 a 11 a 12 a 1	10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 1	10 a	7a 11 12a10 12a10 12a11 11a12 11a12 11a12 10a9 10a9 2a4	7 a 11 12 a 11		13a 15 10a 15 17a 16 12a 16 12a 16 13a 16		10a 15pr. 10a 15pr. 10a 13p. 10a 13p. 12a 11 pr. 12a 14pr. 12a 14pr. 11a 19pr. 11a 19pr. 10a 9 pr. 10a 9 pr. 4a 6 pr. 4a 6 pr. 2a 4 pr.	9 a 13 pr 10 a 14 pr. 10 a 13 pr. 10 a 13 pr. 12 a 14 pr. 12 a 14 pr. 12 a 14 pr. 11 a 9 pr. 11 a 9 pr. 10 a 9 pr. 10 a 9 pr. 5 a 11 pr. 5 a 10 pr. 4 a 6 pr. 2 a 4 pr.	8 a 11 pr. 9 a 13 pr. 10 a 14 pr. 10 a 13 pr. 10 a 13 pr. 10 a 13 pr. 12 a 14 pr. 12 a 14 pr. 12 a 14 pr. 13 a 10 pr. 14 a 6 pr. 5 a 7 pr. 5 a 7 pr. 7 a 4 pr. 2 a 4 pr.
MB and CO. S	shut	Shut		-	69 squt					101-00-	1 101-11-1	1 1	$3$~ast~	1 634-004-	$3$~ast~	634-201-	$3$-10d	625-00/	1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1	639-704-	1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1	634-00-	1 634-700-	1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1	634-00-		1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1
 	6 (1) 4 - 1	!_			64										64 . 44 .	64 652	64 654	64 654	64 65 65	64 4 65 65 65 65 65 65 65 65 65 65 65 65 65	64 24 65 65 65 65 65 65 65 65 65 65 65 65 65	64 2 65 65 65 65 65 65 65 65 65 65 65 65 65	6 1 2 2 2 2 3 3 4 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5 5	$\frac{1}{2}\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\	64 7 65 65 65 65		64 7 63 63 63 63	64 63 63 634
11, Holborn, 3	74 dis. shut	lis.			_	dis.	dis.	dis.	dis. dis. dis.	dis. dis. dis. dis.	dis. dis. dis. dis. dis.	dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis.	dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis.	dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis.	dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis.	dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis.	dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis.	dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis.	dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis.	dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis.	dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis.	dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis.	dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis.	dis.	dis. dis.	dis.	dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis.	dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis. dis.
7, Corrhill, and	Ditto.	Ditto.	_		63 Ditto.			·	,N-	·	 	 	 			~ · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~	20	22	~ · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	22	~	· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	N N N N N N N N N N N N N N N N N N N	2	N N N N N N N N N N N N N N N N N N N	~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~	\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\
BRANSCOMB and CO. Stock-Brokers, 11, Holborn, 37, Corrhill, and 58, Haymarket.	to. Ditta.	•	-

METROROLOGICAL DIARY for March, 1811. By Dr. Pola, Bristol.

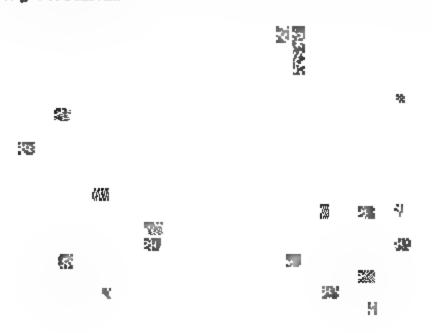

Deya. Deya. Ma.	M. 8 h. G. beat	Inches, 20ths	WEATHER.
1	33 47	29-10	cloudy at times, some rain
2	46 51	41-92	cloudy in general, high winds
3	47 52	29-14	morning rain, afternoon clear, evening cloudy, windy
4	47 51	29-17	mostly clear, windy
- 5	44 48	29-12	mostly cloudy, some light rain
6	41 48	20- 9	morning clear, afternoon very rainy, high wind
- 9)	50 52	29- 5	cloudy, very heavy rain, harl, thunder, lightning, windy
8	48 41	29- 2	cloudy, frequent rain, some snow, windy
9	33 43	30 - 2 ,	clear
10	41 47	30- 6	very hazy
11	36 53	30- 6	clear
- 11	41 53	30- 6	cloudy
13	35 50	30- 4	mostly clear
14	37 46	30- 3	ditto
15	35 51	50-3	clear
16	33 50 33 57	30- 2 30- 1	ditto
17			ditto
18	34 55	30-0	ditto
20	47 50 47 54	29.19	rain in the night, mostly clear
21	48 49	29-18	cloudy, afternoon rainy cloudy, some light rain
90	43 51	29-10	some rain in the night, day mostly elear
23	36 52	30- 7	mostly clear
24	39 57	30- 4	clear
25	41 56	30- 0	ditto
21		29 19	morning cloudy, afternoon clear
27	38 56	30- 2	clear
28	36 58	30- 6	morning foggy, afterward clear
29	41 45	30 - 8	morning cloudy, afternoon clear
30	40 58	30- 3	clear
31	40 49	30-1	l cloudy

The average degrees of Temperature, calculated from observations made at eight o'clock in the morning, are 40 22-100ths; those of the corresponding mostle in the year 1810, were 39 45-100ths; in 1809, 30 56-100ths; in 1808, 33 66-100ths; in 1807, 33 46-100ths; in 1806, 37 94-100ths; in 1805, 40 20-100ths; and in 1804, 36 33-100ths.

The quantity of Rain fallen is equal to 1 inches 56 100ths; that of the corresponding month in the year 1810, was 62 100ths; in 1809, 1 inch 27 100ths; in 1808, 55 100ths; in 1807, 34 100ths; in 1806, 1 inch 67 100ths; in 1805, 98 100ths; and in 1804, 1 inch 80 100ths.

James's Square, Bristol, 4th. month, 4th, 1811.

METBOROLOGICAL TABLE for April, 1811. By W. CARY, Strand. Height of Fabreuh

Publick at large have sustained, have been so well and so forcibly pointrayed by Mr. Martin in the last Year's Report, that it will now be unnecessary to expatiate any farther on that subject. The Committee of Directors and Managers, however, have the satisfaction of stating, that the wishes of the last Year's General Meeting have been carried into effectual execution. Agreeably to their instructions, a neat and elegant Tablet has been praced in Islangton Church, bigaly creditable to an ingenious young Artist, Mr. John Mailcott, of which an Engraving is here annexed. At the top of the Monument is the Honorary Medal of the Society; and at the bottom a small but correct medallion of Dr. Hawes."-Annual Report, p.1.

Mr. URBAN, Hampton, April 8. T a time when the Magistrates . and leading Citizens of London display a persevering attention to the improvement of our streets and public buildings; and the works carrying on without the pale of the City manifest a corresponding decoration; -permit me so far to infringe on a mates of the great also received perpetuity from his pencil.

The death of VANDYKE was premature—he was but 42 years of age when he quitted the terrestrial scene. The Church of St. Paul was the chosea place of his burial:—The event took place in 1641; and a Monument, bearing an Inscription from the pen of Cowley, was erected shortly after to his memory. The conflagration of 1666, which was fatal to many of his works in the Halls and Churches of the City, was destructive also of this monumental Trophy. The Church was consumed in its perishable materials, and the stone-work fell into ruins soon after. Nothing that I am aware of, in the present Church of St. Paul, records even the name of VANDYKE.

Now, Sir, describing ourselves, as we do, " a Nation friendly to the Sciences, and grateful to Genius, through the extensive range of the circle," allow ine to appeal to the Members of the ROYAL ACADEMY 5 page of your valuable Publication as and, if no leading Member has yet:

offered a proposal on the subject, let me ask, whether it is not becoming their Establishment to adopt some measure for collecting a Fund for the purpose of erecting a Monument, tributary, from love and respect, to that great Painter. But, if the means are not within their command, let me hope the occasion will be seized by the Owners of those splendid Mayfrom and Sears throughout this Island, which derive additional celebrity from being the receptacles of many of this distinguished Master's Pictures, some of which even exhibit the Portraits of the possessor's ancestry.—To these I earnestly appeal, and I beseech them not to suffer a disgrace to sest upon the land by neglecting the memory of the elegant VANDYEL Yours, &c. W. P.

' Mr. Undag, March 20. 71THIN a short distance on this side the wall of Severus, a few miles to the South-westward of the rand confuence of the Types pear Flezham, is situated Langley Castle, an antient feudal edifice, occupying an eminence on the Western bank of the Southern branch, to view of the high road, which, according to the euroly topography, passes through Haydon, formerly its oppositant manor, between Carliele and the former place. It was the original heat of the Tyadales, Barons of South Tyndale, and ancestors of several families of various subsequent consequence in different parts of England; the first briefly mentioned by Cameen as being settled there at the close of the twelch century; but, whether any account of the Baruny be included within the compass of Domestay Survey, I have not ascertained, though I certainly should conceive it probable. This building was visited about forty years. since by some Tourists, who have given it a short notice; but, should any intelligent gentleman in that neighbourhood feel dupored, through the channel of your Muccilany, tocommunicate any circumstances nospecting it, or the family residing there it the proceding mrs, comprising a general statement, as far as convenient, of such particulars connected with either, or with the local river and site, &c. no may appear of an interesting description, & shall remen intichted in histofier a piece of nathe expense of s information peculiarly acceptable to myself, and I presume not entirely otherwise to that large properties of your Renders, who are acceptable to entertain a curiority on subjects of antiquarian research and measurest. I may add, that a drawing would constitute an obvious and agreeable ilinstration, our entient specimens of civil being much less frequent thin those of ecclesiastical architecture, perhaps excepting means the vestiges perhaps excepting monothe vestigent If any of your Gentalogical Conrespondents are acquainted with the name of Hugh, as connected with the particulars of such summertion, is should be greatly obligible segrettement of the father, have ing settled in Gloucesterships desired the contest of the two Bosto, whose immediate parentage I wish to mean inin, as a point of demedia interest.

Yours, de. T.P.

.76

FASSIONABLE CHURCH LINES Mer Uanan, APRIL N a late controversial occasi it was asserted, if I somen right, in one of our best Reviews (T) British Critic) that no such adverts ment had ever seriously appeared any newspaper, as announcing a Cheer Living to be sold, " in a fine appeared country." Of this assertion I had a that lime some reman to doubt, be equid not recollect where I had a advertisements of the kind, althou pretty certain that I had some then ind believed them to be serie Without, however, impaguing the memory of the British Critics, or a fusing to chare that zeel which me every lover of the Church wish the no such shameful addresses existed. I now send you as advertisement talk from Jackson's last Oxford Jesten and I think the very respectable near of the Auctionous and the Social who were to formish Postioning. hon cpears to harpy pro-Which youf shat'd will be a.e. er is need ton b igna jidt buresi Bright Bright and Onetage and Irish peerage of his cousin the late Lord Primate Rokeny] and wife of Edward Montagu, Esq. of Denton Hall, Northumberland, and Saudleford Priory, Berks, [son of Charles, 66th son of Edheriting from nature a genius for litera-ture, she had the good fortune to meet with an able director of herearly studies in the celebrated Convers Middleton, D. D. who was married to her grand-Pother [Sarah, daughter of Thomas Mor-her humour, and the brilliancy of her wit. She died [26 Feb.] 1805, at the advanced age of 86. Mrs. Carter, the learned translator of Epictetus, and the author of a volume of poems of very considerable ment, is now the only original surviving member, at the age of nearly 90. But the gentleman to whom this constellation of talents owed that whim ical appellation. the "Bas bleu," was Mr Stillingfleet, a man of great prety and worth, the author of some works in natural history; and of some poetical pieces in "Dodsley's Collection." Mr. Stillingfleet, being somewhat of a humourist in his habits and manners, and a little negligent in his dress, literally wore grey stockings, from which circumstance Admiral Boscawen used, by way of pleasantry, to call them the "Blue Stocking Society;" as if to indicate that, when these brilliant friends met, it was not for the purpose of forming a dressed assembly. A foreigner of distinction hearing the expression, translated it hierally "Bas bleu," by which these meetings came to be afterward distinguished.

Mrs. Hannah More, (the executent author of "Strictures on Female Education, Thoughts on the Importance of the Manners of the Great to general Society, and an Estimate of the Religion of the fashionable World," with other pieces,) who was herself a distinguished member of the Society, has written an admirable poem with the title of the "Bas bleu," in allusion to this mistake of the foreigner, in which she has characterized most of the eminent personages of which it was composed. The concluding part of her prelatory memorandum to the poem is so very apposite to my present purpose, that I cannot resist the temptation of inserting it here.

her grateful testimony, which will not be suspected of flattery now that most of the persons named in this poem are gone down to the grave, to the many pleasant and instructive hours she had the honour to pass in this company, in which learning was as little disfigured by pedantry, good taste as little tinetured by affectation, and general conversation as little disgraced by calumny, levity, and the other consurable errors with which it is too commonly tainted, as has perhaps been known in any society?'—Works of Mrs. H. More, vol. I. p. 12.

Mrs Montagu being left, by the will of her husband, in possession of his noble fortune, lived in a style of the most splendid hospitality, till her death, which happened at an advanced age, 25th August, 1800."

J. B.

THE TIMES, No. I.

Tempora mutantur, et nos mutamur in illis

Led the preceding as inferior to itself in some particular or another, and has looked upon itself as a generation recently emerged from at least partial barbarism. Mankind, fond of novelty and aspiring to perfection, have never failed to alter and improve the modes and customs of their ancestors, as soon as time has entheir defects.

But, perhaps, no age has much reason to boast its im ments as the present. Other g tions may have felt some det honest pride in contemplating ticular art or science

"Form'd by their skill, or fost their care."

But universal refuepuent w served for the present. If we take a view of the m and customs of our Ancestors, i pursuits of, either business o sure, we shall find abundant to deplore their ignorance, an gratulate ourseivus upon the tion of old-fashioned absurdit would not, however, be thou blame them for faults which considered as virtues, or for ign which they could not avoid. well aware that most of their notions may be traced to their What could be ex cation. trom a woman brought up unck system? She might, indeed, what they supposed to be a wife or mother, and perhaps, i instances,, prove au usefut men society: but how could she e tain to that exquisite polish we justly esteem the summum of Female Education, and wh only be acquired at our most f able seminaries? Of these our tors had no idea. They had no French governesses; and wo fear, have formed very harsh i an "Establishment for You dies."—Their young men were ly limited in their advantages. they had been whipped thre public School under the influ that detestable, and, I am ha add, obsolete maxim, that " La is beiter than house or land," was no Four-in-hand Club t their emancipation, and, ext them the right hand of felle The only driving which they stood was that of the quill; 1 only box with which they we quainted was the strong one Back Counting-house.—Their ments too were such as might pected. They would sit whok to hear the fustian of Shuki and even in very late times hav known to laugh with Foote, an

A METEOROLOGICAL JOURNAL, kept at CLAPTON, in Hackney, from the 16th of March to the 15th of April, 1811.

_	Thermometer.		Barometer.
Day of Mouth.	Max.	Min.	Max.	Mm.	Hyg.	Wind.	Weather, &c.
Mar.16	53		30.31	50.25	0.9	S. S. E.	lear
17	57	1	30.17	30-17		N.—8.	clear
18	60	40	30.15	30.15	0.0	N.—S E.	fair
19	58	43	30.53	30-20	1.7	S. W.	a few clouds
20	55	50	30.15	30.07	1.14	s. W.	eloud y
21	60	45	30.05	30.05	0.18	•	rain and clouds
22	45	34	30.38	30.13	0:16	N.	cioudy—cle z
23]	30:50	30.48	below()	N—S—F
24	54	39	30.40	30-28	•10	N-S. E.	I
25	50	ვს	50:21	50 11	•3	N-S. E.
26	1	37	30.24	30.10	0.3	N-S. E.
27	54	33	50.45	30.23	√ •0	N-S. E.
28	61	40	30 60	30.48	.15	WN-E.
29	57	45	30.61	30.55	.6	N-E.
30	60					SW-NE
31	49	43	30.22	30.16	•2		cloudy
Apr. 1	51	39	30.10	30.00	•3		cloudy—fair
2	62		29.98	29.90	•0		clear and clouds
	60	49	30.04	29.98	.3		clear and clouds
3 4 5	58	39	30.15	30.09	1.0	•	clear and clouds
5			30.18		0.		clouded
6	55		0,9 1.0	Ĭ		Var.	clear and clouds
7	43	30	29.55	29.52	.2	N.	snowing—wmdy
8	39	30	29 62	29.59	•3		cloudy and snowing
9	46	31	29.79	29.67	.7		clear & clouds-clear
10	51	35	29.90	29.85	.12		clear—showers
11	50	34	30.22	30.03	.7	N. F. — S.	small rain—clear
12	50	44	50.53	30.12	0.1	1	fair—rain and wind
13	65	51	30.15	30-00	1.9	s. w.	rain—fair
13	66		30.20	30 40	0.1	W.	fair—showers
15	66	1	1 00 20	1		w.	clear and clouds
13	1 00	3	•		-	.  .	CICAL GHW YIVWW

OBSERVATIONS.

March 18. This evening Cirri becoming Cirro-strati observed. De Luc's electric bells quite silent.

19. Cirro-Cumulus and gentle showers. Electric bells ring weak, but regularly.

- 2021&22. During this period mild winds and damper air prevailed. Electric bells pulsated pretty regularly: on the evening of the 22nd. fleecy evanescent Cumuli indicated clear weather. The electric bells became silent at night.
 - 23. Cloudy; fine purple and yellow coloured Sun-set. Bells silent.
 - 24. Very clear; only faint streaks of the Cirrus Linearis.
 - 25. Early I observed Cirrus, ramifying about in all directions, and becoming Cirro-stratus and Cirro-cumulus: fleedy Cumuli floated in the wind beneath them. Belis silent.
 - 27. Cirrus prevailed this evening, and became the Cirro-stratus Myoides, coloured by the setting Sun. Bells begin to ring again.
 - 28 & 29. Cirus and Cirro-strutus. Bells ring irregularly, or at intervals.
 - April 1. A Meteor seen to S. W. about 9 P. M.
 - 2 & 3 Cirro-stratus and Cirro-cumulus alternately prevail.
 - 4. This afternoon fleecy, rocky, and mountainous Cumuli; in a higher region Cirro-stratus and Cirro-cumulus in different places, the latter most abundant during the day, but the former ultimately prevailed, and at night exhibited a Lunar Halo, of the usual diameter, i. e. between 40° and 50°,
 - 6. Cirro-cumulus in the evening.
 - 7. Cirro-stratus seemed to have the Iris colours, &c. at Sun-set.
 - .9 & 10. Cirrus, Cirro-cumulus, Cirro-stratus, and Cumulus, seen.
 - 11. Small rain, only Cumuli afterwards.
 - 13. Cirrus, Cirro-cumulus, Cirro-stratus, &c.
 - 15. Tufts of Cirrus in the evening.
- N.B. From the 24th March the electric bells rang irregularly till about the 14th April, when they rang regularly and loud till the 18th, when they ceased, and have not rang since.

Clapton, April 19, 1811.

· •

TABLET IN ISLINGTON C:

played. † The Church at Great Maplested, like that under consideration, has a semicircular East end.

GENT. MAG. April, 1811.

both

both bodily and mental, of our gracious Sovereign, would, on his recovery, be again endangered, by finding his most favoured schemes for the future welfare of the community, those plans his application to which was said, on medical authority, to have originated his disease, totally subverted by certain persons whom, when a free agent, he refused to The ardent admit to his councils. spirit of Edmund Burke could not refrain from hinting at certain promotions to the Peerage that ought to take place, in which he was supposed particularly to allude to the present Lord Erskine: this, however, served only to unite the Cabinet phalanx more closely. The result we will pass by.

Had the papers in the pay or under the influence of the Whigs, as they style themselves, confined their argument to the merits of a Regency by address, and with no more restrictions than the most zealous of their leadem could reconcile to his political, or, if you will, his constitutional or-. tion of thodoxy, you would not, Mr. Urban, have stumbled on my Signature. But when you find it urged with patriotic touches, that his Majesty's precarious health, as well as his increasing years, ought to excite a general sympathy to see him relieved from the cares of Royalty, and consequent fatigue of thought, as much as possible, it is surely worth while to inquire into the probable effects of the projected. change on the illustrious Invalid : for the symptoms are obvious, that the adoption of a Regency, in the person of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, must be considered synonymons with being themselves in power, or undoubtedly preparatory to it; it is something more than an adjunct; it is nothing less than the cornerstone on which the expectation of the to derive a r party hinges, but with as little regard to the aforesaid professions, as to his Majesty's presumed feelings on the total relinquishment of the fond hope he che tenths Penips to " th In a we deildug a vehic followe column nitives glance COSSES O could a of roos of less Editor, of Lon is impo make # hordes: the fiel Control be safel jump to thing ir jesty ne ultimate treops views, il nion, we sion is l spirit th counten to moul оыг еха hordes r those of bue the like oqı useful n beat thre not mad

shought coun To those ne mystics and f it is inconceive learning that or from a 'vantag lour and addre in mock fights

[&]quot; This expression we copy from the gallant Nelson's disputches from Egypt: it is but, too consonant to the well-known comment of Sir William Temple on the conduct of the French in his day, in the countries they had overtun.

Spoken of the last campaign. See Lord Chesterfield on popular prejudices, in his Letters to his Son.

The Rockingham newspaper, before adverted to, which, as some persons of high rank, and others of more than common talents, are among the Proprietors, if not the Conductors, may be safely appealed to in point, professes to see no reason for the war being continued in the Peninsula, but to gratify the military mania of the Wellesley in mily. The celebrated opinion of the great Chatham, "that America was conquered. in Germany," will apply here, to ask whether an invasion is not more rationally vented in Portugal than at our doors.

but it would be by being released from them in common with all other cares, by so nove! an outrage on the sensibility both of the man and the monarch. It is a pity, therefore, that these bumane ebullitions in his behalf are not duly separated from the self-ended suggestions and egotisms, their inseparable concomitants. Would these imperative retainers, these state puglists, vonchiafe to favour us with the substance of their cogitations and agitations, properly sitted and winnowed from such annoyances, they might administer more "goodwill towards men."

ing the proceeding by Bill instead of Address. It should not be forgotten also, that his Lordship volunteers his sentiments; whereas the Chancellor of the Exchequer might alledge, with show of reason, that the restrictions, &c. are independent of his opinion on the point; that he found the path chalked out for him, without an optional proviso, by his Majesty's distinct approbation of the former Bill, -a Bill prepared by one of the most emineut Statesmen this country has produced.—Thus you find the crust becomes "good mutton" in more Tales than that of a Tub. LICINIUS.

ILLUS.

^{*} Bolingbroke, one of the principal of the Tory administration that dismissed the Duke of Marlborough, subsequently, in his Letters on History, or in his Letters to Swift, I forget which, takes occasion to testify his extraordinary respect for that great man.

⁺ About two years since, when circumstances were not more favourable than at present, a petition for alpeace was handed round for signatures in this neighbourhood: but the petitioners musicized very indifferently both in number and respectability.

If there be any difference of moment, it is that by the present act the operation of the restrictive clauses is reduced from twelve months to six: but this requires no comment.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF HORACE. BOOK II. SATIRE II.

(In Continuation from our last.) [] ARPYIIS gula digna rapacibus.] L I The Harpies, saith Magister Hederichus, (for whose incomparable fertility of imagination and concinnity of diction, I have a sort of overweening fondness, for which, as mediocribus illis ex vitiis unum, I crave indulgence), "had faces like maidens, but hands with great crooked claws, looked withal quite tamished with hunger, and discharge however likewise immediately from them what they have devoured. They had in the next place their wings, with which, in flying, they snade a prodigious noise, and hodies like the vulture, all over full of feathers, nevertheless, hands and feet like men, but ears like the bear."

Rhombusque recens. The turbot seems likewise to have been admired by the Romans, according to its size, as they were delighted to behold the pleasant spectacle, porrectum magnum magno in catino. The ridiculous story of the monstrous rhombus that was captured under Domitian, in the Adriatic sea, and was too large for any dish at that time in existence; and how that worthy successor of Augustus convened the senate on the occasion, and finally on a motion of the illustrious Montanus, a senatus consultum was accordingly drawn up: that a proper platter should be turned upon the spot, of sufficient dimensions to contain the whole fish — ought to be read in Juvenal himself, of whose fourth satire it forms the subject.

Haud itu pridem Gilloni præconis, &c.] At the time when this Gallonius had got the reputation of a conceited prodigal, because, at a grand entertainment which he gave, an exceeding large sturgeon appeared upon his table, that fish was in such high estination with the Romans, that it was no otherwise served up and offered round than with garlands of flowers, and with pipers playing before it*. Gallonius was a contemporary of the poet Lucilius, and he it was, properly, who brought him into such evil repute, that even in Cicero's time vivit ut Gallonius, was a sort of proverb. The lines of Lucilius which Ofellus here has in his recollection, are cited by Cicero in his disputation against voluptuousness†.

Lælius, præclare et recte sophos illudque vere, [inquit, O Publi. O Gurges Galloni! es homo miser, Cænasti in vita nunquam bene, cum omniæ in ista [cumano. Consumis squilla, atque acipensere cum de-

In Pliny's time, this once so dear and rare a dish, had fallen into such contempt, that a man of fashion would have thought his table disgraced by having a sturgeon upon it; the mulli, scari, and rhembi had supplanted him.

Vos autor docuit praterius.] A wipe at a certain Asellius Rutilius or Sempronius Rufus, who incressed the enormous list of dishes with which the tables of the Roman heliuones were loaded, by the addition of young storks. For this discovery, and because by his manner of life he had so shattered his reputation, that, on putting up for the præture he lost his election in a most shameful manner, he was regaled with the following epigram:

Ciconiarum Rufus iste conditor, Hic est duobus elegantior Plancis; Suffragiorum puncta non tulit septem : Ciconiarum populus ultus est mortem.

Cornu ipse bilibri caulibus instillat.] Namely, out of a horn oil-cruet.com taining two pounds; so that the oil with which he so sparingly treated his guests, must therefore necessarily grow-the more rancid. Gesner thinks that by reading veteris non largus aceti instead of non parcus, Avidicnus's parsimony would be more strongly marked. I am not of that opinion: non largus seems to me absolutely flat; whereas non parcus is a bantering observation, and Avidienus gains nothing by it; for he is only more liberal of his vinegar because it is spoilt, and the decrease of it is easily supplied from his wine cel-Non largus is manifestly the work of a dull copyist, who here thought like Gesner, and intended to correct the text.

Sicut simplex Nævius, unctam convivis præbebit aquam.] It is scarcely to be imagined how some commentators have toiled and drudged to distort ^{*} Atheneus Deipnos. lib. vii. p. 294. edit. Lugdun. 1612.

⁺ De Finib. lib. ii. cap. 8.

I His rival candidate for the presture.

ry, is so lenient a master, that he overlooks the grossest faults and negligences in the duties of his domestics, and even suffers the guesis at his rable to be served with state or dirty water. without perceiving or caring about it. A prudent man will act enough like Albutius, who flogs a servant on the bare occurrence of the idea that he may hand an unwashed goblet to a guest; nor like Nævius, to whom it is perfectly indifferent whether or not the water for his guests to drink, betrays the marks of having been fetched from the neighbouring duch; he insiste upon beathess and cleanliness in his bouse and at his board, without running into either the one or the other extreme."

Adfligit (or, if we rather chuse to read, affigit) humo divine particulam aure.] Without having recourse to a periphyasis, it would, perhaps, be quite in a saible to find an equivalent expression for particulum aure divine, as (felius here calls toe thinking principle, or mind of min. Ofellus afters this aether as a platonic, nor as stoil, as the expositors vanily dream: but by a very general, very antient, and certainly, even among will discover by his writings. Horace may have believed what he could about the soul, at all-events, he speaks here, not in his own person, but in the character of Ofchus, into whose mouth, in denance of all propriety, and as it were by violence, to cram an epicure in sarcasin, would have been somewhat palpably absurd.

Hos utinum inter, &c.] In this wish, which besides deriving a particular grace and propriety from the lips of such a man as Ofellus, I think I perceive something humourous, by which Horace, (for I suppose this composition to be read in the circle of Mæcenas) hoped to light up the countenances of his hearers with a smale. For so earnest an aspiration from so full a heart, so immediately on the explanation of the economical reason why their fathers thought a rather strong smell in their black game, by a sort of tacit agreement, so savoury, and the word heros in this combination has really in it somewhat comic. Ofellus, in his zeal, does not remark it - end even that is in character. i make this observation as a co-tirmation of what I advanced at the conclusion of the introduction to this I tile essay. Even the leap or abrul ' transition which he causes him to make in his discourse, the minute detaile details in the delicention of the niggardly Avidienus, the pleasant remark, "that however at least the eggs and olives were not yet banished from the tables of the Roman kings," the expression infamis acipensore, and the like, belong also to this class, and are apparently to me selected with great ingenuity, in order, from the colouring of the whole, without disparagement to the character of his Socratic boor, and the truths that he makes him deliver, to let a slight comic tint be as it were transparent.

Desaliquidfame, &c. Horace might here, perhaps, have had in mind the waster videres accome, which more than ence occurs in Xenophon: the thought, however, is in itself so natural, that he might, without the smallest impropriety, put it into the mouth of his unlettered sage.

Jure inquit, Transine istie, &c.? " True," my produgal replies, " the aephows of Trausius may read him such a lecture; but I, &c." This appears to me the natural way of constraing the sentence, which seemingly refers to the foregoing adde iratam patrumm. Ofellus had represented to the voluptuary, whom he was lecturing, the sad effects of his extravagant manner of life, and that finally, after having squandered away all his substance, he would not have enough left to buy himself a two-peany cord to hang himself withal. He now makes him reply: Why aye, thou mayst let the nephew of Trausius harangue him in this manner, one who wants to fly without wings, and to live like one of us, without pomening the means—not me, a man who posicions a princely revenue, &c. - jurgatur is accordingly here the dependent, not an industral passionm, absolutely redundant, and not necessary to make sense of the passage. By this explication, all is in perfect accordance. It is probable (as Geaner observes) that Horace here intended incidentally to whisper a kind memento in the ear of some young spendthrift of this complection. Whether the uncle's name was Trasius, Traxius, Travius, Trallius, or Traulius, is nothing either to him or to us; probably both he and his nephew were much better known then than they are now.

Videas metato in agello, &c.] Octavianus and An means of inducin diem of Julius Cr them against the tator, and the re solema promise landed estates in t of Italy at the campaign. The were indeed to h for them in mone being empty, and ing impatient of (amous divisio ag effected by force i antient possesson and the estates, a suremeut, were d proportionale nun the old soldiers. tations of Propert over the cursed, v pole, by which a of the whole, and greater part of I explains, now, w view by saying me late farm of Ofeli its pristine dimen: triumviral distribi titioned, and the allotted to others portion, and, the landmarks were d ed. Ofellus, who former demesne, of the soldier Uml had been assigned of the triumvirs, (the twofold injurvery spot where h tor, he was now day-inbourer; and then, the products of the petty estate being lemented, his earnings upon it were reduced. Nevertheless, says Horace, his manner of life continued the same.

Longum post tempus.] This, a long time afterwards, is here not a redundant or idle expression; it points at a peculiar feature in the good old Homan manners, especially amongst the land-owners. They had not visitors every day, and good cheer did not always abound: they lived frugally, and every one minded his own business, without troubling himself about others. The visits between good friends were not frequent, but were on that account the more agreeable and cordial on both sides. Even by a couple of harmomous lines, especially if, like these, they flow spontaneously as it were from the nib of his pen. Nevertheless, Baxter, from his whimsical concert, that Horace, because he is sometimes jocular, must be always cracking even ill-timed jokes, has been misled into this scarcely pardonable misconception of our author: Festive insurgit spiritu heroici carminis, quo serium risu diluat. Who would not be cured of his passion for writing, on seeing how he is liable to be misconstrued even by the learned and sagacious? The honest, simple, open-hearted Ofellus talks to his children upon subjects on which the happiness of their lives depends; he tells them in what manner he has acted in order to be happy; he demonstrates to them, from his own example, that a reverse of fortune, under which many others would have broke forth in sighs and tamentations, had made him neither leaner nor more dissatisfied; he finds even in the inconstancy of human affairs, the most urgent motive never to lose courage; and with the melting look of a father upon his children, Tedstono Bolamera, Mr. URBAN. Marik 8.

WILLINGLY resume my pen, to communicate a promised pleasing anecdote, concerning our late mutual friend, the Rev. Samuel Ayscough: than whom, perhaps, a kinder-hearted, better-humoured man never existed. Everyone who saw him, read these amiable traits in his countenance; and every one who conversed with him, soon found that countenance a true index of his mind:

" His easy presence check'd no decent joy. Han e'en the dissolute admir'd; for he A graceful looseness, when he pleas'd, put

And, laughing, cou'd instruct." This—the following little narrative will prove. ——One day, according to the rules of his office, as Assistant Librarian in the British Museum, be attended, through that grand Magazine of Curiosities, a party of Ladies and a Gentleman: all of whom, except one lady, were disposed to be highly pleased with what they saw; and really would have been so, if this capricious fair-one had not con tinually damped gratification, with such exclamations as these: "Oh, trumpery!-come along-Lord, I see nothing worth looking at."-This lady being the handsomest of the group, Mr. A. (who, although an old bachelor, was a great admirer of beauty) at first fixed upon her as his temporary fayourite; but soon had reason to transfer his particular attentions to another, less handsome, but more amiable.—On her continuing a similar strain of exclamations, uttered with correspondent looks and demeanour, he turned towards her, and said—" My sweet young lady, what pains you kindly take to prevent that fine face of yours from killing half the beaux in London!" and then directed his conversation, explanatory of the difterent objects before them, to the rest of the party. So much influence, however, she had over her companions, that, beaten as the round was to my good old Friend and fellow-townsman, she caused him to finish it considerably sooner than was either pleasant to his mind, or convenient to the state and ponderosity of his body.—While in the last room, just before he made his parting bow, addressing himself to her with that suavity of manner which was so peculiar to him, he smilingly said, "Why, what a cross little puss you are !—Nothing pleases you. Here are len thousand curious and valuable things brought at a vast expence from all parts of the world; and you turn up your nose at the whole of them. Do you think, with these airs, that that pretty face will ever get you a husband? Not if he knows you half an hour first. Almost every day of my life, and especially when attending ladies through these rooms, I regret being an old bachelor: for I see so many charming, goodtempered women, that I reproach myself for not trying to persuade one of them to bless me with her company, But I can't fall in love with you, and I'll honestly tell you I shall pity the man that does: for I'm sure you'll plague him out of his life."

During this singular valedictory speech (delivered with such pleasantry that even the reproved could not take offence at it) the gentleman who was of the party looked now at the speaker and then at the lady, with considerable emotion, but said nothing: while she called up no small portion of lightning into a fine pair of dark eyes, and some transient flashes of it into her cheeks; and then, with her friends, (who affably wished their candid Ciceroni a good morning) withdrew.

wards, on going the same round again, ' 'Rundle has a heart."

my honest friend was particularly pleased with one lady of the party: and that one being the prettiest, he contrived according to his wonted custom (as a sailor would say) soon " to near her."—Respectfully inquisitive concerning every object which time allowed her to notice, she asked a number of questions; and, most willingly,

"He taught his lovely fair-one all he knew:"

while, in the most engaging manner, she drew the attention of her friends to many curiosities which they would otherwise have passed by unobservant.—In short, as good Bishop Rundle* says,-she "being disposed to be pleased with every thing, every thing conspired to please her." was less pleased her worthy and benevolent guide: who, while she was contemplating the rare beauties of Nature, was contemplating, not only the charms of her person, but also those of her mind.—At length "the wonders ended"-he was about to make his best bow, when the fascinating fair-one, with an arch smile (looking him rather askew in the face). asked him, Whether he remembered her? "No Ma'am," said he, "but I shall not easily forget you."—Then, linking her arm in that of a gentleman who was of the party, she asked, in the same engaging manner, Whether he remembered him? To which he replied, he thought he did: but the gentleman looked better than when he saw him before.—" Now. Sir," said she, "don't you recollect once, in this very room, giving a lady, who was pleased with nothing and displeased with every thing, a smart lecture for her caprice and ill-temper?" -- "Yes, Ma'am, I do."-- "Well, Sir, I am that lady; or, I should rather say, I was: for you have been the means, in the hands of Divine Providence, of making me a totally different being to what I then was: and I am now come to thank you for it. Your half-in-jest and half-in-earnest mode of reproof caused me to know myself; and was of far more use than all that had been done before, in correcting a spoilt temper. After we had left you" (continued she) "good God! said

^{*} The Bishop of Derry—to whom Pope. Somewhat more than a year after- in a letter, paid this fine compliment-

Gene. Mag. April 180 Pt. T p. St.S. LITTLE MAPLESTED CHURCH, N.E.

I to myself, if I appear thus unamiable to a stranger, how must I appear to my friends; especially to those who are destined to live constantly with me!"—You asked me, Sir, if I expected ever to get a husband:—I then had one—this gentleman—who was present at your just reproof: and I dare say he will join with me in thanking you for giving it so fraukly and successfully."

The husband then cordially repeated hisacknowledgements to him, for having been instrumental in contributing, so largely, to their mutual felicity: "a felicity," said he, "which (should any thing lead you, Sir, into the neighbourhood of ______) you will gratify, extremely, both myself and my wife, it you will call and witness."—Then, leaving his address, and he and his lady shaking Mr. A. by the hand, they departed.

Here, surely, was a heroic triumph over temper: and, as the wise King observes, "greater" does this sensible and candid woman seem, " in ruling her spirit, than he that taketh a city."

I am, Sir, with a lasting regard for the memory of our deceased Friend, L. BOOKER. Yours, &c.

Mr. URBAN, April 1. I DEPEND upon your well-known candour and impartiality, for an early admission to the following detections of the numerous errors which a Correspondent has crowded into your valuable Miscellany—see volume LXXX. Part 1. p. 609.

Very incorrect and unauthorized notices of family descents and alliances have of late deluged your pages, proceeding evidently from the same pen, though the signatures are various. This Correspondent professes to give " a correct list of some of the families settled in England and Ireland about the time of the Revolution: with what view, however, does not appear; certainly not by way of novelty, as most of the families he pretends to describe, their origins and alliances, are well known to the public, are fully detailed in our histories and peerages, and require no further elucidation from Antiquarius, or any other quarter.

With respect to the Portland and Albemark families, their descent from favourites of William III. is recorded in history, and their alliances fully detailed by the accurate and indefatigable Collins. The same may be said of the Rochford family, of whom your Correspondent affects to speak mysteriously, though their origin from an illegitimate branch of the house of Nassau is well known, and was never denied. The ancestor of. Sir M. B. Folkes was not Attorneygeneral to Queen Anne, though here your Correspondent follows the respectable authority of Mr. Betham. The family of Le Fleming was settled in England long previous to 1700, though your Correspondent asserts the coutrary.

GENT. MAG. April, 1811.

Charles Agar, of York, ancestor of the Clifden and Normanton families, married Ellis Blanchville; but she was no heiress, neither did he survive to the year 1733: his eldest son, James Agar, of Gowran Castle, died in that year, and a monument was crected to his memory in the old church at Gowran, by his relict, Mary, eldest daughter of Sir Henry Wemys, of Danesfort, who died in 1771, at the advanced age of 106. This James Agar crected a spacious family mansion on the site of the old Castle at Gowran: it was inhabited by his, son, Henry Agar, and his grandson. Henry Viscount Clifden; but, being deserted by the present lord (who is married to the duke of Marlborough's daughter), it is now nearly in ruins.

Thomas Dawson, ancestor of the Viscount Cremorne, settled at Armagh, in Ircland, in the latter end of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, not in the reign of James II. as your Correspondent incorrectly states.

Colonel Hugh Massey, of Limerick, was not "great grandfather of the present Lord," but he was great grandfather of the first Lord; and consequently, a remote ancestor of the present nobleman. The title of Baron Clarina was not conferred upon Nathanael William Massey, but upon his father, General Evre Massey, who was a younger brother of the first Baron Massey.

The family of La Touche is not of Dutch origin: David Digges La Touche (grandfather of the Right Hon. David La Touche, and ancestor of that numerous and opulent family in Ireland) was analive of France: he bore a commission in La Caillimote's regiment of French Hugonols, and was present at the battle of the Boyne, in 1690. On the conclusion of the war, he retired from the army, and became a banker in Dublin; the firm thus established being kept up by his descendants to the present day. This David died in 1745, while on his knees in the Castle chapel. The original name of the family is said to have been Digges. They are supposed to have left England in the reign of Henry II. and to have settled in France, near Blois, on the river Mer, where they had considerable possessions, particularly an estate called La Touche from which they assumed the present surname.

The family of Canning was settled in Ireland long previous to 1689— George Cammynge, or Camuynge, was resident on an estate in the county of Londonderry, in 1018 (see Pynnar's Survey). This Cannyage was agent to the company of Londoners, in the plantation of Ulster, and held under them 3210 acres. He was ancestor of the Right Hon. George Canning, who is believed to be the representative of the Cannings of Garvagh, co. Londonderry, though the paternal estate is cujoyed by a younger branch.

Your Correspondent here closes his erroneous deductions by asserting "that the more antient families in Ireland," not at present enjoying the honours of peerage or baronetage, are 23, whom he names, with about 22 others, making for the whole island forty-five personages only of family!—credat Judgus!—Of the families he names some are most truly respectable and opulent, but cannot with any propriety be numbered "among the more antient" families of the sister kingdom.

Mr. URBAN, April 10. CIR J. Carr, in his Travels of 1804, Speaks thus of Heligoland: "a wast lofty perpendicular rock rising out of the ocean, and distant about 43 miles from the nearest shore: although only one mile in circuit, upon its bleak and bladeless top no less than 3000 people live in health, prosperity, and happiness. Fishing and piloting mostly maintain its inhabitants, who are occasionally enriched by the destroying angel of the tempest: but, to the honour of these brave men, humanity impels them to face the storm, and snatch the sinking mariner * * * They never suffer the from the deep. love of gain to excite any other exclamation than that of thanks to Godnot because of the storm happened, but that the see had not swallowed up all' the wreck from them. How unlike a body of barbarians who infest the West of England, and prefer plunder to the preservation of life; who have been even known to destroy it, while struggling with the waves, for the sake of a ring or a bauble; and who are accustomed in the spring of every year, to speak of the last wreck seeson as a good or bad one, according to the violence or moderation of the winter preceding."

This gentleman is a native of Totness, a place too near our Western savages for him to say one word in their dispraise, was not the practice, horrid as it is, beyond all contradiction. To speak of such enormities as we do of Henry VIIIth's burning his imagined heretics, were those of equal old date, would be exultation for present happier times; the case, however, is not so: any day's occurrence of the opportunity will stimulate young and old, not to brave the raging storm for the purposes so honourable for the Heligolander, but with the determined view of converting to their own exclusive profit, all the property wafted ashore. In accomplishing an intent rapacious, eagerness and hurry will bardly stop to save an exhausted fellow-creature: such an object, if left to die, can tell no tales; and this is a temptation very short of murder, or of any sin, to touch the conscience of a wrecker—too certain, I tear, such a procedure, even if violence is not actually committed!

A letter in page 121 of Fcbruary 1808, leaves me in doubt which is most blamed by the writer, the villainy set forth, or me for not doing in the case, what are, for one person, impossibilities. We hear no more of Philonauta, to me a convincing proof of his aftered notions.

For years past this very matter has been canvassed in my mind, how to be prevented; and, like other Projectors, I flatter myself with a plan, effectual, obvious, and cheap. More of that, with your leave, mext month.

NAUTA. Yours, &c.

Mr. Urban, Northiam, April 14. N inhabitant of this village hav-Ing lost a lovely infant about two years old, and every day expecting the death of another; however light the loss of Infants may be usually , thought, urn, and above the pediment the arms of Sneyd. On the outside of each pilaster stands a cherub treading upon a skeleton: on the lower part of the monument on a tablet is inscribed:

"Hic juxta situs est Johannes Sneyd armiger, filius natu minimus Radulphi Sneyd de Keel, et Franciscæ, filiæ D'ni Johannis, et sororis, D'ni Roberti Dryden, de Ashby Canonum, in agro Northamptoniensi, Baronettorum; qui utriusq; parentis sanguine illustris, ab utrāq; familia virtutes à D'no Roberto Dryden fortunas amplas accepit, hæres non degener: forma corporis et animi dotibus conspiculus; egenis liberalis; cognatis, præcipue in rebus angustis, summe munificus; qui câ erat indole, ut maximo cuivis muneri sufficeret, ea tamen valetudine et modestia, ut in privatæ vitæ otio latere mallet. Ulcere infæliciter maligno correptus obiit Mart. xxIII. Anno Dom. MDCCX. etatis sue xxxII. Radulphus Sneyd de Bishton, Patruelis ejus, et ex insperato hæres conscriptus, marmor hoc posuit."

In the North corner of the chancel is an altar tomb; having on the top, the effigies of Sir William Sneide in armour, and his lady by his side: the front side of the tomb is adorned with the sculptured images of five sons in armour, and six daughters.—The end under the feet of the large effigies, has the images of the remaining four daughters; and to the opposite end, under their heads, is affixed two coats of arms: That under the male head is, Quarterly, 1st and 4th Sneyd; quarterly, 1st and 4th Sable, 2d and 3d Argent: each quarter is charged with a leopard's face counterchanged; 3d. Argent, a cross of cross crosslets The shield under the female head is Sneyd, impaling, Or, three torteaux, each charged with a fleur de lis of the first; on a chief Azure, a bugle between 2 arrow heads Argent. Over this tomb is erected a kind of arch supported by plain pillars; the whole of which is of inferior workmanship. Against the wall on a stone within this arch is inscribed, in capitals:

"Here lie the bodies of Sir William Sneide, of Broadwall*; knight, and dame Anne his wife, one of the dayghters and heires of Thomas Barrowe, of Flyckers-brooke, in the countie of Chester, esquier; who had issue five sons and ten dayghters: which Sir William died the 6 of Jyne 1571."

Against the East wall on the South side of the chancel window, is a globular marble tablet, encircled by a wreath, adorned on each side with a weeping cherub, and surmounted by a bust; it has also the arms of Sneyd and Dryden, on distinct shields on the lower part, and at the bottom of all an angel. The arms of Dryden are Az. a Lion rampant Or, a globe between two estoiles of the last in chief. It is inscribed:

"H. S. E. Willielmus Sneyd, Radulphi Sneyd, de Keel, in Agro Staffordiensi Arm. Filius primogenitus; qui antiquæ et insignis Prosapiæ houorem, virtutibus eximius (verå nobilitate) decoravit & auxit : largis munifice fortune donis & venusti corporis pulchritudine illustris, animi tamen dotibus multo illustrior; quippe qui inter profligatos iniquissimi temporis mores incorruptam egit juventutem, derisamq; modestiam, pietatem ac fidem profiteri ausus est & colere: Ita ut nullibi honestius formam, aut pulchrius virtutem habitāsse dixeris. Longævam ipsi vitam concessisse visa est natura; non enim minus morborum expers corpus, quam mens vitii; donec fatali Variolarum labe correptus, animam puram (quasi facto morbo deturpatum aspernata esset domicilium) Deo reddidit, septimo die Septembris anno Salutis mpclexeix. ætatis suæ xxıv. Dolendum maxime quod tam teneris annis fatis succubuit: Constat tamen Deum vitæ opus perpendere, non dics numerare; illumque satis diu vixisse, qui cœlo maturus moritur."

The above Inscription, according to respectable tradition, was written by the poet Dryden.

On the South wall within the rails of the altar, is another marble monument, nearly similar in design to the above. The cherubs on each side the tablet are represented as holding a chaplet, and not weeping: the arms of Sneyd and Noel are on the lower part on distinct shields. The arms of Noel are Or, fretty Gu. a canton Ermine. The Inscription is:

"In Pace Radulphus Radulphi Sneyd de Keel armig: in Com: Staff: tilins natu tertius; Francisca uxore, filia Gulielmi Noel equit: aurat: de Kirkby Mallery in agro Leicest: et tribus liberis, Radulpho, Edoardo, Honoria, superstitibus; Obiit prid. nonas April. A. C. ciorocxev: Vixit annos xxv. M. 111. D. x111. magnum apud parentes, necessarios, conjugem, bonos, Sui desiderium reliquit: et ingente plorantium frequentia clatus est. Pientissima conjux, contra votum B. M. d. s. p. P. C."

Beneath

^{*} Broadwall, the antient family seat of the Sneyds, is situate about a mile and a half North of Woolstanton Village.

mon cupols at the West end, in which is hung a small bell. In the chapel yard is a plain altar-tomb, to the me-mory of that eminent mechanic James Brindley; who has immortalized his mane, by his superior skill in planning and conducting inland navigation. He was buried here, and the inscripextraordinary man, though originally in humble life and circumstances, by his superior genius and industry was enabled, not only to benefit his country, but to acquire an ample fortune.

^{*} Turnhurst is a mansion in this parish at a small distance South of the Chapel.
Some

326 Statistical Particulars of Woolstanton, Staffordeline. [April,

Some of his relativer and descendants now live in and near Woolstänten Parish, in great respectability and independence.

The Chapairy is co-extensive with the North side of the parish. The Chapel is endowed with an estate in the parish of Norton in the Moore; and some land in Burslew parish, together with a few small annuities, and part of the surplice fees.

The patronage of this Chapel was formerly claimed by the Rev. J. Harding, the view of Woodstanton, in right of his vicarage; but he was successfully expected by Dryden Sneyd, esq. John Bewyer, esq. and Sarah Crewe otherwise Bourne, the wife of Charles Crewe, esq. 1 and the Judge, by his interlocutory decree, declared that their abcestors and predecement did found and endow the Church of New-chapel; and that the right of nomination belonged to them. The present patrons are Walter-Sanyd, esq. of Keel, Mrs. Lawton, and Muss Alanger.

The present minister is John Lawton, A. M.

The Living of Wooldenton was formerly a rectory, valued in the King's books at 321. 3s. 9d. and was given by king Bdward VI. (Aug. 20, 1547) together with other livings to the Bihop of Lichfield and Coventry, in lieu of some lands, &c. which were alienated from his sec*. It is now a valuable vicarage, endowed with a parsonage house, close to the church; nearly 50 acres of globe, and the vicasial tithes, surplice fees, &c.

The patron and impropriator is Walter Sneyd, esq. of Keel.

The following is a list of the incumbents according to the register: 1628 Fran. Capps, buried 24th Nov. 0.44

1646 Isaac Keeling, minister.

1663 De. Do. vicar, buried 15th Aug. 1679.

1679 Richard Taylor, buried 25th

Sept. 1696.

1696 Edw. Vernon. Respecting this and the next meambent, the following memorandum occurs in the parish register :

" Gulielmus Forde, vicarius de Woolstanton, per reverendum in Christo patrem archiepiscopum institutus, 70 die Ju-lii Ahm Dun, 1698, zietkie Sessie, ad. prædict. archiepis, dusca past veedici-tuni contra epia hajas dimertis et Ed. Vernon Cle, recuperat'a Radulpho florych hajus vicarii Patrono indubitate."

From hence it appears probable that the patrounge was granted with the impropriation: and when it has came a vicatage, the histor was deprived thereof.

1698 Wm. Forde, burietl 17th Appil,

1710 William Poden. 1794 John Harding, April, 1748.

1741 Santael Middleton, who see ed in 1756. . Edward Speyd was instituted the 5th of the same year, and held to living near 39 years. He was hood at Ke sixty-

His who lege, was fi mener ordair field a corac.

Choriton (two churches near News castle under Line) Branck 18th 1453. In March 1760 he was licensed to the curacy of Newcastle pol er Lines whele he lived from that that a traly respectable and his death. For he was also inc curacy about se He to captie. M. A. 1755 ; B

2796 he was instituted to the its carage of Woolstanion, on the nomination of the present pation; which he retained, together will the curacies of Newcastle and Must, till he departed this life, March ath 1808, in the 75d year of his age.

Mr. Fernyhough was a man of ganerous and benevolent principles - an his social and domestic virture will long endear his memory in the secullection of those who had the placsure of knowing him.

He was succeeded by W. Chant A. M. fellow of Morton College, Oxford, who resigned in 1807 for the living of Denton in Norfolk.

The present worthy incumbent in John Busnett, LL. B. (see Volus LXXVII. p. 1050, a.) Yours, &c. ¥8.

^{*} Vide Shaw's Staffordshire, volume L p. 281.

i repeat, "dobe without pendentives." i likewise, according to my method of itlustration, still call the line of angels at East end of side ailes " cills of angels."

18 Mr. T. sees objects in his imagination different from me, and chooses to distinguish them by other terms than I am in the habit of using, in treth, let him do so, and leave me to my task. For example; many men call our Antient Architecture " Cothic." I name it Architecture either in the 🤏 Saxon, or Pointed style,"

Ап Авсигест.

Mer-Danan, April 10. WEN'Psome time sinceto St. James's L Church, where I beard a most ex-

* This inistake I attribute to witnessing, at the time of taking my notes, the East window of the chapel open to the thance of suffering from the severe wenther in Decomber last, as stready stated. - read, that while the Priests and Levites. were offering up praises to God, all Israel stood; 2 Chron, vis. 6. Most of the Psalms contain some matter addressed to the Almighty, which makes it convenicut and proper, that the whole of them. should be repeated by us, standing."

I trust, that the insertion of the above in your widely-circulating Magazine will be productive of some good, in more places than one; which I am sure is a sufficient inducement to you to publish it. A LAYMAN.

Mr. Umban, April 12. T is, I believe, generally admitted; I that there is no country in the world so eminently conspicuous as our own, for the exercise of compassion and humanity to the suffering part of our fellow creatures; so much, so, that when any new case of distress is made known, the hand of beneficence is immediately hold out to its relief.

I cannot, therefore, but anticipate the happiest result from the following appeal on behalf of an afflicted, and, I am sorry to add, a numerous class of persons in this Metropolis, who labour under the loss of their sight. Of these many are the children of parents who are just able to put them into the way of carning a livelihood by their own exertions, but are by no means in a situation to support them altogether, should they be precluded from those exertions by the deprivation of their eye-sight, or any other incapacity. One resource, however, is open to these unhappy people, and, to my knowledge, it has been successfully resorted to; namely, to give them such competent instructions in Music, as may qualify them for the situation of Organist in our several Places of Divine Worship. Whenever a vacancy in this office occurs, it will, I believe, generally be found, that amongst those who offer themselves upon the occasion, MANY labour under the melancholy deprivation alluded to. When the Organist's place in my own church was vacant about two years ago, four of the candidates were blind, and it is much to the honour of the parishioners that they selected one of this description for the appointment*, and I am happy to state that he acquits himself perfectly to their satisfaction.

My object in this Address, is to interest the feelings of the publick in behalf of these untortunate persons, and to express my earnest wish, that, pro-. vided they are competent to the duties of the office above-mentioned, they may invariably obtain the preference. If this rule were to be adopted, what a gratification must it be to every individual to reflect, that he was thus happily contributing his assistance to provide for those who, by the awful visitation of Providence, were otherwise unable to provide for themselves; and that he has prevented the calamity of poverty from being added to the affliction of blindness.

The Author of this Address is so perfectly convinced of the distressing situation of those who e cause he now pleads, that he could not resist the impulse of an appeal to the public benevolence in their behalf; and it will afford him peculiar entirinction to find that it has not been in vain.

Yours, &c. T. T. Walmalny, Rector of St. Martin's, Ludgate.

FIRE OF LONDON.

Mr. URBAN,

IN a work from which I have deirved much amusement, intituled,

"Anecdotes of the Manners and Castoms of London," the following very singular note occurs at p. 256, wherethe Great Fire is mentioned:

"This subject may be allowed to be farmiliar to me, and I have, perhaps, had more than common means of judging; and I now declare it to be my full and decided opinion, that London was burnt by Government to annihilate the Plague, which was grafted in every crevice of the hateful old houses composing it."

The inscription on the Mourment rashly accuses the Roman Catholicks, but the dreadful catastrophe has been more frequently, and with greater probability, ascribed either to villains who had no religion whatever, or to mere accident, the city being them built with most combustible materials.

Charles the Second and his Ministers were not overburthened with tender consciences: enough of averred guilt lies at their doors; but before we charge them with an atrocious crime, which no doubt occasioned many premature deaths, added to the utter ruin of an immense multitude, we ought to have somewhat beyond conjecture to go upon. Such an opiniga, advanced by some obscure or anonymous writer, might be passed over as an idle paradox: but when it comes from so respectable a quarter as Mr. Malcolm, a Fellow of the Antiquarian Society, who speaks of having received assistance from your worthy Printer, it calls for some notice.

The discontinuance of the Plague after the Fire has frequently been spoken of as a singular instance of Divine Providence producing good out of evil: but no thanks would be due to wilful incendiaries, if any such existed; they as little thought of hanching the City by so foul a deed; as Henry the Eighth did of laying a substantial ground for the Reformation by his oppressive and licentious conduct.

Mr.

^{*} Son of Mr. Prince, Chaplain to the Magdalen.

guard men from falling into the like dangerous mistakes.

There cannot be a consideration of greater moment to a Christian than the Religion of his Country; neither can there be a matter of greater coneersment to a Member of the Church of England than the interests and establishment of that excellent Church. Who can devise a better or more acceptable method for the public worshep of God, than that which this Church prescribes and sanctions? A method as far removed from Foppery and Superstition on the one hand, as it is from Slovenliness and fanatical Extravagance on the other: a method, as far as human abilities at least may seem to admit, reformed according to the model of Primitive Antiquity, to the exactest image of Apostolical Discipline, and the brightest purity of Evangelical Truth: a method, which, when duly regarded and conscientiously exercised, cannot fail to influence the soul, and to warm the heart, to incite the mind to the sincerest im-

GERT. MAG. April, 1811.

man would not labour with his most faithful exertions to escape the dangers, to clude the artifices, to oppose the progress, and to combat the delusions, which the zealous Partizans of this Church are continually meditating and contriving against us?

To give a picture of this idolatrous Church, for I would now confine myself chiefly to this character of it, I would recommend to my Readers to peruse some of the Discourses of Dr. Samuel Clarke, and particularly the Third Sermon in his first Volume, on this text, "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve." It would be very difficult to meet with an Author of a more compachensive mind, of a more solid judginest, of a more acute discernment, of a more extensive and accurate acquaintance with the Sacred Records, than this great and very learned Theologust: And, although in some matters of weighty importance, he may have been justly suspected at some tunes to have been errencous, yet I believe that, in genoral, he had a most complete know-Jedge of Christianity, and ever laboured to apply it to the best purposes, the improvement of the heart and of the life. I trust I shall be excessed, after having said thus much, if I cite a few of those passages from the Sermon above mentioned, which may cerve to justify the above remarks, and to induce the Reader to peruse the other parts of it. The edition 1 quote from is the Sixth, Svo. printed st London in 1743. At p. 55, after having spoken of several sorts of Idolatry, and especially that of the Israclites in setting up calves in Dan and Bethel, we read thus:

330 Dr. Clarke on the Errors and Corruptions of Popery. [Azell.

"Even after the greater light of the Gospel, Christians, as they style themselves in the Church of Rome, have not een a whit behind the grossest antient Idolaters in their corruptions of this kind; neking pictures and images of the invisible God, even of the Father Almighty, in express opposition to the Second Commandment. And in the matter of Transubstantiation, fancying the elements to be changed into the Body of Christ, and knowing the Body of Christ to be in union with his Divinity, and his Divinity to be in union with that of his Father; from hence by three or four steps of multiplied Idolatry, they pay to the mere elements of bread and wice, that Worship which is due only to the God and Father of all."

And again, at p. 57:

"As the setting up any Idol or false God, is opposition to, or in conjunction with, the true God, is Idolstry with regard to God; so the setting up any Idol or false mediator, in conjunction with, or in oposition to, the one true Mediator, is Idoletry with regard to Christ, which most evidently shews, that the worship paid by the Church of Rome to Angels and to Saints departed, to Images and Relicks, and to the blessed Virgin, is truly and properly idolatry. The excuse they plead, that the worship thus paid is not divine, but mediatorial worship, it nothing to the purpose, and alters not at all the nature, but only a circumstance of the crime; an Idol-Mediator being as truly and plainly an Idol, and a departing from Christ (or God in Christ) our only true Mediator and Advocate, as the worshiping as Idol-God is a departing from the living and true God." See Cel. ii. 18.

In the following part of the Discourse the Author shows how this Idelatry is apt to grow by insensible degrees; and how it has been productive of and immorality and herrid cruelty even insomuch (i that even of,
is prophesied i should be fee and of Proph slain upon the

He then thus wisely concludes a

" For our deliverance from this tyronary by the Reformation, we one water in the thankful; nor ever-sufficiently excelpt to guard against every appearance of approaching towards it again,"

Many other eminent Divince of a Church have laboured to grand against the errors and corre Popery, as well as Dr. Clarker however the indolence of the t the sufferings of those who baye a in the Papal Chair, or some other c happy prejudices, may have per ed men from paying due atten or studying their labours; yet I to there will arver be wenting ablest cere, and zealous Champious, tore bat the manifold corruption Roman Church, and to vi preserve, and continue to sucute ages, that admirable Bulwark eizai it, the Protestant Church of Bi Jand. A COUSTRY PARISH Pag

Mr. Usuar,

N your last volume, page 160, your did me the favour to insert some observations on Meteorological Terms used in my Journal: I now premark to define and explain certain other technical phrases which I shall have occasion to make use of in fature.

I have had frequent occasion, i ring my observations, to mention to tain luminous appearances observe about the Sun and Moon, and occusioned by the refraction of their li through an intervening medium peculiar structure: these are in co mon called Halo's, Coronn, Bus &c. But, as these phonomesa ye considerably, and as I know of me isting nomenclature calculated to e press, with precision, their several a pearances; and, as the above terms of very frequently confused with and another, I shall take the liberty to offer one, which, however in foct, may serve till a better shall found. I shall endeavour to clea them (for want of a better criter) according to the various sh ignerer which they present. It m e remembered, that their work double halo, it might be worth while to take the diameters of each of the concentric circles.

HALO TRIPLEX. Tres Annuli, in quorum centro communi Sol aut Luna appareat.

Obser. Triple halones are extremely rare occurrences.

HALO DISCOIDES. Annulus aream reliqua nubis parte lucidiorem continens, in cujus centro Luna aut Sol visus est.

Obser. A discoid Halo may be said to be a halo constituting the boundary of a large corona: it is generally of less diameter than usual, and often coloured with the tints of the Iris. A beautiful one appeared on the 22d of December, 1809, about midnight during the passage of a Cirro-stratus before the Moon.

sa, vel plures imagines ejusdem generis circa Solem circulatim dispositæ, et magis minúsve halonibus aliisque lucidis vittis comitatæ.

Obser. Parhelia vary considerably in general appearance; sometimes the Sun is encircled by a large Halo, in the circumference of which the mock Suns usually appear; these have often small Halones round them; they have usually a horizontal band of white light of a pyramidal figure extending from them: sometimes a large semicircular band of light, like an inverted arch, seems to rest upon the Halo which encircles the Sun; but these phenomena vary too much to be particularly described here; their peculiarities ought to be minutely observed and noted down in a Meteorological Journal.

PARASELENZ. Lunæ imago falsa, vel plures imagines hujus generis circa Lunam dispositæ, et magis minusve Halonibus, altisque lucidis viltis comitatæ.

Obser. The Paraselene, the Parkelion, and the several kinds of Halo and Corona, all appear to result from the intervention

^{*}The word Halo or Halos is evidently derived from the Greek and or and signifying an area. The Latin writers appear to have spoken and filtrantly of Halones, Halyses, Corone, Circul &c without sufficiently distinguishing between the Corona and the Halo—in other words, between the luminous disk, and the luminous ring.

tervention of Cloud between the spectator and the Sun or Moon, through which the light is refracted; but there is another well-known phænomenon, which always appears in a Cloud opposite to the Sun or Moon, namely, the

IRIS. Def. Circulus maximus colorutus in Nube Soli opposită visus, qui, quòd portio ejus tantum videtur, arcus apparet.

Obser. The Rainbow is an appearance too familiar to every one to need any particular description. As the Halo and Corona appear generally in the Cirro-stratus Cloud; so the Iris appears always in the Nimbus. Lunar Rainbows are very rare occurrences.

Concerning the causes of Halo, &c. all I have to say is, that this phænomenon must depend on some peculiar unexplored structure of 'the intervening cloud, whereby certain of the rays are refracted at a particular angle: it seems to me that the semidiameter of a Halo must always correspond with the angle at which the rays are refracted. In Vol. V. of the PhilosophicalTransactions, an attempt is made to account for this kind of refraction, by supposing that the Cloud whose intervention produces Halo, is composed of transparent particles of concentrated vapour, including opaque kernels; and that the Cloud which refracts Parhelia, &c. is composed of long transparent cylinders of the same texture, which include opaque ones. I must refer your Readers to Phil. Trans. Vol. v. 1065; XXII. 535; xxxi. 212; xxxix. 118; xlvi. 196; lii. 3.—M. Hevelius, end of "Merc. in Sol."—Des Cartes, Trealise of Meteors-M. Huygens, Posthum. Works, p. 293.—Newton, Optic. 1st edit. THOMAS FORETER. p. 134.

CANTON'S Edition of the "Statutes."

A curious Latin and English Edition of the "Regulæ Grammaticales" of Perottus.

Mr. URBAN,

A T a moment when investigations into antient English literature, and a love of bibliographical studies, seem generally diffused, the present communication may be acceptable to a great number of your readers.

If we abuse Old Time for consigning many things to oblivion, we ought to commend him for bringing many things to light. That he has done much mischief to Books, may, I think, be fairly admitted; but when I inform you of the recent discovery of an Edition of our Statutes, printed in English by Carton, you will allow that the aforesaid old Gentleman ought not to be censured in language of severe and indiscriminate condemnation. I have yet another bibliographical curiosity to communicate; but we will first pay due attention to our friend Carton.

Ames, p. 354, that only a fragment of the Statutes printed by Caxton was then known. By great good fortune, a complete series of the acts, passed in Henry the VIIth's reign, up to the period of Caxton's decease, and printed by himself, was discovered by me; and is now deposited in the noble library of Earl Spencer. From this copy I proceed to submit the following account to your Readers; adhering to the antient orthography only in the commencing sentence.

' The kynge our souereyn lorde henry the seventh after the conquest by the grace of god kyng of Englonde and of Fraunce and lorde of Irlonde at his parlyaine n t holden at Westmynster the seventh daye of Novembre in the first yere of his reigne, To thonour of god and holy chirche, and for the comen profyte of the royame. be thassent of the lordes spiritueil and temporell, and the comens in the sayd parliame[n]t asse[m]bled, and by auctorite of the sayd parlyamento hath do to be made certein statutes & ordenaunces in maner & fourme tolowyng: Sign. a ij. rest.

In this Session of Parliament the following acts were passed: [The titles are here printed in modern orthography.]

1. Fermedowne.

2. Against strangers made denizens to pay customs.

3. No protection [to] be allowed in any court at Caluis.

-4. Corrections of Priests for incen-

5. Against Tanners & Cordiners.

6. Felde [in bateyll].
7. Against Hunters.

8. For Reparations of the Navy.

The opening of this chapter, or preamble of the act, will cause an Englishman now to smile. Item in the said parliament it was called to remembrance, of the great minishing and decay that hath be [en] now of late time

At the end of this chapter, mention is made of the Bow; and I conceive, from the commencement of the paragraph, that it is a fresh section or chapter, with the title omitted. It begins thus: 'Item, for as much as the great & ancient defence of this realin hath stood by the Archers & Shooters in long bows, which is now left and fallen in decay for [from] the dearth and excessive price of long bows, It is therefore ordained, &c. that if any person, or persons, &c. sell any long bow over the price three stallings mij [qu. four pence?] that then the seller or sellers of such bow forfeit, for every bow so sold, over the said price, x shillings to the king."

Sign. c iiij. rev,

If Ritson had been aware of this statute, he would most probably have quoted it in his curious disquisition upon antient archery: Robin Hood; vol. 1. p. xxxvij, &c.

13. Felony. 14. Expiratur.

In the ensuing parliament, in the 4th year of Henry, were enacted the following: 6. Annulling of Letters Patent of any office in the forest of Inglewood.

7. That all Letters Putents, made to yeomen of the crown, and grooms of the king's chamber, for luck of their attendance, be void.

8 Price of Hats and Bonnets.

-'Item, that where afore this time it hath be daily used, and yet is, that certain craftsmen named Hatmakers & Capmakers doon self their hats & caps at such an outerageous price, that, where an hat standeth not them in xvj pence they will sell it for iij shillings or xl pence; and also a cap, that standeth not them in xvj pence, they will sell it for mij shillings, or v shillings-and by cause they know well that every man must occupy them, they will sell them at none esear [easier] price, &c. it is ordained &c. that no Hatter nor Capper nor other person shall not put to sale any hat to any of the king's subjects above the price of xx pence the best; nor any cap above the price of it shillings [and] voj pence the best at the most &c. Sign. d iiij. rect.

9. Of Wine and Toulouse Wood. 10. For

10. For keeping of Fry of Fish of the Sea in Orford Haven.

- ' it is so that, in late days for a singular covetise [covetousness] & hucre in taking of a few great fishes, certain persons have used to sell and ordain certain boats called stall boats, fastened with anchors, having with them such manner [of] unreasonable nets and engines, that all manner [of] fry and brood of fish, in the said haven multiplied, is taken and destroyed, as well great fishes unseasonable, as the said fry & brood to number innumerable—with the which fry & brood the said persons with part thereof feed their hogs, and the residue they put and lay it in great pits into the ground, which else would turn to such perilous infection of air, that no person thither resorting, should it abide or suffer &c.—and also causeth great scarcity of fish in that countries, where, afore this time, was wont to be great plenty &c. (Then follows the enacting part) Sign. d v. rev.
 - 12. A bill at the suit of Brouderers.
 - 13. An act upon buying of Wools.
 - 14. Actus super proclam'.
 - 15. De proclamac'o'e facienda.
 - 16. Against Thieves.
- 17. Annulling of the seal of the Earldom of Murch.
 - 18. For the Mayor of London.
 - 18. The Isle of Wyht.
- the which is lately decayed of people, by reason that many towns and villages ben let down, and the fields diked and made pasture for beasts and cattle, and also many dwelling places farms and farmholds have of late time he used to be taken into one man's hold & hands, that of old time were wont to be in many severai persons' holds & hands, and many several households kept in them, and thereby much people multiplied, and the same Isle thereby well inhabited the which now, by th'occasion aforesaid, is desolate and not inhabited, but occupied with beasts & cattles, so that if hasty remedy be not provided, that Isle can not be long kept & defended, but open & ready to the hands of the King's enemies; which God forbid!—For remedy whereof' [Here comes the enacling part]
 - Sign, e 1. rev.
 - 19. Wurds.
- 20. Forging & counterfeiting of zold & silver of other lands, suffered to run in this realm, is made treason.

- 21. For keeping up of Houses for Husbandry.
 - 22. Actions Popular.
- 23. Carrying of Gold & silver the Sea.

24. Nota de finibus.

This latter act concludes the velume, on the reverse of signature e vij. With the exception of the margins being stained from damp or mildew, this volume is in a fair combition. having but one slight MS remark, which is at the bottom: on Sign.: a in rect. The margin, in respect to size, is nearly in its original state. The type is that with which the . Diese & Sayings' and 'Virgil' &c. are printed g. and the paper, of the usual upclicar tint and consistency. It may be queen tioned whether there are three perfect copies of these precious leaves in existence. Neither Ames, Tutet, mor Herbert had seen a copy; and the.sscond of these expressly says that the: whole is very rare to meet with: In spite of the present taste, for activity? of research into Caxtonian Iore, it: very probable that the noble possessor of this treasure may boast of its masquity for a series of years.

THE next bibliographical curiosity, is an edition of the Regulæ Grammaticules of Perorrus: printed by Egidius de Herstraten, without date og As this printer exercised the. typographic art at Louvain, and as Panzer has not noticed any of his productions before the year 1484, we may take it for granted that this volume, of which Panzer himself was ignorant, was not printed carlier than-The dates of 1468 and 1476 are incidentally mentioned in the body. of the work, but only (as I conceive) by way of examples for the pupil to put these dates into Latin,

What constitutes the curiosity of this volume is, that, in a book printed abroad, at such a period, and in the Low Countries, there should be so many sentences of English incorporated in it: thus,

'Do it asson' and as vvell as thou

' Fac q' optime et quam celerrime potes.

'I am the beggest of all the men of viterb less than i and les than all they that be hygger than i.' [Subjoined is the Latin.]

I have if fyngers in myn hande longaste of all totheri and ij eeres in

184 1.] 'Regulæ Grammaticales' of Perottus.—High Sheriffs. 338

·myn hode of whiche the on is mori.' [The Latin subjoined.] Sign i 8. rect. ' Certan it is that this should not be vverten in perthemen but in merbyll or rather in bras.'

Sign. m 1. rect. scolers rect. syth to ue suf> est lits ad id reci. i bolde is myn stovet lff my y fyrst or the ikede.' goyth ig vvt hande t same n vvyt ect.

vveri not by cause of my digulte i shulde be at thy subberblys anone'— This first word is afterwards explained do 'vveri it not.' Sign. D 1. rect.

'I vvold gladely vvyt the play in mery ganys that is to say not leppyng in the felde nor rynnynge at a ball nor at the bucculer play nor yeet non othir ganos that every evenut to make a ma vveryt be bic vvoddis and hyllis and playuys and forestes a valkyog vvyt the and berrying thy gamnys in my boessym. And to make our gamyn bett' i shuld syng mery carells theri as no man shulde be to accuse us. And yf thery were any suche we shuld lyghty excuse the vyldernes.'

Sign. n 7. For somuche as thosy gyvves the from day to day to study noble conynge i am ryght glade. And i thanke our lorde that in thy tendre age hathe gyuen te suche a vvyt i trest also that thoy shall do no thyng here after wher by thoy shalbe reputies yvorthy than the ij noble and excellent men thy fader and thy grandfader'

Sign. o 4. rev. Hier is novy holsom acr beredyed no man in the postdence this thre monethis. All the borgesses ar commen agane in to the town except marius, weiche i loue as well as the he dwell yeet at phalerijs vve looke for hym to morovy or othir morovy. So ten, in our own country: and moreover when our first printer, Caxton, had probably not printed six works in the same language. Whether it was printed for the use of any seminary here, the English examples having been sent over to Herstraten, is a mere matter of conjecture. The book, which is in the possession of Mr. H. Sommerville of Stafford, is undoubtedly a great curiouty.

T. F. DIBDIN. Yours, &c.

Buth, March 12. Mr. URBAN, N p. 122, R. O. laments, with reason, the improper appointment of High therifis; but might it not be hetter at once to adopt some Parhamentary regulations, to render the office so honourable, that the principal Gentlemen of every County would be induced to solicit rather than decline it? Not having here in my winter-quarters access to the volummous series of your meful Repository, I carnot refer to any observations therein respecting this subject; though, doubtless, it has been more than once a matter of discussion.

The High Sheriff, preserving the Feudal

Fendal magnificence of antient times, makeshis appearance on the frontiers of his County Town, to meet, and guard the Judges to the Assize Hall, with a retinue of 25 * Javelin Men, These, of habited in his livery. course, were his domestics and retainers. The Sheriff has likewise his Ward, and has the custody of Prisoners for Debt. This Ward of course was a part of his moated Castle. Now. Mr. Urban, how much soever this high dignity might have been coveted in former times, when such a Retinue and such a Castle were the appendages of the great landed Proprietor, the case is widely different at present. I would, therefore, propose the following regulations, which, I think, would entirely take away the objectionable parts of the office.

manent body, elected by the Justices of the Peace. Their liveries to be provided at the expence of the County, to be changed every fourth year; and to have a stated pay, including board wages, during the period of attendance. This corps to attend the Judges at their entrance into the Assize Town; the High Sheriff, his Attendants and Domestics, going out on horseback, as now. The Javelin Men to have one superior Officer, to regulate their attendance on the Court as a Guard, and to have the custody of the clothes, arms, &c.

2. A Building suitable for the accommodation, to be provided, or built, at the expence of the County, with the King's Arms and suitable inscription over the door: all regulations respecting the letting or occupancy of which, or otherwise keeping it properly aired, to be under the direction of the Justices of the Peace assembled in Quarter Sessions.

3. No person to be eligible to the office whose name is not in the Commission of the Peace for the County, and likewise the names of those who have been selected, to be transmitted to the Heralds' Office, to ascertain their Armorial Bearings; which are to be duly reported on to the Privy Council; and, as to those elected, to be inrolled and preserved †.

4. The Processes in the Sheriffs' Courts to undergo a Parliamentary Regulation, in order to lay on some permanent officer, having a salary, the office of Gaoler.

ARISTIDES.

Mr. URBAN, March 20. ▲ WORD, by your leave, to "Over-In seers of the Poor." These gentlemen are accustomed to compromise with the Fathers of illegitimate Children, and to take a sum of money in hand in lieu of that bond of indemnity which the Law requires shall be given to save the Parish harmless and secure from any future charge on account of children so begotten and The Law is expressly against such proceeding; and Lord Ellenborough, Chief Justice, whose comment upon that text I hold to be most illustrative both of its spirit and letter, has given judgment as to its iflegality. Allow me, as a caution to them, to point out the mischief of their dealings. The certain sum paid is in a certain short time expended; but the child is still to be maintained at the Parish cost: so that, if A. or B. settles in a large parish where twenty or more such compromises have been made, he is called upon perhaps to pay additional Poor Rates for the support of those poor children, whose parents ought by previous Overseers to have been held by bond not to leave them chargeable. If this does not offer a good ground of appeal against the Parish rate, would not an action of damages lay against an Overseer who had entered into such compromise? and would not a Jury very properly saddle him with the future provision of such children? I know it may be said, that upon calculation the chances may by death be turned in favour 'of such compromise. Children may die; but, are we to hold out a bonus for the neglect of them? or are such contingencies to be considered as falling within the eye of the Law? An Overseer may say, that he has acted under the order of Vestry. But is there any controuling power can bear one harmless, or indemnify one against penalties incurred by a breach of the Laws? Whatever remedy he may think

^{*} I know not that this is every where the number: but there is a Law to restrain the High Sheriff from bringing more!!

[†] This does not express my meaning quite: but I should think that no person, not properly furnished with Armorial Bearings duly exemplified, should be eligible to the office.

being brought to a close, in a slovenly and inferior style to that in which it commenced. These observations have been suggested, from beholding on my shelves an incomplete Biographical Dictionary, commenced some years ago, by Drs. Enfield and Aikin.

Dr. Entield dying previously to the publication of the First Volume in 1799, his place appears to have been supplied by a gentleman of the name of Morgan, and the Six following Volumes were printed at nearly regular intervals of one or two years between each. The Seventh Volume was printed in the early part of 1808, and concludes with a Memoir of Cardinal Pazmani; since that period I have not been able to discover that any intelligence whatever has been given of further progress being made.

If the fate of this work is to resemble that of "Kippis's Biographia Britannica," commenced in 1777, the English Nation may be regarded pe-

GENT. MAG. April, 1811.

his relatives, and of so humane and charitable a disposition that his memory will long be revered in the neighbourhood of Hagley, the seat of his Ancestors; nor should it be forgotten that it was the pride and pleasure of his life to preserve in all its beauty that lovely and classical spot.

Yours, &c. E. V.

MR. URBAN, April 18. N examining a parcel of old family papers, I found one which I consider sufficiently interesting to merit the attention of the Curious. It is endorsed, " My Father's Speech—A copy of Sir Thomas Armstrong's dying Speech." -Of the birth of Sir T. Armstrong, of his education or character, I have no particular history. That he was well instructed, the Speech itself will prove; and that he was of some consequence, the following extract from Rapin will sufficiently evince; since by this it appears, that he was a Burgibbi gess in Parliament for the town of Stafford, and that so large a sum as five hundred pounds was offered for his apprehension by royal proclamation.

After relating the end of Mr. Holloway, the Historian observes:

"The same thing happened to Sir T. Armstrong, who had been considered as one of the principal authors of the last Plot, and named in the King's Proclamation with a reward of five hundred pounds. He had made his escape into Holland; and was outlawed, as well as Holloway. The Court, hearing that he was at Leyden, obtained au order from the States to apprehend him; and accordingly, before he had notice, he was apprehended and brought to Rotterdam, and from thence to London. When he appeared at the King's Bench Bar, he alledged that he was beyond sea at the time of the outlawry; and begged that he might be tried. But his request was absolutely rejected; and the rather, as the Attorney General told the Court from the King, that Armstrong was one of the persons who were to assassinate his Majesty on his return from Newmarket; which the prisoner positively denied. He was executed the 10th of June, 1684; and his head and quarters set up in several parts of the City. One only was reserved, to be sent down to Stafford, for which town he had been a Burgess in Parliament.

Rapin, fol. v. 11. p. 734. 26 Charles 11.

I have prefaced the Speech by this extract, because I conceive that they mutually reflect authenticity one upon the other:

THE SPEECH.

"I thank Almighty God, though I have had but a short time allowed me, I find myself prepared for death, and my thoughts set on another world, and trust in God, well weaned from putting my heart on this: yet I cannot but give so much of my little time to set down in writing my answers to some callumnies rays'd since my close imprisonment; as well as what Mr. Attorney accused me of at the Barr. I was told, a very great person sayd I was a spy of Cromwell's. I was sent from England by the best and conaiderable Friends the King had then, with bills of exchange and letters of very great importance to his Majesty at Brussells. I appeal to his Majesty if I delivered them potsafe, and his answer too, when I returned; which I had not been above six days but I was clapt up ten weeks a close prisoner in the Gate-house, and in extream danger of my life, for that journey. Before this I had been a year in Lambeth House a prisoner, and afterwards a Prisoner in the Tower when the Usurper dyed; and near starving in every one of them—very ill treatment for a spy and pentioner. My Lo. of Oxford and many others of quallity will, I think, testifye my inocence in this point: I protest before God, I never was a spy or pentioner to Cromwell or any other man.

"On Saturday last I was brought down to the King's Bench Barr on an Outlawry of High Treason. I was asked what I had to say for myself, that judgement of death should not pass. I answered, I was beyond seas when the Outlawry came out. I thought a writ of error to revise it the Law allowed. I prayed I might be allowed a tryal for my life, according to the Laws of the Land. 'I urged the Statute of Edward the Sixth, which was expressly for it; it being within the twelve months allowed by that Statute. It signified nothing: I was condemned, and made a President; though Mr. Holloway a little before had it allowed him. I cannot but think all the world will conclude my-case very different; else why refused me.

"Mr. Attorney accused me then for being one of those that was to kill the King as he came from Newmarket after the Fire. I take God to witness, I never was in any designe to take away the King's life; neither was I ever in any designe to alter the Government of England. What I am accused of I know no otherwise than by reports and prints, which I take to be uncertain: So that it cannot be expected I should make particular answers to them. If I had been tryed, I could have proved my Lo. of Howard's base reflections upon me to be a notorious falshood; for there is at least ten gentlemen, besides all the servants of the house, can prove I din'd there that day.

"I have lived and now dye of the Reformed Religion, a true and sincere Protestant, and in the Com'union of the Church of England; and I heartily wish I had more strictly lived up to the Religion; and I have found the great comfort of the love and mercy of God in and through my blessed Redeemer, in whom I only trust; and I do verily hope that I am going to partake of the fullness of joy which is in his presence: the hopes thereof does infinately please me. I thank God I have no repining at my heart for the condition my sins has most deservedly brought upon me. I have deserved much worse at the hands of God; so that I chearfully submit to this punishment, as being taken of but a small time sooner. I do freely forgive all the world, even those concerned in taking away my life: as for the sentence of death passed against me, I cannot but think it a very hard one, being denyed the Laws of the Land. To conclude, as I never had any designe against the King's life, or the life of any man; so I never perienced in that other and better world, where there is an intercessor and a Mediator, even for the most atrocious criminal.

Yours, &c. W. A. A.

stance to a Roman Catholic priest of my acquaintance, who streamously maintained that the Council had formed no decision whatever upon that subject. The next time that I met my friend the Archdeacon, I request-ed him to specify distinctly in what part of the printed acts of the Council the decree in question might be found. He reptied, after some hesitation, that he did not mean to assert, that the impagners of the authenticity of the text had been condemned in express words, but that the Vulgate Latin Bible, most copies of which contained the three heavenly Witnesses, had been consecrated by the Council as the standard edition of the Scriptures, to the exclusion of the original texts, and of all other translations. He added, that he was not ignorant, that two Popish divines, called Baronius and Bellarminus, mentioned in the Prolegomena to an edition of the New Testament published by one Wetstenius, page 107, had acknowledged that the Vulgate Bible wassusceptible of very considerable improvements, even after the corrections which were made in it by the express of the Copernican heresy, the Council of Trent strictly probibited the readding of all books, in which the diurnal or annual motion of the Earth was inculcated. If I am not greatly mistaken, it is only of late years, since the subversion of the Papal government, that the new system of the Universe has been allowed to be taught at Rome. A few particular Roman Catholics may perhaps have maintained it in private, or in Protestant countries, where they were safe from the vengeance of the Inquisition. Notwithstanding such exceptions, if they actually exist, I am sure that Mr. C. will agree with me, that the real Tridentine doctrine places the Earth immoveably in the centre of the Universe. If he dissents from me, I am ready to produce my arguments, which are copied from his own.

I have frequently observed, that of all the expedients which the Papists adopt for the purpose of throwing dust

^{*} See vol. lax.x. p. 1200. Vol. laxx. part 1. p 214, 303. part 2. p. 3, 426. 631.

into the eyes of Protestants, there is none to which they resort so frequently, as to the production of the sentiments of individual Doctors as the received and acknowledged tenets of their whole Church. A memorable instance of this practice occurred a few years ago, when the Universities of Paris, Douay, Louvaine, Alcala, and Salamanca, in their answers to a number of questions which had been propounded to them by desire of Mr. Pitt, had the assurance to disavow certain odious doctrines, which have been proved over and over again to be an essential part of the Reman Catholic creed. Although these answers produced the desired effect of deceiving Mr. Pitt, who was no great theologian, the fraud and fallacy have since been admirably exposed by a learned friend of mine, whom, for variety and accuracy of knowledge, for enlarged and liberal views of his subject, as well as for moderation and sobriety in argumentation, I do not hesitate in my conscience to place in the vacant throne of the lamented Mr. Le Mesurier has well observed, that those who consulted above-mentioned Universities "knew very well where to go: and that from any other place they might have been sent back without their errand *." From Vienna, for instance, - or Prague, or Mentz, or Wurtzburg, or Ingolstadt, or Pavia, or Padua, or Pisa, not to mention forty or fifty more Roman Catholic Universities. Indeed, I am somewhat surprised at Mr. Pitt's suffering any application to be made to the Doctors of Alcala and Salamanca. The lax catholicity of those seminaries, and their decided hostility to the Council of Trent, render their opinions, as my learned friend most justly remarks, of noweight in deciding what is or is not the doctrine of the Roman Church.

I shall conclude by observing, that questions relating to the decrees of the Council of Trent have derived additional interest from a discovery made by Mr. Le Mesurier, that those decrees "are all without any question received by every Romish priest: and among them, most certainly by those of England and Ireland †."

PHILALETHES.

Mr. Urban, April 11. A S I can boast of nothing but my A ardent zeal in the defence of our Antiquities, my Opponent is at full liberty to traduce my humble abilities in Architectural knowledge (on which my support depends) without any fear of my threatening to "appeal to the Laws of the Country." as he has done in behalf of the Artist by whom he is retained. I trust, my arguments in the cause in which I am embarked will do me right, without applying to aids foreign, at any rate, to free discussion. My Adversary again adverts to the "arch," forgetting my explanation on that head, p. 182.

As for the "tremendous sweep," which he has revived, mentioned in July, 1809, I did not send that communication, as observed in the succeeding month.

"Diskram Bethan Atos." I confess my ignorance in this piece of wit; therefore, for me, the "Old Correspondent" will have all the joke to himself. Ward's "wrapt" idea, "Sir Blood Red" still misquotes, and mis-

^{*} Sequel to the Serious Examination into the Roman Catholic Claims, p. 40. In the same pamphlet, p. 54, I was much struck by the following statement of facts: "Savoy has, after repeated breaches of faith on the part of its sovereigns, and the greatest cruelties exercised by their order, been cleared of the Valdenses, also peaceable, loyal and useful subjects: and Bohemia and Poland, which once swarmed with Protestants, can now boast of their being all uniformly dutiful servants of the Holy See." The perusal of this passage instantly recalled to my mind the inimitable roundness and intropidity of assertion, which distinguished all the writings of my dear old friend. impression was so strong, that I was hardly able to refrain from tears. The following paragraph respecting the Church of England is conceived and executed in the happiest stile, and would have done honour to Mr. Travis himself: "The word Toleration was therefore, and could be only introduced with a view of exciting interest in the breasts of those whom they are addressing, and even conciliating the individuals of that Church. which, being equally averse to persecuting as to being persecuted, has always been gladto grant to all sects that toleration which she could never obtain from Romish priests or Romish governors." Serious Examination, &c. p. 12.

attendance, on hearing our business (which he considered of no moment) declined taking our affidavits!

Turning to Sir Blood-Red, I exclaim, I have now come forward in this affair as J. Carter; and have, in compliance with your desire, appeared before a Magistrate. I therefore presume I have an undoubted right to call you from your hiding-place, your dark shrouding veil, your assumed signature, "An Old Correspondent." Come forth then, like a man, and avow your real name, if your " Defence" will bear you up! If, after this summons (it is not the first of the kind you have received from me) you dare not shew your face without your present mask, the Publick will, no doubt, treat your future attacks on my disinterested criticisms with that contempt they must deserve, and consider them as the offspring of a brain "without father bred," and nursed in the gloom of bigotry and anti-antiquarian predilection! JOHN CARTER.

"Be it known, therefore, that I, T. G. jun, being employed as Mason in the execution of the said work, supposing that I am the person designed by the name of the Master-Workman, do make Oath, and say, that I never uttered the words contained in this charge, and included (as herein appears) between the brackets, nor words to that effect; and that I do consider the whole charge as a falsehood, fabricated for the purpose of injuring my character and credit in my profession.

And now, Mr. Urban, having no other means of justifying myself to my Friends, but by asserting the faisehood of the charge in the strongest terms; I have to request the favour of you to insert the affidavit above, which I wish to be considered as an asseveration as solemn, on my part, as an Oath could have made it. And here, sir, if my Enemy will cease his persecution, and allow me to be silent, I mean to close my correspondence on this subject for ever.

THOMAS GAYFERE, Jun. Abingdon-street.

Mr. Urban, Jan. 19. DERCELVING that for some months past your respectable Publication has been made the vehicle of various opinions relating to the present State of the Jews, and of disseminating some unfounded aspersions upon the London Society, whose professed and only object it is to attempt the Conversion of that People; I feel it my duty to trouble you with some animadversions upon the various papers which have appeared; and I have been led to take this step, not from the force of any objection which has been brought forward, but because a very considerable number of your Readers will probably never hear of the Society through any other medium than your Magazine, and they would necessarily be in some, though probably a very small, degree influenced by the declarations these papers contain, and subject to the effect they were intended to produce. And here I must premise (as I have done upon a former occasion), that it would be much more fair and candid to criticize and attack the several publications which have issued from the London Society, and to judge the principles and motives of its Members, by the statement which their Reports, Plans, and Rules, contain, than to deal out a string of unconnected and in many instances unmeaning anathemas, which are calculated to entrap the superficial Reader. Such conduct is unworthy a literary character, and evidently proves that the writer is not in search of Truth:

-solutos Qui captat risus hominum famamque dicacis

As it is my intention to observe upon all your Correspondents who have written upon this subject within the last year in succession, your Renders will, I hope, excuse an irregular method, and allow me to express my thoughts as they have arisen in a cursory perusal of these productions.

The first Writer whom I shall notice is Mr. Henry Lemoine, who appears to be actuated by no other principle than that which may legitimately actuate every caudidate for literary fame. There are, however, some few opinions which Mr. Lemoine entertains which seem to me objectionable.

The first point in which I differ with that gentleman is, as to the Rights of Citizenship; being decidedly of opinion that every man who is born in England is to all intents and purposes a free subject, and intitled to all privileges and advantages which any other Englishman enjoys; except so far as he may incapacitate himself by refusing to comply with certain ordinances which are enjoined as necessary to the enjoyment of such privileges and advantages; and that he is not deprived of any such ipso facto: and I am of this opinion particularly with respect to the Alien Duty, which, I contend, no person of the Jewish persuasion who was born within the realm is liable to pay. I am fortified in this opinion by a circumstance which occurred some few years since. A Jewish merchant, born in London. whose father was an Italian, and had obtained letters of Denization, conceived that upon that account (viz. as the Son of a Denizen) he was not liable to the Alien Duty. Upon that ground I advised him that he was mistaken; but I also advised him to resist the payment of the duty, as a natural-born subject, and he did so; and he has never been called upon to pay that duty since. And this doctrine is confirmed both by Justice Blackstone and Wooddeson, the two celebrated Vinerian Professors. The authority of Lord Coke will not weigh much upon this point. It is to be observed that all opinions of Judges should be taken with reference to the subject-matter upon which they are about to decide; and if in giving judgment a Lawyer, by way of illnstration, travels in the remotest degree out of the immediate question, his Dicta are paid but little attention to, as authorities to govern subsequent cases: this is the practice of every day, and will be corroborated by the experience of every Lawyer in the kingdom. Now, the case to which Mr. Lemoine refers must necessarily (I presume) he that of Calvin, which is to be found in the 7th part of Lord Coke's Reports; and the passage which I have transcribed below is ⁻hic niger est-hunc tu, Romane, caveto.

^{* &}quot; All inflacts are in Law perpetus inimic; for the Law presumes not that they will be converted, that being remote petentia; for between them (as with the devils, whose subjects they be) and the Christians there is perpetual hostility, of this great Lawyer, that I wish all your Correspondents had as much veneration for the Sacred Scriptures as he has evidenced in the arguments of this very Case, and which I heartily recommend to their perusal.

I also differ with Mr. Lemoine upon the question of the Naturalization Bill; for, although there may be a "Mass of Evidence and Matter of Proof" to be extracted from the furious pamphlets of the day in support of his opinion, I have in vain searched for any such in the most authentic records, and those places where one might most naturally have expected to find it; viz. in the Journals of the Lords and Commons; and, although there were several Petitions presented to both Houses pro and con, yet it does not appear that the Jowspresepted any Petition against the measure; on the contrary, according to dices, then, upon Mr. Lemoine's principles, the reverse may fairly be expected to be the consequence; and if this is comprised in the plans of the London Society, may not that Society reasonably claim the authority of Mr. Lemoine, himself, that their endeavours are not so "little likely to convert the Jews to the Christian faith?"

Mr. Lemoine concludes by avowing an intention to consider the errors of the Jewish forms of Education; with a few Strictures to prove that Jews are incapable of forming principles for their own reformation or umendment. I have waited several mouths for this paper; and I trust Mr. Lemoine will not be deterred by the illiberal treatment he has received from Mr. Reid, and a person signing himself "An Unconverted Jew," from carrying his purpose into effect. But, if these are really his opinions, surely he must agree that external aid ought to be afforded them to accomplish the object, and that endeayours for that purpose ought to be encouraged.

and can be no peace " and he then adds, "herewith agreeth 12 H. VIII. fol. 4. where it is held that a Pagan cannot have or maintain any action at all."

encouraged. Subject to the foregoing remarks, and with great respect for many just observatious and much valuable information, I take my leave of Mr. Lemoine. PERSEVERANS.

(To be continued in our next.)

LITERARY INTELLIGENCE.

Bis Majesty's Commissioners on Public Records have, under the authority of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, appointed such copies of the following Works, printed ander their direction, as are not appropriated to public uses, to be sold:

Calendarium Rotulorum Patentiam. Taxatio Ecclesiastica P. Nicholai. Catalogue of Cottonian MSS.

Calendar. Rotulorum Chartarum. Rotulorum Originalium Abbreviatio, 2 vól.

Calendarium Inquisitionum Post Mortem, 2 vol.

Testa de Nevill.

Nonarum Inquisitiones.

Valor Ecclesiasticus, vol. I.

The Bishop of St. David's has in the press, an edition of " Chrysostom de Sacerdotio, lib. III." in Greek and Latin, with an introduction "on the Importance and Dignity of the Pastoral Office, and the Danger of rashly undertaking it."

Dr. Buchanan, amidst bis researches in the East, has made an extraordinary discovery in Biblical Li-terature: — In Travancore, seventy Jewish churches still acknowledge the anthority of the Patriarch of Antioch; and from amongst the Jews of these churches he has obtained a version of the Hebrew Scriptures, written long prior to the Captivity.

Dr. HAYTER'S Report to the Prince Regent, of his Literary Mission to the Court of Naples, relative to the Herculanean MSS, will shortly appear.

" Somerset, a Poem, by F. WEBS, Esq." will soon be published.

A very important Work, intituled "Desputism; or, the Fall of the Jesuits," may speedily be expected.

LUCIEN BUONAPARTE, DOW resident in this country, has nearly completed for the press an Bpic Poem of cousiderable length, and divided into 94 cantos, intituled "Charlemagne; or, Rome delivered." Its composition, and the prosecution of the various studies connected with it, have formed the chief occupation of the Author during seven yours which have clapsed since he retired from public life.

and professors were so careful not to violate; it would be undoubtedly effected by such publications as the present, the perspicuity of which renders it intelligible to the humblest and the meanest abilities, and the arguments of which are, in our judgments, irresistible.

Our zeal for the Unity of the Church is so great, that we willingly believe that they who are not hardened by the gloomiest prejudices of Calvinishe doctrines will be easily brought to concede to the evidence which is here placed before them. We do not, by any means, go to such extreme lengths as the excellent and able Cypnan did with those who first separated themselves from the Church in the third century, under the guidance of Novatian; but we sincerely with that they to whom this work is principally directed, may fol-differences which we find in Writers upon this abstruce and intricate subject, we may remark, that there have been, and still are, Chr strans who assert, that Adam transmitted no moral corruption to his offspring in consequence of his Fall; and who maintain, that the nature of the present race of men is not more deprayed than the nature of Adam was at his first creation. On the contrary, there are others, who contend that the sin of Adam faireduced into his nature such a radical impotence and depravity, that it is impossible for his descendants to make any voluntary effort towards picty or virtue, or in any respect to correct and improve their motal and rebg our character; and that Faith and all the Christian graces are communicated Ly the sole and irresistible operation of the Spirit of God, without any endeavour or concurrence on the part of Man former is the position of the Sociaians, the latter of the Calvimsts. The true doctrine will be found to lie between these two extremes. The heart, the passions, the will, and the understanding, and indeed all the faculties and powers of Adam, were greatly corrupted, perverted, and impaired by his violation of the Divine command; and this sin of our first Parent has caused every individual descended from him, to be born mto the world an imperfect and depraved creature. But though a propensity to evil and wickedness, universal in extent, and powerful in its effects, was thus transmitted to mankind, yet all idea of distinction between right and wrong was not utterly obhterated from the human mind, or every good affection eradicated from the human heart. The general approbation of virtue and detestation of vice, which have universally prevailed, prove, that the moral sense was not annihilated *; and that Man did not become by the fall an unmixed incorrigible mass of pollution and depravity, absolutely incapable of amendment, or of knowing or discharging, by his natural powers, any part of the duty of a dependent rational being. And it will appear that the Gospel scheme of Redemption, so far from rejecting all co-operation of Man, requires human exertions as indispensably necessary to obtain the effectual assistance of the Holy Spirit.

^{*} A Third Ed tion is nearly disposed of, and the Fourth is preparing for the press.

GENT. MAG. April, 1811.

^{* &}quot;Gen. c. fl. v. 17."

"I do not think it necessary to repeat the arguments which I have stated in a former work †, in support of the doctrine of the general corruption of human nature; but shall confirm the truth of what has been now advanced respecting the degree of that corruption, by a particular reference to the Old and New Testaments: I shall then shew that the Public Formularies of our Church are strictly consonant to Scripture, and cannot be reconciled with the Calvinistic tenets upon Original Sin, Free-will, and Divine Grace, subjects necessarily connected in every system of Christian Theology."

The whole of this part of the work, which is most purely scriptural, cannot be perused without the deepest impression; and, if any specification were demanded of what is most, where all is satisfactory, perhaps what is said in p. 29, et seq. on the subject of Baptism would justify the most exalted commendation, for a union of perspicuity with force of demonstration. It may not be improper to observe, that this first part of the work points out to the observation and attention of the Theological Student an Author whose works are not so generally known as they deserve — Archbishop

Bramball, of whom we should be glad to say more than the present opportunity will permit. At pp. 68, 9, et seq. the doctrines of Free-will and Grace, as asserted in our Xth Article, are shown to be fully and clearly recognized in many of the prayers of our Liturgy. In no one of these is the exertion of irresistible Grace declared or supposed; but the necessity of Divine assistance is acknowledged. Ably, however, as all this is urged by the Bishop, we know not how sufficiently to thank him for compressing the argument on this head within the limits of the following most beautiful and unanswerable syllogism:

"It has pleased God to make us responsible Beings: responsibility cannot exist without free-agency—free-agency is incompatible with an irresistible force—consequently God does not act with irresistible force upon our minds."

Chapter the Second is entirely, but most ably, employed on the interesting subject of Regeneration, a very favourite term with the modern Calvinists, and by them strangely and unwarrantably perverted. The learned Prelate explains its application and its true meaning. After various judicious remarks and energetic arguments, justified by Scripture, and corroborated by quotations and references from Hooker, Wall on Infant Baptism, Nicholls on the Common Prayer, and Secker, we are led to the following conclusion—

"Regeneration then in its true sense signifies an inward effect produced by the Holy Ghost through the means of baptism. whereby the person baptized exchanges his natural state in Adam for a spiritual state in Christ. Water applied outwardly to the body, together with the grace of the Holy Ghost applied inwardly to the soul, regenerates the man; or, in other words, the Holy Ghost, in and by the use of water baptism, causes the new-birth. And the words Regeneration and New-birth are never used in the New Testament, or in the writings of our Church, as equivalent to conversion or repentance, independent of baptism. The instantaneous conversion of persons already baptized, by the resistless and perceptible power of the Holy ^{* &}quot;Peace and delight," says Bishop Rutler, "in some degree, and upon some occasions, is the necessary and present effect of virtuous practice; an effect arising immediately from the constitution of our nature. We are so made, that well-doing as such gives us satisfaction, at least in some instances; ill-doing as such in none." And upon another occasion he observes, that "this moral principle is capable of improvement by discipline and exercise." Anal. of Hum. Nat. pp. 81 & 125."

^{† &}quot; Elements of Christian Theology,"

matter of surprise, when we learn from Bellarmine that Ossander enumerates no less than twenty different opinions on the subject of Justification alone, and that Salmeron attributes as many on this head to the followers of Luther.

The thing essential to be determined is, in what senses the terms Justification and Faith are used in the New Testament, and how they are to be understood in the Public Formularies of our Church. The use of the word Justify is, as the Bishop observes, very extensive; but the Justification of Christians invariably in the Apostolical Epistle refers to this world. This is demonstrated by various pastages; and it is also and invariably used in the same sense in our Articles; that is to say, in the 11th, 12th, 13th, and 17th, for it occurs in no other.

The explanation or rather signification of the term Faith, as applied to Christians, is more difficult; for, in contents new time a american incoming of it is admitted in the Homilies. But as all their bearers are not persons of semousness, reflection, and understanding, some caution is requisite when this complex signification is affixed to the word. For if a Min.ster should, in a Country church, tell his parishioners that they will be saved if they bave Faith in Jesus Christ, without explaining to them what he means by Faith; or even if with explaining to them the true sense of the word, he makes this doctrine the constant subject of his discourses, and does not frequently inculcate the personal and social duties separately, as essential parts of the character of a true Christian, and as an indispensable proof of his possessing a lively Faith, he will be very far from improving the morality of his audience. An illuerate person, and the bulk of Country congregations consists of persons of that description, if he or told, that lying and drunkenness are forbidden by the laws of God, and that one of Christ's Aposties has declared that no liar or drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God*, will see in this plain prolibition and declaration a rule of life; and he ^{* &}quot; Bapt. Service."

^{4 &}quot; Eph. iv. v. 13."

^{* &}quot; 1 Cor. c. vi. v. 10."

with understand what will be the comeguence, if he does not obey it, In this he cannot deceive himself; he must know whether he offends or not; and if he has any sease of religion, he will be careful to avoid these sins. But if he be told that he has only to cherish Faith in his mind, and he will be eternally happy, he will be apt to persuade himself that he has this Paith, while he is guilty of every vice within his means to which he feels any temptation. He will remember that the preacher only told him to have Faith, and that he did not enjoin him to abstain from lying, drunkenness, theft, and fornication. He believes that Christ died for the sins of men, and is convinced, upon the anthority of his minister, that this Faith is all which is required for pardon and Salvation. Whoever knows any thing of the common people, cannot but know that this mode of reasoning, easily suggested by the corrupt nature of men, is very likely to take place; and whoever has lived in the neighbourheed of certain preachers, will testify that it has taken place. The doctrine of Salvation through Faith, if rightly understood, is strictly scriptural; and I do not mean to any that, any bad effects are intended by insisting solely or principally upon this one point, But I think that this style of preaching is imperfect and dangerous; and in support of my opinion I will venture to affirm, that the New Testament does not furnish one discourse of our Saviour, one sermon of any of his Apostles, or one Epistle, in which there is not an exhortation to the practice of moral virtue, or in which a reward is not promised to boliness of life. Let the preachers, to whom I allude, read the conclusions of those very Epistles, upon particular passages of which they lay so much stress, and they will find the most carnest injunctions to the performance of the relative duties, and a variety of declarations and precepts all tending to encourage the cultivation of practical virtue. Let them constantly bear in mind the solemn direction given by St. Paul to Titus, whom he had appointed a preacher of the Gospel; and let them observe that it immediately follows the assertion, that we 'are justified by grace *;' 'This is a faithful saying, and these things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which have believed in God, might be careful to maintain good Works: these things are good and profitable unto men +. Justification therefore by grave, so far from rendering Good Works unnecessary, is the ground upon which they are to be enforced by a Christian minister; 'they are,' says Dr.

Doddridge; 'behavior derling distance spice preaching, so you derlies the without its with Salvation of your heaven.' The lateractions indeed, which its Paul growth Thurst they and Titue for preaching the thingles related principality to preaching the thingers, that their heavers might 'adorn the deed trine of God our Savious in all things's Sarely there if the implied Apolitics were guided to instruct their disaples in the manner, it is incombine apour their security.

sors, the to insist u at least w frequently
To obviat point of a of the ma
and motiv to be exp to Salvati ented, the that to she of shewin and not p delusion,

" No public ix or of the priest ou and to al one are t sion of t the Gosp proved a word of t Christian Sometim wonderft divine or mable vi frate the and cola which it he inculc he will I into the 1 point is or thatarticle w unbelief is any other. 'He that disputation in one point is guilty of all ?;' curely, then every portion and particle of the Christian character is to be explained; lest a mon by a single omission become a transgripping of the whole law. Much less are dottrined subjects totally to supersede the divide of morality, 'for what doth it profit, though a man say be both guith, with have not works ?' Let not these two, Faith had works, which Christ has joined together had ^{• &}quot;Tit. c. iii. v. 7.11 • "Tit. c. iit. v. 8.11

 [&]quot; Tit. c. il. v. 10."

^{† &}quot; 2 Tim, α. ii. ν. 15,"

^{1 &}quot; Jas. c. ii. v. 10."

[&]quot; Jas. c, 11, v. 34."

of Election and Reprobation; and, moreover, that these two terms are used, wherever they occur, in senses very different from those which Calvinsts fix upon them. Elect and Reprobate persons, in the Calvinstic sense, are not known either in the Old Testament or in the New.

Of the two passages hereafter transcribed we give the first on account of the beautiful perspicuity with which the argument is expressed, and the latter as a specimen of fine writing, not perhaps surpassed in any language.

"The Jews first, and the Christians afterwards, were the elect people of God. God give the law to the Jews by the hands of Moses, and the Gospel to the Christians by his own Blessed Sou Jesus Canst, as the rule of their respective lives. God was pleased, both by the Law and by the Gospel, to enter into Covenant* with his chosen people the Jews and Christians; to pro-effected by powers of which he is the source and origin, whether the agents be animate or man mote; and as the divine prescience is acknowledged to extend through all time; it is natural that men should attribute to the immediate act of God events permitted by him, effected by powers derived from him, and foreknown by him. This would be the language of plous and grateful men in speaking of their presperity, though they were conscious that their own exertions had been instrumental in procuring the blessings they enjoyed; and persons conscious of deserving punishment for deregard to the caus of God, would as readily littribute to his immediate act their sufferings in adversity. Thus the effus one of purty and gratitude. and the strags of remorse, would attenutely lead to expressions y uch might seem to convey the idea of divine decrees universally directing and controlling h man conduct and human affairs. The faute derivative agency of Man would be lost in the infinite self-existing power of God; and ^{* &}quot;The very idea of Covenant is inconsistent with the Calvinistic system. Covenant implies conditions; absolute decrees reject all conditions. A Covenant says, you shall have such or such a reward, if you act in the manner stipulated; absolute decrees say, that it is irreversibly determined by the arbitrary will of God, that you shall or shall not be saved, without any respect to your conduct."

events, foreseen by God, as resulting from the free exercise of faculties conferred by himself, would be considered as commandad and appointed by him.

As it is not in our powerto do justico Lo this Chapter by any analysis however carefully drawn up, we must entisfy ourselves with referring the Reader to the perusal of the whole, earnestly praying that it may have the same pleasing, and we hope satisfactoty, influence upou him which it has had upon ourselves. The concluding pertion more particularly will be found useful to the Parochial Clergy, to whose serious consideration we most expestly recommend an attentive examination of what is urged from p. 279 to the end of the Chapter. It would almost appear as if Cyprian himself, trembling at the remotest idea of any divisions in his Church, was addressing his people at Carthage, to preserve the spirit of unity second and iat'

abk
mat
Cal pro ribl stra to whi
hor ties whi its i and tak His who doc 16th tari blis

Bis ler the Ign to the to

th

AR pu Ca ide

ein Pa

lie golden tri wi Fa

he he sen sel

The Eighth and last Chapter contains a brief historical account of what are now called Calvinistic Doctrines. The result is, that the early Calvinists of this country endeavoured without success to obtain a change in our Public Formularies, conformable to their views and prejudices; while their more modern successors have adopted a different mode, and have contended that our Articles, Liturgy, and Homilies, are already Calvinistic. That this is absurd and groundless, the Bishop of Lincoln has fully and jufficiently demonstrated.

"There is not in any part of our Book of Common Prayer, or in our Articles, a single expression which can fairly be interpreted as asserting or recognizing any one of the peculiar doctrines of Calvinism. Redemption is never declared to be irrespectively partial, Human co-operation is never excluded where the influence of the Spirit is mentioned; Divine grace is never considered as irresistible or inde-

37. Renwal of the Greek and Roman Emp.res., &c. (Cancluded from p. 259.)

WE come next to the Book of Revelations, several of which are considered as relating exclusively to the latter course of the Jews, foretelling a great dereliction on their part, and culpable adherence to an Antichristian power, which subjects them to severe punishments and pruning before they are restored. But, as it would not come within our limits to follow through the various branches of the Apocalypse, we shall confine ourselves chiefly to the line of prophecy concerning the four original empires, the history of which, it is presumed, continues under varied types in this Book of St. John, who in the first century of the Christian era received the following command, Revelations, chan. i. ver. 19, Write the things which thou HAST seen, and the things which ARE, & the things which shall be menearten.

more old than common; but such, I must confess, to which I never found a satisfactory amwer from the pen of Supralapsarian or Subispeasina, within the small compass of my reading."

 This injunction," says the Author? considering that St. John had been contemporary with every event happening within the newers of Christian-Ry, evidently constitutes him both the votrospective' and the anticipating listorian of the whole of that period." Then, treating upon the seals and frompets as prefatory and indicative as far as the gith chapter where they end, be considers the with chapter as the first of the opened book, alleging That sipparently it begins a regular series of the hierarchical events of the Christian period by the birth of its founder/Christ. The next chapter, the xiiith, is supposed to be synchronied with the xiith, and to resume, from exactly the same point of time, the prophecy concerbing the predicts ed empires of the Metallic Image (or four beasts of Daniel which among there bure seven heads) by one great beast' Bearing seven honds, which, continues Wie Author, "was felfilled, at that particular time, by the Roman conquests bigging ander their one dos minion the remains of the Amyrians the Perilon, and the Greeka compires, the foundations of which are supposed to be termed the earth.40 But, provious to the discussion, the Author says, d The beast of this chapter will be found to exhibit some features so certainly resembling the circumstances of the universal Roman empire, that they cannot be anstaken by those who are conversant with the prophetic Tymbols, and those parts of the interpretations concerning that empire, whereon the learned seem agreed. But in some other respects it must be acknowledged, that the portrait sometimes rather falls short, and sometimes exceeds, the circumstances of that period of the empire; but this may naturally be expected, where the language, admitting a second sense, is more fully adapted to a subsequent state of the same subject, which has not yet appeared; when, therefore, an interpretation is here met with, the past fulfilment of which does not seemquite to have answered the words of the prophecy, it must be recollected that the first fulfilments of this chapter are only those of the first sense, ' which admits of an imperfect accom-, plishment; yet that only having taken place can strictly be examined here, while the fall accomplishment to be seen in the revival of the beast, as suitable, that there can be no tion

"The next corroboration is from St. Luke, chap. ii. verse t. came to pass in those days that there went out a decree from (wear Augustus that all the world should be taxed. Verse 3. And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city. Verse 4. And Joseph also went up from Gulilee. Verse 5. To be tuxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child. Verse 6. And so it was, that while they were there the days were accomplished that she should be delivered. The recent acquisitions of territory, the full settlement of the empire, and the rise of a new form of Government, afforded a concurrence of great events, from the nature of which the old empire necessarily acquired a new form; and its altered state naturally takes a fresh date from that remarkable era, at the commencement of which its new form was valued and certified by the imperial authority. The four beasts with seven heads were then found to be legally united in the year A. D. GERT. MAG. April, 1811.

and the Roman conquests, as to absorb also the two other empires, the Assyrian and the Persian, and thereby infolded all the seven heads; and whether the flight of the last Emperor of the Roman dynasty did not then, in the remarkable year A. D. 1261, remove the only tie which could be said still to hold the long declining Eastern and Western empires together?

" And for a confirmation of the dissolution of the combined beast, and prediction of his future revival, we are carried on to the winth chapter, where a woman drunken with the blood of the Martyrs of Jesus, which circumstance alone proves her to be several centuries on in the Christian era, is found seated on the remains or semblance of the beast of the xiiith chapter which, we have seen, receded lastly from the seven hills of Constantinople: and upon St. John's expressing great admiration, an Angel destined to pour out one of the seven last plagues of the earth (which the Author thinks again indicates the advanced period in which this vision is to be dated or fulfilled) speaks to him as follows, The beast which thou sawest was and is not, and shall ascend out of the bottomless pit.

again

"The beast therefore is absent at the time in which this angel of the vials speaks; and the cessation of the power of the ten-horned beast of the xilith chapter is a necessary event in the chronological progress of the Revelations, because his term of existence was limited to 1260 years, and it is now above 1700 since St. John wrote. the prophecy; the term is therefore expired. (The decline and fall of the Roman empire has been evident to all the world.) And the avowed semblance of that beast, thus unexpectedly produced in this long subsequent chapter, must be for the express purpose of marking to us, that, according to the prophecy of the xiiith chapter, St. John's combined beast was no longer in existence.? But here we must remind the Author, that there is no necessity that the term of 1260 years is expired, unless he has dated its commencement right. The next part of the Author's plan is, to shew that the second sense of the xilith chapter holds forth in a greater degree of strictness the portrait of the revived beast, when his latter term of prevalence will only be literally forty and two months; and this second portrait of the latter state of the beast, the Author insists, is not only necessary to corroborate and illustrate all the prophecies of the Old Testament, which indisputably declare that the Roman empire will be in existence at the end of this world; but also the prediction of his revival in the xviith chapter of this book, there being no other portrait of him in his revived state in the Apocalypse, than that which a second sense of the xilith chapter can afford. Nevertheless, as the latter conflicts of the world are to increase, and he is then to be pre-eminent; there can be no doubt but that he has a conspicuous portrait for his latter term of action in the illustrations of St. John. He concludes, that the fall of the Turkish empire is shewn by the fall of a star under the fifth trumpet; and that a strong corroboration of Daniel's intimations concerning the revival of the Greek empire, in the latter part of his viiith chapter, here appears under the sixth trumpet, where the four angels are loosened from the mystic Euphrates; which four angels, as they act the warlike part of encountering and slaying the third part of men, are conjectured to be the four heads of the leopard, or four rising divisions of Alexander's Grecian kingdom long since bound down by the Turkish waters, or river Euphrates, which is dried up under the corresponding sixth vial.

Having thus, as briefly as the subject would admit, given one line of the interpretations; it only remains for na to say, that, in respect to the general execution of the Book, whatever foundation the Author's apprehensions may be thought to have, or however some of them may arrest the attention, his manner of prosecuting his arguments and bringing forward corroborations from other parts of Scripture, and from history, are sq. desultory as greatly to weaken the force of them. But perhaps it is but fair to add, that, although be goes counter to many other interpreters. he attacks no man, or takes up the Reader's time with confutations: but simply offers an hypothesis unon a subject most worthy of consideration, and of which it is acknowledged that further elucidation is both wanted and expected at this perticular period of the world.

38. The Life of Lord Nelson, by Mr. Clarke and Mr. M'Arthur. (Continued from p. 49.)

THE farther we advance in this very laborious and interesting work, the more sensible we become of the extreme difficulty of the Biographer's task, so as almost to feel a wish to retract what we had said in a former Number, though even that was accompanied with our warm praise and commendation. We now perceive many things in favour of the manner. in which Mr. Clarke has executed his labour, that did not strike us on a casual reading. The rich and copious materials for this Life could not possibly be all collected at first. return of Naval Officers from abroad. or their arrival in the Metropolis, continually threw new lights on the subject, and produced documents of the ultmost consequence, that had never numbers, from the most interesting parts of these Volumes.

Amidst a great deal of important information respecting Lord Nelson, which had never before been given to the publick, is the following account of his Pursuit of the Combined Flects to the West Indies, at the beginning of the year in which he fell so gloriously. We are necessarily obliged to condense in our Extracts, what is given in the Life with more interest and at greater length:

Volume II. Page 400. "Lord Nelson, at the close of the month of March (1805), had nearly given up all idea of the French fleet again leaving Toulon; and the time was rapidly approaching, when, being of opinion that they would be laid up for the Summer months, he had determined to return to England to recruit his health. I had hoper, said he in writing at that time to a Civilian, Dr. Sewell, to have sent the French fleet for condemnation, and although my hopes diminish, yet it is possible it may arrive before April is over; after which some other Admiral must have that great felicity. He soon afterwards received a report that the MINDS HELD MINDSHIPS HING & DOTO a laudable, anxiety of mind, until I have the happiness of seeing them. However, I have covered the Channel, from Barbary to Toro, with frigates and the flect. The French could not pass before to-day, if this be their route. I must leave as little as possible to chance, and I shall make sure they are to the Eastward of me, before t risk either Sardinia, Sicily, or Naples; for they may delay their time of coming even this distance, from an expectation that I shall pash for Egypt, and thus leave them at liberty to act against Sard nia, Sicily, or Naples. I have taken every thing into my most serious consideration; and although I may err in my judgment, yet your Lordship may rely, that I will do what I think is best for the Houseur of my King and Country, and for the protection of his Majesty's Allies. I will not say more."*

"Lord Nelson waited in the situation he had thus and cloudy taken, until he was satisfied that the object of the Enemy was not to pass between Sardinia and the Coast of Barbary, as Gauteaume had done; and the British Fleet then here up on the 7th of April (1805), for Palermo, in order to cover Sicily, and the more Eastern parts of the Mediterranean, in case the Enemy should have passed to the Northward of Corsica." ***

^{* &}quot;The Hun, Courtney Boyle, a Commissioner of the Transport Board,"

Page 402. "Not liaving obtained any information either from the Frigates, or from Palermo or Messina, it appeared to him no longer doubtful, that the Enchry were gone down the Mediterranean. which he changed his course, and from the 11th of April used every possible exertion to get to the Westward; sending frigates to Gibraltar and Lisbon, for the purpose of procuring provisions and obtaining intelligence, one of which was also detached to Admiral Cornwallis off Brest. It was the 16th of April (1805), before any tidings could be obtained of the Enemy; when it appeared from a Neutral spoken by the Leviathan, that the French had been seen on the 7th, off Cape de Gatta, and it was soon afterwards ascertained that they had passed the Straits of Gibraltar on the 8th. If this man speaks true, said Nelson, they may be half-way to Ireland or Jamaica, by O that I could but find them!

I am very unhappy." * * * * " During the Summer season in the Mediterranean, very little dependence can be placed on the winds, but April was too early to reckon on such unsteadiness; they proved, however, favourable in the extreme to the Enemy. For whilst the English Fleet, as the Admiral remarked, had strong Southerly and Westerly winds, the French had them equally fresh from the North-East. Thus, had be obtained earlier intelligence of their destination, it would have been impossible to overtake them in the Mediterranean; and as far as he could form any judgment of their destination, he believed it to have been Easterly. By the wise measures he immediately adopted with his five frigates, he effectually guarded Sardinia, Naples, Sicily, Egypt, and the Morea; and with such objects and claims on his protection, it was impossible for him to have gone to the Westward, until he had ascertained their real Notwithstanding every exertion, object. he did not get in sight of Gibraltar before the 30th of April, about which time he first heard of Villeneuve having been reinforced by some ships, under Gravina, from Cadiz; and as there was no possibility of passing the Straits at that time, and his ships would be equally ready to embrace the least favourable spirt of wind when at anchor on the Barbary shore, as by remaining under sail, he profited of the opportunity of watering in Mazari Bay, and ordered the Superb, Capt. (now Admiral) Sir R. Kentes, to Tetuan, to procure cattle, fruit, and vegetables for the squadron. In a few hours, a very considerable supply of the latter salutary article was taken off by ten ships.

!

The expedition, activity, and zeal, which appeared throughout the squadron in watering and refitting, were perhaps without a parallel: a laudable spirit animated and impelled the Officers and Seamen of each ship on such occasions, and made it a perpetual display of good-humoured emulation to be reported the first ready. Such was Nelson, and such the manner in which the operations of his Fleet were performed.

"His own sufferings at that time continued to be very great, and some idea ofthem may be formed, from the following passages in his letters. April 19. My good fortune, my dear Bail *, seems flown away. I cannot get a fair wind, or even a side wind—dead foul! dead foul! but my mind is fully made up what to de when I leave the Straits, supposing there is no certain information of the Enemy's destina-I believe this ill luck will go near to. kill me; but, as these are times for exertion, I must not be cast down, whatever I may feel.'.....Page 404. To Lord Melville on the same day be emphatically wrote as follows:—" I am not made to despair-what man can do shall be done: I have marked out for myself a decided line of conduct, and I shall follow it well up: although I have now before me a letter from the Physician of the Fleet, enforcing my return to England beforesthe hot months. Therefore, notwithstanding I shall partue the Enemy to the East or West Indies, if I know that to have been their destination, yet, if the Mediterranean Fleet joius the Channel, I shall request with that order permission to go on shore.".....

"On the 5th of May a breeze at length sprung up from the Eastward. The signal was immediately made to weigh; the Superb (Capt. Keates) was recalled from Tetuan, leaving the cattle and other refreshments which had just been brought down, on the beach; and all the squadrow. was seen standing to the Westward; when the wind suddenly failed, and on the 7th, Lord Nelson anchored in Rosia Bay, Gib-But before all the Fleet had done the same, there was every appearance of a Levanter coming on: the ships were unmoored, the provisioned Transports taken in tow, and at six o'clock the whole was again under sail steering through the Straits. 'If nothing is heard of them from Lisbon, (wrote he to Mr. Marsden) of from the Frigates I may find off Cape St. Vincent, I shall probably think the rumours which have been spread are true, that their object was the West Indies; and in that case, I think it my duty to follow them—or to the Antipodes, should I believe that to be their destination. I shall dispatch a Sloop of pushing off Cape St. I incent, where I hope to be more fortunate, and I shall join the Amazon from Larbon, from which place I have accounts to April 27, when they know nothing of the Enemy. If I near nothing, I shall proceed to the Best Indus.

^{* &}quot;Sir Alexander Ball, late Governor of Malta, and one of the Captains in the Battle of the Nile."

" It was not, therefore, until this great Officer had thorough y examined the Mediterranean to the Eastward, had weighed in his miad the probability of the Enemy's having taken a Northern direction on leaving the Straits, and had decried what position in that case to adopt to cover Ireland and Brest; that, on hearing from Lisbon so late as April 27, when nothing had been known of the Florts, he at length allowed his daring and enterprising genius to adopt the plan of that pursuit to the West Indies, which so effectually discrincerted the intentions of the knemy, and drove them back terrified to Europe. On passing the Straits, a circumstance occurred, not bitherto noticed, which must have proved of considerable comfort to his mind, on having resolved amidst such uncertainty to take so decide I a measure; as it ◆aabled him to proceed with greater confidence than he could otherwise have done. At that critical moment, but may be entitled. In the Volume now before us, this leading point is decidedly settled. The Author is sufficiently known, to prepossess the Reader with a favourable idea of the Work he is about to peruse, and to satisfy him that the descriptions are judicious and correct.

"The following pages," Mr. Jacob says contain the substance of Letters wretten to my family and friends during six months which I passed in Spain, they have, however, undergone such asterations as were necessary to render what was originally intended for private amosement, not totary unfit for pubne perusal, and those which relate to the Mahommedan dominion, have been entirely composed since my return. In addition to what I have borrowed from Ocampo, Magden, and Mariana, I am also indebted to a very accurate abstract of the state of the Moors in Granada, worten by simon de Argote.

"It will be perceived, that I have only paid that attention to politial subjects which the interesting events daily passing before menaturally demanded. I believe, it will be found, that my open one of public public characters, of the nature of the government, and of the disposition of the great mass of the people, are corroborated by all who have visited the Peninsula; and I feel additional confidence in the sanction they receive from the able letter of the Marquis Wellesley to Mr. Canning, which is printed in the Appendix.

"The traces of national character are so strongly marked on the inhabitants of Spain, that few Englishmen who have visited that country would find much difficulty in delineating its prominent features. Whatever opinions we may entertain with respect to domestic politics, we all unite in admiring the efforts of the Spanish people, in their attempt to liberate themselves from oppression. We all join in respecting the manly firmness with which, after repeated reverses, they continue to resist their invaders; in execrating the government which has so grossly abused their confidence; and in fervently wishing their ultimate freedom and happiness.

"In preparing this work for the press, it has been my object to select such materials only, as I conceived would interest and amuse, while they might convey some To myself, amidst many information. anxieties, it has been a pleasing resource to retrace the scenes I had viewed, and to travel over again the roads I had passed.

-" Juvat exhaustos iterare Labores, Et sulcata meis percurrere littora remis."

The Volume is embellished with Thirteen Plates; which, in the larger sized paper, are beautifully coloured.

Mr. Jacob's description of Cadiz, at the present momentous period, will be considered highly interesting:

"The view on entering the bay of Cadiz presents the finest collection of objects that can be conceived: on one extremity of the left point is situated the town of Rota, a little farther the castle of Santa Catalina and the neat city of Santa Maria; at a greater distance, on the lap of a lofty hill, stands Medina; nearer the sea the town of Puerto Real and the arsenal of the Caraccas; and on the extremity of the right hand point of land the city of Cadiz. To add to the splendour of the scene, this extensive bay was filled with the ressels of different nations displaying their respective colours amidst a forest of masts. The whiteness of the houses, their size and apparent cleanliness, the magnificence of the public edifices, and the neat and regular fortifications, form together a most striking assemblage of objects. The ground opposite to Cadiz has little appearance of verdure; and, except the vineyards near Santa Maria and Rota, all looked brown and barren, I am aware, that in no other country must I expect the beautiful verdure of England, which, in spite of our hazy atmosphere, enlivens our prospects and gives them a richness and variety which I have looked for in vain in Germany, in America, and the West Indian Islands.

"We landed between four and five o'clock, at the wharf without the Sea-gate, amidst a crowd of boats which made it difficult to approach the shore. The precautions of our friends, who had provided a house for our residence, and got our baggage passed through the gates with alight examination, prevented our feeling the inconveniences usually experienced at first landing in a foreign city. After I had entered the gates, and become a little reconciled to the nauseous effluvia of oil and garlick, I was greatly struck by the extraordinary scene around me; and could have imagined almost that I had suddenly been dropped from the clouds into the midst of a large masquerade: the variety of dresses and characters, the swarms of people, the height and externally clean appearance of the houses, with the curtains drawn across from one side to the other, and the extreme narrowness of the streets, rendered still more so by the projecting balconies of painted or gilt iron grating, all produced feelings I never before experienced, and which no language can describe.

" We took possession of our apartments, and were quickly settled: they are only one story from the ground, and with the exception of the staircase, which is public and indecently filthy, are tolerably neat and conifortable. The floors are paved with brick, the rooms dark, and consequently cool, with large windows opening into balconies towards the street; which is so narrow that we can almost shake hands The furwith our opposite ucighbour. niture is not of the best kind; the beds, however, which are on tressels and removed in the day, are good; and the sheets, which are made of calico with a border of muslin about a quarter of a yard wide, are clean. I have hitherto had no reason to complain of the heat; in fact, it has not been warmer than some of our hottest days in England. Every thing here seems contrived to guard against heat: and the inhabitants are certainly successful in the effects produced by their precautions. The thermometer in my room has varied only from 72 to 75 since our landing.

"I have visited ——, who resides in a noble house. The gate at the entrance resembles that of a church, and within is a large quadrangular court, paved with marble; the ground floor is occupied by warehouses, and the apartments above, in which the family reside, are lofty and spacious; some of them are fitted up very splendidly, or, to speak more correctly, with that mixture of magnificence and extreme homeliness so frequently to be observed

" Induga considerante attenuon oc paid to the cleanliness of the streets, none is shewn to the entrances of the houses, which are the receptacles of every kind of filth: and, except in the entrances to the houses of the richer class who keep a Gailego constantly sitting at the door, you are almost suffocated by steaches before you reach the apartments.

" As this city is placed on a peninsula, at the termination of a long sandy isthmus, there is no ground unoccupied, and little can be spaced for squares. The Plaza de St. Antonio is the only one, and is very small; but, being surrounded with magnificent houses, and contrasted with the streets (all of which, with the exception of a broad street, are very narrow), it has a good effect, and is the principal resort of the inhabitants. To the ladies it is the mail; to the merchants the exchange; and to the officers, the parade. The Alameyda, or public walk, is very beautiful; always dry under foot, and furnished with good marble seats on both sides; being close to the sea, the trees do not thrive, and indeed afford very little shade: the cool sea breeze is however enjoyed towards evening, and the walk is then crowded with the best company the city contains. The tent in some of the private houses, where part es meet regularly every night, and play for large sums at games of hazard. The game now in vogue is called Monte, a species of lansquenet, but more complicated, requiring little skill, and played for any sum the parties may chuse to stake, provided it does not exceed the amount in the bank: it is quickly decided, and consequently the more dangerous. Another game, called 'Pecado,' in plain English Sin, is also much practised: it well deserves its name, for the decision is so very rapid, that money to a large amount may be speedily gained or lost without the slightest exercise of the mind. At such parties the quantity of gold and silver spread on the table is astonishing; and the rapidity with which it passes from one possessor to another strikingly exemplifies the uncertainty of a gamester's wealth. understand that whist, back-garmon, and chess, are unknown among the Spaniards: they probably do not possess sufficient stimulus, and require more mental exertion than is congenial with the disposition of the people. One of the chief amusements of the higher class of inhabitants is the theatre; and as the performance begins early and continues only about three three hours, it does not interfere with the more serious business of gaming which usually concludes the night.".....

"Yesterday, though Sunday, the market was excessively crowded, especially the fish and vegetable markets; the latter was supplied with a surprising profusion of every thing in season. Garlick in this place is a most important article, and is sold in strings three or four yards long, which are piled in stacks. The market also abounded with onions, grapes, molons, pumpkins, turnips, carrots, and celery of a prodigious thickness. The consumption of meat in this city is very small, and the little consumed is of a very inferior quality. The poorer and middle class of people live principally on fruits and vegetables, with fish which is sold fried in oil, at shops in different parts of the town.".....

there are no springs on the peninsula but what are brackish, fit only for washing, and not for culinary purposes; every house has a cistern, or tank, filled with rain water, but they usually prefer drinking that which is brought in casks, by boats, from St. Mary's. To cool this water, and render it fit for drinking, they filter it through small jars of porous clay, which renders it very pleasant and refreshing. The richer inhabitants use water cooled with ice, which is brought daily from the mountains of Ronda in large quantities, and in this climate is a great luxury."

No object either of curiosity or utility appears to have escaped our attentive Traveller's observation; and the result of his various researches is concisely and accurately detailed.

The Public Buildings, the Churches, the Monasteries, the Theatre, the Paintings, the Commerce, the Manufactures, the Agriculture. &c. are all, in the different places which Mr. Jacob visited, the subject of investigation.—In a Letter from Seville, he says,

"No one of the various religious observances, with which this city abounds, appears more ludicrous to me, or more solemn to the inhabitants, than the procession of the host to the houses of the sick, at the hour of approaching dissolution. A priest, seated in a sedan chair, with the holy elements in a gold case on his lap, escorted by a guard of soldiers, and preceded by a bellman, is literally denominated by the people 'His Majesty coming down the street.' To increase the singularity of the spectacle, the bellman strikes three strokes, in allusion to the three persons of the Trinity, and then ceases. At this well-known sound, whatever be the state of the weather, or the condition of the streets, every one drops on his knees, and continues in this devont posture until the object of adoration is out of sight. If this procession should pass through a street, containing a theatre or a ball-room, the actors on the stage, and the dancers at the assembly, alike drop on their knees till the sound is lost, when they resume their thoughtless dissipation."

" However decorous the Spaniards may be in the performance of their public devotions, nothing can be more indecent and slovenly than the manner in which their domestic worship is conducted; a circumstance which I have frequently noticed in the family with whom I lodge. Towards the conclusion of supper, when seated round the table, the master of the house commences with repeating ten Ave Maria's; the wife repeats the Pater Noster and her ten Ave Maria's, others at table repeat in the same manner, while one of them with a rosary of beads keeps the account, till they have repeated the Ave Maria fifty times, and the Lord's prayer five times, the number being accurately corrected by the string of beads. They then say a litany, adding to the name of every saint of a long list, 'ora pro nobis;' then a prayer for the dead, another for protection during the night, and conclude the whole with a Gloria Patri. The words are uttered with as much rapidity as possible; and if any employment calls away the person who is repeating, he performs the work without interrupting the prayer, or losing any time; ' in fact, the Spaniards appear to act slowly and deliberately in every thing they undertake, except it be in this single instance of family worship.

"Under every strong emotion of mind, a Spaniard has recourse to Religion; and naturally crosses himself, to calm the rage of passion, dispel the horrors of fear, and allay the feelings of surprise and astonishment. The solitude of a church-yard, the loneliness of a desart, and the darkness of night, are disarmed of their terrors by this magic sign; and even the exclamations of wonder, excited by English ships of war, and English regiments, (and nothing has excited more wonder) can only be silenced by using this never-failing and powerful charm.

"With all this attachment to forms and ceremonies, it might naturally be expected that the Clergy would be looked upon as objects of veneration; but, so far as I can judge, this is by no means the case. The language held towards the ministers of religion is not always respectful, and is sometimes scurrilous. A few days ago the auxiliary bishop of this city made a tour round his diocese, for the purpose of confirmed, a small sum of money was required, which Englishman had imported some printed bandkerchiefs, with patriotic emblems, and the names of the patriot generals. But the proter in England had unfortunately muxed with these patriotic emblems some of the symbols of Religion, such as the crosser, the cross, and the mitre. The Inquartion became acquainted with the fact, and, fearing that using handkerchiefs on which such sacred objects were imprinted. would tend to bring Religion into contempt, se zed the whole parcel, and they were burnt by the holy office. Another merchant had a number of bales of Spanish wool, which were about to be shipped for England, by accident, these bales were marked with a cross; information of it was conveyed to the inquisitors, and a consultation was held, to determine m what mode proceedings should be instituted against a person who could apply that sacred symbol to so common a purpose. As the person in question was an undoubted Catholic, a friend gave him information of what was going forward; and being aware of the consequences, he immediately rectified his error, by protracting the upright line of the cross, and adding to the bottom of it two flukes, so that when the officers of the Inquisition came to seize GENT MAG. April, 1811.

made; and on a small stand, a Latin prayer, said by each inquisitor before the trial commences. The prayer is appro-priated to a judge, and merely implores dayine guidance to enable him to discharge his duty with uprightness and impartiality. The records of this court, with all the processes against those who have been confined, are preserved with regularity in an adjoining room, but are not allowed to be exammed. The church is simple and elegant. The interior is of white marble, The form is circular; and it is lighted from a beautiful dome. I saw one of the apartments in which prisoners are confined, and was told the others were similar; it is light and arry, placed in a little garden planted with orange and fig-trees; the door of this garden is strongly secured, and no person can have access to it when the cell is occupied. I inquired if there were any prisoners in confinement, any subterraneous cell or instruments of torture; but to these questions I could obtain no replies. The alcayde who attended us, exulted not a little at our remarking the neatness and comforts of the building, and, I suspect, mistook us for pious Catholics, because we gave vent to no execuations at the existence of such an infumous tribumal. "This

Q

ा है. दिश्कृत सन्द्र

"This building was formerly the college of the Jesuits, the most able and enlightened, but the most dangerous of all the religious orders of the Catholic church. On the abolition of that order, the Inquisition was removed, from its former situation in the suburb of Triana, to this building, which I hope will be the last it will occupy in Spain; for, whatever political events may take place, its destruction is inevitably at hand."

We shall take a future opportunity of transcribing some farther extracts from this valuable and entertaining publication.

- 40. An Address to the Imperial Legislature of the United Kingdom of Great Britain, &c. on Subjects of Importance to the Church and State. By the Rev. Luke Booker, LL. D. Rector of Tedstone Delamere, in the County of Hereford. 8vo. pp. 38. Cadell and Davies. 1808.
- '41. The Temple of Truth; or, the United Church of England and Ireland "proved to be built upon the Prophets and Apostles, Jesus Christ himself being the chief Corner-stone;" and therefore entitled to the faithful Attachment of all those who have been admitted by Baptism into her Communion. By the same. 8vo. pp. 71. 1809.

THESE tracts would have received, as they merit, an earlier notice, had they fallen in our way sooner. The first, however, may at present be seasonably recommended, as containing many excellent remarks on a subject which a Noble Lord is about to submit to the wisdom of Parliament.

In the "Address" on subjects of importance to the Church and State, Dr. Booker deems it expedient to confine his observations to two causes only of the vast increase of Sectarists among us: namely a want of room in our churches for the growing population of the country; and a manifest impropriety in the existing mode of licensing Sectarian Teachers. As in many of our late numbers the want of room in churches has been a subject variously and ably discussed, we shall notice principally what Dr. Booker remarks on the mode of licensing Sectarian Teachers, because this is immediately connected with certain measures which Lord Viscount Sidmouth has announced in Parlia-Much has been written also on this subject lately, but we question whether all our Readers may be apprized of the following circumstances.

"Under the act of toleration, any manhowever ignorant, however unprincipled. however abandoned—may, on applying at the general quarter sessions, and paying one shilling, demand a licence to preach the Gospel. A proof of this, as far as relates to ignorance—I do not say a singular proof (for, flagrant as it is, similar instances frequently occur) was exhibited, not long ago, at Stafford. The magistrates assembled there, at the quarter sessions, having, received some previous intimation that a man, who could neither read nor write, meant to apply for a licence to become a religious teacher,—and being desirous of learning whether what had been told them concerning the ignorance of the applicant were true—the chairman bade him take a pen, and sign his name upon some indifferent written document that was put before him. To which requisition he replied. ' I don't come here to write: I have no business to sign any thing.' 'No!' said the magistrate, 'read the clause in this Act of Parliament; and then you will see whether you are required to sign your same or not: please to read it out.' 'I don't come here,' was the reply, 'either to read or write: I have no business to read; and thing, nor to write any thing.' Pray, said the magistrate, 'can you write?' !I.am not ashamed to say,' replied he, 'that I can't.' 'Can you read?' 'No.' surely it is very strange that you who, upon your own confession, can neither read nor write, should presume to take upon yourself the important office of a religious teacher; when you are not able to peruse the Bible, which is the fountain of religion.' To this pointed observation and reproof, with the most unblushing effrontery, the modern apostle replied, ' if you don't know what inspiration is, I do: for I have felt it.' There ended the conference. He threw down his shilling—took up his licence, and went his way, to preach that Gospel which he could not read."

A fact like this, coming from authority, ought surely to awaken the attention of the Legislature, and perhaps make some impression on those who seem to be of opinion that toleration ought to be without any limits. But where or how is the remedy to be found, and how is the line to be drawn? Dr. Booker's proposition is as follows:

When certain restraints analogous to the following, which are imposed upon a candidate for holy orders in the established church, are duly considered—it will not be deemed unreasonable that every candidate for a teachership in any of the acces which are protected by the act of teleration, should be required to pass a similar, though milder, ordeal.

which licence to be upon a government stamp of a correspondent amount to the expense of a clergymun's letters of orders. The validity of the papers being proved, after the applicant has taken the oath of allegiance, and abjured the Pope's supremacy, let the licence be given to him. And, finally, let all persons be prohibited from exercising the calling of a religious teacher, who have not taken out such licence, in the manner heretotore mentioned.

How far this proposal is likely to produce the effect intended, we shall not at present enquire. Dr. B. himself seems to think that there are difficulties in the way. Doubtless the same class of persons who now can grant licences cannot be supposed qualified to examine applicants, or perhaps to judge of the sufficiency of their examination by others. There is still, however, here a solid foundation for such a remedy as may exclude the notoriously ignorant and idle, many of whom, it has been ascertained, apply for these preaching licences merely to be exempted from the Militia ballot. Dr. B. is no enemy to toleration on safe principles.

discussion.

43. Reflections on the Report of the Bullion Committee. To which are subjoined some Structures on Country Bunks. By Joseph Bradney, Esq.

MR. BRAUNEY (whose pamphlet we have already noticed in vol. LXXX, Part II. p. 642) is not so enamoured. of the Bullion Report. He allows that much valuable information is to be derived from the body of evidence before the Committee, but observes that the Reporters have not made the best use of it. "It almost seems that they have perverted it, to sustain some preconceived opinion, not founded in fact, or warranted by expe-Reasoning from these premises, he takes, in many respects, a very different view of the state of Bullion and Currency from what Messrs. Huskisson, Ricardo, &c. bave done. As after so much controversy and argument, however, the publick ie now about to obtain something like decision, the majority of our Readers, we are persuaded, will excuse our giving a more particular account of the contents of these pamphlets. 44. Hinte 44. Hints to the Publick and the Legislature on the Prevalence of Vice, and the dangerous Effects of Seduction. 12mo. pp. 114. Wilson. 1811.

THE compiler of this pamphlet "does not flatter himself that he has brought forward any thing new;" and yet, if he be accessible to flattery, we may offer him a little tribute of that kind by informing him, that what he has brought forward is not very About a year ago, a controversy took place between a Mr. Hule and the patrons and supporters of the Kemale Penitentiary at Pentonville; and a considerable part of the present pamphlet is literally copied from Mr. Hale without any acknowledgment. We have no objection to the repetition of wholesome truths, but must insist that every man who professes to write on the subject shall bring proof that he has come honestly by his materials.

45. A Sketch of the Campaign in Portugal, 8vo. pp. 48. Murray. 1810.

AS an introduction to this sensible pamphlet, the Author explicitly states that Lord Wellington's object in the present campaign was strictly and literally the defence of Portugal, involving (exclusively of all political considerations) the consequent occupation of a powerful French army, which would otherwise have been applicable to a variety of important points, and equal perhaps (if not so occupied and opposed) to the subjugation of the whole Peninsula. He then states that the object of the Enemy was the expulsion of the British army, the conquest of Portugal, and all the momentous consequences on the fate of the Peninsula which these successes would produce. The plan of the Enemy therefore was wholly offensive, as his object could not be attained, unless he compelled the British army to evacuate Portugal. In order to ascertain how far he has succeeded, this Writer traces the course of events during the campaign, the commencement of which he dates from the movement of the French army to invest Ciudad Rodrigo; and his detail is continued, by a postscript, dated Dec. 8, to the time when Massena established himself at Santarem. The whole of the events are laid down with perspicuity; and the result is, a very satisfactory defence of the British General from the attacks leveled against him by the party writers and speakers of this country. We cordially agree with our Author in censuring the frequency and malice of such at tacks. There cannot indeed be a more shameful instance of the licentiousness of the press; and we have little hesitation in saying that more evil is to be apprehended from that licentiousness than from the boasted powers and resources of our more avowed enemies.

46. Il vero modo di piacere in Compagnia.

Opera dedicata all Istruzione e Ricreazione della Gioventà. Da Carlo Monteggia.

8vo. pp. 315. Longman and Co.

WE recommend this Work to those who are studying the Italian and French languages. It consists of Dialogues upon subjects that may render conversation agreeable and useful: and by the Italian and French being contrasted on the opposite pages, the Student in either language may acquire great assistance.

47. The Acceptance, by the Author of Caroline Ormsby. In 3 Vols. 8vo. pp. 750. Booth.

ALTHOUGH we cannot say much in praise of the Author's dexterity in managing the plot, some parts of this story will be found not devoid of interest; and some very judicious hints on moral rectitude are occasionally introduced.

48. Wieland; or, the Transformation; an American Tale. By B. C. Brown, Author of "Ormond; or, the secret Witness." In 3 Vols. Colburn.

A MOST improbable and horrid tale; and evidently written by one whose talents might have been better employed.

INDEX INDICATORIUS.

In p. 234, line 6, (in a quotation from the Letter answered by CLERICUS SURRIEN-318) "interpretation" has been printed by mistake for "interpolation."

G. H. T. will find we have printed. "The Bedouin Camel-Driver," a Square.

in our last Supplement, p. 645.

Mr. Nisbett in our next; with Dr. Booker; S. Woolmer; W. H. Reid; R. S.; "The Village Priest;" Mr. Caster on Henry VIIth's Chapel; Oxoniers; Analysis of Books; &c. &c. &c.

THE

THE BATTLE OF BARROSA, AND MASSERA'S RETREAT.

To our gallant Heroes in Spain and Portugal.

Let them give all those virtues to the Graeme, [a theme: Like Scorr they'll sing, inspir'd by such And when his name assume its modern

GRAHAM'S Crest !

Numbers, in vam, oppose his valiant bands, Who hold their Country's honour in their hands;

Resolv'd to die, or conquer, they advance, And tear the Eagle from presumptuous France,

Through hosts of foes they cut their glorious way, [Day !

And Fame immortal marks Bankosa's To those who fell let grateful tears be shed, For Glory crowns the Living and the Dead.

On every side the Patriot turns his eye, And sees his Country's Flag triumphant fly!

Near Tagus' banks, on Lusitania's shore, THRICE-LAUREL'D WELLESLEY gains one Trophy more;

One Trophy more! to those so nobly wen,
From Orient Regions to the Western Sun!
The bailled Chief must now forget his name, [Fame *!

The favour'd Child of Fortune and of His flying troops no more our Hero face, Butseek, by flight, their safety in disgrace. France will not now her usual boast maintain: [Main: That Bairons only conquer on the Then let her Tyrant's Vanity subside—His ships are strangers to the Ocean's

His ships are strangers to the Ocean's tide!

While on the Seas he dares not trust his slaves, [Waves!

The Majesty of England walks the March 28, 1811.

BARROSA,

By John O'KEEFE, Esq.

SHOULD future Bards take up that wildgoose quill, [ing skill,
Which Walter guides with such enchantLet them give all that's great in Snowdoun's Knight,
His soul of honour and his arm of might.

The mind undaunted of bold Roberton

Duv [yew-]

(But for his King must bend his bow of yield, [field. Fly from his arm, and basely quit the Far and more far was heard the cannon's roar,

Till, lost in distance, it was heard no more.
Immortal shades, who o'er Barrosa's plam

Die like the Phoenia, die to rise again, For you Britannia heaves a bitter sigh, And steeps in tears the wreath of victory. And thou, vain Tyrant, whose infatuate soul,

'er prostrate Gallia owns no soft controul.

O'er prostrate Gallia owns no soft controul, Say, shall thy chains, o'er conquer'd Austria hurl'd, Bind the whole empire of a haughty world, Forbid the vivid lightning to be free, And tax the thunder if it roar at thee? Go, Despot, go, exulting o'er thy slain, But proud Iberia unsubdued shall reign!

Illustrious Graham, hail! to thee I ruise
The swelling voice of energetic praise,
Firm as the oak, that braves the pelting storm,
[form,
Fix'd as the rock, that rears its craggy
Mild as the sun at Summer's opening day, Thou giv'st thy mandates, and thy bands obey.

Then be it mine to fight in Virtue's

To guard my Country and defend her laws,

^{*} Massena has been called "the Spoil'd Child of Fortune."

To crush the oppressor, and the proud defy, Alike prepar'd to conquer, or to die.

Rugby, April 17. Donn Gordon.

On Captain Rowley's Exploits in the East Indies.

WHILE injur'd Lusitania * flies to arms,
And Tagus' banks resound with deep alarms,

While British warriors press to meet the

And pant to lay his vaunted trophies low, Th' unyielding bulwark of a groaning land, Snatch'd by their valour from the Despot's hand.

That iron hand which dealt the deadly stroke, [yoke,

And bound on Europe's neck the galling From Lithuania to the stormy main,

Which bounds thy utmost shores, ill-fated Spain!

From distant India breaks a brighten'd gleam; [theme.

Thy triumphs, Rowley, are my raptur'd Not with more ardour flam'd in days of yore [bore.

Th' heroic breast whose name † thy vessel When with swift steps she won her furious

And Maldon's tow'rs in smoaking ruins lay;
Than thine to rescue from the exulting
Gaul

[fail.

The bloody wreath obtain'd by Corbet's

His earliest cares the intrepid Chieftain bends friends 1:

To give prompt succour to his hapless
The gen'rous task perform'd, he onward flies, [prize §; And the scat'd foes resign a second For safety glad to yield their recent spoils, The fruitful harvest of their Naval toils.

But vain their efforts to elude the storm, That still pursues them in its direst form! The mutt'ring thunder roars, red flashes glare, [despair! And shake their inmost souls with black They sink in death, or writhe with ghastly wounds, [resounds, Whilst with deep groams the crowded deck Till lower'd from the tapering staff descends The flowing streamer, and the combat ends. .

So doubly triumph'd erst in Asian seas,
The warlike son || of fam'd Miltiades ¶;
Within the circuit of a single sun,
Two glorious trophies from the Persian won:

Nor did Eurymedon's tall rocks rebound With louder plaudits of their chief renown'd, Than British tars shall raise at Rowley's name,

Transmitted on the rolls of deathless fause.

What clouds of grateful incense should arise [pyreal skies,

To that dread Pow'r who rules th' em-From my lov'd Country's altais? He alone [own Secures her welfare! He still deigns to Secures her welfare! He still deigns to Her cause momentous; kindling martial fires

In her heroic sons beyond their sires,
High in the fields of glory as they stood,
And eager at her call to shed their blood.
Who gave a Nelson to her needful aid?
To Howe, St. Vincent, Duncan, who convey'd

The living spark that after glow'd so bright.
Amidst the foulest shades of murky night,
That e'er o'erspread and sham'd a prostrate

And Europe bow'd to a base Tyrant's sage?

Let Britain, then, her joyful pureus pour For these her Champions, and his might adore.

Nor, while such matchless names her annals grace,

Whose arduous path shall future Rowleys

Fear, should the tempest at her Cliffs be hurl'd

That desolates and darkens all the world.

H. D. B.

THE TRIUMVIRATE OF WORTHIRS

Or a Tribute to the Memory of those eminent Philanthropists, Howard, Hawen, and Berchtold; whose active Zeal and generous Efforts in the cause of Humanity conspire to immortalize their Names.

By ANTH. FOTHERCILL, M.D. Philadelphia.
THESE distinguished characters uniformly through life devoted their time and talents to promote the happiness, and initigate the miseries of mankind.

* Portugal, so called by the Romans.

† Boadicea, Queen of the Iceni, A. D. 61, who took and demolished Camelodunum (supposed to be Maldon in Essex) with other garrisons of the Romans in Britain, and put 70,000 of that Nation, or their adherents, to the sword.

L'Africaine. § The Ceylon.

[] The celebrated Athenian Commander, Cimon, who (A. C. 470) captured or dettroyed the Persian Fleet of 200 sail near the mouth of the Eurymedon, a River of Pamphy, lia, and afterwards lauding at the head of his victorious followers totally routed the Persian army encamped on its banks, and erected two trophies in honour of his signal and almost unparalleled success.

Another memorable Athenian Leader, father of the former, distinguished for his Victory over Mardonius and his army, consisting of 100,000 Persians, with a Porce scarcely amounting to one-tenth of that number, in the Plains of Marathon, A. C. 490.

Howann's arduous and highly dangerous undertaking, of visiting European Prisons, Hospitals, and Lazarettos, with the express view of reforming abuses and preventing contagious diseases, is well known, and stands recorded on his Monument in St. Paul's Cathedral.

Dr. WILLIAM HAWES's conduct, in public and private, was not less meritorious. He was not only one of the principal Founders of the 'ROYAL HUMANE SOCIETY of London, but the most active promoter of sumilar institutions in various parts of the world. His charity and tender solicitude towards the sick and distressed poor were unbounded. In a word, in him was Benevolence itself personified.

Count BERCHTOLD, styled the humane Howard of Austria, was the founder of the Moravian Humans Society, and the Establishment of Preservation at Prague and Bronn. At the period of his death he had converted his elegant Castle in Moravia into a Hospital for sick and wounded Austrians; in attending whom he caught a malignant pestilential fever, and like the BRITISH HOWARD, fell a victum to his disinterested Humanity!

COULD Birth or Talents, or ev'n Virtue, grave. Illustrious Patriots from the untimely Could Ment turn th' envenom'd shaft aside, Then had not Howard, Hawes, nor Blacktorp died :

Died, have we said?—Their fame can never die-[տո հացհ---Coherrs of Heaven, their record stands Their bliss was, here to soften buthan woe, Exalted Gass-which good men only know: O'er your cold arms may flowers percumal bloom, [cred tomb! And spread their fragrance o'er vour sa-Let Earth's proud Tyrant hide ats guilty

Nor dare pollute—these mansions of the How long shall Ruffians point their murd'rous spears, [tears! Unmov d by Widows shrieks and Orphan's O'er crimson d fields their blood stain'd laurels reap, [weep]

And deeds commit, at which e'en Angels How long shall Man, that imp ous creature man, Presume to o'erthrow - his wise Creator's Pour desolat on o'er his parent Earth, Ordain'd to no ture inclionsfrom their birth! Knew then this truth - which, rightly understood.

Proves " partial evil's universal good," T' unfold the plan, surpasses human art, Of the grand Whote-we only see a part; Revere its Author - wait the Drama's close-[those;

Which may reveal dark myst'ries like Evils give birth to Charities divine,

These made a Howard — those a Bracu-TOLD shme.

friends, forbear".-

Then, like the pitying Angel, drops a tear l Who knows but He who rules the raging tides, [rides,

Shakes the firm earth, and in the whirlwind Whe points the lightning, and directs the

Now clothes Ambition in a Tyrant's form? Makes him an engine in his sovereign {command hand

On thrones to trample - empires to Kingdoms o'erthrow — and scourge their i guilty land?

From mad Ambition what disasters flow! This vice alone redoubles human woc; This, like a rankling sore, corrodes the heart. [son'd dart. While scorpion Conscience shoots her poi-Hail, sacred Virtue! — sun-beam of the mind! [kind! O i rise once more to charm—to bless man-O! let thy genial rays dispel the gloom

Which hangs portentous over Europe's doom:

Bid brutal War and jarring Discord cease; And with thee bring—the smiling Angel— Peace.

Too long has Man cut short the life of Man-

Has he forgot — his own is but a span! Pleasure serene - fair Virtue's sweetest prize I Glows in the heart, and ghatens in the eyes: Virtue can bolts and chains and tortures brave.

Exult in death, and triumph o'er the grave. Cease then, O Man' to censure Heaven's [TOLD - HAWES! just laws 📜 And Virtue learn—from Howard—Bercs-

Anniversary

Anniversary Ode on the Beath of CHRIST, For 1811.

By John Stoyle, Lieut. Royal Navy.

WHILE vernal joys attend the year,

And o'er each scene their incense spread,

While Nature's walks in green appear Contrasted, mingling light and shade; Exalted themes still solemnize the mind,

That o'er the extent of things divine would rove

To view the Cress, that bore for lost mankind [of love.

Through keenest pains th' expiring God Though universal gladness teems And Phœbus rules with pow'r,

That sends more life—renewing streams, Increasing through each hour.

He who first bade fair Nature's orb to roll.

Sole Regent of our system's azure void,

Since mourn'd for man in agony of soul!

For man else lost, the King of Glory for man else lost, the King of Glory died!

Vet rece triumphently with force renew!

Yet rose triumphantly with force renew'd, Invincible in arms, and every foe subdu'd.

Ye regions near or most remote,
That form th' immeasurable ALL,
Of ether blue where systems float,
And lastly this terrestrial ball.

Awake to gratitude th' etherial fire:

ETERNAL GRATITUDE demands your song.

But chiefly Man let lasting love inspire, To man most largely themes of praise belong.

Let all that live or move on earth, Made vocal, by his praise, To celebrate the Saviour's worth, Their highest incense raise.

THE FIRST GREAT CAUSE whose powers divinely pure,

From all eternity in peerless light, In union join'd, to make our calling sure, Caus'd mercy infinite to shine most bright.

MERCY, the darling attribute of Heaven, Stood foremest of the train when peace to man was given.

The sable scene of Death appears,
The King of Terrors claims the field,
The Sun a robe of darkness wears,
And lo! the Saviour deigns to yield!!
His arm omnipotent could soon expel,
And hurl his enemies to shades below,

Where hostile legions may in vain rebel,
And tenfold chains of darkness bind each foe.

But time's career had brought the hour,
When fiends most foul should rear
The standard of infernal power

The standard of infernal power,
And short-liv'd triumphs share.

Jesus expir'd! the firm sepulchral rock, Tho' rear'd on adamantine base, gave Extreme dismay, the dire event bespoke, And Nature mourn'd her absent solar ray. But soon with joy th' cturnal regions ring, "O, where's thy victory, Grave! O Death, where is thy sting!"

But rolling years still urge their flight,
To bring from his most high abode,
Eternal day that knows no night;
"The City of the living God,"
The glorious new Jerusalem complete,
By Heaven's great Architect conceiv'd.

and made,
Wherein Messiah claims his regal seat,
On truth's broad base of firm foundation laid.

His standard claims the azure main

Of ether's vast expanse:

Omnipotence attends his train, And all his powers enhance.

Ye rebels, who assail'd our suffering Lord;
Ye fiends of darkness, THIS 45 HOT YOURDAY!

Ye well may dread the terrors of his word, .

When he his brightest justice shall display.

Usurpers sway no sceptre e'er the blest;
The Power of powers shall guard their everlasting rest.

HYMN ON GOOD PRIDAY.

"I's finish'd! was the word He said;

"Twas with his last, his dying breath—
He humbly bow'd his sacred head,
And gave his spirit up to death.

'Tis finish'd '—all his woes are past,
His pains and sufferings are o'er;
Those dying groans must be the last,
Jesus the Saviour dies no more.

Lo! on the cross his body bleeds,
Lifeless, emaciate, and pale,
All torn with thorns, all bruis'd with reeds,
And mark'd with many a cruel wale.

How the blood flows from every wound!

Water and blood gush from his side!

Well might a trembling shake the ground,

Well might the sun his radiance hide.

But see they bear him to the tomb:
The tomb incloses him in vain—
The third great day dispels the gloom;
The Saviour walks on earth again [
Lo! now he mounts his native sky,
Triumphant over Death and Sin:

.

Open, ye heavenly gates on high!
Receive the conquering Saviour in !-

THE PRAYER.

Almighty Saviour! be thy name adof'd,

Who for our comfort spak'st that gracious word,

YTis finish'd — that we wretched men might,
know,
That thou hast finish'd what thou cannot Redeem us by thy blood, enrich us with thy grace! [human race! Thou that didst die and rise to save the Canonbury, Islington.

y of senses to the spond their capital and to the spond their capital and to the spond their capital and the some banks distress, were all some date, increasing at the moment when the check was given.

Mr. Powonby attributed the excessive speculations to South America to the exaggerated statements which had been made in that House. He denied that the evil was temporary, since it would take two or three years to consume the stock which had been sent out; and as during that period the manufactures must be at a stand, could it be expected that an issue of six millions would afford adequate relief? The calculation that so much cotton had been exported, could not be called trade, as trade did not consist of exports only, but implied returns also; and he apprehended that this kind of relief would enable the merchants to continue their system of over-trading. After regretting that the paper currency would receive such an increase, and avowing his conviction that the meas ire would do more harm three good, he declared be would abstain from further opposition, as it was painfil to oppose granting relief to the unfortunate.

Mr Husheson, in a luminous speech, pointed out the liference between the present applicatio, and that in the year 1795 at the later period, the markets were open, trade was not diminished, and security was abuneant; but cash was scarce, and credit distroyed—now, Gent. Mag. April, 1811.

The amendments were agreed to.

March 12.

The Chancellor of the Exchanger brought up a Message from the Prince Regent, stating that, the maintenance of a body of Portuguese troops in British pay having been attended with the most important effects in the conduct of the war, his Royal Highness hoped that the House of Commons would enable him to continue the same for the present year.

On the Report of the Committee on the Distilleries being brought up, a long and desultory conversation ensued, enlivened by the eccentricities of Mr. Fuller. The Resolutions were then agreed to.

The Mutney Bill was read the third time; Col. Wood, and Messrs. It. Smith and M'Lead expressing satisfaction at the amendment substituting impresement instead of corporal punishment.

March 13.

The House having resolved itself into a Committee, Mr. Perceval stated that he was desirous of trying this year, whether the funding in the five per cents, might not be carried to a greater extent than had been done before. It would be remembered, when last year eight millions millions were funded, how great an inconvenience arose frage the pressure of purchasers. He would now propose to fund 12 millions, not with any confident expectation that the entire would be taken, but to give room for the full spread of purchase. He would therefore propose that the holders of Exchequer

Bills, issued between the 1st of April 1810, and the 16th of March 1811, who carried their Bills to the Paymaster's Office between the 16th and 27th March, should receive for every 1001, in money, 1031, 142, capital stock in the five per cents.—The resolutions were referred to the Committee of Supply.

March 15.

The House having resolved itself into a Committee of Supply, Mr. Yorks, in a perspicuous manner, submitted the details of the Ordinary and Extraordinary Estimates of the Navy; and concluded by moving several resolutions for the aggregate aum of 4,963,000L; and stated that the excess of 126,000L beyond the estimates of last year, was occasioned by the two great items of 924,336L for the prisoners of war, and 32,388L for the salaries and contingencies of the office.

Mr. Hutcheson regretted that more advantages were not held out to the Marine corps, and that their field-officers were not increased.

Mr. Hushisson was glad to learn that a considerable diminution would in future take place in the annual charge for transports, and that it was the intention of Government to employ ships of war in conveying troops abroad, as they were found much better calculated to resist the dangers of the sea, and repel the attacks of the Enemy, as well as more expeditious in reaching their destination. In the present situation of the Enemy's navy, he thought it unnecessary for us to build more new ships, as it only diminished the quantity of our timber, and enhanced its price.

Sir C. Pole and Admiral Harvey expressed their approbation of the manner in which the estimates had been brought forward; and the former acknowledged that a number of valuable regulations had been established since the appointment of the first Lord of the Admiralty.

Mr. Croker stated that 3000i. was annually saved to the country; in consequence of the First Lord of the Admiralty declining to accept that part of his salary since he received the grant of another situation from the Crown.

Mr. Bankes expressed his surprise, that, instead of a reduction in the expences of the Navy this year, they had increased.

Mr. Morie, in his Receny had still & 46 frigates at his was maki number. agreed to.

Mr. Wherton granting Annuith tain Exchequer sums in which unpaid, to the am sterling; which I

In ti Percev which relativ been r be gr tugues Gentle took 1 had be lar gr: of the contes tbe vu seal R best c to thei asserts de gu elothic tuguet was st efficie: With paigo, alterec more tone ii of th talked into th to be to be dwelli: and de eterrie: arsdw vantag withe would Mr. reship

France

shelped that the sh-the liber and sy | And that he to | (Actions Chair put when they sending money to Lisbon was very great; he believed he spoke within bounds, when he asserted that there was an immediate loss of 30 per cent. But this was not all -- when it arrived, it was paid half only in eash, and half in Portuguese paper, already much depreciated. He believed that Buonaparte had a disposable force of 400,000 men besides those in Portugal, it was known also, that he was assembling an Army in the North of Germany and with a knowledge of these facts, it was to be regretted that our whole military force was snut up in a corner of the Pennsula. He did not intend to divide the House, or give angry opposition to the measure, but he wished Gentlemen to reflect, that it was apparent by the Estimates, Portugal cost us annually 23 millions, and all this for the prescryation of a few garrison towns,

Mr. Fremantie declared that each successive year yielded decisive evidence of the error of the system on which our perations had been founded,

Mr. Peele spoke with much animation in support of the grant, and was opposed by Gen. Tarleton.—The resolution was agreed to.

Tre report of the Committee of supply was brought up, when Mr.

to examine witnesses respecting the fate of the man who perished there, as also that the proceedings be printed: agreed to.

The Earl of Aylesford stated that a new prison was building, which would not be long in completion

Lord Grentille noticed the rise in value of dollars, which had been made by the Directors of the Bank; and censured it, as violating the Constitution, by an assumption of the rights of S. vereignty. He was aware of the wretched quibble, that dollars were not the current coin of the Realm; but the subject must not pass over without notice. Ministers, in sanctioning the measure, had made themselves responsible for it. He moved for copies of the notices, etc.

Earls Bathurst and Rosse defended the measure. Papers were ordered.

The Prince Regent's Message for granting aid to Portugal was, on the motion of Marquis Wellesley, taken into consideration, and a suitable Address moved.

Lord Grenville, at the conclusion of an elaborate speech, stated the grounds on which he should give the rules of his decided negative — because tertained no hopes of effects fending the Peninsula -- because this system of increasing expenditure was fast sinking the country in the gulph of inextricable ruin - and because messure, even if fit at another time, was utterly unfit at present, when be was ignorant whether the resources of the Kingdom could bear the extraordinary expenditure.

The Earl of Liverpool replied; and Lord Greevener spoke a few words; after which the motion was carried without division.

In the Commons the same day, after a division, the Grand Junction Canal Water-Works Bills was read a second, as was the Bill for making a paved-way from Hyde Park Corner to Kensington a third time.

Lord A. Hamilton, referring to the state of the press in India, said that no newspaper could be published which had not previously received the sanction of the Government — the penalty for transgressing this regulation being immediate embarkation for Europe. After alluding to the several topics which were forhidden to be discussed in the existing sapers, he moved for copies of all regulations, orders, &c. promulgated in India since the year 1797, regarding the reetraint of the press at the three Presideneies of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay.

Mr. Dundas contended that the subjection of the press was absolutely necessary to the existence of our empire un toat country.

. 5 *

Lord Followiene did not deny the right of the Company to make regulations in their own territory, but contended that the House ought to be made acquainted with them,

Sir J. Anstrutker was of opinion that discussion ought not to be allowed in India: he remembered a series of casays, very ingeniously written, published there for the purpose of proving how small a number of Natives night massacre all the European inhabitants of Hengal.

Sir T. Turton contended that we had established the vilest despotism in India, and that the liberty of the press could never flourish in so sterile a soil. The people of India were rensidered as nothing by us; to keep them ignorant was therefore as much our policy as to keep them ----deved had been our crime.

74 , and others. Massrs. second et. s si

Select Committee on East In which was likewise negatived by 76 to 19.

House The Royal mission, to Mutiny, Brit vers Wages, private or loc

In the Commons the same day. House having resolved itself lists a Co mittee of Supply, Mr. Yorks said it been his intention on a former day, move for the sum necessary for ordinaries of the Navy under solution; which, through mittake, being done, he would now there th sum not exceeding 1,157,7512. be great ed for that purpose. Sir W. Soutt said, before ther Ca mittee proceeded to take into sideration the estimates for the B rack department, he must beg ; mission to address a few words to t House on what had fallen from an He Admiral (Sir C. Pole), on the sulfe of certain prizes, on a former at He understood that Hon. Manb intimated that it was his intention bring forward a charge against Admiralty Court on this subject. See a charge, the House must be aware was a sort of personal one against hi (Sir W.); and, as such, he trusted the House would permit blus to answ it. There were several things which h was ready to concede to the Hon. Membe He was ready to allow that several year had elapsed since the capture of the six ships in question; but, before the Hun. Member could make good his chaggs; i niust prove that the delay had tal place in consequence of some abuse a the part of the Court of Admiralty. far from the cause of delay origin with the v tbem: avoida impert patch Court but G be a No u of the not decide, there being another and similar question from the blockading squadron off Cadiz, it was thought better to let this rest till the other question also was decided, the money depending using placed out at interest for the benefit of the captors, however the question might be decided. It did happen, unfortunately, that this cause had been hung up in the Court of Appeals for six years; but if there was blame attached to that circumstance, the Court of Admiralty had nothing to do with it; any more than the Court of King's Bench had to answer for the delay which might take place in the decision of an appeal from that Court to the House of Lords. The wonderful press of business which came before the Court of Appeal, however, from all parts of His Majesty's dominions, might have caused that delay. There were only four or five persons of His Majesty's Privy Council who had to attend to all the duties of that Court; and all the reward they received for their labour it might be satisfactorily ascertained whether or not Drury-Lane Theatre would be speedily rebuilt.

Mr. Wynn moved the second reading of the Election Bribery Bill.

Mr. Brand condemned it as a partial measure, which would throw the monopoly of the purchase of seats into the hands of the Treasury.

Messrs. Curven, Morres, and Sir J. Newport, spoke in favour of the Bill; and Sir J. Anstruther, and Mr. G. Johnstone, against it.

On a division, the Bill was thrown out by a Majority of 47.

In a Committee of Supply, the sum of 334,540l. was voted for Irish Miscellaneous Services, and on the proposition of Mr. Foster, 8973l. for Maynooth College.

House of Londs, March 28.

The Earl of Liverpool, after a warm panegyric upon the skill of Gen. Graham*, and the good conduct and valour displayed by those under him, moved

^{*} Gen. Graham is of the family of Balnagowne in Perthshire. The death of his wife induced him to leave Scotland, and travel on the Continent. When our army was employed at Toulon, his knowledge of the country on the banks of the Rhone proved of great use to Lord Mulgrave. At that period he was in that city, not intending the Timeles of the House to Lieut.-Gen. Graham, for his highly meritorious and gallant conduct on the occasion of the brilliant victory gained over the French Army at Barrosa on the 5th of March, 1811.

Lords Grey, Grenville, and Mulgrave, warmly supported the motion, which was carrried unanimously; as were motions of thanks to Brig.-Gen.-Dilkes, the other officers, non-commissioned efficers, and privates, of the army.

In the Commons, the same day, the Chemostier of the Exchequer, after Minting upon the gailant achievement of General Thos. Graham, and the dissivantages under which the British Army fought at Barrosa, against a greatly superior force of the Enemy, moved the thanks of the House to Gen. Graham, the Officers and Privates under his command, for their conduct at Barrosa on the 5th March.

Mr. Sheridan, in a rapid but eloquent strain, which did equal honour to his best and heart, recited the military exploits of Gah. Graham; and concluded by observing that the country must feel gratitude not only to the General, but to the Duke of York who had called him forward, and given him the situation which he now so nobly filled.

General Hope said, that Sir J. Moore, in his last moments, had expressed his wish that there might be a departure from the rules of the Army in the pro-mát ako keri to ti G CHIM Fullmot L resp COTI ritios bad Ŧ mai 8 Stej

spol

House or L
In a Committe discussion on the
to the Earldon o ett; when the dided with Lard
Petitioner had no

In the Comust Dwelling-house a second time, the numbers wer

A division also cond reading of Salaries Bill, wh majority of 10.

(To be continued,)

N. A.

INTERESTING INTELLIGENCE FROM THE LONDON GAZETTES.

Let 尔 Ē 5 :ng nf 1005 2511 Lie wh ope ·intı Kna fou 2 8 full the froi Bri

The Cortes of Spain have unanimously decreed the thanks of the Nation to General Graham, and have elected him Grandes " of Spain of the first class, free of tellular for the " astonishing bravery and discipline" manifested by his Majority's Tangent.

Downing-street, April 6. Capt. Camae arrived with dispatches from Viscount Wellington to the Earl of Liverpool, dated Villa Seea, 14th, and Louzao, 16th ult. of which the following are extracts:

Villa Secu, March 14. The Enemy retired from their position which they had occupied at Santarem and the neighbourhood, in the night of the 5th inst | I put the British army in motion to follow them on the morning of the 6th. Their first movements indicated an intention to collect a force at Thomar, and I therefore marched upon that town; on the 2th, a considerable body of troops, formed of a part of Marshal Sir W. Beresford's corps, under Man-gen, the Hon. W. Stewart, which had crossed the Tagus at Abrantes, and afterwards the Zezere, and of the 4th and 6th, and part of the let divisions of infantry, and two brigades of British cavalry. The Enemy, however, continued his march towards the Mondego, having one corps, the 2d, on the road of Espinhel; Gen. Loison's division on the road of Anciao, and the remainder of the army towards Pombal. These last were followed, and never lost sight of by the light division

Erskine and Majegen. Stade, and made an attempt to hold the antient castle of Pombal, from which they were driven; but the 6th corps and Gen. Montbron's cavalry, which formed the rear guard, supported by the 8th corps, held the ground on the other side of the town, the troops not having arrived in time to complete the dispositions to attack them before it was dark. I pon this occasion, Lieut.-col. Elder's battalion of Portuguese caçadores distinguished themselves. The Enemy retired in the night; and on the 12th, the 6th corps, with Gen Montbrun's cavalry, took up a strong position at the end of a defile between Redinha and Pombal, with their right in a wood upon the Soure river, and their left extending towards the high ground above the river of Redinba. This town was in their rear. I attacked them in this position on the 12th, with the 3d and 4th light divisions of infantry, and Brig -gen. Pack's brigade, and the cavalry, the other troops being in reserve. The post in the wood upon their right was first forced by Sir W. Erskine with the light division. We were then able to form the troops in the plain beyond the defile: and the 3d division division under Major-gen. Picton were formed in two lines, in the skirts of the wood, upon the right; the 4th division, under Maj.-gen. Cole, in two lines in the centre, having Gen. Pack's brigade supporting their right, and communicating with the 3d division : and the light division in two lines on the left. These troops were supported in the rear by the British cavalry; and the 1st, 5th, and 6th divisions were in reserve. troops were formed with great accuracy and celerity, and Lieut, gen. Sir B. Spencer led the line against the Enemy's position on the heights, from which they were immediately driven, with the loss of many men killed and wounded, and some prisoners. Maj.-gen. Sir W. Erskine particularly mentioned the conduct of the 52d regiment, and Col. Elder's cacadores, in the attack of the wood; and I must add, that I have never seen the French infantry driven from a wood in a more gallant style. Therewas but one narrow bridge, and a ford close to it, over the Redinha river, over which our light troops passed with the Enemy: but as the Enemycommanded these passages with cannon, some time elapsed before we could pass over a sufficient body of troops to make a fresh disposition to attack the heights on which they had again taken post. The 3d division crossed, however, and manœuvred again upon the Enemy's left flank, while the light infantry and cavalry, supported by the light division, drove them upon their main body at Condelva. The light infantry of Maj.-gen. Picton's division, under Lieut.-Col.\Villiams, and the 4th cacadores, under Col. de Regoa, were principally concerned in this operation. We found the whole army yesterday, with the exception of the second corps, which was still at Espinbel, in a very strong position at Condeixa; and I observed, that they were sending off their baggage by the road of Ponte de Marcella. From this circumstance I concluded that Coi. Trant had not given up Coimbra, and that they had been so pressed in their retreat that they had not been able to detach troops to force him from the place. I therefore marched the 3d division, under Majegen. Picton, through the mountains upon the Enemy's left, towards the only road open for their reception; which had the immediate effect of dislodging them from the strong position of Condeixa; and the Enemy encamped last night at Cazal Nova in the mountains, about a league from Condeixa. We immediately communicated with Combra, and made prisoners a detachment of the Ensmy.'s. cavalry which were upon the road. We found the 6th and 8th corps formed in Allied Army will press upon their with. The whole country, however, affects many advantageous positions to a reference treating army, of which the distants have shewn that they know how to a suit themselves. They are retreating distants the country as they entered it, in out solid mass; covering their runs on treatment by the operations of either with or two corps d'armée, in the attributed sitions which the country affects appreciables the main hodge, Test descriptions their position they the Proclamation of the French Commander in Chief; in which he told the inhabitants of Portugal, that he was not come to make war upon them, but with a powerful army of one hundred and ten thousand men, to drive the English into the sea. It is to be hoped that the example of what has occurred in this country will teach the people of this and of other nations what value they ought to place on such promises and assuranees, and that there is no security for life, or for any thing which renders life valuable, excepting in decided resistance to the Enemy. I have the honour to enclose returns of killed and wounded in the several affairs with the Enemy since they commenced their retreat. have received the most able and cordial assistance throughout these operations from Lieut.-gen. Sir Brent Spencer and Marshai Sir W. Beresford, whom I had requested to cross the Tagus, and who has been with me since the lith instant; from Major-gen. Sir Wilham Erskine, Picton, Cole, and Campbell, Maj.-gen. Slade and Maj.-gen. the Hon. C. Colville, and the General and other officers commanding brigades under their orders GENT. MAG. April, 1814.

ł

cross the Ceira this morning. Brig.gen. Pack's brigade had [been detayhed in the morning through the mountains to the left, as well to turn the Enemy in h a position at Miranda de Corvo, as in view to any others they might take up on this side of the Ceira, The light division, under Maj.-gen. Sit W. Erskine, was ordered to possess some heights immediately above Foy d'Aronce, while Maj.-gen. Picton's division was moved along the great road to attack the left of the Enemy's position and of the village. The 6th division, under Maj.-gen. Campbell, and the hussars and 16th light dragoons, supported the light division, and the lat division and the 14th and royal dragoons, the third. These movements succeeded in forcing the Enemy to abandon his strong positions on this side of the Ceira, with considerable loss. The colonel of the 39th regiment was made prisoner. The light troops of gen. Picton's division under Lieut.-Col. Williams, and those of Maj.-gen. Nightingall's brigade, were principally engaged on the right, and the 95th regiment in front of the light division; and these troops behaved in the most gallant manner. The horse artillery, likewise, under Capts. Ross and Bull, distinguished themselves on this occasion. The troops took much baggage and some ammunition carriages in Foy d'Aronce. I had been prevented from moving till a late hour in the morning by the fog; and it was dark by the time we gained possession of the last position of the Enemy's advanced guard. In the night the Enemy destroyed the bridge on the Ceira, and retreated, leaving a small rear-guard on the river.

Return of the Killed, Wounded, and Missing of the British and Portuguese Forces in the several affairs with the French Army from the 6th to the 15th of March, 1811.

8th and 9th March, 1 horse killed, 2 rank and file, 2 horses, wounded; 7 rank and file, 8 horses, missing.

11th March, 11 rank and file killed; 2 Ensigns, 2 serjeants, 16 rank and file, wounded.

12th March. 17 rank and file, 3 horses, killed, 3 Captains, 5 Lieutenants, 3 Ensigns, 1 Staff, 7 serjeants, 153 rank and file, 4 horses, wounded; 1 serjeant, 14 rank and file, missing.

14th March, 1 Lieutenant, 14 rank and file, killed; 1 Major, 5 Captains, 4 Lieutenants, 1 Ensign, 12 serjeants, 112 rank and file, wounded; 4 rank and file missing.

15th March, 2 Lieutenants, 1 serjeant, 6 rank and file, killed; 1 Lieutenant, 1 Ensign, 1 serjeant, 59 rank and file, wounded.

Names of Officers Killed, Wounded, and Missing of the Army under the Command of Lieut.-gen. Lord Viscount Wellington, K. B. in the several affairs with the French Army, from the 6th to the 14th of March, 1811, inclusive.

11th March, 1st Bat. 95th foot, Second Lieut. Hopwood, wounded. — 3rd Caçadores, Ensign Joze Joaquim Figeo, severely wounded.

12th March, 2d Bat. 5th Foot, Lieut.-Clerke, severely wounded. — 1st. Bat. 45th Foot, Lieut. March, slightly wounded. — 1st Bat. 52d Foot, Lieut. Cross, Ensign Lifford, Adjutant Winterbottom, wounded. — 1st Bat. 88th Foot, Lieut. Heppenstal, slightly wounded. — 94th Foot, Capt. Bogue, severely wounded. — 1st Bat. 95th Foot, Lieut. Beckwith, wounded. — 1st Caçadores, Capt. Chapman, 95th Foot, ditto—11th Portuguese Regiment, Capt. Waldron, 27th Foot, ditto—4th Caçadores, Ensign Jose Filicissimo, ditto—6th Ditto, Eusign Joze P. de Carto, ditto.

14th March, 1st Bat. 52d Foot, Lieut.

Thomas Gifford, killed. — 1st Bat. 43d Foot, Capt. Napier, severely wounded; Capt. Dalzell, slightly wounded; Ensign Carroll, severely wounded. — 1st Bat. 52d Foot, Capt. George Napier, severely wounded; Capt. Wm. Mein, slightly wounded; Capt. Wm. Jones, severely wounded. — 5th Bat. 60th Foot, Lieut. Wynne, slightly wounded. 74th Foot, Lieut. Crabb, ditto. — 1st Bat. 95th Foot, Maj. Stewart, severely wounded (since dead); Lieut. Strode, wounded. — 1st Caçadores, Lieut. Joaquim Manuel, wounded.

15th March, 5th Bat. 60th Foot, Lieut. Sawatzky, killed. — 8th Bat. 38th Foot, Lieut. Heppenstal, ditto. — 1st Bat. 95th Foot, First Lieut. M'Culloch, severely wounded; Second Lieut. Kincaird, slightly wounded.

Foreign-office, April 6.

A dispatch was received this morning by the Marquis Wellesley from Charles Stuart, Esq. His Majesty's Minister at Lisbon, of which the following is an extract:

Lisbon, March 23.

The Army of Gen. Massena continues to retreat towards the frontier, and every march is facilitated by the abandonment of wounded, the destruction of baggage, and whatever can encumber their movement. They attempted during the 18th and 19th to make a stand in the Sierra de Moita, but they were driven from that position with the loss of 600 prisoners on the 19th. On the Ist they reached Galiza. The British head-quarters were at Pombeiro on the lith, and at Algazil on the 20th. The cavalry and light troops continued in sight of the French rear-guard, and the movement of the allied army along the skirts of the Estrella, which flank the positions in the valley of the Mondego, promises new impediments to their retreat. The accounts from the frontier of Spanish Estremadura state. that the greater part of the French force which came from Andalusia have returned to that province, Soult moved in the middle of the month towards Seville at the head of 4000 infantry and 1500 cavalry. No considerable force has been left in the town of Badajos. The siege of Campo Major continued during the 19th, 20th, and 21st. A breach having been effected, the place capitulated on the morning of the latter day. The garrison, in number about 250 militia, have remained prisoners of war. The French force before the place consisted of 4000 infantry and 500 cavalry. The advanced guard of Marshal Beresford reached Purtalegre on the 20th, where that officer was expected on the following day. kimiraliybrigade of howitzers, and two hundred infantry, accompanied by Capt. Torrens (who had hitherto acted as Maj.-Commandant to the Battalion), in order to oppose their landing. On ascending an elevation, for the purpose of reconnoitring, I discovered the landing had already been effected, under the cover of darkness and a fog, and that the Enemy were advancing rapidly and in great numbers. On both wings the Enemy now far outflanked us, and I saw that if we continued to advance, they would get between us and our works; I instantly ordered a retreat, which was effected in good order, and without loss, although the Enemy were within pistolshot of our rear, and seemed determined to enter our batteries by storm; but Fort Yorke and Massareene batteries opened such a well-directed fire of grape and musketry, that the assailants were obliged to fall back and shelter themselves under the sand hills. As the day lightened, we perceived that the Encmy's flotilla, consisting of 18 gun-boats, had taken up a position on the South side of the Island at point-blank shot. I ordered the signal to be made to the Tartar and Sheldrake that the Enemy had fanded, upon which these vessels immedion the daring enterprise of destroying the Enemy's flotilia in his ports, bore down along the North side of the island. Things were in this position, when, the column on the Northern shore, which, divided by the sand hills, had approached within fifty paces of our lines, made another desperate effort to carry the Massareene battery by storm; the column to the South-east also pushed on, and the reserve appeared on the bills ready to support them; but while the Commanding Officer was leading on his men with great gallantry, a musket I atl put a period to his life. Panic-struck by the loss of their Chief, the Enemy again fell back, and sheltered thouse ves behind the sand-hills. At this critical moment Lieut. Baker, with great skill and gallantry, anchored his vessel on their flank, and opened a well directed fire. The sand-bills being no longer a protection, and finding it impossible either to advance or retreat, the assailants hung out a flag of truce, and offered to surrender upon terms; but I would listen to nothing but an anconditional surrender, which, after some deliberation, was complied with. the mean time the gun-boats on the South side, which had been much gailed by the fire of Fort Yorke, and Massareene Battery, got under weigh, and stood to the Westward, and the column of the Enemy which had advanced on the South side, finding their retreat no longer covered by the flotilla, also bung out a flag of truce, and I sent out an , officer to meet it. I was asked to surrender; the reply that I returned, it is unnecessary to mention. The Enemy finding my determination, sought permission to embark without molestation; but I would listen to nothing but an unconditional submission; and I have the pleasure to inform you, that this corps also laid down their arms, and surrendered themselves prisoners of war. The prisoners, which were now more numerous than my small garrison, were no sooner secured, than operations were commenced against the reserve, which had been seen retreating to the Westward of the island. I took the field with Maj. Torrens (who, though wounded, insisted on accompanying me) and Lieut. and Adjutant Steele; but, as prisoners were so numerous, and as we had no place of security in which to place them, I could only employ on this occasion the brigade of howitzers under Lieuts. R. C. Steele and Bezant, of the Royal Marine Artillery, and part of the Light Company commanded by Lieut. Furnbull. When we arrived at the West end of the island, we found that the Enemy had formed on the beach, and were protected by 14 gun-boats towed close to the shore. To attack such a force, with 4 howitzers and 40 men, seemed an useless sacrifice of brave men's lives; I therefore with the advice of Maj. Torrens halted on the hills, while I reluctantly saw the reserve embarked under cover of the gun-boats, and the flotilla take a final leave of the island. I am happy to say, our loss has not been so considerable as might have been expected from so desperate an attack, we having only two killed and thirty wounded. The Enemy have suffered severely; we have buried between thirty and forty of their dead, and have received in the hospital twenty-three of their wounded; most of them have undergone amputations, three since dead of their wounds, besides a great number which they carried off the field to their boats. Maj. Melsteat, the commandant, fell in the field; Capt. Borgan, the next in command, wounded in the arm; Capt. Prutz, Adjt.-gen. to the Commander of the forces in Jutland, lost both his legs; since dead. The most pleasing part of my duty is to bear testimony to the zeal, energy, and intrepidity of the officers and men I had the honour to command: to particularize would be impossible; the same ardour inspired the whole. To Lieut. Baker, next in command, who will have the honour of delivering this dispatch, and will give you every information youmay require, I am much indebted; his merit and seal as an officer, which I have some years been acquainted with, and his volunteering with me on this service, claim my warmest esteem. Capt. Torrens, the senior officer of the Royal Marines, and who acted as Commandant of the Garrison, bore a couspicuous part of this day, and although wounded, I did not lose his valuable service and able support. The discipline and state of perfection to which he had brought the battalion is highly creditable to him as an officer. R. C. Steele, senior Officer of Royal Marine Artillery, also claims my warmest acknowledgments for the arrangements he made, which enabled us to keep up so heavy and destructive a fire. Capt. Steele, Lieut. and Quarter-Mast. Fischer senior Subaltern, Lieut. and Adjt. Steele, Lieuts. Stewart, Gray, Ford, Jellico, Atkinson, and Curtayne, all merit my warmest acknowledgments for the assistance they afforded ma-Lieut. Bezant, of the R. M. Artillery, deserves every commendation I can give him for his cool and able judgment in the direction of the guns on the Massareene battery. Lieut. Turnbull, who acted as Captain of the light company, when we pursued the reserve, manifested such zeal and energy, that I have no doubt, had we brought the Enemy again to action, he would have borne a very conspicuous part. I cannot sufficiently exe: press my thanks to Capts. Baker and Stewart of the Tartar and Sheidrake, for their great exertions to get round to the Flotilla; and had the wind the least" favoured them, they would have dostroyed the whole. I am happy to add, that the property belonging to the nicechants has been fully protected without meeting with the least loss. The expedition sailed from the Randers, commanded by Maj. Melsteat (an officer of reat distinction), and consisted of the following corps -- 2d Bat. of Jutland Sharp Shooters, 4th Bat. 2d Reg. of Jutland Yagers, 1st Reg. of Jutland Infantry, with some others, the names of which cannot be ascertained. I have the honour to enclose the article of surrender, a return of killed and wounded. and a list of Danish officers killed and taken. Also a return of ordnance stores J. W. MAURICE, Commandant. taken.

Of the garrison of Anholt, only two were killed and 30 wounded; among the latter is Capt. Torrens, slightly, Of the Danes, 1 Maj. 2 Captains, and 1 Lieutenant were killed; and 5 Captains, the Sierra de Santa Quiteria with the 3d, 1st, and 5th, vivisions, on the 18th, while the light division and the 6th manouvred in their front from the Sierra de Murcella; these movements induced the Enemy to bring back to the Sierra de Moitz the troops which had marched the preceding night, at the same time that they retired their corps from the Alva; and in the evening their whole army were assembled upon Moita, and the advanced posts of our right were near Arganil — those of our left across the Alv.

The Enemy retired from the position of Moita in the night of the 18th, and have continued their retreat with the utmost rapidity ever since; and I imagine their rear guard will be at Celorico this day. We assembled the army upon the Sierra de Moita on the 19th, and our advanced posts are this day beyond The Militia under Cols. Pinhancor. Wilson and Trant are at Fornas. We have taken great numbers of prisoners, and the Enemy have continued to destroy their carriages and their cannon, and whatever would impede their progress. As the greatest number of prisoners taken on the 19th bad been sent out on foraging parties towards the affair with a detachment of the Enemy, on the 23d, not far from Celorico, in which they killed seven and wounded several, and took tifteen prisoners. The militia under Gen. Silveira also took some prisoners on the 25th. The Encmy retired to his left, the 2d corps, by Goveia through the mountains upon Guarda, and the remainder of the army by the high road upon Celorico. They have since moved more troops upon Guarda, which position they still hold in strength. Our advanced guard is in front of Celorico, towards Guarda, and at Alverca, and the 3d division in the mountains, and occupying Porto Mese-rella and Prados. The allied troops will be collected in the neighbourhood of Celurico to-morrow. Gen. Ballasteros surprised Gen. Ramon on the 10th at Palma, and dispersed his detachment, and took from him 500 prisoners. Gen. Ballasteros had since retired to Valverde, and I hear that Gen. Zayas had been detached from Cadız with 6,000 men, including 400 cavalry, to be disembarked at Huelva to join Gen. Ballasteros.

P. S. Since writing the above, I have received the report of a gallant action of one of our patroles, yesterday evening, between Alverca and Guarda, under the command of Lieut. Perse of the 16th Light dragoons, and Lieut. Foster of the Royals, who attacked a detachment of the Enemy's cavalry, between Alverca and Guarda, and killed and wounded several of them, and took the Officer and 37 men prisoners. The Enemy have withdrawn from Pinhel across the Coa.

Foreign-Office, April 12. Dispatches have this day been received at this Office from Charles Stewart, Esq. his Majesty's Minister at Lisbon, dated the 30th ultimo, stating that Sir Wm. Beresford, having united the whole of his force in Portalegre on the 23d March, advanced on the 24th, and attacked the Enemy with his cavalry on the 25th. They were compelled to abandon Campo Mayor, with the loss of six hundred men killed and wounded. On the 26th Gen. Beresford's head-quarters were at Elvas. The Enemy had withdrawn their whole force, excepting a weak picquet, to the other side of the Guadiana. The corps under Marshal Soult has halted in the neighbourhood of Llerena. — Gen. Ballasteros had returned to Gibraleon on the 29th, where his force had been increased by the arrival of six thousand men under Gen. Zayas. — Marshal Bessieres arrived at Zamora on the 5th of March with seven thousand men.

This Gazette contains a letter from Capt. Bertram, of his Majesty's sloop Persian, dated off Beachy Head, April 6th; giving an account of the capture of L'Ambascade privateer, with a complement of 63 men, but having only 36 on board, commanded by M. Nichelas A. Briganda, belonging to Dieppe.

Admiralty-office, April 16. Vice-Admiral Thornborough has transmitted a letter he had received from Capt. Maitland, of the Emerald, giving an account of his having, on the 6th inst. captured l'Augusto French ship privateer, of 13 guns and 126 men; out three days from Brest without having made any capture. Admiral Sir C.Cotton has also transmitted a letter from Capt. Barrie of H. M. ship Pomone, stating his having, Jan. 18th, captured the Dubourdieu French privateer brig, belonging to Toulon, carrying 14 .12-pounders, and 93 men.

Downing-street, April 19. The following Dispatch was on the 17th instant received from Lieut.-Gen. Viscount Welington, dated Marmoleiro, 2d April.

My Lord, The allied army were collected in the neighbourhood and in front of Celorico on the 28th March, with a view to dislodge the Enemy from the position which they had taken upon: Guards, which they still occupied in force; and of which they apparently intended to retain possession. On that day a patrole of light infantry from Major-gen. Alexander Campbell's division, commanded by the Hon. Col. Ramsay, had some success against a detachment of the Enemy at Avelans; and a patrole of the lighticavalry, with a decachment of the 95th, with which was Major-gen. Slade, obliged the Enemy to retire from Frazedas : buth took many prisoners; and I am concessed to add that Brigade-major Stewart of the 95th was killed with the last: On the morning of the 59th, the 3d, 6th, and light divisions, and the 16th light dragoons and hussars, under the command of Major-gen. Picton, Major-gen. Alex. Campbell, and Major-gen. Sir William Erskine, moved upon Guarda in five columns, which were supported by the 5th division in the valley of the Mondego, and by the 1st and 7th from Celorica. And the militia, under Gen. Trant-and Col. Wilson, covered the movement at Alverca against any attempt that might have been made on that side to disturbit. The Enemy abandoned the position of Guarda without firing a shot, and setized upon Sabugal, on the Coa. They were followed by our cavalry, who took same prisquers from them. On the 30th, Sir William Erskine, with the cavalry and horse artillery, fell upon the rear-guard of the 2d corps, which had been mear Belmonte, and had marched for the Coa during the night, and he killed and wounded several and took some princauts." The Enemy have since taken a position upon the Coa, having an advanced guade : on this side; and the allied troops have this day been collected on the left of that river.

I have the honour to enclose the copy of a letter which I have received from Marshal Sir William Beresford, contain. ing the terms of the capitulation of Chappo Mayor; and I have likewise the honour of enclosing his report of his limit operations against the Enemy, from which your Lordship will observe that he has got possession of that place again, and has had considerable success against the Enemy's cavalry. This success would have been more complete, and would have been attended with loss loss, if the ardour of the 13th light drageous-mill 7th Portuguese regiment of cavalry in the pursuit of the Enemy, could have been kept within reasonable bounds. Some of the men missing of both these regiments were made prisoners on the bridge of Badajus. The Enemy have likewise abandoned. Albuquerque. I have received no accounts-from Cadis on from

the

SPAIN AND PORTUGAL.

For the most important, authentic, and satisfactory accounts from these quarters, we refer the Reader to our preceding extracts from the London Gazettes; only observing, generally, that, excepting a powerless garrison at Almeida, there is not now a French soldier in all Portagal, unless he be in the state of a prisoner.

The Cadix Extraordinary Gazette, of the 16th March, contains a short disparch from Gen. Ballasteros, communicating that he had surprised and routed Gen. Ramon's corps at Paima, on the 2d uit. and taken all his baggage, artillery, horses, and many presoners. Such of the Enemy as had escaped flexi towards Seville.

The letters from Gabrakar state, that about 1500 French troops (part of Sebastiana's corps., had entered St. Roque on the 15th March. They were commanded by Gen. Berthen, and seemed to have no other object than to commit excesses of every sort. They returned to Estipasta and Marbella, after having been guilty of every outrage that rapacity and lacentiousness could perpetrate.

A dreadful storm, which justed three days, viz. 27th, 28th, and 29th alt. took place at Cadiz. The men of war rode it out; but of the merchantmen and other vessels, 150 were driven on shore, and one-third or them totally wrecked. Of those that were driven to sea, few had returned; and it is feared many of them have been lost.

The following are interesting particulars of the gallant neuon at Barrona:

"Our fellows had marched 52 miles that day, and were just taking some refreshment, when a peasant came to General Graham, and told him the French were coming round a wood to surprine him, on which Gen. Graham formed his little army with admirable precision. When the Enemy appeared in sight, Gen. Graham rode up in front of the Guards, 87th regiment, German Legion, and Portuguese cavalry, and waving his bat, said, " Now, my lads, there they are—spare your powder, but give them steel enough." On which the column gave three choers, and as the French neared them, gave their volley, and made so animated a charge, that in an hour the Enemy were put hers du combat, and with the product, amistance £ amintance of the rifle corps and other British regiments, dispersed in all directions."

In the late brilliant action at Barrota, the fire was hotter than ever remembered by the oldest soldier; scarcely an officer escaping without some mark of shot. General Graham was himself pierced in the coat in two places; so was his Aid-de-Camp, Captain Stanhope, of the Guards. Lieutenant-Colonel Norcott of the 95th regiment, General Dilkes, Colonels Wheatly and Townsend of the Guards had their horses shot under them; Lieutenant-Colonel Colquitt of the Guards likewise was shot through the sleeve of his coat by a musket-ball, and a cannon-shot literally touched his saddle while he was in the act of dismounting to pass a ravine. Many others had similar escapes.

The Cortes of Spain have unanimously decreed the thanks of the Nation to General Graham, and have elected him Grandee of Spain of the first class, " free of tribute," for the "astonishing bravery and discipline" manifested by his Majesty's troops;—and a strict enquiry is to be made into the conduct of the Spanish General, who evidently appears from General Graham's silence respecting him, not to have done his duty on the occasion.—A letter from Cadiz, in corroboration of this opinion, says, "The Spaniards, to the number of 12,000 men, never fired a shot (except one regiment of cavalry, and one of infantry, who were with us). The rest never stirred out of the wood until all was over. They were three miles distant from the field of action, and were twice sent for to come and take their ground. Had they advanced in due time, the whole of the Enemy's columns under Marshal Victor would evidently have been made prisoners."

Gen. Graham's splendid victory at Barresa is thus mis-stated in the Moniteur.—" On the 5th of March some important events took place before Cadiz. A division of 8000 English, and from 7 to 8000 Spaniards, landed about the end of February at Algesiras. This column, consisting of 14,000 men, intended to attack the Duke of Belluno in the rear, and to raise the siege of Cadiz. The plan was completely frustrated. The Duke of Belluno defeated the enemy, and drove them into the Isle of Leon, taking three stand of colours, four pieces of cannon, and 760 men. He killed and wounded more than one third of the English." [But see the London Gazette.]

The following is an extract from a Lisbon Paper.

"Lisbon, April 7.—In addition to our other calamities, we have been visited by a disease of the typhus fever kind, which has proved extremely mortal among the Portuguese. In one parish in Buenos Ayres 3,000 persons have died of it; and 1,400 in Corpo Santo, since the beginning of March. The entire inhabitants of a house have frequently fallen victims to its ravages. It still continues, but is almost entirely confined to the Portuguese: thus the Enemy has left us a legacy nearly amounting to aplague.

"Young Mascarenhas Neto has been strangled and burned here, in Cais de Sondre, for having assisted, and served in the French army. The respectability of his family (his father was formerly Postmaster General), youth, and interesting appearance, together with the circumstance of the rope having twice broken, and the unfrequency of such a punishment, caused a great sensation in this capital."

A plot, to burn the British shipping in the Tagus, was lately discovered, but prevented by Admiral Berkeley, who, in consequence, directed his squadron to row guard nightly, with one boat from each ship, with fine-graphels.

Marshal Ney has been arrested by Massena. A difference of opinion respecting the campaign in Portugal had for some time subsisted between them; which at length terminated in a violent dispute, in consequence of which the latter was arrested and sent to Paris.

The following truly distressing narrative of the cruelties perpetrated by the French army under Massena, in its retreat through Portugal, is one among many others of a like description lately received from that country. -- Extract of a letter from a gentleman who accompanied Lord Wellington's army in pursuit of the French, after their retreat from Santarem:—"It is impossible to describe the scenes of horror of which t have been an eye-witness, and which will for ever brand the name of Massena with execration. It is hard for any body to believe that human nature could be guilty of such enormous and wanton wickedness. The city of Leyria had been eleven days on fire when I was there, and was burning still. Every thing that could be taken away was removed, the rest destroyed. The images in the Churches were in pieces; the graves were actually opened for the sake of plunder. The Nuns and Friars, at all the towns where we came, had fied to the mountains; their Convents were destroyed, and we found none but a few Portuguese perishing with hunger and ill treatment. At every place where we halted, if we saw any thing like a house with a door standing, we made it our head-quarters, and took possession 🐠 any table or chair that might have one his head-quarters at Pombal. Several corps of troops in the pay of England had been defeated. Columns had penetrated Portugal in every direction, disarming the inhabitants and reducing them to submission."

caped

The Portuguese Regency have published an animated and affecting Proclamation, in consequence of the retreat of the French, in which they bestow appropriate encomiums on the English officers and army.

FRANCE.

On the 20th ult. Maria Louisa (the write of the husband of Josephine) was delivered of a son, at Paris, who immediately received the ridiculous title of King of Rome.

The Monteur of the 20th ult. contains an abject and fulsome Address from the late Hanseatic Cities. They state, that they have always been French is their hearts through affection, and that they rejoice in the annexation of their cities to the French Empire, principally because it affords them an opportunity of shewing it without constraint.—Buonaphree tells them in his reply, that he hopes soon to witness the zeal and valour of their scamen; and declares, referred. Mag. April, 1811.

taxes.

A female monster, Magdelaine Albert, was beheaded at Moulins on the 20th March, for the murder of her father, mother, and her two sisters. She wore at the place of execution a red chemise, and had her head and face covered with a black yeil.

HOLLAND.

The Dutch regiments incorporated with the French army are to dudergo a new organization, and wear the French uniform.

The Jews in Holiand are now nominated to situations of trust.—Several of them have recently been raised to the magistracy, as commissioners of police.

Letters from Malta state, that an attempt to throw supplies and reinforcements into Corfu, upon a great scale, had been frustrated through the vigulance of our navy in that quarter: 27 vessels of from 100 to 120 tons, laden with warlike stores, and bound from Ancona to Corfu, were intercepted by the Magnificent and other ships of war.

From Sicily we have received copies of three Royal Edicts which had been published there, and which had greetly engaged

gaged the public attention, because it is said to be the first instance in which a Sicilian Sovereign has levied money without the consent of his Parliament. The first Edict relates to indemnities to religious communities, from which the King alienates certain estates; another refers to a lottery with 15,000 tickets. for the sale of those estates; and the third imposes a tax of one per cent. on all payments. This last being considered extremely detrimental to commerce, the British Merchants in Palermo presented a remonstrance to the Minister for Foreign Affairs against it; but the answer they received left no hopes that it would be repealed.

GERMANY, &c.

Letters from Vienna of the 13th ult. mention, that the occupation of Belgrade by the Russians had occasioned a strong sensation at Vienna, and had lcd to a remonstrance on the part of the Austrian Cabinet, who had demanded an explanation of the views of the Russian Monarch on this subject.

The King of Prussia, it is said, is about to proceed to Koningsberg, from whence it is likely he will continue his journey to St. Petersburg.

Letters of the 26th ult. from Hamburgh state, that the French evince some alarm in consequence of plots being in agitation in various parts of the Contipent. The Governor of Hamburgh has issued an order to the manufacturers of arms, importing, that they shall be accountable for the name of every person who shall become a purchaser.

The Hamburgh paper contains French Decree dated 2d ult. for raising in the three new departments of the mouths of the Elbe, Weser, and Upper Ems, a conscription of 3000 seamen.

Letters from Heligoland state, that a commotion, in which several lives were lost, lately took place in the neighbourhood of Embden. It was occasioned by the resistance of the inhabitants to the' conscription. The French Commandant, though displaying the badge of the Legion of Honour, was treated with great indignity. An opinion prevailed at Hamburgh, that the Danish sailors which had been sent to Antwerp would shortly return to their own country.

Jerome Buonaparte has ceded a small portion of the territory of Westphalia to his brother, and congratulated the inhabitants of the ceded districts on their thus becoming subjects of the "Great Empire."

SWEDEN AND DENMARK.

Count Gottorp (the King of Sweden) arrived at Heligoland on the 2d inst. in the Horatio frigate, and intended to reside there two mouths.

We have received an account of the temporary abdication of the reigning King of Sweden; and of the elevation of the Crown Prince (Bernadotte) to power The followunder certain restrictions. ing is an abstract of the Royal Proclamation, which is dated March 17:—" We Charles, &c. make known, whereas owing to an illness that has befallen us, and from which, by the assistance of the Almighty, we hope soon to be restored, we have deemed it necessary, for the present. to withdraw ourselves from the care and trouble which are so closely united with the management of public affairs; and in order, during our illness, not to retard the progress of affairs, we have thought fit to order what is to be observed respecting the Government. And we do. therefore, hereby appoint and nominate our beloved son, His Royal Highness Carl Johan Crown Prince of Sweden, and Generalissimo of our military forces by land and sea, during our illuces and until we shall be restored to health, to manage the Government in our name, and with all the rights we possess, and alone to sign and issue all orders, &c. with the following motto above the signature:— During the illness of my most gracious King and Lord, and agreeable to his appointment. However, His Royal Highness the Crown Prince must not, during the administration of our Royal power and dignity, create any Noblemen or Knights; and the vacant offices of the States can only, until further notice, be managed by those whom His Royal Highness shall appoint to that effect."

RUSSIA.

Since Buonaparte has lost the opportunity of sending those who were obnoxious to him to Cayenne, he has obtained permission of Alexander to forward them to Siberia: and it is affirmed that in the course of 15 months, more than 60 French reformers have been sent to Kamtschatka.

Letters from Sweden speak with confidence of the change in the politics of Russia. It is stated, that the Emperor Alexander had come to the resolution of declaring to Europe his decided nentrality; and that he would suffer his merchants to trade with any of the nations thereof, England not excepted. AMERICA.

The supplementary Non-intercourse Bill has passed both the Senate and the House of Representatives. As the law now stands in America on that subject. all British vessels arriving in the ports of America, having sailed from Great Britain or any of her dependencies subsequently to the 2d February, 1811, are liable to confiscation, together with their cargoes.

The printing-office of Mr. Dickson, at Lancaster Penn, and the brewery and bark-mill of Mr. Beach, at Newark, America, were burnt to the ground last month. They were thought to have been wilfully set on fire.

ISLE OF MAN.

Without a vain, without a grudging heart, To him who gives us all I yield a part.

To the long-neglected and most wretched debtors confined in the Prison of Castle Rushen * (built A. D. 960) at last the hand of Humanity has been extended to their relief. — The truly benevolent Mr. Neild of Chelsea, following the footsteps of the immortal Howard, has not only most generously given a supply of coals and candles, to dispel the damps, to disperse the gloom, and to avert the horrors and misery of an hard and severe winter, but has sent six iron bedsteads, with sacking bottoms, beds, blankers, &c. The example of this excellent man hath out awakened the feelings of the rich and great of this Isle; but sno-criptions are now promoting in England, Ireland, and Anthem from the great Organ of Sg George's Chapel filled the Choir, instatled one of His Majesty's Knights of Windsor; and afterwards, agreeably to the custom time out of mind established, was put into the possession of his House within the Castle by the two installing Knights. On the 29th of March, Col. Moore, late of the 56th Regiment of Foot, in like manner took the usual oaths, and was with the same ceremony immediately installed. The most enchanting Gothic Chapel of St. George's was througed on the occasion; many of high rank in the Castle attended, and almost all the beauty of Windsor; so that, on the whole, the Canons and Minor Canons in their habiliments, and the Knights in the robes of their most antient Order, the Coup d'aul was highly interesting. It is to be regretted that public notice is not given when a Knight is to be installed, as, no doubt, many would come from afar to behold it.

March 23. A root took place at Bristol market this day, in consequence of fresh butter having advanced to 2s. 6d. per 10. A party of workmen and colliers forcebly seized all the butter, sold it at a price fixed by themselves, and returned

Mr. Neill's description of this prison may be seen in our vol.LXXX. ii.515.

[April

the money to the owners; but in many instances, the parties in this outrage, who were themselves the purchasers at 1s. per lb. disposed of it again at 2s. The constables apprehended six of the most active of the rioters, and lodged them in the Bridewell.

April 3. A fire broke out at Mrs. Barne's bake-house, in Crowland, Lincolnshire, which, owing to the direction of the wind, and the adjoining houses being covered with thatch, destroyed six houses before an engine could be procured from Spalding.

April 6. W. Townley, who was executed lately at Gloucester, for burglary, had a reprieve for him put into the Postoffice at Hereford, addressed, by mistake, to the Under-Sheriff of Herefordshire, instead of Gloucestershire. On the mistake being discovered, an Express was sent off, which unfortunately did not arrive until 20 minutes after the culprit had been turned off.

April 13. The merchants at Hull agreed at a meeting held lately to petition Parliament against granting licences to the Baltic. They state, that for the last three years, hundreds of thousands of tons of Foreign shipping have been employed in the Baltic trade, the owners of which have obtained three times more freight than is usually paid to British ships; and that, by this system, we not only pay several millions a-year to hostile foreigners, but rear a hardy race of seamen for them, and give them an accurate knowledge of our coasts and ports. They recommend that all licences shall be withheld from those parts where the British flag shall be excluded.

The workmen who discovered the Roman burial-ground on Beaconsfield farm, have, in pursuing their work, arrived at the Roman bath described by Plott, in his "Antiquities of Oxfordshire." The bath was always visible, but was considered as a small stew, walled round with rough stone, till the workmen discovered the tesselated floor Here the Roman tiles and the near it. tesselation are still in a state of good preservation, although in a wet situation. The oak dug up is sound, black, and From the present and other similar places that have been found, and hitherto not noticed, we can trace that the Roman stations in the reign of Domitian were, Wallingford, Bicester, the Bartons, Great Tew, Wigginton, (where some Roman tiles and coins have been found,) Swerford, Hooknorton (Berryfield farm), Chipping-Norton, Sarsden (probably a chiefstation), Churchill, Cheltenham, Cirencester, and Winchcombe.

At the Stratford Assizes, J. Gould, aged 23, was convicted of the murder of his wife Elizabeth. The Prisoner married at an early age, without any ostensible means of supporting a wife and family, beyond his own daily labour. He worked for his father in the character of a servant, on a small farm. Finding a family coming on, his wife being pregnant with the second child. he used violent and cruel means of producing abortion, namely, crushing or elbowing his wife in bed, rolling over her, &c. By these means abortion was produced, and the unfortunate mother died a short time after, the wife and, offspring sharing the same fate. Before she expired, she declared, according to the evidence, that ill usage of the above kind, had been the cause of her death: and on this circumstantial evidence. Gould was found guilty. On sentence being passed upon him, he exclaimed that he was murdered; sobbed and shricked aloud; evinced the utmost fondness for life; and on the morning of his execution, was obliged to be dragged from his cell, and hoisted up the platform, more dead than alive, to undergo his sentence.

> Domestic Occurrences. Saturday, March 16.

At a General Court of the Governors. of St. Luke's Hospital, held on the 5th inst. Charles Shaw Lefevre, Esq. M. P. in the Chair, it was Resolved unanimously, That in consideration of the great services rendered to this Hospital by Dr. Simmons, during his faithful and constant attendance as Physician, for the space of thirty years, he be made a Governor of this Charity for life; and that a Staff be sent to him, together with a copy of this Resolution signed by the Secretary.

Resolved unanimously, That Dr. Simmons be requested to allow his name to continue, on the books of the Hospital, as Consulting Physician.

And at another Court of the said Governors, held this day, the following letter from Dr. Simmons to the Secretary, was read:

"Poland-street, March 11, 1811.
"Sir, I beg leave to acknowledge the receipt of your obliging letter, inclosing two Resolutions of the Governors of St. Luke's Hospital at a General Court held on the 5th inst. by which they do me the honour to appoint me a Governor of the Charity for life, and to request me to continue my name on the books of the Hospital as Consulting Physician. Both these Resolutions are highly gratifying

to the old family plate, which was massy, and fit only to be melted, sold at 8s. per oz. and every thing else above its value. The Tokay sold at 84% per dozen quarts, is 7% per bottle.

Thursday, April 4.

At a Common Council held this day, the recommendation of the Committee for General Purposes, for adding 1500L per annum to the allowance of the late, present, and fiture Lord Mayors, was agreed to. The annual expences of the Chief Mag trates were ascertamed to be 12,000% and their receipts about The Thanks of the Court, the Freedom of the City, and a Sword valued at 200 gu neas, was voted to Gen. Grahain for his services at Barrosa; as was a Sword of 160 gameas value to Brig.gen. Dilkes, and the Thanks of the Court to all the Officers, non-commiscioned Officers, and Privates.

Monday, April 8.

About two o'clock this day, two houses in Fronmonger-row, Moorfields, fell suddenly with a tremendous crash, which alarmed the whole neight ourhood wife and three children of a carpenier, of the name of Crew, who inhabited one of them, were buried in the runs. The wife and one child were taken out dead; mouth Mail-coach, underwest an examition before the Lord Mayor, on a churge of purchasing eight guineas at a price considerably above the current value. Mr. Naider, the Under Marshal of the · City, said, that in consequence of information from the Treasury, that there were persons about town employed as agents to purchase gameas for exportation, he made diligent criquity, and having found out the defendant, he marked eight guineas, and went with Sayer, the Bow-street officer, who sold those guineas to the prisoner, and received for each 25s. 6d. The prisoner was admitted to bail. The offence is punishable by fine and imprisonment. person residing in Birchin-lane, has likewise been apprehended during the week, and held to bail for the same offence.

Mednesdan, April 24.

A respectable and numerous meeting of merchants took place at the City of London Tavern, to consider the propricty of opening a subscription for the relief of the Portuguese who have suffered by the barbarities of the French army. Mr. Whitmore, who was in the chair, read a letter from Mr. Villiers, in furtherance of the object of the meeting, and briefly stated the distressed situation of the natives of Portugal. Mr. Warre proposed the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted: I. That the uniform good and patriotic conduct of the Portuguese Nation during the French Invasion, and the consequent sufferings of a great proportion of that brave and loyal people, entitle them to the benevolent consideration and assistance of every individual in this Empire. II. That this Meeting, feeling most sensibly the distresses and wants of the unfortunate sufferers; and convinced that the vote of Parliament, although liberal, is not adequate to the humane intention, is anxious, not only to contribute individually, but to recommend, in the most general and efficacious manner, an object so truly benevolent and praise-worthy. III. That a General Subsbription for this purpose be now opened, &c.

Saturday, April 27.

The Statue erected in Guildhall to Lord Nelson, was exposed this day for the first time to public view. The following inscription, from the pen of Mr. Sheridan, appears on the tablet:

" To

HORATIO VISCOUNT AND BARON NELSON, Vice-Admiral of the White, and Knight of the most Honourable Order of the Bath:

A Man amongst the few who appear at different periods to have been created to promote the grandeur, and add to the security of Nations:

inciting by their high example their fellow mortals through all succeeding times, to pursue the course that leads to the exaltation of our imperfect nature. PROVIDENCE, that implanted in Nelson's breast an ardent passion for renown, as bounteously endowed him with the transcendant talents necessary to the great purposes he was destined to accomplish.

At an early period of life he entered into the Naval service of his Country;

and early were the instances which marked the fearless nature and enterprize of his character;

uniting to the loftiest spirit, and the justest title to self-confidence, a strict and humble obedience to the sovereign rule of discipline and subordination.

Rising by due gradation to command, be infused into the bosoms of those he led the valorous ardour and enthusiastic zeal for the service of his King and Country which animated his own; and while he acquired the love of all, by the sweetness and moderation of his temper, he inspired a universal confidence in the never-failing resources of his capacious mind.

It will be for History to relate the many great exploits, through which, solicitous of peril, and regardless of wounds, he became the glory of his profession! But it belongs to this brief record of his illustrious career to say, that he commanded and conquered at the Battles of the NILE and Cores-

Victories never before equalled; yet afterwards surpassed by his own last atchievement, the Battle of TRAFALGAR!

fought on the 21st of October, 1805.
On that day, before the conclusion of the action,

But the sources of life and sense failed not until it was known to him that the destruction of the enemy being completed, the glory of his Country, and his own, had attained their summit;

then laying his hand on his brave heart; with a look of exalted resignation to the will of the Supreme Disposer of the Fate of Man and Nations, he expired.

The Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council, of the City of London, have caused this Monument to be not in the presumptuous hope of sustaining the departed Hero's memory, but to manifest their estimation of the erected,

Man,
and their admiration of his deeds.
This testimony of their Gratitude, they trust will remain as long as their own renowned City shall exist.

The period to Nelson's FAME can only be
THE END OF TIME."

Monday, April 29.

The Queen's Council consider his Majesty's recovery to be so certain, as to render more than one Bulletin in the week unnecessary. For some days past his Majesty has had no return of his complaint, and it is believed that he will in two or three weeks return to the discharge of public business. As a proliminary step, it is reported that the key of the Cabinet boxes has been restored to his Majesty, that he may be made acquainted, as heretofore, with the official business.

GAZETTE

, esq.

tehall, Murch 30. Francis Lord Nais Majesty's High Commissioner General Assembly of the Church of ad.

ming-street, April 11. C. Maxwell, overnor of Sierra Leune and its descies.

CIVIT PROMOTIONS.

ch 13. Lieut gen. Sir George Nupart. Commander in Chief in Ind a Member in Council of the Benablishment.

R. Rennie, one of the Regents and sors of Civil and Natural History, rischal College, Aberdeen, cice J. deceased.

Thomas Wilkins, rector of Weston, et, Master of the Free Grammar-Bath, once Rev. Nath. Morgan, ed.

John Cholmeley, Burton Coggles Lincolnshire, vice Schutz, deceased. David Horndon, rector of Merton, R. Devon.

John Holcombe, M. A. rector of ton, Rosecrowther R. Pembroke-

Rogers Porter Packwood, M. A.

Rev. Charles Milman Mount, M. A. Hanngton V. Wilts.

Rev. Thomas Wright, Little Henny R. Essex.

Rev. George Leigh Cooke, M. A. Rissington Wick R. Gloucestershire, vice Pitman, deceased.

Rev. Mr. Harrison, vicar of Crondall, Fareham R. Hants, vice Wools, deceased.

Rev. James Ogle, rector of Bishop's Waltham, Hants, Crondall V. e.cs Harrison resigned.

Rev. George Dinely, B. A. Spetchley R. Worcestershire.

DISPENSATIONS.

Rev. Wm. Hungerford Colston, D. D. rector of West Lyford and Keinton-Mandefield, to hold Clapton in Gordano R. Somersetshire.

Rev. W. Cowling, to hold the endowed vicarage of Albury, Herts, with the rectory of Wicken Bonant, Essex.

Rev. E. M. Peck, to hold the rectory of Coveney cum Maney, Isla of Ely, with consolidated rectories of Houghton and Witton, Hunts Biaras.

Feb. AT Leinster House, Dublin, the 25. Lady Emily Henry, a daughter.

March 24. In Upper Fitzroy-street, the wife of Gen. Burr, a son and heir.

In Berkeley-square, the Marchioness of Lansdowne, a son and heir.

Lately, In Great Cumberland-street, Lady Harriet Drummond, a son and heir.

In Bolton-street, Lady Henry Fitzroy, a son.

At Earl Manvers's, Portman-square, Lady Frances Bentinck, a daughter.

Lady Bagot, a son and heir.

The wife of J. Goodford, esq. of Yeovil, a son and heir.

April 8. The wife of Edward Hartopp, esq. of Dalby House, Leicestershire, a son.

April 10. The Marchioness of Bath, a daughter.

April 14. The wife of C. W. Taylor, esq. M. P. a daughter.

In Lower Grosvenor-street, Lady Brownlow, a daughter.

April 0. The lady of Sir Henry Lushington, bart. a son.

MARRIAGES.

1810, AT Colombo, the Hon. Patrick July 20. Stuart, Lieut.-col 19th foot, to Catharine Henrietta, daughter of the Hon. John Rodney, Chief Secretary to the government at Ceylon.

Dec. 17. At Burnham House, the seat of Lord Ventry, co. Kerry, Nicholas De Lacherois Crommelin, of Mount Allo, co. Antrim, to Eliza, second daughter of the Hon. William Townsend Mullins, eldest son of the Lord Ventry.

1811, Feb. 9. At Burnham House, the seat of Lord Ventry, co. Kerry, Richard Orpen Townsend, esq. of Ardtully, co. Kerry, to Anne, eldest daughter of the Hon. William Townsend Mullins, and grandaughter of Lord Ventry.

March 7. At St. George's Church, Hanover Square, Rowland Rouse, of Market Harborough, gent. to Miss M. B. Sturges, daughter of the Rev. Joseph Sturges, sen. heretofore of Sibbertoft, but now of Wappenham, co. Northampton.

March 25. At Cheltenham, D. A. P. Wilson Philip, M. D. of Worcester, to Mary, sixth daughter of the late Charles Domvile, esq. of Santry house, Dublin.

Lately, Rev. Joseph Cotterill, rector of Ampton, Suffolk, to Miss Boak, daughter of the Rev. Mr. B. rector of Brockley.

At Lisbon, Capt. G. F. Seymour, R. N. son of the late Adm. Lord Hugh S. to Georgiana, daughter of the Hon. Adm. Berkeley, Commander-in-Chief at Lisbon.

Sir Isaac Coffin, bart. Vice-Admiral of the White, to Elizabeth Brown Greenly, only child of W. G. esq. of Titley Court, Herefordshire.

Thomas Hurrell, esq. of Chishill-hall, Essex, to Martha, only daughter of the Rev. J. Perkins, rector of Rampton, Cambridgeshire.

J. Betts, esq. of Knowle-house, Devon, to Miss Emma Young, of Netherex-house, Devon.

At Fremington, Devon, Rear-Adm. Manley Dixon, to Miss Jeffreys, daughter of Gabriel J. esq. of Swanses.

Peter Hawker, esq. of Long-parish House, Hauts, to Julia, only daughter of Col. Hawker, of 14th Light Dragoom.

April 2. At St. George's, Hanoversquare, Rev. L. W. Eliot, rector of Peperharrow, Surrey, to Matilda Elizabeth, second daughter of the late Henry Habey, esq. of Henley-park.

By special licence, Baron Charles de Tuyll, to Miss Giklemeester, daughter of Daniel G. esq. formerly Dutch Consul General and Charge des Affaires to the Queen of Portugal.

April 5. Henry Fellowes, esq. second son of Robert P. esq. of Shottisham, Norfolk, to Frances, youngest daughter of Sir John Frederick, bart.

April 6. At Cheshunt, Rev. Samuel Holworthy, M. A. vicar of Crossil, Derbyshire, to Diana Sarah, daughter of the late Nathanael Bayly, esq. of Jamaics.

April 13. At Kuntsford, John Ireland Blackburne, esq. M. P. to Miss Bamford, daughter of the late William B. esq. of Bamford.

April 16. At St. George's, Bloomsbury, rev. S. Birch, rector of St. Mary Woolnoth, to Margaret, eldest daughter of William Browning, esq. of Woburn-place.

April 18. At St. Margatet's, West-minster, W. E. Tomline, esq. eldest son of the Lord Bishop of Lincoln, to Prances, only daughter of the late John Amlet, esq. of Ford-hall, Shropshire.

Additions and Corrections.

Vol. LXXX. ii. 396. l. 1. Mr. W. B. Yate. For Oct. 8. read Sept. 8.

P. 660. a. and the present volume, p. 184, b. From Sir John Danvers' pedigree in Swithland Church: Sir Joseph's daughters were 1. Frances; 2. Catherine, married to Mr. Lee, of Coton, Salop, who left a son and two daughters; 3. Lucy, married to Col. Grey, the present Lord Stamford's uncle; 4. Fanny.

Vol. LXXXI. p. 94. The late Earl Verney was in his father's life-time returned to Parliament for Wendover at the general election in 1740, by his then title of Visc. Fermanagh; m 1747 and 1754 as Earl Verney. In 1761 he was elected for Chrmarthen town; in 1768, 1775, and 1780, for Buckinghamshire. At the election in 1784 his embarrassments prevented his personal canvass, or even appearance; but such was the respect in which he was held by the Yeomanry, that, in spite of the most powerful opportion, and the want of zeal where he had every right to have expected the most strenuous suppert,

tion should oblige such a Landlord with their votes, that the danger of a stranger obtaining them never occurred to him. At the general election in 1768, he found his mistake: S.r Robert Darling of the City of London had an intimation that there were discontented people at Wendover, and he sent down 1500 gumeas the night before the election. So ill was Lord V. served by his agents, that the first intimation he had of this was, that, on going into the Town-hall the next morning, Sir Robert was proposed, and his Lordship's own tenants voting against his interest, Sir Robert was returned.

Another Correspondent enables us to add the following particulars of the family: The late Mary Verney, Baroness Fermanagh, was the only child of the Hon, John Verney, who died 3 May, 1737, by Mary, the daughter of Josiah Nicholson, of Claphatu in Surrey, esq. which lady, after Mr. Verney's decease, married 9 December, 1741, the late Richard Calvert, of Hall Place, in the parish of Bexley, Kent, esq. Mr. Calvert was consin of Sir William Calvert, sometime Alderman of London; and died 31 January, 1782. His lady died 6 January 1789. Their issue now living is as follows, Richard Calvert, Gant. Mag. April, 1811.

church, and has the following inscription: Depositum Thomæ Nash generosi, honestà orti familià in agro Vigormensi, vici, charitate, humilitate eximii, et mirè mansuetr; Græce, Latine, Gallice, et Italice apprime docti, plurium (quos scripsit, transtulit, elucidavit, edidit) librorum authoris jure amplectend: Interior:s Templi annos circiter 30 repagularis, non solid, minus quam synceri. Tho. Nash obiit 250 Augusti 1648. I have never seen any of his works; but am informed that the School of Potentates, translated from the Latin, with observations, in octavo, 1648, was his, and that he probably wrote the four-fold discourse in quarto, 1632. He was a zealous loyalist, contrary to the sentiments of his two brothers; the eldest a country gentleman in Worcestershire, of considerable estate, from whom the Editor is descended, was very active in supporting the Parliament cause, and the government by Cromwell. The younger brother commanded a troop of horse in the Parliament service, was member of parliament for the city of Worcester, and an active justice of peace under the Protector: the family quarrel on political accounts, which was carried on with the greatest animosity, and most earnest desire to ruin each other, together with the decline of the King's affairs, and particularly the execution of his person, so affected the spirits of Mr. Tho. Nash, that he determined not long to survive it.— The Editor hopes the Reader will excuse this periautology and account of his great grandfather, and his two younger brothers: he at this day feels the effects of their family quarrels and party zeal.' (Note, p. 302.)—Such notes, with a little circumstance of putting the names of the painter and engraver under the portrait, as witnesses to the likeness, with a sciant præsentes et futuri' superscribed, convey more notion of character than a long dissertation on the subject. We could not, therefore, refrain from taking from the Editor's hand the picture he has given of himself, for the more extensive gratification of the publick."— Of the History of Worcestershire also, it may not be unpleasant Readers, to peruse the Author's own account: The First Volume was dedicated, in 1781, to the Nobility and Gentry of that County, "in grateful acknowledgement of the Friendship and rational Society he had for many years enjoyed amongst them;" and with "a hearty wish, and sincere prayer, that they may be blessed with all possible happiness; and, by a prudent and wise conduct, together with their Estates, transmit to their Posterity laudable Examples of religious and virtuous Behaviour both in publick and in private." If the good Doctor (as we know to have been the case) grew tired at last both of the labour and the expence of editing a County History, his own account of his metives for undertaking it will in some degree plead his excuse. " Above 20 years ago, coming into possession of a considerable real estate in this my native county, I determined, as far as was consistent with a proper attention to my own affairs, to serve my countrymen and neighbours by every means in my power. Thus I became a mere provincial man, confining my ambition within the antient province of Wiccia, now commonly known by the name of Worcestershire. oftentimes wished that some one would write the History and Antiquities of the County. I proposed the undertaking to several persons, offering them all the assistance in my power. I invited the Society of Antiquaries to choose a proper person, promising to open a subscription with three or four hundred pounds. Failing of success in all my applications, I offered my own shoulders, however unequal to the burden; reflecting, that though very little had been published, yet this work was in some degree made easy, because materials had been collecting for near 200 years." The original Collectors (of whom Dr. Nash gives several particulars) were Thomas Habingdon and his som William; and the MSS. of both, augmented by those of Dr. Thomas and Bp. Lyttelton, having been bequeathed to the Society of Autiquaries, Dr. Nach was indulged, in 1774, with the unsessived use of them for the purpose of publi-"When I first undertook this Work," he says, "it did not appear so troublesome or expensive as I afterwards found it; but, having once begun, I determined to persevere. It has been my amusement, and I hope the Reader's expectation will not be absolutely disappointed. I was the better enabled to go through with it, as I lived within my income, and by inclination, as well as profession was restrained from elections, gaming, horse-racing, fox-hunting, and such other pleasures as are too frequently the ruin of country gentlemen. Many alterations were to be made, and much was to be added to the materials already collected, as well to supply defects, as to bring the Work down to the present Many errors must inevitably occur in a book of this kind, which the Editor wishes earnestly to correct; if therefore, any gentleman more intimately acquainted than himself with any parish here described, would be so obliging as to communicate his corrections or additions. either to himself at Bevere near Worcester. or inclosed to any of the booksellers mentioned in the title-page, they shall be printed on separate sheets, and given to the purchasers of this Work; as it is not probable a book of this kind should ever require a second edition. I should be very ungrateful if I did not acknowledge the favours already received from many learned friends: Mr. Gough, Mr. Manning, Mr. Rose, Mr. Pennant, Dr. Percy Dean of Carlisle, Mr. Farley, Mr. Brooks. Mr. Astle, Mr. Bartlett, Mr. Lightfoot &c.; not to mention the communications of many gentlemen of this County. Some may be displeased with the manner in which these Collections are disposed, and may think they should have been arranged by hundreds, or according to the course of rivers: but whoever is acquainted with the irregular shape of the County, with the disjointed manner in which the parishes lie that compose the several hundreds, must know, that it is almost impossible to throw them into any other form, especially as I do not presume. to call this account an History, but only Parochial Collections for an History; and it is hoped that in some future day. an able hand will select from all the provincial histories what is really useful or curious, and add it by way of notes to a new edition of Camden's Britannia. Much of what is here written may to indifferent judicial proceedings: may they copy his domestic and his public virtues: may they be wise, honoured, and happy l attention to so sharing an example, many aminhie characters are hoped for in the next age; and the Editor of this book with pleasing expectation looks forward to that period of his wishes, which will be the de-light of his declining years, and still further endear to him his native County."-A thin Supplementary Volume of " Additions and Corrections," published in 1499, closed the Interary labours of Dr Nash -Maria, the only daughter of Dr. Nash, was married March 19, 1785, to the Hon. John Sommers Cocks, eldest son of the Right hon. Charles Lord Sommers, who, by the death of his father, Jan. 30, 1806, succeeded to the Peerage.

Betrops

P. 285. In our account of the Proceedings of a General Court of the Governors of St. Luke's Rospital, in consequence of the resignation of Dr. Simmons, we accidentally omitted the first of the three Resolutions which were unanimously passed on that occasion; and, by order of the General Court, inserted in different

Deathi,

1810, AT Cawapoor, East Indies, August 12. A Capt, John Cumming, 8th

Light Dragoons.

Nov. 12. On board the Castor, on his return to England from the West Indies, aged 26, Mr. Samuel Bowditch, of Taunton, a Lieutenant and adjutant of marines at Marie-Galante. He died of the yellow fever, after an illness of three days; and his loss is smeerely lamented, his exemplary conduct having procured him general esteem, Dec. 20. At Vera Cruz, of the yellow fever, Lieut. Wm. Elliott, of the Implacable, second son of Governor E. of the Leeward Islands.

Dec. 25. At her grandson's, at Nassau, New Providence, in her 91st year, the Hon. Anne Louisa Moreton, widow of the late Hon. Major Charles M. the youngest son of Matthew the first Lord Ducie, and maternal grandmother of Henry Moreton Dyer, esq. Judge of the Vice-Admiralty Court of the Bahama Islands.

1811, Jan. 12. At Barbadoes, Wm. Hamell, esq.

Feb. 5. At Wingham, co. Kent, aged 70, Sarah, wife of Mr. Henry Denne.

^{*} R. Lygon, esq. Chairman of the Quarter Sessions.

Feb. 13. At his house, near to the Roman Station at Chesterton, parish of Worfield, co. Salop, John Skett, gent. a widower; having just before smoked his pipe, his usual custom in the afternoon, and passed into an adjoining room, where he almost instantly fell into the arms of He had for about 14 or 15 years past laboured under a state of lunacy, brought on by a little excess of liquor. John New, an ancestor of his wife's, of the antient family of the News, who had been resident on the same spot for many ages, was visited with this disease about the commencement of the reign of Henry VI. when a commission was issued, under the hand of the steward, from the Manor Court of Worfield; and Sybill, his wife, was appointed to the charge of him. the sixth of this reign, 1428, she obtained a settlement from her unfortunate husband's father, of the reversion of the family estate in that place, which she became possessed of on the death of her father-in-law, in the 14th of that reign. The common ancestor of this family was Henry le New, who in 33 Edward III. gave to his lord 4s. as a fine, in order to have the privilege of marrying Alice Law, and obtain possession of her lands in that hamlet.

396

Feb. 26. At Bridgmorth, of a pulmonary consumption, Miss Boden. She had been for some years a partner with her sister Mrs. Onions in the management of a very excellent school for young ladies. Miss Boden was a most charming and amiable young lady; rather handsome in her person; pleasant in her manners; gay without frivolity; occasionally sedate, but without the least appearance of morosity; agreeable, vivacious, unassuming, and sensible in conversation; humane, charitable, religious: in fine, she was a very striking instance of that agreeable and sensible perfection of mind and disposition, which alone can make the agreeable and accomplished woman.

Feb. 27. At Clifton, Elizabeth, Countess of Cavan, relict of Richard Lambart, sixth Earl of Cavan. She was the eldest daughter of George Davis, esq. a commissioner of the Navy, and was married to the earl, Nov. 13, 1762. He died, Nov. 2, 1778, leaving issue, Richard Ford William the present and seventh earl; and the Lady Elizabeth Jane Lambart, married Nov. 9, 1793, William Henry Ricketts, of the Royal Navy, nephew and presumptive heir of John Earl of St. Vincent.

March 3. Aged 86, Mr. John Newton, of Keisby. Lincolnshire.

ļ

Rev. Mark Burn, vicar of All Saints, South Lynn, and of Geyton, Norfolk.

At Edinburgh, aged 21. Lady Sarah, wife of Daniel Collyer, jun. esq. of Wroxham, Norfolk, and youngest daughter of Alexander Earl of Fife.

At Dublin, the Hon. Henry Edmond. Nugent, second son of the Earl of Westmeath, and grandson of the Marquis of Drogheda, K. P.

March 4. In Saville-row, Mrs. Lyell, mother of the Dowager Countess Delawar, and grandmother of the present Earl.

In North-street, Westminster, in her 84th year, Mrs. Caldwell.

The wife of Mr. Elsworth, cheese-monger, of Prince's-street, Drury-lane. She had gone to bed in perfect bealth, and was found dead in the morning.

At Barton-upon-Humber, Lincolnshipe, John Wilbar, gent. many years steward to Sir John Nelthorp, bart.

In Dublin, the wife of Thomas Jameson, esq. eldest daughter of John Ogiby, esq. of Ardnargle, co. Londonderry.

March 5. At the battle of Barrosa, in his 20th year, Ensign Eyre, only son of A. H. E. esq. M. P. for Notts; and in the same battle, in his 24th year, Lieut. Swann, only son of Henry S. esq. M. P. of Ufford-hall, near Stamford.

In Nottingham-place, Portman-square, Mrs. Prior, widow of the late Col. John P. in the Prince Regent of Portugal's service.

Aged 77, George Wackerbarth, eag. of Parson-street.

At her father-in-law's near Newingtongreen, after a long and severe illness, the wife of Mr. Reginald Parker, proctor, Doctors'-commons.

Miss Jane Thomas, late of Streathern, Surrey, sister to Evan T. esq. of Parliament-street.

At Dulwich, Ebenezer King, esq. surgeon, of Burr-street, East Smithfield.

At his sister's, Stratford, Essex, aged 51, Mr. W. Jackson, lately of the Angelinn, Tattershall, Lincolnshire.

Mrs. Martin, wife of Mr. Thomas M. linen-draper, of Bristol, and daughter of Mr. Hague.

At Shrewsbury, of a cancer in his lip, occasioned by smoking a pipe without the end of it being waxed, aged 55, Mr. T. Worrall, of Waverton, Cheshire, timber-merchant; he has left a widow and five children.

In the Lunatic Asylum, York, Mr. John Schofield, of Skipton, attorney; and on the same day at Skipton, in coase-quence of a disorder brought on by final distress for the deplorable situation of his father, Richard, his youngest son.

At Manssield, Notts, aged 91, Mrs. Sheppard, mother of Mr. P. S. stationer.

Rev. Joseph White, 45 years rector of Oxburgh with Foulden, Norfolk.

Aged 77, Rev. Repps Browne, rector of Great Milton, and Wood Dalling, Nor-folk.

March 6. In his 108th year, John Cowie, finding the animal gain upon him, threw henself flat upon the ground, and thus completely prevented the bull from goring Disappointed of his revenge, be immediately ran after Rogers, and coming up to him unawares, gored the poor youth in the lower part of the back, and drove his horn nearly through his body, tossing hen at the same time some height above the ground. The animal after this laid himself down close by poor Rogers, and the other cadet immediately ran for assistance. A gun was soon procured, and the animal killed, by firing twice at him. Rogers was then conveyed to the Cadet Hospital with very little hopes of life. He continued in great agony for some time, when a mortification came on, and he died the next day

March 7. In Upper George-street, Portman-square, Sampson Wood Sober, esq. of the Posygon, Southampton, only son of Cumberbatch S. esq.

At Stockwell Common, Mr. John Barclay, merchant, of Old Broad-street.

Aged 90, Mr. Benjamin Hames, formerly a farmer, of Fith Bank, Lincolnshire.

At Peterborough, aged 80, Rev. Henry Matthew Schutz, of Queen's College, Cambridge, B. A. 1752, M. A. 1755; D.D. 1709; rector of Burton Coggles, with gratitude and respect.

After a lingering and distressing illness of four months, which she endured with the utmost fortitude and most Christian resignation, in her 34th year, Anne, wife of Mr. T. Albin, printer and bookseller, of Spalding, Lincolnshire; leaving, besides her husband and other relatives, four young children to deplore her loss. The writer of this is by no means an advocate for indiscriminate and unmeaning panegyric upon events sim lar to the present; yet he cannot in this instance forbear to offer a due tribute to departed worth and excellence. Though the lamented subject of this article had nothing to beast of on the score of birth or education; yet, possessed of a good understanding and most amable disposition, the want of these formed no impediment in making her eminently useful in that aituation in which it pleased Providence to place her. As a Wife, she was affectionately solicitous to perform all the doties a wife should do. As a Mother, she was ever indulgent to the innocent desires of her children; yet tempered that indul-gence with the strictest eye to their religious conduct and morals. As a Neighbour, she always endeavoured to fulfil the grand precept of the Founder of our relagìon, gion, viz. "to do to others as she would they should do unto her;" and was anxious upon all occasions to tender her best offices, whenever she supposed her assistance might be useful. And, to crown the whole, and finish this imperfect sketch, as a Christian, she entertained and strictly conformed to those precepts inculcated by our most holy religion; and evinced her sincerity therein, even when the hand of Death was upon her.

At Newfield, Staffordsbire, aged 43, John George, eldest son of Smith Child, esq. Admiral of the Blue.

At Leicester, in her 17th year, Miss Sarah Valentine.

Suddenly, Mr. Robert Potter, gent. of Bloxham, Oxfordshire.

March 10. From water in the chest, Mr. Joseph Bryan, of the New Inn, in the parish of Claverley, Salop, a respectable farmer, advanced in the decline of life.

At Wm. Parker's esq. Camberwell, Henrietta, wife of Capt. W. Parker, late of the Bengal Artillery.

At Clifton, Henry, third son of D. O. P. Okedop, esq.

At Walcot Terrace, Bath, Elizabeth, fourth daughter of the late Rev. Herbert Randelph, Prebendary of Salisbury, and Rector of Croxton, Lincolnshire.

In Fryer-street, Reading, in her 85th year, Mrs. Frances Hill, a maiden lady; whose death was occasioned by her clothes taking fire the preceding day.

At Wheatley, Oxford, Mrs. Kennedy, relict of the late Rev. Mr. K. of Abingdon.

At Totness, in his 71st year. William Bentall, esq. banker, of that place. He attended divine service in the morning, apparently in perfect health; but on a sudden fell from his seat, and expired.

At Castle Donington, Leicestershire, Mrs. Mary Buxton, sister of the late John B. esq. of Alleston, Leicestershire, and the last of the family.

March 11. In Arundel-street, Mr. Chas. Schumacher, of St Petersburg.

Aged 57, Mrs. Clio Rickman, of Upper Marylebone-street.

At Burcomb, aged 33, Mrs. Pitts, relict of the late Edmund P. esq. of Burcomb, Wilts, and of Swithin's-lane, London.

Mrs. Molyneux, sister to Sir Francis 31. bart.

In Queen-square, Bath, in her 71st year, Lady Wilmot, relict of the late Sir Robert-Mead W. bart, of Chaddesden, Derbyshire.

Of an apoplexy, aged 62, Mr. Richard Southern, merchant, of Hull.

March 12. At Greenwich, in his 27th year, after a long illness, brought on by being in the West Indies, Capt. Alexander Carr Fdgar, Royal Artillery.

At Alton Barnes, Wilts, Rev. John

Brereton, M. A. Prebendary of Salisbury. Rector of Abbot Stoke, Dorset, and in the commission of the peace for Wilts.

March 13. Mr. Fisher, builder, of St.

Ebbe's, Oxford.

John Watchorn, gent. fermerly of Leicester, but for some years a resident at Belgrave.

John Cooper, gent. of North Kilworth. Leicestershire.

At Uckfield, in his 56th year, the Rev. Stileman Bostock, late Vicar of East Grinstead, Sussex.

At Rumford, in his 88th March 14. year, Otho Hamilton, esq. of Olivestob, North Britain. The 40 best years of his life were professionally devoted to the service of his country, in the 40th and 59th regiments; with the former, he was present, amongst other affairs, at the taking of Louisbourg, under Lord Amberst, and of Quebec, under Gen. Wolfe, enjoying his confidence and friendship to the hour of that great and good officer's death; at the taking of Martinico and St. Lucia, under Gen. Monkton, and of the Havennah. under Lord Albemarie. In 1772 be purchased the Lieutenant-colonelcy of the 59th, commanding that corps throughout the American war; at Boston, under Gen. Gage, and at the battles of Lexington and Bunker's-hill. Never having been once absent from his post till he sold out, about the year 1778, he sustained, during the whole course of his active and henourable duties, the well-merited reputation of a religious, benevolent, and houses man, leaving many to lament his less, and no one to traduce his character.

In her 31st year, as the meridian of life was just attained, Mrs. Louisa Lochee, of Stoke Newington, the eldest daughter of Mr. Thomas King, anctioneer, of King-street, Covent-garden. with whom her husband is in partner-Many may have fallen as young. as gentle, and as virtuous; but few can be lamented who were equally interesting. Whether she was fitted to shine in courts would be an useless enquiry; she moved not in a courtly sphere: but with those valuable characters who fill up the middle order of useful and social life, she demands an affectionate memorial. Ho circle of friends was select, and formed by herself; and the claim of each individual to partake of her society was founded on integral worth. With personal beauty, an elegant form, an enlarged and cultivated mind, she possessed the softest and most fascinating manners; such as in the memory of the domestic, of the acquaintance, of the neighbour, will live long; in that of the friend, for ever. In retirement she appeared such a woman as every man of sense would seek to possess; all truth. J. H.

At Putney, the wife of Charles Gray Graves, esq. eldest daughter of John Hicks, esq. of Plomer Hill, Bucks.

At Homerton, in her 74th year, Mr. Elizabeth Lambe.

At Eastone, Oxfordshire, aged 57. Mr. S. Cartwright, late of Chipping Norton.

Mrs. Yeo, Matron of the Royal Navy Asylum, Greenwich, relict of the late Governor Y. of Haslar Hospital.

At Putney, aged 84, Mrs. Cormick, rebut of the late John C, esq.

At the Hotwells, B. stot, the Rev. Geo. Smith, vicar of Urchfont, and Alderbury, Pitton, and Farley, Wilts, and brother to Sir Edward S. bart, of Newland Park, Yorkshire. Urchfont is in the gift of the Canons of Windsor; Alderbury, &c. in that of the Treasurer of the Cathedral Church of Sarum, Aged 85, Mr. John Carroll, of Oxford-

March 15. In Great Ormand-street, Mrs. Thornton, widow of the late Godfrey T. esq. of Mogerbanger-house, Bedfordsmre.

After three days illness, Anne, wife of Sainnel Lawford, esq of Peckham.

Aged 36, Mr. Hilldstch, printer, Tam-

At Worfield, co. Salop, aged about 40, Mr. William Allerton, a considerable farmer and butcher.

March 19. In London, aged 41, Mr. Matthew Foy, formerly an eminent butcher nt Hull.

Aged 75, Mr. Jonathan Atherstone, of Higham on the Hill, near Hinckley.

Mr. Mitchell, hosier, of Leicester.

At his father's boase, Paddington, of a rapid declare, aged 23, Basil Owen Woodd, esq. eldest son of the Rev. Base Woodd,

In College-square, Bristol, at an advanced age, Mrs. S. Bowles, only surviving sister of the late Edward B. esq. of Sharehampton.

At Castle Kelly, Ireland, the Rev. T. Mahon, late of Annadud, co. Leitrim, younger brother to Lord Haitland.

On board the Saidanha, in Longh Swilly, Ireland, of a typhus fever, Capt. John Stuart, R. N. son of the late Sir Charles S. K. B. and nephew to the Marquis of Rute, and the Lord Primate of Ireland.

March 20. In her 77th year, the wife of Mr. Weston, senior assistant of the city of Oxford,

In Stangate-street, Lambeth, aged 64, Mr. William Forster. He was senior clerk in the Excise Office for nearly 40 years, a performer in the Orchestra of the late Drury-lane Theatre, and secretary to the Royal Society of Musicians.

In the Bigge Market, Newcastle upon Tyne, in her 81st year, Mrs. Anne Waters, relict of the late Mr. Ralph W. painter. She was daughter of the late Mr. Michael Kirkhouse, of Newcastle upon Tyne.

At the Deanery House, Kevin-street, Mrs. Keatinge, wife of the Dean of St. Patrick's.

March 21. At Sandwich, in Kent, in his 77th year, the Rev. John Conant, M. A. 1775; rector of Saint Peter's in that town (1766), and vicar of Teynham (1805), in the same county. He was formerly Fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, and in 1763 was appointed by that college (in whom the nomination is vested by the will of Sir R. Manwood, the founder), master of the Free Grammar School at Sandwich; an appointment which he some years ago resigned on account of ill health. He was the eldest son of the late Rev. John Conant, rector of Hastingleigh, in Kent; and one of his brothers (Nathanael C. esq.) has long been distinguished as a most able and active magistrate of the Police Office in Marlborough-street.

in her 75th year, Mrs. Everton, mother of Mrs. Hasselden, St. James'ssquare.

Mrs. Elizabeth Morgan, relict of the Rev. Morgan M. formerly rector of Abbington, Berks.

In Colebrooke-terrace, Islington, Margaret, wife of Mr. Nathanael Thompson.

At Brighton, in her 27th year, Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the Rev. Henry Chattield, rector of Balcomb, Sussex.

At her brother's in Green Lettuce-lane, of a typhus fever, in her 19th year, Mary Anne, eidest daughter of Mr. John Smith, of Newbottle, co. Durham.

In Dover-street, aged 86, Mrs. Cock, widow of the late William C. csq. Collector of Excise, Stirling.

In Wimpole-street, in her 44th year, Lady Elizabeth, wife of Lieut.-gen. Loftus, daughter of the late Marquis Townshend and Charlotte Compton, Baroness Ferrars, of Chartley.

March 22. In her 79th year, the wife of William Holbrook, esq.

Aged 76, Mrs. Mary Vigurs, of Greek-street, Soho.

At Macclesfield, Charles Ayton, esq. At Ockham, Surrey, Mr. E. Milton.

At Bath, Mrs. Chetwynd, relict of Wm. Henry C. esq. of Grendon Hall, Warwicksbire; and one of the four daughters of Francis Stratford, esq. of Merevale hall, Warwicksbire.

At Thornbury, aged 69, Thomas Blag-don, esq. formerly of Bristol.

At Parsloes, Essex, in her 64th year, Mrs. Fanshawe, relict of John Gascoyne, F. esq.

At Devizes, Dr. Spalding, whose benevolent disposition, and assiduity in the duties of his profession, had gained him general esteem; and whose loss will be sensibly felt and long deplored by the poor of that town and neighbourhood.

The Rev. Joseph Thomas, of Abeligrove, Epsom.

March 23. At Tiverton, the Rev. William Walker, rector of Broughton Gifford, and of Sainswick, Somersetshire, prebendary of Wells, and in the commission of the peace for Devon.

The Rev. Rice Mark, 40 years curate of Eastham, Worcestershire.

In Austin-friars, William Scott, esq.

In Northampton-street, Bath, aged 70, the wife of John Rochfort, esq. of Clegrennan, co. Carlow, Ireland, and sister to Visconntess Ferrard.

At Bath, Harriet Jane, fourth daughter of the Hon. Vere Poulett.

In his 70th year, R. Partridge, esq. of Hilsley, Gloucestershire.

March 24. In his 82d year, John Lewis André, esq.

At Bristol, in his 86th year, John Grif-

At Sunbury, Mrs. Crawshay, widow of the late Richard C. esq. of Cyfarthfa, Glanorganshire.

In his 68th year, John Trayton Fuller, esq. of Ashdown House, Sussex.

Suddenly, the wife of John Osborne, esq. of Litlesden-house, Kent.

At Manssield, Notts, aged 73, Mr. William Wetherall, many years a respectable officer in the Excise.

March 25. At Lambeth, the wife of Charles Smith, esq.

In St. Vincent's-parade, Hotwells, Bristol, Miss Coombe, eldest sister of R.T. C.

esq. Earnshill, Somerset.

At Brighton, in her 78th year, Mrs. Elizabeth Peacock. Her remains were deposited on the 3d inst. in the vallt of George James Hamilton, esq. at Bromley, Kent.

Aged 84, Robert Dowse, lately of Mumby Chapel, near Alford, farmer.

Suddenly, having gone out to his usual occupation, apparently in good health, aged 50, Mr. R. Sutcliffe, of Wakefield, Supervisor in the Excise, formerly of Hull.

At the Custom-house, Aberystwith, aged 36, Mr. John Jones, the collector of those duties.

In Montague-street, Russell-square, Anne, second daughter of Thomas Dickason, esq.

In New-court, Swithin's-lane, the wife of Benjamin Travers, esq.

Aged

Ghent, Flanders.

At Gainsborough, in her 69th year, the wife of Capt. John Cook, of the Mary sloop, Lynn trader.

At Fulham, suddenly, in his 83d year, Mr. Weichsell, father of Mr. W. leader of the Band at the King's Theatre, and of Mrs. Billington.

At Halstead, Lieut.-Gen. Urqubart.

At Wenvoe Cottage, in his 56th year, the Rev. David Davies, rector of Landough, and vicar of Roath, near Cardiff.

Rev. John Pery, rector of Houghton cum Wilton, Hants, and formerly of Christ-church, Oxford.

March 28. In Abingdon-street, in his 63d year, Richard Monkhouse, esq.

In Upper Berkeley-street, Sidky Effendi, charge des affaires of the Sublime Porte. On the morning of April 1, about 9 o'clock, his remains were interred in the burial-ground of St. Pancras. The procession consisted of a hearse, containing the body, covered with white satin, followed by his Excellency's private carriage and two mourning coaches, in which were the priest and the late Ambassador's attendants. Upon arriving at the ground, the body was taken out of the shell which contained it, wrapped in rich robes, and dropped into the grave; and immediately after, a

GENT. MAG. April, 1811.

In St. Bartholomew's Hospital, in consequence of the wound he received by, failing from a scaffold, a few days before, in Aldermanbury, Mr. Butler, masterbricklayer.

At Upper-green, Kennington, in his 13th year, John, second son of George Davis, esq.

Aged 25, Mary, only daughter of Mr. Maynard, surgeon, Staithes, Yorkshire.

March 31. At Twickenham, Mr. Thomas Champion, of Mincing-lane.

At Bromley, Middlesex, in her 6th year, Elizabeth Anne, youngest daughter of Jukes Coulson, esq.

At Hackney, in his 78th year, Wm. Jouser, esq.

At the house of Mrs. Blackstone, at Worting, near Winchester, Harriet, youngest daughter of the late Rev. Henry Blackstone, of Adderbury, Oxfordshire.

Lately. Aged 87, Rev. John Clarke, master of the Free Grammar School, Guilsberough, vicar of Durton, Northamptonshire, and of Weston Underwood, Bucks.

Rev. Edw. Evans, vicar of Bettws, and rector of Llanddulas, Denbighshire.

Rev. Francis Annesley, late of Christ. Church, Oxford; M. A. 1758.

Rev. Rees James, rector of Whitton, near Presteigh.

#¢

13

At Aberdeen, Rev. Dr. Patoun.

Rev. J. Llewellin, rector of Llansanor, near Cowbridge, and Chaplam of the Implacable.

Rev. John La Clocke, rector of the parish of Trinity, Jersey,

Aged 68, William Ward, esq. of Grovebouse, Tooting.

At an advanced age, in the workhouse, Hull, Jonathan Watson, formerly an eminent school-master.

At Doncaster, at an advanced age, Mrs. Robinson, a maiden lady; sixter to the late Rev. Arthur R. vicar of the Holy Trinity Church, Hull.

At Exmouth, Devon, R. Shawe, esq. late of the 74th foot, and a Brigadier General in the Western district.

Mrs. Bamfylde, of Belvidere, Bath.

At Fivehead-house, near Taunton, —— Crane, M. D. and F. R. S. an old correspondent in our Magazine, of whom we hope for further particulars.

At Wrington, the wife of E, Green, esq. and daughter of the rev. Mr. Bryett, vicar of Salcomb, Devou.

At West Cowes, Isle of Wight, at an advanced age, Samuel Slingsby, esq. formerly for many years principal dancer at the Opera House; in which situation, and by teaching in the first families, he acquired an ample fortune, and lived in London in a style of elegant hospitality; but, engaging in building-speculations, he became the dupe of men less honourable than himself, and in consequence was for a time under great embarrassment, till relieved by an appeal to the Laws; after which he retired to the Isle of Wight.

At Bristol, aged $2, Mrs. Webb, mether of Capt. G. Sale, of the Teresa.

Wm. Turner, esq. of Lichfield.

Mrs. Rudd, relict of Bartholomew R. esq. of Marsk, Yorkshire.

Aged 93, Grace, relict of Tho. Wright, esq. of Cliff-St.-Mary, Devon.

In Swansea, Mrs. Barber, relict of M.

Richard Day, esq. of Middleton, near Yoxford, Suffolk.

At Llandfadwanen, near Laugharne, Carmarthenshire, aged 104, Methusalem Williams, butcher.

Mrs. Cooper, widow of Tho, C. esq. of Overleigh-hall, near Chester.

Mr. John Cherrington, ironmonger, of Circucester.

Aged 67, Baron John Henry Neuman, formerly an officer in the American service, author of the Marine Dictionary, in six languages, a Spanish Dictionary, &c. and lately an eminent translator of the foreign languages.

· Aged 111, Mrs. Apne Jarrard, of Lynn; who retained her faculties perfectly until within a few weeks of her death.

At Holbeach, Lincolnshire, Mrn. Herrison, relict of the late R. H. esq. and daughter of the Rev. R. Stevens, of Tyd: St. Giles.

At Wisbech, Cambridgeshire, agad 43, Mrs. Gyon, relict of Robert G. esq.

Mr. Cooke, of Weisyke, near Baraby
Dun. In returning from procuring a mare riage-licence, he fell into the river Dun, and was drowned, with the mare which her rode.

At Ludlow, in his 74th year, Mr. W. Russel, formerly surgeon and apothecary.

In his 70th year, Tho. Partridge, toq., of Hillsley, Gioucestershire.

Aged 85, Mrs. Lewis, reliet of the late: Rev. T. I. of Exeter.

At Exeter, Mr. C. T. Johnson, surgeons in consequence of an accidental puncture by scissars, while employed in dissection.

Aged 20, Mr. J. Williamson, eldest some of Mr. Alderman W. of Coventry.

years captain of one of H. M. Packets.

Aged 81, Mrs. E. Dunsford, of Except, and aged 82, Mr. Daniel Haraid, coachemaker.

Aged upwards of 70, Miss Patty Feraman, of Eggleston-place, near Storringston. She possessed great property; and, having no relation living, bequeathed the greatest part of it, upwards of 60,000% to her bailiff; in addition to which, else gave a legacy of 1,000% to one of his daughters.

Aged 102, Mary Discombe, of Factor; who had 18 children, 37 grand-children, and 32 great grand-children.

At Milverton, Sarah, wife of The. Young, one of the people called Quakers; and at the same place, Miss Comer, who for many years kept a respectable bounding-school.

At the vicarage, Stanwell, Miss Patoy, second daughter of the late Sir James Prof Reading.

John Sone, esq. of Chambers-court near Tewkesbury, an emment land-cut-veyor.

At Adsett, near Westbury-upon-Severny aged 89, John Boughton, esq.

The wife of Mr. Septimes Setton, surgeon, of Uley.

At Broughton, Oxfordshire, in his 86th year, W. Haywood, gent. formerly a respectable surgeon and anotherary at Banbury.

At Banbury, Oxfordshire, the wife of Mr. P. Usber, Dissenting minister.

At the Poor-house, Coxheath, aguil 106, a weman named Jeffery.

At her grandmether's, Park-Street; Bristol, aged 13, Allison Harvey, eldest danghter of Joseph Hosken, esq. Troitrey: Lodge, Monaneuthebins, Mrs. E. P. Havdand, of Winstone, Gloucestershire.

The wife of M. L. Yeates, esq. banker, Exmouth.

Jane, wife of Mr. H. Matthews, of Usk, Monmouthshire.

At Enston, Oxon, in her 22d year, Anne, wife of John Phillips, esq.

Wm. Browne, esq. of Sondford, Devou.
At Butb, O. O. Eilhott, esq. of Binfield, Oxfordslure.

At the bour in which she completed her 46th year, Susan wife of the Rev. J. P. Oldisworth, of St. Mary's, Swansea, formerly of Wadham college, Oxford, and daughter of the Rev. Edward Sparkes, vicar of Fairford, Gloucestershire.

Catharine, sister of Rev. Mr. Cox, Baginton, Warwickshire.

April 1. At Ockford Fitzpame, co. Dorset, in the 63d year of his age, the Rev. Thomas Butler, LL. B. upwards of 30 years Rector of that parish—also Rector of North Barrow, Somerset, and Vicar of Hannington in Wiltshire—His life was devoted to the practice of virtue and the duties of his holy calling; yet his active mind found leisure for the pursuits of Science and the useful mechanical Arts. He was afflicted with a dropsy combined with a liver complaint, the progress of which pointed out the approach of death,

The wife of the Rev Peniston La Tour, rector of Boo hby Graffoo, near Lincoln.

At her sister's in Penchurch street, suddenly, Miss Adamson.

April 3. Aged 78, Mr. John Tubb, of Dean Court, near Oxford.

At Holbeach, the wife of Jos. Barker,

April 4. In Conduit-street, Hanover-square, in her 82d year, the Hon. Mrs. Cholmondeley, widow of the late Hon. and Rev. Robert Cholmondeley.

In his 67th year, the Rev. John Kirby, of Mayfield, Sussex.

Charles Smith, esq. of Rochdale, a genatheman well known on the turf.

The wife of the Rev. William Wood, rector of Peckleton, Leicestershire.

In the prime of life, Mr Andrew Winpenny Wait, whose professional talents have been for many years distinguished in the concerts of Bath and Bristol, as a performer on the trumpet.

At Kennington common, in her 66th year, Mr. Linging, relict of the late Samuel Linging, esq.

April 5. At Birmingham, in his 71st year, Mr. Thos. Hamper. He was a native of Hurst-per-point, co. Sussex, but had fixed his abode in Birmingham at an early period of life, and resided there upowards of 50 years. Mr. Hamper was a tradesman tradesman and a Christian of what has been emphatically called the Good Old School: punctual (to a proverb) in all his engagements; affectionate in disposition; mild and cheerful in manners; of great temperance; anxious for the welfare of all mankind; and particularly so for the education of the poorer classes, which led him to exercise unremitting attention to the Sunday Schools in his neighbourhood. He was loyal to his King, and walked humbly with his God. Though a faithful member of the Established Church, and a constant attendant on all its ordinances, his truly benevolent and catholic spirit made him respect good men of every religious denomination. Partial to Antient History, and devoting his leisure hours to reading, he became intimately acquainted (through the medium of the best translations) with the occurrences of elder days; and possessed a more distinct apprehension of the causes and consequences of the transactions of Greece and Rome, than often falls to the share even of professed literary characters. He attended divine worship at St. Martin's church twice on the preceding Sanday, March 31; but was seized with apoplexy on the following morning, and after a severe illness of four days, during which he displayed the calm resignation of a sincere, though unpresuming, believer in Jesus Christ, tranquilly rendered up his soul " to God who gave it," esteemed and deplored by all who knew him; especially by her to whom he had been happily united 44 years, by a daughter-in-law whom he loved as tenderly as his own child, and by his only son * William, who, in communicating these brief notices, for a few minutes soothes his sorrow, and pays an imperfect tribute to the worth of a beloved and indulgent Father.—A family vault being prepared at King's Norton, co. Worcester +, his remains were therein deposited on Good Friday, April 12th.

At Hailey Farm, in Westmeston, co. Sussex, Mr. Henry Farley, who married Lydia, sister of the above-named Mr. Thomas Hamper. He was one of the respectable farmers of the Weald, and sustained through life the character of a truly worthy man.

At Gloucester, suddenly, aged 75, Robert Raikes, esq. formerly an eminent printer of that city, who, in the year 1793, first instituted Sunday Schools, and by his philanthropic exertions, contributed to the adoption of them in different parts of the kingdom.

At his seat, Byron House, near Macclessield, in his 78th year, Michael Daintry, esq. and on the 9th his remains were interred at Leek, co. Stafford, of which parish his father, the Rev. Michael Daintry, was many years vicur. Designed for the Christian Ministry in the Church of England (from which he was eventually diverted by a dread of not being able to fulfil the awful responsibility which he conceived to be attached to it), the classical education which he had received preparatory to it gave him that strong bins for Letters and Literature, which he retained through life, and for which he was so eminently distinguished. Having, ou this ground, relinquished all ideas of the sacred office, he embarked, first in the Button and Twist trade, at Leck, the place of his nativity, with a patrimony so comparatively slender that it might be literally said, he was, under Providence, the architect of his own fortune. Here he pursued business with considerable success, and afforded another proof of the great effects which sometimes arise from little causes. But about thirty years ago he entered into partnership with the late John Ryle, esq. of Macclessicid, in the Silk trade, under the well-known firm of Daintry and Ryle: this connexion was maintained in uninterrupted peace. and harmony to the period of Mr. Ryle's death, which happened in 1808, and eventually proved the formation and cotablishment of one of the first Houses in Europe, in a line, which, by its extensive manufactories, has since given bread to thousands. In this concern, he realized a very ample fortune: and, if inflexible integrity, united with unremitting industry and the utmost suavity of manners, are worthy of success, none but the envious and malignant will repine at his prosperity. His mind being early imbued with such a sense of Divine Things as forbade him to live without God in the world; and withall too strong and inquisitive to rest upon any system, however generally believed, without satisfactory evidence of its reality, he entered into a minute investigation of the generally received doctrines of Christianity; at the same time humbly and earnestly imploring the aid and direction of the Father of Light, while engaged in this most important of al enquiries, which ended (as such a course will always end) in a settled conviction of their superlative and invaluable worth. Many years ago be read with candour and discrimination the various controversies which have so long agitated the Christian World, and the conclusion which resulted from this examination was, that though all who make Christ the foundation of their hope, have truth on their side, and that great respect is due to those of everydenomination, who are serious and earnest enquirers after it; yet in point of Christian order, he preferred the moderate Episcopacy of the Church of England

* Our frequent Correspondent.

⁴ See our vol. LXXVII. p. 201,

nor were objects of this description ever sent from his door without pity and relief. As in Religion, so in Politicks, he was a disciple of the Old School. The zealous friend of his King and Country, and a warm admirer of the British Constitution, he observed with deep concern the mroads that were making on the Altar and the Throne, by a new and false Philosophy. His zeal in counteracting these on many occasions was prompt and energetic. He considered the constituted authorities of the land as the best bulwarks, under Divine Providence, of its liberties: And in serving the office of Magistrate, as Mayor and Alderman of the Borough of Macclesfield, uniformly evinced, how much he had the well-being of society, and the good order of that large and populous town at beart. But neither his public avocations, nor his great and extensive private commercial concerns, prevented him from devoting a portion of his time to the duties of the closet. He had his stated periods for prayer, meditation, and reading of the Holy Scriptures God was his portion! and he delighted to acknowledge him in all his ways. In his last thiness, the system on which he firmly relied, and which he derived from the giorious Gospel of the blessed God, only yielded him ing years. In him were united the utmost generosity of disposition and liberality of sentiment, with accomplishments particularly characteristic of the gentleman and the scholar. He was author of a very useful compilation, intituled "An Abridgment of Penal Statutes," &c. which, for utility and remarkable perspicuity of arrangement, has been generally admired.

It was first published in an 8vo volume, 1775, and reached the fourth edition in 4to, with large additions and annotations, in 1798.

April 8. At Shaston, Dorset, in his 67th year, equally respected and regretted, Lawson Huddleston, esq. the intunate friend of Mr. Butler—on hearing of whose decease (see p. 40%) he was much affected, and soon became seriously indisposed; and, notwithstanding his age, there is no doubt but that his death was accelerated by that of his old friend.

April 13. In the 44th year of her age, after an illness of a few days, Mrs. Hawkes, wife of Mr. Tho. Lakin Hawkes, of Mosely, near B rmingham. In benevolence she had few equals, and could have no superiors. She had that elasticity of affection, that healthful relish of life, which were the result of uncontaminated goodness, and a child-like simplicity of heart; so that she communicated to all around her, a feeling of interest in the sphere of action in which she moved; a feeling of interest, that now, alas! will only be remembered to be agreated; whose monum mal record will be a void in the hearts of all who knew her. The most paintal experience of numan life results from the sternity of excitement which we vanny and varioulty deplore, in all its Vaid and various scenes; and there can scarrely be a more genial and reconciling spectacle to those who have any relish for what is lovely in the works of Providence, than that of a human being, active and hapay, not from self-love and worldly schames prosperously advanced, but from benevolence, and from the power of making the interests of others her own. Such was the refreshing spectacle which the order of this imperfect tribute afforded, a i, ectacle whose close will not be felt mercy as an impressive event in the annals of death, but additionally as a solemn arrest to the sensibilities of a numerous anquaintance. Her private character no one could contemplate without esteem and admiration. She was at once offectionate, and wisely active in an eminent degree in all her domestic relations; to the friendless she was always a friend; and to none might be more emphatically applied the following beautiful scriptural quotation: "When the ear heard me then it blessed me; and when the cye saw me it gave witness to me, because I delivered the poor that cried, and the fatherless, and him that had none to belp The blessing of him that was ready to perish came upon me; and I caused the widow's heart to sing for joy." Nor was it alone in pecuniary donations, or in occasional and easily dispatched acts of beneficence, that her charity distinguished itself; she allied herself to those who wanted a friend; she made the fate of the unfortunate her own; and was not so much the benefactress, as the sister of those who suffered. In society she was cheerful, communicative, and friendly; always giving pleasure to the hearts of those with whom she associated, if their hearts were rightly disposed. Her reading was extensive, but of this she made no display. Her acquirements were obtained in hours schulously selected from those devoted to various and arduous du-A numerous family, a numerous family-connexion, numerous friends, numerous acquaintance, an active benevolence, each made engrossing claims on her time: and to these might be added. a disposition naturally sociable and warns. Her acquirements, gained amid these vac rious apologies, for their omission, were gained for the internal satisfaction of her own mind, and not for the ustentation of display. To her husband, the encourager of and the partner in her virtues, and to her children, the imitators of those virtues, no one can now be an effectual come. forter, except that Being who hath promised a blessing to those who rightly " mourn." It scarcely need be added to the above sketch, that the object of it possessed an elevated and liberal piety. For what human virtues were ever exerted to a wips purpose, that had not the love of God, as well as the love of human kind, for their foundation?

April 17. 'At Buckingham, in his 43d year, Rev. Henry John Rider, B. A. His remains were attended to the grave by a large number of most respectable friends and acquaintance, each testifying their esteem and regard for the deceased by more than common veneration. He pessessed very rare abilities, united to the greatest modesty and diffidence. As a preacher, he was superior to most of hit profession. His delivery was the most impressive imaginable, and failed not to comvey to the hearts of his hearers the important truths he was endeavouring to infix on their minds. A most rapid decline deprived society at large, and his friends individually, of one of its most useful and valuable members.

AVERAGE PRICES of Navigable Canal Property, Dock Stock. Firs-Office Shares, &c. in April 1811 (to the 25th), at the Office of Mr. Scorr, 28, New Bridge-street, London:—Trent and Mersey, or Grand Trunk Canal, 1170% the last Half Year'y Lividend at the rate of 451. per Share clear, per Annum.—Birmingham. 10851. ex Dividend 211. clear, Half Year—Coventry, 8551. dividing at the rate of 394. per Share.—Grand Junction, 2611. 2451.—Shrewsbury, 1451. dividing 81.—Kennett and Avon, 43l. 42l. 10s.—Wilts and Berks, 35l. 10s. 29l. 10s.—Rochdale, 54l. 52l. 10s. - Ellesinere, 50l. 82l. 84l.—Grand Union, 8l. Discount.—Lancaster, 25l. ex Dividend 1/. per Share clear—Ashby-de-la-Zouch, 24/.—Grand Surrey, 94/.—New ditto, 1/. 10s. Premium.-Thames and Severn New Shares, 32l. to 37l.-Croydon, 30l.-West India Dock Stock, 1651.—London Dock 1261.—Ditto Scrip, 241. per Cent. Premium. -Commercial Dock Old Shares, 159l. with New Share attached.—Albion Assurance, 571.—Globe, 1191. 10s. 1201.—Rock, 18s. Premium—East London Water-Works, 1894. -Grand Junction Water Works, 81. 10s. to 7t. 17s. 6d. Premium.-London Institution, 681. 5..—Strand Bridge, 121. Discount.—London Flour Company, 61.—Dovet Street Road, 10s, to 1l, Premium,—Commercial Road, 135l. per Cent. ex Half-Yearly Dividend of 31.

```
PRICES OF FLOUR, April 22:
Fine per Sack 80s. to 00s. Seconds 70s to 75s. Bran per Q. 14s. to 16s. Pollard 26s. to 30s.
   RETURN of WHEAT, in Mark-Lane, including only from April 8 to April 13:
      Total 3,510 Quarters. Average 86v. 74d.—104d. lower than last Return.
          OATMEAL, per Bol' of 140lbs. Avoirdupois, April 20, 461. 8d.
          AVERAGE PRICE of SUGAR, April 24, 42s, 10d. per Cwt.
         PRICE OF HOPS, IN THE BOROUGH MARKET, April 22:
Os. Farnham Ditto .. ..... 10/. Os. to 14/. Os.
             AVERAGE PRICE OF HAY AND STRAW, April 26:
St. James's, Hay 7/ 15s Od. Straw 3l. 18s. -- Whitechapel, Hay 7l. 6s. Clover 8l. 3.. 6d. Straw 3l. 5s. -- Smithfield, Clover 8l. 10s. Old Hay 8l, 10s. Straw 3l. 5s.
          SMITHFIELD, April 26.
                                To sink the Offal-per Stone of 8lbs.
0d.
                                             Lamb 7s. Od. to Be. 4d.
Mutton.....5s.
                      0d, to 5s.
                                Bd.
                                         Head of Cattle at Market this Day:
Veal..... 6s. Od. to 7s.
                                4d.
                                        Beasts about 543.
                                                              Calves 140.
                                8d.
Pork ...... 5s. 6d to 6s.
                                      Sheep and Lambs 6,300.
  COALS, April 26: Newcastle 55s. 0d. to 57s, 3d. Sunderland 49s. 0d. to 47s. 6d.
SOAP, Yellow 80s. Mottled 90s. Curd 94s. CANDLES, 18s. 0d. per Doz. Moulds 13s. 0d.
```

TALLOW, per Stone, 81b. St. Januer's 3s. 9d. Clare Market 0s. 0d. Whitechapet 3s. 9d.

EACH DAYS PRICE OF STOCKS IN APRIL, 1811.

-	10 10 10	3 2 2 4	225	≠ - 7	0 1 4 C	12	ء ۾	 	~1 0\	Ç	* (S K	ب ( 	Days
Printed by	0+0 2()1 2()+2	0t2 10t2	Attorns 40+63 40+63	239 9301	shut Sunday Holiday Holiday	239 Good Fr.	238 2 39	shut	238 Sunday	#hut	hut	shut	shut	sbut Sunday	Bank Stock.
Nichols and Son, Red	6, 6, 7, 6 0, 2, 2, 2, 2, 2, 2, 2, 2, 2, 2, 2, 2, 2,	, 6 9 3 3 8 6 9 8 9 8 9	63	632	632	63 *	t t	5 53	637	651	abut O	shut	651	shut	SperCt B. Red.
	# 4.		# + # Q + + #	9	රා 4. සංග	Ø6 8∔- ÷a+:	e' Ay. 2.	24.9	£49	4.0	642	4+9	440	$19	Sper Ct. Consels.
	8 -7 -7 - 2 'C - C '	7 23 28	17 -17 C	200	80.3	80:	(0.00 (0.00)	8.75	803	shut	shut	shut	shut	shut	b perCt
a Passa	96 496 496	96.7	(C) (C)	0 '9 	972	#	'& 'C -1 -1	0.5	47.6	, Tr	975	9 9	97 1	974	CibperCt
Lion Passage, Fleet Street, London ERANSCOMB and CO. Stock-Brokers, 11, Holborn,	, C	023		shut	shut	shut	shut	shut	shut	shut	shut	shut	shut	•hut	5perCt 1797.
	21 -1 -1 -1 -1 -1 -1 -1 -1 -1 -1 -1 -1 -1	17	 		171	17.5		17.3	171	shut	shut tut	shut	17	shut	Long Ann.
	180	182	180	1794		1784		shut	shut	shut	Shut	shut	shut	shut	India Stock.
	25 a 26pr. 25 a 24pr. 26 a 27pr.	29 a 29pr 24 a 25pr	³ 0 a 29pr. 30 a 28pr.	29 a 31pr.	29 a 50pr.	29 a 28 pr.	27 a 28pr. 29 a 30pr.	ು9a 28pr.	29 a30pr.	26 a 27pr.	24 a 27 pr.	17 a 21 pr.	19a 16pr.	23a 20pr.	India. Bonds.
	% in to €	6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6 6	3 a 10 pr. 7 a10 pr.	6 a 9	6a8 pr.	5 a 8	4a7	10 a 5 pr	6a 10	5 a 8	3 a 7 pr.	par 5	2 d }	5 pr.	Exchequ Bills.
	9941	11		70+			11	169			9				Exchequ. South Sea Bills. Stock.
	3.1	634	69‡		shut	63‡	shut	shut	shut	shut	shut	shut	240	shut	Ann. Did rokers, i	d serv					£49	644			0.4 	440	64			New
1, Holbor			Z uis.	61 45			61 dis.					Si di	7 dis.		pium.
n, 37, Cormbil, and 38, Ilaymanket.		46					933	931	934	shut	shut	shut	shut .	sbut	Irish SperCt.
	shut shut shut	shut	shut	shut	shut	shut	sbut	shut	ebut	thut	shut	629		634	Irish Imp.
	Ditto. Ditto. Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	92 10 0	Eag. Lott. Tickets. ymaiket.	Ditto.	Ditto	Ditto.	Dino	Ditto.	Ditta.	Ditto.	Ditte.	Ditto	Diue.	Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	FullMoney.	Prise.

MAGAZINE GENTLEMAN'S

GENERAL EVENING M.Post M. Herald Morning Chronic. Times-M. Advert. P.Ledger@Oracle Brit. Press-Day St. James's Chron. Sun-Even. Mail Star—Traveller Pilot-Statesman Packet Lond, Chr. Albion--C. Chron. Courier-Globe Eng. Chron -- Inq. Cour d'Angleterre Cour. de Londres 150therWeeklyP. 17 Sunday Papers Hue & Cry Police Lit. Adv. monthly Bath 3—Bedford Berwick-Boston Birmingham 4 Blackb. Brighton Bristol 5, Bury Camb.—Chath. Carli, 2 -- Chester 2 Cheims, Cambria.

M A Y, 1811. CONTAINING

Comberland 2 Doncaster--Derb. Dorchest .-- Essex Exeter 2, Glouc, 2 Halifax—Hanta 2 Hereford, Hull 3 Ipswich 1, Ken: 4 Lancast. - Leices, 2 Leeds2, Liverp. 6 Maidst. Manch. 4 Newc.3.—Notts.2 Northampton 2 Norfork, Norwich N WalesOxford2 : Portsea—Puttery , Preston—Plym 2* Reading —Salisb. Salop-Surffield2 Sherborne, Sussex Shrewsbury Staff,-Stamf. 2 Taun on—Tyne Wakefi.—Warw. Wore. 2-York 3 IRECAND 37 SCOTLAND 24 Sunday Advertise. Jersey 2. Guern. 2.

Meteorol, Diaries for April and May 1811 . 410; Mr. Nesbitt on Our Lord's Second Coming 441 Remarks on the Want of Room in Churches 413 Value of the Literary Labours of Strype abid. Dr. Lort ?-Rev. John Jones ?-Dr. Carr ? . 414 New Testament in Latin Hexameters sbid. Little Saling Church—Oxford Statutes . . . 417 Great Utility of the Study of Hebrew . . . ibid. Mode of Writing the Blind may practise . . 418 OldCorrespondent to J. Carter—Scotch Dress 419 Analysis of Rooks—Crashswe's Poems . . . 420 Mode of celebrating Christmas in Yorkshire 423 Westm. Abbay -- Epitaphs from Sutton, Letc. 424 Dean Nowell's Monument in Old St. Paul's 425 Jamieson's Etymological Dict.—Chatterton426 The Beltane illustrated by Mr. Jamieson . 427 Sherwen on Authenticity of Rowley's Poems 426 Accident by Fire-Tedstone Delamere . . . 429 Architect. Proceedings at Hen.VII's Chapel 430 Arguments on Hedgehogs sucking Cows. . 432 Poem by T. Wenman to his Friend Browne 433 Blustrations of Horace, Book II, Sature III. . 16. Dr. Lettsom's Seventieth Letter on Prisons 438 Average Prices of Markets Mr. Neild's Remarks on Surrey Gool 439 Daily Variations in the Prices of Stocks . . 504

Proposal for a Monument for John Sykes . 411 Ascattectural Innovation, No CLIV. . 443 Effects of cold Iron on the Tongue in Lapland 412 | Analysis of "The European Mercury, 1641" 446 LITERARY INTELLIGENCE 447

REVIEW OF NEW PUBLICATIONS; Diz. Memoirs of Sir Eart-ley Wilmot, by his Son 449 Dodson's Life of Sir Michael Foster 451 Sir Richard Phillips's Treatise on Juries . . 454 Mr. Jessé Foot's Life of Arthur Murphy . . 456 Ristory of Brazil, by Robert Southey . . . 458 The Counsels of Attar, by Mr. Hindley . . 460 Malcolm's Anecdotes of Manners of London ib. Longmate's Pocket Peerage, new Edit. 1811 464 Complete Guide to the British Capital . . . 465 SELECT POETRY for May 1811 468-472 INDEX INDICATORIUS-Questions answered ibid. Proceedings in present Session of Parliament 473 Interesting Intell, from the London Gazettes 477 Abstract of the principal Foreign Occurrences 481 Country News-Domestic Occurrences . . . 486 Gazette Promotions, Ecclesiast, Preferments489 Births and Marriages of eminent Persons , 490 Additions and Corrections in former Obituaries 491 Obituary, with Anecd. of remarkable Persons492

Robellished with a Perspective View of LITTLE SALING CHURCH IN ESSEX; and with the Monument to the Memory of DEAN NowELL, in Old St. Paul's Cathedral.

SYLVANUS URBAN,

Printed by J. NICHOLS and SON, at Ciceno's HEAD, Red Lion Passage, Fleet-street, London where all Letters to the Editor are desired to be addressed, Post-PAID. 1811.

METROROLOGICAL DIART for April, 1811. By Dr. Polis, Bristol.

co.reception Department	M. 8 h. G. heat	Inches. 20ths	WEATRES.
1	38 54	29-19	morning hazy, afternoon clear
- 8	46 56	29-14	mostly cloudy, afternoon light rain
3	47 60	29-16	cloudy at times
- 4	48 57	29-17	mostly cloudy
- 3	49 55	29-18	morning cloudy, afternoon clear
- 6	39 58	$0-1 6	mostly clear
7	34 40	5ū- 9	morning light rain, with sleet, afternoon rather aloudy
8	31 39	29- 9	clear
9	30 44	29-10	clear
10		29-13	mostly cloudy, frequent rain. Ther. at 22 at 6 this morn.
41		99-19	rain in the night, day cloudy at times
12	51 46	20-12	mostly cloudy, some light rain, high wind
13		29-17	morning light rain, cloudy at times
14		29-19	cloudy, showery
15		29-19	cloudy, some light rain
16	39 56	29-16	cloudy, rainy
17		29-11	scattered clouds, evening windy
19		29. 0	morning rainy and windy, afternoon clear
19		29- 0	mostly cloudy and showery, high wind
20		29- 4	morning seme rain, mostly cloudy, high wind
21	55 58	29- 6	cloudy, showery, high wind, evening lightning & thunder
2:	57 63	99- 9	cloudy, showery, evening uncommon lightning & thunder
3-	58 71	29- 7	morning cloudy, ramy, some thunder, afternoon clear
4	56 69 57 60	29-18	scattered clouds, evening much lightning, some thunder
2	55 62	29-12	cloudy, showery
8,	59 63		cloudy in general
9	52 58	29. 8	cloudy, evening rain
94	47 55	29. 2	cloudy, frequent showers mostly cloudy, very showery
2: 3:	54 56	29.12	cloudy, showery
	7 ~ ~		, and and a series of the seri

The average degrees of Temperature, calculated from observations made at eight o'clock in the morning, are 46 90-160ths; those of the corresponding month in the year 1810, were 45 50-160ths; in 1809, 59 77-100ths; in 1808, 43 10-160ths; in 1807, 42 33-160ths; in 1806, 43 80-100ths; in 1805, 42 87-160ths; and in 1804, 37 99-100ths. The average temperature of this month exceeds that of any other of the corresponding months in the last seven years, by one degree and 40-100ths, and exceeds the average of the same for the last seven years, by 4 degrees 71-100ths.

The quantity of Rain fallen this month is equal to 2 inches 13 100ths; that of the corresponding month in the year 1810, was 1 inch 42 100ths; in 1809, 3 inches 75 100ths, in 1808, 5 inches 57 100ths; in 1807, 49 100ths; in 1806, 1 inch 29 100ths; in 1805, 2 inches 78 100ths; and in 1804, 2 inches 27 100ths.

Sixteonological Table for May, 1511. By W. Cary, Strand. eight of Fahrenheit's Thermometer.

H

Inscription:
"To the Memory of
JOHN SYKES,

Seaman, of His Majesty's Ship Theseus, who was Cockswain of Admiral Nelson's Barge when he was attacked by a Spanish boot on the night of July the fourth, 1797, off the Mouth of Cadiz Harbour.

This brave man twice saved the life of his beloved Commander, by parrying the blows that were simed at him, and at last actually interposed his own head to receive the full force of a Spanish cabre, thus sacrificing his own life to preserve the Gallant Nelson.

To commemorate the devoted attachment of a British Seuman to a brave and gene-

This Monument is erected.

Roglish Barge:
Admirat Nelson,
Captara Freemantie,
cleven seamen:
am killed,

Spanish Barge taken; Don Meguel fremoyen, three Officers, twenty-six seamen; sighteen killed, all the rest wounded."

^{*} Our worthy Correspondent is so moderate in his ideas of the expense requisite for this laudable testimonial to merit, which he proposes, that there can be little doubt of its being immediately supplied. Epix.

Oxford, May 20. Mr. URBAN, few remarks upon a phænomenon noticed in your pages 124 and 234. It is stated that the Laplanders will offer a stranger a piece of cold iron in severe weather, which, on being applied to tongue, produces a sensation of burning. May not this be effected by the rapidity with which the vital heat rushes to one point in order to restore an equal temperature; the quantity of which caloric may be so abundant, as for a moment to cause sensations of the nature alluded to. The blackened appearance assumed by leaves when affected by frost (evidently resembling the action of fire) may be accounted for on the same principle, viz. the sudden transmission of heat from different parts of a plant to its leaves, which we know are of a most delicate F. L. structure.

A S you value the interests of Society, of which I cannot but think you are a principal guardian, I am persuaded you must be the advocate of the Established Religion of the country, and would promote its extension by every means in your power, to the extremities of this sea-girt Isle; and upon this laudable principle I have ventured to trouble you with the following observations:

In the course of the two last years, the consideration of the want of places for public worship for this populous metropolis was very prevalent, the inhabitants of which, in many parts of it, have been doubled within a few years; and; with the exception of some Chapels built at the fashionable and of the town, and let out as a profitable concern, there is not any addition to the Parish Churches, but which we had sangu nely expected through the exer ion and persussions in Parliament . of our Archbishops, Bishops, Nobles, and others, who have felt for the cause of Religion, admitted the necessity of these measures, and whose names have been repeatedly mentioned with the respect and veneration they were entitled to, from the patronage they were di-posed to give to such is portant undertakings, as well as for their general efforts in the promotion of learn n, virtue, and religion; but, alast bir, although other matters come in course, and supplies are voted for Army, Navy, and Ordnance, the contracts for loans, and the considerations of currency, embarked in with eagerness, not a word has escaped on this great subject, the ultimate end for which we profess we have been arming, and expressly stated to be for the defence of our Religion and Laws, in that solemn appeal to the Deity we have been making for his support and blessing in the perilous war in which we are engaged.

Whence is this apathy in so essential a concern? or have we discovered that our Constitution can be upheld without the aid of Religion? that our success is not owing to the blessing of Providence, or that our professions are without the zeal requisite for their adoption, and when millions are voted for the purposes of War, funds towards so salutary a measure are not even thought of?

Admitting that new buildings cannot be undertaken without a heavy tax on the Landholders, many Churches that are competent to be enlarged, and require to be so, for the increased inhabitants of the Parishes, should, under the immediate authority of the Diocesan, be forthwith rendered sufficiently commodious.

Sorry I am, however, to notice that this is not the case with the metropolis only; there is hardly a village in the neighbourhood, say within ten miles of London, where the houses and inhabitants have not so multiplicd as to require the enlarging of the old Church, or building a new one upon a larger scale; and the most disgraceful squabbles prevail about pews and seats amongst the wealthier class. whilst the interior characters and labouring poor have no accommodation beyond that of standing in the ailes, which will berely contain them, and therefore the decline to come : chancel pews are made a property of by the lay in propriator; and those who are accommodated with pews attached to their houses by a faculty or by an allotment of the vestry, feel not the inconvenience suffered by others, or the privations of the poor, where there should be as little distinction as is consistent with Christian society. In many places they cannot have the Gospel preach. ed unto them for want of room. As in Annals of the Reformation, &c. of the Church of England.

Ecclesiastical Memorials during the reigns of Henry VIII. Edward VI.

Mosers. Cadell and Davies some time ago announced a History of London, founded on Strype's Edit. of "Stow's Survey," being in the press. This will supply a great desideratum in Topography.

May 6. Mr. Urban, SHALL be obliged to any of your pamerous Readers to inform the who was the Author of a Translation of the whole New Testament into Latin Hexameters. I never met in my reading with any mention of or quotation from it and though I bave seen the book itself in a distant Parish Library, I can only now speak from memory. I recollect that it appeared to be written by a chaplain of Queen Elizabeth, who was afterwards made a Listop by James I. Ou consulcing Godwyn De Prasulibus Augl. I found that John Bridges, Dean of Salisbury, and fellow of Pembroke-Hall, Cambridge, was consecrated Bishop of Oxford in 1603, after the see had been vacant eleven years. He died at 90, May 6, 1618; but no mention is made in Godwyn of his being the author of the above work: nor in Wood's Athenæ Oxon. who refers for a farther account of him to " Bist, & Antiq. Oxon." lib. ii. p. 291. 1 of which last book I have not been able to get a sight. If any of your Renders will give an account of this curious translation and its author, he will oblige many of your Readers, as well as Yours, &c.

Mr. Urban, March 20.

In your Volume LX. p. 1055, it is stated that the death of the late very worthy and learned Dr. Michael Lort, was owing to an accident which he met with in going to his Rectory at Male-end, near Colchester. I wish to know in what year he was instituted to that Rectory; and, as he was probably buried there, should be much gratified by a copy of his epitaph, Ferhaps some Essex Correspondent may be so kind as to oblige me.

Any particulars also of the Rev, John Jones, many years curate to Dr. Young at Welwyn, or of the late Dr. John Carr, of Hertford, would be a favour.

M. Garen.

Mr. Uni FOUR the f lume, styl fairly allo relative to Tute) and stances be John Blai the Walks jecture. family, be ment, on " eminent " whateve at any ti contrary, truth." 1 able assert of contrad ed chapm tion of th Frankfort line of M is erroped of those 1 res, who estate and co. Kilke of the fa bably de the Morre to the gra age. Sir J Castle, wa and it is any male now in el of course, Correspos who seem history of perhaps, the relatio vey Mori Morres, Lords Mo and the K statement Morres, (Sir John since four tieman, 1 titled to copies of tlements of Knock investigal the Mos acended fo ancestor remoter :

У очи

of that country. The family seen settled in Ireland for more a century previous to that time. rt Echlin was Bishop of Down

Andrew Stewart, created a baof Nova Scotia, was the eldest f Andrew, first Baron Castle at of Ireland, who was the a Baron Ochiltree of Scotland, i latter honour he sold to his Sir James Stewart (son of the of Arran) with the permission of rown. On the failure of the line # James Stéwart, who thus be-Lord Ochiltree, the Lord Castle art laid claim to the barony, as ting again to the elder branch, had formerly enjoyed it; but aim was rejected, as, I under-, no such instance of the aliena-In title is on record, in the case e English or Irish peerage, and peculiar to the Scotch baronage. recent Earl of Castle Stewart is dmitted lineal male descendant ndrew fourth Lord Ochiltree. yet deemed incapable of enjoyedignity, in consequence of that fied of the very original as well as ingenious Author of these remarks, he will find his real name by turning to the Correspondence of the Rev. James Granger edited by Malcolm: I think, in the Letters of the Rev. Mr. Cole, recommending a perusulas being useful to Mr. Granger, of an Edition printed at Paris, even later than that of the Abbé Delaporte, in 4 Vols. 8vo.

Yours, &c. ANTI-SCRUTATOR.

Mr. Unnan, Yazley, March 18.
THE following inscription is taken from a tombstone in the church-

This stone was erected by his Parishioners."

A Mara-

A METEOROLOGICAL JOURNAL, kept at CLAPTON, in Hackney, I from the 16th of April, to the 15th of May, 1811.

5 0 • • •	Thermometer.		Barometer.			1 177: 1 (
Day of Month.	Max.	11 p m	Max.	Min.	Hyg.	Wind.	Weather, &c.
(Ap. 16	i		30.00		0.5	4 1	showery
17			j	,		1	clear and clouds
18	59	40	29.34	29-22	0.15		showers—clear
19	56	47	29.29	55.58	0.13	•	clear and showers
20		1		2 9 ·34	0.53		fair and windy
, 21	62	48	29.63	29.59	0.4		clear and clouds
\mathbf{Q}_{0}	66	54	29.68	29.60	0.9	SW.—SE	clear and clouds
23	75	5.5	29.76	29.62	0.3	N.—8.	clear and clouds
24	74	53	29-87	29.80	0-1	W. S. W.	clear and clouds
25	61	5:3	29.85	29.80	0.0	W.—S.	clear and clouds
26	65	48	29.78	2 9 ·66	00		showers—fair
27	64	44	29.64	გმ⊹ცვ	below 0	S.—S. W	clear and clouds
23	64	50	29.65	29-55	.7	•	fair—showers
29	56	46	50.41	29.67	0.5	1	showery
D 30	61	48	29.81	29 78	0.7		fair-showery
May 1	63	55	26 68	29.65	1.9		continuous showers
20.19	60	49	25 58	29 60	1.7		showers—clear
3	61	52	30.05	go 91	1.11		showers-rainy
4	65	54	29.94	29.01	1.14	-4	drops of rain—fair
5	65	47	20.05	29.73	1.12		windy—fair & showers
ชื่	5.5	45	30.08	29.93	0.11	N-E-S
7	61	47	29.83	29 72	0.14		showery
\circ $\overset{\cdot}{s}$	50	51	29.85	29.73	0.15	s.	fair and rainy
O §	35		29.58	29.52	0.50	s.	rainy
10	64	55	29·78	29-75	0.12	S. E.	fair—showers
11	68	54	29.85	29 84	0.12	s. w.	fair
12	75	61	29.78	29.66	0.0	s. s. w.
13	74	59	29.78	29.52	0.0	S. S. W.	fair
	68	49	29.74	29.52	0.0
14	1				•	3. 3. W.	fair—drops of rain
U 15	67	51	29.82	29.81	1.0	1 5.—5 E.	clear—rain at night

OBSERVATIONS.

April 17. Only Cumulus petroides observed.

18. Nanbi pouring hail and rain.

19. The Circus appeared early, followed by Cirro-stratus, Cirro-cumulus, and Cumulus, and eventually by Nimbus and showers.

21. Cirrus extending its fibres along with the current of air. In a lower region Cumuli float along in different planes, the lower ones black and lowering. The Cuckoo and Swallow first seen. A lucid meteor observed about 3 P. M.

22 to 25. Cirrus, Cirro-stratus, Cirro-cumulus, Cumulus, and Cumulo-stratus, of various figures continually prevail, with Summer lightning and dry air.

26 & 27. Same kind of glouds with showers.

- 23. The multiform appearance of the Cirro-stratus exhibited a beautiful sky this afternoon; in some places it was finely undulated, then became reticular, and lastly confused vapour. Cirro-cumulus and Cumulus also seen: showers late in the evening.
- 29 & 30. Nimbi (with Cirrose fibres extending from them) pouring down showers.

May 1. Continued showers through the day.

- 2 & 3. Showers with clear intervals.
 - 4. Only Cumuli to-day.
- 6, 7, & 8. Showery at times,
 - 9. Rainy.
 - 11. Cirro-stratus coloured by setting suns.
 - 12 to 14. Cirrus, &c. Sky deep blue in the Eastern horizon. On the 13th only Cumuli: 14th, Cirri and Cumuli.
 - 15. Only Cumuli in forenoon. Towards evening Cirrus, Cirro-stratus, and Cirro-cumulus, in different altitudes, by approaching and collapsing, formed very dense Nimbi: and exhibited very various tiuts and unusual appearances; and ended in rain.

N. B. The electric bells of De Luc's column were silent till the 7th May, when they began to ring, and have continued ringing, more or less regularly, till the present time.

Clapton, May 16, 1811.

THOMAS FORSTER.

Mr.

1811.] Little Saling, Essex. Utility of Hebrew Learning. 417.

Mr. Unnall, Thezted Vicarage, solves in Divinity and Hebrew. I Feb. 1. shall only ask these simple questions:

Are not the generality of those under-the existing statutes of a separate class for those who may dustinguish them-Gent. Mag. May, 1811. but not to be compared to the simple majestic parent from whom they have sprung.

Oxoximats.

Mt.

2

Mr. URBAN, Tedstone Delamere, April 1.

In the Gentleman's Magazine for June 1810, page 508, your Correspondent, who truly assumes the signature of Hemanitas, observes, there is a class of afflicted fellow-creatures, namely, the opulent Blind, in this country, who are ignorant of the means of knowing how to write; and wishes some plan may be devised to enable them to do so.

To those who could write

"Ere dim suffusion veil'd their orbs that roll

In vain to find the piereing ray of Heav'n," perhaps it may be my happy lot to suggest such a plan. For such sufferers I have a real and poignant feilow-feeling, having myself, when about 19 years of age, experienced the same calamity. A calamity indeed! when,

Seasons return,—to them, alas! return

Nor day, nor sweet approach of ev'n or morn, [rose,

Non eight, of vernal bloom, per summer's

Nor sight of vernal bloom, nor summer's Nor flocks, nor herds, nor human face divine;

But cloud instead, and ever-during dark Surrounds them,—from the cheerful ways of men [fair, Cut off, and, for the Book of Knowledge Presented with an universal blank!*"

To beguile the tedious hours, during the temporary affliction allovementioned, I hit upon the following expedient, by which I was enabled to write in a tolerably even and legible manner.

I directed a carpenter to make for me, of fine wood, a gauge (or gage, as it is pronounced), nine inches long, two inches broad, and half a quarter of an inch thick, having rather more than an inch of the middle part cut away, except about an inch at one end. This gage I laid at the top of my paper or book, which I found should be of some thickness, to render it sufficiently tangible, in order to square it exactly with my gage: that is, it should consist of several folded sheets or pages, that, by the feelth (for the sake of perspicuity, to coin a word) the gage, at commencing, might be placed even. This done, within the open space of the gage, I wrote two lines, being assured, in the first line, that I was going on right, by the pen's occasionally touching the upper part of the gage, in making the long strokes upwards (as in letters b, d, h, &c.) and, in the second line, being assured that I was right, by the peu's touching the lower part of the gage, in making the longstrokes downwards (as in the letters g, j, y, &c.). When the two lines were maished, I placed a very thin slip of smoothly-planed wood, of the same breadth as the gage (but rather longer), upon the part next to be written on, close below the gage, taking care not to move it till I put the gage upon it; and then, (by means of a perforated notch) I gently drew it away, at the end where if was rather longer than the gage. This being done, I wrote two lines more, in the manner just described, and so on till I had filled my page.

Although I used a common pen, made to yield the ink freely, it seldom failed to leave its trace, as I was mindful to dip it into an inkstand properly supplied (without cotton) at the end of every line. But an ingenious contrivance called a Fountain Pen will do better, and never deceive the sightless

That others may derive that comfort or recreation from the simple expedient, which, while in a state of darkness, it afforded me, is the sincere wish of

L. BOOKER.

P. S. My misfortune was occasioned by inflammation: which yielded only to judicious regimen, and about eight weeks' confinement in a room from which every ray of light was excluded. At a future time, if they will be deemed acceptable, I shall be happy to communicate some reflections upon blindness, which may tend to recoucile those who are visited with it to their lot.

Mr. URBAN,

HAVE but a short account to settle with John Carter this month, because the narration of the Master Workman has, I conclude, settled the question between him and his accuser, in the simplest language possible; and as the accuser has not re-asserted his charge, it requires no farther mention. I shall make but one observation, and be silent on this subject for ever.

John says, "The Magistrate, on hearing our business, considered it of term is equivocal; for, if he means the practical and mechanical part of this knowledge, it is true that I never have allowed him to possess it: but if he means architectural drawing, or a knowledge of antiquities, I have ever admitted it with the most perfect candour; for, however this may be disputed by others, I do assure him, that I did not write the letter in your journal for March, signed "J. R. Thompson, Short's Buildings, Clerkenwell."

^{*} I presume in being pardoned for introducing a few verbal alterations in this fine passage of Milton, to make it amaigamate with my subject.

One word more: he calls me a retamer of the Master Workman: I answer that I have never received a retaming fee—the character, credit, and ability of that Artist, I have maintained against all John Carter's attacks for these seven years; they want my assistance no longer; let his works speak for themselves: they are now open to every eye, and I have never walked through Palace Yard since, when John Carter was not there, that I ever heard a single spectator speak of them without admiration in the extremer if John will still traduce them, example it soon became common. Mr. Baillie never saw the kilt in uso till the year 1725, when he came to reside in Inverness-shire, his native county, after having passed a few years in Edinburgh; nor did he ever before hear such a piece of dress mentioned even by his father (who was a very sensible highland gentleman) though he was born as far back I therefore judge that the as 1655. present dress of our Highland soldiers is quite different from the antient costume of any part of Scotland, which I apprehend consisted of jackets and trowsers; indeed I believe that the journal of an English officet who came with the Protector Somerset to the battle of Pinky, mentions the dress of the Scotch soldiers to be sheep-skin jackets and trowsers, without the least mention of kills, plaids, or tartan. The Scotch bonnet I believe to be probably much the same as that in use some centuries ago in England and ou the continent, before the introduction of hats. As to tartan, I cament say when when it was first made a part of the Scottish garb, though it is obvious to any person acquainted with antient costume, that party-coloured dresses were much in use among most European nations, without any regularity in making one side of the figure from top to bottom correspond with the other half: but, on the contrary, care was taken to make the difference as great as possible. Plaids, or. loose cloaks like plaids, were, I dare say, the outward costume of most nations in antient times, as they indeed are in our own days. To these remarks I may add, that there is, perhaps, no strict propriety in using tartau in the costume of Macbeth, and certainly none in dressing him or his Thanes in kilts or felie begs, which are not yet an invention 100, far less 1000, years old. I believe that tartan is part of the dress of the peasants in the South of France in some districts. But the tartan, kilt, and the other parts of the present Highland garb, have received so much splendour from the achievements of our countrymen in modern times, that no reference to antiquity could possibly add much honour to where so much has been more lately acquired; and no lover of his country will desire to see what has been called the garb of old Gaul (properly or not) changed for any other -antient or modern.

Yours, &c.

H. R, D.

ANALYSIS OF BOOKS, No. III, (Continued from Vol. LXXX. ii. page 437.)
Title.

" Carmen Deo Nostro. Te decet Hymnus."

Sacred Poems collected, corrected, augmented,
most humbly presented,
to my Lady the Countesse of Denbigh, by her most devoted Servant, R. C.

In hearty acknowledgement of his immortall obligation to her Goodness and Charity.

At Paris.

By Peter Targa, Printer to the Archbishoppe of Paris, in S. Victor's streete, at the golden Sunne. M.DC LII.

The Author of the Poems appears to have been the celebrated Crashawe; the Editor, Thomas Car. It is well known that in the latter part of his life he became 4 convert to the Roman Catholic religion, and was a Carnon of Loretto.

The introduction, in which the Editor gives a pleasing character of Crashawe, is worthy of selection.

"Crashawe,

The Anagram He was Car.

Was Car then Crashawe; or was Crashawe

Since both within one name combined are?
Yes, Car's Crashawe, he Car; 'tis love, alone [ose.

Which melts two harts, of both composing So Crashawe's still the same, so much dis-

By strongest wits, so honor'd, so admir'd, :

Car was but he that enter'd as a friend

With whom he shar'd his thoughtes, and did commend [each other; (While yet he liv'd) this worke; they lay'd Sweet Crashawe was his friend; he Cra-shawe's brother.

So Car hath title then; 'twas his intente That what his riches pen'd, paore Car should print. [one

Norfeares he checke praysing that happing Who was belov'd by all, dispraysed by none.

To witt, being pleas'd with all things, he No would be give, nor take offence; befall. What might, he would possesse himselfe. and live

As dead (devoyde of interest) 't all might Desease t' his well composed mind, forestal'd [call'd]

With heavenly riches, which had wholy
His thoughts from earth, to live above in th' aire

A very bird of paradice. No care Had he of earthly trashe. What might suffice

To fit his soul to heavenly exercise,
Sufficed him: and we may guesse his hart
By what his lipps bring forth, his onely part
Is God and godly thoughts. Leaves doubt

But that to whom one God is all, all some.
What he might eate or weare he tooke no thought; [sought.

His needfull foode he rather found them. He seekes no downes, no sheeten, his bed's still made;

If he can find a chaire, or stoole, he's layd s When day peepes in, he quitts his restlesse rest,

And still, poore soule, before he's up he's Thus dying did he live, yet liv'd to dye
In the Virginals lapper to whom he did an

In the Virgine's lappe, to whom he did applye [thence was styled]. His virgin thoughtes and words, and By foes, the chaplain of the Virgin myld. While yet he lived without: his modestic. Imparted this to some, and they to me.

Live happie then, deare sont; injust the rest.

Eternally

swore

They never saw peeces so sweete before As these fruites of pure nature; where do art

Did lead the untaught pencill."----

CONTENTS.

To the noblest and best of ladyes, the Countess of Denbigh.

To the name above every name, the name of Jesus, A Hymn.

In the Holy Nativity, &c. a Hymn, as

New Year's Day.

* In the glorious Epiphanie, &c. sung at by the 3 Kings.

The Office of the Holy Cross. The Howres. For the Howr of Matins. Prime.

The Third,—The Sixt.—The Ninth.—Compline.

The Recommendation.

Upon the Holy Sepulcher.

Vexilla Regis; the Hymn of the Holy Cross.

To our B. Lord upon the choice of his Sepulcher.

Nimia Charitas : or the Dear Bargain.

Sancta Maria Dolorum; or The Mother of Sorrows. A pathetical descant upon the devout plain song of Stabat mater dolorosa.

THE TIMES, No. II.

"Nec to nobilium fugiat cortamen equorum Multa capax populi commoda Circui habet."

Orn.

A S I do not consider myself bound A to follow any plan in my lucubrations, I shall always enter on that subject which happens first to strike me, only taking care to keep in view the main object which I have sufficiently explained in my first paper. A circumstance which I shall mention has induced me on this occasion to say something on the subject of Theatrical Amusements.

The other day an old gentleman, a friend of mme, called upon me. As we had never met since he was last in London, about 20 years ago, I was very glad to see him. After a good deal of that about old times, he informed me of the occasion of his visit to London: "Aaron," said he (for we were schoolfellows) "I have been, as you know, all my life addicted to scribbling: I have of late bestowed a good deal of time upon a Tragedy," which which I have now brought hither, with a view of offering it to the Managers of some of our Theatres; but I wish first of all to have your opinion upon it." He then presented me with a MS. which, after a very slight glance, I was persuaded would not do. -I told him, "that I was afraid he had not been sufficiently careful in the choice of his model." My friend answered, that he had always considered the rules of the Grecian drama as too rigid; and that, if he had taken any liberties of which Aristotle would have disapproved, he had for his companious in error, Shakspeare, Otway, Dryden, Lillo, &c .- " My good Sir," said 1, "you misapprehend me: 1 find no fault with either your subject or your plot. The circumstances of Charles the First's life might certainly be wrought into a very good Tragedy, if a proper attention were paid to those externals which you; seem to disregard. You have opened your play with a description of the battle of * * * * *. That is wrong; the battle must be fought upon the stage —it is now the custom."—My friend stared—"Nay, Aaron," said he, " you banter: I asked you to judge of my work, not to sneer at my understanding." I could not help smiling at his simplicity; and, having assured him that I was serious, went on: "What could be more sublime and interesting than to see half a dozen horses killed under Cromwell? And, I assure you, that they would do full justice to their pairts."---" Again," said I, " you fall into the same error; the Review of the Parliamentary Army, which is described, should be displayed—the troops should be drawn up upon the stage, and fire three volleys in honour of their General; this, with a speech from the Protector, in Real Armour made by Mr. Marriott of Fleetstreet,' would throw the house into raptures.—Again, the trial and exccution must be upon the stage. You may, perhaps, find it difficult to meet with an actor who will go through the part of Charles with these alterations; but you must get over the beheading as well as you can: as the axe rises, the curtain may drop; or Grimaldi may enter the crowd, dressed like a Puritan, upon a jackass; and take my word for it, nobody will know whether the head is cut off or not.

I then commented ou the other parts of the play.

My friend listencil with attention; but, when I had done, I found that I had not quite overcome his attackment to the Old School. However, he promised to attend to the hints which I had given him; and I have no doubt that, if he does, his play will be raptu-rously received. When my friend was gove, I could not help indulging in some reflections upon the subject on which we had been conversing. There is not, I believe, another amusement (esting and drinking excepted) equally : anticat and universal. If we look into any civilized part of the world, we shall find a stage, not perhaps so rigid as that of the anticuts, or so brilliant as our own, but equally suited to the genius of the speciators. It is not, however, my intention to enter into the history of the Stage. It would, I confess, be an interesting employment to investigate the origin of the British Drama. The Rising Sun is no supleasant object of Retrospection at Midday. It would be amusing to mark its various mulations; to follow it through the Mysteries, Interludes, Mummeries, Tragedies, Comedies, Farces, and Pantomimes of our forefathers, until we arrived at our present Grand-Serio-Comic Melo-Dra matic Spectacles. But I have not room for such an undertaking, and must confine myself to the object in view; vi≈. to prove that our stage is in a state of greater refinement and cultivation than it ever was before. I believe every one will admit that that Spectacle is the most likely to produce an effect upon the Speciators, which is most intelligible to them, admitting this, how much has the influence of the Stage been increased; Many a worthy man can relish a Scene, who cannot comprehend a Sentiment; and thousands, who would understand no part of Othello but the smothering, may fully enter into the whole of Blue heard, and Timour.

I am of opinion that Horace was a great admirer of Pantomimic representation, and that he referred to it when he said

Segnius irritant animum demisse for eurem Quam que sunt oculis subjecta.

With so respectable an authority surely we may venture to change scatioffers, I shall resume the subject, and offer to them those santher considerations which my narrow boundaries for the present exclude.

N. B. In imitation of my worthy redecessor Mr. Facz- Liam, I do a ereby declare, that all much jokes as "These are sad Times," "I hope the Times with mend soon, dir. are out of date, void of wit, and to be used by these only who can produce a certificate that they are unable to frame a AARON BILKURSTAFFE. new joke.

Mr. Chair, May 3. CCORDINGtomy promise, I have . sent you an extract from the ournal of a deceased friend, which relates the manner in which the inhabitants of the North Riding of Yorkshire celebrate Christmas. The account, though written in a familiar style, yet in every point will be found true.

Tours, &c. houring villages, I spirit my Christmas,

---- Here, and in the neighand a happy Car stones too. I found the autient manners of our ancestors practised vertheless, replace with the sacred story of the Namette. This custom is yearly contiaued till Christmas eve when their feasting. or as they usually car it "good living," commences. Every ru-ue dame projuces a cheese preserved for the samed feetwal, upon which, before any part of it is tasted, acrording to an aid custom, the origin of watch may easily be traced, she, with a tharp kaife makes rude maisious to represent the cross. Wha this, and furnity, made of barley and meal, the cottage affor is uncategrapted hospitality. A large are on Christmas eve) is made, on which they pile large logs of wood, community called 'yule clog', a psece of this is venely preserved by each prodest housewise : I have seen no less than thirty remaints of these logs kept with the greatest care.

On the feast of a . Stephen large goose pies are made, ail which they distribute among the r needy neighbours, except one which is carefully last up and not tasted tall toe purchassion of the Virgin, carled Camdieraas.

" On the feast of St. Stephen also, 6 youths (called sword-dancers, from their dancing with swords), clad in white, and bedecked with ribbands, attended by a fiddler, and another youth cursonally dressed, who giveby one who personates a Doctor, begin to travel from village to village, performing a rude dance, called the sword dance. One of the 6 above-mentioned acts the part of king in a kind of farce which consists of singing and dancing, when 'the Bessy' interferes while they are making a hexagon with their swords, and is killed. These frolicks they continue till New Year's Day, when they spend their gains at the ale-house with the greatest innocence and mirth, having invited all their rustic acquaintance.

custom, which has been by the country people more or less revived, ever since the alteration in the Style and Calendar: namely, the watching, in the midnight of the New and Old Christmas eve, by Rechives, to determine upon the right Christmas, from the humming noise which they suppose the bees will make when the birth of our Saviour took place. Disliking innovations, the utility of which they understand not, the oracle, they affirm, always prefers the more antient custom.

Another strange custom also prevails: that those who have not the common materials of making a fire, generally sit without one, on New Year's Day; for none of their neighbours, although hospitable at other times, will suffer them to light a candle at their fires. If they do, they say that some one of the family will die within the year D—p R—e."

MR. URBAN, May 16.

I AM not surprised at Architect's answer to my observations on his works, as it is much milder than I expected; and had it not been for a base charge he has brought against me, I should not have troubled you further on the subject. For what "obvious reasons" J. Britton is placed as my schoolmaster, I know not, as neither he, nor any other man, is responsible for my opinions.

As I have no reason to change my opinion of the arrangement as formerly given, I shall quit the subject: the publick being in possession of the two statements, each individual is at liberty to follow that which he thinks most correct most correct.

When, Mr. Urban, I professionally differed with Architect, I little expected the masked friend (J. Carter) would have been brought forward, to back the charge of ingratitude; but, as I have been for those favours dragged for ward, the following trait will show the extent of my obligations: In the Winter of 1807-8 I was employed in a survey of part of Henry's Chapel: the Western Turrets coming in my department, knowing J. Carter had sketches of these Turrets, I took the opportunity to speak to him at the Abbey, when he generously offered to shew me his sketches, and appointed a meeting at his own house. Owing to my not being acquainted with the neighbourhood of Pimlico, I was considerably beyond the time of appointment; J. Carter was just going out, he nevertheless turned back, and showed me a sketch (if I may so call it), hastily drawn on apiece of loose paper, without measurcment of any kind, or accuracy, as something like what I wanted; upon my asking him to permit me to take the sketch with me, he said " No; it could be of no use to me"; and here ended his "instructions," and the only communication I ever had, direct or indirect, concerning Henry VIIth's Chapel; and for such favours he lays the charge of ingralitude at my feet.

Yours, &c. J. R. Thompson.

MR. URBAN,

May 1.

DEING the other day in the Meeting-house Yard, at Sutton, in the parish of Broughton Astley, near Hinckley, the following epitaphs were transcribed; which will be preserved by being inserted in your widely spreading Miscellany. Mr. Cracherode (it is said) was related to the very eminent Divine of the same name, who died in 1799 (see Volume LXIX. page 354 & seqq.

M. GREEN.

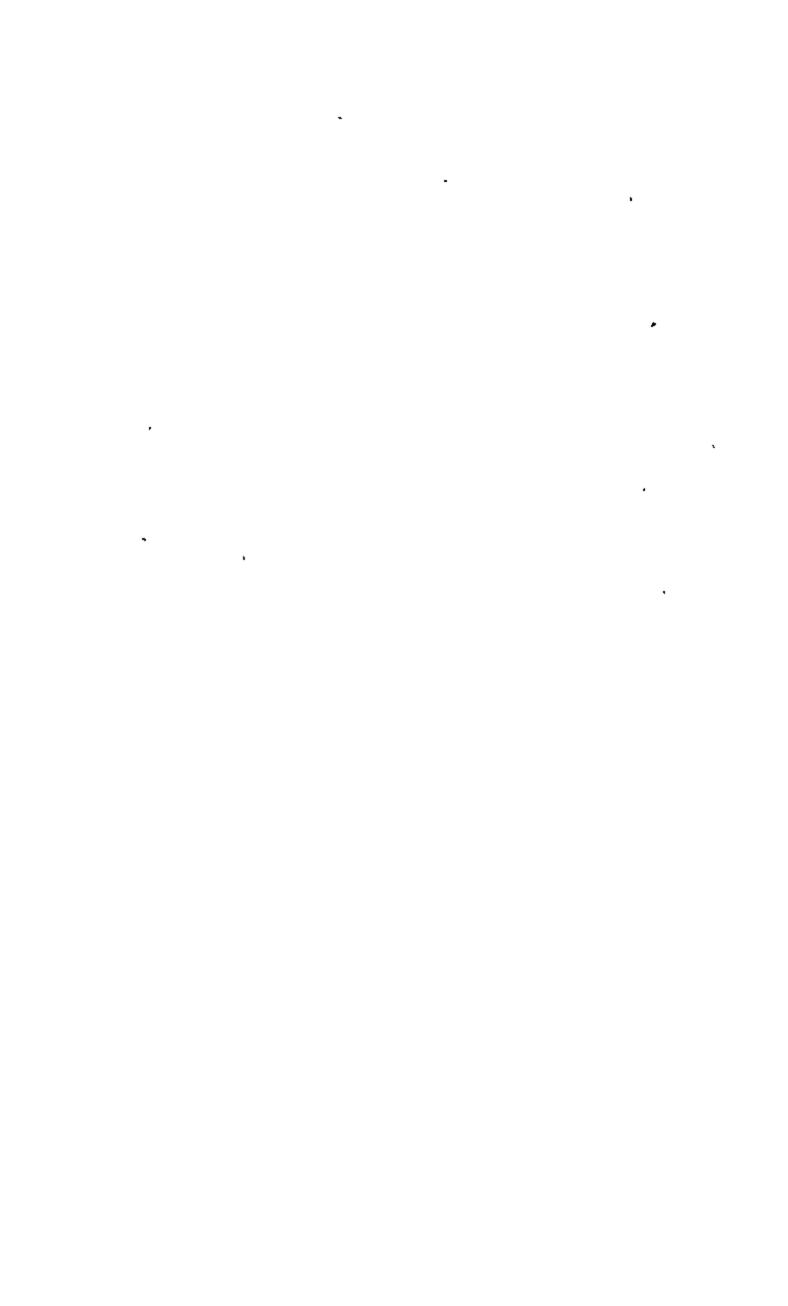

" Sacred

to the Memory of the Rev. Clayton Mordaunt Cracherode, Minister of the Gospel, and Pastor of Sutton Church, who died suddenly on Lord's day afternoon, the 22d of November, 1807, aged 49 years: being on his return from Leir, where he had been preaching, with his accustomed animation, from the Gospel of Sc. Luke, c. xix. v. 10. 'For the Son of Man is come to seek, and to save, that which was lost. He often expressed a desire, and an expectation to die suddenly. He would say, Sudden death, sudden glory."

On another stone at the same place:

"Here sleepeth the body of Mr. Robert Gilbert, Minister of the Gospel, and Pastor of the Church-meeting in this place. He departed this life December 17, 1742, in the 27th year of his age."

Mr

1811.] Little Saling, Essex - Utility of Hebrew Learning, 417.

Mr. Unnaff, Thusted Vicerage, solves in Divinity and Hebrew. I shall only ask these simple questions:

Mr. Unnaff, Fab. 1. shall only ask these simple questions:

Are not the generality of those under-the existing statutes of a separate class for those who may dutinguish them-GENT. MAG. May, 1811.

but not to be compared to the simple majestic parent from whom they have spring.

OBORIENSIS.

Mr.

"Parliament enjoined and trusted him to make a Catechism for public use."
—" Executrix optime de se merito posuit."

Yours, &c.

B. N.

Mr. URBAN, T is now nearly twelve months since A a letter appeared in the Supplement to the Gentleman's Magazine, (for July 1810, p. 618.) from a candid and intelligent writer, objecting to the authenticity of a passage in the Tournament of Rowley: It is nearly the same length of time since you did me the favour of publishing my answer to his objections. I have expected, month after month, that your Correspondent would have done me the honour to acknowledge that my answer was not only explicit, but satisfactory. In this, I am sorry to say, I have been hitherto disappoint-

I have lately looked into that valuable work "Mr. Jamieson's Etymological Dictionary of the Scottish Language;" and I find in the List of Authors quoted by him, the following, characterised in this unqualified

ed, unless I may presume that silence manner.

"Chatterton's Poems, (published as Rowley's,) 8vo. London, 1777."

After a diligent search, I have not been able to discover a single quotation from that book; notwithstanding it would have afforded many happy il-Justrations of obscure Scottish phrases. I presume, that Mr. Jamieson, either convinced in his own mind, or depending upon the generally received opinion of the forgery, totally declined the use of the Poems. I, who have ventured in "The Introduction to an Examination of the Internal Evidence respecting the Antiquity of Rowley's Pocms," to stem the tide of public opinion, and who believe myself able to prove in the most satisfactory manner that it was impossible for Chatterton to have written the Poems attributed to Rowley, and that every argument hitherto offered in objection to their antiquity is fallacious, may be permitted to notice one or two of the passages in Mr. Jamieson's Dictionary, which might have given its Author a fair opportunity of shewing that those Poems are well entitled to the confidence of every one who is interested in the study, not only of the old English Language, but of old English or British customs.

Mr. Jamieson has favoured us with an excellent disquisition on the word Beltane; part of which shall, with your permission, be quoted, as an article worthy of appearing in the Gentleman's Magazine.

"BELTANE, BELTEIN, s. The name of a sort of Festival observed on the first day of May, O. S.; hence used to denote the term of Whitsunday.

"At Beltane, quben ilk bodie bownis
To Peblis to the Play,
To heir the singin and the soundis,
The solace, suth to say,
Be firth and forrest furth they found;
Thay graythit tham full gay."

Peblis to the Play, St. I.

"On the first of May, O. S. a Festival called Beltan is annually held here. It is chiefly celebrated by the Cow-herds, who assemble by scores in the fields, to dress a dinner for themselves, of boiled milk and eggs. These dishes they cat with a sort of cakes baked for the occasion, and having small lumps in the form of nipples, raised all over the surface. The cake might, perhaps, be an offering to some Deity in the days of Druidism." P. Logierait, Perths. Statist. Acc. 'v. 84.

"A town in Perthshire, on the borders" of the High-lands, is called Tillie, (or Tullie) Bellane, i. e. the eminence, or rising ground, of the fire of Baal. In the neighbourhood is a Druidical Temple of eight upright stones, where it is supposed the fire was kindled. At some distance from this, is another Temple of the same kind, but smaller, and near it a well still held in great vencration. On Bellane morning, superstitious people go to this well, and drink of it; then they make a procession round it, as I am informed, nine times; after this they in like manner go round the Temple. So deep-rooted is this heathenish superstition in the minds of many who reckon themselves good Protestants, that they will not neglect these rites, even when Bellane falls on Sabbath.

"The custom still remains (in the West of Scotland) amongst the Herds and young people to kindle fires in the high grounds, in honour of Beltan. Beltan, which in Gaelic signifies Bual or Bels-fire, was anciently the time of this solemnity. It is now kept on St. Peter's Day. P. Loudoun, Statist. Acc. iii. 105.

"But the most particular and distinct narration of the superstitious rites observed at this period, which I have met with, is in the Statist. Acc. of the P. of Callander, Perths.

"The people of this district have two customs, which are fast wearing out, not only here, but all over the High-lands, sid have sum of man and beast, you were born between the $B_{\rm c}$. taus, t i. e. t the first and 8th of May.

"Although the name of Beltein is unknown in Sweden, yet on the last day of April, i. e. the evening preceding our Beltein, the country people light great fires on the hills, and spend the night in shooting," (qu. making much noise?) "The first of May is also observed."

The whole of this curious Article extends to several quarto pages, to which Mr. Urban's Readers are referred. Mr. J. might on this occasion have quoted the following lines from the second Battle of Hastings, where mention is made of Salisbury Plain and Stonehenge:

" Here did the Brutons adoration page To the false God whom they did Tauran name,

Dightynge hys altuire with greate fyras in Mage,

Roastynge thear vyctualle round aboute the flame."

This is a pointed allusion to the ceremonies of Bettern, which it would be gross absurdity to believe that a boy of thirteen or fourteen years of age would have been likely to have bloude."

In one Poem, we find a correct allusion to the dressing of victuals, as described in the ceremonies of Beltane; and, in the other, to the sacrifices, perhaps of human victims, by the Druids

In one of Mr. Jamieson's quotations we are told, that these great fires were lighted in Sweden, bot , on the first, and on the 8th of May; in another, that the coure month of May, in the Irish language, is, on account of these Pagan ceremonies, to this day, called, mi, na Beal-tine. Hence the Poems with propriety, say, "dightyage hys altarre with gracte fyres in Maie," viz. on the 1st, the 8th, or any part of that month, and not on any one particular day. Mr. J. gives us a quotation also from an ancient Glossary, which asserts that the Druids lighted two great fires every year;" and hence the farther propriety of Rowley's mentioning fire in the plural number.

The negligent manner in which Mr. Tyrwhitt edited the Poems, is, perhaps, in nothing more evident than in his non-explanation of the false God Tauran. Torran is now the name of thunder in the High-lands; therefore Tauran, or the Thunderer, seems to apply with consistency and propriety. He is the Gallicum Tau mentioned in Davis's Celtic Researches, the Bel of the Phænicians, the Baal of Scripture, the Thor of our Saxon Aucestors, probably the Moloch of the Ammonites, and the Pagan Deity still ignorantly and superstitiously worshiped on the first and the 8th of May in the Highlands of Scotland. "This Tau was the symbol of the Druidical Jupiter. It consisted of a huge giant oak, deprived of all its branches, ex-. cept only two large ones, which, though cut off and separated, were suspended from the top of the trunk, like extended arms." See the Monthly Review, January 1805. If I am not much deceived, I have noticed, ten years since, something like a representation of this Pagan Deity in a grove of oaks, in that beautiful scat of the Howards at Corby (i. e. Crow) Castle, near Carlisle.

his

Is it probable, that Chatterton could not only have hit upon the leading circumstances in the worship of this Deity, the dressing of victuals in one Poem, and, in the other, the shedding of the blood of victims? It is to Mr. Jamieson's learned and interesting researches, that we are indebted for a clear and satisfactory elucidation of the obscurity in the first allusion. The correctness of the latter may, perhaps, appear by a reference to the first Book of Lucan's Pharsalia.

"Et quibus immitis placatur sanguine diro Teutates, horrensque feris altaribus Hesus Et Taranis Scythicæ non mitior ara Dianæ."

Here we have the Tauran of Row-ley, thus described by Farnaby, in a note on the Pharsalia. "Taranis.] Jupiter, quasi Beogratics, tonans, à Taran, quod Wallis Britannis (qui Veteris Gallicæ Linguæ vestigia & reliquias retinent) Tonitru sonat, ut videtur Phil. Cluverio lib. I. de Antiquitate Germaniæ, cap. 9---his omnibus litatum humanis Hostiis, uti Dianæ Tauricæ. Vide Cæs. l. 6 de Bello Gallic. Solin. c. 34. Mela, l. 3. c. 2. Lactant. de falsa Relig. l. i. c. 21. Pythæi Adversaria l. i. c. 3. Cluverium l. i. de antiq, Germ. c. 22. 26. & 28."

Rowley has no sooner dropped this incidental allusion to the Temple of Thor, and the shedding of the victim's blood, than he proceeds to mention other circumstances very natural for him or his predecessor Turgotus to have done:

"Where auncient Bardi did their verses synge

Of Cæsar conquerr'd, and his mighty hoste,

And how old Tynyan, necromancing Kinge,

Wreck'd ail hys shyppyng on the Brittish Coaste,

And made bym in his tatter'd barks to flie, Till Tynyan's Dethe and opportunitie.

To make it more renomed than before, (I tho' a Saxon, yet the truthe will telle. The Saxonnes steyn'd the place wyth Brittish gore,

Where note but bloud of Sacrifices felle.
Tho' Chrystians, stylle they thoughte mouche of the pile,

And here their mett when causes dyd it neede;

'Twas here the auncient Elders of the Isle

Dyd by the trecherie of Hengist bleede."

The tenth line of this Quotation seems to imply that human sacrifices are not to be understood by the word vyclymes in those preceding. If the Reader wish to enter more fully into the subject, he will find a long and a very interesting note upon it in pages 71. 2. 3. 4. 5. and 6. of Dr. Milles's Edition of Rowley's Poems.

Having aiready exceeded the bounds to which Mr. Urban seems desirous of contining his Correspondents, I must defer till another opportunity some farther remarks on Mr. Jamieson's scientific and instructive Dictionary. -But, before I conclude, I must request the attention of your Readers to the last line of Mr. J.'s first quotation from Peblis to the Play: "Thay graythit tham full gay." It adds one to many passages which I have noted, from Chaucer, and other antient writers, ascertaining the true meaning of the verb graythe, viz. to dress or adorn; which the late Mr. Tyrwhitt, in his Glossary to Chaucer, was very unwilling to admit; as it legitimates the substantive gratche, in the sense of apparel, to which he had incorrectly objected during the Rowleian Controversy.

Yours, &c.

John Sherwes, M. D. Bath, May 5, 1911.

Mr. URBAN, May 7.

THE following Entry in the Register of Burwell in Cambridge-shire, preserves the record of a remarkable, though melancholy event:

" N. B. On Sept. 8, 1727, about 9 of clock in the evening a dismal fire broke out in a Barn, in which a great number of persons were met together to see a puppetshew : in the Barn there were a great many loads of new light straw; the Barn was thatched with straw, which was very dry, and the niner roof of the Barn was covered with old dry cobwebs, so that the fire like lightning flew round the Barn in an instant : and there was but one small door belonging to the Barn, which was close nailed up, and so could not easily be broke open, and when it was opened, the passage was so parrow, and every body so impatient to escape, that the door was presently blocked up; and most of those that did escape, which were but very few, were forced to crawl over the heads and bodies of those that lay on a heap at the door: and the rest in number, 76, perished instantly, and two more died of their wounds within two days. The fire was occasioned by the negligence of a servant, who set a candle and lanthern in or near the heap of straw, which was in the Barn : the servant's name was Richard Whitaker, of the Parish of Hadstock in Essex near Linton co. Cambrulge, who was tried for the fact at the Assizes held at Cambridge, March 27, 1728, but was acquate [*. [The names of the pirsons who per shed by the said fire and entered in the Register, being ourses there]

"On Viry 12, 1725, about 3 o'clock in the morning, there was a violent hail shower and betwee, six in seven o clock I measured and of the hair-stones, and they were then 2 inches round in the small stip reliand of the mehes in the largest, notwithstanding to y had and upon the ground from a vehick to that time, and were considerably was of by the heat of the Sin, as in got plantity of water amongst them."

Mr. URBAN, I Castone Delamere,

Delanere, in the County and Diocese of freeford, is situated at a short district from the Parsonage, upon the decravity of a his, commanding a beautiful and extensive prospect over really the whole of Worsheet over really the whole of Worsheet over really the whole of

we now see them. From the distension of their roots, they are evidently injurious to the Fabric, notwithstanding they contribute much to its picturesque beauty. They canno!, however, now be removed without demolishing the parts where they have fixed their station,-What adds also to that beauty, nearly the whose of the North side of the Church is clothed with a mantle of tvy; giving to the rustic Editice a solumn and venerable appearance. Near the South door are two prostrate figures -- much worn by Time and human footsteps; but whose Effigies they are, no inscription informs us. They seem habited in the Costaine of the reign of Queen Enzabeth; perhaps about which time the Charch was built: as a 5 icramental Cup and Cover, belonging to the Parish, bears the date of 1573.

In the Chancel of the Church, are the following Sepulchical Inscriptions.

1. Upon a flat stone :

"His jacet to tamula Richardas Creswell, Gen. qui obat y csino terto dis Aprilis, æla is suæ anno octogesimo quarto. Redemption s humanæ 1613; Carolo primo cum Angliæ proceribus periculosè lit gant."

2. Upon

market, s sa c collect in 177 rate or Arcomarket, s sa c collect in see I it is having by a the improper o case a of this five. See our vol. ALIV. p. 92. Eptr.

2. Upon a flat stone:

"Here lieth the body of James Parry, M. A. descended of an antient family; who was eminent for his humble spirit, religious life, and generous behaviour and conversation. He was Prebend of the Church of Hereford, and Rector of this Parish 40 years; where he deceased the 12th of September 1671, being aged near 80 years.

'He hath dispersed abroad: He hath given to the poor: His righteousness remaineth for ever.' 2 Cor. ix. 9."

Upon the same stone:

"Here lieth the body of Mary, the wife of George Primrose, gent. buried Dec. 25th, 1687."

3. Upon a flat stone:

Thomas Dolman, Artium Magister, hujus Ecclesiæ Rector ac decus: pietate verå, summå eruditione, sanctitate ac suavitate morum, insignis typus.

Melior pars, corporeå solutå mole, in cælis fulget, terrenas contemnens, ipsaque tumulum ossa ditaut.

Obiit quarto die Decembris, 1690, ætatis suæ 59.

4. Upon a mural monument, bearing Arms—a Lion rampant with two heads Argent, on a shield Or:

"Juxta inhumantur reliquias Roberti Mason,
qui fuit Pretorii Dominus et hujus Ecclesiae Patronus;
Qui fatis cessit 16 April. ann. 1631.
actat. suae lxiii.
Et, in codem tumulo, Hesterae
Uxoris ejus, quae obiit 28 die Sep.
1702, actat. suae lxxxiii.
Filiorum itidem quinque Filiarum binarum,
quos ornavit vivos vita caelebs.
Beati moctui qui in Domino moriuntur.
Pietate posuit Robertus Filius solus superstes."

5. Upon a flat stone:

"Subtus inhumantur reliquiæ Gulielmi Mason, qui obiit 19° die Septembris, 1693, ætatis suæ 70. Et Richardi Filii ejus, qui obiit anno ætat. suæ 69, ann. Dom. 1717.

6. Upon a mural tablet:

"Near to this place lye interred, the bodies of Dorcas, daughter of John Holland, gent, and Katherine his wife, and of German, the son of the said John and Katherine—in hopes of a happy Resurrection, 1726."

7. Upon a mural monument, bearing the Arms of the Family:

"Near this place lieth the body of the Rev. Mr. John Landon, M. A. Rector of Nustead and Isield in the County of Kent, who died the 3d day of June, 1777, aged 77. His religious principles and literary abilities were evident from what he did and wrote in vindication of the Religion he professed, &c."

8. Upon a flat stone in the aile:

"Here lieth the body of Frances Bateman, who departed this life, May 28th, An. Dom. 1703.

She was a woman that did take delight In pious thoughts and actions day and night.

So kind a wife,—so tender to her mother, That there's behind her left scarce such another.

Heav'n took her soul: the Earth her corpse did seize,—

Yet not in Fee; she only holds by Lease; With this proviso—when the Judge shall call, Earth shall give up her share, and Heav'n take all,"

Yours, &c.

L. Booker.

HENRY THE SEVENTH'S CHAPEL. ARCHITECTURAL PROCEEDINGS.

(Continued from p. 206.) THE work going on at the East end of the Chapel cannot strictly be called either a repair, or a restoration of any particular decoration; but it is to all intents a literal rebuilding of the East external upright. The principal portion of the turrels right and left in their upper halves, with the flying buttresses, and the centre upper window, destroyed: new masonry has been substituted in their places. The grounds on cach side the window, the space above, and entablatures, new work wrought upon the old. The whole of the lower centre window, nearly occupying the space from furrel to turret, destroyed, and a new one is now building up. The opening thus presented in cons quence of the operation, exposes the . returns of the interior of the centre small Chapel, full of compartments, and niches with statues; an arch expanding from side to side of the returns is also visible. Allowing it possible that this arch might have no miniculate connexion with the window gone, yet I must comment ou the lateral pressure the arch in a certain degree had towards it. As it is, some sort of temporary support given basking in the simstime of patronage and fashion. My office is not flattery, but Architectural Intelligence.

MASONRY. The new-wrought lines done in heu of the old ones in the Chapel, from the several comparisons. I have made between each, are gone through with correctness; at any rate, the labour bestowed is excessive; indeed, the smallest attempt of this kind, true or otherwise, would have called up every exertion that the artificer might possess, to enable him to arrive at strokes bordering on the verge of perfection. I examined with great care the disjointed pieces of the old work lying in the inclosure on the North side of the Chapel, that I might find if there were in them any he or she joggles, as they are termed, plug, or crampholes, contrivances resorted to in the modern universal practice of piling up stone-work; but all the relics, either in their horizontal or perpendicular faces, bore smooth surfaces, the joints straight, &c. In the returns of the multions, were a series of plug-holes for the mere purpose of receiving the of this sort, I believe, is in being, for the composition of the parapets to the side ailes. In fact, I fear the above specimen is purely ideal, as it does not in my eye accord with the prevailing characters of the elevations; extreme richness, and the filling the centres of the various diamond, and other compartments, with roses, or porteullises.

(The Sculptures in our next.)

Ma. Unsa, Harpenden, April 19.

A LTHOLGH the evidence * and arguments † first advanced, with a view to establish the fact of hedge-hogs sucking cows, were supported by such a degree of proof as to exclude all reasonable doubt, and which indeed still remain wholly unrefuted; yet, in the opinion of your respectable Correspondent, page 211, they are entitled to no higher consideration and credit than as conducive to mere presumptive evidence. The inacturacy of this decision may probably proceed from the circumstance of the paper, containing the testimony referred to, having by some means escaped his perusal; for, as a desire of impartial investigation seems to be the ultimate object of his research, candour forbids me (though the omission certainly appears inexplicable) to suppose that a communication so essential to that important purpose, would be intentionally suppressed. However, as the former of the papers alluded to is that which first induced the discussion, I cannot refuse myself the satisfaction of soliciting him to consult it, as an indispensable document for vindicating and establishing the reality of the circumstance in question: and, indeed, I am more inclined to urge the indulgence of this request, because he has already evinced an apparent disposition to admit, with candour and fairness, the point in dispute, whenever it should appear to be supported by sufticient evidence. Such evidence, Sir, it is presumed, is there produced; and, being ocular, is, consequently, the most conclusive, perhaps, of any which the nature of the subject is capable of receiving. Hence it may not be unreasonable to infer, that irresistible conviction will result from an unprejudiced reference to that credible, disinterested testimony, and which will afford him the most satisfactory proof, both of the possibility and truth of the fact.

^{*} Vol. LXXIX. p. 817.

⁴ Vol. LXXX, p. 512,

In order to avoid all further collision and dispute on this subject, which, I-fear, is now beginning to assume the appearance of personal controversy, more than a desire to promote useful information; I beg leave, Mr. Urban, to be permitted to conclude it with this remark:-Although your Correspondent has obligingly offered to furnish the publick with his servant's daily occurrent discoveries respecting the propensity of hedge-hogs to sucking cows, &c.; and although she be allowed to have the utmost vigilance in detecting, and the greatest fidelity in relating them; yet it cannot, surely, be supposed that your intelligent Readers will be better satisfied with this source of information, than that of which they are already in possession, and derived too from the actual vision of several respectable Herdsmen, the greater part of whose time, both by day and might, for a long series of years, has been anxiously occupied in superintending cattle, and defending them against the depredations of various kinds of noxious animals * which are induced to pursue them for their milk. And the better to guard their evidence from every possible suspicion, two gentlemen of unquestionable integrity and honour have voluntarily attested their veracity, and thus given ample credibility and support to it.

Notwithstanding the innate cupidity by which these sagacious little creatures are impelled by their own wants to invade man's comfort, yet, whenever it should seem absolutely requisite to deprive them of life, let not the idea of inhumanity be too hastily and inconsiderately associated with this painful act; but rather let it be benevolently imputed to a humane motive, similar to that by which skilful physicians are actuated, when they find it no less necessary to recommend the amputation of one incurable member, that the whole may not finally prove mortal. And also, let the astonishing appearance of their curious external form, and the equally wonderful habits and pursuits of their instinct, be indelibly impressed on the mind of him who inflicts it, and powerfully plead in mitigation of its severity, that the "Hand that made them is divine." W. Humphries. P. S. Since the transmission of the preceding reply, I have been favoured with a communication t from Mr. Lovegrove, a reputable farmer's son in Buckinghamshire; which is the second instance of ocular evidence that has been publicly adduced to establish the certainty of hedge-hogs sucking cows; and which, I trust, will prove to be so strong a confirmation of the former as will dissipate whatever doubt may yet remain in the minds of those gentlemen who have hitherto been of a different opinion respecting that circumstance, and other properties of this truly singular animal.

^{*} Such as hedge-hogs, stotes, weasels, cats, &c. &c.

[&]quot;During my residence in Buckinghamshire, I have frequently found hedge-hogs in the cow-layers, and once I discovered one at the dugs whilst the cow was in a recumbent posture, and have every reason to believe it had been sucking."

which coincides with the 29th of his age. Between that and the year 721 toward the end of it, the present piece was probably composed. The two first battres of the second Book, and a few epodes seem to have been all that his muse amid the troublesome and disagreeable dissipations of the Roman town life, was able to produce.

In reality, the love of Poetry (notwithstanding he shewed, even in a species nearly hordering upon prose, so eminent a talent for it) was not such a predominant passion with him, as to make the occurrence of very powerful obstacles necessary to deter him from an occupation which he had formerly, according to his own confesexpect from those who were not bis friends, from such as knew him only by the reputation he had acquired, or from his writings, an equal lenity and indulgence? It is perfectly natural that his apparent indifference to fame must have drawn upon him much censure, as the source of his prematurely stopping in that career which he had so successfully commenced: and we may casily imagine, that the malignity of the public, on investigating the causes of the long lethargy of his muse, was not much inclined to spare a man, who even in his first productions had set himself up for a censor of morals, and whose wit and pleasantry had laid him of en to so much animadversion.

* At that age it was, when he says in one of his poems.

'Ερία δε Κυπρογετώς του μοὶ Φιλα καὶ Διοτυσκ Καὶ Μυσεων, α τιθασ' ἀνδρασιν Έυθροσυνας.

A couple of lines entranslatable into our language, at which some have taken offence, perhaps merely because they did not comprehend their meaning. Indeed any one, besides Solon, might have said the same, without being the same; but nobody should presume to put such a construction upon the words of Solon as neither does nor can belong to them, for the pattry satisfaction alone of acting the part of his tutor twenty-five centuries after his decease.

GERT. MAG. May, 1811.

It was therefore high time, unless he was content to lose all that he had already gained, to step forward with a new work calculated to excite sensation: and because — for the very reason that he considered his poetry as only another method of doing nothing, and that not always the most agreeable to himself — if he should now once more tax his genius to please the public, he would fain satisfy them as far as possible once for all. These reasons induced him to present the Romans with a publication, the purport whereof should be, in a harmless and instructive tale, with the utmost urbanity and good-humour, to exhibit them all and severally, as so many arrant bedlamites. The subject, it is evident, was not without its difficulties; but it was exactly in this sort of ticklish enterprises that his principal strength lay, and where the versatility of his genius never left him at a loss for happy turns of invention. He who declares all others to be mad, must naturally put himself at the head of them. But even that was not enough, or rather it would have been far too little, for putting a fair face on the business: since it would have still always looked as though it were only pro forma, and in order to pay a sort of compliment to the rest, that he included himself in the huge musterroll. Both propriety and the interest of the piece required, that he should give a satire of this force and universality, the air of a philosophical de-To this end he ingeniously avails himself of the celebrated paradox of the Stoics: 'ΟΤΙ ΙΙΑΝΤΕΣ 'ΟΙ M Ω POI M Λ INONTAI, that all (moral) fools are (physically) mad, or wrong-headed, which, in a manner, spontaneously occurred to his mind. The scrious assertion, however, of snch a proposition, would in the poct's own person have been unbecoming, and from the mouth of some venerable master of the order of Stoics would have had too little amenity. Jest and earnest must be here so delicately administered, and so imperceptibly blended together, that with all the conviction that his arguments produce, we could not forbear laughing, as at a good comedy, though we felt ourselves hit.

Nothing could well be at once simpler and happier in all these respects, than the conceit by which Horace attains these several ends: nevertheless, I very much doubt, whether one in a thousand, who now find this conceit perfectly natural, would have fallen upon it without him. In a word, he puts the whole discourse into the mouth of Damasippus, known at the time over all Rome as a great fool; and even that not as coming from his own stock or fund, but from the mouth of another fool, Stertinius, a philosophical quack, who in virtue of his stoical beard and mantle, and two hundred and forty volumes of doclamations and argumentations on the dogmas of that sect, believes he has a sort of right to set up for the special contradictor of the whole human race.

The first advantage accruing to the poet by this contrivance, was: that his stoic, while deliberately proving that all fools are out of their wits, is not composing a satire, but merely delivering, in good carnest, an abstract of the morality of his order. Secondly, a couple of chaps like Damasippus and Stertinius— of whom one spared no man, seeing he had nothing more to lose, and therefore, because by his folly he had reduced himself to beggary, had an interest in augmenting the host of the crazy as much as possible; and the other was authorized by his profession to adopt the cynical andacity — a couple of such fellows could blurt out home truths, without offence. Thirdly, Horace, by assigning to a fool the part of telling him to his face, the various censures that were passed upon him at Rome, saves himself the disagreeable trouble of an apology, and has the satisfaction of disarming and silencing his censors, by rendering it impossible for them to say any thing worse of him than he, without disguise, in very beautiful verses and with the best grace in the world, has already said and admitted. And in short, what was the marrow of the business, this contrivance procures him a fair opportunity and ample materials for making himself merry, as it were by one expence, at Damasippus and Stertinius, at the pretended philosophers of his time, at his adversaries and critics, at the various classes of fools and blockheads, in a word, at all mankind, which must confer additional honour on his genius, his taste, and his dexterity in the Socratic method of reasoning on human affairs. For this last appears almost at every turn, though with such an incorporated alloy of stoical sophistry, as was requisite to the character of Stertinius. To conclude, he prudently says not a word in windication of hunself against the charges of sloth and voluptuous indolence, that had (probably even by his friends) been objected to him, he even appears to plead guilty without The only proper comree he had to take in his own defence, was all at once to come out with a larger and more finished work, than any that had hitherto been seen from his hand: and that was what he did.

LICOSE

Ipsis Saturnalibus huo fugisti.] That is, to his Sabine estate, as presently afterwards in the 10th line we are more plainly informed. The Saturnalia fell in the middle of December. Therefore not the season when people generaily went into the country; and Horace, as Damasippus thinks, could have no other reason for choosing such a time of year, and that precisely in the helidays, when all Rome was for three days and more successively engaged in merriment, to run from the pleasures of the town, than for the purpose of self-recollection at his little farm, and, after a pause too long for his reputation, to compose something that might answer the expectation which he himself had raised in the public entid, by so singular a flight from Rome. - Moreover, it deserves here to be remarked, that this is the first time that Horace mentions his Sabinam, and as it happens very often and on every occas on in his following pieces; we have good grounds for concluding that he had only a little before, perhaps not till the present year, at least not prior to the year 720, been put in possession of it by Mæcenas.

Aristophanes, whom he elsewhere names in a similar view), were therefore the writers with whose works he nourished his muse, upon which he modelled his genius, and who so richly provided him with the attic salt, and the Socratic spirit, which communicate such a pleasing poignancy, such a charming association of philosophy, wit, and pleasantry to his own writings, and by them so striking a pre-emi-, nence to every other production of Roman literature! It is true, these Greeks could not have imparted to him all this, had not nature previously endowed him with that felicitous disposition, which constituted him her intellectual kinaman. With all this disposition, however, had it not been for his early sojourn at Athens, and the practice of the advice which he gives to young poets, vos exemplaria Graca

him to diversify his reading. But here appears to be a particular design at bottom. Horace began about this time to try his genius in the lyric species of versification; the epodes were the first that he ventured of the kind, and Archilochus, as we are informed by Plutarch, was the inventor of the epode. Or perhaps it was to work himself up to transport by reading the iambics of that antient bard, of whose fire and poignant salt, the Greeks related such mighty effects, for finishing the iambics which had so long been owing by him to Maccenas. Mæcenas had (to use his own expression) dunned hun to death! for these promised iambics, and with inquiries when they would at last be ready. He had pleaded in excuse, his

^{*} See Gent. Mag. Volume LXXVIII. p. 493.

[†] Mollis inertia cur tantam diffuderit imis Oblivionem scusibus, &c.

Candule Macenas, occulis sape rogando.
1) us, deus nam me vetat

Inceptos, olun promissum carmen, iambos Ad umbilicum adducere. Epod. xiv.

passion for Phryne; but as that nymph was only a libertina, neque uno contenta, this plea could not long be of any validity, and the commenced lambics must be made fit for presentation. These perhaps were the very lambics, ad Canidiam, with which the epodes conclude, at least they are the only ones found in the works of our poet. They contain so much of the spirit of Archilochus, that we may easily suppose that Horace finished them at this opportunity, and therefore took the Greek iambic poet for his companion. — A neat allusion to the comites, which the great men took with them when they went into the country.

Vitanda est improba syren desidia. Horace in more than one place accuses himself of a disposition to laziness, and marks a proneness to rest from the labour of doing nothing, as a feature of his character; as in fact it is perhaps a general lineament in that of all who are born poets. Inertes horæ and prope rivum somnus in herba, are in their estimation essential parts of a happy life, and their genius is generally never more and better occupied, They may than in those idle hours. justly adopt the old paradox quiescendo laboro. Here, however, the question turns on a different species of indolence, on the mollis inertia, on account whereof, he, in the above cited epode, excuses himself to Mæcenas; to be short, on the sloth of an Epicuri de grege porcellus, to whom love, wine, and sleep leave neither time nor inclination to the nobler occupations of the mind. The promptitude with which he appears to acquiesce in this reproach, is not, however, the effrontery of a scurra, qui dum risum quatiat neque sibi ipsi parcit, as Baxter, who sometimes talks in his sleep, affirms in a note on the passage, me libertina, neque uno contenta Phryne mucerat, (epod. xiv.) It is rather a simple observation, thrown out to mollify his censors by the frankness with which he exposes to them his weak side; or even to give them a gentle hint that he is rich enough not to care about a petty loss; that he was well aware of the true reason why they took such a lively interest in his conduct, and would not deprive them of the pleasure of speaking ill of him; since it did them so much good, but could in reality do him no harm; since it depended entirely on himself at any time to confute their malignant censures by facts.

Dii te, Damasippe, deceque verum ob consilium, donent tonsure! If the professed stoics began about this time to become ridiculous and contemptible, their own behaviour was at least as much to blame for it, as the prevailing manners, and the general metions, which had imperceptibly changeed with the political constitution. They had heretolore stood in about the same relative position to the cynics, as the minorites did to the capuchins: the difference, however, was progressively diminishing from day to day, and the stoics affected, like their canine brethren, to go ill-combed, to let their beards grow long, and to distinguish themselves from well-bred men, by dirt, slovenliness, and impudence. With many of them, penury might perhaps be the real reason of their adopting filth and rags as the garb of wisdom; and this circumstance Horace appears to have had in view, when, with such a comically pious mien, he wishes that all the gods and goddesses would reward Damasiphus for his good advice, with a barber f

Frequentia compita. Where the auctions were held, as the Cruquian scholiast informs us. Mercuriale momen, for the name Mercurius. Damasippus, who here pourtrays himself as well as ever any painter drew ·his own likeness, had for his family name Junius (as the scholiasts relate). and is doubtless the identical Damesippus, who offered himself as the purchaser of certain statues, which Cicero would fain have got rid of. This latter had commissioned a friend to purchase for him some fine statues, with which he intended to adorn his The friend, who Arpinatian villa. probably was a connoisseur, and in the purchase had looked solely to the exquisite beauty of the workmanship, had bought for him three bacchante a Mars, and another anonymous figure: but the price he paid was far too much for the purse of the great consul, and for his moderate admiration of the art.—" Thou hast paid more for them," writes Cicero to his commissioner, "than I would give for all the statues in the world." - Accordingly he had it very much at heart that Damasippus should take them at the same price; if not (says he), we must look out for a pseudo-Damasiption at that time much debated among the elegantiones; namely, whether the so highly prized Corinthian brass was a composition with which the antients were already well acquainted; or, whether, as was generally believed, it originated entirely by chance on the destruction of the city of Corinth by the Consul Maningus; ? By the epithet vafer ille the poet alludes to the stories related by the Greeks concerning this Sisyphus, who, in the heroic ages, was said to have reigned at Isphyra and Corinth, and whence the proverb, Σισυφα μαχαναι, Sisyphus's tricks, derived its origin.

Stertmus, who so opportunely comes to the relief of the desperate Damasippus, by pointing out to him a sovereign remedy for his misfortune, was, according to all appearance, a person who might be laughed at, without trespassing on philosophy. On the credit of a scholiast he is affirmed to have wrote 220 volumes oxen :

Mater te appello clamantibus.] The Iliona was at that time a celebrated tragedy of Pacuvius; and his muter te appello is often quoted by Cicero as a scene which produced a sensation altogether extraordinary. The ghost of the murdered, and as yet unburied Polydorus, appears to his sleeping mother, and addresses her in these words:

Mater, to appello, tu quæ curam somno suspenso levas,

Neque te mei miseret : surge & sepeli natum, &c.

In the representation of this tragedy, at which the ridiculous event here related fell out, a certain Fufius played the Iliona, and one named Taticnus the ghost of Polydorus. The rest is perspicuous enough in the text. Probably, this disaster had recently happened to poor Fufius, and was therefore still fresh in every one's memory.

Scribe decem à Nerio: non est satis; adde Cicutæ, &c.] Nerius and Perillius Cicuta, were, as we may guess without the aid of an interpreter, two well-known renowned bankers, of whom, at the rate of a competent per-centage, money was always to be had. Cicuta appears once more farther on, better, as the caput repræsentativum of all usurers and harpagons. Scribe decem à Nerio, here, from the construction, is as much as to say: Let him give ten bonds or obligations to Nerius (for the money lent him)*. Of the fancied obscurity of this passage, which occasioned Gronovius and other learned critics, to mistake these two bankers for lawvers, Horace seems to be perfectly innocent. The nodum in scirpo querere is by far too frequently applicable to grammarians when they interpret poets.

^{* (}neero epist, ad Familiar. vii. 23.

⁺ Ad Attic. xi. 29.

Confer Pin, hist. nat. lib. xxxiv. cap. 2.

Arbitrio Arri.] Probably one of the two brothers who are afterwards more distinctly described as prodigious spendthrifts. Staberius could adopt no better means of binding his heirs to the performance of that clause in his last will, which he had so much at heart, than by ordaining, that in case of non-compliance, they should incur the penalty of giving an entertainment to the whole Scuate, of which a prodigal like Arrius should have the W.T. management.

ON PRISONS. LETTER LXX.

O divine Amitié, felicité parfaite; Seul mouvement de l'âme où l'excés soit permis!+

King of Prussia's Letters.

Sambrook-Court, April 14. S Mr. Neild observes in the fol-A lowing Letter, that I accompanied him in his visit to the prison described, I can cordially unite in his narrative, of its excellent state and Every person has probably experienced events in life, so impressive, as to afford certain fixed data in their enjoyments, which no vicissitudes obliterate, no subsequent events extinguish. Of gratifications commenced at a certain period, never to be forgotten, is that which fixed my friendship with that distinguished visitor of prisons and friend of the prisoner; management.

and his kind acceptance of my company in the present instance, I remember with pleasure, and recall with gratitude. If I have occasionally introduced his name with encomium, it has not been with his knowledge, for he has uniformly repressed every expression of this kind whenever he has seen my letters prior to their having been committed to the press; but if ardour of feeling, or excess of expression, are admissible, it is under the influence of disinterested and sincere friendship, agreeably to the motto adopted by J. C. LETTSOM.

The County GAOL. SURREY. and Bridewell. Gaoler, James Ives, Salary, £300, and if the Debtor's fees should not amount to an additional 2100 per annum, the County to make up to him the deficiency. Also, for the Bridewell, £50. For the conveyance of Transports he makes a bill, and is allowed the expence. Fees, as per Table. Garnish, abolished. Chaplain, Rev. William Mann. prayers and sermon on Sunday; and prayers on Tuesday and Thursday. Salary, £50. and £30. as secretary to the visiting committee. Surgeons, Messrs. Saumarez and Dixon. Salary, £75. for prisoners of every description, in the Gaol and Bridewell's and £5. for travelling charges, to report, at the Quarter Sessions, the state of the prisoners,

Number of Prisoners, 1809, April 18th: debtors, 61, felons, &c. 71, Bridewell, 37. Allowance, One pound and a half of bread per day, to prisoners of every description, except those debtors who receive sixpence a day from their plaintiffs.

This noble building HEMARKS. does honour to the County. It is situated in an open and airy part of Horsemonger-lane, in the parish of St. Mary Newington, in the county of Surrey. The boundary wall encloses about three acres and half of ground The Sessions house adjoins it, to which there is a communication from the prison; and a housekeeper is appointed to keep it clean, with a suitable salary, and apartments for her use.

The Gaol, which is likewise the county Bridewell, was first inhabited on the 3d of August, 1798, and has in front, the Turnkey's lodge, on the ground floor of which is a day room, another room with a cold bath; and a third is the wash-house, with an oven, ^{*} Scribere (as the scholiast here rightly observes) is in the law-language the same as to borrow; rescribere signifies to repay the borrowed sum.

[†] Oh divine Friendship, perfection of felicity!

Thine are the only emotions of the soul m which excess is good!

to sleep spacious recuted.

Judge, an re stone which is and from s are in-here is a tone, 75 ome iron h air is d in the 6, under r. Close et by 20, ave likewise sixteen sleeping-rooms, each 14 feet 6 by 9 feet 3, with an iron grated and glazed window. For these they pay as per table, which is printed and stuck up on the master's side, for the inspection of all persons whatever.

Common side debtors have also a court-yard, with arcades, a day-room, and 12 sleeping-rooms, the same as those on the master's side: But they sleep in hammocks, and find their own bedding.

Women debtors have a court-yard, about 20 feet square; a day room, 18 feet square; and four sleeping-rooms, the same size as the men's, with wooden bedsteads: to which they also find their own bedd ug, and pay nothing.

The men felous are of tour classes; each of which has a spacious courtyard, neatly paved with Yorkshire stone, and in size about 87 feet by 30, for the prisoners to take air and exercise in fine weather; or, if it be otherwise, they walk under areades paved with flag stone; of about 48 feat by 27; also a day room for each class, 27 feet by 90, to dress their victuals in.

Each felon has a cell 8 feet 3 by 6 feet 9; with mongrated window 4 feet by 2, a wooden inside shutter, a circular ventuator, 18 inches diameter, in the middle of each cell, a wooden inside door and an iron grated one to each. They are firmshed with an elm-plank bedstead, only 22 inches wide, a flock bed, and pillow, two brankets and a rog: the bedding is shaken and rolled up, and the cells lare cleaned every morning.

Here are likewise four day-rooms, with boarded floors, occasionally used for convicts under sentence of death;

each about 26 feet by 18, with a fireplace, a table, and beaches, and 3, windows, 6 feet by 3, iron-barred and glazed.

The women felons have also a court-yard about 70 feet by 30, with arcades, day-room, cells, furniture, and accommodations, the same as the men felons. Convicts here under sentence of transportation do not receive the King's Allowance of 2s. 6d. per week.

The lobbies of this prison are all well ventilated, and 6 feet three inches wide.

Pumps are fixed in all the courtyards; Thames water is laid on, and at the top of the four corners of the gaol is a reservoir, each containing about 800 gallons of water, supplied from a well by a forcing pump.

Here are four spacious airy rooms, each 25 feet by 16, in a detached building, set apart as infirmaries, fitted up with flock beds, blankets, pillows, and rugs; and adjoining to them are court-yards 30 feet square, for convalencents to walk in. Also two rooms for nurses, another for the surgeon, and a fourth with a warm bath.

The Chapel is a very neat structure, where the prisoners are scated in their different classes; and all are required to attend Divine Service who receive the county allowance.

There are in this excellent prison no less than four cold baths, one warm bath, and an oven for purifying infected or offensive clothing. Of sleeping-cells there are on the ground floor 15; first story 82; and second story 80. Total 177. Debtors committed hither from the king's Bench for any offence, pay no fees now whatever, as formerly was the custom.

There is in the gaol a list of Ten Legacies and Donations. Some of the charities are for debtors expressly; the others are not so distinguished; but debtors have them all. In the title of the paper it is said "The gaol was formerly called the White Lion Prison." The common seal of the prison is a hon rampant. One of the legacies was bequeathed by Eleanor Grynn, from which are seat to this prison, once in eight weeks, exty-five penny loaves.

Whatever money is collected in Chapel, at what are called the condemned sermons, is paid into the hands of the chaplain, and by him laid out for the benefit of the prisoners, in coals, meat, and other necessaries, at his discretion.

It once was customary for the executioner to demand, and by some means or other to procure six shillings and eight pence, from the criminal, on his way to execution. This inhuman practice was discontinued on the 16th

July 1799.

Excellent rules and orders are made for the government of this gaol, which are fixed up in four different parts of it. The magistrates visit the prison in regular monthly rotation:

- their remarks are entered in a book; and every time the Committee meets, the surgeon also enters in his book the state of health in which he finds the prisoners.

All of them are discharged in a morning, after breakfast, and have from one to five shillings given them, according to their distance from home.

The Lent assizes for the county of Surrey are always held at Kingston, and during that time the prisoners of this gaol are confined at the Stock Mouse, and the house of Correction. The Summer Assizes are once in two years at Guildford, and the prisoners then kept at the Bridewell there.

Every other summer they are held at Croydon, and during the time were confined, heretofore, in stables, which are now properly converted into alarge room suitable for the purpose.

The Act for preservation of Health, and the Clauses against Spirituous Liquors, are conspicuously hung up; and the whole prison is remarkably clean.

The Bridewell or House of Correction, formerly situate in St. George's Fields, is now enclosed within the boundary wall of the County Gaol. Keeper, John Spreadbury. Salary £50. and a share in the prisoners' earnings, as hereafter mentioned. He is under the controll of the gaoler, but receives his Salary from the county, and the magistrates only have the power to dismiss him. Fees none.

For the men prisoners here are two spacious airy court-yards paved with I orkshire flag-stones, about 37 feet each by 29, for exercise in fine weather, and two arcades each 27 feet by 23, paved with flag-stones. Also one large workshop of 37 feet square, for those male prisoners who are employed in picking oakum and knotting yarn. Each prisoner has a cell 8 feet 3 inches by 6 feet 9, with an irongrated window 4 feet by 2, a wooden inside shutter, circular ventilator 18 inches diameter, double door, and bedsteads and bedding provided, taken care of, and cell cleaned every morning, the same in all respects as those in the county gaol for the felons.

The women prisoners have one spacious and airy court-yard, of about 27 feet by 23, together with a workshop, cells, bedding, &c. the same, and their employment also, as the men prisoners.

The following is an account of the receipt and net profit of the prisoners' KARNINGS, from Michaelmas 1802 to Michaelmas 1803:

Nett profit to balance 58 $ 1

The average number of Prisoners during the above year was 50. Of the balance, thirty pounds were laid out under the direction of the Rev. Secretary and Chaplain, in meat, coals, &c. and the remainder distributed as the visiting Committee thought pro-

Nett profit to balance 58 3 0

During the above year the average number of prisoners was 45. Thirty pounds of the balance were, as before, laid out in coals and meat by the Rev. Secretary, and the remainder in sundry articles for their use, under the direction of the visiting Committee.

chaelmas 1807, I have similar accounts, but the two statements here given

mij

opportunity to pay my acknowledgements to the Right Honourable Lord Leslie, to Sir Thomas Turtou, Bart. M. P. for the Borough of Southwark, and to the Visiting Magistrates who did you and myself the honour to accompany us over every part of this well-regulated Gaol. The cleaniness and good order that prevail throughout it, I have not failed to notice in my publications on Prisons and imprisoned Debrors; and to it most probably may be ascribed its singular healthinem; twelve persons only having died by illness once the 3d August, 1798, when it was first inhabited, aithough the average number of prisoners in it is, and has been annually, from 150 to I am, dear Sir, 200.

Yours truly, JAMES NEILD. To Dr. Lettsom, London.

Mr. URBAN. Tunstall, April 6. THE cel brated objection of Mr. Gibbon, that Our Lord foretold his second coming to judge the world in the generation in which he lived, I had flattered myself I had found an adequate solution of, in the plain and simple, but undemable fact, that the Gospel history is an history of the great Controversy between Our Lord and his Countrymen, whether he was the person whom they expected as their Memah, or whether, to use the language of St. Luke, they were to look for another. So important has this subjectappeared to mc, that I have endea-GRNT. MAG. May, 1811.

superior excellence.

I am. ! trust, very far from wishing to depreciate the real ment of Bishop Horsley, or of his Sermons; but his criticism upon the subject in which I am more immediately concerned, appear to me to have no claim whatever to the title of profound. On the contrary, I will venture to assert that they are unally unworthy of his great name, and have a tendency, most maternally, to injure the cause of Christian ty. Who, for instance, but the Bishop, could have imagined that when Our Lord said—there are some standing here, Matt. xvi 28. he meant one individual only, and that individual Judas the Traiter ? but he could have put any other construction upon the phrase tasting of death in this passage, than that of dying? Or who, besides himself, could have leduced the awful doctring of the eternity of hell terments from a verse in which there is not the most distant allusion to it? How much more natural would it have been for the Bishop to have referred to Our

Lord's original language that the kingdom of heaven was at hand, for an explanation of this passage; more especially as it is firmly supported by its connexion with a conversation which Our Lord had just had with his disciples upon the opinion which was held concerning him?

As it appears that the Bishop totally mistook the meaning of this verse, so there is abundant evidence that he was likewise greatly mistaken in his interpretation of the question of the disciples, and of Our Lord's language in consequence of his prediction of the destruction of Jerusalem. The phrase of Our Lord's coming, he says, wherever it occurs, in his prediction of the Jewish War, is to be taken in its literal meaning, as denoting his coming in person, in visible pomp and glory, at the general judgment. With respect to the question of his Disciples-What shall be the sign of thy coming? there is nothing in their sentiments or conduct at this period, which will justify the putting such a meaning upon it. As the prediction of the destruction of Jerusalem was totally incompatible with all their ideas of the nature of the Messiah's character, nothing could have been more natural than for the Disciples to apply to Jesus for information how such a prediction could be reconciled with their expectations of his being the Messiah. And that Our Lord understood this to be the great object of their question, is demonstrable from his immediately proceeding to caution them against looking out for others who might assume the Character of the Messiah, and from his again aud again repeating his caution to Them upon this head. His anxiety to support their expectations of his coming as the Messiah, also appears conspicuous from his telling them, after having mentioned various signs of the destruction predicted, that as the lightning cometh out of the East and shineih even unto the West; so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be. But lest this should not be sufficient fully to convey his meaning, Our Lord proceeds to give them the following very explicit and direct information upon the subject in the form of parable: Now learn a parable, or instruction, from the fig-tree. When its branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh; so likewise ye, when ye shall see all thest things—all the things he had been predicting-know that it-or, as St. Luke has it,-know that the 1 lingdom of Gol is nigh at hand.

Here again-if Our Lord's original language, - that the Kingdom of Hour. ven was at kand, had been attended to, a most easy and natural interpretation of the phrase the Kingdom of God, in the Parable, would have presented itself, and it must have been perceived that it was a direct answer to the question of the Disciples—what shall be the sign of thy coming? I this was not the meaning of the question of the Disciples and of Our Lord's answer to it, there would appear to be no consistency or bond of connexion between the several pasts of the Gospel history, and in fact nothing which would enable any one to judge with precision of their meaning. But who is there who does not see, upon the slightest inspection of the Gospel history, that it was the grand object of the whole of it, to establish the truth of Our Lord's crigmal declaration that the Kingdom of Heaven, or of the Messiah, was at hand? Who does not see the extreme propriety of the question of the Disciples, when, by the prediction of the destruction of Jerusalem. Our Lord had, in their opinion, been annihilating the very foundation of all their expectations that he was the Messiah? Who; in short, does not, under such circumi: stances, see the absolute necessity of his repeating his declaration that it was at hand, notwithstanding his prediction? If this is not genuine himerical evidence, and that too of the highest kind, I know not what is it is

But there is, it seems, another ques tion which Bishop Horsley considered as decisive; that the question of the. Disciples—what shall be the sign of . thy coming? means his coming at the general judgment; for they furth ask-What shall be the sign of the end of the world? Expositors, indeed, the Bishop says, suppose that, by the end of the World, the Apost tles meant the end of that particular age, during which the Jewish Church and State were destined to last , but he ridicules this interpretation, as 4 puerile refinement of verdal criticism founded upon what they call the idioms of the Jewish language, which however, he says, are no idioms would, in my humble opinion, be ensentially detective. But that it is not to, this slight view of the subject must, I think, convince every dispassionate enquirer; and if he wishes to have a full view of this subject, I must refer him to my 'Triumphs of Christianity over Infidelity'—to my 'Letters illustrative of the Gospel H story'—or to my list publication in reply to Bishops Newton, Porteus, and Horsley, and Sir Henry Moncrief Wellwood.

I have, it may be observed, taken no notice of any passage in the Epistles where the phrase the coming of christ occurs — but I have, in a distinct treatise, I think satisfactority, shewn that when St. Paul says, 2 Thess. ii. 1, 'Now concerning the coming of (hrist,' he did not aliude to his coming at the general judgment, but to the destruction of Jerusalem. When St. Peter again says — We have not followed cunningly-devised fubles when we importance of this system — but I know too well that nothing is so difficult as to produce a general conviction of any truth, however clearly it may be proposed. But I have so far performed my part. The rest must be left to the gradual operation of time and reflection.

N. NISBETT.

ARCHITECTURAL INNOVATION. No. CLIV.

As I adventured to give "Remarks" on "An Historical Survey of the Ecclesiastical Antiquities of France,"by the late Rev.G.D. Whittington, commencing vol. LXXIX.
p. 523; it may be conjectured that I should not be wholly stient on an answer just submitted to the Publick, intituled, "A Treatise on the Ecclestastical Antiquities of Englare during the Middle Ages," by the Rev. J.
Milner, D. D. At my onset of comment on the production of the Adulator of the French, after professing to "take up such opinions only as came in contact with my professional experience," I suggested an idea that the historical part of his performance would "call forth some other hand to ecrutinize its authenticity." In this hope I have not been disappointed; the learned and patriotic Dr. Milner having, in the hearing of many friends, declared, he took up the cause in honour of his Country, from the imperious necessity which ho found impressed upon his mind, when perusing the following words in my Remarks," p. 525: "It is a pity that no accurate and diligent Beeleoinsticulike our author (Whitlington,) has not found time or inclination to ascertain the names of our antient Archilects in the same zealous way that he has done for those of France." This circumstance, I am proud to own, is a rich reward for all my labours past; it comforts me in the present hour of trial; and encourages me still to "pursue my course in the path of Arskilectural Innovation, with courage, constancy, and truth.

I shall follow the Doctor's clue of conviction in like manner as I did the Reverend gentleman's thread of Gailic prepossession; and therefore thus take up the Preface. The Doctor sets out with this observation, that the systems of learned and ingenious men, when treating on the subject of Pointed Architecture, have caused much variety of debate concerning its grandeur, beauty, and invention. Can Ihere forbear to reap another plenteous harvest of self-gratification, infinding my long, long arduous task of driving from the art the odious " nick-name Gothic" accomplished? Pointed Architecture!" Soon, I augur, will the designation become general in all Essays professedly composed on this point of national pride.

The Doctor then informs us that he first brought forward the subject in his Histors of Winchester, and that he conceived the "whole style of Pointed Architecture grew by degrees out of the simple Pon ted such; that the Pointed arch itself was discovered by observing the happy effect of those intersecting semicircular arc. es, with which the Architects of the 11th and 18th centuries were accustomed to ornament their principal edifices; and that we are injected to our Ancestors for the pr this bead, tain Judgi and that aition in leads then ther then eyes, and people, et destroyers ingenious curious di own highenterprisis: theless, we first peop Pointed A and attain prowess a general, a clesiastical that any a duced."

The Doctempted to tion, that I tilute of a tions; " tilute order illustrated the work. view of C Century. York Mirs X. Interior pel, 16th Century: The Doctor abserves, that Gervase, a Monk of Canterbury Cathedral, in his account of the building, "never once intimated that the style of it, or any part of it, was borrowed from Syria. Arabia. France, Spain, or Italy; but that he appears to attribute the merit of the whole chiefly to the ingenuity of its two Architects, both of them of the name of William."

Henry Vilth's Chapel, the Doctor asserts, " will arrest the eye, and galathe chief and unqualified applaces of many a speciator," and " that its characteristic features are magnificence, ingenuity, delicacy, and clegance," an alludes to the "enthusiastic" idea. " knit together by the finger's of megels." Nevertheless, the Doctor gives his opinion that the design is " too gurgeous, and too elaborate to preduce the proper effect of such a structure in its highest degree," and the the mind " will turn with pleasure t contemplate, the chasic and appe priate decorations of the Se Pointed Or ed in Y Minster. the o Livery ments is du suboruntare to the preper effects on the sacred fane, awfulness and devotion." After 'going through the principal features of the interior, he thus has it, " In short, so no spectator, who has eyes to see, and a soul to feel, would wish a single ornament removed or altered, so, it is presumed, no observer would recommend the addition of a single new ornament to it." The Doctor has preferred interior views, for illustrating his work, to exter or ones; "because, whatever pains our ingenious Ancestors bestowed on the façades (West fronts), their chief art and magnificence was expended on the inside of them. Their object was to ex ite devout sensations, for the sake of which the Pointed Style itself was invented. In this point their ideas differed essentially from modern Ar-Chitects, whose endeavours at something grand are manifested externally, which, however, dre away at the first of glimpse of their niked and mean interiors." The Dector thus concludes his Preface:

" The claims of our Ancestors in both respects, that is to say, both as to the discovery and the improve-ment of Pointed Architecture, have been wirmly contested, of late, by a Divine of extensive reading and acute observation, and by a young Nobleman of the greatest hopes to Science, both of whom seem to have travelled. as well as to have written, in order to prove that this style appeared earlier. and was carried to greater perfection in France than in ringland. These pretensions have been opposed with equal warmth and firms excly an Archilectural Andiquiry *, to whom his professional art is more indebted for its diastration, for the preservation of some of its choicest meanments, sad for directing aright the public opinion and taste concerning it, than to any other individual wao isoevert. There certainly has been too much warmth on both miles. Controverse s in general, particular y oa scientific in be i rev. SHU WILLIA or o not c UNIX υŦ VН un that 115 pas on H 1 miticar ev :e wione." FECT. A 5 44 6 (To be continued.)

Ma.
STIL Stut
good F
"Enem
neral o Phanto light;"
trivance window up. In the thic
looms,

Ac.; but in our antient buildings no such object can be encountered as a part of the first work. Now as professional men cannot divest themselves of their daily practice; we must not be over-surprised, if we stumble upon Skylights in their designs in the "Gothic" manner as they call it, or an their improvements made on our old works. For example-----Strawberry Hill: A Skylight in the centre of the Gothic Tribune. Lee, the seat of the late T. Barrat, Esq. near Canterbury : Skylighte in the Gothic Library. and Saloon attached to it. Skylight in the Gothic anti-room, lately contrived at the East end of the Crypt of St. Stephen's Chapel, Westminster. Skybgbt, done some six or seven years back, in the centre of the modern Gothic groin-work to the chancel, since flattened down to a large circular Drawing-room compartment, with a scenic effect of printed clouds, &c. St. Margaret's Church, Westminster. Skylights introduced into the groms of the side a les of St. Mary Aldermary, Bow-lane

Thus nght-catching expedient might be traced in different parts of the kingdom; but the above List will be sufficient to prove, as well as in OATH, that "many a true word may be spoke in jest;" and shew, that if a Skylight can be knocked up in one instance, it can in abother. "Prevention (of course) is better than cure."

J. Carter,

In Mr. Ur am simple the Voscillative + The good Ductor will, he donot, be thought too partial in estoper on of that individual, who is notwinged more a said in his behalf, than he can possilly lay claim to, let his endeagours have been what they may.

Mr. URBAN, Exeter, April 12.

A LITTLE time since, I met with, in an old library, a singular and rure little Pook of Roads, published about 170 years ago; and as books of this class are commonly very shortlived, perhaps it may be unknown to collectors; if you will, therefore, permit a description of it to appear in your interesting Miscellany, I think it will amuse many of your Readers.

Printer of the Excter Gazette.

The size of this book is rather more than 5 inches long by 2½ broad, containing 262 pages, and neatly adapted for the pocket; the title page,

" The

EUROPEAN MERCURY:

Describing the Highways and Stages from place to place through the most remarkable parts of Christendome.

With a Catalogue of the principall Fairs, Marts, and Markets thorowout the same.

By J. W. (Jumes Wad.worth) Gent, Usefull for all Gentlemen who delight in seeing foraign Countries; and instructing Merchants where to meet with their conveniences for trade.

London, printed by I. R. for H. Twyford, and are to be sold at the Three Daggers in Fleet-street, near the Inner Temple Gate.

1641.*"

The Treatise is introduced with two epistolary dedications, the first addressed to

"The Worshipfull Robert Tracey, esq. Coronet of Horsemen to the Right Honourable Edward Viscount Conoway, Lord General of the Horse."

The second to

The right Honourable, Noble, and Worshipfull, the Nobility and Gentry of England, addicted to History or Travell."

Afterwards follows an address to the Reader, which concludes with Latin and English verses, viz.

" Qui cupis Europæ, Lector, percurrere fines
A patria tutas & minus ire vias,
Dux hic noster erit parvus (mihi crede) libel-lus,

Quem tibi conquiras ære perexigua.
"Thou that wouldst knowledge and experience gaine,

By travelling France, Italy and Spain, With other parts, be Mercury thy guide, And censure, when his Journall thou hast try'd. This winged Poste, that leadeth to all parts Will guide thee to most Fayres, Staples, and Marts;

To Academes, the nurseries of Arts:
The goodly townes of Florence, Rome and

Naples:

That when thou art returned, thou maist

Thanks to the guide, and never grudge his

A short preface of a page and a half precedes the body of the work. The cities and towns on the continent are historically related, and interspersed with curious remarks. The laconic account of Florence will present an idea of the author's style:

"This Florence is a most fair and stately city, as any in all Italy, and full of trading; thorow which passeth the river Arno, which goes into the sea at Legorne, and it hath four stately, bridges over it, whereof one is called the old bridge, being al' built with houses. There are likewise three strong castles, two stately palaces, belonging to the Duke of Florence, the old and new, with a stately gailery, which is adorned with all sorts of pictures and statues, and rooms within, wherein are preserved the most exceilent cabinets of all sorts of jewels and precious. stones, and as much variety as the world cap afford; as likewise a most complete armory, both of old and new; as also a most famous Monastery in the said city, called Nuciciata, whose church is adorned with pictures of many Popes, Kings, Dukes, Captains, Loids, and they are done in statures as if they were alive. And to speak of the great Church, and the Ball or Coupaia upon the Church, wherein eighteen men may stand, and the brasse doores, which was brought from Jerusalem; and St. Laurence's Church, where the great Dukes of Florence are buried, and that new Church which is building by it, to transfer their bodies into it: It would take up a whole volume to descrie and set forth the severall antiquities, statures there remaining."

Mr. Wadsworth, having allowed upwards of 200 pages in his travelling directions and details of foreign places, offers a little instruction in the method of travelling in those days, which is expressed with peculiar originality.

"THE INSTRUCTION OF THE VOYAGE TO JERUSALEM.

"Having promised before, to every one that desires to make this voyage, or at least understand it; it is as followeth: First of all, he that will undergo it, must dispose of himself in that manner, that his final end be, wholly to visit and contemplate those most holy places, wherein our Saviour.

^{*} It appears to have been printed three years before; for at the end of the book itsays; "Imprimatur Tho. Wykes, March -23, 1639.

please God to call him out of this miserable world that no part of a Christian be wanting in him. Thirdly, let him carry two purses with him, one well filled with patience, and the other 260 crowns in it, or or at least 150, siz. one hundred for the voyage, for it will cost every man so much, that hath regard of his life and walfare; the other fifty crowns are to keep him in sicknesse, or if any misfortune befall him. Pourthly, let han carry with him a warm suit of cloathes, to wear at his return in winter; likewise good store of shirts to keep himself clean from nastinesse and lice; caps, drawers, towels, and other necessaries; then let him go to Venue, for there he shall find the most commodious passage of any city in the world, there being every year, on Ascension-day, a galliasse assigned onely or the carrying of Pilgrims and Traveilers thitner, and although he shall sinde other ships that will carry him cheaper, let him not abandon the g uhasse, for it will be more safe and secure for han; then let him agree with the Captain of the galley, who will not demand above sixty crowns at the most for him, both for victuals, carrying, and re-carrying, excepting when he comes to shore, he must pay for his horshyer, and the usual tribute of the Turks. Then let him make a litt e tent to lye in, buying a pallat to ive on, and other necessaries as he tamks fit. Also let him carry two small barrels, one of wine, and Likewise let him buy another of water Lombard's cheese, sasages, neat's tongues, and other salt meats, of all sorts; white brsket, a small quantity of all sorts of sweet meats, and above all the sirrop of piolets, and green ginger preserved, for these will stand great stead, both by sea and land, with some preserve of roses. In the gally let him get his lodging as neer as he can in the middle, for it is have a weak head, there he will be lesse tost, and have more ayr. And after that he comes to land in Turkey, let him furnish himself with egges, chickens, bread, sweet meats and fruits, for in this voyage he must not be mggard of his purse. Let his apparel be decent and plain, and his purse somewhat free, with small guits, both to the of-

" HIGH WAYEL

"Winsor is a brave place, and hath great store of Parks, and a brave forcest about it; and you may go to it by Kingston, which is 10 in his from London, and two in les beyond it is Himpton Court, a stately palace of his Majestie, worth one's eyesight, and five miles beyond it, is Outlands another house of pleasure of his Majesties; and thence you may go to Winsor, which is some seven or eight miles further."

"In the way from London to Dover, I would not have the stranger neglect the sight of the King's Navie, and the "great ship, there being not the like in the world; which fleet lyes at Chattam, two miles from the city of Rochester: and Dover-Castle is worth the viewing; and thence you may go over sens to France. Much more in ght, ave been said, but because of orevity sake I omit it."

LITERARY INTELLIGENCE.

Cambridge, April 13. The subject of the Scatonian Prize Poem for the present year is, The Sufferings of the Primitive Martyrs.

* A MS, note calls this The Great Hurry; but this seems to be a mistake, as that vessel is mentioned by several writers to have been destroyed long before.

Cambridge,

Cambridge, April 26. The subjects for the Prizes given by the Members for the University for the present year, are,—Senior Bachelors, Utrum in optima Dialogorum ratione, Antiqui Recentioribus sint præponendi?—Middle Bachelors, Studiorum quæ in Academia sant instituta laus et utilitas.

Cambridge, May 6. The Norrisian Prize in this year adjudged to Rev. John Taddy, M. A. late Fellow of Trinity College, for his essay on the following subject—The divisions of Christians are not inconsistent with the truth of Christianity.

The Prizes bequeathed by the late Provost of Eton, Dr. Davies, for the best compositions in prose and verse, on themes selected by the head Master, have this year been gained,—the one by Mr. Dampier, subject "Moses servotus:" the other by Mr. Daniell, subject "Augustus de Populo Romano bene meritus est."

The Royal Irish Academy have proposed a premium of 50l. to the writer of the best Essay on the following subject, viz. "Whether, and how far, the cultivation of Science, and that of Polite Literature, assist or obstruct each other."

Messrs. Good and Lockner, of Hatton Garden, have obtained the first premium for a design of the intended Hospital for Lunaticks, in the place of Bethlem; and another premium for the erection of a Lunatick Asylum in the vicinity of Norwich.

The edition of Dryden's Poetical Works, with notes by the two Wartons, in four octavo volumes, is nearly finished.

The Political Romance mentioned in p. 344, under the Title of " Despotism; or the Fall of the Jesuits, a Political Romance," illustrated by Historical Anecdotes, will very soon appear. The Jesuits, who have been usually considered as a Religious Order, are in this work, founded on historical authorities, discovered to have been a Political Body, governed by a constitution, which, long guarded in concealment, was aiming at, and had nearly effected, an universal Monarchy. The Autocrat of the Continent appears to have revived the genius of this government, which, as it included every subtile stratagem, and every violent effort of the most enlightened and despotic power, necessarily exhibits a moving picture of that solitary despotism, which is but treading, step by step, the march of terrific Ambition, already traced to his eye. In the copious notes annexed to this political Romance, both the secret and the public intrigues of the Jesuits are opened.

STRYPE'S Memorials of Abp. Cranmer, in two royal octavo volumes, and Bp. Sherlock's Discourses, in three volumes, are printing at the Clarendon press.

A new edition of Sperman's translation of Xenophon's Expedition of Cyrus is in the press.

A volume of Letters, by the late Rev. James Harvey, dated from 1736 to 1752, will speedily be published.

The Remains of Joseph Blackers consisting of sketches of original Dramas, Poems, including the Times, an Ode, and Memoirs of his Life, by Mr. Pratt, with a Portrait of the Author, and other interesting Engravings, may be expected in the middle of June.

The Rev. E. Valpy, B. D. has in the press, the third edition of Elegantice Latina, or Rules and Exercises illustrative of elegant Latin Style.

The Publick may soon expect some "Critical Remarks on Dr. Adam Clarke's Annotations on the Bible."

A new edition of Miss Mirrord's Miscellaneous Poems, with considerable additions, is in forwardness.

Mr. James P. TUPPER, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, and Fellow of the Liunean Society, has in the press "An Essay on the Probability of Sensation in Vegetables, with additional observations on Instinct, Sensation, and Irritability.

Mr. BARKER of Trinity College, Cambridge, is preparing, for the use of Schools, a small edition of Cicero de Senectute & Amicitia, with English notes.

"Honiton Hill, a descriptive Poem" by the Rev. W. T. Tucker, A. M. Rector of Wadworthy, Devon, is printing.

Dr. WILLIAMS, of Rotherham, is preparing a second edition, greatly enlarged, of his Essay on Divine Equity and Sovereignty; including an Examination of Bp. Tomline's Refutation of Calvinism.

The Rev. Samuel CLAPHAR will shortly publish, in an octavo volume, Sermons, selected from minor Authors, adapted to the Saints' Days, Festivals, &c.

49. Memoirs school, the better; the longer I live, the more mischief and misery I see from missing an education: for happiness does not depend upon fortune, but upon a mind well disciplined in youth, and capable of finding employment and amusement within its own reach, independent of all extrapeous resources.

"Obedience is one of the capital benefits arising from a public Edu though I am very desirous of hi minds impregnated with class ledge, from the pleasure I he from it, as well as the utility stations of life, yet it is but a benefit in my estimation of for, to break the natural ferocimature, to subdue the passions press the principles of religion ity upon the heart, and give he dience and subordination to paternal as well as political authority, is the first object to be attended to by all schoolmasters, who know their duty and do it."

To his daughter, Lady Eardley, at the commencement of a new year, he thus affectionately writes:

CENT. MAG. May, 1811.

But now for his personal history :

"Not long after his retirement, he took a house at Wickham in Kent, where he resided occasionally for some years, being in the neighbourhood of Lord Eardley, who married his eldest daughter, and had presented him with several grandchildren. Here he enjoyed his garden and his grounds, and the society of many excellent neighbours and friends, as well as of his own family. Among other friends, he corresponded with the learned and reverend Henry Michell, vicar of Brighton, who wrote remarkably elegant Latin, and sent him on his retirement, the following votive inscription:

4 JOHANNI EARDLEIO WILMOT
M JUNISDICTIONE INTER CIVES NUPER JUDICS M
PR #FECTO

OTIVE DIVINGE LATVE ET SINE MORBO ET COM AMICIS JOCONDUM
SENESCENTI SENESCENS.
HENRICUS MICHELL.

"Mr. Michell had a large family: his second son, John Henry, (afterwards Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, and now Rector of Buckland, Herts) often spent his holidays holidays when at Eton, with Sir Eardley, who frequently heard from and wrote to him when at Cambridge.

"As most of these letters were of the same nature with the letters to his Sons. viz. on the subject of his studies and pursuits, it may not be unseasonable to give a few extracts from them, which will afford another proof of the benevolence of his heart.

To Mr. J. H. Michell, at Cambridge.

' London, Jan. 14, 1779.

- I received yours of the 28th of December, and am very sorry that our ancestors did not think as the Romans did; but as your residence in Cambridge in this dreary season will enable you to accumulate a vast heap of Greck lumber, you must comfort yourself (like a miser) with the contemplation of the mitres and crosiers which your treasures will give you. the sake of the Muses, and in their names, I conjure you to read Longinus again and again, as he will purify your taste, and both enable you to compose yourself, and give you the truest notions of what is really sublime in composition. I shall hardly visit Abingdon till Summer; but if any thing should call me there, I will send to you.
- Mr. Greaves sent me a hare last week; and I hope his resignation did not proceed from his want of health or spirits, for his benevolence and alacrity in doing good interest every man in their preservation. I hope the great storm last week hath not hurt your chapel; it was very violent here indeed. I hear that the damage done by the fire at Queen's College, Oxon, will take near 5000% to repair. The Queen has given 1000% and the two Archbishops and the different Colleges have made handsome presents. The fire at Greenwich is a great national misfortune: The Chapel is quite burnt, but the Hall has escaped: it was finally extinguished yesterday morn.

" To the same.

' Wickham, 21st June, 1779.

'I received yours; and when you have mastered Thucydides, your Herculean labours in Greek are all over. afraid you are surfeited with Latin and Greek; and if you are, discontinue them, till you find you have a stomach to them; but you are quite mistaken to call Latin and Greek unknown languages, for they are as well known in England now as the modern languages; and if I was to see a mitte on the head of a man who did not understand them, I would pull it off, and beat him with his crosser round his Cathe rai.

 Garrick has been extremely and justly lamented, and the greatest funeral honours were paid him yesterday: We shall never see his like again "

'I hope the fleets of France and Spain have joined, because it will be only one trouble to beat'them both together."

Sir Eardley left Wickham in 1782, when Mr. Michell wrote the elegant Lines which will be found in our Poetical Department, p. 470.

" After his retirement Sir Eardley was 🙀 the habit of entering in his common-place book the death of his friends and contenporaries, with a short account of them. It will be a further illustration of his own character, to observe how ready he was to do justice to the worth of others.

On the 30th of March. 1773, Thomas Anson, esq. of Shuckborough, in the county of Stafford, departed this life: he was the elder brother of Lord Anson, who died without issue, and inherited his great acquisitions. He was never married, and, in the former part of his life, had lived many years abroad; was a very ingenious, polite, well-bred man, and dignified all his natural and acquired accomplishments by his universal benevolence and philanthropy.

・22d July, 1773, Mr. Tracey, Cursitos Baron. He was a cheerful, good-hamour, ed, honest man; a good husband, master, and friend. Having been a very correct taker of Notes in the Court of Chancery, he published three volumes of Reports in the time of Lord Hardwicke.'

'On the 18th of March, 1774, died Ms. Baron Adams, upon the circuit at Bedierd, in the sixty-fourth year of his age. Dq. Petty reported that he died of the gool distemper, caught at the Old Bailey, where he attended about a fortnight before. was a very good Lawyer, and an excellent Judge, having every quality necessary to dignify that character: I never saw him out of humour in my life, and I knew him.

intimately for forty years."

'John Ryder, Archbishop of Tuam, died 4th February, 1775, in the seventyeighth year of his age. He married Alica. daughter of John Wilmot, one of the younger sons of Robert Wilmot, of Osmaston, in the county of Derby, esq. and by her had two sous and four daughters. was a very humane, generous, benevolent, and beneficent man: a good hasbar master, father, and valuable friend. He was affable, courteous, and obliging to every body; and his patronage, protection, and assistance, were open to all who deserved them; and though he practised every Christian virtue hunself, be could look over human infirmities in others. In all 50spects, he was a very excellent man."

'On the 5th day of November, 1782, Sir Jas. Burrow, Knight, deported this life, aged 81. He had been Maner of the Crown Office near sixty years, and always

Dimey, in a Preface to the little Work we are about to notice, observes, that "The following Life of Sir Michael Foster, distinguished for his learning, his integrity, and his attachment to the Constitution of his Country, was written, as stated in the title-page, by his Nephew, the late Michael Dodson, Esq. It was communicated by him to Dr. Kippis, the Editor of the second or 'corrected and enlarged' Edition of the Biographia Britannica; and constituted the last article that was printed for the intended Sixth Volume of that Work. This Biographical Communication was dated, by its Author, February 7, 1795; and Dr. Kippis died the 8th of the following October. His death occasioned an interruption in the publication of such Edition, which has not since been resumed or continued And the dreadful fire that happened at Mr. Nichols's house, printing-office, and warehouse, in the night of February 8th, 1803, destroyed, with many other very valuable Works, the whole impression of so much of the unfinished Volume as had been printed +. At the says he, 'was conspicuous not only for his profound knowledge of criminal law, but for every quality of an upright, enlightened, and sagacious magistrate *.'

" And the memorable case of the keeper of one of the gates of Richmond-park, which is the subject of the clear and manly letter of Mr. (afterwards Lord) Thurlow (p. 85 - 88) is further noticed, with some remarks by Mr. Wakefield, bearing honourable testimony to Mr Justice Foster's highly-approved conduct on that trial,"

By these Memoirs we learn that

"Sir Michael Foster was a native of Marlborough in Wiltshire, and was born December 16, 1689. Hs father aud grandfather were Michael Foster and John Foster, eminent Attorneys in that town. They were Protestant Dissenters, and, being such, were named as Aldermen, and the latter as Common-Clerk, in the charter illegally granted to that town by, James II, in September, in the fourth year of his reign : but, as they were zealous friends of civil and religious liberty and the rights of mankind, they refused to be sworn, and to actuader it; and in the next ^{# &}quot; Sir Eardley was then in his 74th Tear."

^{† &}quot;Sec vol. LXXVIII, p. 99."

 [&]quot;See the Memors of Sir John Early ley Wilmot, 8vo. pp. 25, 30, 37."

month a proclamation was issued for removing the new burgesses, and for restoring things to their former state. After attending the free-school in Marlborough a proper time, Mr. Foster removed to Oxford, being matriculated in that University May 7, 1705. He studied some years in Exeter college under the tuition of Mr. Osborne, a Gentleman whom, in the subsequent part of his life, he always mentioned with respect. He was admitted into the Society of the Middle Temple, May 23, 1707, and in due time was called to the bar in that Society. He attended in Westminster-Hall some years after being called to the Bar; but, not having much success as an advocate, he retired into the country, and settled in his native town. Here he contracted an intimacy with Algernon Earl of Hartford, afterwards Duke of Somerset, which continued many years, and until the death of the noble Duke; who by his will appointed his friend executor in trust with his sonin-law Hugh Earl (afterwards Duke) of Northumberland. In 1725 he married Martha, the eldest daughter of James Lyde, Esq. of Stantonwick in Somersetshire; and in some few years afterwards he removed to Bristol, where he exercised his profession with great reputation and considerable success; and in August 1735 he was chosen Recorder of the City, which office he retained many years. Soon after accepting this office, in Easter Term 1736, he took on him the degree of Serjeant-at-Law."——" On the 10th day of November 1738, the Prince and Princess of Wales, the father and mother of his present Majesty, visited the City of Bristol; and the Recorder made a speech to their Royal Highnesses at their entrance into the city, which was much and deservedly admired." -" In November 1742, when many parts of the Nation discovered an unwillinguess to raise the necessary supplies for carrying on the War against Spain in which we were engaged, the Recorder was employed in drawing up a letter from the City of Bristol to Mr. Southwell, their surviving Representative in Parliament."-"' Having greatly distinguished himself on many occasions after his settlement at Bristol, Mr. Serjeant Foster, in the vacation after Hilary Term 18 Geo. II. on the recommendation of the Lord Chancellor Hardwicke, was appointed to succeed Sir William Chapple, as one of the Judges of the Court of King's Bench."——" The new Judge, having been knighted by the King, was sworn into the office April 22, 1745; and he took his scat in the Court on the first day of the next month, being the first day of Easter Term. The Judges whom he found in the Court were Sir William Lee, Sir Martin Wright, and Sir Thomas Denison, men of great abilities and great integrity. These four Judges composed the Court about nine years,

The connexion was broken by the death of Chief-Justice Lee, which happened in Hilary Vacation 1754, 27 Geo. H. He was succeeded by Sir Dudley Ryder, who died about two years afterwards. On his death, Mr. Murray, the Attorney-General, created Lord Mansfield, succeeded to the Chief-Justiceship, and held the office many years: but, before the death of Sir Dudley Ryder, in Hilary Term 28 Geo. IL 1755; Sir MartinWright resigned his office, and in the same Term, he was succeeded by Sir John Eardley Wilmot. These were the only changes in the Judges of the Court while Sir Michael Foster continued in it, from April 22, 1745, to November 7, 1763. In this period many points of singular importance, as well in civil as criminal cases, in which he bore a considerable share, were determined. The criminal cases are reported by himself in his Crown-Law; and many of the others may be seen in the Reports of Strange, Wilson, Burrow, and Blackstone."

Several of these important Cases are introduced by Mr. Dodson; of which the following, instar omnium, may suffice for a specimen.

"At the Lent Assizes for Surrey, in 1756, an indictment against Martha Gray, the keeper of East-Sheen gate in Richmond-Park, of which Park the Princess Amelia, daughter of King George II. was then the Ranger, for obstructing at that gate a common footway through the Park, wis tried before Mr. Justice Foster, who greatly distinguished himself on the occasion by his firmness and integrity. • I am happy to have it in my power to give a particular account of the proceedings at the triel, written at the time by a learned Lawyer, who hath since filled the highest station in the profession. Mr. Thurlow, now Lord Thurlow, wrote the following letter, the original of which is in my possession, to Mr. Ewen, a Nephew of Mr. Justice Foster, then, and for many years afterwards, Clerk of the Peace for Wiltshire.

' Dear Sir, I write at the hazard of your thinking me impertment, to give you the pleasure of hearing that of your Unele which in all probability you will not bear from him; I mean the great honour and general esteem which he has gained, or rather accumulated, by his inflexible and spirited manner of trying the Richmond cause, which has been so long depending, and so differently treated by other judges. You have heard what a deficiency there was of the special jury, which was imputed to their backwardness to serve a prosecution against the Princess. He has fined all the absenters 201, a-piece. They made him wait two hours, and at last resort to a tales. When the prosecutors had gone through part of their evidence, Sir Richard Lloyd, who went down on the part of the Crown,

•be entered. The Judge said, he was not of that opinion. The subject is interested in such indictments as these for continuing musances; and can have no remedy but this, if their rights be encroached upon; wherefore he should think it a denial of Justice to stop a prosecution for a nuisance, which his whole prerogative does not extend to pardon. After which the evidence was gone through, and the Judge summed up shortly, but clearly, for the prosecutors.

'It gave me, who am a stranger to him, great pleasure to hear that we have one English Judge, whom nothing can tempt or fright in, ready and able to hold up the laws of his Country as a great shield of the rights of the People. I presume that it will give you still greater to hear, that your friend and relation is that Judge; and that is the only apology I have to make for troubling you with this. I am, dear Sir, Your most humble servant,

Fig-Tree-Court, Inner Temple,
April 11, 1758.

Courts. Mr. Justice Foster's argument, which is very accurate and decisive, I communicated to my late excellent friend Dr. Furneaux; and be bath inserted it in the Appendix to the Second Edition of his Letters to Mr. Justice Blackstone, printed in 1771. This judgment of reversal was afterwards, February 4, 1767, unanunously affirmed by the House of Lords, on the motion of Lord Mansfield, whose admirable speech on the occasion is also inserted by Dr. Furneaux in his Appendix. speech, which is of considerable length, Dr. Furneaux, who was happy in a most retentive memory, brought away in his head from the House of Lords."

To return to personal history.

"Mr. Justice Foster was blessed with a good constitution; and he generally enjoyed a good state of health, until some few years before his death. In no long time after the death of Lady Foster, his health began to decline, and he complained of a loss of appetite, which made it necessary for him ocrasionally to spend some time at Bath. He received considerable benefit from the use of the Bath waters; but, wheresoever he was, he was patient and resigned, composed and cheerful; rejoicing in the glorious prospect beyond the grave, which Christianity opened to his view. In Hilary, Easter, and Trinity Terms, 1763, he seldom attended at Westminster-Hall. He was confined to his bed a short cone only; and, on Monday the 7th of November, being the first day of Michaelmas Term in that year, he easily and calmly expired. He never had any children; but he had three sisters, who survived him, and were the mothers of his three nephews and executors, Michael Ewen, Michael Dodson, and Samuel Hawkes. By his own direction, he was buried in the parish-church of Stanton-Drew, in Somersetshire, where Lady Foster had been buried. In that church, a plain monument is erected, with this inscription:

the Body of Sir Michael Foster, one of the Judges of the Court of King's Bench;
who was born December 16, 1689, and died Nov. 7, 1763.
Dame Martha his wife,

the eldest daughter of James Lyde, esq.
is also here interred.
She died May 15, 1758,
in the 57th year of her age.

haps be improper, for me to attempt to draw his character at length. I have exhibited the most decisive proofs of his ability, of his caudour, and of his integrity*; and I will only add, in his own words, which he hath used in speaking of his intimate and highly-valued friend Mr. Justice Abney, 'when he died, the world lost a very valuable man, His Majesty an excellent subject, and the publick a faithful able servant;

" Nec me meminisse pigebit."

51. A practical Treatise on the Powers and Duties of Juries, and on the Criminal Laws of England. By Sir Richard Phillips, Knight. Sherwood and Co.

FROM the humanc and sensible manner in which these very interesting and important subjects are discussed, we recommend the following observations to all who have the interest of their Country at heart, and who value that grand Palladium of our Lives and Liberties, the TRIAL BY JURY.

many crimes leads to the infliction of the purpose of torturing the criminal, as for the more legitimate purpose of preventing the repetition of the same crimes. Hence, in many cases, the punishment of death is inflicted, not because it operates the most effectually in terrorem on others, but because the crime is of so aggravated a nature, or committed under such aggravated circumstances, as to render it unit that so atrocious a criminal should be allowed to live.

"If then punishments can properly be measured by public resentment, there is no doubt but some cases may occur, in which it is not tolerable that a criminal should be allowed to survive his crime; but, as legislation ought not to be of a passionate or vindictive character, and its object ought to be to prevent crimes rather than to torture criminals, it is worthy of consideration how far the punishment of death is the most effective in attaining the proper object of wise legislation.

"We ought, in considering this subject, not to forget that DEATH is the common let of the virtuous and the wicked — that its period is uncertain—that it cuts the thread of life at every age — and, consequently, is not in itself a criterion of virtue or visa.

"Also, that the dread of an uncertain futurity has little effect on the uninstructed and deprayed — and that they are practically affected more by their immediate gratifications, and by proverbs and faise principles of fatalism, which they dippendly quote.

"Thieves, arguing like soldiers, sailous, and all men of desperate professions, console themselves at the time of execution, by asserting that their hour is come — and that a halter, a bullet, or a fever, is what "Punishments ought in their nature to imply a state of suffering, the peculiar and evident consequence of vice. Death, and have already remarked, is the general fate of all animal organization, and is therefore no peculiar result of crime. The Judge who pronounces the sentence of the law, is often laid in the grave before the Culput whom he has condemned to death. One knell may announce the fate of the prosecutor and the prosecuted—and such lessons are not lost on those who seek pretences to justify their conduct.

"Let those who are sceptical in regard to the effect of warning, put the question to themselves. Are they studious, and do they abate their studies — although ^{* &}quot;The compliment paid to Mr. Justice Poster by the celebrated Churchill, in his Resciad, ought not to be omitted:

⁴ Each Judge was true and steady to his trust; As Mansfield wise, and as old Fester Just.²² worst event, they must submit to fate; that what cannot be avoided, must be andured; and that, at any rate, the consideration does not press — it is disagreeable, and may for the present be deferred.

"Such is man — such are his feelings, from the Prince to the heggar — from the Bishop or Judge to the vilest culprit — how absurd then to sacrifice Victims to the faire principle, that their fate is a warning worthy of the sacrifice: and, under a mistaken notion, that such sacrifices are necessary to purge society of crimes!

" Moreover, the uncertainty of detection, of conviction, and of punishment in capital cases renders the life of a regular thief as good a purchase as that of most honest men in the community. severity of the punishment creates a consentaneous conspiracy against the laws in all the parties concerned in carrying them into effect. The Accusers are backward to prosecute --- the Magustrate to commit --the Grand Jury to find a bill - the Petit Jury to convict - and the Judge or the Crown to order execution. Hence a thief proceeds in the hope and in the chance of not being detected - if so, of evading prosecution -- and if convicted of escaping the punishment of a law abhorred for its severity; thus he calculates that the been its dupes; truth has had to maintain an arduous struggle against it; and in the interim many honest men have become victims of their integrity.

" It is one of the unhappy consequences of our present system, that legal punishment does not restore the culprit to the moral estimation of the world. Can there be a greater libel on our code of punishments, than that they are universally considered as confirming the depravity of those who have become the objects of them? Can any thing be more disgraceful to a penal code, than its reputation of hardening criminals, and confirming them in their vicious courses ? Yet, is it not so ?-Is there one person in ten thousand who will not refuse to employ those who have been the object of criminal jurisdiction? Are they not viewed with horror? Are they not outcasts of secrety? Are they not shunned and avoided? In short, are they not rendered desperate by the condition in which they find themselves?

"If then it is the object of social arrangements to add to the mass of happiness if this is the primary business of legislation— and is the object and end of happiness wisdom— is it not worth the while of the British Parliament to appoint a Committee?— or of the executive Government to create a Commission, for the purpose of devising modes of punishment, which shall at the same time reform the moral habits of culprits, and afford them the means of getting an honest living after they have been discharged from the cognizance of the laws?

cheste

"Surely such an object is worthy of the deepest consideration, and of persevering inquiry, till the purpose has been effected; and when attained, it would be of more permanent benefit to the people than one thousand objects of research, each of which have engaged a greater quantity of legislative and juridical attention during the last twenty years."

52. The Life of Arthur Murphy, Esq. By Jessé Foot, Esq. his Executor. 4to. pp. 464. Faulder.

IN a neat address to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales [new Prince Regent], Mr. Foot says,

"I cannot perform an act so honourable to the Memory of my late friend Mr. Arthur Murphy, as the presentation of this Volume to your Royal Patronage and Protection:—nor can any sentiment of respect or veneration, however ardent or profound, be expressed by me to your Royal Highness; which was not always felt and frequently uttered by him, to the close of his active, useful, and distinguished life. That I have not over-rated his qualities, his talents, and his labours, the few now alive who witnessed their progress will be ready to bear testimony; and those who read the faithful history of them, as pourtrayed in the following pages, will, I doubt not, do me the justice to confirm it."

The first part of this entertaining Volume may be said to have been written by Mr. Murphy himself; who, "amidst the care of his higher concerns, employed himself, during the last six weeks of his life, in composing a short sketch of the whole of it."

" He appears to have felt, and he was surely justified in the indulgence of such a sentiment, that he had a right to survive his mortal heirdom. To prove his claim to the good opinion of posterity, he thought it a duty, which he owed to his character. to state himself the merits on which he rested it, and thereby to save it from the conjectural, and, as it often happens, negligent narrative of professional Biographers. He, indeed, undertook the task, when his strength was failing, when the Lamp of Life was burning dim, and his fingers could scarce guide the pen, in forming this too brief but faithful record. In some parts it was almost illegible, and the sheets on which it is written contain no more than eighteen pages. But though the spirk that dictated it was no longer attentive to the correctness of style and elegance of expression which used to clothe his writings, his memory appears to have been perfect in the collection of those circumstances which are the interesting features of this his last work.

"He was a conspicuous figure in the period wherein he lived, and the more prominent circumstances of his Life were generally known. Indeed, as he himself observes, different accounts had already appeared of him in some of those ephoneral productions which inundate the pre-These he represents as desent times. ficient in the information they profess to give of him; for though they might claim a certain degree of accuracy as to the more ascertainable circumstances of his career, which were too public and striking not to be familiar to those who are acquainted with the literary and dramatic world; a regular and connected series of the various events which distinguished his existence could alone proceed from his own reflection. The incidents, which esclusively belong to, and arose out of his early years, were known only to himself. He was the surviving repository of that knowledge, and it will not now die with him."

" It is an affecting circumstance to censider, that the two last temporal objects which occupied Mr. Murphy's mind, were the particular arrangement he had preconceired for his funeral interment, and the composition of this narrative of himself. He would break off from the latter occupation. to visit the spot he was about to compy in Hammersmith Church, where his Mother lay; converse with and give directions to the Sexton on the subject; and thus prepare himself for the awful moment which he believed to be approaching. He ordered the vault which contained the maternal remains to be opened; examined. with filial devotion, the sepulchral scene, and marked the spot where he wished to be placed, when he should be summoned to join her in the chamber of death."

"To describe the closing scene of Mr. Murphy's life," adds Mr. Foot, "has devolved upon me, who was the witness of it. The detailed history of the long intermediate space is formed from the materials which have come into my possession as his Executor; and whatever I could obtain from living information. Such is the Volume which is offered to his memory by affection and by truth. It will confirm, I trust, the eminent character which he had obtained from the justice of his contamporaries; and consecrate him to future times, as having adorned the age in which de lived."

O.

Works, we find that he was seen to burst forth at once into fame; that his first Farces, his Orphan of Cana, and afterwards his pure and eteg out Conedus, raised him to a degree of eminence, which excited both the palousy and a humation of competitors for drimatic habours 11 was from a jealousy of his takints, that Churchil honoured from by his saure. It has been said, as a diawon k upon his ment, that he was a copy st of foreign productions. If that were true, it in g t be asked, whether, notw thstanding, there is not in his Plays enough of his own to entitle him to the claim of a superior dramatic Poet," character. I may say with great truth, that the great object of his if e was to do good to others even to his own narm: the whole body of his written life proves this assertion so strongly, that I should advance nothing more upon it. That he was sometimes betrayed into acts of iras holdy, that he was sometimes violent and his corable, I must adont but these irroxysias generally arose from a suspicion of being over-reached; they never a forced to any thing but his disappointments, real or imagined, in his transactions with the Theatres and the Bookselters.

"His durful affe time towards his Mother, and his britherly love, were excessive. He abounded in milk of human of the Church, close to his grave, with the following inscription to his memory:

"Sacred
to the Memory of
Arthur Murphy, Esq.
a Barrister at Law of distinguished chap
racter:

a Dramatic Poet of great celebrity:
a Classical Scholar of rare attainment;
a Political Writer of no common consides ration:

a Loyal Subject;

a Sincere Christian.
This eminent manded on the 18th of June 1805, in the 78th year of his age, and is interred near this spot, in the same vault with his mother, Mrs. Jane Murphy."

A good portrait is given of Mr. Murphy at the age of 52, engraved by P. Condé from a painting by Mr. Dance; and a bust of him, by the same engraver, from a model by Poole.

"Of the late A, thur Murphy's person and figure, it believes n.e," says Mr. Foot, "to give some description. Before his sickness, about the year 1742, he was of a fine form, neither corpored nerther. He was tall and graceful, and his limbs were proportionably adjusted: his bones small; his hands and flugers delicate, and his shoulders rather narrow: the contour of his face was oval, and marked a little with the small-pox: his nose was aqu line: his eyes light and full. his complexion fair, and his voice deep and son mous! he rarely laughed loud; but his side was uncommonly gracious, and always unaffected."

A portrait is also given of the celebrated Miss Anne Eliiott, and four different Pacsamile Plates of the handwriting of Mr. Murphy. 53. History of Brazil. By Robert Southey. Part the First. 4to. Longman and Co.

THIS valuable Work, dedicated to the Rev. Herbert Hill, the Author's uncle, must unavoidably receive a much less proportion of our notice than the subject demands. Brazil was, till very lately, seldom brought to the recollection of the Literatiof England, who, contented with the slight knowledge casually offered by mercantile men, never sought for further information relating to a place remotely situnted, and carefully guarded against the enquiries of the scientific by a jenlous Government. The French nation (which the perversences of the present generation of Europe has destined to alter the nature and regulations of almost all things) having invaded Portugal, and exercised a most rigorous tyranny where they established themecives ; the Court of Portugal, judging by the experience afforded by other kingdoms under similar circumstances, wisely determined to withdraw to the wast dominions they possess in South America, where the friendship and power of England has established the Prince Regent and his faithful attendants till time shall unfold the future destiny of the mother country.

Our share in these occurrences, and the trade they have procured for us, render Brazil particularly interesting at present; and we cannot doubt that public encouragement will well reward Mr. Southey for his unwearied labours, in affording the community rational amusement and valuable information.

This Gentleman says, in his Preface, that the History of Brazil contains more than is promised in the title-page, as it relates the particulars of the settlement and progress of the adjoining provinces of Spain, the History of which of late years has become inseparably connected with that of Brazil, "The subject may therefore be considered as including the whole tract of country between the rivers Plata, Paraguay, and Orellana, or the Ama-2085, and extending Eastward towards Peru, as far as the Portuguese have extended their settlements or their dincoveries." Mr. S. informe his Renders that the America Portugueza of Sebastian da Rocha Pitta is the only general history of Benzil, which he pronounces to be a meagre and innecurate work. On the other hand there are numerous copious and w luable accounts of the Dirtch war, a information of an carlier date may gleaned incidentally from the bou but as we approach near our own $1 authorities are still more stares, "a for the greater part of the last etc ry, printed documents almost entit filiti" In this hopeless state for terials, the Author must have go up all thoughts of compiling as factory history of Brazil, had no ë seti relation and friend, the Rev. Mr. Hill, supplied him with a collection of valuable and curious madestripts which he formed during thirty y readence in Portugal. the assistance which I knyd received from him," adds Mr. fl. " it would have been hopeless to undertake, a impossible to complete it." He proraises a critical account of all the materials consulted upon this occasion in the concluding Volumes and he mentions a map which is then to a pear, that has been delayed only for the purpose of making it as correct as possible, " though a far better th any which has yet opposted migh have been given at present."

We are no he too late ing a fequer has made , 1 omit an or literary mai the followin faithfally, i Longman an to the own fully:" Lite raguariz, ô Jesuits' ann except thos those for th Montoya, Paraguay; guay; The Charlevoix's mice 1779 🛊 🛚 1777; a wc name of C Jesnit P. D de l'ascumpo Akmeida j O Djaria do siti er the Italia Brazillian G

Mr. South introduction Benzil furnis dents than th noble men, carrying on an obscure warfare, the consequences of which have been greater toan were produced by the conquests of Alexander or Charlemigne, and will be far more lasting." The inconsiderable number of those who brought themselves into notice obtained no homage beyond the limits of the religion they professed, and they are scarcely known beyond that of the language of their countrymen; yet Mr. S. thinks the subject has its advantages in the interest inseparable from the discovery of extensive regions, in the relation of the customs, religious superstitious, and general manners of tribes of uncivilized people. "The efforts of missionaries, in whom zeal the most familical was directed by the coolest policy: the rise and the averthrow of the extraordinary dominion which they established; and the progress of Brazil from its feeble beginnings to the importance which it now possesses;—these are topics of no ordinary interest." The Portuguese nation is indebted to Vicente Yanez Pinzon for the discovery of the coast of their own expense, in which they sailed from Palos, December 1499. After making the Cape de Nords, they steered South-west; and they were the first Spaniards who crossed the Line, and lost sight of the North Star. On the 26th of January, 1500, they saw land in lat. 55° 5, which they named Cape Consolation, and is now called Cape St. Augustme's. making a landing, they saw no natives; but their footsteps were visible, and at night many fires were observed; they subsequently sent forly men well armed on shore, who were met by about the same number of savages provided with bows and lances; the Spaniards attempted in vain to entice them into a friendly intercourse, by gestures and the offer of lookingglasses, beads, and bells-they seemed determined to expel the intruders. At length they retired to their vessels, after fancying they had seen the lootsteps of giants, and that the natives were taller than the tallest Germans, Coasting Northward, they reached the month of a large river, which, as the water was not of a sufficient depth for the vessels, they entered with four boats, and landing they advanced towards a party of natives assembled on a hill; a single Spaniard completely armed preceded his countrymen, and repeated the invitations of friendship, concluding with throwing a hawk's bell towards them; they, in return, tossed what appeared to be a piece of gold at the feet of the man; who stooping to take it up, the savages sprang forward to seize him. "This, however, was not so easy as they expected; though neither large nor robust, he defended himself with sword and shield, to the admiration of his comrades, who hastened to his assistance." Nor was he rescued without serious loss, as their opponents slew eight of them with their arrows, and, pursuing the fugitives to their boats, wounded many more. " It was then that, being naked, they felt the edge of European swords. But nothing deterred them; they rushed on like wild beasts, despising wounds and death, followed the boats even when they had put off, dived after them, and fairly won one, having slain its captain, and driven out the Enough has now been said to explain the nature of the History of Brazil, the First Volume of which brings the annals down to 1639. The narrative is given in a pleasing style, and it is embellished with many incidents explanatory of men and manners. We hope hereafter to introduce the remaining part to our Readers' notice, when we shall enter further into the merits of the Work.

54. Pendeh-i-Attar. The Counsels of Attar. Edited from a Persian Manuscript, by the Rev. J. H. Hindley, A. M. 12mo. Bulmer. 1809.

AS the study of the Oriental languages is now a regular part of education for one class of our Countrymen, a neat and accurate Edition of a Persian Classick becomes of similar importance to a new Edition of a Greek or Roman Author. Mr. Hindley, whose studies in this line have been assiduous and long continued, has therefore thought it advisable to give this specimen of such an undertaking to the Publick; nor can it be doubted that he will meet with due encouragement. He has dedicated his Book to the Chairman and Court of Di-the munificent founders of the new Colleges of Calcutta and Hertford," and under their auspices he will doubtless meet with success. The account of the Work may best be given in the words of the Editor:

"The series of little moral Poems, now first presented to the Publick, have for ages past been the delight and instruction of a very considerable part of the civilized globe. From the ease of the versification, the elegant simplicity of the phraseology, the purity of the style, and the system of d gnified morality inculcated, the Pendehi-Attar, if not studiously adapted to the laws, manners, and climate of a widely extended empire, has uniformly been the first book which an august * and jealous polity has placed in the hands of youth, and reserved for amusement and reflection of maturer age, throughout the whole Mahommedan dominions."

" For the only notice I have hitherto met with of the Author (the name noted in part by D'Herbelot and Sir William Jones, and some judicious remarks on the Poems at large by the latter excepted) my obligations are due to Major Stewart, Professor of Oriental Languages in the Hou. East India Company's College at Hertford, from whose descript ve Catalogue of the Oriental library of the late Tippoo Sultan of Mysore, the celebrated Mohammed Ben Ibrahim Shaikh Ferid Uddin Attar appears to have been born at Nishapur, formerly the capi al of Kheravan, about the year of Christ 1109, and to have died, the place unmentioned, in 1225 of the same era, aged 114 years, after having written 100,000 verses, besides numerous works in prose. It is only from the Biographies of the Persian and Turkish poets, yet in MS. and hitherto without an European interpretation, that further memoirs of the Author can be expected."

The Poems are short; they are 76 in number, beginning with the Eulogy of the Deity, the Patriarchs and men of renown, &c.; and consisting chickly afterwards of the virtues and vices recommended to be cultivated or avoided. The book is very neatly printed.

of London from the Roman Invasion to the Year 1700; including the Origin of British Society, Customs, and Manners, with a general Sketch of the State of Religion, Superstition, Dresses, and Amusements of the Citizens of London, during that Period. To which are added, Illustrations of the Changes in our Language, ^{*} Why august ?-Rxv.

Literary Customs, and gradual Improvement in Style and Versification, and various Particulars concerning public and private Libraries. Illustrated by Eighteen Engravings. By James Peller Malcoim, F. A. S. Author of "Londinium Redivivum," and of "Anecdotes of the Manners and Customs of London, during the Eighteenth Century." 4to. pp. 576. Longman and Co.

WE are glad to find that the reception of a former Volume of a similar nature (see Vol. LXXVIII. p. 418) has been such as to induce this industrious Antiquary to retrace his steps, by exploring the Customs and Manners of our Ancestors from the remotest periods: — nor have his researches been negligently pursued.

the Volume now offered may prove as acceptable to the Publick as the Anecdotes of the Manners and Customs of the Eighteenth Century; which he flatters himself will be the case, on reflecting that it contains many long forgotten and most curious articles of information, derived from various authorities, and from one of the most antient and variable sources in the British Metro alis — the Library of Ston College, the President, Governors, and Librarian of which deserve the highest praise for their liberal indulgence."

After condensing several interesting particulars relative to the Druids, and the peculiar customs of the early Britons, Mr. Malcolm thus proceeds:

"Ma v incontrovertalle proofs stall exist of the manner in which the ancient Braons disposed of their dead. The barrows of furbant have been too often explored to under a description of the state of their contents be reserve whole families are known to have been innuine l together: and the spear in us and stone weap aus form I with them show their mode of figiting. Our open's consisting of beads and macciets, and auklets even of price gold, are sometimes found in these values, formed of ruse stones, and covered with The Romans, it may be imagined, effected a consilera le coanze in this paiticular: their man of using the rideal was opprest onau v continued in Inglial, as the ares and lacrymatones, and their sepulched inscriptions, are escovered at evely direction, but whether the custom prevailed before or long after the period when they evacuated the country countr be decidedly ascertained, though probabibty seems against the supposition that it In those cases where unitation was easy, it is not unlikely that the Britons were very nearly assimilated to the Romans: it is however evident, that when thought and practice were equally required, it was far otherwise.

" In thus noticing the arts and customs described as peculiar to this first mra of our habits, we cannot forget the contradictions discoverable in the accounts transmatted to us; in which we may trace connexion of facts, embellished with such fictions as were calculated to enhance the value of the conquests made in England in the ideas of the prople of Rome and its dependencies. For instance, the habitstions of the natives are said to have been similar to those of the Germans, or deep caves dug nato the earth, where they resuled, surrounded by their provisions for the winter, almost wholly concealed from casual view, and sufficated with smoke. When the summer approached, those dungeons were abandoned; and they constructed buts, composed of stakes driven

d interwoven with the sides and top, rived from Gaul the the intervals of the ad whitening it with earthur situated casts and tow s, would the it appear that, betituted beams for stakes, and wattles and straw for a roof of branches and leaves, they thought of the convenience and regularity of a city, for which we are certainly indebted to the Ranging. In all the above particulars we perceive a regular system of detail, smooth to the savage state of man : and these are every way probable a nor can it be demed that Cas it pronounced the truta, when he asserted he found the ababitants of the interior clath don skins, and those parts of their usel ex which were exposed stamed with woal, producing a bilite tint, and ornanonted (it such figures as they were capable of exceasing a served the term) with beasts, o rls, &c. Here again we find a strong resemblance of the rude customs of other une vilized nations, described under the word tattering.

" Now, although our countrymen were actually discovered in this state of debasement, we are not to imagine that their intelects were equally imperfect with the performances of their hands. It is wellknown, that savages possess the most sublime comeptions, and after sentences unconsciously which are without a parallel in the more refined states of society : in short, they prinounce the genuine dictates of nature, and prove that art and contrivance often in r her conceptions. The savage never thinks; he that thinks headates, and is list for the moment. Did the savage think, be would speak incorrectly till art had, in some degree, recovered his powers;

and

and he would invent the conveniencies and embellishments of life. Some Authors have been loud in their praises of the poetry of the antient Britons, nor shall I dispute its pretensions to superior excellence; on the contrary, I can readily imagine the energy and beautiful extravagance of their war-songs and songs of victory, because they were a species of sudden poetic inspiration, fearless of criticism and not polished till meaning and spirit were expelled: but how are we to reconcile the above particulars with their long broad swords without points suspended by a chain or belt round their shoulders, their short sharp-pointed daggers fixed in their girdles, their spears thrown and recovered again by means of a thong tied to them; with their balls of brass, containing pieces of metal fixed to one end, to terrify their enemies' cavalry in battle, mentioned by Herodian and Tacitus? Were all these invented, and the composition of brass known, by a people that were too ignorant to contrive a house? And no less than four species of chariots used for domestic, agricultural, and warlike purposes, when the possessors of them had not sufficient art to discover any other clothing than dried To shew this incredible coalition of ignorance and refinement in its true light, I shall describe, first, the Benna, a carriage elevated on wheels calculated for carrying two persons through a country covered with wood, on such journeys as a state of perpetual war would permit: the second was the Petoritum, a vehicle with four wheels: the third, the Carrus, must have resembled our baggage-waggons, and were used for that purpose, besides the conveyance of produce: the fourth, or Covinus, surpassing all the others in its destructive construction, was the war-chariot set with scythes and hooks, intended to cut every thing down opposed to it, and admirably calculated for a country abounding with Enough has been said on this thickets. subject; and, having pointed out the contradictions, I shall leave them to the consideration of the Reader,

"According to Selden, 'Julius Cæsar gave a sight of Britanny to posterity, rather than made a full discovery, or a delivery of it;' and in another part of his Junus Anglorum, speaking of authorities derived from inscriptions, he observes, • But you will say, all this makes little to our purpose: yes, very much; as that which brings from abroad the Roman orders, laws, fashions, and every thing, into Britanny. Near St. Albans a town in Hertfordshire, there was, sure enough, the seat of Cassibellinus, called Verulam; and the burghers, as we learn from Agellius, were citizens of Rome enfranchised out of their corporations, using their own laws and customs, only partaking the same honorary privilege with the people of Rome.

"Justus Lipsius informs us, that the Romans were in the constant practice of arranging their conquests after their manners and customs: they appointed three experienced persons to divide the ground for the colony, and to fix the place for the erection of towns, which were in all particulars to resemble Rome; and that in the very places themselves, the courts of law. the capitols, the temples, the state-houses, or town-halls, might be according to that model; and that there might be in the government or magistracy two persons as Bailiffs, in most places, like the two Consuls at Rome; in like manner, surveyors and scavengers, aldermen of the wards and headboroughs, instead of a senate or common-council, as we may call it.

"We should be guilty of great injustice didwe not acknowledge the benefits derived by our partial subjection to the Romans, several of which are enumerated in the above extracts: besides, we are expressly informed, that some of the governors exerted every nerve in civilizing the people, and teaching them the arts, and a more rational mode of living than they The luxury were before accustomed to. and splendour prevailing in Rome must have formed so strong and disgusting a contrast with the habits of the English, that we feel no surprise the conquerors attempted to render their own situation more pleasant, by introducing their manner of building, in temples, palaces, capitols, houses, &c. So much is already known of the manners and customs of the Romans, that I need say nothing of them here: it will be sufficient to remind the Reader of the remains of that people discovered in every direction, which must convince him that powerful excitements to imitation existed; and a slight knowledge indeed of human nature is required, to produce a conviction that the young and the rich of our natives soon became as luxurious and important as the chiefs of the invaders; but it must be at the same time remembered, that part of the population preferred liberty and the savage life to slavery and the arts, and consequently were never more than half civilized, even when a temporary peace, or temporary subjection, caused an intercourse with their-enemies. Dr. Henry says, 'The useful and accessary art of architecture suffered no less than that of agriculture by the departure of the Romans. That ingenious and active people, with the assistance of their British subjects, who were instructed by them, had adorned their dominions in this island with a prodigious number of elegant and magnificent structures, both for public and private private use. Some of these structures were built with so much solidity that they would have resisted all the attacks of time, and remained to this very day, if they had not been wilfully destroyed. Thus, however, seems all speculation : every species of building common in Italy was imitated here; but certainly not erected in the durable manner asserted; the Saxons destroyed them, and very effectually, as we are convinced: how, then, was this accomplished, if they built in England as they did in Rome ? That city was sacked seven times, and yet numerous nuble structures remain there; while not six are to be found in this country, where only one torrent of destruction prevailed. It is evident that they did not build here as at home, let the materials have been what they may; a sufficient reason for which existed in the distance of the colony, its insular situation, and the determined opposition of its inhabitants. The old brick wall at Leicester seems to have been one of the strongest of the Roman works.

" Many of the customs which were common to our ancestors are now almost forgotten in London: amongs, those may be Included the Funeral Feast, which certamly originated from the cana ferales of the Romans, or the offering made to the manes of the deceased, consisting of wine, mailk, and honey, united in a small plate decorated with flowers. When the public mind became more culightened, it naturally occurred to the attendants on funeral ceremonies, that the loong had equally unlent demands for food, which was provided, probably, at first, merely to satisfy the calls of nature; but this, ake all other customs, degenerated; and sensiality intraded where grief and solemnity ought to have presided. In the country, it was purfectly excusable to facilish persons who had assembted from a considerable distance with a substantial anal, but the Londoners became sensible in process of time, that indulgence on such occasions was almost impious, hence, cakes and wine now supply the place of the 'funeral baked meats.1

" Keeping of Wassel was another method of celebration, which, though more peculiar to a country life, must have been common, in early times, in London. Mr. Douce is of opinion, that the origin of the term bosongs to the tale of Vortigern and W. Commission ates, that on the first introduction of that lady to Vortigern, she kneeled, and presenting him a cup of wine, said, ' Lord King wight he let health be to you. The King, gnorant of the Savon language enquered the purport of her words, we out ruled, and told to return the complement with done hed, which he did, command by Rowena to drink, he then took the cup, kissed, and pledged here country the custom bears a certain degree of resemblance to the original ceremony.

" Very faint traces now exist of the antient practice of choosing Valentines; indeed, it is confined to the silly compositwns of young people in the form of letters, many of which are known to be highly offensive to morality and decency, though the majority, it must be confessed, are equally ananeaning and absord, and perfeetly innocent. Autiquaries are inclined to imagine that this custom was derived from our Roman invaders, who practised the ceremony of drawing the names of young females by young men from a boxpart of the rates of the Lupercalia, celebrated in the month of February, in honour of June and Pan. It has ocen further supposed, that the early Christians continued the custom through motives of policy, and fixed upon the day dedicated to St. Valentime increty because it happened to suit the time. If this conjecture be correct, the term of vatentines may be readily accounted for. Due ng a long period, the day produced much interest amongst the unmarr ed part of the commanity.

The Reader is hence conducted, progressively, through the race of the Saxon and Norman Monarchs, in a manner highly creditable to the Author, whose pleasing narrative we shall resume at an interesting period.

"The order contest for the the throne of England carried on by King Stephen and the Empress Maud, being foreign to my plan, requires no particular notice; but

the

the consequences on the manners of the The year 1140 people demand attention. was passed in the most horrid of all pursuits, that of Civil War; and such were the violent effects of the struggle, all ranks of society seemed transformed into The great Barons of the realm, and numbers of the inferior nobility, possessing strong castles in every part of the country, were, by each adopting their favourite Monarch, a series of intermixed inveterate enemies; whose whole employment consisted in endeavouring to excel in deep-laid stratagems to surprise their neighbours, and in contriving means to ruin and torture them and their adherents.

"Antient Authors, treating on this period, represent those Barons and their followers as nothing better than fiends, employed by their superior in wickedness to convert every village and church within their reach into ashes. Brutalised by their monstrous excesses, it requires but little strength of imagination to form a picture of the internal economy of the castle. The lord, constantly cased in armour, and commanding a ruthless gang in a successful sortie, returned to his residence, inflated with insolent pride, and impatient to send his prisoners to the dreadful dungeons of the keep, or citadel, that himself and his men might revel in the midst of their spoils, and teach their offspring all the horrid licentiousness of their parents; while the lady of the mansion was confined, with her females, to a few dreary apartments, with loop-hole windows, and damp walls from nine to twelve feet in thickness, where they passed the gloomy day and long melancholy night, fearing the ills inflicted by her lord on others.

"On the other hand, let us view the castle just surprised, stained with blood, and strewed with victims to the melted lead, boiling water and oil poured on them from the chasms over the great gate, mashed to pieces by the fall of the ponderous portcullis, pierced with arrows from the various loop-holes of the walls, cut down by the sword, or cleft by the battle-The shouts and cries of the combatants ring through the vaults of the apartments; fire and smoke roll through them, in dreadful resemblance of the volumes which consumed the cottages of the poor slaves, who tilled the land of the defeated Baron.

"Such were the habits of society in the reign of Stephen: surely they must have driven from each mansion in the kingdom every thing which resembles our present customs. Dr. Henry has given a passage from 'Gesta Regis Stephani,' containing a summary of the consequences of civil war, which may serve as a lesson for modern times:

All England in the mean time wore abandoned their beloved country, and went into voluntary exile; others, for saking their own houses, built wretched huts in the Church-yards, hoping for protection from the sacredness of the place. Whole families, after sustaining life as long as they could, by eating herbs, roots, and the flesh of dogs and horses, at last died of hunger; and you might see many pleasant villages without a single inhabitant of either sex."

These articles may serve as a slight specimen of the entertainment to be found in the present Volume; but are by no means the prominent features.

If our limits would permit, we should gladly transcribe Mr Malcolm's judicious Sketch of the History of the Stage, and his Anecdotes of Superstition.

The introduction to, and extracts from, a variety of "Sermons," and the illustrations of Literary Customs and Changes in Titles, are interesting and amusing; and the description of the Dress of our Ancestors for Eight Centuries is illustrated by a series of appropriate Prints, which are all engraved and coloured by the Author, 1811. 2 vols. 12mos. Lowndes, and several others.

FROM a long and attentive observation of the industry and accuracy of the late Mr. Baruch Longmate, and of his Son, the Editor of the present Volumes, we had no hesitation (in our Vol. LXXVIII. p. 327) in bestowing that commendation on a former Edition of this Work which we conscientiously were of opinion it described. Our praise is not of much avail; but the most substantial proof of its having been properly bestowed is, that the indulgence of the publick has render-. ed a new impression necessary in less than three years; and it is evident that. during that period, Mr Longmate has not been idle.

In a brief Advertisement,

"He returns his grateful thanks to many of the Nobility and Gentry for the valuable. Communications with which they have obliged him, and which have greatly contributed to the completion of the present Edition of the Pocket Peerage; in editing which, the greatest care and attention have been exerted (and he trusts not without success)

mities, religious and charitable Foundations, Literary Establishments, learned and scientific Institutions, &c. &c Interspersed with a Variety of original Anecdotes, eccentric Biography, critical Remarks, &c &c. Faithfully abridged from Mr. Pennant's London, and brought down to the present Year. Third Edition. By John Wallis Sherwood, Neely, and Jones

THIS Work, which professes to be a portable description of the Antiquities of London, comprehending its modern improvements, among the variety of information not to be found in any preceding work of its kind, refers the Reader to articles under the following heads:—Auction Mart, Commercial Road, the Magdalen, Mathematical Society, Moorfields, Flag Association, Fetter-lane, Fleet-Street, Freethinking Christians, French Change, Female Pentteutiary, Fishmongers' Hall, House of God, Horsemonger-lane, Pontack's, the Prisons, Paternoster-row, Cold Bath Fields, Cock-lane, Duke's-place, Dr. Falk, GENT. MAG. May, 1811.

sons's daughter did not go with them, no noise whatever was then heard; and this gave the first grounds for suspecting the whole as an imposition. In fact, the Writer of this article has had the opportunity of knowing some persons well acquainted with Parsons's family, from whom he learned that this girl, after shewing some specimens of her art to a young man who kept her company, acknowledged to him, that it was by the same means she amosed her credulous attendants at Cock-lane, as well as others upon some other trifling occasions. This woman the daughter of Parsons, after being twice married, died about four years ago, the wife of a gardener near Chiswick. This is a natural key to this supposed mystery."

"In Christ's Church passage, leading from Newgate-street to Christ Church, nearest to Bagnio-court, stood the Ordinary of the once famous Pontack, probably the first house for genteel accommodation in eating known in this Metropolis. It was opened by a person of this name soon after the great Revolution in 1688, and remained, if not a fashionable, a genteel Eating-house till within the last thirty years, since which the site has been occupied by the new vestry. This house was called Pontack's, from its being the sign of M. Pontack, who was a President of the Parliament of Bourdeaux, and from whom also the best French clarets derived their name. This was the first public place where persons could be speak a dinner from four to five shillings a head, to a guinea. This house was soon after followed by another, and at no great distance, which was called Caveaks.

DIE

"The Queen's Arms Tavern in Newgatestreet was also, within the same period, one of the Schools of Oratory, upon much the same plan as that more celebrated one of the Robin Hood near Temple Bar. Both of these, we believe, have been frequented by many public characters, who have since figured before some of the first audiences at the Bar, &c."

" Whitecross-Street,

well-street, is at present perhaps only remarkable for containing a greater number of liquor-shops in a smaller given space than any other neighbourhood. It is also a kind of meat-market. In the spring of 1796, during the height of the French Revolution, this crowded neighbourhood happened to be the scene of what might bear a the name of

"THE ENGLISH TEMPLE OF REASON.

"In a narrow paved passage, leading out of Whitecross street towards Bunhillrow, known by the name of Whitehorsecourt, some large rooms bearing the name of Nichols's Sale Rooms, were then converted into a place of assemblage for the delivery of Lectures upon the principles. of Deism, by several persons styling themselves Friends of Morality, at that time admirers of Paine's Age of Reason. must be acknowledged that some very good Lectures were delivered here with uncommon force and accuracy, though chiefly compiled from Voltaire and other Deistical Writers; but, in the end these reasoning philosphers were much deceived in their fond hopes, that the people in general were to be wrought upon without stronger motives than the reason and fitness of things; the immutable rules of right and wrong; the undeniable equity of doing as we would be done by; and even the principle of honeur! These, upon trial, were all too short to reach the object of moral reformation, which was proposed. The lecturers were convinced, by sad experience, that neither argument nor eloquence, grounded upon simple reason, were of the least weight upon vulgar minds and vicious characters when brought into competition with the powerful doctrines of future rewards and punishments.

" PREE-THINKING CHRISTIANS.

"The Rev. David Williams, at a Chapel in Margaret-street, had tried the same experiment a few years before, and with the genuine accomplishments of a scholar and a gentleman, but he relinquished the task. Chubb, Jacob Ilive, Anneit, and several others in the Metropolic had made similar efforts during the last century with inferior success. At present when description of people, who stile themselves Free-thinking Christians, are endeavousing to set up their reason, by decisioning against most of the doctrines which all other Christians derive from Revelition! It is to be remarked, that in all these reforming assemblies no kind of worship can be said to be performed, as neither prayer nor praise make any part of the duties; these are set aside in favour of successive harangues, generally delivered without even the common decorum that should attend every serious undertaking. But most assured y parents and heads of families, as they have done before, will forsake and discourage these ephemeral sectarian thinkers, and justly give the preference due to those modes of religious instruction, those usages, and that working devised by the wisdom of our forefathers, and which have been sanctioned by the experience of ages."

" SEAT OF THE BOOKSELLING BUSINESS.

"Every person conversant in the history of the Bookselling Business in this City must have heard that the brightal seat of the trade was in a great measure established in Duck-lane, Smithfild, and in Little Britain. With the view of illustrating this part of our history, we have collected the following particulars:

"Both Little Britain and Duck-lane, now called Duke-street, were once remarkable for Booksellers. In the year 1664-it seems, there were no less than four hundred and sixty pamphlets published in Little One of the more recent book-Britain. sellers, who, according to the eccentric John Dunton, distinguished this neighbourhood, was Mr. Richard Chiswell, "the most eminent in his profession in the three kingdoms, who well deserves the title of Metropolitan Bookseller of England. 'He has not been known to print either & bid book, or on had paper. He is admiratly well qualified for this business, and knowhow to value a copy according to he worth, witness the purchase be made Archbishop Tillotson's Octavo Sermons. Richard Chiswell, citizen and stationer. was interred in the Church of St. Giles. Cripplegate, in 1711.

Roger North, in his Life of Dr. John North, speaking of booksellers in the reign of Charles II. says, Little Britain was a plentiful and perpetual emporium of learned Authors, and men went thither as to a market. This drew a mighty trade, the rather because the shops were specimes, and the learned gladly reserted to them, where they seldom failed to meet with étadopje

trade, being more than 100 years of age. Some time before his death he used to be moved about in a chair."

" LITEBARY FUND.

"The house of this benevulent institution is in Gerrard-street, Soho. This is said to have originated in a society of men of letters, from a circumstance which occurred in 1788 to Floyer Sydenham, 'the ingenious translator of Plato, revered for his knowledge, and beloved for his candour and gentleness; but who died, in consequence of having been arrested, and detained for a debt to a victualier, who had for some time furnished his frugal dinner. Some obstacles however opposed themselves to the execution of this plan till May 1799, when another Society was formed, whose active endeavours, assisted by the Rev. David Williams, Mr. Nichols, and others, soon produced a permanent establishment, when a find was opened and officers appointed. In the course of the first fourteen years 2 4774, 12s, was subscribed, by which, besides defraying necessary expences, 279 cases of distress were relieved. Not less than ten or five pounds, upon an average, are assigned to ordinary cases; but the greatest delicacy is exercised on these occasious, as, provided that the character and claims of the supplicant are eight girls, and opened June 28, 1807. An anuexed freehold was also purchased for 2000L for the purpose of cularging the building as soon as convenient,

" Some industrious occupation is here a constant source of employment, independent of the trades or manufactures. boys, after a course of sudustrious employment, are bound apprentices, and are taught some manufacture in the house. The adults, as well as children, receive handsome encouragements in money to stimulate them in habits of industry. All the boys when admitted must be able to read Hebrew prayers, and those who add thereto a knowledge of English Readings are to be preferred. The boys are apprenticed at twelve or thirteen; the girls are kept till they are fifteen years of age, and taught to read, write, and cypher, needle work, knitting, washing, ironing, plain cooking, &c. If at nineteen they can bring a ceruficate of proper conduct, each girl receive five guiness as a reward. The support of the Jewish Hospital at Mile End is nobly calculated to do good to the necessitions. Jew in the present life, as a man and a brother, without forcing or imposting any conditions upon him as to his belief, or the least interference with his religious opinions." POEMS.

POEMS,

Written for the Anniversary of the Literary Fund, at Freemasons'-Hall, May 2, 1811.

I. ADDRESS *,

Written and Recited by WILLIAM-THOMAS FITZ-GERALD, Esq.

IN this bless'd Isle, where Commerce still bestows [woes;
On Thousands wealth; or comfort in their
Where true Benevolence supports her reign,
And honest want can never sue in vain!
We see unnumber'd Charities arise,
But no Asylum for the Learn'd and Wise;
No calm Retreat for years of mental toil,
And Health exhausted at the midnight oil;
No soothing Balm for wounds not, seen,
but deep, [weep;
Where the high Spirit hides the head to Where noble Pride disdains to ask Relief,
And conscious merit barbs the dart of

To seek for Worth obscured in Misery's shade, [aid; And bring the Cherub Hope to Learning's To raise the Muse's victim from the earth, And warm the seeds of Genius into birth; These are the springs which move your noble plan, [Man; That, like the Sun, beams light on studious Dispels his gloom with intellectual ray, And gives the promise of a glorious day.

grief!

The accomplish'd Heir of Brunswick's
Royal Line [Object's mine!"
Approved your plan, and said, "Your Taught in the World, which Princes rarely
see,

That Science to be useful must be free; He knows the Press, which only Tyrants [Great! Protects the Feeble, and supports the Makes England stand distinguish'd and [Throne! alone, With Freedom beaming round a Patriot Treasures long lost, to human eyes denied, Since Herculaneum sunk, and Pliny died! The Antient Lore Vesuvius whelm'd in night, [light 十! His Royal Bounty brings once more to Matchless in manners, and of taste refin'd, He feels that Genius is the wealth of mind; Feels that the Bard, the Moralist, the Sage, Deserve the gratitude of every age!

Amidst the complicated cares of State,

He owns the claims of Letter'd Worth are great;

And with a Princely feeling stands to view

And with a Princely feeling stands to view, Learning's High Patron, and her Votary Illustrious Minds above the power of fate, Though plunged in poverty, will still be Great!

Noble themselves, no station can debuse Men who can suffer all things but disgrace.—

To true Philosophy this power they owe; Of Vice and Anarchy the constant foe! Plunged in a dark impenetrable shade, How wretched, Man, without fair Science, aid,

More blind, deprived of that internal Light,
Than He who wanders in perpetual night,
An untaught savage roving for his prey,
Without one thought beyond the present day;

Scarcely above the Beast he hunts, in rank, His life, when hunger's satisfied, a blank; In listless indolence his hours are pass'd, The day before him barren as the last! But yet the dormant spark that Heaven bestows.

Though faintly burning, in his bosom glows;
Fair Science bids the soul improved aspire,
And Emulation faus the generous fire;
Learning completes what Nature first began,

And the fierce Savage feels himself a Man!
Thus the rough Diamond far from mortal sight,

Lies hid for ages in the realms of night,
'Till human skill explores the secret mine,
And shews the latent Jewel how to shine!
Now all the charities of life are found,

And social virtues multiply around;
Man feels the power of Cultivation's hand,
And Eden blooms in what was desert land!
If wants augment, his comforts too increase,
In war a Hero! and a Sage in peace!
His views enlarged pursue a nobler game,
And Honour calls him to the field of fame!
His gen'rous breast with patriot ardour

glows,
To guard his Country from her foreign fore;
Or, if a Wretch so vile the Soil debase,
To tear the Mask from home-bred Treason's face,

Whose mind accurst! and sacrilegious hand,
[Land]
Would plunge a dagger in his Native
Who is the Patriot?—He whose heart can feel

Whatever Partyrules, for England's Weal?
Who no contracted views, or motive knows,
Who loves his Country, and detests her Foes!

Whose breast, the fountain from a gen'rous spring,

Loyal to England, and to England's Kings

* "Being the Fifteenth Anniversary Poem which Mr. Fitz-Gerald has written for the Literary Fund."

^{† &}quot;The Literary World should never forget that they owe the preservation of the Herculaneum Manuscripts to the Prince of Wales. His Royal Highness employed at Gentleman for years, to superintend the enrolling of these curious Remains of Antient Literature."

Foe to his Crimes, but Rival of his Power; Where'er her gallant Sons the falchion wield, [field: The Gattic Lagions, vanquish'd, quit the IBERIA's plains the glorious truth attest, Where Victory plumes her wings on GRAHAM'S crest ! Numbers, in vain, oppose his valiant bands, Who hold their Country's honour in their Resolv'd to die, or conquer, they advance, And tear the EAGLE from presumptuous FRANCE, Through hosts of foes they out their glorious [Day ! way, And Fame immortal marks Bankosa's On every side the Patriot turns his eye, And sees his Country's Flag triumphant fy! Near Tages' banks, on Lusiyavia's shore, Tenice-Laurel'd Wellesley gains one Trophy more; One Trophy more! to those so nobly won, From Orient Regions to the Western Sun The baffled Calar most now forget his name, Fame +! The favour'd Child of Fortune and of His troops dismay'd no more our Hero face, But seek, by flight, their safety in diagrace.

And Heaven's own shield shall guard the While ruin'd Nations beave the inward

And waste their blood to prop a TYRART's

They see BRITANNIA at that awful hour, groan *,

power, Shall shake their chains with joy, and blast The very wretches, who is silence wait The Despot's nod — and tremble while they bate, Shall feel some pleasure warm the torpid breast, To see their Tyrant in his turn oppress'd! To mark his palled check, his haggard cye, His stifled anguish, and his bitter sigh! In the bright Temple of Immortal Fame, Glory auscribes her Favourite, Wellesley's name; Amidst the mgh-plum'd Champions of the land, In future ages, Wellington shall stand! There, too, traumphant Graham shall appear, Wielding aloft the mighty British Spear; And at their feet the shatter'd flags of France, [Lance! Her Captive Eagles, and her broken Thus shall Britannia's Monarch ever be Renown'd on every Shore, and Lord of every Sea ! France will not now her usual boast maintain, [MAIN: That Bairons only conquer OR THE Then let her Tyxant's Vanity subside-His ships are strangers to the Ocean's tide! While on the Seas he dares not trust his slaves. [Waves! The Majesty of England walks the † Massena has been called "the Spoil'd Child of Fortune,"

LAUYRI URK :

Throne!

^{*} The Lines that follow were written at two different times; immediately after the Battle of Barrosa; and when the official accounts arrived of Massena's Retreat, They are now consolidated, and added to this Address.

IL LINES.

Written by William Bushawan, Esq. [Whose less we have since to deplore !]

RELIEV'D from toils behold the aged

Contented, crop the rich enamel'd mead, Bask in the solar ray, or court the shade, As vernal suns invite, or summer heats

But; should the horn or clurion from afar Call to the chare, or summon to the wer; Ross'd to new vigour by the well-known sound, [mound, He spurus the earth, o'erleaps th' opposing Fects youthful ardour in each swelling vein, Darts through the rapid flood, and scens the plain [

Thus a lorn Muse, who, worn by cares and woos, [repose, Long sought retirement's calm, asccure With glad, though feeble, voice resumes her lay,

Wak'd by the call of this auspicious day.

What joy, from fortune's dread reverse secur'd, [dur'd]
To trace the dangers brav'd, the toils on-

To see of anxious cares the wish'd-for end, And find in ev'ry liberal heart a friend! Such joy is his, whose gen'rous real first plann'd

This bonsty which adorns his native land; Such genuine honours, such impartial praise,

Shall cheer his age, and gild his latest days.

Great his delight, all fears, all dangers o'er, Whose freighted bark regains his native shore; (and woes,

Sweet his content, from war's rude toils Who in his Country's bosom finds repose; But nobler far the rapture that attends, Divine Benevolence! thy farthful friends; When, ev'ry doubt dispell'd, all perils past, Hope's fondest dreams are realiz'd at last; When, at their call, the sons of Britain press, Prompt to deplore, and anyiers to redress.

Prompt to deplore, and anxious to redress, The wrongs which suff'ring wit and learning feel;

Each pain to mitigate, each wound to heaf:
Proud that their labours win his gen'rous smile, [our lale:
Whose councils rule, whose virtues bless
Who guards with filial love, with patriot zeal, [weal.

His Sovereign's glory, and his Country's Long may be claim; should Heaven his sway prolong, [of song!
Praise from the heart, beyond the pow'r

Or (noblest object of his food desire)

Resign that sway, unsullied, to his Sire!

May his lov'd Isle, to hapless genius kind, Rich in those virtues which exalt the mind, At home, maintain ber just impartial laws, In arms still visidicate blest Freedom's cause!

May his auspicious rule inspire the brave, And see new triumphs on the land and wave! See Gallia's hurl'd, No longer den See ruthless cease, And Britain's

A Tel
To the Memo SHALL Work
descens
Without one u
Forbid it all tl

And feed the f fire! Boscavian's 1

But while his While they the place —

The best of Fathers they shall see at cappend.
My lesser sorrows must be all suppressed.
Deep in the contemplation of my break;
There too I feel more grief than I impart,
And mourh him in the Science of the Bustle.
Endow'd with talents of no common hat,
He liv'd to all the ties of Nature true;
And what's superior in Religion's syb,
His blameless life prepared him how to dill

Written May 15, 1811, by William Teomas Free-G

A PARRWELL TO WICKBAM.

By the Rev. J. H. Michell, Rector Buckland, Herts.

Entracted from " Memoirs of the Life of Sir John Raviley Wilmot;" are p. 440,

WHY does the pensive thought and Betray the metancholy voice of grief?

Why breaks the deep, involuntary sigh, a Still penting for some lost uniquely relief?

Urg'd by caprice, or desk suspicion's

Is disappointed proise the source of pulse?

Or does inconstant fortune cappy of smile?

In vain such idle phentams crowd que significant Like midnight dreams that boying in the Far other griefs my auxious mind tentage.

O Memory! whose power, with magic

Can raise past images of blinder was and Can snatch the pencil from Children's band,

And make each fo eith-li

Thou ever please ever :
That best
subo

SOUTH BANK

Cease to recal those juys within Which Virtue and which Wi bestow'd.

Yet can I e'er forget each rural Where Innocence and Peace ' reign,

The silent walk along the villag Th' opening prospect o'er the plain:

The orient twilight, harbinger of That wakes the hamlet from bed,

The rustic flow'rs that round t play,

The oak o'ershadowing the

The smiling villager, to labour l Who halls each season roun delights, delights, [morn, The blossom'd Spring, the Summer scented Autumnal harvests, and gay Winter's hights?

Oh! can I e'er forget those heartfelt joys, That envious Portune spatches from my view,

While each find pleasure every thought employs, [renew? Which Fancy's powers, creative, still Shall I no more be to those joys restor'd, By Visdom temper'd, and by Wit refin'd, The converse innocent, the festive board, "The social charities" of Wilmor's mind?

WILMOT, whom loud Ambition's voice in

To glory call'd, and to the ear of Kings;
Who spurn d the pride of pomp, and Fortune's train, [brings;
And sought the pearle which Virtue only

Who deign'd to teach my reason to explore (Eager through devious paths unknown to stray)

The infant rud ments of legal yore, And shew'd, through many a maze, the brighter way.

How oft with Hun, o'er Inspiration's page, In search of right was pass'd the studious Unition by the late Mr. Configuration a short Time before his Death.

WORLD, I have known thee long, and now the hour [band; When I must part from thee is near at I hore thee much good will, and many a time

In thy fair promises reposed more trust Than wiser heads and colder beasts would risque.

Some takens of a life, not wholly penald in selfish strivings or ignoble sloth, Haply there shall be found when I am gobe, Which may dispose thy candour to discorn Some merit in my zeal, and let my works Outlive the maker, who bequeaths them to thee:

For well I know where our perception ends Thy pra se begins, and few there be who weave Wreaths for the Poet's brow, till he is laid Low in his narrow dwelling with the worm.

Ma. Uanan, Nursery, Westfelton, Salop.

AS you last year, at the request of my friend Mr. Parkes, honoured the Pleas'd to the world that she has shewn, How He, ordain'd by Her alone, Out magic'd all the spells of Science

Out-magic'd all the spells of Science.

Tutor'd by Nature, not the Nine,.
More than the Muses' powers combine,

Triumphantly o'er Death to raise him:
Isis, with Attic-laurel'd brow,
Bends to the Bard of Avon now,
And all her sons are proud to praise him.

Ye Spirits, bend around his bier, Ye Fays, in filmy palls appear,

Cold is the hand that once attir'd you; There chaunt, ye Flies of burnish'd blue, And Cowslips, drop your teary dew, Clos'd are the eyesthat once admir'd you.

Enshrowded in that curtain now He archly drew from Nature's brow

When first enraptur'd he survey'd her;
But, ere he left her fost'ring arms,
Fresh he enrob'd her doubled charms,
And to the astonish'd world display'd her.

O Time! I ask thee not to spare My rhymes, unworthy of thy care,

Yet for this day. Oh let me strew them, Like wild-flow'rs on a village grave That fondness flings (but cannot save) For love of him that lies below them.

But he, the bright star we hail to-day, O Time, shall never own thy sway.

But plume thy wing with angel feather; His light shall luster on thy glass, Gilding the sandgrains as they pass, And both—Oh both—shall fall together.

Avoniculex.

WRITTEN ON SOUTHDOWNS,
On beholding for the first Time MICHELGROVE, the antient Seat of the Shelleys; and shewing the Preservation of Genealogies to be a Christian Duty.

HALL of my Fathers! whence the heroes sprung, [sung. Whose deeds of Arms th' Historic Muses

Oh! had I view'd thee ere thy youth was form'd,

A bright ambition all my soul had warm'd;
I too had dar'd the honours of the fight,
And sav'd a name from never-ending night.
Long ere Britannia's Muse had learnt to soar,

Or yet a Chaucer or a Shakspears bore.

The battle raged, that gave the land a king,

From whom the historic scroll declares I., spring *.

Oh! be it mine t'exalt ev'n royal race, [boon disgrace].

Nor one mean passion Heav'n's high'

Virtue alone claims truly noble birth,

Raising to Heaven the meanest sons of earth.

Hail to my arms as mother, sister, brother, Who prompts one action nobler than another.

Oh! let me thus pursue my humble way, Illum'd, or hid, from Fame's illusive ray, Thrill with benevolence to all manking, And cultivate for them the Heav'n-horn mind.

Show forth in every act the golden rule.

Copy the prototype of Heaven's own school,

That rule extend to ages yet unborn †,

Nor pride of ancestry's high virtues scorn;

For what can save mad youth from dire disgrace,

Like conscious dignity of noble race?

Bear undeserv'd rebuke with temper meek,

And thought indignant in mild accepts

In sweet beneficence my treasure spend, Careless how soon life's varying wees shall end:

So shall the conqueror's joys no envy move,
And o'er my tomb may fall some tears of love.

J. H.

Gray's Inn-square, 2d April, 1811.

* Through a variety of marriages, and particularly that of Henry Shelley, of Worminghurst, co. Sussex, (descended by his father's marriage with Anne, daughter and heiress of Richard Sackvile, great uncle to the first Earl of Dorset, from Edmund Earl of Lancaster, brother to Edw. I.) with Barbara Crowmer, descended from Thomas de Brotherton, son of the same Monarch; and that of Susan, grand-daughter of the said. Henry Shelley, and heiress to her father of the same name, with John Hinckley, afterwards D. D. rector of Northfield, co. Worcester, Prebendary of Wolverhampton, and of Lichfield, great grand-father to the Writer. Also of Henry, son and heir of the said. John, with Elizabeth Boyse, grand-daughter of Dorothy, daughter and eventually heiress of George Danvers, of Upton, co. Worcester, and of Blisworth, co. Northampton. Spe Muniments at Heralds' College, and in Dugdale, Nash, Shaw, Wood, and Harewood.

† By preserving for posterity those facts which we may wish our ancestors had more perfectly commemorated for ourselves.

INDEX INDICATORIUS.

We should gladly oblige our Correspondent at Chatteris; but Marriages require a better authentication than initials.

In Pierce Plowman's Visions, Ee iij, Edit. 1561, we find the adjective Luther: Dr. H. asks what is its signification and derivation? On Sig. Zip. 2, l. last, "In Lushburth is a Luther alaye? Where is Lushburth?

The Continuation of the "Vindication of the London Society," by Pursuanana, is unavoidably postponed, but shall appear in our next; with Curonoscours, Dr. Surrwen, W. H. REID, W. P. &c. &c. &c.

respecting that musconduct was to be attributed to the delicacy of his situation, or to a wise discretion, in which such minds were seldom deficient. They all knew Low Gen. Grahim and his army had fought, acither need they be reminded in whose cause that army had prevailed over a much superior force, but was it to be endured, that while the Briti-h treops were performing prodigres of valour in an unequal contest, those Allies, for whose independence they were fighting, should stand by, the cold blooded spectators of deeds, the bare recital of which should have been enough to warm every man of them into a hero? If such an apathy should prevail generally among the Spanards, he should deem the re-establishment of their independ-nce altogether hopeless.

Mr. Perceval thought the Hon. Gentleman not warranted in the expressions he had used, nor did he think it a generous or fair anticipation of that judgment which was yet to be pronounced upon persons who were then epon their trial.

Mr Whathread hinted that General Graham had been foiled and obstructed in all his plans, and that the baggage preliminary speech, moved that the Circular Letter of Mr. Pole was a violation of the law, in requiring the Magistrates to do acts which were not authorized by law.

GENT. MAG. May, 1811.

The Earl of Liverpool saw no ground for the motion.

Lord Holland contended, that if any of the Magistrates, in executing the injunctions of Mr. Pole's Letter, had, on their being resisted, proceeded to acts of victence, they would have been liable to actions for false imprisonment.

The Lord Chancellor was of opinion that, under the Convention Act, the meeting of all classes of people in Ireland, whether Protestants, Dissenters, or Catholics, was unlawful. He thought the language of Mr. Pole's letter slovenly put together, and that it would have been improved by the omission of a word here and there.

Lord Stanhope professed himself satisfied with the admission of the noble and learned Lord.

The motion was negatived by a majority of 15.

In the Commons, the same day, Gen. Gascoigne, after taking a review of the Military Military Establishment from 1614 to the present time, and dwelling on the inadequate pay of the Officers, which he contended was less now than in 1695, owing to the deduction on account of the income-tax, moved for a Committee, to enquire into the State of the Army, as far as related to the distribution of the money granted for their pay.

Lord Palmerston remarked, that the gallant General, in allowing that Officers ought not to be exempted from paying the income-tax, had overthrown great part of the argument on which he rested his case. There was a material distinction between the pay granted to the privates and that given to the officers; the former found their own subsistence, which was far from being the case with the latter, whose chief objects in entering the army were the honours and distinctions to which merit must m due course of time advance them. thought the appointment of a Committee would excite expectations in the Army, and corresponding ones in the Navy, which it would not be in the power of the House to gratify.

Mr. Hutchinson argued in favour of an increase of pay to the Army, which would not exceed annually 80 or 90,000/.; and concluded a warm eulogium upon the military, by declaring that those who could think they would for a moment, by any grievances real or imaginary, forget their duty to themselves, their profession, and their country, were unworthy such an army.

Sir J. Pulteney, Messrs. Smith, Thornton, Wilberforce, and Taylor, supported the motion; which was opposed by Gen. Tarleton, and finally negatived without a division.

On the motion of Mr. Barham, a Committee was appointed, to consider of the practicability of carrying free labourers from the East to the West-Indies.

Mr. Perceral proposed, that in pursuance of the Act of Parliament, notice should be given to the East India Company of the expiration of their Charter, and that all arrears to them should be paid up, on or before April 10, 1814.

April 5.

In a Committee on the Printers' Regulation Bill, the Astorney General objected to the clause which went to impose only one penalty on Printers and Publishers, convicted of publishing any work, &c. without the Printer's name, &c. affixed thereunto. After a short discussion, during which it was strongly contended that no Magistrate ought to have the power of enforcing penalties to the amount of 20 or 30,000%; the Attorney General, in order to evince his desire to conciliate his Hon. and Learned Friend (Mr. Martin) agreed to introduce a clause, by which no person should be liable to more than 25 forfeitures of 201. each (5001.) The minimum of the mitigated penalty was fixed at 51.

The Foreign Ministers Salaries Bill was read a third time after a division.

In a Committee of Supply, Mr. Wharton moved the following sums, for defraying the charges of the Civil Establishment of the following Islands, from 1st Jan. to 31st Dec. 1811: For the Bahama Islands 34001.; Bermudas 10301.; Dominica, 6001.; Upper Canada 10,4501.; Nova Scotia 12,9651.; New Brunswick 56001.; Cape Breton 20601.; Prince Edward's Island 31001.; Newfoundland 39011.; New South Wales 13,3081. 15s.; for Bills drawn and to be drawn on New South Wales 30,0001.; for defraying the charge of the Storekeeper General's Department 49,4001.

Mr. Huskisson's motion, that there be laid before the House a Comparative Scale of the Commercial Discounts of the Bank of England from Jan. 1. 1790, to Jan. 1811, was opposed by Messrs, Manning, Thornton, and Baring; and supported by Messrs. Horner, Marriett, Magens, and Smith; and finally negatived by a majority of 33.

April 8.

The Grand Southern Canal Bill was thrown out, on the 2d reading, by a majority of 83.

Mr. Perceval brought up a Message from the Prince Regent, representing "the severe distresses to which the inhabitants of Portugal have been exposed, both in their persons and property, by the events of the War, and the wanton and savage barbarity of the French, especially in their recent retreat — distresses which must affect every one who has any sense of religion and humanity;" and requesting that speedy and effectual relief may be afforded them."

Lord Folkestone called the attention of the House to the scarcity of small change.

Mr. Wharton, in a Committee, proposed a grant of 14,9451. for the settlement of Sierra Leone; which, after some discussion, was granted.

The Navigable River Robbery, Bleaching-ground Robbery, and the Shop Privately Stealing Bills, were passed; as was, after a division, the Bill for preventing Stealing in a Dwelling-house.

In a Committee of Ways and Means, the Chancellor of the Exchequer moved that there be granted to his Majesty the sum of 427,000L as the produce of Portuguese.

Earl Grossenor opposed the grant, which was warmly supported by the Marquis of Lansdowne, and carried without further opposition.

House or Commons, April 10.

Mr. Speaker intimated that he had given notice to the East India Company of the Resolution of the House relative to the expiration of their charter.

The House having formed itself into a Committee of Supply, the Message of the Prince Regent, requesting rehef for the Portuguese, was read, upon which the Chamellor of the Exchequer rose, and concluded an able speech, in which he stated that the measure for granting pecuniary relief to the Portuguese had the earnest recommendation of Lord Wellington, by moving that 100,000%, be granted for that purpose.

Mr. Ponsorby seconded the motion, declaring that it was a measure not less due to the spirit of Portugal, than to the magnitudity and generosity of Great Britain. He regretted that the expenditure of this country made it necessary to finit the vote to so small a sum.

currence in the motion; and, having done justice to the merits of the British Commander-in-Chief, caudidly acknowledged that the late successes in Portugal were the more welcome, as they were not anticipated on his part, and were obtained by so small a sacrifice of lives.

The Earl of Suffolk shortly spoke; after which the motion was carried nem. diss. As was another Vote of Thanks to the Portuguese Officers, &c. under Marshal Sir William Beresford.

In the Commons the same day, in a Committee of Supply, the sum of 3,200,000L was moved by Mr. Perceval, and granted, for the Army Extraordinaries of Great Brita n and Ireland for the year 1811.

Mr. Perceval said, it had often fallen to his lot to submit unpleasant things to that House, such as a state of war must always render necessary, but the same state of war not unfrequently furnished occasions of a very different description; and, indeed, one of the pleasantest dicties that man could perform was, to recommend to the notice of Parhament those brilliant instances of military talents and glory which occurred when whole armies or navies were contending for the safety of the country. On such occasions, the individual performing this duty felt as much gratification in making his proposition, as the House did in adopting it. He had now to lay before the House circumstances as gratifying as any that ever occurred in the history of the country. He meant the events which had occurred in Portugal; and of which none could be more important, none in the course of which such skill, genius, and bravery, had been displayed, none that had been better planned, or attended with more signal success, and none that was ever attended with so little comparative loss, in proportion to the gain arising from it. All must have felt that, on many occasions, when Votes of Thanks were passed for brilliant victories, the scene was darkened by shades of gloom and sorrow. When Thanks were proposed for the victory of Talavera, and the recent victory of Barrosa, the consideration of the great loss sustained, abated the pleasure that would otherwise have been When the account of the evermemorable and glorious victory of Trafalgar was received in this country, there was a suspense in the public mind, whether it was not rather a subject of grief than of joy; whether the advantage gained by it was equal to the loss occasioned by the fall of the illustrious Nelson, and the many gallant men who fell with him. It was even doubtful whether there were not some who would have relinquished the advantages of that victory, could they have regained the Hero who was lost to his country. These, however, were all minor considerations; but, such as they were, none of them existed in the present instance; and the House must see how little cause of grief existed in the events to which he now referred. He would not enter into a detailed narrative of the Campaign in Portugal. But it was due to Lord Wellington to say, that it was to his talents, bravery, and indefatigable exertions, we were indebted for the extent of the successes gained over the Enemy in that country. And it was to his caution and regard for the lives for his soldiers, to his enlightened foresight, by which, at the commencement of the campaign, he provided for the exigencies which afterwards occurred, that we were now to ascribe the little loss which our army sustained. It would, indeed, be impossible for him adequately to describe the merits of the eampaign: that was a thing which must be left to the future historian; and the historian would do it justice. He would not now enter into the question whether Portugal was the proper place for a scene of military operations. But he would ask those persons who thought it unwise to carry on war there, were they not now ready to concur in a Vote of Thanks to one who had overcome all the difficulties originally pointed out by them? Lord Wellington had at all times contemplated the defence of Portugal, not on the frontiers of that Kingdom, although circumstances did render it necessary at one time to keep his army on the frontiers; but on the fortresses and the strong lines, in which he afterwards intrenched himself near Lisbon. He kept his army for a time on the frontier. because he was then keeping the Enemy off the frontier. But while he was entrenched on the banks of the Coa, he was fortifying Lisbon on the banks of the Tagus. And when he found it necessary to retreat, he did most strongly intrench himself in his works near the capital; and the event fully proved the wisdom of his military experiment. He would not meet the Enemy on ground chosen by them, which would be greatly to his disadvantage; but, he said, in one of his letters sent, they must fight him on his own ground. The whole success then was owing to the consummate skill of this most able General. He wished the House to see how this successful campaign would affect our interests, and those of our Allies. To our Allies it would be of the utmost consequence, because it would enable them to make increased exertions for their defence. And with respect to ourselves, it raised our character so high in the eyes of the whole world. that we should become the terror of the Enemy, and the hope of all countries oppressed by that Enemy. And it placed our Military power on such a footing of fame and of strength, that if ever a French Army attempted to land on our shores, it would be met by troops which had beat the disciplined soldiers of France, commanded by Generals who had out-generalled their most renowned Marshals. What must the feelings of the Enemy be now after all their boasting about military successes? would they now say that an extent of dominion was an extent of strength? Was there not now reason to hope that the oppressed nations of Europe would take a lesson from us; and that we might be instrumental in the deliverance of the world from the tyranny under which a great part of it laboured? Was there not reason to hope that in the Peninsula, which had been the scene of the most extravagant demonstrations of French tyranny, that very tyranny guarding the Ford of Rapoilla de Coa with a detachment at the hindge of Cerrerias, and his left at Sabugal, and the 8th Corps was at A.tayares. The right of the British army was opposite Sabagal, and the left at the or dge of Ferremas. The Militia under Gen. Trant and Col. Wilson crossed the Coa below Almeida, in order to theceaten the communication of that mace with Ciudad Rodrigo and the Enemy's army. The river Coa is difficult of access t aroughout its course, and the position which the Enemy had taken was very strong, and could be approached only by its left. The troops were therefore put in motion on the 3d, to turn the Enemy's left above Sabugal, and to force the passage of the bridge of that town, with the exception of the 6th division, which remained opposite the 6th corps, which was at Rovina; and one buttahon of the 7th division, which observed the Enemy's detachment at the bridge of Ferremas. The 2d corps were in a strong position, with their right upon a height immediately above the bridge and town of Sabugal, and their left extending along the road to Alfayates, to a height which commanded all the approaches to Sabugal from the light division; the 3d division, under Maj -gen. Picton, at a ford on their left, about a mile from Sabugal; and the 5th division, under Maj gen. Dunlop, and the artillery, at the bridge of Sabugal. Col. Beckwith's brigade of the light division were the first that crossed the Coa, with two squadrons of cavalry on their right. Four companies of the 95th, and three companies of Col. Elder's Caçadores drove in the Enemy's piquets. and were supported by the 43d regiment, At this moment a ram-storm came on, which rendered it impossible to see any thing, and these troops having pushed on in pursuit of the Enemy's picquets, came upon the left of their main body, which it had been intended they should The light troops were driven back upon the 43d regiment, and as soon as the atmosphere became clear, the Enemy having perceived that the body which had advanced were not strong, attacked them in a solid column. supported by cavalry and artillery. These troops repulsed this attack, and advanced in pursuit upon the Enemy's position, where they were attacked by a fresh column on their left, and were charged by the first Hussars on their right.

Monid

They retired and took post right. behind a wall, from which post they again repulsed the Enemy, and advanced a second time in pursuit of them; and took from them a howitzer. They were, however, again attacked by a fresh column with cavalry, and retired again to their post, where they were joined by the other brigade of the light division, consisting of the two battalions of the 52d regiment, and the 1st Caçadores. These troops repulsed the Enemy, and Col. Beckwith's brigade and the first battalion of the 52d regiment again advanced upon them. They were attacked again by a fresh column supported by cavalry, which charged their right; and they took post in an inclosure upon the top of the height, from whence they could protect the howitzer which the 43d had taken: and they drove back the Enemy. The Enemy were making arrangements to attack them again in this post, and had moved a column on their left, when the Light Infantry of Maj.-gen. Picton's division, under Lieut.-Col. Williams, supportreats the Hon. Maj.-gen. Colville's braide, opened their fire upon them. At the same moment the head of Maj.-gen. Dunlop's column crossed the bridge of the Coa, and ascended the heights on the right flank of the Enemy; and the cavalry appeared on the high ground in rear of the Enemy's left, and the Enemy retired across the hills towards Rendo, leaving the howitzer in the possession of those who had so gallantly gained and preserved it, and about 200 killed on the ground, and six Officers and 300 prisoners in our bands.

Although the operations of this day were, by unavoidable accidents, not performed in the manner in which I intended they should be, I consider the action that was fought by the Light Division, by Col. Beckwith's brigade principally, with the whole of the 2d corps, to be one of the most glorious that British troops were ever engaged in. The 43d Regiment, under Maj. Patrickson, particularly distinguished themselves; as did that part of the 95th Regiment in Col. Beckwith's brigade, under the command of Maj. Gilmour, and Col. Elder's Cacadores: the 1st batt. 52 Regt. under the command of Lieut.-Col. Ross, likewise shewed great steadinessand gallantry, when they joined Col. Beckwith's brigade. Throughout the action the troops derived great advantage from the assistance of two guns of Capt. Bull's troop of Horse Artillery, which crossed at the ford with the light division, and came up to their support. It was impossible for any officer to conduct himself with more ability and gallantry than Colonel Beckwith. The action was commenced by an unavoidable accident to which all operations are liable; but, having been commenced, it would have been impossible to withdraw from the ground without risking the loss of the object of our movements; and it was desirable to obtain possession, if possible, of the top of the hill, from which the Enemy had made so many attacks with advantage, on the first position taken by the 43d Regt. This was gained before the 3d division came: up. I had also great reason to be satisfied with the conduct of Col. Drummond, who commands the other brigade in the light division.

When the firing commenced, the 6th corps broke up from their position at Rovina, and marched towards Rendo. The two corps joined at that place, and continued their retreat to Alfayates, followed by our eavalry, part of which was that night at Soito. The Enemy continued their retreat that night and the next morning; and entered the Spanish frontier on the 4th. They have since continued their retreat, and yesterday the last of them crossed the Agueda. I have the honour to enclose the return of killed and wounded from the 18th of March. I am concerned to have to report that Lieut-Colonel Waters was taken prisoner on the 3d before the action commenced. He had: crossed the Coa to reconnoitre the Encmy's position, and was surrounded with some hussars, and taken. He had rendered very important services upon many occasions in the last two years; and his loss is sensibly felt. I sent six squadrons of cavairy, under Maj.-gen. Sir W. Erskine, on the 7th, towards Almeida, to reconnoitre that place, and drive in any parties which might be in that neighbourhood, and to cut off the communication between the garrison and the army. He found a division of the 9th corps at Junça, which he drove before him across the Turon and Duas Casas: and he took from them many prisoners. Captain Bull's troops of horse artillery did great execution upon this occasion. The Enemy withdrew in the night across the Agueda. The Allied Army have taken up the position upon the Duas Casas, which Brig.-gen Crauford occupied with his advanced guard in the latter part of the siege of Ciudad Rodrigo; having our advanced posts upon Gallegos and upon the Agueda. The Militia are at Ciuco Villas and Malpartida. The Enemy have no communication with the garison of Almeida. from whence they have lately withdrawn file, 8 horses, killed; I General Staff, I Major, 2 Captains, 5 Lieutenants, 2 Ensigns, 8 Sergeants, 2 Drummers, 117 rank and file, 11 horses, wounded; 4 rank and file and 1 horse missing.

Total Partuguese Lass. — 1 rank and file killed, 9 rank and file wounded; 1 Lieut,-Colonel missing.

Foreign Office, April 25. Extract of a Dispatch received by the Marquis Wellesev from C. Stuart, Esq. his Majesty's Murster at Lisbon, dated April 13, 1811.

Marshal Beresford Laving completa ed the bridges over the Guadiana, crossed that river on the ath inst. On the 7th the French attacked has advanced posts in the neighbourhood of Ohvence, but were repuised with loss. The French withdrew the garrisons, excepting 300 men, from Ohvence, and three battalions from Badajoz, on the same day. The whole corps of Martier, consisting of 6000 men, took up a position between Absaeira and Sta. Martha on the 8th. Telegraphic accounts, dated the 12th, mention that the French have since retired by the road to Seville; visions into Badajoz and Olivença. Sir W. Beresford's advanced guard crossed the Guadiana on the 4th list.; and I am concerned to report that a squadron of the 13th Light Dragoons, which were on prequet under May Morres, were surprised, on the night of the 6th, by a detachment of the Luemy's cavalry from Olivency. I have not received the return of the loss upon this occasion, but I am informed that the whole of the squadron, with the exception of 20 men, were taken prisoners. The Enemy have since retired, as I am informed, entirely from Estremadura, leaving small garrisons in Bade oz and Olivença. Marshid Sir W. Beresford has taken a position to invest both Bad soz and Onvença. A detachment of the 5th army, which is now commanded by Gen. Castanos, is, Lunderstand, at Merida. Since I last addressed your Lordship, General Zay as had again landed the troops under b's command, and had agon embarked them, and returned to Cadiz. General Baltasteros' division alone, therefore, continues in the Condado de Niebla: but, from a letter from Mr. Wellesley of the 11th, I learn that Gen. Blake was himself about to come into the Condada de Niebla totake the command of Gen. Ballasteros's division, and the troops which had been under the command of Gen. Zayas, and which were to return to that quarter. Gen. Blake had expressed ananxious desire to co-operate with Marshal Sir W. Beresford. Gen. Castanos has been appointed to command the army in Gallicia, as well as the 5th army, lately the army of the left, commanded by the late Marquis of Ro-

Foreign-office, Downing-street, April 30. Dispatches were this morning received by the Marquis Wellesley from Charles Stuart, Esq. his Majesty's Minister at Lisbon, under date the 20th inst. stating that the garrison of Olivença, consisting of 310 men, surrendered at discretion to the Allied Army on the 14th inst. and was marched to Elvas. Marshal Mortier, with 4000 men, was in the neighbourhood of Llerena, having detached a moveable column, under Gen. Mortiniere, by the way of Almarez, towards Toledo. Gen. Beresford, with that part of the Allied Army which does not form the siege of Badajoz, was in the neighbourhood of Santa Martha. The corps of Gen. Ballasteros had its head quarters in Seguro de Leone on the 12th. His cavalry was at Zafra on the 13th, on which day Lord Wellington left Villa Formosa on the Coa, to join the army in Estremadura. — The brilliant successcs of the Allied Army have been celebrated by every demonstration of joy which can mark the gratitude of the Portuguese for the exertions of the British in their behalf, and for the satisfaction inspired by the salvation of their country. Te Deum has been sung in the Churches; the city has been illuminated; and shortly after the publication of the Proclamation enclosed in a former dispatch, the letters, of which I have the honour to enclose copies, were addressed to. Lord Wellington and Marshal Beresford, by the Government and the Mimister.

Downing-street, May 7. Extract of a Dispatch addressed to Lord Liverpool by Lieut.-gen. Viscount Wellington, dated Portalegre, April 25.

I have the honour to inform you, that since I addressed you, I have been in Estremadura, from whence I am now on my return to the troops stationed between the Agueda and the Coa. have the honour to enclose the report of Marshal Sir William Beresford, on the surprise of a squadron, 13th Light Dragoons, on the night of the 6th instant, together with a return of the loss upon that occasion. Sir Wm. Beresford employed the 4th division, under the command of the Hon. Maj:-gen. Cole, in the attack on Olivenza, which place turrendered at discretion on the 15th inst. I. have the honour to enclose the report of the Hon. Maj.-gen. Cole to Sir William Beresford, and returns of ordnance, arms, &c. and prisoners taken in the place. As Sir William Beresford deemed it desirable to oblige the Enemy to retire from the province of Estremadura entirely, before he should commence his operations against Badajoz, be moved forward with this view, while Maj-gen. the Hon. G. L. Cole was engaged in the attack upon Olivença, as well as to give support and protection to Gen. Ballesteros's division of Spanish troops, which had been obliged to retire from Freyenal successively upon Xeres de los Caballeros and Salvatiera on the 13th and 14th instant, by a division of French. troops under the command of Gen. Maransin. The Marshal marched on the 15th to Santa Martha, and on the 16th to Los Santos, where the British and Portuguese cavalry fell upon a body of the Enemy's cavalry, and took 160 prisoners, and killed and wounded a great The cavalry conducted themselves with the utmost steadiness and The Enemy having retired good order. to Guadalcanal, and the corps under Gen. Maransin baving retired through the Sierra, the troops were put in motion to return to the Northward, and to take their stations for the operations of the siege of Badajoz; and the Marshal met me at Elvas on the 21st. We reconnois tred Badajoz on the 22d, escorted by the two light battalions of the King's German Legion, and two squadrons of Portuguese cavalry. They brought three battalions out of the town, which skipmished with our troops; but I have not yet received the returns of our loss upon this occasion. As the preparations for the siege are nearly completed, the place would by this time have been regularly invested, only that on the night of the 23d the floods in the Guadiana carried away the bridge which Sir W. Beresford had, with great difficulty, constructed under Jaramenha; and the river was no longer fordable any where. Under these circumstances I yesterday desired him to delay the operations of the siege, till he should have been able to re-establish his bridge, or until the Guadiana should again become fordable; still keeping Badajoz blockaded as closely as might be in his power.

Olivença, April 16. Sir, My letter of yesterday by my Aide-de-camp, Captain Roverca, will pare flanking batteries of field-pacces, I sent a strumons to the governor, a copy of which I have the beneur to raclose, with his answer, which being a refusal to accept the terms I offered, our fire immediately commenced, and was returned with some spirit from the town. At 11 o'clock a white flag was hoisted by the Energy and on officer came out with a left r from the Governor, weopy of which I have the bolour to niclose, with my answer, and the Governor's reply, to which I sent none, and recommenced our him. After a tew rounds, a white flag was ag un ho sted, and they surrendered at di cretion, and the Franciscan Gate was taken possession of by the grenadier company of the 11th Pormules, prisoners - 1s Batt. 40th Foot, 1 wounded, 1 prison r — 97th Foot, 3 wounded, 2 prisoners.

T PEYNELL, Lieut.-col. Assist.-Adj.-Gen, Return of Spanish Prisoners released at the Capture of Olivença.

9 Officers, 80 Non-commissioned Officers and rank and file. Total 89. Return of Officers, &c. composing the French garcison of Olivenna. 1 Colonel, I Lient.-colonel, I Captain, 6 Subalterns, 16 Medical Office's, 3 Commissariat Department, 357 Noncommissioned officers and rank and file. effective: 96 sick and wounded in hospital --- Tə*əl 481.

R.EGERTON, Capt. Dep.-Assist.-Adj Gen.-

ABSTRACT OF FOREIGN OCCURRENCES.

SPAIN AND PORTUGAL. The town of Campo Mayor, in course. emence of the gallant defence which at GENT. MAG. May, 1811.) to " at an army infinitely superior tout' the garrison, is to have, be of an Regency, a motto. A . . T. mat of A for an a systemetr of the $\alpha(i)$ a welow the shield of made when attacked by Mortier, with its armorial bearing, in these words, "Loyalty and Valour."

The circumstances attending the capture of Figueras were as follows .—Some Catalonian soldiers, whom the French had forced into their service, sent intelligence to Colonel Rovir: s, who commanded a body of 1,500 Catalonians, that if they would approach the place at night, they would open one of the sallyports to his troops. Accordingly on the night of the 10th of April, Colonel Roviras with his party entered the citadel of Figueras, and, after putting to death the only sentry who discovered them, he so completely surprised the whole garrison in their beds, that not a shot was fired, or the smallest opposition made; and the whole garrison, consisting of one thousand men, and forty officers, were taken prisoners.

The Cortes have decreed, amongst other resources for carrying on the present war, the sale of the Royal domains; reserving, however, the palaces, with the forests and territory immediately adjacent to these edifices.

King Joseph quitted Madrid for France on the 27th; left Gen. Nagrita, Regent; and gave out that he should return in two months.

Letters, dated Gibraltar, 5th inst. mention, that a strong detachment of French from Malaga had attacked the town of Estepona (near that garrison), which was defended only by the peasantry of the place; and after three hours' hard fighting, the French were obliged to make a hasty retreat back to Malaga.

Lord Wellington has, it is reported, sought permission of the Cortes to raise two corps of Spaniards, of 20,000 men each, to be clothed, subsisted, officered, and paid at the expence of Great Britain.

The Lisbon Gazette lately contains a long article, inticuled "Considerations on the Retreat of Massena;" in which it is shewn that Massena had in view to occupy the North of Portugal. After pointing out the manner in which the execution of this scheme was disappointed, the Writer states the loss sustained by the Enemy in the retreat; and of this part of the article we have made the following abstract:

Loss of the Enemy from Santarem to the Alva.

Died on the road, or taken prisoners on the way to Pombal - - 300 Killed or taken in Pombal - 200 in Redinha - - 700
in Miranda de Corvo - 150 in Foz de Aronce - 2000 on the Banks of the Alva 1000

Found dead in the roads, in consequence of fatigue or sickness 2550.

Total loss in men, besides artilless and baggage, on the retreat to the Alva.

From the Alva to Celerico, a distance of only 44 leagues, the enemy retreated with great rapidity, and lost about.

Killed by the Ordenanza at Guarda.

In the action in which the

After this action Major-Gen. Essking routed a division of the 9th French corps near Ameida; but the loss on this co-casion is not stated. Having finished the details from which we have extracted the above enumeration, the writer of the Gazette proceeds to make the following observations:

British Light Division de-

"Massena, consequently in his retreat, lost more than 12,000 men, and therefore left behind him a fourth park of his army; since it is generally reported that, when he last reviewed it. it did not exceed from 44 to 45,000 men. He lost the greater part of his artillery and baggage, withdrawing his garrisons from Almeida and Ciudad Rodrigo : what is more, Lord Wellington was able to detach an army, under the orders of General Boresford, to the South of the Tagus, whose operations have been highly favourable. The reconquering of Campo Mayor, Olivenza, and the blockade of Badajoz, are owing to the ill-combined retreat of General Massens, and to the skilful manœuvres of Leed Wellington, who always compelled him abandon his positions. We shall finish these considerations with an inportant note: -- Massena was obliged. to retreat by a road very confined; and lie plan of devastation did not extend more than a league in diameter; such was the vivacity and promptitude with which he was pursued! To set on fire and destroy the places through which he passed. in: not a proof of tranquillity of spirit, nonthe effect of his good retreat; it is nothing but the result of the de of his heart; the effect of that degree of cruelty and degradation to which the, French hosts have arrived. A few companies in the rear were sufficient to set all the places on fire through which then passed. In many places our people antinguished the fire a few minutes at these barbarians lighted it. The recei lection of these detestable people:d remain much longer than the missishing they have done us."

communed their retreat to the woods between Gallegos, Espejas, and Fuentes de Honor. On the 9th they crossed the Azava, and the 10th the Agueda, leaving Almeida to its fate. In the action of the 3d of May the British loss consisted in 22 killed and 431 wounded; that of the Portuguese 14 killed and 33 wounded. On the 5th the British loss consisted of 148 killed and 872 wounded. The Portuguese loss 50 killed and 158 wounded, The number of the Allies missing on the two days amounted to 316. The the two days amounted to 316. enemy's loss appears to have been very great in killed, wounded, and prisoners, but no return has been transmitted of the exact amount.

" LIVERPOOL," (Signed) Lord Wellington purposely declined a more general action, and contented himself with repulsing the Enemy, and frustrating his object, which was to relieve Almeida. By this plan he probably msures the fall of that fortress; and will, when that event takes place, find biniself in a condition to undertake bolder measures with less risk.

STATEMENT OF THE FRENCH FORCE WHICH ENTERED SPAIN FROM 1807

TO JAN. 1, 1811.

In 1607—Infantry 47,500 Cavalry 7,120

massens entered a ortugal with 70,000 men, to which is to be added the 9th corps, which raised his force to 88,000. FRANCE.

The Paris Theatres have all brought out new pieces on the occasion of the birth of the King of siome- Le Berceau"-"La Nouvelle Telegraphique"—"La bonne Nouvelle" -L'Espoir reahsée"— " La Buche celeste"-are all analogous to the grand (vent;-and amid these foolenes, not a thought is wasted on their acmy in Portugal.

The commercial embarrassments at Paris increase daily, and the distress occasioned by the last three tailures was must extensive. The house of Piertot and Co. one of those that fulled, was in the direction of the French Bank, one or the Receivers-General of the Empire, and private Banker to the Empress Josephine.

The Paris papers contain Victor's report of the battle of Barrosa; being the 3d version of the story given by the French Government. It represents the whole of the Allied Army, which it magnifies to 22,000 men, of which 2000 were British, as engaged at the same time. The Enemy have been more frank in confessing the amount of their loss than we expected. They acknowledge to have have had 1700 killed and wounded. Their real loss was nearly double. Victor prefers the following charge against Sebastiani:—"The 4th corps, which is not seriously employed, had it in its power to send me a part of its force. I intreated M. the General Sebastiani to manœuvre by Estepona, in order to alarm the enemy, and place him in danger, should be execute a movement upon me; that corps, so numerous, and in such good condition, has not been of the least assistance to me."

Paris Papers to the 13th inst. state the arrival of Marshal Ney in that city, but do not assign any motive for his return.

When Gen. Wirion was accused of exercising oppression towards the prisoners of war at Verdun, he was sent for to Paris, to answer the charges laid against him by Sir Thomas Lavic; he appeared before the Prince of Neufchatel (General Berthier), then Minister of War, who gave him the written accusation, with directions to give in his reply to it, and with this admonition :-- "General! take this, and read it seriously: rebut the charges if you can; but I advise, if you cannot most clearly do away the charges, that you take your pistol and blow your brains out."—Gen. Wirion very coolly took the accusation, read it, and retired; loaded his pistols, went in his cabriolet to the Bois de Boulogne, and put in practice the kind advice of the Minister of War, by scattering his brains in the air.

HOLLAND.

A gentleman arrived from Holland states, that Buonaparte has i-sued a new decree, prohibiting men from marrying under the age of 30; and those who wish to marry at that period, must bring 14 witnesses to testify their age. This is done in consequence of the new Conscription.

GERMANY.

According to letters from Vienna, Pius the Seventh has been again assailed by the promises and menaces of Buonaparte's agents to resign the Pontifical dignity: which he had in a firm but temperate manner refused.

The march of the French troops from Magdeburgh, and other places, to the shores of the Baltic, is confirmed.—Prussia has acceded, after much delay and difficulty, to the Khenish Confederation; and, as a preliminary measure, has placed 24,000 of her troops under the orders of the French General Rappe, the Commanding Officer of the Protector on the Southern shores of the Baltic. The differences between Russia and France are said to be accommodated.

The Duke of Oldenberg, on being dispossessed of his territory by the injustice of Buonaparte, not only protested against the measure, but published a farewell. address to his subjects, in which he deplores the necessity he was under of abandoning them for the present, and expresses hopes that the mediation of his kinsman, the Emperor of Russia, would be successful in restoring him. On account of the strong language in which the address was couched, its circulation was forbidden by Keverberg, the Prefect of the Ems, who also required that those who had copies should give them up. The Duke was offered a pension by Buonaparte; but, thinking that his acceptance might be deemed a compromise of his rights, he rejected it.

M. Hertz Hamburgh, a learned Jew, has, by command of the Emperor Francis, composed a book of morals peculiarly appropriated to the Jewish nation; and in this work the maxims of a sound philosophy are supported by passages from the Old Testament.

A fire which broke out at Neumarktel on the 13th of March, destroyed 300 houses: and 130 persons of all ages, perished in the flames; many bodies remain buried under the ruins. Those wounded were very considerable.

On the 26th of March a dreadful fire broke out in the village of Kohlenfeld, in Hanover, and assisted by a violent wind from the South-east, spread with incredible rapidity. In less than half an hour, 153 houses of the unfortunate inhabitants, who were mostly from home employed in cultivating their fields, were reduced to ashes. This calamitous event has reduced 483 persons to mendicity.

In working a coal mine at Liege, on the 25th ult. the inflammable air took fire, and a terrible explosion was the consequence; by which 35 men were killed on the spot, and 18 more or lessdangerously wounded.

PROJECTED TRAVELS INTO THE INTERNIOR OF AFRICA,

A German of the name of Routgen, a. scholar of the celebrated Blumenbach, in Gottingen, has announced his intention to endeavour to penetrate into the interior of Africa, nearly in the track.. pursued by Mr. Hornemann, who, as he has not been heard of for nearly ten years, is thought to have perished in the enterprise. This young man is about. twenty years of age, and seems to have obtained all that kind of knowledge which is particularly necessary for hispurpose. He understands the Arabiq: language, is remarkably abstemious, and has accustomed himself to make raw flesh and insects his food. At Gottingen; he submitted to circumcision, that he which will be thus me wased to 40,000 men. The son of Bernslotte has been created Duke of Sid rmana.

Copenhagen, Apr. 1 d.—The following is a translation of a letter which the vernor of Anho t wrete on the 29th of March last, to Major General de Telliquest, Commun. or a Confine Juneary.

quest, Commune or a Confin Judand —
"SIR,—In constitution of the bravery of which the troops of his Danash Majesty gave proof in their strack of this Island, and which has excited my admiration, I have spensora cartel, and sent a trainsii Officer, who is marged to propose the exchange of the 20 m litary prisoners whem I set at liberty upon their parole of horour, and whose arrival Theg you to a knowledge in writing, or it is more agreeable to you, to send me back an equal number of English prisoners. Your Excellency may be assure, that the greatest care shall be taken of the wormeed, and every attention paid their. The Commander in Chief of the expantion, who died in the field of honour, where he manufested so much tray ry, shall be to-morrow interred with all the henours due to a man who perished with so much glory. I have the honour to be, &c.

(Signed, " J, W . MAURICE."

-Capt. Hoste had arrived with his squadron and prizes at Malta. Sir J. Stewart was there on his return from Sicily to England.

AAIA.

The Indian Government has offered a remaindration of 6000% for the importation of the cachineal insect into their territory, from the coast of South America.

A drought and famine lately afflicted the province of Veltore; by which, according to the estimates of the District Collectors, 6000 people perished, and upwards of 18,000 head of cattle.

The Princess of Oudspore died lately in Hindostan, by poison.—She was the daughter of the Rangof Oudspore, whose family being accounted more antient and honographe than that of any other Hindoo Prince, his alliance was naturally sought by the neighbouring Potentates, of daypore and Joudpore, who both aspired to the hand of the Princess. The rivalship of these two Rajahs produced a war, in which Scindia, Holkar, Ameer Khan, and all the native chieftains in that quarter, have at one time or other taken a part. The poison was administered to the Princess by her own aunt, and with the knowledge of her father.

Report adds, that the whole scheme was secretly contrived by Ameer Khan; who, finding that the Rana of Oudipore (now entirely in his power) was too far engaged to the Jaypore Rajah to retract, and resolved that his own ally, the Rajah of Joudpore, should not be disgraced by the triumph of his rival, suggested this expedient, as the only mode of at once settling all their pretensions, and terininating the ten years' war, which this second Helen had excited. Amcer Khan has since been assassinated in his tent.

The English vessel, Sir Francis Drake, in a cruize in the Indian Seas, fell in with eight Malay prows, and dispatched a boat to examine whether they were pirates, or peaceful traders. The Malays made no resistance; but having enticed four of the boat's crew below, murdered and quartered them, and hung their mangled remains upon the shrouds. Capt. Harris, exasperated at this behaviour, stood his boat close in to shore, and sunk them and their crews, amounting to 400 men.

Accounts from Bengal state, that a dreadful fire broke out at Unmerapoora (kingdom of Ava) on the 10th of March, 1810, which entirely destroyed the town and fort, including the palace, temples, and 20,000 houses. The Governor, in order to compel the inhabitants to assist in preserving the place, ordered the gates to be shut; and thus reduced them to the dreadful alternative of leaping from the walls, or being burnt to death in the streets. About 1200 preferred the latter, and 200 were dashed to pieces in attempting the former.

AMERICA AND THE WEST INDIES.

By American Papers we learn, that Mr. Smith had resigned his office of Secretary of State, and had been succeeded Mr. Monroe is the by Mr. Monroe. same person who negotiated the treaty with England, which Jefferson refused to ratify, and is generally considered a friend to British connexion.

Many Proprietors of sea-side land in Jamaica have, by the manufacture of barilla, or marine alkali, obtained great profit. The marine alkali is indigenous to the soil, and grows, with the greatest luxuriance, wild.

Petion has been re-elected, by his adherents, President of Hayti.

New South Wales Papers have been received to a late date.—It appears from the Sydney Gazette, that another vessel, the Boyd, has been treacherously surprised by the natives of New Zealand, and the Captain, and the greater part of the crew, who had been decoyed on shore for the purpose of cutting spars, inhumanly massacred.

COUNTRY NEWS.

April 21. In a thunder-storm at Forfar, three cows were killed in an outhouse by lightning, which otherwise did much damage in unroofing buildings.

April 23. The storm was particularly destructive at Winstay, the seat of Sir W. W. Wynne, many of the hail-stones measuring 23 inches in circumference. The range of hot-houses which had been finished on that day, had 1123 panes of glass broken; and similar damage was done at Bryn-y-pys, and other places.— During the prevalence of the storm in the Isle of Man, three persons at a farm-house at Neurby, were killed by lightning.

May 2. A singular occurrence took place at Newmarket. Several horses were entered for the Claret Stakes, and, as usual, were taken out this morning for exercise. They all drank at one trough, in which it was afterwards found that arsenic had been mixed with the water. Some time after, six of them were observed to stagger, and then to roll about in the greatest agony. One of them (Sir F. Standish's colt) died. 500 guiness were offered by the Jockey club for discovering the offender, without success.

May 4. Lately, a fire broke out on the premises of Mr. Bailey, of Heighington, near Lincoln, which in a short time destroyed a cottage, a barn, 60 quarters of corn, and nine young beasts.

May 5. A melancholy accident happened last week on board the Rota frigate, lying in Plymouth Sound. In lowering the mizen-topmast of that ship, it unfortunately came down by the run. and the heel of it striking a seaman. carried his head off, drove his entrails out, and his thigh bones into the deck.

May 10. Lately, a pregnant woman' with a child in her arms, fell into the salt pans at South Shields, and although instantly rescued, were so dreadfully burnt, that they expired immediately.

May 11. A few days ago an unfortunate chimney-sweeper's boy, aged 13 years, was employed to sweep a chimney in Wakefield, which communicated by a . flue with the fire of a neighbouring bouse. While the youth was in the chimney, the soot from the fire broke out into a flame, which, spreading upwards, scorched the poor fellow so dreadfully, that he fell. down to the bottom, his flesh being completely burnt from his toes to his chin; but though in that deplorable state, he survived in excruciating pain, for five days, when he expired. The Coroner's Jury could not agree in their verdict, but agreed to submit the case to the consideration of the Magistrates.

May 12. As J. Hardy, a bricklayer, and his son, were at work in St. Clement's, of ice were measured from nine to twelve inches in circumference

Norwich

The Duke of Devonshire has inclosed the principal part of his mountain estate round Buxton, on which he has creeted several far n-hous's, and other appropriate buildings, to the great improvement of a country, that for centuries had remained in a desert and barren state.

> Domestic Occurrinces. Tuesday, April 30.

A schoolmistress, named Sarham, was found burnt to death in her parlour, Newington-road. The deceased, who was old and infirm, is supposed to have fallen into the fire in a fit, as neither the bed nor the furniture were injured.

rkednesday, May 1.

An experiment of an improved method of charging with the bayonet took place by a detachment of the Royal Marines, in presence of the Lords of the Admiralty, and a Committee of Marine Officers. The whole plan contains many very superior advantages over he present system, particularly in enabling the rear rank men to use their muskets at the charge, with similar effect, and at the same moment, as the front rank (who face half about), the Cintra Convention; said, the Wellesley family had been sufficiently paid; and moved an amendment, which was ably opposed by Mr. Quin.—Sir-W. Curtis shrewdly observed, that he now thought the Cintra Convention a wise measure, considering that Junot had possession of those very positions in front of Lisbon from which Lord Wellington had lately derived so much advantage, and which had proved to be impregnable.—The amendment was finally negatived, and the Resolutions carried by a large majority.

The foundation-stone of the New Bridge at Millbank was laid this day, by Lord Dundas, as proxy of his R. H. the Prince Regent. In a cavity of the stone was placed, with the customary ceremonies, a glass case containing of Portland stone. It will be a strait bridge, like those of antiquity, and will consist of seven arches: the central one of 110 feet span, and others diminishing in size to 90 feet at the ends. The water-way will be 702 feet, and the whole extent, 920 feet. It will take about five years in completion.

Friday, May 10.

A few days ago, as some labourers were digging a foundation at Mr. Hail's livery-stables, in Down-street, Piccadilly, one of them, with his spade, bit some hard substance, which on digging lower, they discovered to be a human body of some person unknown, which must have lain there for upwards of thirty years, as it is that period since the foundation was meddled with.—Mr. Hall ordered the remains to be immediately interred in the church-yard.—The body was in a perfect state.

Saturday, May 11.

As Lord Eardley was taking the air in Hyde Park, whilst riding at a slow pace, the horse stumbled and fell: his Lordship was in consequence thrown from the saddle, and received a severe contusion on the head.

Sunday, May 12.

This evening the Pale Beer Brew-house, lately occupied by Mr. Phillips, in Ossulston-street, Somers Town, fell down with a tremendous crash. No person was passing at the time.

Monday, May 13.

As the Bishop of Durham's carriage and four, was coming down Highgate-hill, the postillion was thrown from his horse, and the wheel going over his head crushed it to pieces: this venerable and highly respected Prelate was so much affected by the event as for two days to be unable to proceed.

Friday, Nay 17.

BURDETT v. ABBOT .- The Attorney-General proceeded at great length, in his argument on the demurrer, to which Mr Holroyd replied .- Lord Ellenborough then said, that he had not the shadow of a doubt as to the great features of the question, and he thought the justification satisfactory :- 1st, The right to commit was authorised by reason and law .-2d, The warrant followed the order, and the order was conformable to the power. _3d, The outer door might be broken open for contempt of an inferior Court, and it certainly might be so where public benefit was concerned.—Mr. Justice Grose and Mr. Justice Bailey concurred entirely in opini with the Chief Juse Riene was absent ement of the

Saturday, May 18.

Twelve standards and colours taken from the Enemy on different occasions, including the French eagle taken by the 87th regiment at the battle of Barrosa, were carried with military ceremonies, from the Parade in St. James's Park, to Whitehall Chapel, and deposited on each side of the altar. The spectacle, which was one of the finest ever witnessed, was attended by the Dukes of York and Cambridge, Sir D. Dundas, Generals Hope. Doyle, Calvert and Phipps, Spanish and Portuguese Ministers, besides a number of ladies of distinction.

Sunday, May 19.

His Majesty went to the Queen's Apartments in Windsor Castle, for the first time since his indisposition, for the purpose of congratulating the Queen upon the return of her birth-day; at which time he was surrounded by the whole of his family.—On the following day, the inhabitants of Windsor were gratified by his Majesty's first appearance in publick, on horse-back, since his illness. His Majesty was accompanied by the Princesses Augusta and Sophia, with whom he appeared in cheerful conversation.

Wednesday, A ay 22.

This morning, about half-past two o'clock, the house belonging to Mr. Hastings, the sign of King Henry the Eighth, corner of White-lion and Great St. Aridrew's streets, Seven Dials, fell down. The screams and cries of the inhabitants were dreadful, as most of them were buried under the ruins. In a short time about 500 persons surrounded the spot. many of whom set about digging the unfortunate persons from their perilous situation. An old man with an infant in his arms, dead, was the first rhocking spectacle that presented itself. The nibst horrid groans were heard in the ruing. but in consequence of some timber stopping up the way, the bodies could not be got at for some time after. A young man unfortunately received the spade on his skull; he, with four others in a dreadfully mangled state, were taken to the hospital. An old woman named Toogood, who lodged in the second floor, being apprised of her danger, threwher self out of the window, by which she was so much hurt as to leave little hope of recovery. Mr. and Mrs. Hastings, who kept the house, escaped with some slight bruises, as the front of the house fell first, and their bed-room being backwards, they had just time to get away.

An account laid before the House of Commons states, the total amount of Gold Monies coined from the Revolution up to the commencement of his Mixingsty's reign; at 26,959,7257.

THEATRICAL REGISTER.

COVERT GARDEN THRATER.

April 23. The Gazette Estroordinary. a Comedy; by Mr. Holman; which was very favourably received.

April 29. Timour the Terter, a Grand Romantic Melo-Drama: an interesting vehicle for a display of spleadid scenery and horsemanship!

DRURT LANE COMPANY,

AT THE LYCHUM THEATAR, STRAND. April 27. The Americans, a comic Opera, in three Acts; by Mr. Arnold. The Musick by Mr. King and Mr. Braham. This piece, from its being supposed to be a direct attack on the Society of Friends, met with much disapprobation. It was, in consequence, withdrawn; and the Quaker dress, and all allusions to the Friends, being omitted, with other curtailments, it has since been performed with tolerable applause.

HAYMARKET TREATES. May 25. Trial by Jury, a Parce; which was received with much approbation.

GAZITTE PROMOTION. Whitehall, HIS R. H. the Prince Regent May 25. has been pleased, in the name and on the behalf of His Majesty, to constitute and appoint Field Marshal His R. H. the Duke of York to be Commander in Chief of the Land Forces,

ECCLESIASTICAL PREPERMENTS. REV. James Currey, B. D. Thurning R. Norfolk, Rev. John Barnes Backhouse, rector of Deal, Little Chart R. Kent.

Rev. T. Peyton Slapp, M. A. Brandon Parva R. Norfolk, vice Right Hon. and Rev. Wuliam Earl Nelson, D. D. resigned.

Rev. Thomas Berkeley Greaves, M. A. All Saints V. Lynn.

Rev. John Rowley, M. A. rector of St. Michan's, and prebendary of Christ Church, Dublia, one of the Chaplains in ordinary to the Prince of Wales.

Rev. G. Millers, M. A. minor canon of Ely, Rucham V. Cambridgeshire.

Rev. George Balwell, B. A. Stanton St. John and Stanton All Samts consolidated R.R. Sutfolk.

Rev. Thomas Kitson, Lamerton V. Deron.

Rev. Henry Bevan, Whitton R. Rad-

Rev. Richard Lendon, M. A. St. Edmund the King and St. Nicholas Acons united RR. London, wee Dymock, deceased, Rev. John Palmer, M. A. Clannaburgh R. Devon, vice Preke, deceased.

Rev. D. Jenks, B. A. Studham V. Bedfordshire.

GERT. MAG. May, 1811.

BIRTES.

1811. A T Most Park, Kent, the Counse April 15. A tass of Rouney, a daughter. April 16. At Clifton, the wife of Runnucl Muller, esq. a son and beir.

April 20. In the Close, Sarson, of a posthumous son and heir, the unha relict of the much-lamented Hon. Willoughby Bertie (brother to the Earl of Abingdon), Capt. of the Satellite, who with his ship and brave crew are supposed to have perished in the dreadful gales which happened about the 23d of last Docember (see our last volume, p. 656.)

At Edinburgh, the lady of Sir John

Sinclair, bart. M. P. a son.

April 21. At Belmont Place, Vauxball, the wife of Edward H. Lee, esq. a sou. She died on the 26th of April; see p. 499, April 22. In Grafton-street, the Marchioness of Ely, a daughter,

At Crosby Hall, Lancashire, the wife of William Blundell, esq. a son and beir.

April 23. At the Earl of Uzhradge's,
Old Burlington-street, the Right Hon. Lady Caroline Capel, a daughter.

April 26. In Manafield-street, the Marchioness of Waterford, a son.

April 28. At Shipdham, Norfolk, the wife of the Rev. C. Edridge, a daughter.

Lately, The Countess of Bristol, a dau. In Bedford-square, the wife of P. Pole, caq, a daughter.

At the Admiralty, the wife of J. Buller, esq. a son.

At Knightsbridge, the wife of the Rev. J. Gamble, a son.

At Wilbury House, Wilts, the lady of Sir C. W. Malet, bart, a son.

At Killerton, Devon, the lady of $1r T. Aciand, bart, a son.

At Plymouth, the lady of Capt. Sir

M. Seymour, bart. a daughter.

The wife of Capt. Hates, Marlboroughplace, Brighton, a son. It is remarkable that no female has been born in the Captain's family, which is very numerous, for more than 50 years.

In Upper Gardner-street, Dublin, the Countess de Salrs, a son.

At Fort William, Bengal, the lady of Sir S. Ramsay, a daughter.

May 3. At Battersea Rise, the wife of Francis Freeling, esq. of the General Post Office, a son.

At Edgbaston Hall, near Birmingham, the wife of Dr. Johnstone, a-daughter.

May 21. The wife of G. Gipps, esq. M. P. a daughter.

May 22. In Russell-place, Fitzroy-square, the wife of Charles Bishop, esq. 11. M. Proctor, a son, (14th child.)

MARRIAGES.

1811, WILLIAM, second son of April 26. George Ward, esq. of Belle Vue, Isle of Wight, to Emily, fifth daughter of H. C. Combe, esq. M. P.

April 27. Robert Bateson, eaq. of Belvoir Park, Downshire, to Catharine, youngest daughter of Samuel Dickson, esq.

co. Limerick.

April 29. John Dorset Bringhurst, esq. King's Dragoon Guards, and aide-de-camp to Major-gen. Fane, to Frances-Maria, daughter of William Gore, esq.

Lately, Doctor Adams, of Doctors's commons, to Mary-Anne—Thomas-Philip Maunsell, esq. of Thorpe Mallor, Northamptonshire, to Caroline - Elizaboth daughters of the late Hon. W. Cockayne, of Rushton Hall.

Sir J. Carr, K. C. of the Middle Temple, to Miss King, of Goldingham Hall, Essex.

J. Bullock, jun. esq. of Faulkbourn-hall, to Margaret, eldest daughter of the Rev. A. Downes, of Witham, Essex.

At Lewisham, Anson Berney, esq. only son of Sir J. B. bart. to Anne, daughter of H. Tahourdin, esq. of Sydenham.

Rev. T. B. Powell, to the third daughter of the Rev. W. Cotton, rector of Thurnby, Northamptonshire.

J. F. Newton, esq. to Elizabeth, daughter and sole heiress of the late Wm. Kent, esq. of Little Bedwin.

At Devizes, Rev. T. Butler, to Miss

Oldridge, of Old Park, Wilts.

Rev. J. Brooke, vicar of Elmstead, to the eldest daughter of the late Rev. T. Bowen, of Pulham, Norfolk.

N. L. Fenwick, esq. of Terrington, Norfolk, to Miss Sebright, sister to Sir John S. bart. M. P.

At Great Yarmouth, Capt. Alexander Nesbitt, R. N. to Mary, daughter of Wm. Fisher, esq. Receiver General for Norfolk.

At Ryde, Isle of Wight, T. Gallway, esq. to Miss Hoppner, only daughter of the late John H. esq. R. A.

Rev. James Walhouse, of Teddesley, to Miss Huskisson, daughter of the late W. H. esq. of Oxley, Staffordshire.

Edward Cerbell, esq. Major in the Cheshire Militia, to Miss Blackburne, daughter of John B. esq. M. P.

N. J. Bond, esq. nephew of Sir John B. bart of Woodbank, Cheshire, to Isabella-Eliza Speed, grand-daughter of the late Earl of Sandwich.

David Lloyd, esq. of Alton Odyn House, Cardiganshire, to Caroline, daughter of the Rev. Charles Russell, of Lydeard, Somersetshire.

G. F. Orde, erq. eldest son of Col. O. of Longridge, Northumberland, to Isabella, fourth daughter of Charles Sharpe, esq. of Hoddom Castle, Dumfrieschire.

William Gunning Campbell, esq. eldest son of William C. esq. of Fairfield, Scotland, to Diana. third daughter of Sir John Ingilby, bart. of Ripley Park, Yorkshire.

At Aberdeen, Lieut.-col. P. Black, late of the Bengal Native Cavalry, to the daughter of W. Young, esq. of Sheddocksley.

Rev. Thomas John Burgh, eldest son of T. B. esq. of Oldtown House, co. Kildare, to Anne, eldest daughter of the Hon. Francis Hely Hutchinson.

Keelinge Freeman, esq. to Miss Louise Domville, of Santry House, Dublin.

May 1. At Sandbach, John Smith, esq. M. P. to Miss Leigh, daughter of Egerton L. esq. of High Leigh, and of Twemlow, co. Chester.

Rev. F. W. Holme, rector of Meyery Hampton, Gloucestershire, to Mary Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the late Thomas Pigot, esq. of Almington Hall, Staffordshire.

May 4. At Walton-le-Dale, Lancashire, J. Baskervyle Glegg, esq. of Whittington Hall, Cheshire, to Anne, youngest daughter of the late Thomas Townley Pasker, esq. of Cuerdon Hall, Lancaster.

May 5. Rev. George Murray, to the Right Hon. Lady Sarah Maria Hay.

May 9. Rev. R. W. Ford, of Riesington Parva, co. Gloucester, to Jemime, third daughter of George Rooke, esq. fermerly of Langham Hall, Essex.

May 11. William Hargood, esq. Rearadmiral of the Blue, to Maria, third daughter of the late Thomas Somess Cocks, esq.

May 15. James Orde, esq. Lieut. ed. 90th foot, to Margaret, eldest daughter of W. Beckford, esq. of Fonthill.

May 16. Rev. Dr. Davy, Master of Caius college, Cambridge, to Miss. Stevenson, of Hertford-street, May-fair.

Thomas George Franch, esq. of Merrino, co. Cork, to Charlotte, eldest daughter of Pascoe Grenfell, esq. of Taplow House, Bucks.

May 18. Dr. Outram, of Handrer-square, to Mrs. Corne, of East Acton.

May 20. Col. Francis William Grant, M. P. second son of the late Sir James G. bart. to Mary-Anne, only daughter of John Charles Dunn, esq. of St. Hejens.

May 22. Rev. Richard Meade, rector of Horsendon, and Minister of Prince's Risborough, Bucks, to Miss Somes, of Islington.

Additions and Corrections.

Between pages 155 and 156, the word "got" has been omitted,

P. 294, b. The attention of the late Miss Gaskoin to the departed Princess Amelia, during during her long illness, was marked with the most affectionate solicitude. His Majesty, sensible of the faithful services of this young lady, has ordered a very neat marble tablet to her memory to be placed on the right hand aile of St. George's chapel, Windsor, which bears the following inscription:

" King Grorge III. caused to be interred near this place the body of MARY GASKOIN, Servant to the late Princess Amelia; and this Stone to be inscribed in testimony of his grateful sense of the faithful service and attachment of an amiable young woman to his beloved daughter, whom she survived only 3 mouths.

She died the 19th of February 1811."

Jumes-Thomas-Benedictus P. 297. b. Marwood, esq. died in his 65th year at Avishays, his seat in Somerscishire, on the 20th of February, not at Avistays on the 27th, as before stated. Few more convincing or conspicuous proofs of the instability of buman prospects of happiness, and mutability of mandane affairs, bave occurred, than in the instance before When he arrived at that age which the laws of our country wisely require us to attain before we are permitted fully to enjoy the liberty and independence confirmed and established by those laws; the gentleman who is the subject of this effusion, becoming possessed of a princely fortune, which he interited from as antient and respectable a line of and sary as any in the kingdom, resolved to make the tour of the Continent; and, having consummated his resolution, returned in safety to ais native snores, both augusted at and lamenting those scenes of mavery and wretchedness he had witnessed in his peregrination; which, contrasted with the blessings of his own country, rendered home still more delig afal to hun. Scarcely had be escaped the accumulated dangers which travellers, however numerous their retinge, incustably encounter, when an unexpected calamity eternally obscured the fair prospect before him-a fever of the most ma grant kind, probably produced by the ratigue he had undergime, grized him, and his lite was endangered: the vital spark, nowever, ream ned unextinguished, but, and its most invaluable accompaniment, Reason, ha l forsaken ham, and never more returned. Thus en led the only male descendant of the house of Marwood; and with him that name is extinct, which, for so many centuries, was spoken of with reverence and estrem in the county of Devon, where this family's most autient and extensive possessions are situate. The estate in So-of Mrs. Stevens, of Cross House, Devonshire; Mis Notley, of Chillington, Somersetshare; Mrs. Wolcott, of Lyme Regis, Dorsetshire; and the issue of the late Mrs. Elton, of Greenway, Devoushire. P. 297. b. The Rev. John Tucker, of Trunty college, Cambridge, B. A. 1979; M. A. 1782, R cto of Gravesond 1782; of Ludden sam 1734; and Curate of Wingham 1800; all in the county of Kent; was the son of the late Rev. John T. Rector of Rangwould (see Vol. XLVI. p. 579); and from 1782 till 1765, when he resigned, Upper Master of the King s school at Canternary. He married Sarah youngest daughter of the rate Richard Harvey, esq of Barfeiston in Kent, who died in 1798.

P. 299 b. The late Charles Mursham, ther I Lord and first Earl of Romnen, was originally distined either for the Navy or Army; but, on the demise of his elder brother, after receiving a liberal education, he was sent abroad on his travels. Soon after his return, he was elected for the borough of Maidstone, within a short distance of the family manuor. In 1774 he became a candidate for the county, and succeeded; as also in 1750, and 1784, and he might have been chosen again in 1790, had not the state of his father's health exhibited the most unequivocal marks of an approaching dissolution. His conduct as a member of parliament was manly and independent; he opposed the American war, and protested against all Lord North's measures on that occasion. He also condemned, as "unconstitutional," the measure of garrisoning Gibraltar and Port Mahon with foreign troops. He, however, opposed Mr. Fox's India Bill, although he afterwards laboured for a coalition between him and 'Mr. Pitt. He also opposed the Fortification-scheme, proposed by the late Duke of Richmond, while master-general of the Ordnance; and wished the Militia to be embodied, employed, and called forth every year, as constituting the sole legitimate and constitutional defence of the country. In 1786 he introduced a Bill for securing the freedom of election, by excluding persons holding places in the Navy and Ordnance from voting for members of parliament; but the question was lost, on a division, by a majority of 76. Having succeeded his father as a peer, in 1793. Lord Romney appears to have taken the alarm at the then situation of this country, and in 1797 proposed a voluntary patriotic donation, in aid of the public taxes, to which he himself offered to subscribe 50001. But although he supported the war with France, yet Lord R. in 1800, censured the ministers for their reluctance to negotiate with the First Consul. In private life, this nobleman was attached to agricultural pursuits. and kept a large farm in his own hands. upwards of forty acres of which consisted of hop grounds. He also pulled down the old family mansion, known by the appellation of the Moat, and erected a new one in its place, within a quarter of a mile of the antient site.

TRAIN

P. 401. b. The late John Knill, esq. was a gentleman of rather singular character, though of great worth and probity. He was a native of Cornwall. years ago, by his order, an excavation was made in a rock near Mount's-bay, in Cornwall, for the purpose of holding his remains when his mortal career should be ended. The place was ever afterwards denominated Knill's Folly. He was, however, a man of an excellent understanding, and well acquainted with mankind. Though he had a very wide circle of friends and acquaintance, and was highly esteemed by all who knew him, he resisted every invitation to dine in private society, and for many years past dined everyday at Dolly's chop-house, Paternoster Row, walking through the chief avenues of the town in the course of the day, in order to meet his friends, and to preserve his health by moderate exercise.

P. 404. a. Our Renders are requested to peruse, in our vol. LIV. p. 480, a letter from the late Mr. Reikes of Gloucetter, on his then new (but excellent) plan for establishing Sunday Schools.

DEATES.

Nov. 22. Indiaman, in Bombay-har-bour, which ship was on the point of sailing for the Isle of France and Regiond, Charlotte, wife of J. Baxter, esq. of Bombay.

Dec. 5. At Fortrose, Scotland, aged 41; John Watson, esq. one of the magistrates of the burgh, late of Trelawney, Jamaica.

Dec. 6. At Nurwur, in his 25th year, William Lindsay, esq. of the Bengal Civil. Establishment, son of James L. esq. of Merton, Surrey.

1811, Feb. 10. At Kingston, Jamaion, Capt. Antrobus, late of Bristol.

Feb. 22. Drowned by the upsetting of a wherry at Spithead, Lieut. Luscombo, 9th foot, and Assistant-surgeon Gray, of the same regiment. The body of Lieut. L. was picked up, April 20, in Langueuharbour, and interred there.

March 4. At Bath, John Clauton, end: F. S. A. formerly of Shirley near Croydon, a very learned and respectable gentlemak

March 6. Mr. Weale, of Kennington. Standing at the end of Floet-market, waiting for the stage, he was seized will us apoplectic fit; and being carried into a neighbouring shop, expired in a sid minutes.

At Norwood-green, Middlesex, aged 102, Mary Rouse.

March 14. At Grantham, Lincolnelies, advanced in years, Sir Charles Kent, bettle of Wordsworth, Yorkshire. This gentles man was the only son of Sir Charles light ton, merchant, of London (and should in 1743) by Sarab, daughter of Samuel Kentle in 1743) by Sarab, daughter of Samuel Kentle esq.; and assumed the name of Each in pursuance of the will of his minternil grandfather (who died Oct. 8, 1759). He was created a Baronst Aug. 3, 1752; and was M. P. for Thetford 1784. He make ried Mary, daughter and coheir of Joshir Wordsworth, of Wordsworth, in Yorkshire, esq. by whom he has left several children.

At Kingston, Jamaica, Capt. Thomas. Charles Brodie, of the Hyperion, seeded son of William B. esq. of Great Maritor rough-street. This promising young discount and seen much service after he left the Royal Academy. He was in the menter rable action off Cape St. Vincent; in the battle of the Nile; at Acre; and other manded the Arrow sloop at Lord Nelson's attack of Copenhagen, of which he brought home the dispatches. His loss is severally felt by his parents and family, and small lamented by his brother officers and friends on the station where he died, who should every attention and respect to his reinstant every attention and respect to his reinstant

Hard

March 19. At the rectory at East Birgholt, in Suffolk, aged 72, Mary, the wife of the Rev. Dr. Rhudde, rector of that parish, and chaplain in ordinary to his Majesty.

March 29. At York, deeply and sincerely regretted by his famuly and friends, aged 75, Mr. John Todd, many years an eminent bookseller in that city, and successor to Mr. Francis Hildyard in 1757. Few country booksellers have exerted: themselves with greater ardour and perseverance (for nearly half a century) in the laborious pursuit of Catalogue-making, with the respective value of each book attached, than the late Mr. Todd; of which the following List of curious and extensive Collections, which he purchased and arranged at different periods, affords a sufficient proof; viz. The Library of Marmaduke Tunstall, of Wychife, esq.; John Royds, esq. of Knapton; Lord Viscount Fairfax, of Gilling; Henry Cratherpe, esq. of Ness; Lady Fagg, of Wood End; Rev. Wm. Dade, of Barmston, author of an intended " History of Holderness;" Rev. Anthony Temple, of Richmond; Rev. Thos. Clarke, and Rev. Josiah Rodwell, of Hull; Rev. Wm. Territt, of Bainton; Wm. Daxon, esq. of Loversal, &c. &c. &c.

Lately, Aged 83, Mr. Paul, confectioner,

Covent-garden.

At Woolwich, in his 82d year, Mr. Hugh Mitchell, druggist there during 50 years.

At Broadward Hall, Salop, in her '18th year, Mrs. Unett, willow of Heary U. esq. of Freen's Court, Her's.

At Ladlow, aged 85, Mr. Ralph Thomas, senior alderman of that Corporation.

At Barrow, aged 81, Mr. Anthony Keedwell.

Aged 109, Mr. John Bailey, of Roydon, mear Diss.

Aged 58, Miss Bennett, a maiden lady, of Louth, daughter of the late Edw. B. esq. of Keddington.

At Bawtry, near Doncaster, aged 52, Mrs. Andree, formerly teacher at the ladics' achool, Lencola, under the management of Mrs. Packharness.

At Ridgmont, Bedfordshire, aged $1, John Axholm, a labouring man, and aged 76, Elizabeth, his wife: they had been married above 60 years, and died within an hour of each other.

At Rollstone, Herefordshire, Mr. B.

Gilbert, attorney.

At Monmouth, aged 88, Mrs. K. Halfpenny, only surviving daughter of the late John Biewett, esq. of Salford-house, Oxon.

Aged 44, Miss M. Burton, daughter of the late Rev. Wm Burton, of Somersby; She was deaf and dumb.

Aged 65, Mrs. Hadson, widow of the late Mr. H. officer in the Customs, Louth.

exerts all his ingenuity to overturn the various miracles alledged to have been performed by those whom it is proposed to insert in the Catalogue of Saists.

At Fismes, near Soissons, aged 25, Stephen Louis Geoffroy, Doctor Regent of the ci-devant Faculty of Physic in Paris (of which city he was a native), and a correspondent of the National Institute of France. He was 40 years in considerable practice in Paris; but at the age of 70 retired to Fismes in the neighbourhood of Soissons, where he was elected Mayor of his Commune, and Member of the Medical Jury of the adjoining Department of L'Aisne. He is well known to Naturalists as the author of "Histoire des Inscotes aux Environs de Paris," 2 tomes, 4to. Paris, 1762; sud "Traité des Coquilles qui se trouvent aux environs de Paris," 12mo. Paris, 1767. He was likewise author of a Latia Poem published in Svo. in 1771, at Paris, intituled, "Hygiene; sive Ars Sanitatem Conservandi, Poema ;" to which Haller allows the merit of being " ex optimis nuperorum poematibus, quo etiem potus Europæi et plantæ edules tanguntur."

At Demerara, Wm. Heathoote, esq. a. native of Blackwell, Derbyshire.

At Malta, in his 31st year, Charles Hewes Rymer, esq. purser of the Cerberus.

At the island of Fayal, Mr. Francisco Antonio de Sobradello, resident partner there, in the establishment of Messrs. Christopher Idle, Brother, and Co.

April 2. At Falmouth, Capt. Dominick

D'Arcey, 47th foot.

April 5. Mrs. Anne Jefferie, of Aldersgate-street.

At Bath, aged 50, Mr. Benjamin Hollingworth, of Watling-street, London, stationer. He was a native of Maidstone; and for some years was in considerable practice as a surgeon and apothecary at Smithfield bars, London.

At Ewell, Surrey, in her 70th year, the wife of Rich. Carpenter Smith, esq. of Southwark and Ewell.

Mr. Charles Killick, a respectable builder, of Mitcham. He went to Chapel, as usual, with his family, on the preceding Sunday; and, after the service, was taken with a cold shivering, but was, however, able to walk home. Mrs. K. was so deeply affected by his death, that she fell a victim to excessive anxiety and grief on the following Sunday. They have left a large family.

Mr. William Brown, a respectable groeer and draper, of Holbeach.

At Staniford, Lincolnshire, Mr. Benjamin Howes, auctioneer, of King's Cliffe.

In her 68th year, Mrs. Cross, of Gringley, near Gainsborough.

In his 100th year, Mr. William Furnish, of York, formerly an innkeeper there.

April 6. In Devonshire-place, James Pinnock, esq.

Hugh Elliott Pearson, eldest son of the Rev. H. P. of Windsor.

Aged 54, Mr. Edward Smith, Governor of the House of Industry at Sapcote, co. Leic. from its first establishment in 1805; a religious, honest man, and a valuable friend to the poor under his care.

At Ashford-hall, Shropshire, George Crawford Ricketts, esq. late of Jamaica, and for many years Attorney-General and Advocate-General there.

At Cricklade, Wilts, aged 30, the Rev. Henry Wavell, son of William W. esq. M. D. of Barnstaple.

Aged 111, John North, of South Holme, Yorkshire, butcher. He was born at Butterwick, in the parish of Barton-le-Street, near Malton; and never lived at a greater distance than a mile from the house he was born in. He retained the use of his faculties to the day of his death, and was considered to be, during the early part of his life, a free liver.

April 7. Suddenly, in Basinghall-street, aged 78, Mr. William Blackhall.

At Great Yarmouth, Norfolk, Mr. W. P. Sloman, late of the house of Schroder and Sloman, Crutched-friars.

At Harefield, Mrs. Emery, of Donniugton, Berks.

Aged 92, Mrs. Watts, formerly fruiterer, of the High-street, Oxford.

At Newport, Isle of Wight, in his 56th year, Rev. Sir Henry Worsley Holmes, LL.D. bart. who succeeded to the baronetcy in 1805; (see Vol. LXXV. p. 781.) Ha is succeeded in his titles and estates by his eldest son, Leonard Thomas Worsley H. now Sir L. T. H. bart. M. P. for Newport.

At Leicester, Mr. S. Simons, many years huntsman to the Leicester harriers.

In his 24th year, Mr. Samuel Lomas, third son of Mr. John L. of Leicester.

In the Grove, Bath, William Culverden, esq. of Lavender-house, Henley.

The only daughter of Mr. Custard, schoolmaster, of Bradford Abbas, Dorset. She by some means got entangled in the wheel of a flax-mill, and her head was torn to pieces.

In his 78th year, Rev. John Eade, rector of Cotton, and vicar of Tanuington and Brundish, Suffolk.

Mrs. Starkey, relict of the late Thomas S. esq. of Wronbury-hall, Cheshire, and of the Brewery, Little Pulteney-street, London. She is succeeded in her estates and the brewery, by her nephews, Messrs. J. Cross and Jennings.

At Langtoft, near Deeping, Mr. John Craddock, jun. blacksmith. He had for some days laboured under a quinsey in his throat, which had been relieved by an operation performed by a surgeon on the preceding day; but by the imprudent recommendation of his friends, he was induced to take a quantity of spirits and a large piece of opium at night, with a view, as they imagined, of producing sleep: profound stupour succeeded, and the poor man met a premature death. He has left a widow, two children, and an aged father and mother.

At Dalkeith-house, Lady Caroline Dozglas, eldest daughter of the Marquis of Queensberry.

April 8. In Cook's-court, Carey-street, of apoplexy, aged 70, Frances, wife of Mr. Robert Blake.

Mr. James Staples, keeper of the county gaol, Leicester, leaving a widow and seven daughters in the greatest distress.

At Ashborue, Derbyshire, aged 80, Mrs.

Garle, a maiden lady.

At Holbeach, Mr. R. Fawsett, many years a respectable surgeon and apothe-

At Taplow, Bucks, within a few minutes of each other, Mr. James Finch, and Mary his wife; he in his 64th, she in her 63d year. Mrs. F. had frequently expressed wish not to survive her husband one bour.

At her sister's, in Portland-place, Bath, Mrs. Wynne, relict of the late William W. esq. of Wern, Carnarvenshire, Mrs.

In his 72d year, Charles Pálmer, esq. of Bilions, Wanstead, Essex,

At Hertford, aged 43, Robert Bellew, esq. of Balandmish, co. Cork,

At Teigumouth, Devon. Sophia, wife of Alexander Eume, esq. of Harris.

la Buccleugh-place, Edinburgh, Mrs. Marianne Elliot, only surviving desighter of the late Sir Gilbert E. bart, of Mmto, lord justice clerk.

April 11. In Upper Titchfield-street, aged 69, Mrs. Elizabeth Luforest, relict of the late Lawrence L. esq. of Hammeremeth.

Shot by accident through the body, the son of Mr. Cockerill, Panton-place, Newjugton road. He was shooting at small birds, with a youth, his companion, and the gan went cir at hait cock, as the person was jumping off a bank. At Peckham, Mr. John Hoppe, of the Minories. 'He possessed an enlarged and benevolent in ad, and was through life a zealous and undeviating friend to civil and religious liberty. He was for a few years an active and useful representative in Common Council for the Ward of Portsoken, where he greatly contributed to promote the cause of locity and humaunty, as well by his zeal and ability as by a kind and conciliating disposition, which no less tended to unite friends, than to command respect and esteem from those of opposite sentiments.

At Linslade House, Bucks, Mrs. Dorothy Blosset, of Hockliffe lodge, Bedfordshire, eldest daughter of the late Solomon Stephen B. esq of Dover-street. Piccadilly.

At Southampton, of a decline, the Hon. Henrietta Dillon, daughter of Viscount D. of Ditchley house, Oxon.

In his 20th year, Seneou, youngest son of Robert Brown, e-q Leicester.

At Louis, in his 51st year, John Robinson, esq. fether of the corporation of Boston. He had been indisposed for sezeral weeks, but was able to receive the wishts of his friends to the day of his monton.

At Leicester, Joseph, youngest son of Samuel Lawson, esq. of Nottingham.

At Brock-hill-house, near Exeter, where he went for the henefit of his health, T. T. Cock, esq. of Messing, Essex.

At Bath, after a few days illness, aged 64, the Rev. D'Ewes Coke, LL.B. of Brookhill-ball, Notts.

At Mansfield, Notts, aged 85, Mr. Geo. Wightman, late a malister there.

At Ruardean, aged 55, Rev. John Howton Beeston, M. A. rector of Hope Mansell, and vicar of Walford and Ruardeau, Gloucestershire. This truly pious man had, only an hour before, performed his sacred duties at the church of Walford; and was preparing to enter that of Ruardean, when he was instantaneously seized. and expired in the arms and amidst the tears of his flock. His death will long be regretted by all who knew his unassuming merits, both as a scholar and private character, and deeply lamented by a disconsolate widow and numerous family.

At Bachelor's quay, Cork, aged 73, Richard Pike, e-q. late of Dungar, King's county, formerly a banker in that city.

April 13. At his brother's house, Charter-house square, aged 71, William Rowlatt, esq.

Mr. Hewitt Fysh, of Camberwell.

In his 80th year, Rev. John Houghton, B. A. of Halsted, Essex, and upwards of 50 years vicar of White Colne, in that county.

At Wytham, aged 76, Mr. Christopher Lipscombe, many years keeper to the Earl of Abingdon. After eating a hearty breakfast, he fell back in his chair, and expired.

At Abingdon, in her 104th year, Mrs.

Margaret Huggins.

496

Mr. Greenwood, formerly master of the New inn, Oxford.

Aged 72, Mr. Robert Brown, late of the Corn-market, Oxford.

Mr. H. Churchill, grocer, of Deddington, Oxfordshire, one of the corporation of Oxford.

In her 87th year, Mrs. Brough, relict of Job B. esq. late Town-clerk of Newark, and mother of J. C. B. esq. late recorder of that borough.

At Circneester. Elizabeth, relict of the late Giles Daubeny, esq. and second daughter of the late John Gunning, esq. of Old Burlington-street.

In his 40th year, without any previous illness, Mr. G. Wadesley, farmer, of Algarkirk-fen, Lincolnshire.

Near Taunton, Tho. Southey, esq. late of Bristol.

By the bursting of a blood-vessel, Jas. Hill, esq. of Frenchay, son of the late James H. esq. of Bristol.

At Wakefield, at an advanced age, Mrs. Amery, relict of the late Thomas A., M.D. the celebrated author of "John Buncle."

In Dame-street, Dublin, aged 30, Valentine Francis Smith, esq. late of Carrick on Suir.

April 14. At his mother's house, Valeplace, Hammersmith, in his 30th year, Mr Joseph Dobree, of Oxford-street.

Sucklenly, at Kew-green, whither he had gone, with two of his young children and a female servant, for the purpose of seeing the Prince Regent, who was to dine with the Duke of Cumberland, Mr. Wall, bookseller, of Richmond. A very short time before the Prince's carriage drove up, he fell down lifetess. He has left a widow and nine children.

At Leigh, near Tonbridge, aged 34, Anne, relict of Mr. John Waterman, late of Chiddingstone, Kent.

At Grantham, advanced in years, Mrs. Towne, widow of the late Leonard T. esq.

Aged 78, Mrs. Elizabeth Mason, of Billinghay, near Steaford; whose death, it is supposed, was occasioned by taking a quantity of landanum, by mistake, the preceding evening.

At Bath, aged 76, Major Hatsell.

Whilst at dinner, Mrs. Gillman (late Stephens) of Castle-street, Taunton. Her fifth husband becomes possessed of a considerable property by her death.

Aged 55, Henry Andrews, esq. of Wakefield, one of the deputy-lieutenants for the West Riding.

At Blackhills, qo. Moray, aged 85, Patrick Coming, esq.

At Summer-hill, Dublin, in her 26th year, Elizabeth, wife of Robert Haire, esq. barrister at law.

On-board the Ediwark, on her passage from Cadiz, Thomas Frederick Newlay, esq. senior surgeon of the British army in the Peninsula. He fell a victim to the effects of the fever which reged at Cadix in December last, having caught the infection in the discharge of his professional duties.

April 15. At the house of her son, in Holborn, aged 61, Mrs. Wakelin, widow of the late Mr. John Wakelin, of Panton-street, Leicester-square, silversmith.—(See Vol. LXXII. p. 591.)

Aged 54, P. S. Maister, esq. late of Bombay.

In his 80th year, John Nicholl, esq. of Hatton-Garden.

At the St. James's Hotel, in his 78th year, Giles Earle, esq. of Beningbrough-hall, York.

Mr. James Graham, for above 20 years foreman of the Brewery of Meux, Reid, Wigram, and Co. Liquorpond-street. He bore an excellent character, and has left property to the amount of between 20 and 30,000/.

At Tottenham, aged 48, Sarah, wife of Mr. William Holt, surgeon.

At Purley, near Reading in Borkshire, deservedly lamented, in his 41st year, Mr. Edward Sherwood. Few men have sustained their relative situations in life, as a son, husband, brother, and friend, with greater credit to themselves; and the respect paid to his remains by the highly respectable and worthy characters who attended his funeral, is the strongest proof of the estimation in which he was held whilst living. Left at an early age to the cultivation of a considerable portion of land, his judgment was as manifest as his persevering industry was laudable. In his dealings with mankind, he was, from religious principle, strictly honest and resolutely just: As a friend, warm-hearted and sincere; as a master, at all times kind and benevoleut; and the pious resignation and manly fortitude he displayed during his painful illness (in which he had long foreseen his approaching fate) could only have been the result of the good and Christian life he led. In him his family have sustained an irreparable loss, and his name will be long revered in the circle in which he moved.

At Benington, the wife of the Rev. Theiwall Salisbury, rector of Graveley, Herti.

In Reading, Arthur, sixth son of the Rev. John Symonds Breedon, D.D. of Bere-court, Pangbourn, Berks.

as Prefect and Vicar Apostolic. He was, in fact, the first accredited Catholic Clergyman that v sited the Island. Before his arrival, the great body of the natives were nearly in a state of sem.-barbarism, moral and religious. Their improvement after his arrival was rapid, progressive, and permanent. He was soon raised to the titular dignity of Rishop of Thyatira. His zeal and abilities made him eminently useful to those who were more particularly the objects of his mission: the suavity of his manners endeared hum to all. leaving the island in 1807, he received, as a token of regard, from a general association of the inhabitants, a beautiful silver Vase, value 1501 with the following inacription: " Presented to the Right Rev. Doctor O'Donel, by the Inhabitants of St. John's, Newfoundland, as a testimony of their esteem for his pious, patriotic, and meritorious conduct, during a residence among them of twenty-three years. ' Never was a test mony better merited, or better bestowed. He received from Government likewise a handsome life pension, which he always looked upon with pride, as a mark of his Majesty's approbation. His last years, which he spent in Waterford, were such as might be expected at GENT MAG. May, 1811.

in their early years.

At Louth, aged 92, Mrs. Rebecca Jack-

The wife of Mr. Thompson, bread-baker, of Lincoln.

At Pontefract, William Cockeil, esq. the King's antient Serjeant. He was called to the degree of a Serjeant in 1787; and was for many years an emment leading Counsel on the Northern Circuit.

At Duff-house, Bamfishire, after only a few days confinement, the Right Hon. Alexander, Earl of Fife. His Lordship was far advanced in years, and had in his early days been an Advocate. He succeeded to the earldom Jan. 24, 1809, on the death of his elder brother James (who had been created an English Baron by the title of Lord Fife, which became extinct at his death (See Vol. LXXIX, page 186). He is succeeded in his title and estates by the gallant Viscount Macduff, who is now in Spain, and whose exertions in favour of the patriots of the Peninsula bave justify endeared him to his country.

April 17. At Brompton, Mr. Robert

Smyth, of Coleman-street.

In his 9th year, West, son of the Rev. T. Waite, of Greenwich, a most amable and intelligent youth.

At East Bourn, aged 78, Mrs. Mary Lushington, widow of the late Rev. Dr. Henry L.

April 18. The wife of Samuel Cooper, esq. South Crescent, Bedford-square.

John-Thomas Eyre, esq. Paymaster, York Hospital, Chelsea.

Susanna, wife of Mr. George Tenant, Accomptant to the West India Dock Company.

At his seat at Acton Burnell, Shropshire, aged 53, Sir Edward Smythe, bart. of that antient and respectable mansion, and of Weston; Warwickshire. He married the daughter and heiress of Peter Holford, esq. of Weston-hall, and is succeeded in his title and estates by his only son, now Sir Edward-Joseph S. bart.

At Poole, Dorset, ten minutes after the birth of a son; in the bloom of life, Mrs. Butler Danvers, once the lovely Biddy Sturt, whose external accomplishments, elegant as they were, constituted but a small part of those perfections for which she was so justly and descreedly celebrated. Mr. Butler Danvers is serving in Portugal.

April 19. In his 53d year, Rev. Thomas Lambard, rector of Ash and Ridley, and brother to Multon Lambard, esq. of Sevenoaks, Kent. He was educated at Westminster school, and elected from thence to Christ Church, Oxford, in both of which seminaries he maintained a respectable character as no mean proficient in Literature, and was endeared to all who knew him by the most amiable manners, cheerfulness of temper, strict integrity, and unsullied purity of life. Soon after his taking Priest's orders he succeeded to the living of Ash, to the fulfilling the duties of which he devoted the rest of his life, and became an exemplary pattern of the character of a 'Parochial Clergyman. Being naturally of a weak constitution, he laboured under severe illness for the last ten years of his life, during which his patience and resignation were truly Christian; nor did his wonted 'cheerfulness and composure ever forsake him, except when suffering under positive pain, and scarcely even then. For some months before his death his complaints increased rapidly, but he bore them with the same fortitude; and during the last week, when he was gasping for breath, his intellects were clear and unclouded throughout, and the calmness of his mind uniformly the same. He was truly in his last hours a most instructive lesson to all around him. He received the sacrament on the preceding day by his own deliberate appointment; and on the last evening, being quite exhausted, after composing himself as for the night, expired without a struggle or groan.

At Cambridge, in his 93d year, John Longley, esq. formerly of Old Broad-street, London, apothecary.

April 20. In Devonshire-place, M. Bell. esq. of Woolington, Northumberland.

In his 59th year, Rear Adm. James-G. Kinncer.

At Killingholme, Lincolnshire, aged 61. Mrs. Morrison, after labouring two years under a dropsy, during which time she was tapped 37 times.

April 21. Aged 26, Margaret, eldest daughter of Mr. Ridley, of Sidmonthstreet, Gray's-inn-road.

In Old Cavendish-street, at an advanced age, Mr. John Macdonald.

At Ackworth, a stranger, leaving the sum of 80*l*. Previous to his death, he said his name was William Wilson, and that he was 21 years of age; but refused giving any other account of himself or his friends.

At Stoke Golding, near Hinckley, aged 80, Mrs. Miles, relict of the late Mr. Geo. M. formerly of that place. A long and severe illness gradually wore down a strong constitution; leaving no hopes of relief but in the unerring hand of death. she submitted to accumulated afflictions with that cheerfulness and pious resignation, which a conscientious discharge of the religious and moral duties through life enabled her to support.

April 22. At Hartwell, Bucks, killed by a fall from his borse, Anton Batz, who had been head coachman to the Duc D'Angouleme upwards of 20 years, was very much respected by the Prince and Princess, been an excellent character, and was equally respected by his fellow-servants.

April 23. At her father's in St. John's square, aged 24, Miss S. Wild.

At Kennington, Mrs. Elizabeth Rigge Fruin, wife of Mr. Thomas F. and daughter of the late Mr. Henry Heron, many years organist of St. Magaus, Londonbridge.

April 24. In Gower-street, Bedfordsquare, in her 83d year, Mrs. Peters.

In Parliament-street, aged 74, William

Sayer, esq.

April 26. In Smith-street, Westminster, in his 86th year, Richard Pownell, esq. whose religious, moral, and social character raised him high in the estimation of a numerous acquaintance. — He was formerly a lieut.-colonel in the Army. and much esteemed in his military capecity. To the poor his loss is great; for he fed the hungry, clothed the naked, and instructed the ignorant. He married Elizabeth (whom he survived some years) daughter of the learned David Casley (respected by Bentley), who had the care of the Cotton Library before its removal to the British Museum. He was born at Lincoln, or in the neighbourhood. His brothers were, John Pownell, esq. Commissioner of the Customs, Thomas Pownill.

terred, according to his will, at Buckenham, Nurfolk, which seat he hired of Lord Petre,-Sar James entered the army early in life, and distinguished himself much in the American war, particularly in the memorable defence of St. K.ti's. He served at the commencement of the last wir as ad, gineral under the Duke of York in Handers, and afterwards had the command of an unsuccessful expedition against Ferrol, and a short time since used the office of Secretary at War. Though his multary enarteter was not marked by any ardhant explot, he was considered by the profession as a good somer, and ris oberal dinations to the distressed, after his accession to his fortine, proved him a benevolent man. The inneense a most revenue which he derived, as the at rest alone, oct of the P idency property, by the will of cis late lady, the Countries of Bath, was 50,000% per annum; the penalipul of which, by his death, now devolves, by the same will, on the four car dren of Mrs E. E. Markham, daughter of Sir Richard Button, bart. by a son of the 1 to Archbishop of York, who was divorced from acr linsband about six years ago, port of her children will now come may the pessession of 250,000%. sterling, as their portion of this great dictates this concise and imperfect delineation of her character mourns the toss of that mutual friendship which death has so unexpectedly dissolved.

May 4. At Canterbury, in his 78th year, John Lade, esq.

May 5. At Ishington Green, aged 25, Catharine, the amiable and affectionate wife of Mr. John Long, of Christ's Hospital, and second daughter of Jointhan Herne, esq. of Hoxton-square. Her illness was lingering; she bore it with most exemplary patience and resignation. Her passage through life was short, her sufferings great, she anticipated the separating stroke of death with unmoved constancy and pious submission.

At the New River Head, Clerkenwell, where he reside I as Engineer to the company, in his 79th year, Robert Mylne, Esq. Architect. This distinguished artist, whose proudest monument is the magnificent oridge over the Thames at Black-Friars, was born in Edinburgh Jan. 4, 1733, O. S. His Father Thomas Mylne was an Architect at Edinburgh, and a magistrate of that City, and it is known that his family had been Master Masons to the Kings of Scotiand for many generations, till the onion of the crowns. Robert Mylne travelled early in life, for improvement in his hereditary bereditary science, and resided several years in Italy(five of them at Rome), where he obtained prizes, and other distinctions, and became a member of the academies of Rome, Florence, and Bologna. He visited Naples, and viewed the interior of Sicily, never, either before or since, examined with the same accuracy. Viewing the remains of antiquity with the eye of an architect, he was enabled to explain se-veral very obscure passages of Vitravius from what he saw in Sicily. His curious memorials of that tour, with sketches and illustrations, are still extant among his manuscripts, and will, probably, at some future time, be given to the publick. Having made a very complete tour of Europe, going by France, and returning by Switseriand and Holland, he found himself in London at the time when proposals were to be offered for a bridge at Black-Friers. His proposals being accepted, the first stone was laid in 1761, and the bridge was completed in 1765, for the very sum speclified in his estimate, namely 153,000£ He presented, some time after, to the British Museum, a model of a part of the bridge, exhibiting a plan for a centre frame, invented by himself, and never yet improved upon. It is still to be seen in that national repository. With Dr. Johnson he had some paper war, on the proposed form of the arches, after which they became very intimate friends. In 1762 he was appointed Engineer to the New River Company, and in 1767 was chosen a Fellow of the Royal Society. By the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, he was entrusted with the cure and preservation of that fabrick, where by his suggestion the noble inscription to the homour of Sir Christopher Wren, ending, "Si monumentum requires, circumpics," was placed over the entrance of the Choir. By his own desire, he was buried in that church, mear the tomb of his illustrious predecessor; and his funeral was attended by a select party of Relations, Friends, and Artists. Mr. Mylne married in 1770 Mary Home, a sister of Mrs. John Hunter, so distinguished by her poetical genius, and of Mr. Home, Surgeon, the successor, and in most points of emmence the rival, of John Hunter, his -brother-in-law. By this marriage he had nine children, of whom only one son, his successor as Engineer to the New River Company, and four daughters, now survive. Mr. Mylne had peculiarities in his character; but they were chiefly connected with a high independence of spirit, and an inflexible sense of duty and justice. He loved his profession, but not the emolnments of it, and therefore, after all his distinguished employments, did not die rich. . Those who knew him could not fail to respect I is integrity, and admire his talents. -Whilst he was at Rome in 1757, a good portrait of him was painted by Brompton, which was angraved at Paris by Vangelista

1811.] Obituary

Theu, very greatly supessential points of meri lished a small volume in which if he does not his contemporaries, he an elegant taste, a po correct versification. years before his death assistant to the British stitution was delicate, improved by close confi of his commissionersh quently for several yes commoded by asthmati lungs, which gradua powers of life, and is May, from an accid cold, took, in a few di which his friends will al mother of Mr. W. I of the sisters and co Morley Trevor, of Ta and Flint, whose estacourse by his elder bi cawen, esq. the kind tector of his five orpha sons had been born, t pressible grief of their infancy. Mrs. W. Bo seven years before ? character of Mr. W. drawn, would exhibit ture of every thing tha timable in human na knowledge and exalted In every possible rela ever was kind, whatever was affectionate, whatever was benevolent, might with cortainty be experted from him. That excel-Ient justitation, The Literary Final, he considered almost as his child; and his affection to it was testified, not only by contributions, but by annual verses in its praise, and assiduous attendance on its meet, ags, Within five days of his death he wrote a copy of verses for its anniversary, and even contemplated the design of attending it. Incapable of being an enemy, it was never known that he had one, but his friends were as n merous as his virtues, and consequently not easy to be connerated. Addicted to no vice, he had no remorse to embitter his departure, and confident in the merits of his Saviour, he felt a hope which brightened his last moments. The severest moralist could not justly censure his life, and among those who read of his death, there will be few who may not envy it.

May 7. At Mr. Henry Fry's in Bedfordplace. Russell square, in his 80th year, Richard Cumberland, esq. a character of long and very distinguished celebrity in the republick of letters; of whom we shall give a biographical memoir in our next Number. His remains were interred on the 14th, in Poets' Corner, Westimuster-abbey, not many yards distant from the Bunbury, bart, of Mildenhall, and of Great Barton, in the county of Suffolk, and brother to the present sir Thomas Charles Bunbury, bart. He was distinguished at a very early age, by a most extraordinary degree of taste and knowledge in the fine arts. The productions of his own pencil have, from his childhood, been the admimiration and delight of the publick. The exquisite humour of some of his drawings, and the grace and elegance of the rest, were unrivalled; and he is perhaps the only instance in which excellencies of such various and almost opposite character have been united in the same subject in an equal degree. But though he possessed in this respect a peculiar genius, he neglected no branch of polite literature. He was a good classical scholar, and " sinit with the love of sacred soug." The Muses were to him dulces ante omnia. He was au excellent judge of poetry; and the specimens remaining of his own composition put it beyond a doubt that he would have been eminent in that delightful art, if his natural modesty, under-rating his own powers, had not prevented him from pursuing it with more application. These accomplishments were conspicuous, and obtained for him universal esteem. His social and moral qualities, while any of those remain who shared his friendship, will contions

In the earlier parts of his life he ability. had attended the late Earl of Rochford, Sir Robert Ainslie, and the Hon. Mr. Trevor, in different embassics to France; Spain, Turkey, and Sardinia; and was honoured with the esteem of those illustrious persons. He possessed an extensive knowledge of foreign languages and manners, which accomplished him as a scholar and ss a gentleman, while the goodness of his heart rendered his knowledge useful. His character in private life was not less distinguished for philanthropy and benevolence; and it is but an imperfect tribute to his memory to describe him as an affectionate husband, a kind relative, and an indulgent May 22. Mr. George Robinson, of Paternoster-row; a gentleman who, by his tinue the objects of fond admiration and No ribaldry, no profaneness, no ill-natured censure, ever flowed from his lips, but his conversation abounded in humour and pleasantry; it was charming to persons of all descriptions. No one was ever in his company without being pleased with him; none ever knew him without loving him: His feelings were the most benevolent, his affections the most delicate, his heart the most sincere. He was void of all affectation, alive to praise, but not obtrusively courting it. Conscious but not ostentatious of merit; of unblemished honour; full of that piety which influences the heart, and seeks the witness, not of the world, but of God. The writer of this article expresses what an in imate friendship of 50 years has enabled him to All who had the slightest acquaintance with him will bear watness to the extraordinary tenderness of his disposition, to his kind and active friendship, to his universal benevolence, practically displayed through the whole of his terrestrial existence. His friends, therefore, though deeply lamenting the good they have lost, though deprived of so large a portion of their pleasure and their pride, do not sorrow like those who have no hope; and while they challenge for him the applause of this world, they dare to trust that he is accepted by God, and received into the kingdom of his Saviour.

profession as a bookseller, was intimately known to a great number of persons engaged in or connected with literary pursuits, all of whom, the more they knew of him, must the more have admired hig. plain, unblemished integrity, and unwest ried industry, which was only impaired by that lingering illness which latterly enfeebled his bodily powers, and at length . terminated his life. Soon after the death of his father, the elder Mr. Robinson, in June 1801 (see our volume LXXL p. 578), the extensive commercial concerns of their house fell into that kind of embarrassment which required the surrender of its affairs, into the hands of the creditors; but by his unimpeachable integrity, and principally by his unremitting industry in unravelling perplexed accounts, and recovering documents supposed to have been lost, not. only did every claimant receive the full amount of his demands, but a very considerable surplus appeared to be due to These merits himself and his partner. were accompanied by the most unassuming modesty; for his good qualities were more solid than shining, more truly useful to himself and others than superficially glittering, or idly ostentatious.

BILL

May 8. The wife of Rev. John Hall, vicar of Chew Magna, Somersetshire.

May 14. After a lingering and distressing illness of many years, which she endured with the utmost fortitude and most Christian resignation, in her 70th year, Mrs. Catherine Edwards, wife of Mr. Edward Edwards, of Ruthin, Denbigh, hookseller.

May 20. In the Bridge-road, Lambeth, in his 70th year, William Henry Higden, Esq. formerly of the Secretary of State's Office for the Home Department; a situation which he held for many years with distinguished reputation for integrity and AVERAGE PRICES Of Navigable Canal Property, Dock Stock, Fire-Office Shares, &c. in May 1811 (to the 25th), at the Office of Mr. Scorr, 23, New Bridge-street, London:-Trent and Mersey, or Grand Trunk Canal, 12001. the last Half Yearly Dividend at the rate of 451. per Share clear per Annum.—Birmingham, 10851. ex Dividend 211. clear Half Year-Staffordshire and Worcestershire, dividing 211. per Share clear Half Yearly, 7901.—Monmouth, 1201.—Grand Junction, 2451, 2331.—Shrewsbury, 1451. dividing 81.—Kennett and Avon, 421. 10s. 401.—Wilts and Berks, 291. 10s. 301.—Rochdale, 521.—Ellesmere, 841.—Grand Western, 181. 10s. discount.—Lancaster, 25l. ex Dividend 1l. per Share clear—Ashby-de-la-Zouch, 24l. Worcester and Birmingham Old Shares, 381.—New ditto, 10s. Premium.—Thames and Severn New Shares, 371.—Croydon, 301.—West India Dock Stock, 1651.—London Dock 1274l. 128l.—Ditto Scrip, 25l. per Cent. Premium.—Commercial Dock Old Shares, 1591. with New Share attached.—Albion Assurance, 541.—Globe, 1201, 1201, 105. -Rock, 18s. Premium-East London Water-Works, 1601.-Grand Junction Water-Works, 10l. 10s. Premium.—London Institution, 68l. 5s.—Strand Bridge, 12l. Discount.—I Condon Flour Company, 81.—Dover Street Road, 14. Premium.—Commercial Road, 1351. per Cent. ex Half-Yearly Dividend 31.

Fine per Sack 80s, to 00s, Seconds 70s, to 75s, Bran per Q. 14s, to 16s, Pollard 22s, to 25s. RETURN of WHEAT, in Mark-Lane, including only from May 13 to May 18; Total 3,473 Quarters. Average 89s. 7d. -3s. higher than last Return. OATMEAL, per Boll of 140lbs. Avoirdingois, May 18, 47s. Od. AVERAGE PRICE of SUGAR, May 22, 36s. 101d. per Cut. PRICE OF HOPS, IN THE BOROUGH MARKET, May 27: AVI.RAGE PRICE OF HAY AND STRAW, May 2J: St. James's, Hay 5/, 15s. 0d. Straw 3/, 6s. — Whitechapel, Hay 6/, 5s. Clover 7/, 15s. Straw 3/, 1s — Smithfield, Clover 7/, 14s. Old Hay 7/. 0s. Straw 3/, 1s. 6d. SMITHFIELD, May 27. To sink the Offal-per Stone of 8ibs. Lamb 7s. 0d. to 8s. 4d. Head of Cattle at Market this Day: Uď. Mutton.....5s. 0d. to 6s. 0d. to 7s. Veal.....6s. 0d.Beasts about 1,347 Calves 125. Pork......5s. 4d. to 6s. 8d. Sheep and Lambs 14,000. Pigs 200. COALS, May 24. Newcastle 46s. 6d. to 55s. 0d. Sunderland 45r. 9d. to 00s. 0d. SOAP, Vellow 80s. Mottled 90s. Curd 94s. CANDLES, 11s. 6d. per Doz. Moulds 12s. 6d.

TALLOW, per Stone, 81b. St. James's 3r. 9d. Clare Market 3r 9d. Whitechapel 3r. 8d.

PRICES OF FLOUR, May 21:

EACH DAYS PRICE OF STOCKS IN MAY, 1817?

10 Kg	26	2 2	23	22	2	20 E	19	13		16	1	₩	၂	35		 	ع.	8	-7	6	وي	 	ده	 10		8	20	[]	Jegy)
2404	Sunday	240‡		1+2	2414		Sunday	1.042	Holidav	244				Sunday	296	2151	246	246	247	916	Sunday	642	248 J	250		. 51 2			Bank	- ,
632		63.	63	64.	6+1	641	•	6-1-1	4	440	÷.0	641	64.	4	149	6	149	£49	- 6 1	440	•	6#	Į,	££9	- 64	637	633	91 182	S Parci
######################################	, se	2 to 1	644	349	و ئ	651	•	.65 1	6	ئ در	651	o,	651	GC.	651	ئ ئ	65	651		65		٠. ون	542	65	219	647	446	0010010	Sper Ct.
794	rol	794	794	792	80	108	٥	801		80.	792	794	792	; +	70%	, , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , ,	-7	7.02.	£6.1	7.92	•	792	80	80	792	793	79		+ perci
96 7 96 7	t C	96 1	963	.9 -1	97,4	971	a	9'/1	•	C.	962	£36	903	•	$0.5 $0.5 $0.5	96.	, 00°	396	1 96	1 96	N	196	£96	¥96.	961	961	1 9€		SperCi
																		166											SporCt 1797
167 167	. C	167		1	177-6	17-1	ò	174	21.	1716	174	1716	174	7.16		171	17	17.	17.5	17.4		17,1	171	17-1		17	1712		Long Ann
		1811		-	182				, 0	183	1893			4	1891	182	183					1824	1831	183		1824			India
14 a 16pr. 15 pr.	יים בידףי	د د	19a 18 pr.	21 a 20pr.	21 a 20 pr.	23 a 21 pr.	•	24 a 22pr.	11/10 22	20 2 3 hr	23 pr	92 a 93pr	21 a 23pr.		20 a 2 l pr.	20 pr	21 a20pr.	23 a 24pr.	33 a 24 pr.	23 a 24pr.	•	21 a 23pr.	22 pr.	ટુંગુર 21 pr.	21 a 22pr.	21 pr.	25 pr.		India.
par 3 pr. par 3 pr.	Par o Par	par 4	1 d3	1 d3	par 4	par 4 pr.		la4pr.		1 d i pr	۱ سیا	1r 4	1 a 4 pr.	•	la4pr		ယ	par 1 d.	par 3	3 p a 2 pr.		par 4	1 a 4	284	5alpr.		2a5 pr.		Exchequ.
694		fri9							;	70				-	70±		ī	¥0.7		Ī							70		Exchequ. South Sea
				-		632					64	¥19			6	116	Ģ.	*	449	Ì	•	633	634	64					A Old	And and
			-	645				6				*	654								•	£		£49					A NOT
$\tag{\tag{\tag{\tag{\tag{\tag{\tag{		-∞- 5 ° •	o-4	_	14 p.			-																						•
\prod				1													1		 				Ì					200.00	Sper(*
62				623	625	6.25		6 53		505	602			60	625			6,2	623				60 ≯	shut	shut	hut	shut	Spot Or	der der	•
Ditto.		Disto.	- Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.		Ditto.		Ditto.	Ditto	- Ditto.	Ditto.		Ditto.	Ditto	Dicto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	•	Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto,	Ditto.	93 10 0	_		. ,
Ditto.			Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	,	Ditto.	Direct.	Disto	Ditto	Ditto	Ditto.		Ditto	Ditto	Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.		Ditto.	Ditte.	Ditto.	Ditto.	Ditto.	O Full Money.

Printed by Nicuoza and Sox, Red Lion Passage, Fleet Street, London.

BRANSCOMB and CO. Stock-Brokers, 11, Holborn, 37, Cornhill, and 38, Haymarket.

METEOROLOGICAL DIARY for May, 1811. By Dr. Polz, Bristol.

omsing accessors a	M. 8 h. G. heat.	Inches. 20ths.	WHATHER.
7	35 62	49.9	eloudy.
2	54 60	99-10	cloudy,
3	55 61	29.10	mostly windy
4	55 61	29-16	cloudy,
- 5	57 59	29- 8	cloudy, showery, tempestnous wind
6	47 57	29-16	cloudy, showery
7	53 57	29-11	ditro
8	51 55	29-11	cloudy, rain most of the day
- 9	51 61	29- 8	cloudy, very showery
10		29- 9	cloudy, showery, high wind
-11		29-11	mostly cloudy and showery
15		29 10	trines
13	62 73	29- 7	rain, mostly clear, evening lightning
24	61 63	29. 7	mostly cloudy, frequent showers
15	57 66	29-11	ditto
36		29-11	cloudy, some light rain, afternoon clear
13	60 70	99-14
18		29-14	cloudy, mustly rainy
19		29-16	cloud gh wind
20		29-13	SROW)
21	51 60	29-12
22	63 72	29-10
23	61 61	29-12	rather cloudy,
24	56 66	29.12	mostly cloudy, evening rainy, and windy
25	60 66	29 15	cloudy at times
26	63 70	29-16 •	The second of th
$7	65 77	29-16	cloudy thunder-storm
28	59 62	29-10	cloudy, heavy rain, hea , lond thunder
29	54 62	29-13	cloudy, some light rain, tempestuous wind
30	60.70	29 15
31(61 71	29_ B	showers

METEOROLOGICAL TABLE for June, 1811. By W. CARY, Strand. fleight of Fahrenheit's Thermometer. Height of Fahrenheit's Thermometer. o'cluek й o'cliк k 1 a obelo. Night, DEMINE 9,elo. Day of Month. Day of Month. Raronn. Acion. Weather Barom. Noon. Weather n. pts. in June, 1811 n pts. n June, 1811. Za M. ø ٥ J ø 29,89 74 64 fair 59 57 19,92 fair 27 66 11 66 ,70 28 67 16 fair 12 tő 6U 69 5U , 91 fair , 80 29 69 49 50 65 50 fair 13 30, 11 49 fair , 93 30 69 59 ia ir 58 29, 92 δô 14 υ8 55 fair ,60 , 90 57 31 $6\cdots$ Ŕυ showery 15 6258 7+ Silve ,70 61 59 J. 1 60 n8 58 16 , 98 316 73 fair ,50 2 ϵa 54 >6 17 60 60 THE ID 69 30, 25 Mir ,90 3 , 35 57 66 51 18 61 217 70 61 fair 45 ,80 54 58 64 fair 19 62 74 59 12 PAIR , 82 59 55 fair 20 57 ι6 58 50 29, B3 cloudy , 87 6 6254 fang 21 50 ,73 07 60 45 Pair ,98 7 56 , 89 62 70 47 fair faur 58 W 50 .78 , 85 8 fair 78 54 23 54 66 60 54 cloudy , 68 50, 01 9 69 53 fair 63 24 54 66 60 60 78 56 , 04 fair 25 70 84 ties were scarcely noticed when he wrote his very useful work : and the styles and histories of even the most distinguished edifices were either disregarded, or thought unworthy of attention. Hence, though Leland and Camden had opportunities of obtaining and perpetuating many documents on this subject, they neglected them, and preferred to occupy several pages of their works with more trivial matter. Fortunately for Art, Science, and History, the Antiquaries of this age begin to feel a landable currosity respecting the era of our old monastic, domestic, and castellated buildings. By endeavouring to trace this species of history, they ascertain many curious facts, tending to develope the manners, customs, and arts of our ancestors.

The Church of St. Mary, Redchiff, will afford ample scope for an interesting essay of this kind, and for some beautiful architectural illustrations. Nor can it be passed over without some not co of the Rowley or Chatterton MSS, which were found within quiry: the Arts, Science, and Customs of the age will also der and investigation. For the communication of any documents or information relating to these, the Author will be much obliged, and gladly acknowledge his obligations, if addressed to the Author, to the care of Mr. Gutch, or Messes. Norton, Bristol; or to Mr. Taylor, Architectural Library, Holborn, London; or to

Yours, &c. J. BRITTON, Tavistock Place.

Mr. URBAN, Church Row, Hampstead, June 18.

THERE are so many, among your numerous Correspondents, who have evinced their liberal assiduity, in imparting requested instelligence upon topographical subjects, that I am induced to solicit a niche for the insertion of the following enquiry; trusting, that the wide circulation of your literary emportum may be the means of eliciting information which I have in vain attempted to gather within the more contracted contracted circle of personal connection.

Within the parish of Hampstead, co. Middlesex, of which place I have undertaken to become the Historian, was formerly situated a Priory of Benedictine Nuns, subject to the church of Westminster, who, from their local position at a well-known hamlet on the Edgeware road, were called the Nuns of Kilburn. its first foundation (temp. Heu. I.) the extent and dignity of this Priory, of course, kept pace with the frequent accumulations of its revenue, by the donations of those who thought their neglect of religious ordinances, while living, easily atoned for by enriching religious institutions upon their dying pillow. In a short time, the humble Cell assumed the more dignified appendages of a Church and a Chapterhouse*, and the extension of domestic buildings was, doubtless, an effect of the increasing number of nuns. ter the dissolution of monasteries, the site became the successive property of several persons of considerable eminence; and the house itself, or such part of it as was inhabitable, was for some time the residence of Sir Arthur Ayte, a character of some note in diplomatic and scholastic annals. The remains of the building were, I am told, visible, even within the last half century.

I had thought, Mr. Urban, that such circumstances as the above, combining with its proximity to the Metropolis, had been sufficient to insure success in my researches after graphical memorials of this structure. Hitherto, however, all enquiry has been ineffectual; nor have I been able to discover the slightest traces of its form, either among the productions of the pencil or the graver, in private or public collections. Should any of your Correspondents have it in their power to relieve me from this disappointment, by imparting the desired intelligence, I need hardly say how gladly it would be received.

Many are the inquiries, Mr. Urban, of which I have yet to seek solutions, upon subjects connected with the local History of Hampstead; for the materials of topography are widely scattered, and too often beyond the reach of individual grasp; buried under the dusky and neglected piles of family memorials, involved in the arcana of official repositories, mutilated or destroyed by the Gothic hand of Ignorance, laborious is the task of him who attempts to concentrate them; nor can be boast, like the devotees of many other branches of literature, that "His study is his all, his every place,"

Gladly would I avail myself of your medium, for making known such inquiries to those who possess wider opportunities of gaining intelligence than myself; but I know not, whether the extension of this Paper might not be prejudicial to Correspondents who have an equal claim on your attention with John James Park.

٠٦

Mr. Urban, Westminster, June 10.

If any additional reasons were wanted to prove the grandeur of this Nation, it is its efforts amidst such a war to unfold, bring to light, and publish, the Herculaneum MSS.

It ought never to be forgotten, that in 1806 the British Parliament placed 5,000l. at the disposal of the Prince of Wales, to aid his R. H.'s treaty with the King of Naples, by which he was to be at liberty to send an Agent to Portici, and make what he could of the famous, but neglected, curiosities in that Museum.

That Agent, it is well known, was the indefatigable and learned John Hayten, a man who did justice to his mission by his zeal and perseverance, and who till the last invasion of Naples employed nearly twenty persons in unfolding these cinders, while he himself was sedulously engaged in decyphering them. All recent travellers in Italy have done justice to this enterprize; and even our inveterate Foes have rendered their homage to the Prince of Wales on this subject.

To perfect his design, his Royal Highness, since the return of Mr. HAYDER, has been pleased to direct that a Report of Mr. HAYDER'S Mission and labours should be drawn ^{* &}quot;Ancillis Dei, quæ sunt in ecclesià beati Johannis Baptiste de Keneburna." Carta Ilcreberti, de terra in Kn'yghtbrigg. "Ingredientur etiam dominus episcopus capitulum movialium, cum suis," &c. Contentio cellæ de Kyllebourn. Dugd. Mon. Angl.

Id hear, of his being a Jesuit; a continued as such till his ace with the late Doctor Aspinwal, was well known in my family, baving converted an aunt of: late Mrs. Griffith, from the Unhappily for Mr. Bower, in ant controversy, most of the are dead who could have atinnoceace; but the Hon, and Aylmer has often heard his , that Sir Gerald Aylmer, part, Lord's desire, when on be nat to Macerata, on purpose to e character of our Anthon; and in two Priests at that place so y a one to his Lordship, that, trength out he did not scrup a n into his fam. by to instruct his and whoever knew the late per, will give him the character been not only as worthy but s a learned man as any now sean, May 29. Second Volume of the Hisof Surry (rige piper which executed), printed me "A new Edition of Poems by William Mason, M. A." which I bought at York in the year 1771, the place and date of its printing; whilst Mr. Mason was himself in remdence, as Canon at the time, when I had the honour of being known to him. It contains two epitaphs,the first, " on Mrs. Mason, in Bristol Cathedral ," and the other, on " the Honourable Miss Drummond, in the Church of Brodsworth, Yorkshire." I will give you a transcript of the supposed Epitaph which Mr. Bray gives, and which was probably as genuine a production of the same Author, as that which I will give you from my Edition. I will add an extract from the first Edition of the first (originally the only) Book of the Poem (since enlarged), "The English Garden," printed at London in 1772. The only inaccuracies that have caught my observation hither o, in the casual and few references I have made to different parts of the work, I will also add on the other side. I must further say, that Mr. Bray has shown himself himself possessed of the "Qualifications requisite for the Work," and done due honour and justice to the original Author and planner of it; who proved his own fullest possession of them, as well as knowledge of Saxon Literature, together with that proper to his profession as a Clergyman, in his other publications, previous to his unfortunate loss of sight.

510 Manning's "Surrey."—Mrs. Mason.—Rev. J. Jones.

E. J.

Errata.—P. 314, note. Dr. Herring took priest's orders in 1719, not 1739.

P. 321. l. 5 and 6, "Bugbrooke and Everdon, co. North." add, hampton, to distinguish it from North-umberland.

P. 491, line 9 and 12. Mrs. Elizabeth Gardiner died 17th July, and 16th July. Which is correct?

P. 501.]. penult. read procuratoris versatissimi.

Supposed Epitaph on Mrs. Mason:

"Whoev'r, like me, with trembling anguish brings [springs; His heart's whole treasure to these healing Whoe'er, like me, to sooth disease and pain,

These healing springs has visited in vain; Condemn'd, like me, to hear the faint reply, [eye,

To mark the fading cheek, the sinking From the chill brows to wipe the damps of death, [breath;

And watch in dumb despair the short'ning If chance direct him to this artless line, Let the sad mourner know—his pangs were mine.

[There are two more lines, but they have always appeared to me to weaken the pathos of the line here given, as the conclusion.]"

Quære, what were the lines?

Epitaph,—as in the Edition of Mason's Poems, 1771:

On Mrs. Mason, in Bristol Cathedral:

"Take, holy earth! all that my soul holds dear:

Take that best gift, which Heav'n so lately gave: [care.

To Bristol's fount I bore with trembling Her faded form; she bow'd to taste the

And died. Does Youth, does Beauty, read the line?

Does sympathetic fear their breasts
' alarm? [divine:
Speak, dead Maria! breathe a strain Ev'n from the grave thou shalt have power to charm;

Bidthem be chaste, be innocent, like thee;

Bid them in duty's sphere as move;

And, if so fair, from vanity as for As firm in friendship, and as love:

Tell them, tho' 'tis an awful thin ('Twas ev'n to thee); yet, the dream once trod,

Heav'n lifts.its everlasting portal:
And bids "the pure in heart their God."

THE ENGLISH GARDEN' After an Invocation to "
city," and the "Sister Pow Poetry and Painting, he addre latter two:

" If so, with lenient smiles, ye in chear,

At this sad hour, my desolated at For deem not ye, that I resume to To court the world's applause: a mature

Have learn'd to slight the toy. No south

That agony of heart, which they a Who best have lov'd, who best had belov'd.

Can feel or pity; sympathy seve Which she too felt, when on her p The last farewell hung trembin bespoke

A wish to linger here, and bless t She left for heaven. She died, and is hers!

Be mine the pensive solitary balan That recollection yields. Yes, Ang While Memory holds her seat image still Shall reign, shall triumph then when, as now,

Imagination forms a nymph diving To lead the fluent strain, thy modes. Thy mild demeanour, thy ung smile,

Shall grace that nymph,"and swe plicity

Be dress'd (ah! meek Maria!)

Mr. Urban,

In your last, p. 414, a Cor
I dent inquires for particular Rev. John Jones, Curate of Young of Welwyn. Having some months at Welwyn in the mer of 1764, my father's fami well acquainted with Mr. Jone the acquaintance with that ver thy man continued to the last of his lite. He was a plain, and most sincere Christian—we
—of-singular and shuple in ^{*} This Poem was begun in the 1767, not long after the death amiable person here mentioned.

nucd to the end of Mr. Jones's . respect, who fell from his horse going to parish in Huntingdonshire, and r spoke more ‡. The letters that ed between my father and Mr. is were toll of prous and useful mation; the account given in a of g od Dr. Young's death is r affecting. These letters are proy now in the hands of some of amily; and if I ever get them n in Fry possession, I may be able ive your Correspondent farther iculars of Mr. Jones &; happy in opportunity of bearing testimony wortay character whose memory Z. ill ever revere.

Several of the biographical articles h appeared in our former Volumes, common cated by a Friend who obd them from the executors of the Rev. lawson. EDIT.

He was Vicar, it is believed, of Al-EDIT.

In what year did he die? and is there Epitaph for him at Alconbury? Eo. We shall be happy to receive the comications so kindly promised. Eprr.

T. F. Dibbin.

THE following Anecdote of Prince Mr. Urban, Eugene, when he was General with the Duke of Mariborough, is not likely to be in the Memoirs written by himself.

He was a religious man, and used often to confess to his priest, who, in the pay of the French, discovered to them what he could learn. The Duke of Marlborough found some of his projects disappointed; and, suspecting the cause, acquainted Prince Eugene with a scheme he had no intention to execute. The Priest immediately communicated his newly-acquired intelligence to the French, whose movements, next day, proved they were in possession of the information. The Duke being thus confirmed in his suspicions, acquainted the Prince with the circemstance, and insisted on the Confessor's being taken into custody. He acknowledged himself a Spy; but, in compliance with the request of Prince Eugene, he was dismissed. M. N. A Mers-

Dom of	Therme	ometer.	Baror	neter.	LT	117:1	Westler &
Day of Month.	Max.	11 p m	Max.	Min.	Hyg.	Wind.	Weather, &c.
May 16	63	50	55.00	55.83	•2	S.	fair
17	63	55	20.92	29-20	•5	s. w.	fair
18	72	59	26.94	დ ი .გ9	•3	N.E.—8	fair
19	60	52	SC-00	59.62	0.1	N.	rainy—cloudy
20	69	54	23.94	29.82	()•‡	N.—E.	cloudy-fair-storms
21	68	5 .5	29.75	29.72	(…5	w.	showery
22	70	56	22.75	20.69 i	6.0	s. w.	clear and storms
23	69	51	20 45	2લ⋅81 }	•5	WS.W.
24	69	60 j	29-95	29.63	0.3	S.	fair
25	72	57	30:19	30 C1	•6	S.	misty-fair
26	80	63	30 65	30. 0 4	0∙ΰ	S.—S.W.
27	75	61	20.10	29.78	-2	N. S.	fair
28	66	54	29.80	29.68	0.0	S. W.	fair and windy
29	61	50	29.97	29.72	0.3	S. W.	showers—fair
30	71	55	30.00	29.81	•6	WSWS
31	73	56	29.62	29.48	0.6	S. W.	showers—fair
June 1	70		29.72		(+6	S. W.	fair
2	64	53	29 54	39.40	0.8	s. w.	wind and rain—fair
3	64	51	29.68	29 70	0.8	w.	overcas:—fair
4	66	55	29.90	29 85	0.4		wind and clinids—fair
5	63	53	29.79	89.68	0.16	S.S. W.
6	67	53	29.89	29.81	0.0	S.	wind & showers—fair
7	70	57	. 20.05	29.99	0.8	S.W.	fair
8	81		29.93	29.85	0.6	S.	fair—storms
9		49	30.24	30.22	•10	S. W.	air
10	73	54	30.15	29.98	-8	S.	fair
11	69		29.98	29.98	•5	S. S. W.	fair

May 16 and 17. Cirrus and Cirro-stratus followed by Nimbi; but no rain fell hereabout. Distant Thunder heard.

18. Close day: in the afternoon various modifications of Cloud appeared; in some places they shewed a tendency to Cirro-cumulative arrangement; in others Nimbifrication seemed rapidly going on; about 5 P. M. the Sky, seen behind a large Cumulo-stratus under the setting Sun, was of a deep brownish lake colour: as evening approached mountainous Clouds rose majestically in the Horizon, while others above were fringed with bright gold: rain succeeded in the night.

20. A uniform mass of Cloud obscured the Sky at Sun-rise: as the day advanced it broke, and divided itself into several distinct modifications. Cirro-cumulus of various figures, in some places looking like wind-rows of hay, in others consisting of small round Nubeculæ, appeared; as well as Cirrus spread out in continuous sheets approaching to the nature of Cirro-stratus, while flocks of Cumulus floated along in the wind below. In the windward about noon I observed a Cirrus cloud of a very remarkable figure; it consisted of many light tufts of a sort of korse-shoe figure, or more resembling in circumscription a horse-chesnut leaf, rising one above another. In the evening the distinct modifications were lost in a general haziness of a reddish colour; in some places blackish spots appeared, which were the Nuclii on which Nimbi formed, and Thunderstorms continued through the night. 21 and 22. Thunder-storms with fair intervals.

23. Cumuli alone early: in evening, streaks of Cirrus above them; also some clouds shewed a tendency to become Cirro-cumulus.

24. Cirro-cumulus, followed by increased heat, and evening lightning.

25. Cirro-stratus strewed in different altitudes, also Cirro-cumulus and Cumulus: in the evening Cirro-stratus becomes dense, and approaches to Nimbus.

26. Various Clouds, evening lightning.

- 27. Cirrus ramifying about, becomes Cirro-stratus, which obscures the Sky.
- 30. Cirri and Cumuli, followed by undulated and plane Cirro-stratus.

31. Stormy day; upper currents blow in various directions.

- June 4. Various Clouds through the day: in the evening extensive heds of Cirrocumulus observed.

 5. Showers and various Clouds as usual.
 - 6. Cirro-Cumulus, Cumulus, &c. In evening a thin sheet of Cirro-stratus exhibited a faint ill-d fined Simple Lunar Halo.
 - 7. In the evening the Myoid Cirro-stratus, &c. prevailed. A Simple Lunar Corone observed.

 9 10 and 11. Fair weather with various clouds.

Clapton, June 12, 1811. THOMAS FORSTER.

•

ug.

.

it appears from his own quotations, that by those expressions, any sou, or any child, male or female, may be understood; witness that from Ramsay:

"Auld Bessie, in her red coat braw,

Came wi' her ain oe Nannu."

If Mr. Jamieson had made use of Rowley's Poems (or Chatterton's, as he, in so unqualified a manner, has pronounced them to be), he might have discovered that the oe of the Scotch, when it signifies a son, a daughter, or a grandson, is merely a different orthography of the old English word Fye or Eyne, which we are indebted to Rowley's Poems for now clearly understanding to be son etimes used in the endearing sense of a

I sincerely hope that Mr. Jamieson's valuable publication may meet with such deserved success as soon to arrive at a second edition. In that case, Mr. Urban, he may, perhaps, pay some attention to the following note from the second part of my Examination of the internal Evidence respecting the Antiquity of Rowley's Poems; in which, if I am ever called upon for a first edition, I have no doubt of being able to demonstrate the absurdity of the opinion that Rowley's Poems were written by the late Thos. Chatterton. When the literary world will condescend to read the first part or "the Introduction to this Examination, printed by Meylers, Bath, and sold by Longman and Co. London, for the Benefit of the Literary Fund in Gerrard-street, Soho," then will the second part, now, and long since, ready for the press, dedicated by permission to that venerable and worthy character Dr. Harrington of Bath, make its immediate appearance.

In that beautiful simile in the second Battle of Hastings, I. 640, where the painctyd Bruton pursues the wolfyn wylde that had carried off his yonge childe, he

" Ne stynts, ne lagges the chace, tylle for [chyne." Lie Eyne In pieces her the morthering theef doth

"As painctyd Bruton, when a wolfyn [do blose. When it is cale, and blustrynge wyndes Enters hys bordelle, taketh his yonge isnowe. chy ide, And with his bloude bestreynts the lift e He troroughe mountayne hie and date deth goe, Threwe the quycktorrent of the bollen Ave,

Throw Severne rollynge oer the sandes be-He skyms alofe, and blents the beatynge Ne stynts, ne lagges the chace, tyile for his

In pieces hee the morthering theef doth Dr. Milles has very properly observed, p. 146 of his edition of Rowley's Poems, that the criticks who attacked the language of Rowley, were inattentive to the beauties of his Poetry, and the force of his expressions. He adds, that he is obliged to a very learned Friend for an elegant construction of the phrase " for his Eyne," i. e. in revenge for his child. Some frigid critic had understood " for his Eyne" to mean fore or before his Eyne; taxing the phrase with absurdity from his own misconception. but the Doctor adds " that the idea is most exquisitely classical, perhaps not to be found in any modern author." He has brought forward passages from Ausonius, Sophocles, Aschylus or Euripides, in confirmation, which are perfectly satisfactory. It that learned Friend of the Doctor's be yet living, he may perhaps be gratified by finding that the idea of Eye or Eync for a child does not in the English language rest solely on the authority of Rowley's Poems. Our modern word Heir (notwithstanding its near assinity with the Latin Hares), seems to be formed upon it, and was antiently written Eyer: "and I will, that ich child be his Father's Eyer," Charter of William the Conqueror to the City of London. Londinopolis, p. 40.; and it is so spelt in Arnold's Antient Chronicle.

The Eyas, a particular species of tame hawk, was so called from its heing brought up by the Faulkoner with all the tenderness of a young child. See Latham's Falconry, p. 33. The nest or place where hanks or cagles are bred is called an Elery: and Lailiam, p. 104, adds, "the Eyas of this kind the Haggard Lanner) exceedeth other bawkes, towardes their keeper, in love and gentleness."

We find in the second act and the sixth see: e of Hamlet, that our great Dramatic Bard connects the idea of a child with that of the Eyas Hawke.

" But core is, Sir, an Arrey of Children, little Emises that cry out on the top of question, and are most tyrannically clapt tor it."

This relates to the contentions of the different play-houses, Bankside, Fortune, sentatives of the shell with its lining; admit but the analogy of the Egg, and the embryo may follow till it become a child. Sure I am that the concatenation may be traced with, at least, as much ease as the formation of an elephant from the simple fibre, filament, or anther, of Dr. Darwin.

This long disquisition on the word Eye will be pardoned, if it enable us to comprehend the expression ONYERS in the first part of K. H. IV. which has hitherto completely foiled every commentator:

"Act n. Scene i. Gadshill.] I am joined with no fool land-rakers, no long staff expenny strikers, none of those mad, mustachio purple hand malt worms: but with nobility, and tranquility; burgomasters, and great Onyers; such as can hold in; such as will strike sooner than speak, and

"And afterwardes toke their course
And went streight their way;
Tho (n.e. then) fond the shire-grows the nest,
But in it was none ay."

i. e. no Egg or young one, metaphorically for no person or property.

If any thing farther were necessary to prove the use of Eye for a child, the following lines of Allan Ramsay would be sufficient; vide Yol, ii. p. xl. of his Poems.

" Sae hollow upstarts strive with care to hide

Their mean descent (which inly gnaws their pride)

By counting kin, and making endless faird, if that their granny's uncle's oye's a laird.

To this let us add the quotation of Mr. Jamieson already noticed:

" Auld Beseie, in her red coat braw, Came wi' her ain or Nanny."

And

516 Dr. Sherwen on Rowley's Poems .- Clarke's Travels. [June,

And we may conclude this long disquisition by observing that the verb to yean, or bring forth young, is as closely related to Eye or Oye, a young animal, as the old verb to child is to its corresponding noon Yeaned t. c.

Eyened.

I have not the vanity to lay claim to a discovery of the classical construction of the phrase for his Hyne; but in the margin of my copy of Rowley's Poems, 8vo, I find the following amongst the carliest of my remarks; but whether it may be found in any of my communications I cannot now ascertain. It runs thus:

"Eyne, in this instance, can scarcely mean eyes; can it apply to "his yonge childe?" or will this throw any light upon the difficulties which occur in other places respecting the word Eyne? perhaps it may be eafter be found that Eyne is an endearing expression for a child, or son, or daughter."

I now give myself some credit for the conjecture; but, when I had thus anticipated the construction, I did not know that it was either a Greeism or Lytinism.

I have since naticed in the first Volume of Plutarch's Lives, or Morals, Ed. 1684, page 34, that the Greek writers had another affusion to the eyes, which may be compared with this. The Orator, speaking of a shameless fellow, said, "he carried harlots not virgins in his eyes"—playing with the original reps, which is used to signify a virgin, or the pupil of the eye.

Mr. Jamieson, under the article EE, s. eye. has given us "Ex of the Dsy, noon, mid-day, s. n. and says, this is a beautiful metaphor, the allusion being evidently to the eye, as the brightest part of the body." But as he has given no quotation to prove the allusion, an English reader may suspect the Daisey to have been thus characterized by some Scotch bard, as it is beautifully and poetically called the Eye of the Day by Chaucer.

"In special one called Se of the Duis
The Daisie, a Floure white and rede,
And in French called La belle Margarete,

O commendable Flower."

"Well by reason men it call maie
The Daisie, or els the Eye of the Daie."

The common name of the Daisy in Sco land is Gowan, which, if the conjecture here offered be correct, may account for the proper allusion having escaped the notice of Mr. Jamieson.

There was less excuse for Dr. Milles, who frigidly supposed the Daiss-syed Banke of Elinoure and Juga, to be a mistake for daisied banke.

"Systems in sorrowe, on this daise-cycle
banke [ments,

Where melancholick broods, we wyll la-Be wette wythe mornynge dewe and evene danke;

Lyche levynde okes in eche the other bente, Or lyche forietten Halles of merriemente, Whose gastlie mitches holde the traine of fryghte,

Where lethalle ravens barke, and owlets wake the nyghte.

Elinoure and Juga, Mr. Urban, is one of the most elegant pastorals in the English lenguage; which they who believe Chatterton to have written, will be also compelled to believe that he did write it when he was only eleven years and a few months old—at the precise time that he is known to have written another Poem which betrays all the ignorance and puerility natural to have been expected from a boy of that age.

Yours, &c.

JOHN SHRAWER, M. D.

Mr. Urban, May 74. N Dr. Clarke's Travels-there is an L Engraving (at p. 244) of four 4 mcred pictures in use among the Calmucks." Of these, the Doctor gives no further explanation than what is contained) in a short inscription under each: that under the first to " Dies friformis, Luna, Diana, et Hecate;" that under the second, "Osiris, or Beechwar" under the third, " Hyperica, or Phobus;" and under the fourth, " Terpoichore." The last requires nothing more to be mid about it. On the three form your readers may, perhaps, be pleased to see the following observations. .

What the Doctor calls Dive trifermis seems to be intended solely for the Moon, who is drawn with three faces, to represent her three states or stages, the increase, the full, and the wanc. And as the lunar year was that by which all nations originally measured their time, and regulated their lives and the whole course of their affairs, the painter has employed the three pair of arms which he has given to " his figure, to denote the three stages of human life corresponding to the three phases of the moon. Of the first pair, the right hand is laid upon her breast, and supports a barble. trinket, or toy, hanging from her head, surrounded by a large full moon, behind which there is another still larger, which forms the whole back of her seat or car.

The picture which Dr. Clarke calls Hyperion, or Phoebus, I think means is involved in stormy, rolling, and tempestuous clouds. His apparent violence and his reeling attitude, I suppose, made Dr. Clarke mistake him for Bacchus; and it is possible that there may be some intention of insinuating insinuating that "they that be drunken are drunken in the night," as the Apostle says (i Thess. v. 7.): but I rather think that nothing more is meant than to point out his descent, or fall, and the fury in which he comes, staggering with the wind.

The two large stars at the top of all the three pictures may be designed to point out the two parts of the night, before and after midnight.

With respect to the Diva triformis of the antients, I believe it is generally supposed, as Dr. Clarke here seems to suppose, that she is compounded of three different goddesses, Luna, Diana, and Hecate; and if we ask why they are so compounded, the mythologist answers that it is done to express a joint empire or rule over heaven, and earth, and hell. But how can these deities by their junction denote such an empire, unless each of them were separately possessed of a separate empire in each of these respective regions? This, however, is by no means The antient mythology the case. does not confine the power or the presence of Luna exclusively to heaven, nor that of Diana to the earth, nor that of Hecate to hell; nor is the power of either of them over these regions, supreme. If the intention, therefore, were to express such united sovereignty as is supposed, the choice of persons for the purpose has been very injudiciously made. Why fix upon these in preference to any other three deities, male or female, one celestial, another terrestrial, and the third infernal? Why not combine the three sovereigns of each region at once? Spence, in his Polymetis (Dial. 8, p. 102, 1755, fol.) seems to think that the epithet triformis belongs more properly to Hecate. But the very first line that he quotes confutes his notion; for in that Virgil as expressly applies the epithet to Diana, as to Hecate. Tergeminamque Hecuten, tria virginis ora Dianæ. (Æneid. iv. 511.) and both Horace and Ovid do the same in two passages (Od. iii. 22. Heroid. xii. 79.) which Spence has quoted immediately before.

The true state of the case, I believe, is, that both the epithet and the triple form were common to all the three, and were never intended to express any joint empire or union between them; but merely to denote in the person of each, separately, the single uncompounded sway or power of the Moon, which is so obviously to sight, and so strikingly triformis. And I think that Luna, Liana, and Hecate, are only three different names for the Moon, considered as the arbitress of The difference between them consists in this, that the first has more of an ordinary appellative in it, the second more of a mythological personification, and the third is a more partial appellation, being restricted to a more confined operation or ef-The word / una is defect of Time. rived from \u00e4v\u00e4solvo, or absolvo, and evos unnus, or annuus. Diana comes from dana divido, or distribute, and the And Hecate is from & & ha-Same avos beo, or affero, and (either irn annos, orelse, as I rather think) and damnum, loss, decay, death. This last word the lexicographers deduce from aras, but I believe, on the contrary, that area comes from arn, and that arn itself is not a primitive but derived from the a privativum, and the particle er, and so is applied to any thing which either is no more at all, or no longer what it was; whence arm will express either death or decay, both of them the sure effect of Time.

Upon these principles of applying what is said to the Moon, to her appearances, and to the uses which men have made of her, more especially in the computation of their time, all the names, and epithets, and fables of Diana and Hecate may be easily and rationally explained by the help of a little etymology, and by attending to the figure called Personification; a figure to which not only all mythology, but much of what passes current under the name of history, is indebted for its existence. But to go any further into the fabulous history of Time at present, would be taking up more, than I ought, both of your time and my own. I therefore subscribe myself, Yours, &c. CHRONOLOGUS.

Mr. Urban,

S some of our most eminent Lawyers, who should be patterns of religious attendance on the duties of the Sahbath, are apt to consider the Sunday, not as the Lord's Day, but as their own; you will do them a kindness, and yourself some credit, not only in pointing out to their notice the opposite sentiments and practice of that great Luminary, the

Lord

MERE can be but little doubt, if L any, but that great benefit might arise from an attentive inquiry into the causes which occasion the ill state of health, to which persons employed in various manufactories are peculiarly liable; and well employed would that man be, who should be engaged in making such inquiry, and pointing out to the owners of the works, and

June 3.

to the publick, any suggestions which might tend to lessen (suppose the evil could not be totally eradicated) the mischiefs arising from the different processes.

Mr. URBAN,

There are three unwholesome trades which more particularly occur to my mind at present, and there appears to me a probability that, by some alterations in the general mode of conducting them, the desired effeet might be produced in some degree.

OF THE MOTFIELD

Would not the wearing a mask over the face, with an opening before the mouth, and having glass before the eyes, remedy this evil!

I have been informed that very good effects have been perceived in an extensive manufactory near the Metropolis, since the introduction of drying the white-lead in small carthen pans, The name of all our lives and loves.

Hearken, and help, ye holy doves!

The high-born broad of day: you bright
Candidates of blissefull light,

The Heirs elect of Love; whose names belong

Unto the everlasting life of song;

All ye wise Soules, who in the wealthy brest [nest. Of this unbounded name build your warm

Of this unbounded name build your warm Awake, my glory, Soul (if such thou be, And that fair word at all referr to Thee),

> Awake and sing, And be all-wing;

Bring hither thy whole self, and let me see, [thee.

What of thy parent Heaven yet speakes in Shall we dare this, my soul; we'l doe't and bring [sing.

No other note for't, but the Name we Wake Lute and Harp,

And every sweet-lipp't thing That talks with tuneful string &

Start into life, and leap with me Into a hasty fitt-tun'd Harmony.

Nor must you think it much
T' obey my bolder touch;

I have authority in Love's name to take you, [wake you,

And to the worke of Love this morning Wake; in the name

Of him who never sleeps, all things that are,

Or, what's the same,

Are musicall;
Answer my call,

And come along;

Help me to meditate mine immortall song.

Come, ye soft ministers of sweet sad mirth, [earth;

Bring all your houshold stuff of heav'n on O you, my soul's most certain wings,

Complaining pipes, and prattling strings, Bring all the store

Of sweets you have, and murmur that you have no more.

* * * * * * * *

NEW YEAR'S DAY.

Rise, thou best and brightest morning, Rosy with a double red;

With thine own blush thy cheeks adorning, [shed.

And the dear drops this day were All the purple pride that laces

The crimson curtains of thy bed,
Guilds thee not with so sweet graces

Guilds thee not with so sweet graces, Nor setts thee in so rich a red.

Of all the fair-cheek't flowers that fill thee None so fair the bosom strowes

As this modest maiden lilly,

Our sins have sham'd into a rose.

Bid thy golden God, the Sun, Burnisht in his best beames rise,

Put all his red-eyed rubies on; These rubies shall put out their eyes. Let him make poor the purple East, Search what the world's close cabinets keep,

Rob the rich births of each bright nest, That flaming in their fair bods sleep.

Let him embrave his own bright tresses
With a new morning made of gemmes;
And wear in those his wealthy dresses
Another day of Diadems.

When he hath done all he may,
To make himself rich in his rise,
All will be darkness to the day
That breaks from one of these bright eyes.

And soon this sweet truth shall appear to Dear Babe, ere many days be done, The Mora shall come to meet thee here, And leave her own neglected Sun.

Here are beauties shall bereave him.
Of all his Eastern paramours:
His Persian lovers all shall leave him,
And swear faith to thy sweeter powers.

HYMN, as sung by the SEEPHERDS.

Come we Shepherds, whose blest sight
Hath mett Love's noon in Nature's night;

Come, lift we up our loftyer song,

And wake the Sun that lyes too long.

THYRSIC.

Winter chickle aloud, and sent
The angry North to wage his warres;
The North forgot his fierce intent;
And left perfumes instead of sources.
By those sweet eyes' persuasive powers,
Where he meant frost, he scatter'd flow'rs.

TITTEUS.

I saw the curl'd drops, soft and slow
Come hovering o'er the place's head,
Offering their whitest sheets of snow
To furnish the fair Infawt's bed.
Forbear, said I, be not too bold,
Your fleece is white, but 't is too cold.

CHORYS.

Welcome, the not to those gay flyes, Guilded ith beames of earthly kings; Slippery soules in smiling eyes;

But to poor shepherds, home-spme things; [be

Whose wealth 's their flock; whose witt, to Well read in their simplicity.

Yet when young April's husband-show'rs
Shall bless the fruitful Maja's hed,
We'l bring the first-born of her flow're
To kisse thy feet, and crown thy head,

I D

Mr.

"." J.B. would be obliged to any of Mr. Urban's Poetical Readers to inform him whether Crashaw's Sacred Poems form any part of his original or collected Works.

• - •

Birmingham, Mr. Urdan, March 27.

NNEXED are Views of three A Hampshire Churches, viz. New Airesford, Old Airesford, and Orington (see Plate II.); to accompany which I send the following Notes, taken in 1807. WILLIAM HAMPER.

NEW ALRESFORD.

The Church, dedicated to St. John Baptist, consists of a nave with North and South ailes, and a chancel. A tower at the West end centains six bells. There is a slub in the Chancel for Mrs. Janie Beline, Sept. 2, 1739, aged 50.

On whos in the save:

" H. S. E. (pictate, benevolentia, morumque sunditate, inter ornatas orna-tussima!) Sarah, unor Henrich Sealy, Obijt ziv Septembels MICCECIE. mtatu suz xxxi. Sub eodem tumulo juxta dilectam Conjugem positæ sunt Heurici Sealy (amicis maxime defleti) reliquim. Obijt viii'vo die Aprilis, A. D. MDCCCV. mtat. LXVII,"

" In memory of the Rev. . Richard Webb, Master of the Free-School in this Town, who died October 21, 1789, aged Slabs in the North aile for Mary Eades, Nov. 19, 1701, aged 24 : and Authory Gardener, March 17, 1702, aged 31.

On mural monuments in the North aile:

" To the memory of Richard Woods, esq. of this Town, who died Nov. 15, 1789, aged of years."

"In expectatione diei supremi, prope jacet Johannes Lake, Natus 7 | Septembris] c, 1691. Denatus 79 01, 1759. Qualis crat dies ste indicabit."

On mural monuments in South aile:

"To the memory of John Barmard, esq. who died June 12, 1763, dged 58 years. And of Mary his wife, who died March 10, 1749, aged 38 years:"

Arms: Argent, a bear rampant Sable, impaling, gutté de sang, : a · lion rampant Gules. Crest, a demibear erect Sable.

"To the memory of Elizabeth Harris, daughter of Wm. and Jenny Harris of New-place near this Town, who died the 20th of April, 1798, in the 17th year of

" Belov'd Eliza, while thy early doorn Thy Parents mourn, and deck thy recent tomb :

While thy dear image wakes their ceaseless woe, fflow : And their main tents to quick succession Amid the tribute which Affection pays, And Nature claims; their voice in holy praise

Lauds the Almighty, that in realizated peace

The earthly sorrest and afflictions consider Yes! the mosk virtues, that adorn d the youth.

The plants of the ball utentiled with the Pariste Constant of the Saints. Have wing'd thy passage to the Saints

On this fond hope thy mourning Parents [dispel : Oh may this bope their heartfelt grief And in eternal bliss, when Heaven shall deign,

Their lov'd Eliza may they meet again.

" Also to the the above-named ris; viz. William 1773, aged two y Philip, died 17th years; and John aged 10 years?"

"Near this place lie interred the remains of Ann Poyes, the wife of Robert Boyes of this Town; whose amiable conduct and steady perseverance in the uniform and faithful discharge of every religious, domestio, and social duty, made her still the more belgyed the more she was known; and her death a loss the most afflicting to those who had the greatest experience of her endearing virtues. Having undergone a long and tedious illness with exemplary patience and Christian formulade, and enjoyed the foreign c of approaching bliss in the contemplation of a west-spent info, she calmly resigned her tood to God, April 4, 1762, aged 44. Learn, Reader! Bless her memory; and follow her example."

On the walls of the Church, which are of flint and plaster, are several dates: on the Charcel 1767, on the North Ade 1766, on the South Aile 1760, and on the Tower 1699.—A very antient Crucifix of stone is worked

^{*} A new peal of eight tell, east by Mr. Thos. 3h are of London, were adjustised to be opened on the ... It of March

GEST. MAG. June, 1811

Mr. URBAN, March 21.

A NNEXED are Views of three Alregford, Old Alregford, and Ovington (see Plate II.); to nowing Notes, which I send the following Notes,

Birmingham, lion ratepant G: March 21. bear erect Sable.

"To the mettory of Elizabeth Harris, daughter of Wm. and Jonay Harris of New-place near this Town; who died the 190th of April, 1798, in the 17th year of 1789, aged 69 years" 2.

C Brage

.... duot april steady perseverance in the uni-

"In expectatione diei supremi, prope jacet Johannes Lake. Natus 7 * [Septembris] 6, 1691. Denatus 7 * 21, 1759. Qualis erat dies iste indicabit."

Learn, Reader! Bless, her manory; and follow, her mample.

•"

On the walls of the Church, which are of flist and planter, are several dates: on the Chancel 1767, on the North Ade 1766, on the South Ade 1760, and on the Tower 1699.—A very antient Crucifix of stone is worked aised to be opened on the 25th of Marbh-

GENT. MAG. June, 1814.

worked into the West side of the Tower.

An altar-tomb in the Church-yard bears the following inscription (in capitals):

"Ici est le corps de Monsieur le Comte de Jourville, Capitaine des Vaisseaux de son Majesté très Chrêtienne, Chevalier de l'Ordre Militaire de Saint Louis, mort a la ville d'Alresford, dans la trente septieme amée de son age, le neuf Octobre, mil sept cents cinquante-huit."

The Register says, "A French prisoner buried October 7, 1758."

From a paper pinned in the Register I transcribed an account of "Accidents which have happened in this Town by fire since about the year 1620.—About the year aforesaid a are happened at the Swan, which by report burnt down great part of the West street. On the first of May, in the year 1678, a fire happened in the West street again, which burnt down to the ground three houses and back buildings. And again, on the first of May, in the year 1689, about nine o'clock in the morning, a fire broke out in the Soke; the season dry, and the N.E. wind blowing very hard, the same in about three hours burnt down and consumed to the ground the dwelling-houses of 117 families, with the Church and Market-house: the damage, by the oaths of the sufferers, amounted to the sum of 24,500%. and upwards. And on the 30th of April, in the year 1736, a are broke out in the West street between nine and ten in the morning, which burnt the dwelling-houses of thirty families, with all the out-houses, barns, and stables, to the number of eightysix piles of building; damage 5,000%. and upwards, besides insurances."

Inscription over the door of the Free-school:

"Schola
Ex Fundatione
Hanrici Perin, Armig:
Num'is ab eo legatis
Extructa.
A. D. 1698."

In the School there is a Portrait of the Founder, who was buried in Old Alresford Church-yard. His Epitaph is given below.

OLD ALRESFORD.

The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an unostentations brick edifice, of a single pace and Chancel. The date of its erection is perpetuated by the following Inscription on the West side of the Tower.

"This Church was rebuilt, A. D. 1758.
The Tower, A. D. 1769.
The Bells cast, A. D. 1770.
John Hoadly, LL.D. Rector.
James Rodney, esq, and { ChurchMr. Henry Bullpett, { wardens.

Within, on the North wall of the Nave, is a superb mural monument of white and coloured marble, containing (under a pediment supporting a shield of arms and two urns) a Bust of the deceased, with full-sized emblematic figures of Faith and Hope. A Sarcophagus bears this inscription:

"Near this place lie deposited the remains of Mrs. Jane Rodney, daughter of the Hon. Charles Compton, and wife of George Bridges Rodney, esq. who was an honour to her family, and the delight of all that knew her. She died Jan. 29, 1757, aged 27, and left behind her three children in their infancy."

Arms: Or, three engles displayed Purpure, two and one; impaing, Sable, a lion passant gardant, between three helmets Argent.

On mural monuments against the South wall of the nave.

"In memory of Christopher Perin, gent. who departed this life, Nev. 27, 1705, aged 74. And also of Serah, the wife of Christopher Perin, who departed this life, May 30, 1726, in the 88th year of her age. Interred in the vault near this place."

Arms: Gules, three crescents Argent; impaling a cress chequy between four pellets.

"In memory of Jane, the wife of Reginald Edwards, and daughter of Chartopher Perin, gent. who died July 19, 1728, aged 62. And also of Christopher Perin Edwards, son of the said Reginald and Jane Edwards, who died Aug. 16, 1720, aged 23."

Arms! A lion rampant regardant; on a canton an eagle displayed; impaling three crescents, with a fourth for difference. Crest, a Lion's head crased.

On the North wall of the Chancel, a plain oval tablet (having at the bottom in excellent sculpture, a dog holding a bunch of keys, as emblans of a faithful housekeeper) is inscribed:

"This small but sincere memorial of his good friend and faithful Servent, Mrs.

and see dyed the, day of March, Auno Dom. 1672, in the 75 years of his age," (Arms, as last.)

2.

"Elizabeth Perin." All but the name obliterated),

3.

"Here lieth Christopher Perin, late of Waiehouse, second son and heir of Henry Perin, sea, sometime of the same place in this Parish, esq. And of his second wife Sarah, daughter of Matthew Cruchfield, late citizen of London. By her he had two sons, Henry and Christopher, and six daughters, three of which only survived him. He lived believed by his friends, and honoured by his wife and children. An indulgent husband, a tender father, and a pious Christian. He died Nov. 27, A. D. 1700, setat, 74."

Arms, same as on the monument in the Church.

4.

"In memory of Reginald Edwards, late Citizen of London, who married Jane, daughter of Christopher Perin, gent. by whom he had issue one son and one daughter, Christopher Perin Edwards, and Sarah Edwards. He departed this life the 30th day of July, Anno Dom. 1701, aged ..., years. — And also hereunder

PTIBUIPP.

The Church consists of a Nave and Chancel; the latter only eleven feet by ten feet within. At the West end is a wooden turret with four bells. On the left hand of the West door is a recess for holy water; and on the North side of the Nave, within, a low arch in the wall, nearly bid by pews, but no monument to be perceived under it. The Font is antient and capacious; a square hason, on an octagonal shaft with a spreading base.

A mural monument in the Chancel:

"In memory of the Rev. Mr. Barrett, forty-nine years Rector of this Parish; and Elizabeth his wife. He died July 8, 1744, aged 74 years. She died March 17, 1730, in her 60th year. Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord.'—This monument was erected by their youngest daughter Mrs. Elizabeth Mathews of London."

There are also mural monuments in the Nave, for the following persons:

"William Yaiden, esq. Recorder of the City of Winchester, Aug. 21, 1771, aged 53."

"Mr. James Yalden, who died at Tichborne, June 27, 1776, aged 67." "Themas Armstrong, esq. Jan. 22, 1791, aged 70, and Sarah his wife, Sept. 23, 1782, aged 56."

"John Knight, son of George and Ann Knight of this Parish, Dec. 8, 1803, aged seven."

The Rev. Mr. Richards held the living in 1807.

Mr. URBAN, Moy, Ireland,
May 14.

Nagazine has, on several occasions, given publicity to papers respecting Fiorin Grass; sometimes proclaiming its merits to the world; at others, fairly reporting—the controversies on its subject—the attacks made upon this intruder by its enemies—and the defence given in to you by its friends.

The enemies of Fiorin Grass are of two descriptions, Seedsmen and Land Stewards, both inveterate; each being attacked in their most tender points: the former feels his purse threatened; while the latter dreads the diminution of his reputation for sugacity, in letting the value of a grass (everywhere before him) escape his attention.

These Gentlemen too have often an understanding, a fellow-seeling with each other; and now unite to repel an invasion, and to resist an innovation, likely to prove fatal to their profits and to their perquisites.

Unfortunately for them this grass cannot, in agricultural practice, be propagated by seed; but the Stolones by which grounds are laid down with Fiorin abound everywhere; the Farmer looks at home instead of recurring to the Seedsman's Shop, and if he speculates largely, the roots and strings of one Perch will abundantly clothe an Acre, and that Perch again laid down will be in full crop the next year.

This formidable intruder is met by its enemies (in league together), sometimes separately, sometimes jointly;—the Seedsman condemns the grass, and discourages its propagation;—the Bailiff, finding his employer disposed to try Fiorin, contrives that its crop shall not succeed; of this I have met with many instances. Both gentlemen unite in promouncing Fiorin to be Couch Grass, the most troublesome of weeds.

I have on different occasions, and sometimes in your useful Magazine, desended my protegé from this imputation, and seem to have silenced the enemy.

I was hesitating whether I should goad these Couch-mangers to a reply, when I was amused by discovering I had got an ally in the war; that Mr. Ainslie of Edingham had undertaken to redd Lectures on Fierin Grass to the Agricultural Society of Kircubbright, and had particularly taken up this part of the controversy,

Mr. Ainslie, or some friend, was so good as to send me his first Lecture, from which I shall take the liberty of making an extract:

"Fiorin Grass, much to its prejudice, has been frequently confounded with the Quicken — which is the most noxious of all weeds, on account of its lengthened tangling roots, which exhaust the land, while its herbage is of the worst quality;

"The Fiorin Grass, on the other hand, by its slender and simple root, does not injure the land, while (as I shall shew in the sequel) it affords the most nourishing food for Horses, Sheep, and Cattle.

"To point out the difference between the Quicken and the Piorin, I have directed a parcel of each, including their roots, to be exhibited—the distinction which I have pointed out, will be clearly seen; this will rescue the Fiorin from a too common slander: though, like the prisoner who was confined from his resemblance to a culprit, it may have suffered a temporary obloquy, the examination which you will give it will restore it to the reputation which it merits."

Convinced that I may safely trust the defence of my protegé to so zead lous and knowing an Associate, I shall leave the question as to the identity of Fiorin and Couch Grass in Mr. Ainslie's hands; and, quite tired of defensive war, shall turn on the enemy, and retort upon him the charge of discriminating Couch Grass as a valuable object of cultivation.

"At to deterios palles, nec sis mihi tutor."

My information that London Seeds, men recommend and sell Couch Grass under another name, as a valuable seed, to their customers, is derived from the following circumstance:

An Irish gentleman wrote to an eminent London Scettsman (not Mr. Salisbury), to send him, in the proper proportions, such grasses as he would recommend, to by down a certain

rimpe

off for myself the study of the gramina, as a sort of department, limiting myself to such as promised to be valuable. In the course of my experiments, I soon discovered that the Avena flavescens gave a nicer crop of hay than any other grass I had cultivated.

Not acquainted with the Avena elatior (Tail Oat Grass), but expecting, from similitude of names, a similarity in properties with an increase of size, I sent to the Botany Garden for Tail Oat Grass, and sowed some plots of it with much care.

When the crop came to perfection, I discovered with much mortification that I had been fostering my worst enemy, the most mischievous species of Squitch Grass, with which I was but too well acquainted under the name of Knobb Squitch, a much greater nuisance in crops of corn than common Squitch Grass, Triticum repens.

Who that is used to look at his own gram crops (especially if in ground much worn) does not see with grief, which he tells us is about half a yard high,

Let the importers of Tail Out Grass examine their meadows in the season, and they will soon recognize the grantic intruder, ready to adulterate their crops by the admixture of its course, hard, and uncatable stalks.

The Seedsmen charge me with recommending Couch Grass to the world, as a new and valuable acquisition. Mr. Salisbury under his hand passes sentence upon my Florin: "Damn it altogether, 'tis nothing but Squitch."

A curious tax of the Emperor Vespasian gave rise to the adage.

" — Lucri bonus est odor, ex re Qualibet."— for Hel to I the who sell the Squitch tribe, to clothe his grounds with!

Do the English receive similar treatment from those they are enriching so rapidly? Every gentleman can answer that question for himself; let him look over his Seed account, and examine the list of grass seeds he has paid for; should he find Tall Oat Grass among them, I leave to himself to decide, between the palpable ignorance or mischievous dishonesty of his Seedsman.

I have in this letter limited myself to the Tall. Oat Grass sent to my Countryman: the rest of the list of grasses recommended shall, with your permission, Mr. Urban, be the subject of another letter.

The strange furrage reminds me of the mixed nostrums of the old Medical School, where half the drugs in the Apothecary's Shop were thrown together into one general medicine, little troubling themselves about contrary effects and opposite qualities.

A discussion of the natural history of the separate grasses contained in this list will show that the vendor knew as little how to avail himself of good materials when he had them, as how to protect his customers from the introduction of the worst.

W. RICHARDSON, D. D.

May 1, MR. URBAN, N answer to the query in p. 414, A the late Rev. Dr. Lort was instituted to the Rectory of St. Michael, Mile End, Colchester, in 1789. Soon afterwards, as he was going thither to perform divine service (he being at that time on a visit to Mr.F. Smythies, who married Mrs. Lord's sister) in a onehorse chaise, accompanied by Mr. Smythies, the horse going down the North hill in that town (which is very steep, and paved) slipped down, and the Doctor was thrown out of the chaise upon the pavement; being advanced in years, and very heavy, he was considerably hurt in his loins, but recovered sufficiently in a few days so as to return to London; there were, however, strong indications of his kidneys being injured. He had been subject to violent attacks of asthma for some time previous to this accident; and about two months after his return to London, he was seized with paralytic affection, which soon destroyed him. He was buried at his Church in Friday-street. Mrs. Lort survived him but a very few years, and was buried near him. A Monement has been placed there by his Executors, with the following inscription:

"Near this place are deposited the remains of Michael Lort, D. D. F. R. S.&A. S. for twelve years Professor of the Greek." Language in the University of Cambridge, and for nineteen years Rector of this parish. To the purest simplicity of character he united great talents and great virtues; his learning was as extensive as his communication of it was liberal and unassuming; the whole tenor of his life was a practical commentary on the precepts of that Holy Religion in which he devoutly believed. He died Nov. 5, 1790, aged 65.

"His widew, Susannah Lort, who survived him only fifteen months, and whose remains are deposited in the same vault, ordered this Monument to be placed as a faithful record of her affection and sorrow. She died Feb. 5, 1792, aged 50."

A few days since, going into a Bookseller's shop, I saw a very elegant new edition of Dr. Goldsmith's Poetical Works, with Notes, and some beautiful Plates, by the Rev. R. H. Newell, of St. John's, Cambridge of they seem intended to elucidate some points respecting that pleasing Poems "The Deserted Village." Asevery thing respecting Goldsmith and his writings is highly interesting to all lovers of Poetry, I hope you will give some account of this Work*.

AN OLD Essex Courespondents

Northiam, June 12; Mr, URBAN, HAVE been accustomed for many. years to commemorate the loss of those friends and relatives who are gone before me to the grave, by reading over, on the days of their decease, that sublime form of devotion which our Church uses at the burial of the dead, and renewing my thanks. giving to that Almighty Being with whom do live the spirits of the doparted, Nothing can more forcibly recall them to the mind, than such an observance of these mournful anniversaries, or more effectually fill the heart with impressions of tenderness, resignation, and comfort, The beginning of those sorrows was, at the early age of fourteen, on the death of my Father s

^{*} We shall be glad to notice this Work in a future Number. Epry.

the Festival of Easter, and Ascension-day.

In reading one of the Lessons for Easter-day, which contains the instr-tution and description of the Passover, the Rector of the Parish where I reade addressed some extemporary remarks to his Congregation on the strictness with which the Children of Israel were commanded to observe it for an ordinance to them and their posterity, and how religiously they kept the prescribed memorial thereof. As all expositions, or application of the Holy Scriptures, are usually dehvered from the pulpit, I was rather struck with the singularity of this address, particularly as it did not come from a person who is in any respect, I believe, considered as an enthusiast. Whether a Clergyman officiating in the Established Church is, crisnot, at liberty to depart, in this or any other instance, from the regular and accustomed performance of the service, it is not my province to decide, nor is it my present object to delivered. But here it will be asked with plausibility, what is all this to the purpose, if such a mode of preaching has its effect upon the Audience F -That it fills the places of worship, and excites the attention, or rather the curiosity and applauses of the lower orders and the ignorant, is nudeniable, but its superior effect, upon their religious and moral conduct, is not so apparent: indeed, it would be abourd to expect they could derive igstruction from mere declamatory ve-_ hemence, and to argue from its power of persuasion is to contend for the good effect of nonzenze in preference to that of its reverse. We have not so many instances as must earnestly be wished, of Preachers who deliver prepared and written discourses with animation and propriety. This is the grand desideratum, it is evidently gaining ground; preachers of this order do very justly acquire popularity; and if they cannot put to a-lence the folly of extempore doclasmers, they are, and must be held in a much higher degree of estimation by all who wish to hear the sound doctrines and pure precepts of religion enforced by the united powers of reason, sacred learning, and Christran picty. With regard to any extemporary expositions or application of the Lessons as they are read, where they particularly require such an immediate explanation to obviate the consequence of being misunderstood by the ignorant, or misapplied by the profane, I think they might sometimes be introduced with considerable effect at the discretion of a judicious Minister; and, though it was done with some degree of warmth and severity in the instance I have mentioned above, I do not know that a word was uttered more than the occasion required. His observations chiefly referred to the 26th and 27th verses of the Lesson, which was the 12th Chapter of Exodus:

26. "And it shall come to pass when your children shall say unto you, What mean you by this service?

27. "That ye shall say, It is the sacrifice of the Lord's Passover, who passed over the houses of the Children of Israel in Egypt, when he smote the Egyptians, and delivered our houses; and the people bowed the head, and worshiped."

He took occasion, to remark upon their strict observance of this solemn institution, contrasted with the evident disregard of too wany Christians, and, in particular, that of his own parishioners, to the commemoration of an infinitely greater deliverance eflected for them by the Saviour of the World; directing his reproof to those of the Congregation who had been absent from divine Service on Good Friday: "You have not yourselves kept or devoted to any religious du-Hes the day of his Crucifixion, the day on which he died for you; what can you say to your children when they shall ask of you the meaning of others' observance of that day which you have thus profanely neglected, and which it is incumbent on you to explain to them from the instructions - you ought to have attended to receive, and the services you ought to have performed in this place of worship: In vain do you profess yourselves to be Christians, in vain will you expect Salvation through the merits of this great Sacrifice, while you show yourselves so utterly unmindful of his sufferings and his death."

I will not take upon the to say that these were the precise words; but that they were nearly the same, and to this effect, expressed with an earnest warmth and severity of manner, which the importance of the subject justified and might require. Certainly the solemn observance of the day on which this great event, recorded wilk so many awful and interesting circumstances, is appointed to be commemorated, is a duty of the highest import and indispensable obligation; an event whereby alone we can obtain pardon for the innumerable of tences with which our lives are marked, or be restored to the divine fat your whenever we are sincerely disposed to relinquish them, and do in any degree subdue our evil habits, and turn from the error of our ways. Such being the efficacy of our Redeemer's sufferings and death, and such the extent of his intercession for us, it would almost be incredible, if we did not know it to be fact, that there should be any amongst us who refuse or neglect to commemorale this great instance of divine mercys or, even on the Day on which he rose from the dead, to partake of a festive institution he hath ordained in remembrance of him.

On the Sunday preceding Ascension-Day, the Rector gave notice that there would be morning and evening Service, and a Sermon. The Evening Service and Sermon, I believe, are very unusual on this day, except Cathedral Churches; but, making this remark, I certainly do not mean to consure the Rector; for most assuredly it is highly commendable in the Minister of every Parish to impress on his Parishioners the importance of a strict and conscientious observance of those days which the Church has appointed to be kept holy, and this, in particular, on which our Redemption was finally completed; that conclusive act of the Son of God, by which he "opened the Kingdom of Heaven to all believers." and assumed his Seat at the righthand of the Eternal Father, there to intercede with him for the forgiveness of our ofiences, and to communicate the influence of the Holy Spiril, to guard, support, and comfort as under all jour trials and afflictions, for promoting Christianity among the Jews.

(Continued from page 344.) OUR next Correspondent upon I this subject is Mr. W. Hamilton Reid, who has favoured the publick with two papers, and who, like his friend Mr. Thos. Witherby, appears to be remarkably in the confidence of the Jews. Mr. Reid is said to be a gentleman who writes for Bookselless; and it is no reproach to him, provided he does not professedly lend his name and talents to any opinions, be they what they may, for lucre's take.-But, if this information is correct (and I had it from a Jew who knows Mr. Read), is it very improbable that, in writing these papers, he is in the employment of the Jews? Is il not dealing charitably towards Mr.

rect, not only in the main point at issue between them; viz. the degree of advantage which the French Jews have received from the Decrees of N. Buonaparte, but also that the Jews did attribute to him the peculiar characteristics of the Messiah. Now it is somewhat curious, that, to prove the above, Mr. Atkins quotes faithfully a passage out of Mr. Reid's own Book, the New Sanhedrin, pp. 61 and 119, to which I may add the follow-ing passage from the Introduction to the New Sanhedrin: " Roglishmen will revolt at the idea; but it cannot be concealed, that the Jews of this Sanhedrin acknowledge the Head of the French Government as their Deliverer, and the Great Prince predict-ed in the sacred writings." But this is not all: we are informed by Mr.

^{*} Lest any doubt should remain upon this subject, and of the implety and sacrilege of the Members of this Sanhedrin, I will subjoin two or three quotations from the Collection des Actes de l'Assemblée des Irraelites, of Mr. Tama, Paris, 1807.—The Au-Gent. Mac. June, 1811." ther

Atkins, that the Retrospect " was originally a French Official Paper circulated over the Continent, no doubt for the express purpose of establishing the objects in contemplation of Buonaparte."—This statement Mr. Reid has not yet contradicted; and he himself states that it had been circulated in the Paris Papers, and upon the Continent.—Is it not fair then to presume that the translator was actuated by the same motives as the original Author? Mr. Atkins seems to draw a distinction: but upon what foundation it is not casy to discover.

I shall now proceed to notice what appear to me both glaring inconsistencies and unwarrantable assertions. In Mr. Reid's paper for July, 1810, he denies that the Jews upon the Continent, or in England, have ever laboured to prove that their promised restoration is accomplished, and the idea of their having the land of Palestine restored to them, is fallacious. -Yet, in page 5 of the Introduction to the New Sanhedrin, we read, * The proceedings of the Sanhedrin make it evident that the Rabbies in Holland, France, and Italy, have given up the idea of a local restoration." I confess, I am unable to reconcile these two passages.—I would wish to ask Mr. Reid how he knows that the Jews in England have carried en no correspondence with those in France: it is a mistaken notion to imagine that the Members of the Parisian Sanhedria are all, or priucipally, French Jews—they were convened from all parts of the Continent, and were well tinctured with the prevailing infidelity, and therefore were prepared for Napoleon's purposes.—

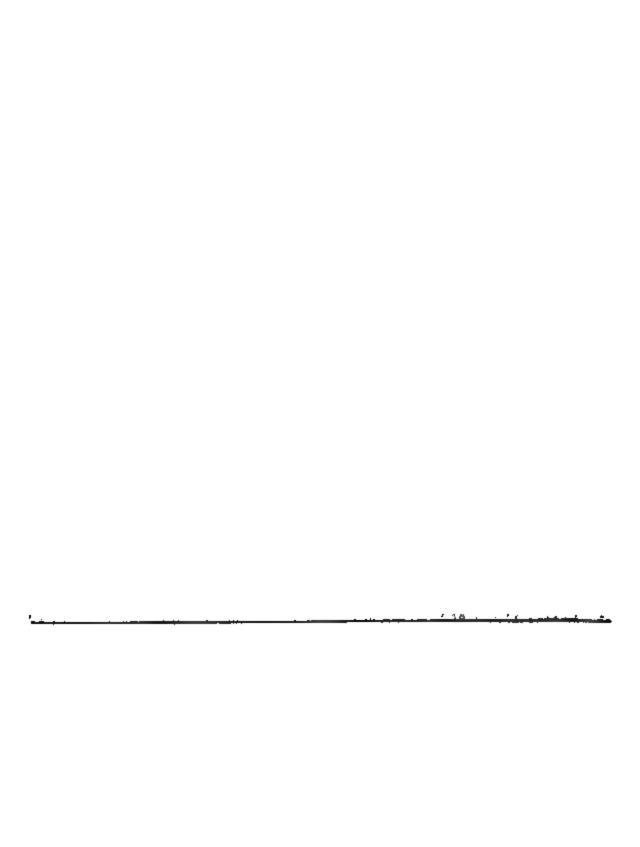

Knowing what a universal correspondence there is between Jews all over the world, knowing too that they usually correspond in a character totally unintelligible to all but themselves (the Rashi Letter) is it probable that the Jews in Baginal have not communicated upon this subject with their Brethren upon the Continent?--- If I am asked, What then? I answer, I only wish the fact to be understood; and if Mr. Reid his no motive for the objection; i have none for the denial of it. That the English Jews are but too much infless. ed with Continental infidelity; we have the authority of David Levi, but uniortunately no authority is westing --- daily experience establishes this fact. It is not my intention, Mr. Up. ban, to occupy any time in receive. verting Mr. Reid's opinious ha t local restoration of the Jews. -- 3720 can reckon one of two subitary in shops and learned ment is on this sill the question, on the other-side une the mass of Commentators in white and modern times, and amount a latter the late Bishops Kiddes, No. ton, Horsley, and My. Pabennish and

I confess, I am one of those will-fashioned folks who believe that all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, four for reproof, for correction, four the struction in rightcounses. The struction in rightcounses. The final iii. 16. I have not, therefore, learned to make the subtle distinctions of modern philosophy (I had almost said infidelity): I do not well understand what is meant by distinguishing between one part of sacred Scriptury and another; I cannot agree that "the contents of the prophetical Books in general, with that of the thor himself (page 107), says, "Il portera dans toutes les génerations la douce consideration qui déja voyoit dans notre auguste Empereur l'Image vivante de la Divinit." In page 202 it is said, "La Salle étoit decorée avec gout; le nomme de Ichova, le chiffres et les armes de Napoleon et de Josephine, l'ornaient de tous cotés." In this same Work, we are informed that two venerable Rabbies, M. Segre and M. David Zinzheimer, (not in poetical effusion, but in Sermons addressed to the Paople) applied to this pest of mankind the following Scriptures, Dan. vii. 13. Isaiah :: 10. Ps. sliv. 4. Isaiah :: 10. Isaiah :: 10.

^{*} See Gent. Mag. vol. LXXX. Part II. page 239.

[†] Dr. Lightfoot is not a very clear authority; for his language is,—"Though I em unwilling to recede from that charitable opinion of most Christians, that there shall once by a calling of them home; yet see I not how that supposal of the universal Call of the whole nation, as of one man, which some entertain, can be digested uithout some allog and mitigation." vol. L.p. 375. Ed. Lond. 1684.

that language; but what do these Sermons for the most part consist of i Rabbinical trash, and extracts from the Talmud.—If Mr. Reid persists in the assertion, I domand the evidence; and I wish very much, for many seasons, to be found in an error.

sons, to be found in an error. It is quite true that the names of the Committee of the London Society are not to be found in the List of Su'sscribers to the Jewish Hospital at Mile End; and I will ask Mr. Reid, whether any offer on the part of that Committee to subscribe to such Hospital, or any of the Jewish Charities, would not reasonably subject them to unworthy suspicions, or whether they could with any propriety offer any such? The London Society, however, have the vanity to think they have no small share in the new-modelling and enlarging this very Edifice. Certain it is, that, since their establishment, - that Hospital has been nearly doubled in size, and contains many more inhabitants; and, moreover, it is said that the children are now taught to work at mechanical trades, and to . read and write. Now this is precisely what the London Society wished; well satisfied that, if the rising generation is brought up to be independent of their Teachers, and to judge for themselves, the Jewish prejudices, like those of the Roman Catholicks, will moulder away. But let me ask Mr. Reid what produced the above : ill-natured observations, so entirely unnecessary to complete the sentence, and which, in truth, destroyed the elegance and roundness of the period? In Mr. Reid's Paper for August, his spicen is unaccountably wrought up .. to the highest pitch, by a list of the Society's Publications; and here I must again compain of much disingenuity in confounding the Panupulet, intituled, "Obligations, &c." with some Reviewer of that Work. As to the truth of the passage quoted in the Pamphlet, every person may satisfy himself, who will take the trouble of going to either of the Syn-Mr. Reid, however. agogues. thinks he has caught the learned Author of this Pamphlet napping (for an eminently learned Clergyman he is). "We may," says Mr. Reid, " pass by sociog things which are in their nature ideal and invisible." Now what are these ideal and invisible things?—A rabble walking to and tro - every countenation a indicating the utmost irreverence and runtes. com, and their Chief (Rabbitalting by and useming to care for inchest incro things: Mrs common was use would have thought that these were objects of sight, and might very wall have been observed by any wordinary visitor of the synagoguche so much for profound criticisma Butices I have before hinted, why did uptill. Reid undertake to restaud this, or some of the other Bangabluty himself? Who the Reviewenis tenshou Mr. Reid refers, I am wholl pignosult. I have made diligent illenus, but without success; in all swants tibe Lundon Society are notacepessible for his observations, homever impuried. I do not myself, however, think the fact unlikely to have accurred in the purlious of the Synagogues-bill cortainly I agree with Mr. Maidwest within them. If, however th viewer be a man of mount versuity. should not, like Mr. Meide venturate contradict him. But what shall be say to Mr. Reid for the sollesting question: -- He says, " degrarance, therefore, or something more unligmant, must have prompted Akis as dalous falschood;" and then he make, " Is not this "Fract published on patronized by the Londona:Sucietyd" This is one of the most ingenious prtinees maignancy, deck ever invented, to connect the falsehoud (if one) and the Tract together. : What Frect does Mr. Rold mean? the "Obligations?"—That Tract is published by Society—what then? is the falechold contained in the Treet? No.---Th what does Mr. Reid mean by his question, except to produce the most malignant and disbulical impression?—Our Church? what Citagra dues Mr. Reid: belong to? and bow lung is it since be has left-off attinding the Unitarian Meeting at Rad ney? Now, Mr. Urban, how does Mr. Reid know that certain places are resorted to for assignation? If he has known it, he was in duty bound to have informed the Preacher or Pastor of that place, Or will be tell as the names of those places? But Mr. Reid has discovered a want of seriousness in the Jewish weeship, and received for answer, "Ours is not a melancholy Religion"—ls:Mr. Reif's a meiancholy Religion? Is the soule half-starved Anchopite? " builder fa-

mispet

mend d by several converted Jews of respectability; and was principally adopted in consequence of the cruel and persecuting spirit shown by Jewish parents and others, to all such Jews as marry Christians, which has rendered some such measure absolutely necessary,—It was intended as a remedy, not as a procuring cause.

Mr. Reid and Mr. Witherby have both quoted the passage funcly, and so as to produce a directly contrary effect, viz. " At the suggestion of a principal Subscriber, the Committee hold in prospect the formation of a Fund, from which temporary losses on good security may be savanced to such Jews of good character, who, by in the stead of Christianity, and that all Missionary exertions are culpable. Now, Mr. Urban, I do know that, Jews and Roman Catholicks, and all mankind in a natural state, are very migry with those who attempt to promote their spiritual welfare. It was so before the Froud,—it was so in the times of the Propacts,—it was so in the time of Christ and his Apostles, and has been over since; it is not the term Methodust, Calvinist, Evangelical Preacher, Serious People, "or .any thing else that is objectionable, -but it is merely real Religion itself, (by which I mean in this view, " such a consciousness of the value of a man's own soul, as necessarily leads him to an anxious concern for the

^{*} As I differ decidedly with Mr. Witherby upon a point of no small importance, and as I have the vanity to think I know more of the Jews than he does, I request him, or his friend Mr. Reid, to answer the following question,—" Was not the Foldoth Yearn originally a part of the Talmud? Upon what occasion was it expunsed? Have the Jews any Account of the Birth, Life, and Death of our Lord Jesus Christ, whereby they can contradict the relations of the Evangelists? If they have, in what work is it contained? If they have not, what is their objection to believe the New Testament account?"

souls of others") which is offensive to the mass of mankind; it is, as the Apostle skys, the carnal mind, which is enmity against God*.

It is happy for Mr. Read, that in his unfortunate loss be met with some charitable Jews, who, without any views or expectations that he would write for them against the London Society, so handsomely assisted him. The expression " ill-timed importunities," &c. is rather hacknied; it has been launched at the Society once or twice already, by persons bired by the Jews. Now pray, Mr. Urban, what are ill-timed importanities? if a man's coul is at stake, what time can be ill suited? if a fellow-creature's happiness is at stake, what time can be improper? Can Mr. Reid prove that the Members of the London Society are either Fanaticks or Enthusiastic? It is easy to indulge in terms of abuse; and I might term Mr. Reid a modern Infidel, an advocate for Buonaparte, a Jacobia, sod many other opprobrious terms; but it would serve no end, and would amount to no argument. It is, however, somewhat hard, when one great and grand object of the London Society is to revive a spirit of inquiry and learning amongst the Jews, and when we are exerting ourselves to break down prejudice and superstitions, the tables should be turned upon us, and we should be branded as the superstitious persons, and the Jews complimented as the only liberel and colightened. PRESEVERANS.

Mr. Uneas, Dublin, May 23.

A Noriginal letter of the well-known Father O'Leary having lately fathen into my hands, permit me to send you a copy of it for insertion in your old end valuable Repository. I shall make no comment on the subject, or on the liberality of the Writer, but leave those who read to judge of his sentiments.

A. C.

(To be continued.)

Cork, Xber 4 ... 82.

"I am honoured this instant with your kind favour, which makes me doubly happy, in the information that you are well, and the satisfaction of still retaining a share in your remembrance. Your choice of Lord Mornington for your Colonel gave.

of the Irish Brigade. Bir Boyle B who wrote me a letter she other day. of them in a strain of rapture, 1 Li have seen an address from the Cathe of Ireland but I spurped with indignal at, except your late address to Karl To ple. They were always couched in cringing language of servility, and ev falseliced, boasting of common Me when it was in the power of your child to strip you of your litched gardens, the shoeboy of your boulds. In your address you spoke as Gentlemen, the ful for what you get, and decestly in mating that you want and deserve a I make it my humble request, that wi one penal law stands upon regord, exthose that exclude you from the A and high offices under the Crown, in or address, you will glance at your restes Were it not from an apprehension of i curring the displeasure of the Catholia Gentlemen of Dublin, I would have thin Gormansten's address and Portland's answer to pieces. The former addressed as a contented slave, and the latter answers with the rudeness of a Batavian Burgor master, who would say, dehane always as or elec.—The liberal-minded Protestants themselves acknowledge that enough has not been done for up. It is what Lord Beauchamp wrote to me when I was in Dublie ^{*} Rom. viit. 7.

read the scattmental and correct Las Cands. I was convinced that I had not guested in vain. From this motive I cannot be prevailed on, besides the time which is grown so scanty on my hands since my arrival here, that I cannot space one hour; exhorting every Sonday, and attending to several avocations, which though of some benefit to others, often make me regret that I ever quitted my sole u le and bloks. I suggested once to Mr. Weldon, to propose Dr. Duan, a Dissenting Minister, to the Brigade for a third Chaplain. If he be proposed and elected about the beginning of March, or any time after, I shall write him a letter, in which I shall pay those of his profession the complement they deserve, without giving offence to others. Until then I will have no tune. The short letter to-day I never intended for publication. I am not sorry new that it in le its way into the papers, though, and I foreseen it, it would A. O'L. be in another funda-

My best regards to Mrs. Kerevan, Mes-

-The great mass are now so habituated to ground their judgment on particular and disjunctive instances, which have made a deep impression on their minds; they have seen the matricide of Orestes so frequently on the stage, that they are accustomed to consider the scene of it (Argos), and the Furies who seize upon Orestes after the perpetration of the deed, as necessary conditions of the madness in which they have b. held him. - In fact, it was even the intention of the fragic poet, that the madness of Orestes should be regarded as a consequence of the unnatural act: but precisely this it is on which Stertinius, in the sophistry usual with the stoics, is quibbling. Orestes was af-ready frantic when he stabbed his mother; this is clear; the fact shews it of itself; and as an evident demonstration, that he was not first made mad mad by the furies afterwards, but that his rage was rather exhausted by the matricide, from that moment, when, according to the vulgar opinion, he first begins to be mad in carnest, he ceases to act madly. Were the vulgar opinion right, then should the man, who, in the full possession of his understanding murders his mother, now, when the furies drive him to frenzy, fall like a madman upon his friend Pylades, on his sister Electra: but not at all; he talks and acts like a n an of sound mind; and the worst that he does in his heat, is to give them toul lan-It is therefore plain, concludes Stertinius, that Orestes was then already mad when he stabbed Clyteninestra; that he therefore perpetrated that matricide because be was mad: and his example is accordingly, no exception to the general maxim of the stoics, but a confirmation of it.—It would require a too profix, and it is to be presumed, a superfluous operation for the reader, to unrayel the sophistry of this reasoning, with reference to the Tragedy of Euripides, from whence the instance is taken. It is evident on the slightest reflection. This is not the only passage in the present Satire, where Horace diverts himself in a rather comic strain of mimicry with the subtleties of the Stoics of Chrysippus s school. In general, the accurate observation of what may be called the stoical costume forms no small beauty of the present piece. The frequently captious niethod of arguing, and the warmth with which he makes Steitinius inveigh against his feels, his loquacity, his dogmatical tane, but more especially his manner of crawing his examples chiefly from Tragedies and Comedies, (which likewise Cicero used to do in those parts of his works where he acts the store), are so many characteristic peculiarities with which kiorace delineated, and coloured his stoical chatterers for the readers of those days.

Scilicet ut plausus, quos fert Agrippa, feras tu?] This indirect compliment delicately paid to the great M. Vipsanius Agrippa, is justly regarded as a proof, that Horace wrote this Satire at the close of the year 721, while Agrippa was vested with the office of ædile. It is universally known, that the endiles were Magistrates who had charge of the public edifices, and all matters that we now comprise under the word. police, include g the necessary provisions for the Circensian and thestrical games. They were obliged to give both, certain extraordiumry cocasions excepted, to a people so cager after public shows, at their own expence. From the time that Emilius Scaurus, serving lise since of settile, in the year 054, had put himself to the chormous expence of above 1,400,000% merely in the sreetion and decoration of the theatre, in which he gave the people his plays, the public expectation on the 'ens' hand, and the rivalry of the Ediles for the time being on the other, had arisen to such a preposterous héiglit, that, according to the expression of Livy, royal revenues would scarcely suffice to defray the expendes incurred by this honourable station. However, as there were no surer means of gaining the favour of the people, who had the power of bestowing the principal offices of the State, the governments, and the command of the army: there was never any want, while the Republica subsisted, of ambitious characters who vied with each other for the Nonour of ruining themselves as Adding that hereafter they might be furnished with an opportunity of re-estab lishing their fortunes as Pro-cossil or Generals, at the expense of the Provinces. But after the lost di war, when most of the great families were either exterminated or extremely reduced; and the favour of the people had little weight; at length nobody was willing to burthen himself with so chargeable an office. Thence it was, that, in the year 721, Agrippa, although he had been already Consul, on the advice, and by the aid of the future Augustus, soluntarily took upon him the office of Addite, and discharged it as a Statesman, equally great both in the arts of peace and of war, whereby he eclipsed every one of his predecessors, and shewed the Romans what they had to expect in times of peace and tranquillity from the administration of Cæsar Octavianus. therefore, the plausus mentioned in miniature almost every thing that was in full magnitude at Rome; their Ædiles and Prætors, their Circus, their public games, &c.; and the young Aulus Oppidius might, for the sake of being as enthusiastically applanded by the Canusians as Agropia was by the Romans, rum himself in horse-beans and pease-porridge, as easily as Mino formerly did by the prodigious sums he lavished during his Ædilitate on the people of Rome.

^{*} Pliny, Nat. Hist. xxxvi. cap. 15.

Neguis humbese velit Ajucem,

Atrida, vetas cur !] The transition

Et purum est vitie tibi cum tumidum est cor?] Had not thy ambition, the passionate desire of being the head of the Grecian princes, and the of of the confeved thee of reabeing say), thou been capable of iter at the shrine cruentis.] Belthe class of the and is probably, Arnobius among

GENT. MAG. June, 1911.

^{*} Dio Cass. lib. xlix, cap. 43. Pico. Nat. Hist, lib. xxxvi. cap. 15.

[†] The theology of the Romans was satisfied with the exercise of this species of worship, which they thought, more Strengtone majorum, due to every particular divinity, and cared very little farther who that divinity properly was. Bellone appears generally on come satisfies on the forepart of the car of the god of war, and guiding his two normes; and by the poets she in described now with a spear, now with a bloody scourge, now with a torch in her hand. But whether she was the mother, or sister, or wife, or daughter, or nurse of Mars; probably, even her priests yers unable to tell: since we find an authority for each of these predicates; and every one might believe as he pleased without incurring the penalties of a test act.

the informal deities. Her priests were went on her festival to represent the violent impulses of this goddess on the minds of men, in their own persons, by running to and fro in enthusinstic fury with naked swords and intehering knives, wounding themselves in the arms and legs; and in these transports of rage talking the most nonsensiculatuff, which, with the superstitious rabble, passed for prophecy. - To this effect of Bellona's power in depriving her votaries of reason, the verse before us alludes:

Fond of frail fame, the warrior's pains Rod in the cracking of his brains.

Tutel turba impia vici.] In the Tuscan quarter, which was likewise called views thursrius, grocers, per-fumers, procurers, ladies of easy manners, and pueri meretricii, had their stations. In Thusco vice, whi sunt homines qui se iyson venditant. Plaut. in Circul. act. iv. sc. 1. At Rome were two reparate districts that bore the name Velabrum, distinguished by the epithets minus and mague: the lesser forming part of the eighth, the greater of the eleventh region. The former abutted on the forum bearium, the latter on the shore of the Tiber, and the fishmarket lay between the two. me it seems probable, that the whole district between the greater and smaller was generally denominated the Felabrum, although places in it had their peculiar names from their specific destinution. All kinds of eatables, and all imaginable supplies of luxury and extravagance were here exposed to mile. Omne macelinm in this place implies the two great butcher-meat markets, whereof one was situate on the Coelian, and the other on the Esquiline Mount; although these provisions were likewise retailed in numberless other parts of the town.

Filiws Beopi detractam ex auroMetellæ.] Thu son of the famous Tragedian Beopus had inherited nothing of his father except his propensity to prodigality, and twenty millions of ses-torces; a sum which, large as it was, might very soon slip through the fingers of one, who made it his sport to swallow a million at one gulp. Pliny, in corroboration of the anecdate here mentioned, relates, that the celebrated Cleopatra, in consequence of a wager with Anthonius, which of them could consume the most at a meal, acted the counterpart to this folly of j ought, ww pensive. after dimo lowed, we millions o Under wi Metella w trio could enough. us the par dames, v brought ti pute. Ba cally, that the one here spoken of could not be either the wife of Lacultus, as Dacier supposes, or her grand niece: who she perticularly was, need give us no concern to know: it may suffice, that she was of the family, and a true chip of the block. - Decies is properly a million of sesterces, amounting to shout 7812/. 10₇.

Luscinian soliti impenso prandent coëmptes.] I know not whether in all the annels of gluttony, an instance of a more extravagant homour than this can be found. Each of these nightisgales cost 6000, and the whole dish 600,000 sesterces, or, 442% 100. mys Valorius Maximus [Luc. ix. cep. 1.] And Horace uses the word soils to denote that so dear a dish was onlinarily served up at the suppers of this noble pair of brothers! The existvagant price of nightingales at that time at Rome need not surprise us, as they were scarce and in exceeding reat demand. Pliny informs us that the price of a nightingale and at or-dinary slave were of like amount; which pretty well agrees with the statement of Valerius Maximus; may, a present was made to the Empress Agrippins, the consort of Claudius, of a white nightingale, which, on account of the rarity of its colour, cost the buyer 600,000 sesterces, or 64%. 10r.

Quid? cum Picenia excerpana so mine pomis, &c.] The pips of the Picentine apple appear to have been excellently adapted to this operation, wherebysuperstitious addlegates prognosticated the encess of their amoure. Pressing the pip of one of these apples between the forelinger and the

by a single line gave occasion to the procreation of this literary changeling, not one word is mentioned.

Itlo man die quo tu indicis jejunia.] Some of the Commentators inform us, that about this time it was the fashion among the common people at Rome to combine the religious rites of the Ægyptians and Jews with their long derived heatherish superstitions. Thursday was Jupiter's day; and the Jews are said to have kept that day as a tast. This good simple mother therefore fasted, because we can never no too much of that which is good, with the Jews; and, nevertheless, as an orthodox Pagan, poured forch her supplications to Jupiter. Met inks, however, we shall come nearer the mark by supposing, that this is meant merely of a day particularly consecrated to Jupiter, as the last, being come to herselt, she is conscious of her fatal error.

Longos imitaris, &c.] I shall not here repeat what I have already observed on another passage*, for the right understanding of this. Nothing can be more simple, than that Horace, at the farm he had lately received as a present from Mæcenas, had considerable reparations and alterations to make, for converting it into a sort of little vills, which he might inhabit with convenience and pleasure. He therefore built, because he was forced to it; and now a great clamour was raised among his detractors at Rome, that he was building from vanity, in order to act the subaltern Meccenes, and because the latter was then building his magnificent house on the Es-quiline, he must, forsooth, do the same, at least in ministure, with his Sabine mansion. Horace, therefore, lets himself be made as ridiculous on account of this imputed act of madness by Damasippus, as the representalive of all his enviors and censurers at Rome and in his Sabine neighbourhood, as they could possibly desire, without uttering a syllable in his defonce, because the thing spoke for itself. He could not have devised a more proper and infallible method of making the ridicule of such a silly accusation revert on his angry oppoacnts. — Turbo was a gladiator, who had probably produced himself in the games given by Agrippa as mile.

^{*} Gent. Mag. vol. LXXVIII. p. 919. quiline,

Quæ siquis sanus fecit, &c.] Democritus and Plato had, as it should seem, given a handle to this, at that time very trite gibe, at the frenzy of poets: and what objection could be made to the declaration of two such famous philosophers, in a cause wherein they undoubtedly were competent judges? Here—nothing! Horace, however, twenty years later, in the epistle to the Pisos, explains himself on this point. The reader may revert if he pleases to the remark, Gent. Mag. vol. LXXIX. p. 615.

Non dico horrendam rabiem.] Horace tacitly asserts to every allegation, as long as the censures do not fit. But now, that Damasippus touches him to the quick, it would have been im roper, not, at least jocusely, to have made as though he felt the stroke. Besides, he frankly confesses his irascible temperiment in the epishe to his book, (adding, however, at the same time, that he is as easily soothed) which every reader of his writings would have been inclined to suppose if he had not; and in the seventh Satire of this Second Book, he makes no scruple to discover this constitutional failing, even by an overt act.

Cultum majorem censu.] Cultus principally denotes the expense he bestowed on his own person, in dress, ornament, servants, and the like. Must not the comes, the contabernali, the friend of Mæcenas, especially at that time of life, when it became him to be always spruce and elegant, even go somewhat farther in these articles, than the minion of the Graces, and—of the beautiful Cynara would, perhaps, but for those circumstances, have done?

O major tandem percat, intent. minori!] The last reproach, "! them thousand furious passions for the fair," was the only one on which poor Horace had nothing left but to cry for quarter. The lack was too noto-But so great was, even in thuse days, and in a city like Mome, the authority of prevailing manners and of general example, that such furores, if they were only restrained within due bounds, and compensated by eminent talents and appinhic qualities, passed among the medicoring el queis ignoceus pitifs, which were no prejudice to a man—who after an, could say with Aristippes, hepops man kelcor, in the estimation of the hest of his contemporaries. The greatest proof how little the moral character of such a person was them assucted by the effervescences here spoken-of. in that our Poet had no hesitation in handing down to posterity, the copy siderable number of Odes, which and advocutus diabeli might substantințe as ovidence against bijb.

Ormand-street.

June 10. Mr. URBAN, TAKE the liberty of sonding you a hint, which it appears to me. would be of great use, unless there are insurmountable objections to it of which I am ignorant: what I mean is, the use of Oars in Vessels of War. The hard labour is a great chjection; but might not that be diminished so much by machinery; 24 50 be no longer an objection? such as having the oars fixed in a frame preperly fastened together, and so worked by a wheel at each end of the skip, or by any other means, which might. be easily done? If so, the advantages in many situations would be very great; as in the pursuit of, or escaps from, an enemy in calms, contract winds, and many more, which it would take up too much room to 2 enumerate, particularly to packets," sloops of war, &c. The oars might be fixed a little above the water, and the holes loosely covered with lenther, so as to prevent the water from " getting in, and yet allow the Ourse free play. The frame need not take up much room, or be in the way of . those that serve the guns; and might be laid by, when not wanted.

I hope this rough hint may draw the attention of some gentleman acquainted

	ł

٠

.

-

my sight, or be in the way at a moment of such consequence, and also that some accident might happen to some of them if the sea should break much over the ship on crossing the bar. I therefore requested the favour of Lord Royston and Col. Pollen to go down below, as the only means of persuading the others to do so, to which they consented; but, as it proved, it turned out most unfortunately, for as soon as the Captain saw the sea breaking over the bar, he was so frightened, that he ran immediately to the helm, and, with the assistance of his people, put it hard a-port; all my striving against this was in vain, and in ten minutes we were on the Southlands. The third time the ship struck she grounded, and filled with water. The distance from the shore was about a mile and a half. A dreadful scene now succeeded: there was a small roundhouse on deck, into which Mrs. Pollen, Mrs. Barnes, her three children, 2 gentlemen (Messrs. Pereira and Focke), a man and maid servant, got to save themselves from the sea. Col. Pollen and myself immediately began to clear the boats out; the sailors would not assist us. . We soon got the small one out, and 3 sailors got into it with the Captain: Lord Royston (who was in a very weak state of health) would have followed; but I prevented him, assuring him it was not safe; upon hearing which, the Captain got out, and the moment the boat left the ship's side, she upset, and the three men were drowned. We then began to clear out the large boat. She was lashed to the deck by strong tackling to the ring-bolts; a sea came, and forced away part of the tackling, upon which I called to Col. Pollen to jump out, or the next sea would carry her and us away. We were scarcely out of her when she was washed overboard; and now we had no hope left but in the mercy of Providence. At 9 o'clock we cut away the mast, to ease the vessel, but could see nothing of the life-boat, which gave the gentlemen much uneasiness, for the sea was tremendous, breaking right over our heads, and it was so very cold that it was impossible to hold fast by any thing. Co!. Pollen asked me, "if the round-house where the ladies were would stand;" I told him, "Yes, as long as the bottom of the vessel:" he said, "Thank God, we must hold as fast as we can, for the life-boat must soon be here." I then left him, and went aft the vessel. this time Col. Pollen went to the door of the round-house, spoke to Mrs. Pollen, and begged she would not stir, for that the life-boat would soon come. It was now about half past nine, but no boat was to be seen. Our situation was now truly dreadful, the vessel being entirely full of water all but about the round-house; Mr. Renny was soon washed overboard; and after him, about ten o'clock, Lord Royston, Col. Pollen, Messrs. Baillie and Beecher, one sailor, Lord Royston's servant, and that of Mrs. Barnes, were all washed away within a few seas of each other. I saw the two servants go, and got hold of them, but was obliged to let them go, which grieved me very much; as for Lord Royston and Col. Pollen, I never saw them after I left them holding by the roundhouse. After this dreadful scene, I went to the round-house door (into which L found Mr. Halliday had now got). Mrs. Pollen immediately said, "Smith, where is my husband, is he safe?" To conceal the truth, I told her he had got safe on shore in the ship's boat to bring assistance; which, I believe, gave them all spirits in the hope that he would now bring the lifeboat. It was now 11 o'clock A. M. and a tremendous sea rolling over us. Captain and two seamen were on the bowsprit, and two dead seamen by them: the life-boat came close to the vessel, but, filling with water, returned; she then came a second time, when the Captain and two of his men got into her. I went to the round-house and took out Mrs. Barnes, in hopes to get her into it; but, alas! the sea was too strong for me, we were knocked down twice, but, by the help of God, I always recovered her again. I was now too weak to help myself, so, I got her safe back to the round-house, and went forward, but was washed overboard; the life-boat picked me up, and I remember no more till 5 o'clock in the evening, when I found myself at Memel. I asked the people if the life-boat had gone off again, they said it had, but the Captain told them there was no one on board. What was his motive I cannot tell. boat went off six rimes in the course of the afternoon; but never could reach the ship, the wind and sea were so tremendous. was afterwards informed by one of those who remained on board till next day, that one of the most dreadful circumstances of their situation was the knowledge that the life-hoat was so often nearly reaching the ship, and the constant and cruel disappointment of its being obliged to return: That, after it became dark, part of the round-house was driven in, so that the waves broke over them continually during the whole of the night, sometimes so quick in succession that they were left gasping for breath. In the morning they found the whole side of the round-house gone. Mr. Focke, of Hamburgh, sat in a little barrel fixed to the deck (for every thing which was not fixed floated), and there died, either by suffocation, or by falling asleep and being frozen; but, as it happened in the night, and he had not spoken for many hours, the moment and imme-nours." Mr. ATTRIELD, of Oriel College. — Latin verse, "Hercula-neum." Mr. Huches, of Oriel College. —Sir Roger Newdigate's Prize: English verse, "The Parthenon." Mr. Burdon, of Oriel College.

Mr. Bundon, of Oriel College.
The Fourth Number of "The Fine Arts of the English School," edited by John Britton, F. S. A. is nearly ready; and contains—I. A Portrait of Sir Joshua Reynolds, from a Picture by himself, in the Council-room of the Royal Academy; engraved by Wm. Bond: with a Biographical Memoir of that emment Artut, by James' Northcote, Esq. R. A.—2. View of a Monument, to the memory of Mrs. Howard, designed and executed in marble by Joseph Nollekens, Esq. R. A. engraved by James Godby, with a descriptive Essay, by R. Hunt, Esq. -S. An Engraving, by William Bond, from a Painting, representing "the Sixth Angel loosing the four Angels from the River Euphrates:" by Henry Howard, Esq. R. A. with descriptive Essay, by R. Hunt, Req .- 4. A Landscape, called Pepe's wands, V.S.A. of the Red Mount Chapel, and St. Nicholas Chapel at Lynn, in Norfolk; also Seven Plates, viz. 1. A sectional view of the former building; i porch of the Church at C 4, 5, and 6. at Bury St. the same; Church at Bury.

The Literature of the Elizabethan era has of late years received considerable illustration from the researches which have been made into the writers of that age, principally with a view to the elucidation of our favourite Dramatic Poet; and we are happy farther to observe, an announcement of the re-publication of "Puttenham's Arte of English. Poesie," one of the most curious and entertaining productions of that age. Its copious intermixture of coatemporary anecdote and specimens of coeval poetry, give it an interest surpassing most publications of the age of Elizabeth. The Editor, Mr. Haslawood, has condensed the slight notices which we possess of the author into a connected biographical memoir, and prefixed them to the volume.

Mr. J. P. Malcolm, F. S. A. will shortly publish a collection of "Miscellaneous Anecdotes, illustrative of the Manners and Customs of Europe," in an octavo volume.

The very ingenious Lectures on Engraving, written by the late Mr. Meadows, and delivered at the Surrey Institution, will be published in a few days, for the benefit of his Widow.

Dr. W. B. COLLYER has in the press, "Lectures on Scripture Miracles," in an octavo volume, similar with the two former volumes on Scripture Facts and Prophecies.

The Rev. —— Parsons, of Leeds, has in the press an abridged edition of "Neal's History of the Puritans," in two thick octavo volumes.

Mr. BLOOMFIELD, author of the Farmer's Boy, &c. will speedily publish "The Banks of Wye, a poem."

Dr. C. HUTTON is printing a complete collection of what may be considered his discoveries, improvements, and inventions, under the title of "Tracts, mathematical and philosophical," in three octavo volumes; of which the first is nearly ready for publication, containing, among other improvements, an enlarged edition of his Treatise on Bridges.

Professor PLAYFAIR has in the press a second edition, with additions, and engravings, in a quarto volume, of "Illustrations of the Huttoman Theory of the Earth."

Mr. J. P. Tuppen, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, has in the press, "An Essay on the Probability of Sensation in Vegetables, with additional observations on Instinct, Sensation, and Irritability."

The Pieys of James Sminley, now first collected, with occasional notes, and a critical and biographical memoir of the author, are printing in six octavo volumes.

Mrs. PLURKET (late Miss GUNKING) has in the press, "A Translation from the French of Madame de Mostolieu's Sentimental Appedotes."

Mr. W. Nicol, author of the Gardener's Calendar, has in the press, in an octavo volume; in The Planter's Calendar, or the Nusseryman and Forester's Guide, in the operations of the Nursery, the Forest, and the Grove."

J. Syens, esq. surgeon, has nearly ready for publication, in octavo, "The Management of Infants," containing the general principles of their domestic treatment, with the history and method of cure of some of their most prevalent diseases.

Dr. Nort, of Bristol, has in the press, " A Novological Companion to the London Pharmacopæia."

Mr. H. M. Brown will specify publish, "The Apothecary's Vade Mecum, or Companion to the New Loudon Pharmacopæia, for the me of students and junior practitioners."

Mr. Peter Nicholson has in the press, "A Dictionary of Architecture, in two quarto volumes, with many plates; and the first part of it is expected to appear in a few days.

Mr. MILLARD will publish that month, in 18mo, his "New Pocks Cyclopædia; or Elements of Useful Knowledge, methodically arrangely designed for the higher classes is schools, and for young persons in general." A distinguishing characteristic of this work is, the Recommendation of Select Books on every important subject of Learning or Science.

INDEX INDICATORIUS.

Mr. Lemone in our next. The side leaves inclosed in Mr. L's Letter are particularly acceptable; and we shall be mach obliged to him for any other Pragments (should they remain) of the same original MS

We are under the necessity of pullpening "ARCHITECTURAL INNOVATION!" W. H. Reid, &c.; but they shall oppear in our Supplement, together with Mr. Nubett, The Times, No. IV, and many prticles which have long been in arrear.

with the wife of services terature as the present, when ny endeavours are making to late the antient Classicks, we appy to add Mr. Blomfield (a. g man of a most excellent s and sound learning) to the er of those Editors who have so successfully engaged in ing to the publick those monts of antient learning, which the glory of Greece and Rome, he admiration of the world. e Edition of the Prometheus published by him, there are passages altered with great nent and propriety; and we little doubt, but that in many aces he has restored the true ag. He has very judiciously ed his text upon the Edition of 'orson, published at Glasgow, which, though surreptitious. etrays sufficient proofs of the rrly hand of the late Professor. ient. Mas. June, 1811.

ALOADES. Now supposing Æschylus to have borrowed the word from Homer, it is true, acalog never occurs, and ಷರ್ಕಾರಿ only once, Il. E. 78. as an epithet to No. It is perhaps observable, that autolog occurs very frequently in Homer, but never in any other sense than immortal, as II. E. 339. 870. Juscolor alua. II. X. 9. auceolor Bros. II. 670. 680. auceola τιμαία. Ρ. 194. 202. - τιύχεα, Π. 38Ι. 867. auceolos izzos. And auceolos is undoubtedly of the same origin with accolog, from which we may infer that this too ought properly to signify immortal, and that any other interpretation is a forced one. Indeed, we see no reason why in Il. $. 78, aGeorg got may not be rendered immontal night, as we see the epithet αμεροσίη applied to it, Il. Σ. 267. Odyss. J. 429. 574., and appelos, Odyss. A. 329, and farmorin, Hymn. ad Merc. 97.

L. 23. Mr. Blomfield very judictionally defines xeom; erfor to mean the complexion or beauty, as it does in Hom. II. E. 164, which is the only place, perhaps, where the substantive xeom is used by that Poet.

 L. 51. In this line Mr. Blomfield against all suthority of MSS, and former Editions, has made a opnjectural emendation which we enthrely approve of. He shall speak for himself -- "Tutissimam emendondi rationem secutus, and transposui; quod, cum ob ricinum as excidiscet, librarii imperitia post wielt inseruit." We know of no instance in the Traggedians where and has any place in a sentence, except the first, unless it joins two substantives together; and it would be as absurd in Greek, as were we to say in Latin, " Novi, non his et habeo quod contra dicam."

L. 66. al, al, Hapaster, our inverse witer. In this line Mr. Blomfield has joined the verb and preposition together, and confirms this reading by passages from sophocles and Euripides. Now, had this line been in any other part of the play, we might perhaps have agreed with Mr. Blomfield that his alteration is justifiable; but as the two next lines contain the same words, and in such a manner that they cannot be united, we are inclined to separate them in the line under consideration, particularly as we know that the same words, which follow, are where it is evident that the preposition and verb cannot be united.

Æachylus is rather fond of repeating

The two lines

L. 81, αμφιζληςς. This word is rather unusual. Mr. Blomfield might have added to his authorities the following line, in Soph. Trach. 1069, where Hercules calls his poisoned robe, " Υφανίδι άμφίζλης γοι, ξ. διόλουμαι."

I. 115. Mr. Blomfield has, we think, done right in arranging the Choral Songs in the same way as Dr.

meuning.

L. 701. In this line there is a most ingenious correction of Professor Porson, which Mr. Blomfield has judiciously received into his text. We allude to the transposition of alpridies wire for airin alpridies, as it formerly stood.

L. 718. We are very far from agreeing with Mr. Blomfield in his unfortunate exclusion of the second $\mu \delta i \rho \alpha$ from this line. Neither Schutz, Butler, Bothe, or Burney, have deemed it proper to expunge the word, and we do not see the least necessity for so doing.

L. 752. The term particle wire is rather singular; yet our Æschylus uses it in one of his dramatic pieces. "This city is to me a step-mother, not a mother."

L. 795. This line, we fear, is disfigured by the hand of temerity. Upon what grounds Mr. Blomfield there for Mr. Blomfield saying, " Sed forsan scribendum δάπεδα, ανρός Μολοσσικά.

L. 863. We can never assent to the reading which Mr. Blomfield has left in his text, of σαλιμπλάγχ-Undoubtedly wολυπλάγκτοισι is the best and clearest reading. We agree with the learned Schutz, who reads σολυπλάγκτοισι, and refer the Reader to his excellent remarks upon it. Besides, Mr. Blompeld may add this word to his instances of Æschylus's attachment to the words and phrases used by Homer, who uses it Il. A. 308, if arruns σολυπλάγετοιο, and likewise in the Odyssey, P. 425, 511, T 195, to which passages we refer the Reader. . It is true Homer uses waliumlays. θέντα, Odyss. N. 5. and σαλιμπλαγα-961746, Il. A. 59; but he never uses the verbal adjective formed from it. Sophocles in his Antigone has woλύπλαγκτες iλείς, and again in the Ajax, woλύπλαγκτεν iris. From these instances any one, we think, on due deliberation, will prefer this word.

L. 865. We entirely concur with Mr. Blomfield in thinking that schnolles* is the proper reading: the indisputable authorities which Dr. Butler, together with Mr. B. have produced, leave it beyond a doubt. Mr. Blomfield's is a concise and learned note.

L. 935. The injudicious arrangement which is given us for this Epode is far from exciting our approbation. We must, therefore, indulge the expectation that a more eligible one will ere long be discovered.

L. 994. In this line we must be under the necessity of differing from the learned Editor. - - repaired certainly appears to us a much more natural reading than xoupaver?, and is justified by the last line. We think that " refree di, and roe rea rupaniil olomai," is by far the best reading. It may be said that viparros is never used in Homer, except in one of the hymns ascribed to him, (and which we think are not his productions for that very reason) and that notice of is often used. But then if Æschylus uses repassor in one place, he surely may in another, and consequently represent is as much Æschylean an xongirur.

L 1006. However preferable the reading of wapars might seem to us, and it certainly is a very neat alteration, yet the number of MSS, quoted by Mr. Blomfield justify his reading of wpaymers.

L. 1017. There is a very similar passage to this in Sophocles, which we do not remember to have seen remarked by any commentators. We think it right therefore to produce it:

απανθ : μακεός καναείθμηλος χεύνος Φύνι τ' άδηλα, καὶ Φανίνλα κευπλίλαι. Soru. Ajan, 653.

L. 1093. We approach now a line which is in the highest degree confused and separities; and Mr. Blomfield is equally unfortunate in his conjectures with his brother Commentators. No alteration of this line that we have ever met with, appears likely to have been the original reading. We cannot therefore agree with Mr. Blomfield, who "sudat multium, frustraque laborat, ausus idem."

L. 1004. Mr. Blomfield has made a very ingenious elteration beta from the authority of Bothe; it is by transposing the word yes after agolds. Whereas in all preceding Editions it is rue we, y. metar made, Mr. Blomfield reads rue y. w. a. a. which sounds far more agreeably to the ear.

Thus far have we proceeded in . our Critique on Mr. Blomfield's Æschylus, and are about to take leave of the learned Editor. We conclude our remarks by observing that we esteem his Glossary as the work of an exalted genius, and energy lightened mind; and as a model for all succeeding Editors of Assetslus. . Upon the whole we consider. this performance as a very respect. able acquisition to Grecian learning 4. and sincerely hope therefore that Mr. Blomfield may meet with every encouragement he deserves, and persevere in his work with the same diligence and spirit it is begun with. We are confident, that if the succeeding plays are executed in th style of the present one, he will. gain from the literary world that praise he so justly deserves.

59. Bibliomania, or, Book-Magnes ; a.

B blugraphical Rimance. In Bla Forth;
Illustrated with Cuts. By the Med.
Thomas Fregnall Dibdia; and for Inc.

MR. DIBDIN has
of a ready Writer;
to see that, amidel
searches in which he re-publisher of Au
(see vol. LXXX. Pa
II. p. 955), he can di
of fancy, united wit-

To such of our not be personally acindustrious Biblioger

nc, we proceed

an attentive examprofile affixed to on ug. pages of this ' illowing farewell:

tender, Adieu; wig better deserving of take up these pages r of them, if thou is, or Smiths, or N, with those who has urb the peaceful hil retirement; and ver, like Joseph; under his hat."

shall now turn ba of the Volume fo ait, whom this Ha An enquiry, in " i." after the name eman, busily engag number of volume ly conversing with men from five t than himself." is th OSICAUSTUS IS his & and indefatigable b khough just now bu arian researches reli raphy, he fancies hit mply interested in the nations book printed his little collection of rd that,

Caxton sleeps, with side, asp'd in wood, and one in strong et a beautiful volume ' printed at ir Heidelberg, makes him spiune: seeing the word Frankford or Vesough but on the title of a booke, he ie to breake doublet, cracke e)buwes, wflowe the roome with his marmare." graphy is his darling delight-' una-👀 et meditatio assidua ;' and in 3 of the same he would quote you a. fold-fashione (authors from Gesperles, whose very names would excite ism about their existence. He is the of various works, chiefly Biblioal; upon which the veice of the ; (if we except a little wicked quizt his black letter propensities in a ted North Briton Review) has been ily favourable. Although the oldish particularity of Tom Hearne's be not much calculated to please omaniae of lively parts, yet Rosiseems absolutely enamoured of tient wight, and to be in possession tream of all his pieces. If we may rom what he has already published, omises to publish concerning the He once had the temerity to dabpoetry; but he never could raise " Careless himself about examining and quoting authorities with punctilious accuracy, and trusting too frequently to the ipre dixits of good friends; with a quick discernment — a sparkling fancy — great store of classical knowledge, and a neverceasing play of colloquial wit, Manander moved right onwards in his manly course : the delight of the gay, and the admiration of the learned! He wrote much, and variously: but in an evil hour the demon Malice caught him abroad -watched his deviations - noted down his failings - and discovering his vul-nerable part, he did not fail, like another Par.s, to profit by the discovery. Menander became the victim of over-refined sensibility; he need not have feared the darmon, as no good man need fear batan. His pen ceased to convey his sentiments; he sickened at heart; and after his body had been covered by the green-grass turf. the gentle cives of farry-land took care to weave a chaplet to hang apon his tomb, which was never to know decay.

"Syconax was this demon, and a cupning and clever demon was he! 'I am at a loss,' said Philemon, 'to comprehend exactly what you mean?' 'I will cease speaking that unruffled temper and gentlemanly address which delighted so much in his younger days, and which will always render him, in his latter years, equally interesting and admired. Like Attions, he is liberal or the loan of his treasures; and as with him, so 'tis with Leontes --- the spirit of book-collecting tassumes the dignity of a virtue *.' Peace and comfort be the attendant spirits of Leontes through life, and in death! the happiness of a better world await him beyond the grave! His memory will always be held in reverence by bonest Bibliomoniaes; and a due sense of his kindness towards myself shall constantly be impressed upon me -. Dunt memor ipse mei, dum spiritus hos reget actus."

And here we join the Author of the Bibliomania in a hearty " Amen."

Our quotations shall for the present be closed with the description of "three very active young Bibliomaniacs, who occasionally converse with each other, and now and then have their names affixed to some very expensive purchases;" and of some eminent patrons of those intelligent young tnen:

They are the three Mercurii, oftentimes deputed by distinguished Bibliomaniaes, who, fearful of the sharp-shooting powers of their adversaries, if they themselves should appear in the ranks, like prodect Generals keep aloof. But their aid-de-camps are not always successful in their missions; for such is the obstinacy with which book-battles are now contested, that it requires three times the number of guns and weight of metal to accomplish a particular object, to what it did when John Duke of Marlborough wore his full-bottomed periwig at the battle of Blenheim.

"Others there are, again, who employ these Mercurii from their owninability to attend in person, owing to distance, want of time, and other similar causes. Hence, many a desperate Bibliomaniac keeps in the back ground, while the publick are wholly unacquainted with his curious and rapidly increasing treasures. Hence Sir Tristrem chabosomed in his forest retreat,

---- down the steepy linn, That hems his little garden in --

" Allied to this library, in the general complexion of its literary treasures, is that of Marcellan, while in the possession of nomberless rare and precious volumes relating to the Drama, and especially to his beloved Shakspeare, it must be acknowledged that Marcelius hath somewhat the superiority. Meritorious as have been his labours in the illustration of our mamortal bard, he is yet as zealous, vigilant, and anxious as ever, to accumulate every thing which may tend to the further illustration of han. Enter his book-cabinet, and with the sight of how many unique pieces and tracts are your ardent eyes blessed! Just so it is with Aurelius! He also, with the three last mentioned Biblinmanues, keeps up a constant fire at bookanctions; although he is not personally seen in securing the spoils which he makes, Unparalieled as an Antiquary in Caledodian History and Poetry, and passionately attached to every thing connected with the fate of the lamented Mary, as well as with that of the great poetical contemporaries Spenser and Shokspeare; Aurelius is indefatigable in the pursuit of such antient lore as may add value to the stores, however precious, which he possesses. Noctes Attace, devoted to the elucidation of the history of his native Country, will erect to his memory a splendid and un-perishable monument. These, my dear friends, these are the virtuous and useful, and therefore salutary, ends of book-collecting and book-reading. Such characters are among the proudest pillars that adorn the greatest nations upon earth.

^{* &}quot;See the Edinburgh Review, vol. XIM. p. 118."

"Let me, however, not forget to mention that there are bashful or busy Bibliomaniscs, who keep aloof from book sales, intent only upon securing, by means of these Mercurii, stainless or large paper copies of antient literature. While Menulcar sees his oblong cabinet decorated with such a tall, well-dressed, and perhaps matchless regiment of Variorum Classes, he has little or no occasion to regret his unavoidable absence from the field of battie in the Strand or Pall Mull. And yet, although he is environed with a bodyused, of which the great Frederick's father might have envied him the possemion, he cannot belp casting a wistful eye, now and then, upon still choicer and taller troops which he sees in the territoties of his rivals. I do not know whether he would not secrifice the whole right wing of his army, for the securing of some magnificent treasures in the empire of his neighbour Resaids; for there he sees, and adores, with the rapture-speaking eye of a elausical Bibliomaniae, the tall, wide, thick, elean, brillsent, and illuminated copy of the first Livy upon Vergous, embrined in an impenetrable oaken case, covered with sheice Morocce!

"There he often witnesses the adoration paid to this glorious object by some bookish pilgrim, who, as the evening sun reposes softly upon the bill, pushes onward, through copse, wood, moor, heath, bramble, and thicket, to feast his eyes upon the mellow lustre of its leaves, and upon the nice execution of its typography. Menaleas sees all this, and yet has too noble a heart to envy Rinaldo his treasures! These Bibliomaniacs often meet, and view their respective forces; but never with heatile eyes. They know their relative strength; and wisely console themselves by being 'each eminent in his degree.' Like Corregio, they are ' also paraters' in their way."

We shall take an early opportunity of again introducing the Bibliomania, which we hope our Renders are as little weary as ourselves.

60. Despoyishe for, The Pall of the Jesuita. APolitical Romance. 9 Vols. small 6co. pp. 476. Marray.

IF any one should suppose, from the title of this Work, that he is to expect a frivolous tale of marvellous invention, he will be very much disappointed in the perural of these very excellent Volumes.

" Should the Fable, however, be found as full of truth, as of wonder, it may claim regard for something more valuable than

No history, whether gu iterlf. Actitions, will be studied wither tion, where the dearest laterate of b ity are pursued in its conduct, = volved in its catastrophe.

"The Reader of the present day ! been too long accustomed to trace Political Marrellone, realized in the shi servery of these drametic times, to be tally incredible of its ouistenes. Narrative has not, however, been salely composed to atmos with playful astuniti-ment; its views are of a butter nature, for they would arouse independent against political functions, and all its cri

"To most Readers the Jesuits are I exhibited in a new light; considered as Religiouists, so for as these Politi made use of a Religion, abounds corruptions, for the trumondous er a political body. The Jesuits were or ally a Missionary Society; but the n constitution of fancticism and an new-monided by a dynasty of embile h liens, from the Mobool of the Pleren stary, produced a government w leled in antient or moditre times. General of the Jesuits was a Scorreign / as the Jesuits were a People, different in t two Hemupheren, exhibiting the si spectacle of a secret depotion, tendin Universal Monarchy; a monstrous se tion, which could only exist by a purp growth of power, and spread its enormous subjection: practising the # crimes of the worst governments; On Perfidy, Injustice, and Irreligion: The of Spies, Informers, and Assessi trary imprisonment, social excess cation, and inquisitorial enquiry; ...

actuated by the unrele culiar Despotesm, for i ened as powerful, as a

" Their true design yeloped, dunng two accusers had little m mises to tirge against had changed, though and its strength prod-Their views were trac dacovered; and the political crimes produ

" Once known, th They had alarmed th Ministers of Furope; of their power and the tic Sovereign scemed lightning from hear Rome ; Maternal Ro withered hands over champion, grieving. marting in one communi and the Jesuits were

" While Europe ery against the Jesu fall was here listened tale, and industinctly

e causes which occasioned the ruin mighty body, as well as the carcims and offects with which it has been ed in the different countries of c, are one ts expeniely worthy the on of every intelligent observer of affairs,?

hese 'causes, and circumstances, fects,' form the subject of this Politimance. I would paint, in a moving a political system, whose genius revived in our times. May we not teh an useful moral, that wirds up ful story of perverted wisdom, and abused? Who cannot see shad w this little history, an Empire more ul than an Oriental Despotism, bemore enlightenel; in the Institute Jesuits the perfect Code of Despond in the General and his Jesuits, al fanatics, willow, a treated by views perpetual aggrandisement of domiire themselves viet ms of fa se glory, c scourges of humanity. From the al dangers of so the and ant. social roment, what can save Nations, but rning love and reverence for their selves — if sometimes they looked like Pity, their severity was often such, they struck like Scorn.

"Ten years of political labours had tried the skill of this new Reformer -- nor had Ambition yet cost him all the virgin feelings of generous youth. A mighty Spirit was sluabering in Europe - the hour approached to break that sleep! He was anti-ipating the dates of Empires, and communing with hunself- Not for ever. he thoug it, ' shall Paris be the throne of its Sovereign; and Vienna exult in an Imperiat (rown ->eest thou Constantingple flattering herself in the possession of the seat of a double Empire; and Venice glorying in the stability of a thousand years! Their day shall come! and for three, my Madrid, thou majestic eye of so mant Cities! hereafter, too, thy light shall fail?

"Ten years were closing, and Ribadene ra was still only a solitary Jesuit, lost in his reveries." He thought of Luther, who abrogated the universal sovereignty of his day, and of his own ignation, who cemented, to perpetuate its despotism—
They had not exceeded his 'age! The baffled Jesuit perceived that the Founders of Empires owe at least as much to Opportunity as to themselves.

In the Collection of the Sydney, Vol. II. p. 709."
Letter 165.

"Yet such a man existed before him, and haunted his dreams! Ribadeneira had traced the son of an Italian gardener, through the obscure steppings of his intrigues, from a hopeless Ringer of his parish, till he burst into the world, the Universal Minister of the Spanish Monarchy, agitating Europe by the most chimerical This was Alberoni, who was projects. governing the Court of Spain, and affected to regulate the destinies of Europe. presence of the Italian gardener's boy insulted the haughty genius of the Spanish Jesuit — yet Alberoni, whose political head was crowned by a Cardinal's hat; whose Machiavelism had triumphed over the feelings of Nature by exiling the Patroness of his lowly fortunes: whose deep machinations had seated the present Queen on the throne of Spain, while he was planning to place Kings of his own, like crowned slaves, on the thrones of Europe,— Alberoni, the Italian intriguer, who had little to boast but a fortunate temerity; the Sycophant of the Great, whose soul was not elevated as his fortune to raise himself above those whom he was rather leading than commanding — Alberoni, in the presence of Ribadeneira, deserted of his grandeur, seemed to feel in his hands the ropes of his parish steeple!

"The Cardinal, too, had encountered this mysterious man, in the dark windings of his own political labyrinth; and Alberoni, with Italian instinct, was on the point of getting rid of the Jesuit quietly, to adopt the political Vocabulary, à la negligence, or en cachette, when an extraordinary dispatch from the Court of Rome recommended the care of Ribadeneira's life to his protection. The Cardinal was startled. Was he delivered up into the hands of a mightier Intriguer? He had placed his political existence in the awful eyes of the Spanish Queen, and now he imagined they had become more and more cloudy! Racked with suspicions, in his Cabinet buried among his papers, the hypochondriac Arbiter of Europe trembled, hesitated, and was confounded.

" " But Alberoni was too subtile a Machiavel not to act his part to the last. Politics, much of kindness we owe to hatred; and patronage itself may become a substitute for assassination, whenever it serves to remove him whose presence is intolerable. The Cardinal Instantly promoted Ribadeneira to the Bishoprick of San Andero, a splendid exile! Ribadeneira understood the ænigmatic gift, and Alberoni triumphed; for the Jesuit felt as if he were nothing in the mind of the Italian. 'So easily, he imagines, he can dismiss me!' thus he thought — but the genius of Ribadeneira would not submit to die away under the spotless Rochet.

"What remained for the inexorable Ribadeneira? Absence, from the place which humbles our pride, and secession from those we love not, is the miserable consolation of the discontented. A more splendid Empire was now contemplated by the Jesuit; he remembered how once a brother, disappointed in some slight premotion, haughtily abandoned his college; and, inspired by the vast views of the Order, adoring its genius while he hated its rival Members, be became the sublime founder of the Jesuitic dominion in the new world - and, in anger, he added asother Empire!

"'Let the Italian triumph — it is but in his own way! I have no feeble passions to exhaust in the contemptators struggle!' Thus exclaimed Ribadensirs, while he cursed that mediocrity in the Cabinets of Europe, that slighted the political aspirant whom they had yet the power to silence — and who, whatever might be his own views, had included in them the annihilation of the Italian by the Spanish Throne. But the advice given to ministers by an obnoxious person, is always considered criminal!

"The illusion of Empire hung ever the new World. The Jesuits had laid the foundation of a splendid government in South America; but they wanted the audacity to proclaim it to the world. There they ruled over an Empire, while they concealed themselves as Monks, and trembled to be discovered among a million of their slaves.

"When Ribadeneira turned his eyes on that vast Continent, he mused over Nations whom oppression had matured for Heroes; and a soil, whose surface lightly covers metal more potent than the iron of the North, which had subdued their fathers. He was meditating to reverse their destiny, and teach them to conquer, as they had been conquered. Let, Ribadeneira exclaimed, Peru, once more, a race of Kings behold! The Founder and the Legislator of this new Dynasty, was to be disguised under the grey cloak and the long beard of the Missionary Ribadeneira, armed only with his staff and his breviary. — But should the Order discover a rival in their son! Ribadeneira had long felt the proud curviction, that to enslave, or to emancipele a people, required but a change of direction from the same genius. He designate to offer the inevitable alternative to the Order — Their terrible Servant was willing to become their Ally! The Politician is mutable with time and place.

"The perilous adventure was, just spared our romantic politician; for, at the moment he was hastening to become a Missionary to Paraguay, the Basis exacted from the World, for on the Tiara rested all his hopes!

"The juntary from Madrid to Rome was soothed by the political reveries of this n. w Reformer — He mused on Thrones subverted and new Dynasties! he was and dating all Despotsin, by the despotism of Gen us - to charm, while he enslaved Mank nd.

" At the feet of the Pope, R badeneira prostrate of moself, write he raised his eyes on a throw, whose basis he resolved to support, (r t) subvert. The humble frock of the Ceneral of the Jesuits disguised the insatial, a ambition of his soul,

Having been almost in perceptibly led to a greater length of quotation from this very interesting Work than was at first interded; — we must for the present postpone the eventful history of the Jesuits and their downfal

61. The Saraca Hack of John Abernethy. F. R. S. Sr. Sr. Sr. Vol. I. and H. Longmann & I.Co. 1811.

AMONG the many scientific and useful Publications which the present age has produced, there is perhaps no ever, supported by numerous, and, we think, very satisfactory cases; the circumstance of their varying from the general mode of thinking may therefore be considered as an additional proof of the utility of their publication. While the whole of the Work is interesting and instructive, that part which treats of the constitutional origin and treatment of Local Disease is, perhaps, the most valuable ; it may be considered as a scientific and practical illustration of facts, the knowledge of which is of equally great mportance to the Physician as to the Surgeon.

The connexion subsisting between Local Diseases and the state of the health in general; and between the state of the health in general and that of the digestive organs in particular; has been noticed, in a cursory manner, by the carliest Writers on Medicine. The nature and extent of this connexion does not appear to have made a due impression on the minds of the generality of modern Practitioners.

Ta.

To inculcate the necessity of attending to this connexion, seems to be the Author's principal object; and the successful treatment of the cases which he has recorded shews that his opinions have been well founded.

Our limits will not permit us to dwell on the respective merits of the different parts of the Work. We shall therefore content ourselves with saying in conclusion, that when we reflect on the extent and varieties of the disorder of the system which Mr. Abernethy has described—on its connexion with such a number of distressing and dissimilar Local Diseases, and on the still more calamitous effects which it occasionally produces on the mind; we feel strongly impressed with the importance of the subject, and of the necessity of bringing it into a conspicuous point of view. We may add that we feel happy in having an opportunity of recommending this Work to general notice; confident that, it our feeble efforts to give it additional publicity should succeed, we shall have the pleasing satisfaction of having contributed to promote the welfare of mankind.

62. A new and authentic Edition of the Statutes; printed by Authority. Vol. I. [Rev. wed in a Letter from a Correspondent]

Mr. LRBAN, May 31.

I HAVE just been favoured by a Friend with a sight of the First Volume of that national undertaking, which has been some years in hand, the authentic Edition of "The Statutes of the Realm." It was completed in the month of March last, and a copy was laid before the Members of the Record Commission at their sitting on Lady-day. And as I understand it is not to be sold, but copies only to be distributed among the Courts of Law, and Public Libraries, it may not, perhaps, be uninteresting to your Readers to learn something of its history, plan, and contents.

This very laborious Work was begun under the direction of the Record Commission, and the execution of it entrusted originally to three learned Barristers, Mr. Luders, Mr. Tomlins, the Counsel to the trish Exchequer, and Mr. France, a Commissioner of Bankrupts. Very little progress had, however, been made in the undertaking, when a removal into the country, and other avocations, obliged Mr. Luders to vesign his situation as a Sub-Commissioner; and Mr. William Elias Taunton, a gentleman also at the Bar, Recorder of Oxford, and a Commissioner of Bankrupts, was appointed to succeed ban. gentleman and Mr. Tomlins have, I understand, on this occasion, been he principal pioneers in delving in the rich, but hitherto little explored, mines of our Legal Antiquities; and it is to their industry and learning. chiefly, that the publick are indebted for this most valuable Volume of the Charters and carlier Statutes.

Prior to the collation and revision of the text and translation, all the principal repositories, not only m London, but also in the great Provincial Towns, and in Ireland, were searched for copies of the Charlers and Statutes, and transcripts of the most authentic made by Mr. Tomling and Mr. William Illingworth, the Deputy Keeper of his Majesty's Records; the result of whose labours was printed, for the use of the Commissioners, in a "Report of Searches." Other transcripts also, including the whole text of the Charters and Statutes, were made from the Statute. Charler, Fine, Patent, and Close Rolls, and from manuscripts in the British Museum and elsewhere, by Kr. Illingworth, Mr. Caley, the Keeper of Records in the Augmentation Office and Secretary to the Record Commission, and Mr. Bryan Richards. These were compared with each other, and various readings noted; and, finally, copies selected for the Text, according as they were most anthenue in their source; or, if no authentic source could be found, most full and correct in their coutents.

The materials for the text being 🗱 length settled after most minute and patient research and collation, in which all the gentlemen assisted, the task of investigating this Text, of comparing it with the various Texis in the former printed Editions and in. the other manuscript transcripts, and, of correcting all errors and defects (from which not even the most Was altogether authentic source exempt) by various readings, and of examining the common translation (which, as having been, as it were naturalised by long use, was preferred cience from original Charters of Charters of Inspeximus now extant, from the Charter Roll, or, in two or three instances only where no other better source existed, from anthentic MSS. Each Charter is illustrated by various Readings from all other copies of authority which are now to be net with; and a table is prefixed, pointing out the original in each instance from whence the Text is taken, the Repository in which it is preserved, and the sources from which the various Readings are selected. I was given to understand, that the very minute and laborrous attention which the Editing of the only accurate and perfect collect on of the Charters yet in print demanded, was bestowed, almost exclusively, by Mr. Tombus.

I should not, Mr. Urban, have been able to have stated to you even this brief outline of the Publication in question, if I had not had an opportunity of perusing the Introduction with which it is prefaced. To those who have not traine or inclination to form an opinion of the ments of the the r arrangement.

"Sect. 2. Of the Sources from whence the several matters are taken.

"Sect. 3 Of the mode used in searching for, transcribing, collating, noting, and printing, the Text of the Statutes.

"Ch. IV. Sect. 1. Of the original Language of the Charters and Statutes.

Sect. 2. Of the Franslation in this Collection of the Statutes.

66 Ch. V. Sect. 1. Of the Collections of the Statutes of Scotland and Ireland heretofire published by Royal Authority.

"Sect. 2. Of the methods successively adopted for promu'gating the Statutes, before and since the Union of Great Britain and Ireland"

These several topicks are treated fully, and, where Learning can come into play, with Learning, which manifests considerable research, and impuris very important information. References, by way of illustration, are frequently made to the best Law Authorities; and the dryness of detail is sometimes relieved by notes, which open the path to discussions of the most interesting kind. The following may be given as a specimen:

"Lord Hale, H. C. L. ch. 1. says, this Roll (that is, the Great Roll containing the Statutes from 6 Edw. I. to 50 Edw. III.) begins with Magna Charta, and ends with Edw. III. This is erroneous; for though part of the Roll antecedent to Edw. I. may have been lost since the time of Lord Hale, there is no reason to conclude that it ever began with Magna Charta: Magna Charta and Charta de Foresta are. not entered on this Roll prior to 25 Edw. I. and they are accordingly printed as Statutes of that year in this collection. There are not wanting authorities which seem to consider the Great Charter, as possessing the validity of a Statute from the 1st or the Sth of Henry III. before the confirmation of it by the Statute of Marlborough, 52 Henry III. It is so considered by Coke in 2 Inst. 65, 1 Inst. 43 a. 81 a.; in the Prince's case 8 Rep. 19; and clsewhere; by Hale H. C. L. ch. 1; and by Blackstone in his Introduction to the Charters, 4to. p. xl. 8vo, p. lxi. It is also expressly called a Statute by Littleton, sect. 108; but this may be referable to its subsequent confirmation by Parliament. Hale's idea may probably have arisen from supposing it to be on the Statute Roll before 6 Edw. I. And Coke and Blackstone founded their opinions chiefly upon two judicial decisions cited from Fitzherbert's Abridgement (Part 2, fo. 120 b. tit. Mordanne, pl. 23, and Part 1, fo. 188 a, tit. Briefe, pl. 881); the one as of 5 Hen. III. the other as of 21 Hen. III.; to which may be added another of 23 Hen. III. Fitz. Abr. Part 1, fo. 90 a. tit. Assise, pl. These, if of those years respectively, certainly prove that the Great Charter was then considered as the law of the land, but not, absolutely, that it was previously of Parliamentary Enactment. In the instances of 5 Hen. III. and 23 Hen. III. the phrase 'L'Estatut de Magna Carta,' is merely used incidentally by Fitzherbert in stating the points adjudged; and there is some ground to think also that the former decision was possibly of a much later period; see the Year Books, 38 Hen. VI. 18, and 39 Hen. VI. 19. In the instance of 21 Hen. III. the Great Charter is referred to, not as a Parliamentary Act, but as a Grant, 'concessum' being the word used to denote its authority; which construction the preamble of the Articuli super Cartas, Stat. 28 Edw. I. and the beginning of Chap. 1. of that Statute, confirm; though in the Confirmatio Cartarum, Stat. 25 Edw. I. c. 1. which passed during the absence of the King from the Lealm, it is recited of the two Charters, 'les queles furent faites p' com'un assent de tut la Roiaume.' an Admiralty Record, quoted by Pryune, (Animad. 120) as of 23 Hen. VI. the laws of Oberon are recognised by the term · Statulum.' "

From this note we learn, from unquestionable documents, what perhaps iew persons have conjectured, that it was matter of dispute so carly even as the reign of Edw. I. whether the Great Charter was to be esteemed a Legislative measure, or a boon from the King. The Parliament, in the 25th year of that King's reign, taking advantage of the King's absence from the Kingdom, and of the temporary disorder which obtained in consequence, declared of the two Charters. that they were made by the common assent of all the Realm. King, upon his return, when he again solemnly confirmed them, took especial care to recite, in the Articuli super Cartas, that they had been granted by King Henry III. Sub-Commissioners very properly content themselves with adducing the authoritics upon both sides, without giving any opinion of their own. But the point surely is not doubtful. When the circumstances under which the Charters were obtained are adverted to; the triumph of the Barons, the distress of the King, the want of a regular Parliament, and the disorders of the times; it is pretty clear, that the Charters, when first established, were in truth only a Royal concession, though in part a concession of the antient laws and customs of the Realma and throughout certainly of liberties which the people had a right to demand,

Although the present Work purports, in the language of the first Resolution of the Board of Commissioners upon the subject, to be "a complete and authentic Collection of the Statutes of the Realm, it does not comprehend all the articles which, by some Writers, have been considered as coming within that description.

It is stated, Ch. III. Sect. I.

"All instruments whatever, comprehended in any of the several Collections of Statutes printed previous to the Edition by Hawkins, are inserted in this Work; these having for a long series of years been referred to, and accepted as Statutes in Courts of Law. Together with these are inscried all matters of a public nature. purporting to be Statutes, first printed by Hawkins, or any subsequent Editor: and also new matters of the like nature, costained in any Statute Rolls, Inrollments of Acts, Exemplifications, Transcripts by Writ, and Original Acts, although not heretofore printed in any general Collection of Statutes, Statutes. All these are placed in the of the Work as Text."

After reminding us, that it ha observed by Lord Coke, that th " many Acts of Parliament tha the Rolls of Parliament and ner printed," and informing us, the is certain that many Acts and & not found on any Statute Rol contained in any printed Editi-the Statutes, are found on the l ment Rolls, which appear to he ceived the threefold assent of Lords, and Commons, or to hav qualities as have been allow Courts of Law to imply that as the Sub-Commissioners give th lowing reasons for adding t former stock of Statutes suc matters only, as were " taker sources of Authority not to be c verted i'

"With a view therefore to a contion of the question, whether may this nature should be comprehended present Work, lists of a great now them were prepared, not only for Parliament Rolls, but also from Records, particularly the Close Ro Patent Rolls, which were examined purpose with great care and diligent Transcripts and Collations of m them were made for the examination Comm sameers. In the progress labour, however, it appeared that the matters which came within the description above-mentioned were so numerous, that the indiscreminate insection of all of them would constitute a mass, the very bulk of which would prove inconvenent. But what was of still greater unportance, upon examination it became, with respect to many of them, a subject of discussion, from which no certain conclusion could be derived, to what extent they had in fact received sanction, and whether therefore they were, in any degree, entitled to be considered as of legislative authority. It was obvious, at the same time, that to have made a selection only of such unitary as in the opinion of the Commissioners were the least doubtful was in effect encountering the same difficulty only in a smaller degree; and the sources, from which they were to be taken, not being in themselves conclusive evidence that the matters contained in them were Statutes, the selection in each instance necessarily could be nothing more than the result of private judgment; without the anthority of that 'general received find tion,' wirch, as Lord Hale observes, attests and approves those Statutes which are not properly extant of Record."

upon these subjects, they had admitted as Statutes all the articles any where to be met with, which possess some evidence of having received the triple assent.

I should add that the Typographical execution of the Work does great creditto the King's Printer, by whom, I understand, a new set of types was employed on the occasion. gravings also of the Charters are such as might be expected from the skill of Mr. Basire, at once clear, accurate, and distinct. The whole I consider as a monument of Legal Research and Eruction, highly creditable to the Gentlemen concerned in it; and more particularly to the Right Hon. CHARLES ABBOT, the Speaker of the House of Commons, and Chairman of the Record Commission, under whose directions and active superintendance the Work has, I hear, been carried through to its present maturity.

Yours, &c. HAROLD.

in dry weather, "one day's rain making such an impression on its rich soil, that no carriage, nor scarcely a horse, can proceed without going some leagues about."

. " We reached Seville after sun-set; but, it being a bright moonlight evening, the public walks and buildings, at the entrance of the town, had a tine effect; we passed one of the walks by the side of the river, and entering by several narrow streets into one of the squares, met a religious procession, which obliged us to stop till it had passed us. It consisted of a number of friars chanting psalms, preceded by men with large glass lanthorns fixed on staves, ahout eight feet high. To these succeeded a priest, bearing a banner, with either a crucifixion, or the virgin painted on it, and the singers, attended by the rabble, closed To me it had a ludicrous apthe whole. pearance, but the people stood silent and uncovered till it had passed, and the inhabitants of the houses brought lights to the balconies, in compliment to the Rosary, as it is called.

"We drove to the Posada de Sol, where we were not a little disgusted with the filthy appearance of the house, and the brutal manners of the host: he first hesitated to receive us, and, after running over a long list of Marquises, Counts, and Members of the Junta, who either were in his house, or expected to arrive the next day, he refused to admit us; which eventually proved a most fortunate circumstance; for having a letter of introduction to a Mr. Wiseman, an Irish merchant long established in this city, I called on him to request his assistance in relieving us from our embarrassing situation: instead of recommending me to another inn, he offered me accommodations in his own house, and procured an apartment for Mr. Ridont, till we could neet with convenient lodgings. In this friendly mansion we met with genuine hospitality, and were introduced to an agreeable society, partly consisting of several English gentlemen of Marquis Wellesley's family.

"The day after my arrival I waited on our Ambassador, who received me with dignified, but not distant politeness: his conversation discovered an accurate knowledge, and comprehensive view of the state of Spain, while his liberal conduct, and uniform attention to his countrymen, must ensure him their respect and esteem. The arrival of this celebrated Nobleman in Seville produced an extraordinary seusation, a sensation certainly neither prepared, nor fostered by the body to whom he was sent, whose narrow souls were jealous of his character, and apprehensive lest his powerful talents should detect and expose their contracted policy and futile projects. All the respectable inhabitants of the city, among whom were many of those men whose information, patriotism, and energetic minds, had planned and effected the first revolution, became the leaders on this occasion also, and conducted the triumphal entry of the British Minister. Seville was emptied of its population; and the expect, ing crowds patiently endured, without the city, the heat of the sun, the privation of their meals, and of their siests, and tranquilly waited from morning till dusk, to welcome the approach of a man whose high rank and distinguished capacity were considered as pledges of the generous and disinterested intentions of the Monarch be represented.

"The shouts of the people, and the acclamations of the multitude, were genuine and unequivocal demonstrations of the strong feelings of the nation; but the conduct of their rulers discovered mcrely that routine of compliments which the hollow intrigues of a court may teach, but which he, who had ruled such Courts in India, knew in what manner to appreciate. welcome of Lord Wellesley at Cadiz had perhaps been increased by the news of his brother's victory at Talavera; and certainly one cause of his Lordship's enthusiastic reception in that city may be attributed to that fortunate occurrence: but at Seville all was pure, unmixed joy for the arrival of man whose nation was venerated, whose character had preceded him. and to whose high qualities they looked up for deliverance from the government of a body of men fortuitously raised to the unlimited exercise of the executive and legislative power of a great nation."

[To be continued in the Supplement.]

64. Sacred Meditations and Devotional Hymns, with some Essays in Prose, composed on various Occasions of Life, and published for the Use of the intelligent Mind in its serious Moments. By a Layman. 12mo. pp. 301. Muaray. 1811.

WE have seldom met with a Publication which corresponds more closely with its title than the present. These Meditations are exactly calculated " for the use of the intelligent Mind in its serious moments," and for uo other. Yet let us hope there are many minds disposed to embrace opportunities to leave the world, and its cares and pleasures, for those subjects that are of everlasting importance.

It is too justly observed by the Author of this Work, that " an ifliberal air has been sometimes given to religion by injudicious adherents, which has disgusted many valuable Delang.

Together let us live and love,
And seek the bowers of bliss above,
My lovely Dalia! good as fair,
And kind as good, my heart's best care.
Tho! at thy indid love-glaneing eyes,
Thy modestan les, which saints might prize,
My ever-glowing boson beats,
And its first song of love repeats;
Yet when I see thy beautoous face,
In meek devotion bent, and trace
Sweet Piety's emotions there,
How do I love my virtuous fair!

The hope that when this earth decays, We still shall live, and love, and praise; Together range, when evils cease, The scraph realms of heavenly peace; And see our infants, form'd by thee To generous virtue, share our gies. These rapturous hopes inspire my heatt, And Reason's sweetest feast impart; humble e'vilization.

"The happy timidity, the native gentleness, the maternal feelings, the muscular inferiority, and the parental infirmities of the female sex, make them averse to the bold and fierce employments of uncultivated man. Their milder character is ever acting imperceptibly to soften his asperities, and to inflise a softer spirit into bis mond. Slowly, but with steady progress, has their magic operated; and in all parts of Europe we find the male savage gradual. ly mounding himself to the wishes of his gentler companion. C.vilization advances, upon han with stealing step and smiling aspect. In the female form and manners it assumes an attraction which is not long resistible; and once persuaded to submit to it, he feels its value, and exalts it by the addition of his own energies, and by the improvements which his industry and vigour of mind can soon create.

" The

The history of civilization abundantly confirms this picture; and when Ledyard the traveller declared that he had, in no part of the world, addressed a woman in decent and courteous language without receiving a kind and friendly answer, though with men it was often otherwise, he bears testimony to the same truth. But it is not my intention, in this place, to detail the merits of the female sex. My present purpose is only to notice one peculiar trait of amiability in them, which seems to me to be connected with many virtues; and this is, their superiority to our sex in religious feeling.

"Whoever has had much experience of life well knows that in almost every family the most devout part of it consists of the In our churches they always preladies. ponderate. From them it is that our sex receives the first impression of what religion it may have; and to them almost exclusively it is owing that we retain any part of what we have imbibed. In all parts of the world this fact prevails. Even in dissipated, unmoralized France, it was one of its fashions for ladies of ton at a certain age to become devotees; and in our more rational country, a woman without religion is consideral, even by male latitudinarians, to be a monstrum horrendum et informe — an odious and disgusting spectacle. A female atheist is as revolting to our taste now as she was when satirized by Young; and no woman who wishes to interest attempts such a degrading distinction.

"That the female sex should be attached to Christianity is not surprising. mild and benevolent spirit and system are so congenial with their lovely virtues, that it is natural they should most feel its value, and delight to profess it. But it is remarkable, that even under the paganism of anticut Rome, they were also found on 'It is the women.' the side of religion. says Strabo, 'who excite men to devotion and supplications and the observance of religious days. It is rare to meet with a man that lives apart from the females, and yet is addicted to such practices.' Here is the confession of a heathen, that religion would not have subsisted in the world without the female sex. He might have also said civilization; for civilization has been no where found, and never will be seen, without religion. In supporting religion, the ladies are the great supporters not only of the leading social virtues, but cven of civilization itself.

"The introduction of Christianity into the kingdoms that in modern times have prevailed in Europe, we owe in a very material degree, to the female sex. The influence of the Queen of Ethelbert over her busband's mind, occasioned him to receive kindly the first missionaries who came to teach it in England; and the distr Queens assisted its diffusion through the A female captive introduced R into Georgia. The Quech of Clovis and induced him to admit it among the French. The daughter of a King of Bohemin persuaded her husband, the King of Peleod. to invite its establishment ampng his sub-By the influence of a Queen in Hungary, it was introduced in that existssive Country. A Grecian Princess diffesed it among the Russians; and in want other parts of the world the influence if the female taste has ever powerfully smith ed both in its introduction and diffusion. In all these instances there was no land. ledge, there was no civilization in the converted countries before they received Christianity; and therefore invaluable was the present which these aminhle, wemen have conferred on the world by their generous piety.

"This attachment of the female sex to religion, arises from their superior succestibility of the grateful and affectionate feels: ings; from their interesting meckness appl docility; their natural love of order, tranquillity, and virtue; their greater sense de dependance, and of the need of a protected a and from a far more unperverted desire: doing right than appears among water The pride, the conceit, the arrogance, 🛶 turbulence, the selfishness, and the sensantity of men, too often indispose them to religion; and as these dangerous qualities are much feebler in women, there is not inthem that spirit of resistance against religion which abounds in our sex. Religion is congenial with the best feelings of the female character: it is offensive to the haughtier nature of man. It is therefore far more difficult for our sex to awake and cherish within their hearts the devotional sentiment: their temper and their purunits are alike averse to it; but the female how som, the seat of every interesting virtue, naturally loves and cultivates it; and nothing surely is more interesting to the sympathy, than to see modest beauty at her orisons, humbly bending before her Creator, breathing the sweet effusions of grateful adoration, the meck supplication, the earnest thanksgiving, the unaffected humiliation. Sincere devotion never exists. a solitary virtue: a thousand amiabilities attend it. It gives a steady principle through life, which is the best guardian of virtue, and the best guide of judgment; k softens the heart, purifies the motives, animates the sympathies, and imparts that useful fortitude and perpetual consplation which nothing else can bestow."

The circumstances of the times render the following extract likewing peculiarly interesting:

cannot be preserved; and that, reproportion as she is hanished from the world, knowledge, virtia, peace, older, and prevote happiness, will equally disappear. The antents had the experience of the world from their barbarous ferce by and bestial state, and therefore enth asiastically espoused it; and dishered as they afterwards made a by the additions of human folly, yet its benefic al effects were so evident, that the magistrate warmly supported what, as a philosopher, he despised.

"The wonderful effect of Christianity, in civilizing the barbarons Gothic hordes who broke down the Roman Empire, and in converting them from the sanguinary savage to the nuble cultivation of the enlightened European, repeated the autient experience of the use and necessity of religion to man. But, time having obliterated the memory of this experience, religion has become again discredited and neglected; and the Continent is now mourning, in every village, the dismal consequences which have resulted, and will still result, from the lamentable delication. We know the more than astage bloodshed which the senates repeatedly hailed him with impious flattery almost as a demi-god?-and of ali the statesmen, generals, philosophera, senators, moralists, and literate of France, have any abandoned the unprincipled tyrant, except his two brothers, Louis and Lucien, and one unanportant General? Even Macdonald, once called the viction's republican, goes down to Spain to execute his sangumary purposes on that high-minded country.--All, all are bad, all are unprincipled. The Deity has abandoned them to their own hearts and devices; and dreadful is that system which these reformers of the world, who leagued to publ down Christianity, have established in its stead.

"That religion was the enemy of knowledge, was the favourite cry. What was the consequence under the philosophical anarchists? Has it not been publicly declared that Robespierre seemed afraid to leave any man alive that was more informed than himself?— and what is the prospect now? Not only in France all newspapers are abolished, but those which her police patronises and most jealously superintends; but he has ordered the German Princes to imitate him, and by his command all newspapers but one are suppressed in the Grand Dutchy of Frankfort, and the Grand Dutchy of Wurtzburg. No education is to be had throughout the French empire but in the schools which he establishes; and no teachers are to be there but those whom his Government approves; and all are to be subject to the implicit authority of one whom he appoints, and who is removable at pleasure. No books are to be read, and no subject to be discussed or studied but those which he allows. His dreadful conscriptions tear away youth from all parts of the Continent, when just beginning to imbibe knowledge; and there can be no doubt that, if his reign lasts, or if he be succeeded by similar spirits, a night of Gothic ignorance will again descend upon some of the fairest parts of Europe. His incessant wars will perpetuate this disastrous effect; and their as incessant desolations are committing ravages on human happiness, which will not soon be repaired.

Commerce once was thought to be the great civilizer of the world. But Buonaparte compels every state on the Continent, visited by his troops, to burn all English manufactures and merchandise, as if he was really attempting that project of reducing mankind to the iron barbarism of the Gothic period which has been ascribed to him.—Hence it is that we are receiving a dreadful practical lesson of the incompatibility of irreligion with individual happiness, and with social prosperity and security; and we are thus coming to the same personal experience which led the venerated sages of elder time to diffuse religion through the barbarous states they visited, as the only means to humanize and moralize them. Nothing can now draw back the world to public repose and individual safety, but the re-establishment of the religious principle in the minds and hearts of nien, and especially of their rulers. Religion must again become the governor of the conduct, before society can regain its felicity or its tranquillity. But it must be enlightened religion; it must be religion allied with knowledge and intellect, or it will not have extensive influence or a permanent residence. Mankind have leafned to value knowledge; and though it may be kept by tyranny from their lips, they will Besides, religion in the paut to taste it. hands of ignorance is always degraded and perverted. No one wishes now for the puerilities of monkery, or the gross errors of sordid superstition. No, let our religion now be as improved as our civilization, and " let philosophy delight to patronize it."

As sentiments of this cast cannot be too widely diffused, we havelittle hesitation in warmly recommending this Work to public attention.

SELECT POETRY.

The Battle of Albuera;
Or, Beresford and Victory.
Written by Wm. Thomas Fitz-Gerald, Esq.

()N rush'd THE FOE, at break of day, And found our men in firm array; In numbers confident and strong, His Horsemen scour'd the plain along. 'Twas then the Work of Death began, And thousands overwhelm'd our Van! In the same rank they fought—they died, Each by his Brother Soldier's side, With all their honour'd wounds before— Not Spartan Valour could do more! Thus when the Tempest rends the Wood, The Giant Oak falls where it stood! No eyes beheld one Briton yield, Or turn his back, or quit the field; Oppress'd by numbers he must die, But never — never — never fly! Peace to your Manes, gallant Men! You ne'er must see your home again; Yet Laurels, sacred to the Brave, Shall spring from every Soldier's Grave! And well you earn'd the Laurel Tree, Who gain'd, by Death, THE VICTORY. Short is the Triumph of the Foe, His ranks are thinn'd, his Chiefs laid low: Forward's the word that strikes the ear, And dreadful gleams the British Spear!
Glowing with vengeance they advance,
To charge the boasted Troops of France.
Heroic verse alone should tell How Hoghton, cheering on his Warriom, fell—

CHIEFTAIN, your deeds shall live in fame,"
Reflecting honour on your name;
And though IBERIA claims your dust,
Your Country consecrates your bust!
Nor shall the Youths of humbler lot,
Brave Walsh and Thomas, be forgot:
In Life and Death to Honour just,
Neither resign'd his sacred trust—
When all his comrades fell around,
The Galiant Ensign kept his Ground;
"Your Standard yield," the Frenchment cried,

Brave Thomas answer'd, "NO"—and Walsh, when he felt the hostile dart, Preserv'd the Colours next his heart, And as he sunk, by wounds oppress'd, Still held them closer to his Breast! Such bright examples should be told Of Hearts of more than mortal mould! Though young in rank, and martial station. They form the Bulwark of the Nation.

ere named who merit ; would be the Poet's is his Bettle of renown, ero shares the Victor's the Conflict now indee: ousands upon Thousar E RED CROSS, so fam'd hant waves for ENGLAL TISH VALOUR SOULT gir RESPORD has won the d THE FRENCH the LAUR it the hard-daputed Fi as of Portugal and S lountry's honour well t this Day may proudly e with Britone, Britihow our men in shout that re-echo through th MRADES now avenged a inspone and Victory !

te following Poem by he of the numerous Ade id Edition of her as in one in the Press.

PORTUGAL. And AND weeps for thee, thou wert once the loiouthern Europe's blouopt beautiful of all! my an eye thy beauty silver shore; thy gold citron groves, where quiver maid,

he dark leaves and snow rant as Araby's blest bowers hen evening breezes fall, ne-clad hal; the three stade, 'here at the merry vintage feast lightsome youth and black-eyed om pleasant toil releas'd;—

. scene will many a heart recall, weep thy rum, Portugal!
ck Man sought thy lovely shore,
Art was fulld, and hope was o'er;
meach gasping, labouring breath,
em'd to fly the Victor Death;
on then thy breeze could fing ealth, and acaling from his wing, id that hearing gale dispense sick sons its influence.

ndst in vain the very air vy with the soul's despair, em ng earth still peeks with blood; if gorg'd ravens loathe their food, corses of the unburied slain it thy pure breeze, and load thy plan.

ched land! the invading for id thy smoking hamlets low, terrible to bear the strife! ne like the dread earthquake's shock, and church and cot to rock; the dire Yolcano's flame, wastating rum came, swept awayithy life.

The invader flies !---and Peace once mora
May heal thy devastated shore;
But Famme dwells on vale and hill:

But Famme dwells on vale and hill; The iron hoofs indent the plain;

No harvest blooms; all, all is still,
Still as Despair's cold sullen reign.
Oh bitter are the scalding tears, that steal
From the fund dying mother's half clos of eyes,
[cries.]

Who stills with her last bit her infant's Nor knows if it may taste another meal. Oh dreadful are the husband's grouns, who sees

His bride's fair form with hunger thrink-

To the low tomb each moment sinking, Yet emiling in her pangs his grief to ease. Still Famine sits within thy gate, And thou art sad and desolate, Queen of the Golden Shore.

Can aught uprear thy fallen state,

Thy vanish'd bliss restore?
Yes, Englash: from the Gallie band.
Twas English valour clear'd thy land!
And English bounty shall recall
Tay people to their ruined wall;

Shall hid the golden harvest wave, The hongry feed, the dying save, For England weeps thy wees, O Portugal, Many Russell Mitrons.

Bertram House, May 1:4

Ops

Our to Mr. Retrect.

On his intended Descriptive Revision of the entient Ballad of "Chevy Chace *."

· (Written near the Spot, in 1791.)

FAST from the Mountain-top retires.
The crimson of day's setting fires,
On youder spreading clouds to lie,
Till shade absorbs each brilliant dye.

Yet, lest to the indulgent light That silvers o'er the tinted night, A warlike theme the bosom fills, And grander rise the Cheviot Hills.

Far — far the lifted waste extends, No tree romantic o'er it bends; And a stretch'd course the eye pursues, Check'd only by the floating dews.

Wert thou, discerning Ritson, near, Thou wouldst the awful scene revere; A scene made sacred by those rhymes, Which thou mayst deck for latest times.

Thy fancy, from her store, would yield A thousand shapes to throng the field;—And sounds create of trampling steed, Or arrow, wing'd with deathful speed;

And image all that strife anew, When the bold Percy and his Crew Began a Fight "an hour cre noon," Which lasted till the midnight moon.

Still peasants to the hills repair,
And mark the spot with pensive air,
Where Horsern, leaning on his brand,
Took wounded Douglas by the hand.

Ah! sadly broke the morning ray, When Chiefs and Vassals breathless lay; And wives and babes, with sorrowing pace, Songht thro' the field a kindred face!

On "biers of birch and hasell gray,"
They strove the last fond rites to pay;
And rustics, from the hamlets round,
Bedew'd with mourners' tears the ground.

Long--long the death-bell's heavy note The ear of wilder'd sorrow smote; Whilst Bards and Priests, amidst the throng,

By turns asoun'd the hallow'd song.

With more than common spirit fir'd, OBE MINSTREE from the rest retir'd, And form'd the verse, which to repeat, Made Sidney's heart exulting beat.

Much to the Mitred Sage † is due; Rrrson, the liberal task pursue ---And Chevy Chace, the pride of yore, With all its feudal spoils, restore.

+ Dr. Percy.

IMPROMPTU,

To Miss PARER;
Intended to be presented on St. Czerlia's Day,
MARIA, sweetest of Cecilia's train,
On this great day permit my sident strain,

Which supplient, prostrate, to the powers above,

To virtue, happiness, and rapt'rous love, Prays on thy head each blessing mortals know,

Thyself an antidote to human woe!
What raptures hover sound thy, beauties

When the celestial songs entrance our east.

Or tender sympathy, through leve's softerill,
Bids our warm besoms, with ecstatic thrill,
Beat in soft raptures to thy levely lay,
When then all-powerful steal'st our sent away!

Borne by light sounds in rapid sweep along,

We bear the Scraph-Angel's heavenly song. All earth forgot, at once enthrough in Heav'n,

(Can higher pleasures even there be given?)
A new existence steals upon the mind,
Leaving our dull terrestrial clay behind;
All wondering at the mighty change we feel,
We knowwelive but by soft pleasure's thrill.

Then, then, exulting, each ecstatic eries, Is this a mortal?--- Each with rapture night; Mourns that the dulcet strains should ever cease, [perce.]

And feels his breast the realm of joy and Yet not in Music only to excel

Maria's formed --- In her the virtues due!

Maria's formed --- In her the virtues dwell; I That most the loveliest of her sex adorn; Maria is a rose withous a thorn.

Gray's Inn Square.

J. H.

LINES,

Sent to a Lady on the Birth-day of her Son,
a very promising Youth of Fifteen.

LET the kind Mother greet the hours with joy
That bring the Birth-day of her darling
Bright are the beams that hair the rising morn,

And sweet the flowers Creation's face
But brighter far the unsulfied hours of youth,
[truth

Adorn'd with innocence and mark'd with Soft breathe the Zephyrs o'er the smiling earth.

And call forth embryo Nature into birth—
So soft his filial love and mildness join's,
Disclose the beauties of the embryo mind.

Judg'd from the present, Fancy bids me view
The future prospect in its brightest hue:
Bright may it ever shine, 'till manhood bring
The promis'd harvest of so fair a spring—
And as his years in gay succession flow,
May he in wisdom as in stature grow;
And in that tenor which his youth began,
Increase in favour both with God and Man!
June, 1811.

S. B.

Pao-

سندل الشاهدة و

^{*} The purpose Mr. Ritson once entertained of publishing the above Ballad with Historical and Topographical Observations, was revoked soon after a visit he made to the North, one of the objects of which was to collect materials.

te object of war was peace.
r. W. Smith and Sir T Turton spoke w words against the grant; after h the motion was agreed to. — Adied.

May 2.

ie Speaker communicated to the se the reply of Gen. Graham to the of Thanks for his gallant conduct e battle of Barrosa, expressing his sense of the honour conferred on ne following sums were granted in a mittee of Supply — for making and bridges in Scotland 20,000L; uilding the Caledonian canal in the h-western part of Scotland, 40,000L; urveying roads in North Britain, L; for works in both Houses of ament for the year 1811, 7100L; itaining the Light-house at Heligo, 5720L; compensation to the Com-Gent. Mag. June, 1811.

May 3.

minster.

Messrs. Lockhart, Moore, Luckington, also spoke; after which the motion was agreed to.

House of Lords, May 6.

The Lord Chancellor read a letter from Gen. Graham, expressing his high sense of the honour conferred on him by the thanks of that House.

The Royal Assent was given by Commission to the Foreign Ministers' Salaries, the London Docks Warehouse, the Dublin Roads, and several local and private Bills, making in all 37.

The second reading of the Distillery Bill being moved, the Earls of Suffolk, Lauderdale, Aberdeen, and Rossiyn, and Lord Grenville, spoke against it: Earls Bathurst, Darnley, Laverpool, Westmortand, and Lord Holland, were in its favour. The Earl of Hardwicke moved that the Bill be read a second time this day six months; which, upon a division, was carried by a majority of 20, the numbers being 56 to 36.

In the Commons, the same day, the Southwark Bridge Bill was, after some opposition from Sirs W. Curtin and C. Price, read the third time: Sir T. Turton declaring that Mr. Rennie, the engineer, had given it as his opinion, that London Bridge, after one hard frost, might not last a year.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, in a Committee of Supply, stated, that of the twelve millions to be raised by Exchequer Bills, seven and a half had been obtained; and that his plan was to raise the deficiency by five per cent. annuities, giving a preference to the original subscribers, who would receive 721.in five per eests, for every 70% with a discount of 4 per cent. on prompt payment. After dwelling upon the advantages of thus breaking the yearly loan, and the favourable influence it had upon the stocks, he moved that 4,981,300% should be raised by 5 per cent. annuities; which was agreed to.

The House having, on the motion of Mr. Horner, resolved itself into a Committee on the Report of the Bullion Committee; that Gentleman rose, and, in a speech distinguished as much by its eloquence as extensive knowledge of the subject, argued in support of the opinions delivered in the Report; declared that Bank Paper had suffered a depreciation of 20 per cent.; contended that this depreciation, combined with the restriction of cash payments by the Bank, was the cause of the unfavourable rate of exchange, &c.; and concluded by moving the first of his sevies of Resolutions.

Mr. Rece complimented the Hon. and Learned Gentleman on his speech; but said, he differed from him in a variety of facts, and in the greater part of his conclusions. He denied that the conduct of the Bank Directors affected the exchange and the price of Bullion; and quoted, in support of the former, some part of the evidence of the late Sir F.

Baring.

Mr. H. Thornton quoted the opinion of the Irish Bank Directors, who, though they denied that the exchange was anywise affected by the issue of paper, did not deny that the price of commodities was affected by it. They had heard that the paper of all the Banks in Ireland had been diminished: the consequence of this measure was a fall in the price of commodities, but it was also a rise in exchange. However the Hon. Gentleman (Mr. Rose) might be displeased at the comparison between the Bank of England and the Missisippi scheme of Law—and he admitted they were very opposite in general-yet there might be certain between them, as be in danger of sui extamity. He tho Committee had des country, in bringi Parliament.

Mr. A. Smith as being the most trade ever known, to have been fave well known to be t

The further of question, was, at he

House of On the Slave Tr read a second time its object was to profe this inhuman penalties on the instance its need that a cargo of N landed at St. Kit vertised to be sole

The Earl of L self friendly to the Earl Standope
effectual way of

Trade from being render the Negro Indies free the m

In the Commo Committee on the resumed, Mr. Fo the Committee he and expressed he remedy they prop the suspension a stended with an said that it was a sure Bank Notes! After supporting! of arguments, he that the state of ficient, without currency, to affec

Mr. Huskisson tative speech in tions, by declar might be wrong; If he was in error Burleigh, Bacon, ton, and Mr. Pitt Gentleman and they were right Mr. Law; for pr ciples, theory, at tained by both. that the wealth o on the continuar currency. He w that the wealth in the number of in the wisdom of preciation of the paper

Mr. Baring concurred in the opinions stated in the Bull on Report, so far as respected the exchange and the depreciation of paper; but thought the country had nothing to apprehend from the 24 millions of bank notes in circulation. It was the mass of national It was the mass of national debt which excited his fears, and the inattention of Parliament to a reform in our system of finance.

Mr Sharpe demed that the Members of the Bullion Committee had ever retroccded from the opinion once formed by them on the subject.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, after giving his opinion at great length, and answering the strong points of preceiling speakers, concluded by stating his conviction, that the proposition of the Committee was not only unpracticable, but rumous; and that they were called on to be the voluntary instruments of bad policy and national calamity.

Mr Chinning was sorry that the subjeet had ever been brought under discussion. He delended the Committee and the Bank. The former had only ners, and the non-countenance of people of rank. A division then took place on Mr. P. Moore's motion, for postponing the second reading of the Bill to this day three mouths, which was carried by 80 to 23.

The adjourned discussion on the Bulhon Report being resumed, the Resolutions were supported by Sir F. Burdett. Messes. Grenfell, Taylor, Wilberforce, and Whitbread; and opposed by Lord Custlereugh and Mr. D. Giddy, After several mutual explanations, the Committee at four o'clock divided on the first of Mr. Horner's Resolutions: Ayes 75, Noes 151; Majority 76. The 14 next Resolutions were then put, and negatived without a division; and on the 16th or last Resolution, making it imperative on the Bank to resume cash payments within a limited time, the Committee again divided: Ayes 45, Noes 180; Majority 135,

May 10. In a Committee of Supply, several sums were voted; among which was 12,000% for building Bethlem Pospital.

May

May 13.

The House resolved itself into a Committee, to consider farther of the Report of the Bullion Committee.

Mr. Vansittart remarked as rather extraordinary, that the Bullion Committee had never examined into the practicability of the resumption of cash payments on the part of the Bank, though one of the members, a Bank Director (A. Baring), had affirmed that it was utterly impracticable, and that the Bank could not at present get 10,000%. worth of Bullion, even at 50 per cent. premium. To record the opinion that there was a depreciation, without applying a remedy, would occasion great alarm, and might, in its consequences, occasion a general bankruptcy. thought the Chancellor of the Exchequer had made too great a concession, in admitting that the resumption of cash payments might render the exchange more favourable: he doubted this much, while the tyranny practised on the Continent would prevent exports. The increase or decrease of the amount of Bank notes had not, in his opinion, any thing to do with the exchange: he still contended that Bank notes were in public estimation equivalent to the coin: distinguishing between depreciation from excess and that from discredit; the object of one of his resolutions was to negative the idea of depreciation from discredit. In 1797, a meeting of our principal Merchants and moneyed men -had been held, for the purpose of supporting the credit of our Paper currency, by declaring that the paper of the Bank of England was equivalent to coin. He would recommend a similar declaration from the same description of persons at present, as likely to be extremely bene-·ficial. After urging many arguments, the Hon. Gentleman concluded with submitting his propositions.

Messrs. Magens, Pattison, H. Thornson, Morris, and Perceval, shortly spoke.

Mr. Canning suggested as a remedy for the evil under discussion, that (which 'the Bank would be bound to, in the event of peace to-morrow, by their original stipulation) of resuming cash payments in six months after; and proposed, 'that, as their profits had incidentally increased, all such as were beyond a certain and limited degree should go ·to the establishment of a fund towards the resumption of cash payments. He concluded by moving as an Amendment, that the Chairman do now leave the chair, which was negatived by 83 to 42.

House of Lords, May 14. The Reyal Assent was declared by · Commission to the Irish Loan, Slave Trade Felony, Irish Ships, Scots Creditors, Commercial Docks, and several local and private Bills; in all 61.

In the Commons the same day, a message from the Lords stated, that their Lordships had passed a Bill for better preventing vexatious arrests, by raising the sum for which persons may be held to bail in mesne process.

Mr. Dundas obtained leave to bring in a Bill for increasing the salary of the President of the Board of Controll, and augmenting the allowances to the Clerk by 1500% a year.

Mr. Secretary Ryder moved for leave to bring in a Bill for interchanging the English and Irish Militias; and stated the following as the outline of the plan: that not more than one-third of either Militia should be sent from one country to the other at one time; that the English Militia should not continue in Ireland more than two years, nor the Irish in England more than three years, at one time; that they should not afterwards be sent but in retation; and that in no event should either be sent 🌶 to the other country, but by an order from His Majesty. He also proposed, that they should have the power of volunteering, and that the Commanders should inform each regiment that their services were purely voluntary.

After some discussion, during which the necessity of some legislative provision to secure to the Irish soldiers the free / exercise of their religion was insisted on, leave was granted to bring in the Bill.

The Resolutions on the Bullion, Report being brought up, and the 2d reading moved, another discussion ensued.

Mr. Johnstone argued ably and ingeniously in support of the Report.

Mr. Fuller said, if the guines was worth 24s. why not raise it to that sum? and then all the hoarding and hiding would be done away.

Messrs. C. Adams, Thompson, Merryatt, Simeon, and W. Smith severally spoke. The latter stated, in support of the depreciation, that a pipe of wine, for which 110% was demanded in the ordinary currency, had been sold: for 90 guineas.

The first Resolution was then moved: to which Mr. Horner moved the whole of his former resolutions, thrown into one, as an Amendment.

After some conversation, the first two Resolutions of Mr. Vanittart were agreed to, and the farther consideration of the question adjourned.

May 15.

In a Committee of Supply, the following sums were voted: --- Westmins-his having, on the 1st inst. captured La Creole French Privateer, of 14 guns and 115 men, on her first cruize from Bourdeaux.

Admiralty-office, May 14. Letter transmitted by Sir C Cotton, Bart. Com-mander in Chief of his Majesty's ships and vessels in the Mediterranean

Ajax off Elba, March 31. In pursuance of the Instructions I had the honour to receive from you the 26th inst for intercepting the frigates which had escaped from Toulon to the Eastward, I lost not a moment in pushing through the straits of Boiofacio, directing the Unite at the same time to go round by Cape Corse. On my rejoining her last night off this Island, I was informed she had been enased during the day by the Enemy's frightes, and that they were working through the Plambino passage. All stil was immediately made in that direction, and at dawn this morning, they were discovered (namely the Emily and the Adrian of 40 guns each, and the Dromedaire of 20) a little to windward. From the short distance they were from the land, I regret we could only succeeded in cutting off the Dromedaire, the rear-ship; the other two was constructed by the French Government for the express purpose of carrying Her cargo consists of 15,000 shot and shells of different sizes, and 90 tons of gunpowder. She was commande t by a Licut, de Vaisseau, and her complement 150 men. From the report of the prisoners it appears they were bound R. W. OTWAY. to Corfu.

[Another Letter, transmitted by Sir C. Cotton, from Capt. Taibot, of the Victorious, gives an account of the destruction, on the 30th January, on the coast of Albania, of the Leoben Italian schooner of war, of 10 guns and 60 men, bound from Venice to Corfu, with ordnance stores.]

Letter transmitted by Sir R. Calder, Commander in Chief at Plymouth: Scytla brig, within Les Tringes Rocks, off Morlaux, May 8.

Sin, I have the pleasure to inform you, being close in with the Isle of Bas, this morning at half-past nine o'clock observed a man of war brig, with five small sail under convoy, to leeward, which I immediately gave chace to: half-past eleven came up and commenced firing at her and convoy; 45 minutes past eleven, finding we were within Les Triagos and Pontgalo Rocks, and she was determined if possible to run on shere, obliged me to lay the Scylla on board her, then going eight knots; in two minutes afterwards we got possession, but not before her First Captain, one midshipman, the boatswain, and three seamen were killed, one midshipman, and five seamen dangerously, and five seamen slightly wounded. She proves to be the French national brig La Cannoniere, of 10 four-pounders, one 24pound earronade, and four swivels, with a complement of 77 men, commanded by Monsieur Jean Joseph Benoit Schilds. Enseigne de Vaisseau, out only two hours from Perros, bound to Brest. think if we had been off the land she would not have fired a shot at us; but with the hope of running her on shore, and being close to it, they fought hard, and I am sorry to say the Scylla had two seamen killed, and one midshipman (Mr. T. Liver) and one marine slightly wounded. I was only enabled to get possession of one of her convoy, a sloop laden with wheat, the other four having gone within the rocks, and run on shore; indeed I was glad, from the shattered state of La Cannoniere, and the wind and sea increasing, to get out from where I was with what I had. In this little affair I have great satisfaction to mention that Mr. Speck, First Lieutenant, and all the Officers and crew I have the honour to command, did all they could. I should he proud to have an opportunity where they could shew themselves to a greater advantage. A. ATCHISON.

Downing-street, May 18. A Dispatch, of which the following is an Extract, was on the 15th inst. received at Lord Liverpool's Office, addressed to his Lordship by Lieut.-gen.-Visc. Wellington, dated Villa Formosa, May 1.

Having received intelligence from Lieut.-gen. Sir B. Spencer on the 27th April, two days after I addressed your Lordship last, that the Enemy were Increasing their force on the Agueda, I arrived here on the 28th. The Enemy had on the 23d attacked our picquets on the Azava, but were repulsed. Capts. Dolibs and Campbell, of the 52d regiment, and Lieut. Ecles, of the 95th regiment, distinguished themselves upon this occasion, in which the Allied troops, defended their posts against very superior numbers of the Enemy. One Lieutenant (Lieut. Pritchard) and 17 soldiers were wounded. The Enemyrepeated their attack upon our picquets on the Azava on the 27th, and were again repulsed; and this day again they reconnoitred the banks of this river with eight squadrons of cavalry and three battalions of infantry. They did not make any attempt to pass the river, nor did they attack the picquets upon the bridge of Marialva. They have collected a very large force at Ciudad Rodrigo. Marshal Massena and the head-quarters of the army are at that place.—The River Agueda is not yet fordable for infantry, but is for cavalry.—Sir W. Beresford has taken up the position which I had proposed for him in Estremadura; but I have not yet heard that he had re-established the bridge at Juramenha.

Admiralty-Office, May 18. Sir Charles Cotton, Bart. Commander in Chief of his Majesty's ships and vessels in the Mediterranean, transmits the following account of a most brilliant affair, from Capt. Hoste:

Amphion, off the Isle of Lissa, March 14.

Sir, It is with much pleasure I have to acquaint you, that after an action of six hours, we have completely defeated the combined French and Italian squadrons, consisting of five frigates, one corretter one brig, two schooners, one gun-beat; and one xebec; the force opposed to the was his Majesty's ship Amphion, Cerba rus, Active, and Volage. On the morning of the 13th, the Active made the signal for a strange fleet to windward, and daylight discovered to us the Enemy's squadron lying-to off the North point of the Island of Lissa; the wind at that time was from the North-west, a fine breeze. The Eenmy having formed in two divisions, instantly bore down to attack us under all possible sail. The British live, led by the Amphion, was formed by nal in the closest order on the starboald tack to receive them. At nine A. II. the action commenced by our firing on the headmost ships as they came within range; the intention of the Enemy as peared to be to break our line in two places, the starboard division, led by the French Commodore, bearing upon the Amphion and Active, and the inchosed division on the Cerberus and Volage; in this attempt, he failed (though almost sboard of us) by the well-directed fire and compact order of our line. He then endeavoured to round the van ship, to esgage to leeward, and thereby place between two fires, but was so warmly teceived in the attempt, and rendered so totally unmanageable, that in the act of wearing, he went on shore on the rocks of Lissa in the greatest possible confusion. The line was then wore to renew the action, the Amphion not half a cablelength from the shore; the remainder of the Enemy's starboard division passing under our stern, and engaging us at iceward, whilst the larboard division tacked, and remained to windward, engaging the Cerberus, Volage, and Active. In this . eitnetion toomy with the Bellona and taking her, to losing time alongside the Flora. which I already considered belonging I call on the Officers of my own squadrou, as well as those of the Enemy to withess my assertion. The correspondence I have had on this subject with the I rench Captain of the Dana? from their Commundores, and which I ureloscheren (th. 18 convincing), and even their cosa Officers prisoners here acknowledge the fact. Indeed I might have sur k ner, and so might the Active; but, as the colours were down, and all firing from her had long ceased, both Capt. Gordon and myself considered her as our own the delay of getting a boat on board the Bellona, and the anxious pursuit of Capt. Gordon after the heaten Enemy, enabled him to steal off, till too late for our shattered ships to come up with him, his rigging and sails apparently not much injured; but by the laws of war I shall ever maintain be belongs to us. The Enemy's squadron, as per inclosed return, was commanded by Mons. Dubourdieu, Capitaine de Varsseau, and Member of the Legion of Honour, who is killed. In justice to a brave man I must say, he set a noble example of inguns and 350 men; escaped.—Corona, M Pasquilago, Captain, of 44 24-pounders and 350 men; taken.—Bellom, M. Dudon, Captain, of 32 guns and 224 men, taken.—Larolice, M. Baratavick, Capt. of 28 guns and 224 men; escaped. Principe de Augusta briz, Bologne, Captain, of 16 guns and 105 men; escaped.—Schooner, of 10 guns and 60 men; escaped.—Schooner, of 2 guns and 7 man, escaped.—Kebec, of 6 guns and 70 men, escaped.—Com Boat, of 2 guns and 35 men, escaped.—Troops embarked 500 —Total, 272 guns, 2655 men Total Officer Killed and wounded on board the Amphore Mr. Spearman, and shipman, killed and Messes, F. G. Farewell and T. E. Hoste, to delaption, wounded.—On board the Cerberus, Mr. Daver, midshipman, killed, and Lecutemant G. Crumpstou, with Mr. S. Goode, and shipman, wounded. The Active, Lieut. G. Haye, severely burnt, and Lieut. J. Meares (of Marines, wounded.—The Valage, Mr. J. George, midshipman, killed; and Lieut. W. S. Knapman, of Marines, wounded.—Total Officers and seamen, 50 killed and 150 wounded.

A letter from Capt. Hoste kere follows, addressed to Mons. Pendier, commandant of La Flora frigate, calling upon him to make restitution of that ship, she having struck to Capt. Hoste, who might have sunk her, had he not considered her as having surrendered.—The answer purports to be written from on board the Danaë frigate, Roads of Lessina, denying the above fact; but having neither a date nor signature. Capt. Hoste hereupon returns the letter, appeals to Mons. Peridier and the English officers for the truth of his assertions.

Another letter from Capt. Hoste, dated Lissa, March 15, states, the surrender of the remainder of the French Commodore's crew and troops, to the summons of Messrs. Lew and Kingston, two Midshipmen of the Active, who had been left in charge of prizes at that port, and who afterwards recaptured a Sicilian privateer of 14 guns, which had struck to a 1-gun Venetianschooner.—Capt. Hoste also mentions, that the Corona caught fire in the main-top shortly after her capture, but that the fire was, with great exertion, extinguished.

A Letter from Admiral Sir C. Cotton

incloses the following:

Cambrian, off Rosas, April 16.

Sir, I have great pleasure in sending to you, by the Blossom, the important intelligence of the surrender of Figueras to the spaniards, on the 10th inst. and that St. Philion and Palamos were taken possession of by the Cambrian and Volontaire on the 12th and 14th, the guns all embarked, and the batteries destroyed. I am now on my way to Rosas and Cadequis, and I have reason to hope the latter place, with Silva, will also shortly be ours.—The fall of Figueras has rouzed the Spaniards, who are arming in all directions, and Hostalrich and Gerona are at this moment garrisoned by Spanish troops. The only correct account I can learn is, that 400 Italians, with 200 French troops, were left to protect Figueras, and that the former, disgusted with the treatment they daily receive from the French, and being also half starved, opened the gates of the fortress to a body of Spanish troops (apprised of their intention), who rushed into the Castle and put every Frenchman to the sword. -At this moment about 2000 effective Spanish troops are in full possession of this important place; and General Sarsfield is on his way with more, as well as supplies of every kind. The French General D'Hilliers, who has the command in Catalonia, on hearing of the fall of Figueras, has abandoned all his holds in Spain, except Barcelona, and is collecting the whole of his force to attack it, as well as to prevent supplies from getting in; but I am told a quantity of provisions was concealed in the town, unknown to the French, which have been given up to the Spanish troops in the Castle, who are in the highest spirits possible. The Termagant continues to watch Barcelona, and I purpose remaining off bere with the Volontaire, ready for any thing that may offer, as, under all the existing circumstances, I think it likely Rosas may give up. I also beg to inform you, that a large settee, deeply laden with grain for Barcelona, from Port Vendee, was, the night before last, most handsomely cut out from under the Medes Islands and batteries by the boats of this ship, led on by Lieut. Connolly, without a man being hurt. I beg leave to offer you my congratulations; on the fail of Figueras, and the fair prospect it opens.

CHARLES BULLEN. lam, &c. P.S. Since writing the above, I spoke a small boat from Begar, which tells me the French General had made a rash attempt to recover Figueras two days since, and lost seven hundred men.

The Gazette contains two other Letters, one noticing the capture of two small Danish privateers off the coast of Scotland by the Fancy gun brig, Lieut. Sinclair; and of a French privateer of six guns and 45 men, with her prize, near Malaga, by the Entreprenante cutter, Lieut. Williams.]

Admiralty-office, May 21. Rear-Admiral Otway has transmitted to J. W. Croker, esq. a Letter from Capt. Pearce, of his Majesty's sloop Rifleman, giving an account of his having, on the 11th inst. captured the Danish cutter Alban (late his Majesty's cutter of that name). of 12 guns and 58 men, commanded by a Lieutenant of the Danish navy, out three days from Fahrsund, in Norway, without making any capture.

Downing street, May 25. The following Dispatches were this day received, addressed to the Earl of Liverpool by Lieut.-gen. Lord Viscount Web. lington, K.B.

Villa Formosa, May 8. My Lord, the Enemy's whole army, consisting of the 2d, 6th, and 8th corps, and all the cavalry which could be collected in Castile and Leon, including about 900 of the Imperial Guards, crossed the Agueda at Ciudad Rodigo on the 2d instant. The battalions of the 9th corps had been joined to the regiments to which they belonged in the other three corps, excepting a division, consisting of battalions belonging to regiments in the corps doing duty in Andalusia; which division

Duas Casas, at Fort Conception and Aidea D'Obispo. Brig-gen. Pack's brigade, with the Queen's regiment from the 6th division, kept the blockade of Almeida; and I had prevailed upon Don Juhan Sanchez to occupy Nave D'Aver with his corps of Spanish cavalry and infantry.-The light division were moved in the evening to join Gen Campbell, upon finding that the Enemy were in strength in that quarter; and they were brought back again to Fuentes de Honor on the morning of the 5th, when it was found that the 8th corps had joined the 6th on the Enemy's left. Shortly after the Enemy had formed on the ground on the right of the Duas Casas, on the afternoon of the 3d they attacked, with a large force, the village of Fuentes de Honor, which was defended in a most gallant manner by Lieut. col. Williams, of the 5th bat. 60th reg. in command of the light infantry battalions belonging to Major-gen. Picton's division, sui ported by the light infantry battalion in Major-gen. Nightingall's brigade, commanded by Maj Dick, of the 49d reg, and the light infantry battalion in Major-gen Howard's brigade, commanded by Major M'Donnell, GENT. MAG. June, 1811.

not's corps from Alameda to the left of the position occupied by the 6th corps, opposite to Fuentes de Honor. From the course of the reconnoissance of the 4th, I had unagined that the Enemy would endeavour to obtain possession of Tuentes de Honor, and of the ground occupied by the troops behind that village, by crossing the Duas Casas at Poya Velho, and in the evening I moved the 7th division, under Major-gen. Houstoun, to the right, in order, if possible, to protect that passage. On the morning of the 5th, the 8th corps appeared in two columns, with all the cavalry, on the opposite side of the valley of the Duas Casas to Poya Velho; and as the 6th and 9th corps also made a movement to the left, the light division, which had been brought back from the neighbourhood of Atameda, was sent with the cavalry under Sir Stapleton Cotton, to support Major-gen. Houstoun, whilst the 1st and 3d divisions made a movement to their right along the ridge between the Turon and Duas Casas rivers, corresponding to that of the 6th and 9th corps on the right of the Duas Casas. The 6th corps attacked Major-gen. Houstoun's advanced guard, consisting consisting of the 85th reg. under Major M'Intosh, and the 2d Portuguese Caçadores, under Lieut.-col. Nixon, and obliged them to retire; and they retired in good order, although with some loss. The 8th corps being thus established in Poya Velho, the Enemy's cavalry turned the right of the 7th division, between Poya Velho and Nave D'Aver, from which last place Don Julian Sanchez had been obliged to retire; and the cavalry charged. The charge of the advanced guard of the Enemy's cavalry was met by two or three squadrons of the different regiments of British dragoons, and the Enemy were driven back, and Col. La Motte, of the 13th Chasseurs, and some prisoners taken. The main body were checked, and obliged to retire by the fire of Major-gen. Houstoun's divisions; and I particularly observed the Chasseurs Britanniques under Lieut.col. Eustace, as behaving in the most steady manner; and Major-gen. Houstoun mentions in high terms the conduct of a detachment of the Duke of Brunswick's light infantry. Notwithstanding that this charge was repulsed, I was determined to concentrate our force towards the left, and to move the 7th and light divisions, and the cavalry from Poya Velho towards Fuentes de Honor, and the other two divisions. I had occupied Poya Velho and that neighbourhood, in hopes that I should be able to maintain the communication across the Coa by Sabugal, as well as provide for the blockade, which objects, it was now obvious, were incompatible with each other, and I therefore abandoned the least important, and placed the light division in reserve, in rear of the left of the 1st division, and the 7th division on some commanding ground beyond the Turon, which protected the right flank and rear of the 1st division, and covered our communication with the Coa, and prevented that of the Enemy with Almeida, by the roads between the Turon and that river. The movement of the troops on this occasion was well conducted, although under very critical circumstances, by Major-gen. Houstoun, Brig.-gen. Craufurd, and Lieut.-gen. Sir Stapleton Cotton. 7th division was covered in its passage of the Turon by the light division under Brig.-gen. Craufurd, and this last, in its march to join the 1st division, by the British cayalry. Our position thus extended on the high ground from the Turon to the Duas Casas. The 7th division, on the left of the Turon, covered the rear of the right; the 1st division, in two lines, were on the right; Col. Ashworth's brigade, in two lines, in the centre; and the 3d division, in two lines, on the left; the light division and British cavalry in reserve; and the village of Fuentes de Honor in front of. the left. Don Julian's infantry joined the 7th division in Freneda; and I sent him with his cavalry to endeavour to interrupt the Enemy's communication with Ciudad Rodrigo. The Enemy's efforts on the right part of our position, after it was occupied as I have above described, were confined to a cannonade, and to some charges with their cavalry upon the advanced posts. The picquets of the 1st division, under Lieut col. Hill, of the 3d reg. of Guards, repulsed one of these; but as they were falling back, they did not see the direction of another in sufficient time to form to oppose it, and Lieut.-col. Hill was taken prisoner, and many men wounded and some taken, before a detachment of the British cavalry could move up to their support. The 2d batt. 42d reg. under Lord Blantyre, also repulsed a charge of the cavalry difected against them. They likewise attempted to push a body of light infantry down the ravine of the Turon to the right of the 1st division; which were repulsed by the light infantry of the Guards, under Lieut.-col. Guise, aided by five companies of the 95th, under Capt. O'Ham. Major-gen. Nightingali was wounded by the course of the cannonade, but I hope not severely.

The Enemy's principal effort was throughout this day again directed against Fuentes de Honor; and notwithstanding that the whole of the 6th corps was at different periods of the day employed to attack this village, they could never gain more than a temporary picsession of it. It was defended by the 24th, 71st, and 79th Regiments, under the command of Col. Cameron; and these troops were supported by the light infantry battalions in the 3d division, commanded by Major Woodgate; the light infantry battalions in the 1st division, commanded by Major Dick, Major Macdonald, and Major Aly; the 6th Portuguese Caçadores, commanded by Maler Pinto; by the light companies in Colonel Champlemonde's Portuguese brigade under Col. Sutton; and those in Col. Andworth's Portuguese brigade under Lieut. Col. Pynn; and by the picquets of the 3d division, under the command of the Hon-Lieut.-Col. Trench. Lieut.-col. Cameron was severely wounded in the afternoon, and the command in the village devolved upon Lieut.-col. Cadogan. The troops in Fuentes de Honor were besides supported, when pressed by the Energy by the 74th regiment, under Major Russel Manners, of numbers in the Portuguese brigade of cavalry with this part of the army, in exchange for a British brigade sent into Estremadura with Marshal Sir W. Beresford, owing to the failure of the measures reported to have been adopted to supply the horses and men with food on the service. The result of a general action brought on by an attack upon the Enemy by us might, under these circumstances, have been doubtful, and if the Enemy had chosen to avoid it, or if they had met it, they would have taken advantage of the collection of our troops to fight this action, to throw relief into Almeids. From the great superiority of force to which we have been opposed upon this occasion, your Lordship will judge of the conduct of the Officers and troops. The actions were partial, but very severe; and our loss has been great: the Enemy's loss has also been great; and they left 400 killed in the village of Fuentes de Honor, and we have many prisoners. I particularly request your Lordship's attention to the conduct of Lieut.-col. Williams, Lieut.-col Cameron, and the Hon. Lieut.-col. Cadogan, and to that of Cel. Mackinnon, and Lieut.col Kelly of the 24th regiment, and of the several da, leaving Almeida to its fate. The second corps retired by the bridge of Barba del Puerco, and the ford of Val d'Espino on the Agueda. Our advanced posts are upon the Azava, and on the Lower Agueda; and the army will be to-morrow in the cantonments on the Duas Casas.

Officers Killed, Wounded, and Missing, in the affair of Fuentes de Honor, us the evening of the 3d May.

Killed—Licut. Cowsell, 1st batt. 71st foot, and Capt. Imlach, 1st batt. 79th foot.

Wounded—Capt. Krauckenberg, 1st K. G. Legion, slightly—2d Batt. 42d Foot, Capt. M'Donald, severely—1st Batt. 50th Foot, Lieut. Rudkin and Ensign Grant, slightly—5th Batt. 60th Foot, Lieut.-col. Williams, severely—Lieut. Duchastelette, slightly—1st Batt. 71st Foot, Capt. M'Intyre and Lieut. Fox, severely—Lieut. M'Craw, slightly—Ensign Kearne, dangerously—Adjutant Law, slightly—1st Batt. 79th Foot, Lieut. Calder, slightly—Ensign Brown, severely—1st Batt. 92d Foot, Lieut. Hill, severely—3d Batt. 95th Foot, Lieut. Uniacke, severely—6th Portuguese Caçadores, Capt.deBarros—Lieuts. de Moratto, Manuel Joaquin, and J. de

Sante

Sante Anno: Ensigns Ferura de Roxa, and Antonio Pinto; Adj. Bento de Magalhoems.

Total British Loss on the 3d. One Captain, 1 Lieutenant, 1 serjeant, 19 privates and 4 horses, killed; I Lieut.eol. 3 Captains, 7 Lieutenants, 3 Ensigns, 1 Staff, 10 serjeants, 1 drummer, 145 privates, and 6 horses, wounded; 21 privates and 1 horse, missing.

Total Portuguese Loss—1 Serjeant and 13 privates, killed; 1 Captain, 3 Lieuts. 2 Ensigns, 1 Staff, 1 serjeant, and 25 privates wounded; I serjeant and I private, missing.

Names of Officers Killed, Wounded, and Missing, May 5:

Killed.—Ist. Batt. 3d Guards, Ensign Cookson.—2d batt. 24th foot, Lt. Ireland.—1st batt. 71st foot, Lieuts. Houstoun and Graham.—74th foot, Lt. John-· stone.—2d batt. 83d foot, Lt. Ferris.— 85th foot, Lt. Holmes.—1st batt. 88th foot, Capt. Irwin.—3d batt. 95th foot, Lt. Westby.

Wounded.-Major-Gen. Nightingall, slightly.—10th Hussars, Lieut. Fitzelarence, Aid-du-Camp to Major-General Stewart, slightly.—British Foot Artillery, Capt. G. Thompson, Lieuts. Martin and Woolcombe, slightly.—1st Royal Drag. Lieut. Forster, slightly.—14th Lt. Drag. Cant Knipe, severely; Capt. Mills, Lieuts. Gwynne and Badcock, Cornet Ellis, slightly.—16th Lt. Drag. Lieut. Weyland, severely; Lieut. Blake, ditto, since dead.—1st Hussars, King's German Legion, Major Meyer, slightly; Capt. Gruben, Lieut. Krauckenberg, severely.—1st batt. Coldstream Guards, Capt. Harvey, slightly.—1st batt. 3d Guards, Capt. Clitherow, slightly.—5th batt. 60th foot, Maj. Woodgate, Lt. Wynne, slightly.— 1st. Latt. 71st foot, Ens. Cox, slightly, Ens. Vandeleur, severely; Adjut. Law, slightly.—74th foot, Captain M'Queen, severely; Capt. Moore, Adjut. White, slightly.—1st batt. 79th foot, Lieut.-Col. Cameron [since dead]; Capt. Fraser, slightly; Capt. Davidson, severely, since dead; Lieut. Sinclair, slightly; Lieutenants A. Cameron, Webb, and Robinson, severely; Licut. A. Fraser, Ens. W. Cameron, slightly.—2d. batt. 83d foot, Lieut. Vericker, severely; 85th foot, Capt. Nixon, slightly; Lieut. Brock, dangerously; Lieut. Hogg, severely;— 1st batt. 88th foot, Lieut. M'Alpine, elightly; Ens. Hogan, severely.—1st batt. 92d foot, Major Grant, severely, left leg amputated; Licut. M'Nab, severely, right arm amputated.—Chassours Britanniques, Capts. Freuler and Tournefort, slightly; Lieutenant Blemer, slightly; Ens. Proto, severely.—1st line hatt. King's German Legion, Major Beck, slightly.—2d line batt. K. G. Legion, Captains Muller and Decken, severely. -7th line batt. K. G. Legion, Ens. Bachelle, severely.—Brunswick Oels, Lleut. Zollikofer, slightly.—21st Part. Regt. Ensign Francisco de Paula, slightly.— 3d Cacadores, Lieut. Joao de Brennique, slightly.—6th ditto, Lieut. Col. Sebastio Pinto, Lieur. Joze Vas, Ensigns Jose Perreira and Francisco Peixoto, alightly: Ensign Perreira, severely, since dead.

Missing.—16th Lt. drag. Capt. Belli. — Ist batt. Coldstream guards, Eosign Stothard.—1st batt. 3d guards, Lieut. Col. Hill.—2d batt. 24th fuot, Capt. Andrews.—1st batt. 50th foot, Lieut. Ryan. -lst batt. 71st foot, Lieuts. Roy and Baldwin.

Total British Loss on the 5th.—1 Capt. 7 Lieuts. l Ensign, 8 serjeants, 2 drummers, 129 rank and file, 45 horses, killed; 2 General Staff, 1 Licutement, Col. 4 Majors, 15 Capts. 31 Lieuts. 7 Cornets or Ensigns, 2 Staff, 50 serjeants, 4 drummers, 766 rank and file, 95 horses, wounded; 1 Lieut.-Col. 2 Capts. 3 Lieuts. 1 Ensign, 8 serjeants, 2 drummers, 226 rank and file, 5 horses, missing.

Portuguese Loss. — 5 Serieants, drummer, 44 rank and file, killed; 1 Lieut.-Col. 2 Lieuts. 4 Cornets or Ensigns, 11 serjeants, 140 rank and file. wounded; I serjeant, 7 drummers, 43 rank and file, missing.

General Total—1 Capt. 7 Lieuts. 1 Ensign, 13 scrjeants, 3 drummers, 173: rank and file, and 45 horses, killed; 2 General Staff, 2 Lieut.-Cols. 4 Majors. 15 Capts. 23 Lieuts. 11 Cornets or Ensigns, 2 Staff, 61 Serjeants, 4 drummers, 906 rank and file, and 95 horses, wounded; 1 Lieut.-Col. 2 Capts. 3 Lieuts. l Ensign, 9 serjeants, 9 drummers, 269 rank and file, and 5 horses, missing.

(Signed) CHARLES STEWART. Major-General and Adjutant-General.

May 28.—This Gazette contains an' Extract of a Dispatch from Lord Wellington, dated Villa Formosa, May 15. It appears that the garrison of Almeida: under Gen. Brennier, abandoned that place on the night of the 10th, and marched with great rapidity by unfre-. quented paths to the bridge over the Agueda, at Barba del Puerco. By the silence and close order of the march. they eluded the vigilance of our picquets: but Brig.-Gen. Pack, with a few men. hung upon their march, and impeded:, their progress; so that Major-General Campbell reached Barba del Puerco with · part of the 4th and 86th regiments in time to cause the Enemy a very heavy

Those of Titian, Dante, Tasso, and Correggio, are among the number.

The young King of Rome has been vaccinated. A palace is to be erected for his residence at Paris

A quarto Latin Bible, which had once belonged to the unfortunate Mary Queen of Scots, was lately advertised for sale at Paris. her name was written at length upon the title-page, besides the cyphers M. S. and two lines of poetry. The same frontispiece likewise contained the signature of the infamous Besme, who in 1572 assassinated Admiral Colligny. There are two lines in his hand-writing, where he prays, in reference to the Bible, that God will give him "grace to profit thereby."

The departments of Agin and the Upper Marne in France were, at the beginning of last month, visited by a dreadful haif-storm, which killed many persons as well as cattle, destroyed the vines, and did much mischief besides. Many of the haif-stones were five inches long, and two inches in drameter, and weighed six ounces. The storm was succeeded by a frost, which lasted two days. Paris, June 8. Their Majesties ar-

Parts, June 8. Their Majesties arrived at the Thuillenes this evening, as well as the King of Rome.

Emperor, the Empress; Princess Julie, Queen of Spain; Queen Hortense; Princess Pauline, Duchess of Guastalia; the Prince of Neufebatel, Vice-Constable; Prince of Benevento, Vice-Grand Elector.

SPEECH OF BUONAPARTE TO THE LEGISLATIVE BODY.

Paris, June 16 .- This day the Emperor proceeded from the Thuilleries, in great state, to the Palace of the Legislative Body. Discharges of artillery announced his departure from the Thuillenes, and his arrival at the Palace of the Legislative Body. The Empress, Queen Hortense, Princess Pauline, the Grand Duke of Wortzburgh, and the Grand Duke of Frankfort, were in one Tribune; the Corps Diplomatique in another Tribune; the Bishops convoked for the Council, and the Mayors and Deputies of the good Cities, summoned to be present at the Baptism of the King of Rome, were on benches. His Majesty placed himself on his throne. The King of Westphalia, the Princes Grand Dignitaries, Grand Eagles of the Legion of Honour, occupied their accustomed places about his Majesty, Prince Jerome Napoleon on his right, After the new members had been presented sented and taken the oaths, the Emperor made the following speech:

"Gentlemen Deputies of Departments to the Legislative Body,

"The Peace concluded with the Emperor of Austria has been since cemented by the happy alliance I have contracted: the birth of the King of Rome has fulfilled my wishes, and satisfies my people with respect to the future.—The affairs of religion have been too often mixed, and sacrificed to the interests of a state of the third order. If half Europe has separated from the Church of Rome, we may attribute it specially to the contradiction which has never ceased to exist between the truths and the principles of religion which belong to the whole universe, and the pretensions and interests which regarded only a very small corner of Italy. I have put an end to this scandal for ever. I have united Rome to the empire—I have given Palaces to the Popes at Rome and at Paris; if they have at heart the interests of religion, they will often sojourn in the centre of the affairs of Christianity—it was thus that 5t. Peter preferred Rome to an abode even in the Holy Land.—Holland has been united to the empire; she is but an emanation of it—without her the Empire would not be complete. "The principles adopted by the English Government not to recognise the neutrality of any flag, have obliged me to possess myself of the Mouths of the Ems, the Weser, and the Elbe, and have rendered an interior communication with the Baltic indispensable to me. It is not my territory that I wished to increase, but my maritime means.— America is making efforts to cause the freedom of her flag to be recognised— I will second her. I have nothing but praises to give to the Sovereigns of the Confederation of the Rhine.—The union of the Valais has been foreseen ever since the Act of Mediation, and considered as necessary to conciliate the interests of Switzerland with the interests of France and Italy.—The English bring all the passions into play. One time they suppose France to have all the designs that could alarm other powers, designs which she could have put in execution if they had entered into her po-At another time they make an appeal to the pride of nations, in order to excite their jealousy. They lay hold of all circumstances which arise out of the unexpected events of the times in which we are.—It is war over every part of the Continent that can alone ensure their prosperity. I wish for nothing that is not in the treaties I have concluded. I will never meetines the blood of my people to interests that are not immediately the interests of my empire. I flatter myself that the paste of the Continent will not be disturbed.

"The King of Spain is come to assist at this last solemnity. I have given him all that was necessary and proper to unite the interests and hearts of the different people of his provinces. Since 1809, the greater part of the strong places in Spain have been taken after memorable sieges. The insurgents have been heat in a great number of witched battles. England has felt that this war was approaching its termination, and that intrigues and gold were no longer sufficient to nourish it. She found here self, therefore, obliged to change the nature of it; and from an auxiliary the is become a principal. All she has of troops of the line have been sent into the Peninsula. England, Scotland, and Ireland are drained. English blood has at length flowed in torrents, in several actions glorious to the French arms This conflict against Carthage, will seemed as if it would be decided in field of battle on the ocean, or beyond the seas, will henceforth be decided in the plains of Spain! When England shall be exhausted, when she shall at light have felt the evils which for twenty years she has with so much exuely poured upon the Continent, when half her families shall be in mourning, the shall a peal of thunder put an end l the affair of the Peninsula, the destinici of her armies, and avenge Europe a Asia by finishing this second Punic was Gentlemen Deputies of Department to the Legislative Body.

"I have ordered my Minister to by before you the accounts of 1809 at 1810. It is the object for which I had called you together. You will see them the prosperous state of my financia Though I have placed, within the months, 100 millions extraordinary the disposal of my Ministers of War, the defray the expences of new armaments which then appeared necessary, I find myself in the fortunate situation of having any new taxes to impose the my people — I shall not increase any tax—I have no want of any augmentation in the imposts."—The sitting being terminated, his Majesty rose and retire amidst acclamations.

The Monitour of the 18th contains in long article, under the head of Now from the Army of Spain. It relates the tirely to the proceedings of Such against the fort of Oliva before Turngona. The operations began on the second of May, and concluded on the second approaching shock. I most anxiously intreat your Majesty to conrede to me the assistance I solicit, and I can in no way answer for ultimate success, unless I obtain, in addition to my present strength, 21,000 men, of which 1000 must be artillery."

After the battle of Almeida, Lord Wellington rode to Elvis, but arrived the morning after the affor at Budajos. His wish was so great to be present, that he killed three horses in the journe; , which he performed in three days. On his arrival at a river, he found a bridge, which he had ordered to be constructed, not ready, and he swam h shorse across, the stream was very rapid, and the two dragoons who followed him drowned. His Lordship was saved by the superior strength of his horse.

A most splendid but sanguinary battle was fought at Aibuera on the 16th of May between the Allies under Marshal Beresford and the French under Soult. The details of this gallant affair bave been published in an Extraordinary Gazette, which we shall insert in our Supplement, accompanied by many interesting particulars selected from private accounts.

A dispatch in one of the Spanish pa-

An Anholt Mail has brought letters from Petersburgh to the 2d inst. They state, with much confidence, that all matters in dispute between Russia and France have been finally adjusted; and that Buonaparte has conceded a point about which Russia was extremely solicatous, namely, permission to import a certain quantity of British merchandize. -The letters from Berlin and Memel seem to corroborate the above; and add, that a number of Officers belonging to the Prussian army had received leave of absence.—The French stationed in the several Baltic ports, had orders to prevent the exportation of Prussian produce, unt I the whole of the contributions which had been imposed on that unfortunate country were paid. At Archangel, 40 vessels laden with Russian produce, were recently lost in a storm,

Provisions are extremely scarce in Denmark—on the 26th ult.fresh beef sold at Elsineur at 2s sterling per lb

Letters from the Cattegat of the 18th inst. mention, expressly, that the Swedish Government, awed by the decision and firmness of the British Admiral, had offered to restore the detained vessels and cargoes at Carlsham, but upon conditions ditions to which Sir J. Saumarez did not think himself warranted in acceding. The negotiation was, however, still continued, and messengers had been dispatched to Stockholm for fresh instructions.—A postscript to one of the letters adds, that there was no doubt that the demands of the Admiral would ultimately be complied with.

RUSSIA.

Buonaparte is said to have invited the Emperor Alexander to another conference at Erfurth, and held out hopes to him of an accession of territory, with the title of King of Poland.

Gen. Count Lauriston has frequent interviews with the Emperor, and has appeared once in public with him. It is said, that these interviews have related principally to the restoration of his Royal Highness the Duke of Oldenburgh, who returned some days since from Twer: he is expected shortly to set out for Germany.

The war against Turkey will be prosecuted with great vigour.

AMERICA.

The New York Evening Post of the 25th ult. contains the particulars of an unpleasant rencontre which took place in the American seas. It appears, that complaints having been made that American seamen had been impressed on board British vessels, the United States frigate the President, Commodore Rogers, put to sea to obtain the release of these men, whether by force or solicitation is not clearly stated. What follows we shall give in the words of the American, only premising, that before a proper judgment can be formed of the affair, Capt. Bingham's dispatches must be received from Halifax.

"Particulars of the engagement between the United States frigate President, Commodore Rogers, and the British sloop of war Little Belt, Capt. Bingham:—On the night of the 16th inst. about nine o'clock, the frigate fell in with the sloop of war about 20 miles N. E. of Cape Henry; and when within pistol shot of her, Commodore Rogers hailed her. No answer was given. Commodore Nogers hailed her a second time; and in the act of hailing, a shot was fired from the sloop of war into the frigate, which struck her main-mast. The frigate immediately fired a shot into the sloop of war—she then poured a broadside into the frigate. Here the action commenced, and continued about 15 minu'es, when the sloop of war ceased firing. The frigate remained near her all night. The next morning Commodore Rogers sent an Officer on board to offer any assistance they might require; and that had occurred the preceding evening. The sloop of war proved to be the Little Belt, Capt. Bingham, who apologised, and gave as a reason for firing into the frigate, that he supposed her to be a Frenchman; and politely declined any assistance, as he believed he would be able to reach a port in safety. The Little Belt lost in killed and wounded 20 men, was very much injured, having had nearly all her masts and spars shot away, besides several shots in her hull."

This sloop of war is a Danish built vessel, and was taken at Copenhagen. In Steel's List she is rated an 18-gun sloop, and carries 32-pound carronades.

COUNTRY NEWS.

May 27. The greatest flood and storm, in the memory of the inhabitants, were experienced in several parts of Shrepshire. Nine persons perished at Pontesford, and three at Minsterley. Upwards of 3,000 acres were covered by the deluge, and in some places, the course of the Severn was actually changed.

June 2. The effects of the lightning were severely felt at Burkam last week. At a house belonging to Mr. Swift, the chimney was first of all attacked and completely levelled to the ground, after which it made its way to a party of five who were eating their supper, and laid them all senseless on the floor. An old man of 70 was dreadfully burnt from head to foot, so as even now to render his recovery uncertain; his clothes and linen were singed on one side, as if burnt by the fire, and the nails of his boot were partially melted.

In the late storm, the lightning struck one of the pinnacles of Ashford Churchsteeple, and damaged it so much, that it, has been deemed necessary to rebuild it.

June 3. The woollen factory belonging to Col. Moore, of Brackwell, near Hell fax, was burnt to the ground, and all the valuable machinery destroyed.

June 7. A few days ago three men, who had landed on a shoal at the Muscle-Scalp, near Boston, were surrounded by the tide. One was drowned; the other two were rescued by a boat.

June 8. A disturbance took place last week among the French Prisoners at Chatham, on account of their being put to two-thirds allowance, to make up the expence of their cutting the ship to effect their escape, when three were killed, and eight wounded,

About four in the morning a rising of the tide, in the shape of what is called a boar, happened at Phymouth. It rees again at six, seven, and nine o'clock, and then was quiet. Those who saw it of worth Carl, Kent, was fred by the lightning, and burnt ground. Two herses were got out stable, after being severely burnt.

Grand Review on Wimbledon on attracted thousands from the polis* and the neighbouring Coun-About ten, most of the troops had : in half an bour after, the genewas ordered to be formed by deto the left. Then was seen one finest's slits possible the extent heath, the beauty of the day, the s of the different regiments, the less of their discipline, the exacttheir mangeuvess, the assembled reaching from one end of the m to the other, all made the specach a one as can scarcely be de-. in adequate terms. The whole troops were up ler the immediate and of the Duke of Cambridge as ander of the Home District. They rawn up in two lines of at least le and a half in extent. The right 2NT. MAG. June, 1911 right of the second to the left, the music playing as he passed; the Commander-in-chief rode on his left hand. After passing from one end to the other of those extensive lines, his Reyal Highness took his stand considerably to the right of the centre.—A fourth cannon was then fired as a signal that the whole of the troops should load and shoulder. —At the fifth cannon a feu de joie was fired, beginning by the Royal Artillery on the right, passing along the ranks of the first line by files, to the left of the Hon. Artillery Company, taken up by the left of the 2d line, and proceeding to the right of it; each corps. after firing, loaded, and stood shouldered. -At the sixth cannon, the same firing and loading was repeated, -At the sever th cannon, the same firing repeated .- At the eighth cannon, three English cheers were given, hats and hands waving in the air, drums beating, and music playing "God save the King. -At the math cannon, the whole of the two extensive lines marched by his Royal Highness in order of review, offeeers saluting, the troops with their eyes finted find 40 him, and the colours of each regiment dropping as they passed. The Ruince Regart received each corps with marked attention. He saluted the offcers by putting his hand to his hat; and as the colours of each corps passed, he remained uncovered, as did also the Gemmander in Chief. As the regiments essed the Prince, they filed off in the pessed the Prince, they may not an ex-best order possible to the different reads leading from the common; and every part of the conduct of the troops did essent to the officers by whom they were commanded. The review was over be-fore five o'clock. The day was remarkably fine, and the spectators were nomerous heyond all former example. It was supposed, that, including the troops (about 20,000) there were at least 200,000 persons on the ground. Every post-chaise, glass-coach, gig, buggy, and taxed-cart, had been engaged for many days; even a hackney-coach was not to be had except at a most exorbitant price. Military telegraphs were planted on the ground for conveying the orders from might to left. General Officers were a new uniform hat, with broad gold lace and ostrich feathers, with a very con-spicuous button and loop. The hat resembled that formerly worn by Drum Majors. The Commander in Chief, at the command of the Prince Regent, m, in general orders, returned thanks the officers of the Yeomanry and Vo-Santeer Corps, for the discipline and Ane appearance of their men.

11

The Meeting of the Friends to Parliamentary Reform took place at the Free-mesons Tavern. Only those were admitted who had dinner-tickets. The execting was respectable, but not numegent, not exceeding 130 persons. Sir J. Throckmorton was called to the chair: and Mr. Trevanion (of Cornwall) moved the first Resolution, and Mr. Blount (of Staffordshire) the second, both of which went to declare the representation of the prople inadequate, that corruption ex-isted both in Parliament and State; that a dangerous oligarchy (the borough proprietors) usurped the legislation and the public purse, and lorded it over the King and People; and that it was necessary for the Nation to declare its opinion on this subject.

Friday, June 14,

The Prince Regent reviewed, on Wimbledon Common, about 3000 cavalry, consisting of the Life Guards, Dragoon Guards, Queen's Bays, and the Flying Artillery. The four regiments charged in succession, in a style which could not be excelled; and after a variety of savalry manouvres, principally under the Airection of the Duke of York, the whole fountain, beautifully constructed at the head of the table. Its banks were oc-vered with green moss and aquatic flowers; gold and silver fish swam and sported through the bubbling current, pich produced a pleasing murmur where If fell, and formed a cascade at the out-Jet. At the head of the table, above the fountain, sat his Royal Highness the Prince Regent, on a plain mahogany chair, with a leather back. The most particular friends of the Prince were arranged on each side. They were attended by sixty Serviteurs; seven waited on the Prince, besides six of the King's, and six of the Queen's footmen, in their state liveries, with one man in a com-plete suit of antient armour. At the back of the Prince's seat appeared Aureola tables, covered with crimson drapery, constructed to exhibit with the greatest effect a profusion of the most exquisitely wrought silver-gilt plate, consisting of fountains, tripods, epergnes, dishes, and other ornaments. Above the whole of this superb display appeared a Royal crown, and his Majesty's cypher, G. R.

gold lace: the others wore state liveries. The assistants out of livery were dressed uniformly in black suits with white vests. The company did not separate till six in the morning. His Royal Bighness was every where, and divided his attentions with the most polished address. The company comprised all the Members of Administration, the Foreign Ambassadors, the principal Nobility and Gentry in town, the most distinguished Military and Naval Officers, the Lord and Lady Mayoress and the principal Aldermen and Magistrates.—'I be Gentlemen wore court dresses, and military and naval uniforms —The Ladies wore all new dresses of English manufacture, principally white satins, silks, lace, crape, and muslins, ornamented with silver: head-dress, ostrich feathers and diamends,-For the gratification of the publick at large, the magnificent preparations for the Fête were permitted by the Prince Regent to remain; and many thousands were delighted by the sight; which, however, we are sorry to say, did not close without some serious accidents.

SIR FRANCIS BURDETT versus COLMAN.

Although want of room prevents our giving a full report of this interesting trial, we cannot resist laying before our readers the very excellent Charge of Lord Ellenborough to the Jury.

Lord Ellenborough to the Jury. His Lordship said, that it was most becoming and honourable to the Bar, that advocates should be always found there, bold and firm in supporting the cause of Justice. It was also fortunate that they should be found, as the Learned Counsel who had just replied, respectful and obedient to the decorum of the Court, and to those who sat to administer justice there. The question now for the Jury was of the narrowest compass possible; and it was merely, whether in executing the warrant under which Sir Francis Burdett was apprehended, the Serjeant at Arms had used more violence than was necessary. The right of the Serjeant to seize Sir Francis Burdett by the warrant was admitted by his pleading. The use of the Military was the ground of the question; and the verdict of the dury must be directed to the consideration of its necessity, and the degree of violence used. The use of the Military, on this occasion, was two-fold—first, for arresting Sir Francis Burdett; and secondly, for escorting him to the Tower. Those were, if the phrase might be allowed, consecutive operations. was no doubt started of the necessity of the Military for an escort. The conveyance to the Tower would have been absolutely impracticable without an escort. The whole hung on the use of the Military in the house. There was no longer any question as to the right of entering. And what was the extent of the violence there? The soldiers, as was given in evidence, stayed below, and offered no injury, no insult, no disturbance to the Thus far went the evidence of Mr. Jones Burdett. Not but that violence might have been justifiable, not but that they might have used the means in their power to any length that was required for the actual execution of their duty. The execution of the warrant was their duty, and their single duty. The wit of man could not conceive a more gentle mode than that in which the Defendant commenced the execution of his share of the duty. If Mr. Colman were at all blameable, it was not for any defect of mildness in the conduct of the affair. If another person, not accustomed to the high and gentleman-like feelings of Mr. Colman, had been entrusted with the warrant, it would have been immediately put in execution; those four hours would not have been allowed to intervene between its issue and Six Francis Burdett's incarceration. If a common bailiff or peace-officer had been ordered on the service, he would not have exhibited any of that (as it might be termed) mischievous gentleness of Mr. Colman -- he would have done his duty at once. But was it possible to conceive any thing containing less of irritation, or insult, or violence, than the first communication of his business to Sir Francis Burects? Lord Ellenborough here read Mr. Colman's letter announcing the warrant. He then read Sir Francis Burdett's answer, and observed on the words " that he would be at home to receive him," that the natural construction was, that he would submit to the wazzant, though the words were liable to the other construction which had been put upon them. Sir Francis Burdett's letter to the Speaker stated, that " he must submit to me perior power;" and the Learned Countel argued ingeniously, that by this superior force was merely meant the dignity of the House. But, when those words were ecupled with the chaining of the dust and the order not to admit, any person; the meaning of the words were reduced f to mere rude force. When the state of the Metropolis at the sime, was consid dered—the attack on the Hotel-sthest tacks on the bouses in St. Jarage's square -how would Mr. Colman have been en cusable, if he had not brought that over awing force, which put an end to the idea of resistance all at once; There was no charge on the Scripent in the 19 conveyance to the Tower. Though me evidence on the subject had come inmally before the Court, it was admitted on all hands, that in the coach which conveyed Sir Francis Bundett there was no offer of insult or jest, dr any other unbecoming acts of ill-treatment, which might be supposed to irritate a pense under his peculiar circumstantes. Then was no excess of violence in all this. . If the house there were 50 or 60 sellies drawn up in the hall, who believed w spectfully, and formed a passage for Me Francis Burdett to the carriage Last Ellenborough here told the Jury, that he thought it unnecessary to enter into the detail of the evidence, which they had M largely heard; but that, if any one them wished it, he would go through the whole. The question had no reference to the authority of the House of Commons; it turned simply upon the degree of violence which might have been well and upon that, and that along, the Juy were to give their verdict.

The Jury, without h situation; found a verdict for the Defends at the land of the land of

hon. Viscount Killcoursie, son of the Earl of Cavan, to the only daughter of J.-P.

Coppin, esq May 22. Hon. Charles Law, son of Lord Ellenb, rough, re-married to Elizabeth-sophia, daughter of the late Sir Edward, and sister to the present Sir Charles Night ngale, bart.

May 25. William Ceoil Chambers, esq. of Chestern id-street, to the eldest daughter of the late Charles Mellish, esq. of

Blyth, No ta

William Watkins, esq. only son of Charles W esq. of Daventry, to Charlotte, fronth daughter of David Battray, M. D of Coventry.

My .7. Rev. Lewis Way, of Great Yeldaam, Essex, to Caroline-Elizabeth, only daugater of John Leech, esq. of Bridge-street, Blackhiars.

Mag 28 T. Bates Rous, esq. of Courtyrala, Glamorganshire, to Charlotte Owen, second daughter of Sir R. Salusbury, bart, of Llanwern, Moumouthshire, May 29. Rev. J Fellowes, M. A. youngest son of Rob F. esq. Shoteshain, Norfolk, to Susan, fourth daughter of the tate Hon. Thomas Lyon, of Hetton-house, Durham.

Essex.

At Gibraltar, Capt. Allen, of the Franchise frigate, to Misa Skinner, daughter of Col. S. Royal Engineers.

June 2. At Edinburgh, Capt. Sykes, R. N. to Miss Earl, daughter of Edward E. esq. chairman of the Board of Customs. Edinburgh.

June 4. T. Thurlow, esq. youngest son of the late Bishop of Durham, and brother to Lord Thurlow, to Frances, third daughter of the late Hon. Thomas Lyon, of Hettonhouse, Durham

June 5. At Bury, Rev. C. A. Wheelwright, to Anna, second daughter of Geo. Hubbard, esq. of Bury, and niece to the Lord Bishop of Lincoln.

June 6. At Sutton Coldfield, Warwickshire, Charles Clement Adderley, esq. of Ham's hall, to Anna-Maria, eldest daughter of Sir Edmund Cradock Hartopp, bart, of Fouroaks hall.

June 10. Charles Raymond Barker, esq. fourth son of John Raymond B. of Fairford-park, co. Gloucester, esq to Elizabeth, eidest dau. of Nathaniel Baruardiston, esq. of the Ryes-lodge, near Sudbury, Suffolk.

Memoirs

MEMOIRS or THE LATE ESCHARD CUMBER

THE late Richard Comberland, esq. was descended from ancestors illustrious for their piety, benevolence, and crudition. His great-grandfather was the learned and ecomplary Dr. Richard Cumberland, Bp. of Peterborough, the well-known author of "De Legibos Nature Disquisitio philesophica," and other valuable works. -The Bishop had an only son, Richard, rector of Peakerk, in the diocese of Peterborough, and archdescon of Northampton. ---Ha had two sons, and one daughter (who was morried to Wazing Ashby, esq. of Quenby-hall, co. Leicester, and died in child-birth of her only son George Ashby, esq. late of Heselbeach in Northamptonstrire). Richard, the elder son of archdeacon Cumberland, died unmarried at the age of 29.

The younger, Danmon, so named from his mother, was educated at Westminster school, and from that admitted fellowcommoner of Trinity College, Cambridge, He married, at the age of 22, Jonus, the younger daughter of Dr. Richard Bentley * (the Phoebe of Byson's Pastoral); by whom he had a daughter, Joanas, and Richard, the subject of this article. Though in possession of an independent fortune, he was readily prevailed upon by his fatherin-law to take the rectory of Stanwick, in Northamptonshire, given to him by Lord Chancellor King, as soon as he was of age to hold it. From this period, he fixed his constant residence in that retired spot, and sedulously devoted himself to the duties of bis function. "When I contemplate the character of this agreable man (observes his Son, in the Memoirs of his own Life), I doclare to truth I never yet knew one so happily endowed with those engaging qualities, which are formed to attract and fix the love and esteem of mankind. It seemed as if the whole spirit of his grandfather's benevolence had been transfused into his beart, and that he bore as perfect a resemblance of him in goodness, as he did in person : in moral purity he was truly a Christian, in generosity and honour he was perfectly a gentleman."-The spire of Stanwick Church is esteemed one of the most beautiful models of that style of architecture in the kingdom: He added a very handsome clock, and ornamented the chancel with a railing, screen, and dutablature upon three-quarter columns, with a singing-gallery at the West end; and ÓÚCH pelln # pëi DRÍT. OBCI be lit polici holdi of Li Reyn the p ia tb in th Rebe VERG neigh 100 rollin Halil Nort his c 906 (bein) office Some gens stop stra! in ot Whi Jatte tual thou. by ti in of Official Co. he w favor to fla Son, by L tery. of S near Earl town lieut his c his mote first BUD ceiv€ mani wêrê forei acti his p Was I ciple that of his

[$00 T ...

^{*} See Mr. Camberland's character of his grandfather Dr. Beatley and his wife, as also that of their son Richard Bentley, and doughters Elizabeth and Joanus, in our Vol. LXXVII. pp. 4, 124,

When his Son took leave of him at the end of all summer visit, the Bishop expressed an intention of attempting a journey to England; but died in the winter of the same year; and this sad event was speedily succeeded by the death of his lady, whose weak and exhausted frame sunk under the blox, May 27, 1775 From these mouraful scenes their bon was absent; but their amiable Dacanter attended them in their last momen's. The Bish p was buried in a small patch of ground, inclosed with stone walls, adjoining to the church-yard of Kilmore, but not walum the pale of the consecrated ground, beside the grave of the venerable and exemplary B shop Bedel. This little spot he had fenced and guarded with particular devotion, and more than once pointed it out to his Son, saying in the words of the old prophet of Beth-el, " When I am dead, then bury me in this sepulchre, wherein the man of God is buried: lay my bones beside his bones." This injunction was exactly fulfilled; and till Kinsman, having observed his low station in the school, publicly reproved him; and thus roused in him a spirit of emulation. Whilst he continued in this school, his grandfather Bentley died, and the affectionate manner in which Kinsman imparted the melancholy event to him, with the kind regard he evinced for his improvement, wrought so much upon his mind, that his task became his delight. In his exercises, however, he describes himself, in his "Memoirs," as aiming at something like f which he was too grammatical erro sented exercises w attempting scarce little. These pa

salites did him no
who commented instance with grea great an offect on never perfectly re

this time that he made his first attempt in English verse; the subject of which was an excursion he had made with his family in the summer holidays to visa a relation in Hampshire, which engaged him in a description of the docks at Portsmouth, and of the races at Winchester, where he had been present. This little poem he exhibited to his father, who received it with unreserved commendation, and persisted in reciting it to his intimates, when its author had gained experience enough to wish it had been consigned to oblivion. In the intervals from school his mother began to form both his taste and his car for poetry, of which art she was a very able mistress, by employing him every evening to read to her. Their readings were, with few exceptions, confined to Shakspeare, whom she both admired and understood in the true spirit and sense of the author. Under her justruction he became passionately fond of these evening entertainments, and the effect was several attempts on his part towards the Drama. He was then head-boy of Bury School, though only in his 12th year. He fitted and compiled a kind of cento, intituled "Shakspeare in the Shades," in one act, m which the characters of Hamlet and Ophelia, Romeo and Juliet, Lear and Cordelia, were introduced, and Ariel as an attendant spirit on Shakspeare, who is present through the piece: some extracts from this juvenile production are printed in his "Memoirs."—Mr. Kinsman intimating his purpose of retiring from Bury school, young Cumberland was transplanted to Westminster, and admitted under Dr. Nichols; who seemed surprised on being informed that he had passed through Bury school at the early age of After passing examination, he was admitted into the Shell; his location in so high a class causing some surprise among the corps into which he was enrolled. The first exercise in Latin verse which he gave in gained the candid approbation of the master; and from that moment he acquired a degree of confidence in himself that gave vigour to his exertions. remained at Westminster about a year and a half; and particularly profited there in point of composition. the latter part of his stay, he translated into blank verse Virgil's beautiful description of the Plague among the Cattle (Georg. iii. 478 et seqq.); printed in his " Memoirs." — His sister Joanna died about this time, of the small pox; and the effect this melaneholy event had on his health determined his father to remove him from Westminster, and, though only in his 14th year, he was admitted of Trinity College, Cambridge. He was first pat under the care of Dr. Morgan, with whom he had few communications; and was almost left to choose and pursue his studies as he saw fit. On Dr. Morgan's retiring, he was placed under Dr. (afterwards Bishop) Young, who made the office an absolute sinecure, for Cumbers, land never received a single lecture Trusta. He received at this time a value! parcel of his grandfather Bentley's books and papers, from Dr. Richard B. the nophew of Bentley (see our vol. LXXVII. p. 125.) In the last year of his being under-graduate, when he commenced soph in the very first act that was given out to be kept in the mathematical schools, be was appointed to an opponency, when 🕰 that time he had not read a single proposition in Euclid. He had just been turned over to Mr. Backhouse, the Westminster tutor, who gave regular lectures, and fulfilled the duties of his charge ably and conscientiously. Totally unprepared to answer the call made upon him, and acquit himself in the schools, he resorted to Backhouse in his distress, through whose interference his name was withdrawn from the act; in the mean time he was sent for by the master, the learned Dr. Smith, who strongly reprobated the neglect of his former tutors, and recommended him to lose no time in preparing himself for his degree, but to apply closely to his academical studies for the remainder of the year. During the year of trial, he determined to use every effort for redeeming lost time; he began a course of study so apportioned as to allow himself but six hours' sleep, to which he strictly-adhered, living almost entirely upon milk, and using the cold bath very frequently. As he was then only 17 years old, and of a frame by no means robust, many of his friends remonstrated against the severity of this regimen, and recommended more moderation; but the encouragement he met in the capidity of his progress through ... all the dry and elementary parts of his 🛂 studies, determined him to persist with is ardour, and made him deaf to their ag-In the several branches of mechanics, hydrostatics, optics, and astronomy, he made himself master of the best treetises; he worked all his propositions, and formed all his minutes, even his thoughts, in Latin, and thereby acquired advantages superior to some of the best of his contemporaries in public disputations; for so long as his knowledge of a question could supply matter for argument, he never felt any want of terms for explanation. When he found himself prepared to take his part in the public schools, he thirsted for the opportunity; and with this his ambition was soon gratified, being appointed to keep an act, and these respectable opponents singled out against versity, his question stood. At the long. suspended act, the Moderator had nominated the same gentleman as his first opponent. Cumberland was then in a very feeble state, in consequence of his unrematted studies, but was intellectually alive to all the purposes of the business; and when the Moderator exhibited symptoms of indisposition, cut short his thesis, to make room for his opponent, who had bar lly brought his argument to bear, when the Moderator, on the plea of sudden indisposition, dism seed Cumberland with a speech, which, though tinctured with some petulance, was not vithout praise. On being cited to the Senate-bouse for examination for the Bachelor's degree, he was kept perpetually at the table under the process of question and answer. His constitution just held him up to the expiration of the scrutiny; and on bastening to his father's, he soon fell ill of a rheamatic fever, from which, after six months' care and attention, he was recovered. While in this state of extreme indisposition, a high station had been adjudged to him amongst the Wranglers of his vear; for which he was much indebted to the GENT. MAG. June, 1811.

himself at length involved in references to so many authors which he had no means of consulting, and hampered with so many Oriental languages which he did not understand, that, after filling a large folio foul-book, he reduced his task to a more contracted scale, in which however he contrived to review all the several systems of the Heathen Philosophers, and discuss at large the tenets and opinions maintained and professed by their respective schools and academies. The nature of the studies, and the habitudes of thinking in which he had so recently engaged, could only have disposed and qualified nim to apply his mind to a work of such labour and research -After wandering at large for a considerable time without any one to guide him, he at last chalked out for h mself a settled plan of reading.

When he was newly come to college, he read with avidity the Greek tragedians, regarded with reverence the absurdities of the chorus, and was bigoted to their cold character and their rigid unities. When Mason published his Elfrida, though Comberland did not quite agree with him as to the choice of plot, or the legitimacy of the chorus, yet he was warm in his praise of that generally admired production; and, in imitation, planned and composed an entire drama, of which Caractacus was the hero, with Bards and Druds attached to it as a chorus, for whom he wrote Odes. In point of plot he strayed equally from Mason, who afterwards chose this subject, and from history; for he wove into his drama some characters and several incidents perfectly fictitious. This has never been published.

About this time his father was persuaded to listen to some flattering offers of situations for him; but, as his health was still in an unsettled state, he joined with his family in an excursion to York, where he passed half a year in the society and amusements of that city. The style of living there was a perfect contrast with what he had been accustomed to: he hunted in the mornings, danced in the evenings, and devoted but little time to study. He here got hold of Spenser's Fairy Queen, in imitation of which he began to write stanzas to the same measure; at other times he also composed short Elegies in the manner of Hamistond; but for these pursuits be was seasonably reproved by his Mother, and relinquished them. A copy of elegant verses by Lady Susan, sister of the present Earl of Galloway, was communicated to him, of which the hint seemed to be taken from Hamlet's meditation on the skull of Yorick; this subject he afterwards himself attempted, and the poem is printed in his " Memoirs." The amusements at York, however, did not suit his disposition; and the termination of his visit, with the prospect of return ug to his studies, were welcomed by him most cordially.

On his return to College, he was soon mivited to the Master's Longe by Dr. Smith, who honoured him with approbation of his past exertions, and imparted to him a new arrangement that had been determined upon, for annulling so much of the existing statues as restricted all Bachelors of Arts, except those of the third year's standing, from offering themselves caudidates for Fellowships. Dr. Smith also kindly recommended him, as he should be in the second year of his degree at the next election, to present himself for examination.

Vahilat he was preparing to resume his studies with increased attention, he received a summons from Lord Halifax to assume the situation of his private confidential sceretary. He accordingly came to towa, but, among the new connexions in which he was consequently thrown, he met with nothing that in any degree interested him, but now and then a quotation from Lord Halifax; and, as his employment consisted increip in copying a few private letters to governors and civil officers abroad, he applied his thoughts to other subjects, and particularly to the approaching election at his College.

At the Final Hahfax to to Cambrid, and six can They under the election particularly and on the Orde (after who was of as elected, year above went home made a sho

On his re sequestered been reside time he ma press, folk another Ch St. Mark's tradition, t die within walk at m. It had been Vacations, 4 Lord Halif serves in hi interested . profited."

He made be could we to avail his pass in the them he was and delicit more by the when in abitime and wards chan public life nor had a and accompush their

While M ing a few d of subjects was for ever his recalled he w.shed could not a done by a Cumberlan problem, a with which pleased. I berland's h port of his then one of quested hi marks with which this a ened Mr.

R. also was among the number of his intimates.

About the time he employed tunself in collecting materials from the History of India, for the plan of a Poem in heroic verse, on which he bestowed considerable labour, and in which he had made some progress. This design, however, it is to be lamented, was laid aside, but a specimen of it, respecting the discoveries of the Portuguese is preserved in his "Memoirs."

After the death of Lady Halifax, on coming to town for the winter season with his patron, he read and wrote incessantly, and lived in all the temperance and nearly all the retirement of a hermit. The residence in town, however, which his attendance upon Lord Halifax entailed upon him, and the painful separation from his family, became almost insupportable to bim. But, whilst he was inclitating a retreat, his father exchanged his living of Stanwick for Fulham, in order to afford him an easier access to his friends. La consequence of his occasional visits there, he became a frequent guest at La Trappe, the house of the eccentric Mr. Dodington, tence.

On his return from Dorsetshire, he was invited by his friends at Trinity College to offer himself as a candidate for a Lay-fellowship then vacant; and though there were several solicitors, by the kindness of the master and seniors, he was honoured with this last and most distinguished mark of the r favour and protection. He did not hold it long, as it could only be held on the terms of celibacy.

About this time he wrote his first legitimate drama, in five acts, "The Ban shment of Cicero;" a performance which, though occasionally inaccurate in the dietion, and the plot totally unsuited to scenic exhibition, as a dramatic poem will bear examination. He was honoured with a favourable judgment upon at from Primate Stone and B shop Warburton This play, whilst in MS. wa shewn t. Lord Habfax, who carried it to Garri k. and warmly recommended it to him for representation. Garrick, novever, after a day or two, returned it to Lord Halfor with many apologies, and some quality a, words to the author, stating his despair of accummodation; accommodating a play on such a plan to the purpose, of the stage; and Lord Halifax, fo. a time, warmly resented Garrick's non-compliance with his wishes. This tragedy was published in 1761, 4to.

C SHELLOWER'S

Having obtained, through the patronage of Lord Halifax, a small establishment as Crown Agent for Nova Scotla, Mr. Cumberland tendered his addresses to Elizabeth, the only daughter of George Ridge, esq. of Kilmiston, Hants, to whom he was married, Feb. 19, 1759.

[To be continued.]

1811. AT New York, Col. James
March 22. Crauford formalist. to the Queen, and late Governor of the Bermudas.

March 28. At the Cape of Good Hope, Capt. W .. Seiby, of the Owen Glendower; one of the ablest officers in the British Navy, and deservedly esteemed for his amiable qualities.

April 8 In Reading, Berks, aged 4 years and 10 months, Arthur the sixth son of the Rev. John Symonds Breedon, D. D. of Bere-court Pangbourn, Berks. And on the 28th of May, at the Hotwells, Bristol, aged 13, his third daughter, Maryanne. .

April 17. At Newbottle, Durham, in his 68th year, Edward Wetenhall, esq.

At Tarbert, co. Kerry, R. Ponsonby, esq. April 18. Aged 85, Mrs. Frances Plumbe, relict of Samuel P. esq. of Lower Tooting. Aged 52, the wife of Mr. Glover, of St.

Giles, Oxford.

In her 20th year, the wife of Mr. George Cartwright, lace-manufacturer, Nottingh.

At Carleton-hall, Cumberland, Mrs. Wallace, reliet of the late James W. esq. Attorney-General.

In her 33d year, Alicia, wife of Mr. George Gibson, merchant, of Liverpool, and daughter of Edward Wilks, esq. of Stratford upon Avon.

At New Malton, Yorkshire, Mr. Richard Parker, eldest son of Mr. R. P. of Hull, and many years agent to Thomas Fenton, esq. of Rothwell Haigh, near Leeds.

April 20. At Kensington Gravel Pits, aged 53, William Smith, esq. nephew of Dr. S. formerly Dean of Chester. Of consumption, aged 20, Lucy, eldest daughter of the Rev. John Atchinson, of Leicester.

In his 66th year, George Howlett, csq. senior alderman of Coventry.

At Tollerton, Notts, aged 54, Susannah, wife of Pendock Neale, esq. and daughter of the Rev. Thos. N. rector of Tollerton.

Frances, wife of Thomas Joyce, esq. of Freshford-house, Somersetshire.

April 21. Mr. Shuttleworth, of the Talbot inn, Spalding.

In his 73d year, Mr. Bromley Allen, of Bristol.

At Ryton, co. Durham, aged 20, Mrs. F. Wilkie Thorp, wife of the Rev. Charles T. rector of that place, and only child of Henry Collingwood Selby, esq. of Sweetfield, Northumberland, and of Gray'tlnn.

aged TI, Mr. April 22. Suddenly, Richard James, formerly an eminent stay. maker, in Queen-street, Oxford.

At Cotham, Mrs. Richardson, widow of the late Mr. H. F. R. stationer.

In his 81st year, Mr. Edward Ridge, of Morton, near Gainsborough, At Lisbon, where he had resided since 1762, with an upright character, and much respected, in his 77th year, William Shipley, esq.

April 23, At Shep! 3rd's Bush, in his 50th year, John Kilbinton, esq.

At Buckingham, aged 72, much esteemed and lamented, Philip Box, esq. many years an eminent banker in that town, and Receiver-general of the lower division of the county of Bucks.

In her 82d year, Mrs. Parsons, relict of the late Mr. Alderman P. Leicester.

In St. Martin's, Stamford Baron, Lincolnshire, aged 63, Mr. Joseph Loveday, many years caterer to the late Marquis of Exeter.

In his 55th year, Mr. John Normand, of Hull, formerly an ironmonger. Having risen slightly indisposed, he dropped down suddenly, and in a few minutes expired.

April 24. In King-street, Chespside, aged 50, Mr. Abraham Slack.

At New-cross, aged 47, John Holcombe,

Of a typhus fever, deeply regretted, in her 21st year, Marianne, fourth dange-ter of John Savery, esq. banker, Bristol. In Carrick, at an advanced age, the Hon. Mrs. Herbert.

April 25. At Exeter, the wife of Col. 4, 47 Blair, of Bayford, Herts.

In the Minster Yard, Lincoln, in her 77th year, Frances, relict of Wm. Hild. yard, esq. lately of Great Grimsby.

At Norwich, in his 27th year, Mr. Lay-son Cooper, draper.

Mr. Whitlock, hosier, one of the senior Common-councilmen of the corporation of Nottingham.

April 26. Jonathan Court, esq. lately in the East India Company's Civil Service at Calcuttu.

At Stanwell-place, the lady of Sir Wil-This lady was a lianı Gibbons, bart. daughter of Admiral Watson, and was married Sept. 3, 1771.

In his 60th year, Mr. John Fraces, of Sloane-square, Chelses, well know geridge, of Balham-hill, Clapham.

At Brompton, Lieut.-col. Edward Stcphens, late of the 3d foot.

In consequence of the rupture of a bloodvessel, Rev. John Ord, B. A. rector of Whethamstead cum Harpenden, Herts; and in the commission of the peace for that county; deeply lamented by the poor of his parish, to whom he was a great benefactor

At Bath, the wife of Mr. Charles Incledoa,of Covent Garden Theatre, and daughter of Mr. Howell, M.Isom-street, Bath.

Aged 90, Mr. W. White, many years steward to Sir Thomas Whichcote, bart. of Aswarby-Pa. R, near Sleaford.

Aged 55, Rev. Edward Jorden, vicar of Messingham and Bottesford, co. Lincoln.

At her brother's, the Rev Thomas Bowerbank, vicar of Chiswick, aged 24, Mary, second caughter of the late Rev. Edward Bowerbank, rector of Croft and Baruingham, co. York, and prebendary of Lincoln.

April 29 On Enfield Chace, in her 79th year, Mrs Jane Mocher, widow of the late General Flower Mocher. The fortitude with which she for many years endured the severest bodily sufferings, could only be equalled by her prous resignation to God, under the pressure of heavy affic-

Milnes, widow of the late John M. esq. of South Collengham, Notts.

At Messes. Tattersall's, aged 87, Mr. Jonathan Bray, who lived many years with the late Duke of Kingston, and since kept the Betting-room at Tattersall's.

Mrs. Mary Smyth, widow of the late Dr. Robert S. of Chelsea, and second daughter of the late Richard Blyke, esq.

Rev. H. Marker, jun. of Aylesbury, Devon.

At Marston Bigott, Somersetshire, Rev. Mr. Clarke, more than 50 years rector of that parish. His elder brother died before him a few days only.

Rev. John Foulkes, of Merton-House, Flintshire, and rector of Whitford.

At Sayham, Norfolk, aged 69, Rev. P.

Rev. Titus Lewis, Baptist minister of Carmarthen.

Gen. Robert Shawe, late of the 74th regiment. He served with reputation in North America and the West Indies during the late war, and in the East Indies under I and Cornwallis, and Generals Meadows, Mesgrave, Harris, and Weilesley.

Of his wounds, Col. Bush, 20th Portuguese regiment.

Aged 81, Capt. Nathan Gooding, R. N.

Aged 25. opt. Titus Conyers, of the Roya! Marines.

Archibald Hamilton Rowan, third son of Archibald Hamilton A. esq. This gallant young Officer fell in the storming of Patamos, on the coast of Catalonia; on which service he had volunteered from his own ship, the Tigre.

In Uske, Monmouthshire, Thomas Jones, esq. formerly major in the Royal Monmouth and Brecon militia.

At Dover, Capt. John Cuffe, of the West Middlesex militia.

At Windsor, aged 79. Mr. J. Lyster, sergeant and drum-major in the Royal Stafford militia.

At Waigrave, Berks, the wife of the Rev. Philip Nind.

Anne Eliza, eldest daughter of the Rev. James Bicheno, Newbury.

Mr. Vizard, farmer, Shinfield, Berks.

At Barking, Essex, aged 82, Mr. Richard Parker, formerly a sugar-refiner in Wellclose-square.

At Croydon aged 65, Mrs. Anne Stockes, widow of Capt. Peter S. of the East India Company's service.

At Goodnestone, Kent, in her 37th year, Marianne, fourth daughter of the late Sir Brooke Bridges, bart.

At Eastry, Kent, aged 97, Mrs. Eliz. Aynott.

At Southampton, in her 24th year, the wife of Capt. John Gordon, jun. of the 2d or Queen's regiment.

The wife of P. Desbrosses, esq. of Mildenhall, Suffolk.

At Shopwick, near Chichester, Mrs. Stewart, widow of Major-Gen. S. of the Royal Artillery.

At Cambridge, the wife of Mr. Aiderman Purchas.

At Romsey, aged 93 Nicholas Dawkins. At the same place, aged 100 Mrs. Pocock. Mr. John Housholl, of March, Ely.

Aged 39, Mrs. Atkinson, of the Ship Public-house, Wisbech.

At Wimbourne, Jane. wife of S. P. Newell, esq. Captain in the Oxford Militia.

At Blandford, aged 65, Mrs. S. Fitz-herbert, daughter of the late Tho. F. esq.

At Uplime, W. Clarke, esq. of Beaminster, Dorset, a minor, only son of the late William C. esq. of Beaminster.

Mr. Pretor Whitty, eldest son of Mr. S. W. banker, Sherborne.

Aged 83, James Croome, esq. of Breadstone, Gloucester.

Samuel Jeynes, esq. of Gloucester, only son of the late Sir E. J. and partner in the house of Messrs. Turner, Morris, and Co.

In his 79th year, John Cash, of Coventry; he had been many years an approved minister among the Society of Friends; was a man of strict integrity, and his conduct through life consistent with the principles he professed.

In his 77th year, Thomas Storthouse, of Birmingham, another valuable member of the Society of Friends.

Of the small-pox, aged 59, Mr. J.Till, farmer, of Whitgreave near Stafford.

Harriet, eldest daughter of George Molineux, esq. of Wolverhampton.

At Willesley, near Terbury, W. Byam, esq.

In consequence of her clothes catching fire, aged 72, the wife of S. Gyles, enq. of Kenwick. She survived but four hours.

At Chadley Farm near Welsbourn, aged 78, Mr. William Findon.

Miss F. A. Darby eidest daughter of Edmund D. esq. of Colebrook-Daie.

At Kidderminster, Mr. S Parkes, father of the author of the "Chemical Cate-chism."

The wife of F. Moore, esq. of Bridg-north.

At Powick, near Worcester, aged 65, Mr. John Herbert, sen.

At Bromwich-house, near Worcester, John, youngest son of the Rev. David Price.

At Wedhampton, near Devizes, T. N.: Lewis, esq.

Mr. Tanner, farmer, of Raston Grey, Wilts.

Miss J Orred, daughter of the late J. O. esq. of Runcoru.

At Salisbury, Mrs. Wapshare, relict of C. W. W. esq.

Mr. William Hayden, an eminent faremer, of Milton near Ameabury.

At Bath, A. Deane, esq.

Mrs. Milsom, of the Carpenter's Arms, Chatham-row, Bath.

Mr. Penny, Margaret's Buildings, Bath. Aged 11, Emma, youngest daughter of Ashfield Hunt, esq. of Bristol.

—Frankam, esq. of Sidestrand, Norfalk. At Thrapston, Northamptonshire, Anne, wife of Mr. Crompton, surgeon, and youngest daughter of the late Hacker Parkinson, gent. late of Loughborough.

At Colwick, near Nottingham, aged 39, Samuel Blackner. He served during the Rebellion in 1745, in the Duke of Kingston's light horse, and is supposed to have been the last survivor of that regiment.

At Leicester, aged 95, Mrs. Simpson. She lived in three kings' reigns, and had 60 sons, grandsons, and great-grandsons, serving his Ma esty.

At Ashburton, aged 80, Mrs. Eales.

At Sidmouth, Maria, youngest daughter of the Rev. Dr. Symmons, of Richmond.

At Doveridge, Hull, the Hon. Harrist Cavendish, youngest daughter of Bertraid Lord Waterpark, of the kingdom of Ireland.

John Whitehead, esq. principal in the house of Messrs. Whitehead and Sca, Manchester.

At Sheffield, in Yorkshire, Mr. Richard Owen, a cutler, who, during his life of 90 years, was a celebrated change-ringer at St. Peter's one year old.

At Gwernliwynwith, Glamorganshire, Matilda, daughter of M. Barber, esq.

Suddenty, Thomas Morgan, esq. of Tres ggio Pembr keshire

Agred 90. Hook in Lewellyn, esq of Margain, Glamorganshire.

Ar carriery, Mrs. Evans, relict of the Rev. Dan et E. perpe uni curate of Llangenreich, Carmarthenshire.

At Farvach, near Landillo, Mr. David James, solicitor.

M see Shanks, eldest daughter of Capt. S. of Gross nom, Monmouthshare.

At Kenton, Scottand, aged 104, Mrs. Ma.garet M.burn.

At Dual o, thrown from his horse, and killed on the spot, David Courteney, esq. He has left nine calidren, and 250,000%; but no will.

In Crowe-street, Dubl n, Mr. Redmond Cooke, of the Theatre Royal.

After two days diness, aged 112, John Leary, an honest, familial domestic in the family of Currah, co. Limerick, for upwards of 80 years. He commenced his service is with the late Vere Hunt, esq. as groom, in 1730, and remained with him outil his death, since which period he continued with Sir Vere Hunt, batt.

miniature being justly admired both in his native country and the East Indies, where he practised for some years with great and deserved reputation.

At Farringdon, Berks, as he was dressing himself in the morning, Mr. Edward Butler

At Mrs. Nesbitt's, Old Bracknell, Berks, Mrs. Sacyd, relict of the late Jeremy S. esq.

Aged 76, Mr. Crump of St. Giles's, Oxford, a much-respected member of the Common Council.

In Shrewsbury, in her 29th year, the Lady of the Right Hon. George Knox. Her remains were deposited in a vault in Moniford church, on the 6 h justant.

Moniford church, on the 6 h instant.

At Camp-hill, Warwickshire, Juliana, th'rd daughter of the late John Ludford, of Ansley-hall, co. Warwick, esq by Juliana Newdigate (third and youngest daughter of Sir Richard Newdigate, of Arbury, co. Warwick, and Harefield, co. Middlesex, bart, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Sir Roger Twisden, of Bradburne, co. Kent, bart, and sister to sir Edward and Sir Roger Newdigate, barts.) She was born at Aibury; and baptized in Arbury chapel, Sept. 24, 1741. Two younger sisters, (Frances and Millisent) survive her; as does her only brother, John Ludford, of Ansley Ansley Hall, esq. D. C. L. who, by royal sign manual, bearing date July 5, 1808, was authorized to continue to use the curname and arms of Ludford, and to bear the name of Newdigate, or Newdegate, as originally spelt, before that of Ludford, and the arms of Luaford and Newdigate, or Newdegate, quarterly, Ludford in the first quarter.

Aged 63, Mr. Robert Cook, of St. Martin's, Stamford Baron, many years valet to the late Earl of Excter.

Pres. Mary Jackson, of Snead-Park, near Perstol; a bountiful benefactor to her neignbours, a sincere friend to her acquaintances, and a most valuable member of society. Her remains were interred in the family vault at Westbury.

May 2. In her 41st year, Elizabeth, wife of the very Rev. William Busby, Dean of Rochester.

In Ratcliff Highway, aged 82, William Simpson, esq. formerly an eminent Stock-broker.

At Crayford, aged 80, Mr. George Ware. Aged 80, Mr. Reach, well known by the appellation of Old Bygam; at whose temporary hotel, on Appel-hill, Bury St. Edmund's, during the October fair, the lovers of "hot sausages" were hourly regaled.

From a slight contusion in his leg, which terminated in a mortification, Mr. Richard Walker, corn-dealer, and master of the Bell-an, Oxford.

At her father's, Charmouth, Devon, Mrs. Robert Spiller.

At Presteign, Radnorshire, Mrs. Morgan, reliet of David M. esq. and daughter of Edward Jeilrey, esq. of the Priory, Breech.

At Kelly, the family-mansion of his brothe, Arthur Kelly, e.q. Vice-adm. W. Hancock Kelly, of Plymouth.

Mrs. Morris, widow of the late Mr. M. hosier, Nottingham, leaving an orphan family of six young children.

May 5. Mrs. Collett, of Downing-street. At his father-in-law's, P. Colquhoun, esq. in James-street, Westminsfer, of the abunds he received at the battle of Busaco, where he commanded a light brigade, Lieut.-col. Barclay, 52d regiment.

At Stockwell, aged 64, Thos. Woodroffe, Smith, esq. a very opulent Quaker mercht.

After a painful ilmess of four years, Maria, second daughter of the Rev. Edward Bryant, Newport, Essex.

At the Parrenage-house, Hadley, at a very advanced age, Mrs. Burrows; an intimate friend of the late Mrs. Chapone.

At Mountsorell, Leicestershire, aged 25, the wile of Mr. John Goodacre.

At Upwell, Isle of Ely, aged 54, Mr. James Wiles, an opulent butcher.

At I ewes, after a lingering illness, aged 65, Thomas Kemp, esq. Representative of the Borough of Lowes in six Parliaments.

In Marlborough-buildings, Bath, Fitz-herbert Richards, esq.

14

Aged 57, Mr. John Orton, landingwaiter in the Customs, Hull.

At Dulwich, in his 75th year, Edward Browne, esq.

May 4. In her 70th year, Mrs. Rowlatt, relict of Wm. R. esq. of Charterhouse-square, who died April 13; having survived her husband but three weeks (see p. 495).

At Windsor, aged 81, Mrs. Harrington. In Caroline-buildings, Bath, in his 17th year, S. P. Bean, esq. of Stoke-under-Hamden.

In Old-Park, Bristol, Mrs. Shellard, widow of the late Mr. S.

At the Hope and Anchor, Bedminster, Capt. William Watkins, of Bristol.

In his 60th year, Mr. Richard Marshall, of Newark, Notts.

At Earton, co. York, aged about 80, the wife of Mr. Benjamin Mackrill.

May 5. At Hoxton, aged 32, Mr. Alex. Keir, of the Old Jewry.

At Holloway, aged 62, Mr. Ingleby, of Wood-street.

At Toft, co. Lincoln, aged 92, Mrs. Hodgson, mother of the Rev. Mr. H. of Market Raisin.

At Glasgow, in his 50th year, Mr. John Fraser, of the Royal Bank of Scotland, son of John F. esq. of Antigua-street, Leith-walk, Edinburgh.

At Burntisland, Scotland, Capt. Graham, of the Maria Excise yatch.

May 6. In Gloucester-street, Queen's-square, the wife of Richard Kentish, esq. of Green Hall, near Hertford.

In Great James-street, Bedford Row, aged 74, William Webb, esq.

In Clipstone-street, Fitzroy-square, after one day's confinement, aged 66, Samuel Sewell, esq. formerly of Boston, America.

In the King's-road, Rev. Henry Frederick Thistlethwayte, son of the late Robert T. esq. M. P. for Hants.

At Abingdon, Berks, Mrs. James Latham, daughter of Mr. Henry Hopkins.

At Melton, aged 55, Mr. Healey.

Aged 19, Sophia, daughter of Mr. Geo. Elliott, Nottingham.

Marianne, second daughter of N. Downe, esq. of Bridport, Dorset.

At Upton-on-Severn, Catharine, wife of Col. Houstonn, and third daughter of William Whitmore, esq. of Dudmaston.

At Lugwardine, near Hereford, Rev. John Freeman.

Suddenly, as he was walking along Waterworks-street, Hull, P. Nettleton.

At Penrice-House, Cornwall, Rear-adm. Graves.

May 7. At Egham, John Delamain, esq. of Berners-street.

At Hampstead, Dame Joanna Watson, relict of Sir James W. late one of the Judges

mas Lovett, farmer,

Found dead in its garden, aged 79, Mr. John Reynolds, publican, of Scopwick, near Lincoln. He was in good health the night before, and it is supposed he died in a fit.

May 9. Wilham, eldest son of Mr. William C'urke, of the Eagle Insurance-office, Cornsi I.

At Pad hogton-green, in his 88th year, John Gray, esq. L.L. D. for many years one of the Commissioners of the Lottery; a very worshy, benevolent, and scientific man; and a frequent Correspondent for many years in Mr. Urban's Miscellany.

At Layer Bretton Parsonage, near Colchester, in his olst year, Rev. Julius Hut-cianson.

The wife of Mr Wallis, surgeon, Loughborough, and daughter of the late Dr. Pochin.

Aged 72, Elizabeth, widow of the late Mr. Samuel Lincker, Nottingham.

In his $2d year, Mr. John Wood, of Grantham, watch-maker, and formerly Chief Magistrate of that place. He retained his faculties, and worked at his GENT, MAG. Jane, 1811.

Duer, second daughter of the late John D. esq. of Antigua, and sister-in-law of the Right Hon. George Rose.

Suddenly, at his mother's, Changealley, Nottingham, Mr. Richard Wilson, many years a respectable school-master in that town.

Aged 77, Mr. John Tripp, of Hull, formerly proprietor of the Hull and Barton Ferry.

In Phoenix Park, Dublin, the Rev. S. C. Littlehales, M. A. Prebendary of St. Partrick's, rector of Kill and Clonmethen, and chaplain to his Grace the Lord Leutenant. This exemplary clergyman caught the typhus fever, by close attendance on a poor family in his parish.

May 13. At Park-place, Islington, suddenly, Eleanor, wife of Wm. Fewell, esq.

At Burton-hall, Lincolnshire, at an advanced age, Mr. John Menzies, for nearly thirty years house steward and butler to the noble owners of that mansion.

Felix M'Carthy, esq. long well known for his eccentricity and benevolence, and latterly for the embarrassments brought upon upon him by both. He offered himself, a few years ago, as a representative for Leicester, where he conducted himself with the strictest honour and punctuality. — He was the author of several pamphlets on subjects of temporary interest at the periods when they were written. His last production was of considerable length and comprehension, upon the question of the Catholic Veto. His latter years exhibited alternate vicissitudes of generous, but extravagant and thoughtless hospitality, and of distress often bordering on want, which could not subdue his spirit, or destroy his cheerfulness. Mr. M'Carthy was a native of the county of Cork; and although he had been absent from his country for above thirty years, during the earlier part of which he resided on the Continent, he always retained a sincere and ardent affection for his native land. He was accordingly sought after by multitudes of his distressed countrymen, with whom he never failed to share his purse while he bad any thing in it, and his heart when he had not. This single trait is itself a summary of his character; and if it had in it sometimes more of generosity than of discretion, the failing arose from so good a principle, that his death (which was probably not a little hastened by its consequences) will require but a little exertion of the charity towards human frailty which death naturally inspires, to extinguish the blame that indiscretion may sometimes call forth from strict propriety, in the sympathy which his known and undeniable goodnature must find in the kindred feelings of every generous heart. Leicester Journal.

13

At Teignmouth, Devon, whither she had gone for the benefit of her health, Miss Devas M'Innes, of Aberdeen.

After a short illness, Mr. William Ames, common brewer, St. Philip's-plain, Somersetshire.

In Portugal, of the wound he received in the action of Fuentes d'Honor, Lieut.col. Cameron, 76th reg. His funeral was attended by Lord Wellington, with many general officers, and the whole of his lordship's personal staff. (See pp. 578, 580.)

May 14. At his house, in town, after a few hours' illness, of the gout in his stomach, Authory Ashley Cooper, Earl of Shaftesbury, Baron Ashley of Winborne St. Giles, Baron Cooper of Pawlett, a Baronet, and F. R.S. His lordship was born Sept. 17, 1761; succeeded his father, Anthony, the fourth Earl, in 1771; and, on the 17th of July 1786, married Barbara, daughter of the late Sir John Webb, bart. by whom he has left one daughter, Barbara, born in 1788, who succeeds to estates of the value of 90,000% a year. His lordship, having died without issue male, is succeeded in his titles'by his brother, the Hon. Cropley Ashley Cooper, Clerk of the Deliveries in the Ordnance, and one of the representatives for Dorchester, now Earl of Shaftesbury.

At Reading, at a very zovanced age, Mrs. Zinzan, wife of the late Peter Z. M.D.

At Thaxted, Essex, Rob. Maitland, esq. -Mrs. Image, relict of the late Rev. Mr. I. of Peterhorough.

At Mansfield, Notts, aged 72, Hollis

Clay, gent.

At Old Hurst, Hunts, in his 79th year, Mr. Butteris, many years a respectable

May 15. In Bedford-square, Peter Cazalet, esq.

William, the infant son of Mr. Anthony Todd Thomson, surgeon, Sloane-street.

The wife of the Rev. Dr. Nicholas, of Great Ealing.

By bursting a blood-vessel while in the act of pumping some water, which caused his death in a few minutes, aged 14, William Ashwell, of Stamford.

On board the Gorgon, off St. Helen's, Gen. Rufin, who was wounded and taken prisoner at the battle of Barross. He had " spent the day in good spirits, and repettation edly expressed his satisfaction at coming to England, and his escape from the Spanis niards. He seemed to suffer but little? from his wound, till about ten minutes: before his death. After having eaten a hearty dinner, he was suddenly seized with pain, which terminated in his death: the wound had affected the spinal marrow. The deceased was a great favourite with Buonaparte; and possessed considerable landed property in the neighbourhood of Havre-de-Grace. He was buried with distinguished a funeral honours at Portsmouth, on the 18th instant.

While bathing in the Thames, aged 19, Mr. W. Deans, of Guy's-hospital, spegeon, son of Capt. D. Finsbury-square: 17-15

At Orangefield, co. Down, Ireland; T& Bateson, esq.

At Cumner, Berks, aged 81, May 16. Mrs. Allen, widow.

Aged 80, Mr. E. Webb, farmer, w Dean Court, Berks.

At St. Thomas's-hill, near Canterbury; " aged 84, Sarah, relict of the late Lieut.-col. Charles Webb, greatly lamented by her relatives and friends. Her true piety, her unshaken faith, were, to her latest breath; her true comfort and support.

The wife of Mr. Thomas Pitcher, North-fleet, Kent.

At Odiham, Martha, youngest daughter of the late John Payne, esq. of Barba-

Found dead in his bed, Mr. George Colley, gardener to John Musters, esq. of Colwick-hall, near Nottingham.

At Melton Mewbray, aged 63, Mrs. Anne Wright, sister of the late Mr. Kilmund W.

maker, of Lorcester, late of Hinckley.

May 18. At Worthing, Mrs. Edison, of Kensington.

May 19. At the Three Cranes, in her 74th year, Mrs. Hannah Watson, late of Bath.

At Barnes, aged 67, Thomas Rock, esq. Anna, youngest daughter of John Kymer, esq. of Streatham.

At Halliford, Middlesex, Harriett, second daughter of Col. Harry Bisshopp.

At Ramsgate, Mrs. Mayhew, relict of the late Mr Christopher M. surgeon and apothecary, of that town.

In consequence of the wounds he received from a highwayman, about a month since, when returning from Stamford-market, aged of, Mr. Nidd, farmer, of Barholm, a good friend to the poor of that place.

At Prome, after a linger ng illness, Frances, wife of the Rev. Edward Edgell, of West Alvington, Devon, and youngest daughter of the late James Wickham, esq.

May 20. In Mort ver-street, Maryle-bone, in her ofth year, Lady Day, reliet of Sir John D. many years Advocate-General in the Supreme Court of Justice, Bengal.

priate funeral honours, on the 29th, in 5t. Peter's church, Droitwich, and in the same vault with those of her revered consort, whom she survived only four months. (See up. 100, 393). R

(See pp. 190, 393.) R.

May 22. Mr. J. Holland, of Gutter-lane, Cheapside. While walking his horse, during the thunder-storm, along the Green-lane, near Kilburn, in company with Mr. Sampson, of Bread-street, apparently in perfect health, he was struck by a vivid flash of lightning, and instantly fell from his horse dead, without a groan.

In consequence of a chaise passing over him in Whitechapel, which caused his death in a few minutes, the Rev. Mr. Slingsby, minister of Dagenham, Essex.

Rev. C. J. Wasey, rector of South al of Ulcombe, Kent, 74, John Jeffery, esq. Check of Woolwich > en, bookseller, Bristol. 19, Lady Charlotte ister to his Grace the > est son of Mr. John, Fleet-street.

Áŧ

At Woodford, Capt. M. Flynn, Commander of one of H. M. Packets on the Harwich station.

In consequence of an arm of one of the trees in Blenheim Gardens falling on her, on the 20th of May, Miss Charlotte Townshend, of Woodstock.

The wife of G. Grant, esq. of Walthamplace, Berks.

In her 79th year, the wife of Mr. Shel-don, of Bristol.

At Beverley, aged 67, John Coltman, esq. At Castle Mary, aged 76, the Right-Hon. Rich. Longfield, Viscount and Baron Longueville. His Londship's titles are extinct. His Bantry estates go to Lord Bantry and his brother; but his other estates are, for the most part, devised to Col. Longfield, his Lordship's cousin.

May 24. At the George Inn, Portsmouth, where he arrived the 22d of May, intending to set off the next morning for London, Walter Burrowes, esq. of Ryde (which place he left in good health) son of the late Sir Kildare B. On being called in the morning, it was discovered that he had been attacked by a paralytic affection, which had deprived him of his speech and reason. He remained in this state till about five o'clock in the afternoon, when he ex-He was formerly pired in convulsions. one of the first merchants in England, as an active partner in the house of Bogle, French. Burrowes, and Canning, of London, contractors for supplying the Navy with Irish provisions, &c.

Mr. Duffett, surgeon, Devizes.

May 25. In Queen-street, Berkeley-square, the wife of Mr. S. Kehl.

At Holloway, in a fit of apoplexy, aged 39, Mr. George Crew.

Aged 62, Dr. J. Alexander, of Bristol.

May 26. Of a decline, aged 16, Mary

Charlotte, second daughter of T. Todd, esq. Blackheath-road.

At Yarmouth, Isle of Wight, in his 18th year, R. Bowden, eldest son of R. Smith, esq. Brokenhurst, Hants.

May 27. In Great Pulteney-street, in his 82d year, Robert Bisset, esq. late Commissary-General to the forces at home. His remains were on June 5 deposited in St. James s church. This highly-respected veteran of the old school was of a very antient Scotch family. He was severely wounded at the battle of Culioden in 1746, and bore a conspicuous part in that of Minden in 1759, where he acted as Assistant Quarter-Master General to Lord Sackville; on whose trial it appeared, that Mr. Lisset, finding his regiment warmly engaged, and in great want of officers, requested and obtained his lordship's permission to join it, which he accordingly did, and continued with it during the remainder of that memorable day. He was, without solicitation, selected and appointed by the late Mr. Pitt and the Duke of Richmond, then Master-General of the Ordnance, to succeed his friend, General Roy, as Commissary General of England, which situation he filled with great credit, until age made him anxious to retire from the cares of public life. His only son, a Major in the 42d regiment, was killed in the well-known battle of Alexandria, in Egypt.

Lately. At Plympton, truly regretted by her family and friends, Mrs. Katherine Kite, the amiable and respectable wife of Mr. William Allen Kite, Gent. and daughter of the late Rev. Samuel North, rector of Muston, co. Leicester.

At Portsmouth, after a lingering illness, in his 76th year, Mr. N. Diddams, the oldest officer in the service of the Customs, father of N. Diddams, esq. Master Shipwright of Portsmouth Dockyard. For 50 years he served with unblemished reputation, with credit to himself, and satisfaction to his superiors.

June 1. At Caldecote-hall, near Hinckley, the lady of the Honourable Thomas Bowes. He was High Sheriff of the County of Leicester in 1810.

In Norfolk-street, Strand, June 2. after a very short illness, Lady Gordon, wife of the Rev. Sir Adam Gordon, best. Rector of West Tilbury, Essex, &c.: A loss most deeply lamented by all who had the pleasure and honour of her acquaintance, and could justly estimate her intrinsic worth. Among the many amiable qualities and engaging accomplishments that distinguished this excellent character, a prominent virtue was, the most rigid respect to TRUTH. In such veneration did she hold this sacred property, that often, attention even to a humorous parrative, her apprehensious were painfully alive, lest casual embellishments should interfere with strict veracity. Towards her social and domestic connexions, her mrivalled affability, and a continual desire to confer pleasure or convey comfort, became among her intimates proverbial. In the display of Christian henevolence, she may have been equalled, but excelled it val impossible; not foul Ingratitude curtailed her invariable study to befriend the needy. Forgiceness, that most lovely produce Religious power, chased all resentment and nothing but positive persevering / could interfere to check, or rather lesses her anceasing bounty. Her uniform delight was, to solace the afflicted, to reconcile unhappy variances, and prove most genuine and unshaken friendship for those she thought deserving. No corp. no ostentation of superior talents, ever tarnished her native and acquired excellence; but generous ardour to promote # innocent hilarity, and evince most bospets. ble exertions, with a sweetness of disposttion and demeandur peculiarly her own, endeared principum Philosopho wa ita percepta habuit principum Philosopho wa ita percepta habuit principua, ut us ad vilion agendam, non ad estentiationem uteretur."

June 15 At Birmingham, in her 71styear, Mrs. Elizabeth Hamper, relict of the late Mr. Thomas H. She sustained a painful illness for several years with great resignation but survived her husband only two months (see our present Volume, p. 403). Her memory will be long respected by those who have been the objects of her affect ouate solicitude, and have withessed the pleasing alacity with which also performed the duties of life, both in is far beyond the mere blandishments of demeanour, he possessed a disposition, which, naturally good, had been improved by education, and which had sufficient steadiness to pursue through life whatever was excellent, with a resolution which no temptations could beguile. Hence all who knew him respected him. But in the circle in which he more immediately moved, he was not only respected, but beloved; evincing, on all occasions, to those friends whom he esteemed, that open unreservedness of heart, which is the best pledge of sincerity, and the firmest bond of affection. He was interred at the burying-ground of St. George's, Hanover-square, ion Sunday June 23, and followed to the grave by his cousin the Earl of Normanton, as chief mourner, and by Lord Aston and William Elias Taunton, esq. late of Christ Church, Oxford, and the Rev. Thomas Vialls, John Hensleigh Allen, and Lancelot Baugh Allen, esqrs. late of Trinity College, Cambridge, his school-fellows when at Westminster, with whom, among many others, he had kept up the closest intimacy. These have to lament his loss. But, besides these, he has left those to whom it is. irreparable — a widow and an infant son.

At Painswick, Gloucestershire, of an apoptectic seizure, followed by two weeks' illness, deeply and deservedly lamented by his family and acquaintance, aged 57, Mr. Daniel Roberts; of whom farther particulars in our Supplement.

June 17. At his house on Camberwell-green, aged 73, the Rev. Richard Dodd, M. A. Mr. D. had been confined to his bed-chamber for five years. His complaint was a general debility of system, and loss of appetite. He was aware of the decay under which he was languishing, and his resignation to the Divine will was such as becomes a teacher of that duty to others. He died, composed and peaceful, having his hope in another life. After the loss of one of the best of wives in 1802, Mr. D. retired wholly from the world, and had no enjoyment but in the company and attentions of his family. Those attentions were eminently his due; for never was a parent more affectionately anxious for the welfare of his children, or more studious to make them happy, by teaching them to be vivtuous and useful. The melancholy end of his brother, Dr. William Dodd, which at the time was a blow that almost overpowered him, more and more affected his spirits as he advanced in years and declined in strength, and was probably, in part, the cause of his seclusion from society at the latter period of his life. Mr. D. possessed a very powerful understanding, and was distinguished by great manliness and sincerity of character. He was a judicious and faithful adviser, a frank and steady friend. His heart was alive to all the tenderest feelings, and always ready to afford the truest evidences of kindness and benevolence. He was a native of Bourn in Lincolnshire, of which place his father was for many years vicar. He was educated at Lincoln-college, Oxford, and took orders at the usual age. Soon after he entered upon the sacred function, he settled upon the curacy of Camberwell, and li gave so much satisfaction to the inhabital ants, that he was unanimously chosen ARW ternoon Lecturer at that Church, on this " first vacancy. In 1771, he was presented to the living of Cowley in Middlesex; sad it ought to be mentioned to his credit, that. finding himself incapable of giving any attention to the duties of his parish, he voluntarily resigned this preferment, upwards of four years before his death. published, in 1766, a Translation of Formey's Ecclesiastical History, in 2 vols. 8vo. and was author of a Sermon on the Importance of a Religious Education, preached in the year 1784, at Richmond in Surrey, where he then resided, and had young persons under his care.

June 23. At his mother's house, Pullen's row, Islington, Mr. Robert Campion, in his 24th year.

P. 500. The first stone of Mr. Mylne's Bridge at Blackfriars, was laid Oct. 31, 1760 (see vol. XXX. p. 500).

AVERAGE PRICES OF NAVIGABLE CANAL PROPERTY, DOCK STOCK, FIRE-OFFICE SHARES, &c. in June 1811 (to the 25th), at the Office of Mr. Scott, 28, New Bridge-street, London:—Trent and Mersey, or Grand Trunk Canal, 12001. the last Half Yearly Dividend at the rate of 45l. per Share clear per Annum.—Birmingham, 1100l. ex Dividend 21l. clear Half Year-Staffordshire and Worcestershire, dividing 21/. per Share clear Half Yearly, 790/.—Warwick and Birmingham, 285/. dividing 111.—Monmouth, 1201.—Grand Junction, 2271. 2241. ex Dividend of 31. Half Year, -Shrewsbury, 145l. dividing 8l.-Kennett and Avon, 40l.-Wilts and Borks, 30l.-Rochdale, 52l. 54l. ex Dividend of 1/.—Ellesmere, 83l. 80l.—Grand Western, 19/. discount.—Peak Forest, 811. 801.—Grand Union, 121. 10s. discount.—Worcester and Birmingham Old Shares, 38/.—New ditto, 10s. Premium.—Dudley, 57l. with 14 Dividend.—West India Dock Stock, 165/.—London Dock, 128/. 127/. 127/. 10s.—Ditte Scrip, 251. per Cent. Premium.—Commercial Dock Old Shares, 1591. with New Share attached.—Globe, 1201.—Rock, 18s. Premium.—East London Water-Works, 1581.— Grand Junction Water-Works, 15l. Premium.—Strand Bridge, 14l. Discount.—London Flour Company, 101. 10s.—Dover Street Road, 91. Discount.

Fine per Sack 75s. to 00s. Seconds 65s. to 70s. Bran per Q. 14s. to 16s. Pollard 22s. to 25s. RETURN of WHEAT, in Mark-Lane, including only from June 10 to June 15: Total 4,600 Quarters. Average 84s, 3\frac{1}{2}d, \to 0s 11\frac{1}{2}d, higher than last Return. OATMEAL, per Boll of 140lbs. Avoird ipois, June 15, 48s. 1d. AVERAGE PRICE of SUGAR, June 19, 36s 4d. per Cwt. PRICE OF HOPS, IN THE BOROUGH MARKET, June 24: AVERAGE PRICE OF HAY AND STRAW, June 21: St. James's, Hay 7l. 5s. Od. Straw 3l. 15s. - Whitechapel, Hay 7l. 4s. Clover 6l, 8s. Straw 31. 18s.—Sm.tnfield, Clover 8l. 4s, Old Hay 8l, 0s. Straw 3l, 15s. 0d. SMITHHIELD, June 24. To sink the Offal-per Stone of 8lbs. Beef......5s. 0d. to 6s. 0d Lamb 5s. 6d. to 8s. 0d. Mutton.....5s. 4d. to 6s. Head of Cattle at Market this Day: 4d. Orl. Beasts about 1,780 Calves 170.

COALS, June 19: Newcastle 42s. 0d. to 54s. 0d. Sunderland 40s. 0d. to 43s. 3d. SOAP, Yellow 80s. Mottled 50s. Curd 94s. CANDLES, 11s. 6d. per Doz. Moulds 12s. 6d. TALLOW, per Stone, 51b. St. James's 3s. 8ld. Clare Market 3s. 9d. Whitechapel 3s. 7ld.

PRICES OF PLOUR, June 24:

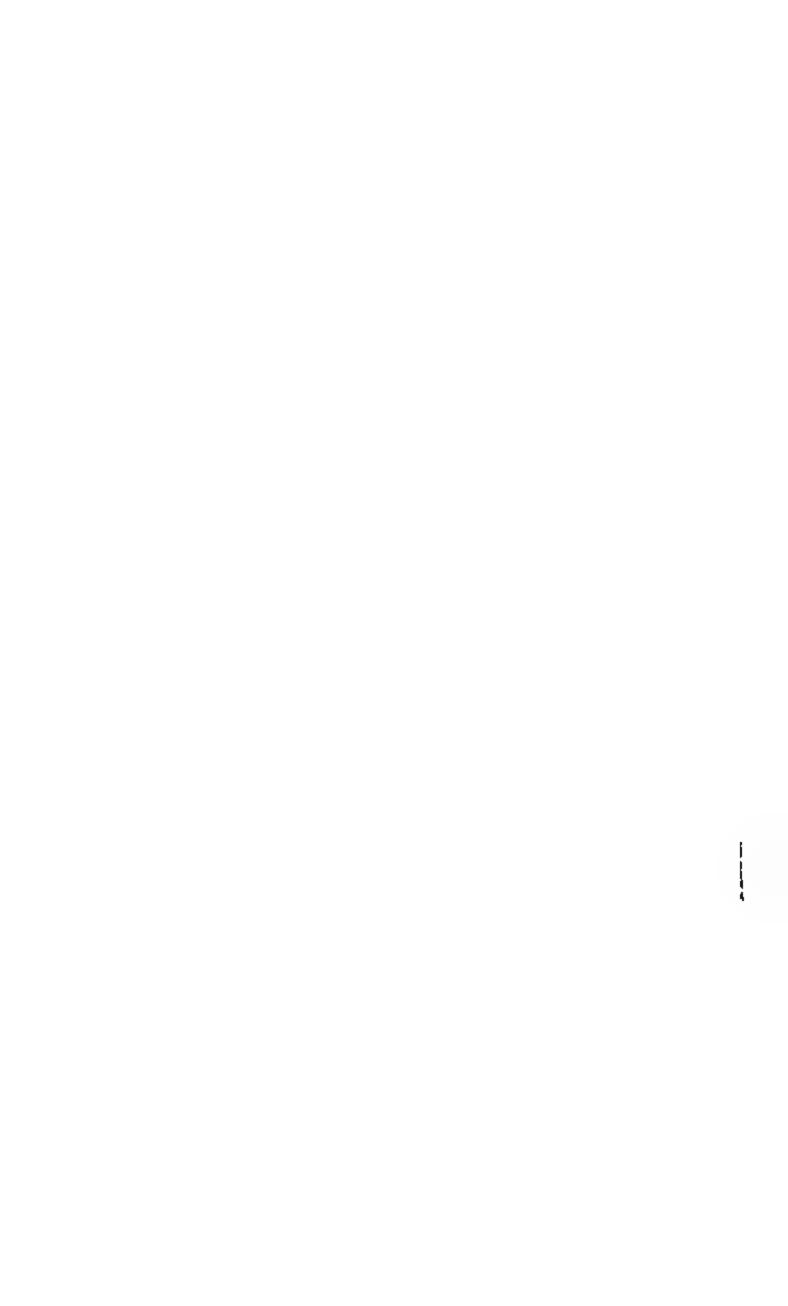

EACH DAYS PRICE OF STOCKS IN JUNE, 1811.

Description
Old Aum. New Aum. SperCL SperCl-SperCR Long Aum. Om- India Recheau Iriae Rep. Aum. India Recheau Iriae Rep. Aum. India Recheau Iriae Iriae Recheau Iriae I
New Aun. Desc Ct. Sper Ct. 4-per Ct. 5-per Ct. 5-per Ct. 5-per Ct. 5-per Ct. 1-mim. India. Exchequ. Image: Tap. India. Palls. 5-per Ct. 7-per Ct. 1-per Ct. 1-
New Aun. Spee Ct. Page Ct. India. Exchequ. Exchequ. India. Exchequ. Exchequ. India. Exchequ. Exchequ. India. Exchequ. Exchequ. Exchequ. Exchequ. Exchequ. Exchequ. Exchequ. Exchequ. Exchequ. India. Exchequ. Exchequ.<
Sper Ct. AperCt Sper Ct. Long Dam India Each equ. Irin Imp. Consols. Cons. Navy. 1797. Ahm. mium. Bonds. Bills. Sper Ct. Spec C
Ct. 4 per Ct Sper Ct. Long nium. Bonds. Bills. SperCt. 3 per Ct. 1794 97 1797. Ann. 167 1 4 p. 13 a 16pr. 1 d 3 pr. 621 1794 97 994 167 167 14 p. 14 a 11pr. 1 d 3 pr. 621 1792 shut 1994 167 167 167 168 1792 shut 1994 167 167 168 1797. 1 d 3 pr. 621 1792 shut 1994 167 167 168 1797. 1 d 3 pr. 621 1792 shut 1994 167 167 168 1797. 1 d 3 pr. 621 1792 shut 1994 167 187 15 a 16pr. 1 d 2 pr. 621 1792 shut 1994 167 187 15 a 16pr. 1 d 2 pr. 621 1792 shut 1994 167 187 15 a 16pr. 1 d 2 pr. 621 1792 shut 1995 167 187 19 a 16 a 17 a 18 pr. 1 d 2 pr. 621 18 a 1 a 1 a 1 a 1 a 1 a 1 a 1 a 1 a 1
OperChiperCt Long nium. India Exchequ. Irini Tap. 97 164 $\frac{1}{2}$ p. 13 a l fpr. 1 d 3 pr. 614 9perCt. 624 4pr. 624 <t< td=""></t<>
SperCt Long Om- India Exchequ Iria Imp. 1797. Aun. nium. Bonds. Bills. SperCt. 3perCt. 167. ‡ p. 13 a 16pr. 1 d 3 pr. 62‡ 167. ‡ p. 15 a 16pr. 1 d 3 pr. 62‡ 167. ‡ p. 15 a 16pr. 1 d 2 pr. 62‡ 167. ‡ p. 15 a 15pr. 1 d 2 pr. 62‡ 167. ‡ p. 15 a 15pr. 1 d 2 pr. 62‡ 167. ‡ p. 15 a 17pr. 1 d 2 pr. 62‡ 167. ‡ p. 15 a 17pr. 1 d 2 pr. 62‡ 1002. 16 a 2 pr. 1 a 1 a 2 d. 17 a 18pr. 2 d is. 61 a 2 d. 1013. 1 a 2 d. 15 a 14pr. 2 d is. 61 a 2 d. 61 a 2 d. 1002. 16 a 3 d. 15 a 14pr. 2 a 3 a 1 d. 61 a 3 d. 61 a 3 d. 1002. 16 a 3 d. 16 a 16pr. 1a 2 d. 61 a 3 d. 61 a 3 d. </td
Long Dim India Exchequa Irim Imp.
Om- India Exchequ Irah Imp. ‡ p. 13a 16pr. 1 d 3 pr. 62‡ ‡ p. 14a 11pr. 1 d 3 pr. 62‡ ‡ p. 14a 11pr. 1 d 3 pr. 62‡ ‡ p. 15a 16pr. 1 d 2 pr. 62‡ ‡ p. 15a 17pr. 1 d 2 pr. 62‡ ‡ p. 15a 17pr. 1 d 2 pr. 62‡ ‡ p. 15a 17pr. 1 d 2 pr. 62‡ ‡ p. 15a 17pr. 1 d 2 pr. 62‡ ‡ p. 15a 17pr. 1 d 2 pr. 62‡ ‡ p. 15a 17pr. 1 d 2 pr. 61² ‡ p. 15a 14pr. 2 d. 61² ‡ a. 1 a. 1 a. 1 a. 61² ‡ a. 1 a. 1 a. 1 a. 61² ‡ a. 1 a. 1 a. 1 a. 61² ‡ a. 1 a. 1 a. 1 a. 61² ‡ a. 1 a. 1 a. 1 a. 61² † a. 1 a. 1 a. 1 a. 61² † a. 1 a. 1 a. 1 a. 61² † a. 1 a. 1 a. 1 a. 61² † a. 1 a. 1
mium. Bonds. Bills. SperCt. SperCt. † p. 13a 16pr. 1 d 3 pr. d 3 pr. d 3 pr. d 3 pr. d 4 pr. d 5 pr. d 4 pr. d 6 d 7 d 4 d 6 d 7 d 4 pr. d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 4 d 6 d 7 d 4 d 6 d 7 d 4 d 6 d 7 d 4 d 6 d 7 d 4 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 4 d 6 d 7 d 4 d 6 d 7 d 4 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 4 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 4 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 4 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 4 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 6 d 7 d 7
Bills. SperCt. SperCt. 1 d 3 pr. 617 1 d 3 pr. 624 4 pr. 624 1 d 2 pr. 624 1 d 2 pr. 624 1 d 3 pr. 624 1 d 2 pr. 618 2 d. par 618 2 d. par 934 1 a 2 d. 618 2 a 3 pr. 934 6 618 2 a 3 pr. 614 2 a 3 pr. 614 2 a 3 pr. 614
Bills. SperCt SperCt. 1 d 3 pr. 5perCt SperCt. 1 d 3 pr. 601 602 602 602 602 602 602 602 602 602 602
·

Printed by Nichols and Son, Red Lion Passage, Fleet Street, London.

WILLIAM CARTER, Stock-Broker, Charing Cross.

the days of Noah mere, which, unquestionably, were days of great temporal calamity, so shall also the Coming of the Son of Man be; which he more fully explains in the two following verses-for as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the Ark, and knew not their danger till the flood came and took them all away; so shall also the nature of the (aming of the Son of Man be : i.e. instead of a prosperous and triumphant Prince whom they expected as their Messiah, his coming, in a temporal view, would be most calamitous a d destructive! in the 27th verse, Our Lord had said that, As the lightning cometh out of the East and shineth even unto the West; so shall also the Coming of the on of Man be. Here this Coming is explained to be, as in the days of Aoah. His kingdom could only be established on the destruction of the Jewish polity. Together they could not subsist.

With respect to Bishop Horsley's other assertion, that in most other passages of the New Testament, the phrase the Coming of Christ must be taken in its literal meaning, as denoting his coming in person, in visible pomp and glory, to the general judgment, it appears to me to be equally ill founded with that which I have already endeavoured to confute. I by no means assert that the phrase the Coming of Christ is never made use of, in this sense, in the New Testament - but, as I have produced sufficient evidence that Christ himself made use of that phrase to denote the destruction of Jerusalem, it was natural, à priori, to have expected that his Apostles, in cliuding to that event in their Epistles, would adopt it. I have, I think, given very probable eyidence that St. Paul, in his celebrated description of the Man of Sin, used the phiase in this sense, when he says, in the beginning of the Chapter - Now concerning the Coming of Christ. Dr. Aikin, in his Review of my Treatise upon this subject, has given it as his opmion that " I have placed it beyond the reach of farther controversy." And I believe I am correct when I say that you, Mr. Urban, dignified it with the appeliation of most profound. But rot to lay any tress upon the opinions which have been given upon that performance, it is a remarkable fact, that though the hypothesis there espoused has been many years before the publick, it never has, that I know of, been openly controverted except by have assertion, into the me when St. I followed (when we m and coming there is, I from the I tion, to w peals, that Christ is t his first ce proof whice that he ar not follow Bishop He of entering the meani four Serm Prophecy that he do the slight was, most the whole ressoning that I end , that when the scotter promise e pbrase, it the Meant things con beginning opinion a meaning (as a furth amertion, iada *look*e new Eart destroyed ners, agi language lsaiah ix Peter all Christian me highl preceding who is sai Maltby) upon the Sacred Ve Comment " intend solving o by fiery v of their s mdignati note of religion by God's fury; he elements in Aristotle's sense, s, air, earth, and water, but the nts in his brother Paul's sense, t he mentions presently after arnal and beggariy elements of Mosaic rites and traditionary ations." See his Sermon on er til. 13. But what appears to be the atrongest proof of all, his is the meaning of the phrase oming of Christ, as used by the ra mentioned by St. Peter, is his suce to his brother Paul's Epistles; ich he says, there are some things to be understood, which they who micarned and unstable wrest, as do also the other Scriptures, to own destruction. Whoever will ilt the Epistles of St. Paul with tical attention must, I think, be satisfied that these things which ster says were hard to be under-, could be no other than the rejecf the Jews, and the call of the iles; which, most unquestionare not only largely treated of at Apostle, but which he himself I not contemplate without autoient. I scarcely need to refer to 'eter's own reluctance to admit articipation of the Gentiles, of lessings of the Messiah's kingdom, gely stated in the History of the of the Aposties, as a proof that luded to these things, so hard to derstoad by every Jew.

hall only add, that if I have been ssful in ascertaining, with tolerarecision, the genuine meaning of several passages in the Epistles, e the phrase the Coming of Christ rs, a most delightful harmony cen them and the Gospels will stablished, which cannot but righly favourable to the cause hristianity, and a strong --- I ilmost said, an irresistible - renendation of the utility and imince of the plan which I have ted, in studying the Gospel ory, as an History of the great oversy concerning the true na-of the Messiah's character, so le in every page of it --- a plan h, in my humble opinion, bids fair nder the New Testament perfecttelligible to every man of sound rstanding; and which, consequenta these days of enthusiasm and slity, cannot be too closely ated to by every true friend of " 2. ' A Love-token.'
And suffir Tyrianis, and all Liby Land
Be gif in Drousy to thy Son in hand.
Doug. Virg. 103. 21.

The phrase Luf droury is also used by Douglas.

"S. A Gift of any kind."

The Sidones Dido

Begouth to big ane proud Tempil of Juno, With Drourys sere, and gifts of riches.

Dong Virg. 27. I.

Drury is used O. F. in the same general sense, for any sort of gift, or perhaps as synon with Treasure.

When ad Treasures are tried, quod she,

Truth is the best;
I do it on Deus Charitas, to deme the sothe,
It is as dere worth a Drury, as dere God him selfe.

P. Ploughman, fol. 5, 6.

Mr. Pinkerton properly refers to O. F. drune, la vie joyeuse; from drue, a Concubine, v. Gl. Romm. de la Rose. The origin is probably Teut. drut, druyt, faithful; Germ. draut, id. also dear, carus, dilectus, corresponding to C. B. drud. id. Germ. draut. s. donotes a Friend; Franc. drut, and drutinna, amica; whence, according to Wachter, drue and druerie. Ital. drudo, a lover, a pandar; Amant. C'est proprement le Rusen d'une Femme; Veneroni."

Thus far Mr. Jamieson. — Rowley having used the same word in the sense thus objected to, it rests with the vindicators of the antiquity and authenticity of his Poems to show that Droorie does not imply illicite Love; not even in any of the passages quoted by Mr. Jamieson. — I refer with some confidence to the following note of mine on the same subject, which would have been long since published, if the literary world had shewn a disposition to attend to this very curious and interesting question.

We have the concurring testimony, of Kersey, Coles, Phillips, Bailey, Ashe, Hearne, Macpherson, &c. &c. that Drouery or Droorie signifies Modesty, Sobriety. It was therefore very natural for Thomas Chatterton to say in his note upon it, " strange perversion of words, Droorie, in its antient signification, stood for Modesty." Mr. Tyrwhitt, who rendered it "Courtship, Gallantry," was not aware that its connection with Courtship and Gallantry depends upon its really signifying a pledging of truth, as lovers do to each other. Dru or Tru signify God or Truth in Teutonic; and the name of the Druids is probably as much connected with this idea as with that of deus an oak. If Mr. T. had recollected that the word descended to us from the old Romances. he must have known that Courtship and Gallantry, his own exposition, implied the most exquisitely refined and exalted ideas of modesty, chastity, temperance, and sobriety. A reference to that very passage, in the Rhyme of Sir Thopas, on which he founded his objection and construction of the word, will demonstrate his mistake, and the correctness of all the Glossarists.

"And herkeneth to my spell;
Of Bataile and of Chevalrie,
And Ladies love druerie, Anon I wol you tell."

constancy and chastily, the summum bonum of every old Romance; the very foundation upon which the gallant acts of Chevalry rested — that, without which, the exploits of the Knight Errant would have been null and void: for the valour of the Knight was always equalled by the chastity, truth, and constancy of the Lady.

Drury occurs again in the Rom. of the Rose, 5067, where it will be difficult to render it by any other words than true or honourable love and courtship. Chaucer is there speaking of a mercenary female, whom he first describes with all her characteristic marks, and then says that no man can love her.

"I preise no woman, though she is wode, That yeveth herselfe for any gode, For litill should a man ytelle Of her that wil her body selle, Be she a maide or be she wife, That quicke wol selle her by her life, How faire chere that evir she make, He is a wretche I undirtake That love suche one, for swete or soure, Though she him called her paramoure, And laugheth on him, and maketh him fest, For certainly no suchè best To be lovid is nat worthy, Or berin the name of Doury.

Her's could not possibly merit the name of true, or honourable, and refined love, which always comprehends the ideas of modesty, chastity, and all other female virtues.

The following lines of Squire Meldrum, l. 155, shew that Dryweric means a pledge of love or truth.

"Scho raise and tenderlie him kist, And on his hand ane ring scho thrist, And he gaif hir ane Lufe Drowerie, Ane ring set with rich rubie."

That Druery implied chaste or honourable love is also evident from Robert of Gloucester; see Ellis's Specimens, vol. i. p. 101.

"Women ne kept of no Knight as in Druerys But he were in arms well y-proved, and at least thrye.

That made lo the women the chaster life lead, [in ket (i. e. their) deed."

And the Knights the stalworder, and better

What was it that made the women lead chaster lives, and the men become more bold and valorous? Undoubtedly because no Knight was kept of, or regarded by any women as in Druery, i. e. in chaste and refined love — but or unless he were thrice proved in arms. Mr. Ellis renders it (fallantry, but does not appear to have been aware that the Gallantry meant is refined Love; which appears more decidedly in the original Latin of Geofry of Monmouth, of which, Robert of Gloucester's is a translation. " Facetæ autem mulieres, consimilia indumenta habentes, nullius amorem habere dignabantur, nisi tertio in Militia approbatus esset. bantur

PART L] Droue

bantur ergo castæ amore illarum me

If this last quo with the first and a son, it will clearly ing of the word which he has rend

On a previous (has been noticed History of English "The Ladi made ft Scho was al dight w

That is, she t pledges of love, t In the same page Davye, that in Buttles many a L: i. e. if they did n and virtue, they Droueries, their constancy -- liter for that is the me And every quotat seen containing t forms, justifies th ley's Poems in t there occurs.

If the Reader trouble to re-pe quotations, he s tirst, the Lady I Knight who love in Truth, that defended the Cast was in so much year, as a good nacomer (i. c. as a good Fighter) then might he have the confidence to solicit the love and Drouene of a Lady. What is there in this that can be construed into illicit Love? --- She means the most honourable love; which was only to be obtained by valorous deeds. second quotation is still more strongly expressive of the same sentiment; witness the fuller quotation in my note, together with the original Latin of Geofry of Monmouth. In the third, the gift of Dido can have no connection with any thing illicit. And still less the fourth and last, in which P. Ploughman speaks in the highest strain of Truth; which he says " is as dere worth a Drury as dere . God himself."

JOHN SHERWEN, M.D.

Mr. URBAN, K---m, June 27. AM induced to request the favour of a column in one of your pages for the purpose of correcting an error in a cerit, incertum est."

All this (as to the existence of this Athelstan) is very correct. The Saxon Chronicle, Asserius Menevensis (which may both be deemed contemporary Works), and succeeding Historians of respectability concur in this fact; nor is further mention made of him in our English Histories.

But now comes the learned Author's bold assertion and fanciful theory. What the contemporary Authors, or their successors, did not know (what Malmsbury was confessedly ignorant of, he can unfold. This long-lost

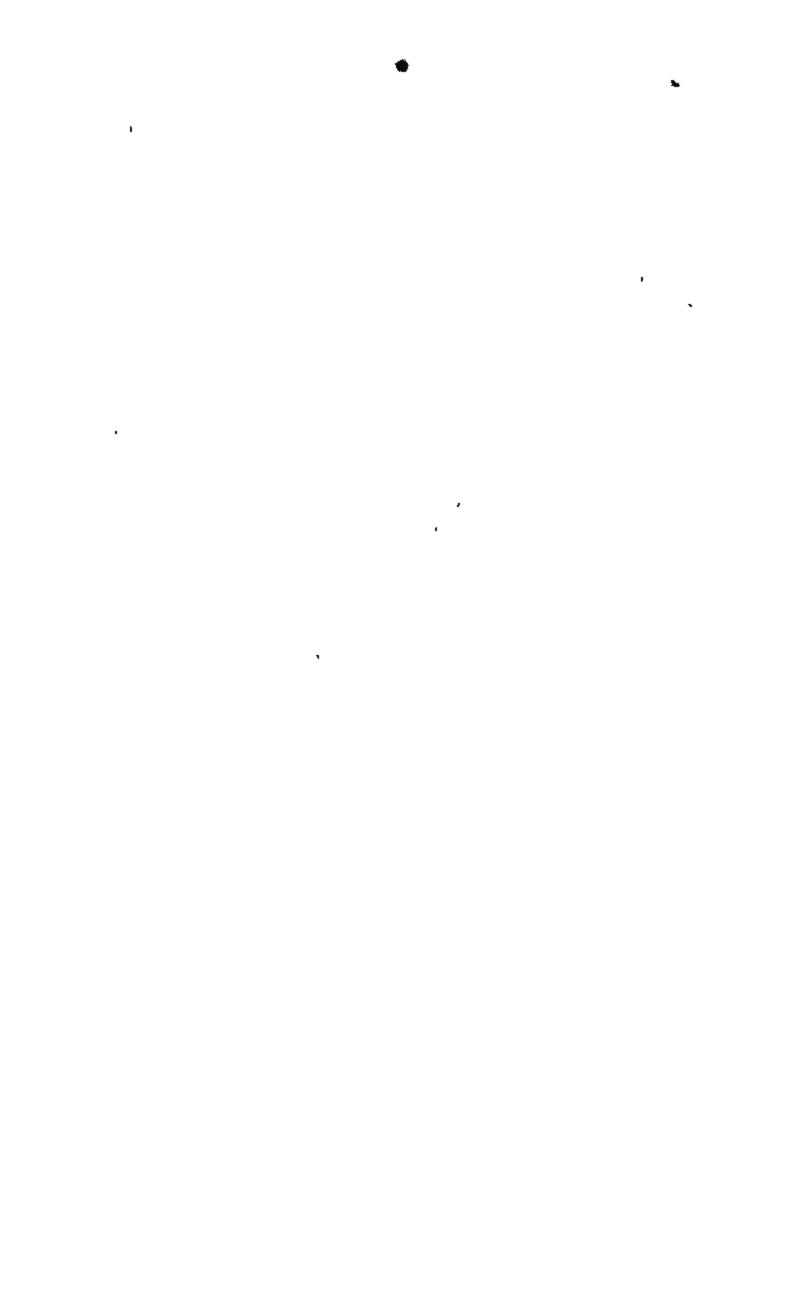

Prince " merges from our view" (I use his own words) in the person of St. Neot.

I do not mean to enquire into the accuracy of this theory, nor to youch for the degree of authenticity which attaches to the passage I am about to quote. My intention is only to point out to your Readers (some of whom may possibly have been induced, from the celebrity of its Author, to read

EACH DAY'S PRICE OF STOCKS IN JUNE, 1811.

	ယ္			. U	 7 e	n -	12. (	- -		ب ب د د د	. ;	- i i-	9.4	معة الا) - ()	3 · 1	;	ا تر	£$.			iż	10	9	2
Holiday	$0:0	Sunday	Holiday Holiday	2/2/	2403		Sunday		Hoilday	2402	340	2	Sanday		2 CC	ڊ ڊ ج	7.0		Holiday	9.7	ည် ၂		c ,	4 / 10
Stock.	183	183			1824	Shuc	2000	shut		shut	shut	shut	State	shut	Shut	3000	Short	shut		shut	Shit	· hut	יווער	2000
SLOCK.				shut	shut	anut	3005			shut	shut	shut	311175	shut	shut	7.0	5) 01	shut		shut	shat	51.11	70.00	711114
Aun.				63 ¥	 	635	63‡			€5 1		65			621	8 × 0		7			£69	œ!
A UEL	2	64		shut	shut	shut	shut	shut		shut	shut	shut	shut	shut	sint	shut	shut	Sint.		Shut		2000	Shut	>hu:
B. Red.	637	634		635	6:34	္သိုင္ငံ	6.5	625	er:	65 1	6:5	$	631	625	6:5	027 8	3 4 7 2 4 7 3 4 7	;; c	() ()	ت. بن			(25)	6
Consols,	64.	61 m	•	644	shut	shut	shut	gh;;+	211116	shut	shut	shut	shut	shut	shut	shut	shut	Short	71100		Silve I	shut	shut	632
Cons.	79	*64 F67.		467	7.4.7	792	80	8	00	802	, 103 108	707	(); ();	703	-7 -5=	- 7	1 -1 1 -1 1 -1 -1	Y -	• • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • •	761	7	-10	- 7 -	701
Navy.	97	97		97	shut	shut	shat	01	٠ 4	975	, C	· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	shut	70,	shut	shut	1-1-10		2	041	- ÷1	shut	s'aut
1797.		$66		-	903					360	1001					-		1000	- I
Aun.	167	167		162	167	163	167	•		162	1613	10.10	1013	1611	10.	11:2	164	164	401	16.3	104	163	10%	16.
pium.	≠ p.	# * P.	·	-	اند ساره اند ساره	-	-		ت. د	Ł p.	. T		6 -	1 2 3 1	»~i		1 3 % 1.	18 2 2 2 1 4.	18 4 4 6.	-	la a en.	11 d.	-
Bonds.	13 a 16pr.	ita lipr.		מולות מילות	ر د د د	: :	2:	,	lbailpr.	17 a 13 br.	ည	: نو ا	బ	17.1 1511	د د	.13 a 15pr.	i i al ôpi:	::	loalspr.	T	i a lepr.	1.0 a 21 pr.	.10 a 2(pr.
Bills.	1 d 3 pr.	1 d 3 pr. 4 pr		.3	م د	-	ť:	•	1 d 2 pr.	1 d. 2 pr	ت (٦-	-	3. 2.	d. par	lazd.	par 🤉 d. 🗎	, i = 6.	Ca Ca Jo				1 a 2 d.	3 3 7 m
5perCt. 3perCt.													1		: c	-				? 	2:-
3perCt.	617	62 1			653	621	1			1	617			.	1 .	5 1	_	61%		4	6 L 3		61.	(
Ann.	521			ر. ا بد	513	ر د رو د رو	1:					İ			5!.	-							5	ن from the pen of none but a Dead Varment. The Tandem does not appear to have risen into general netice until about the time of Properties, who exclaims against it as rivalling the Curricle, which he preferred, at least if I rightly translate the following lines:

"Invide tu Tandem voces compesce molestas Et sine nos cursu quo sumus ire pares."

However, as I am not an Antiquary, and am consequently unable to discuss this part of the subject, I drop it, sincerely hoping that the few hints which I have given may attract the notice of some one who has more extensive knowledge, joined to a more patient spirit of research, than I possess.

During the middle ages this art seems to have slumbered; and the first English Varment with whom I have met is Oliver Cromwell, who, as every one knows, had nearly lost his life while displaying his skill. The other day, among some old papers, I found a letter from my great great grandfather, Mr. Zeruiah B. to his brother Nicholas, in which he gives an account of the accident. Although the natural gravity and even austerity of his disposition, inclined him to wish well to the cause of Cromwell, yet it made him averse to those more polite diversions which the dawning spirit of refinement had just introduced. After describing the accident, be comments on it as follows:

"Albeit I am sorry for his misfortune, yet am I scandalized that he came by it of such means. I marvel that a Gentleman, specially one of such degree, should busy himself in matters so little fitting his dignity.
Methinks a man who sitteth among the Rulers of the land should be more wisely employed than in making Maygames for the rabble. In good truth
'tis a marvellous sad thing to see so great a Personage turn Servingman."

Such were the sentiments of my honoured aucestor! Such was the taste of the age in which he lived! I congratulate my Readers upon their living in a day when this Science meets with its merited patronage from so many of our Senators; and trust that the annals of the Four-in-band Club will reflect upon the latest posterity some gleam of our present illumination.

There is, however, another light in which I have not viewed this science, and I shall now do it briefly. It has been proved to us beyond doubt, that all distinctions in society are unnecessary and unnatural; and therefore 1: am sure that every lover of freedom will rejoice in the growth of a science so happily adapted to remove the obstacles to equalization. Doubtless, the spirit of Paine hovered with inconceivable delight over the festive board of Molineax, while "Two Marquisses, Six Lords, and a long. et cetera of Right Honourables, drank success to Milling;" and consulted how to evade the regulations of a Legislature, actuated by the absurd idea that Boxing is injurious to the morals of a nation. But I have spent so much time on one branch of Varmentcy, that I must postpone all the others until another opportunity. the mean time, that my Readers may not be at a loss for practical instruct tion, I beg leave to subjoin the following copy of a card which I have received.

" FASHIONABLE DRIVING.

"Anos Pyebalb begs leave to present his respects to the Nobility and Gentry, and to inform them that he intends opening an Academy for the instruction of Amateurs in the above branch of Polite Science. The Unicorn & Four-in-hand will be tanget by Masters of approved science; and the Tandem, Random, Harum-scarum, Break-neck, and Dead Certainty, by A. P. himself.

"N. B. There will always be a coach with four sham horses in the Academy; so that elderly Gentlement, and those who have families, or are constitutionally timid, may learn of mount and dismount the box, keep a firm seat, and handle the whip and reins before they turn out.

" * * * A. P.'s friends the Earl of and Lord — (from whom cards of terms and address may be had) have kindly undertaken to vouch for his professional ability."

Mr. URBAN,

THE pious and learned Julius Bate, rector of Sutton in Sussex, died at Arundel, 1771. Is there any Epitaph for him at either of those places?

His elder Brother, James Bate, was rector of St. Paul's, Deptford, 1731---1775, Has he any Epitaph?

A Biographies

tion of London; otherwise Cheapside and St. Paul's Church-yard would be totally filled with them, and every shop shut on Saturday.

A Jew may obtain his freedom by the king's service, or by a regular apprenticeship of seven years; but I am certain it cannot be obtained by purchase, as other subjects may have it; as I have been informed by the late Mr. Chamberlain Wilkes, and his attorney Mr. Parker; my own freedom being objected to on that ground, from a misconception that I was one of those people, to whom, they said, they never allowed it on the grounds I got mine, which was by purchase, in 1786. Neither can they purchase or hold freeholds, in so much that they cannot vote for members of parliament, although by previous naturalization they may become eligible and qualified, as the late Sir Samson Gideou.

Since reading your Magazine, I have made some inquiries among the most sensible of both the communities of the Jews, Portuguese and Dutch, who, though prejudiced against Mr. Frey as an innovator, still have a grateful regard for the advantage which the London Society benevolently hold out to them; but the converting of the young ones, they say, is The two high very blameable. priests, the Rev. Raphael Meldola, of the Portuguese, and the Rev. Solomon Hirschell, of the Dutch synagogue, are both of the same opi nion; and, although they will not write upon the subject, any one may converse with them privately, and be satisfied with their reasons.

Would Perseverans know what adults have been proselyted, he may learn at the chapel, that the two new openers, and two or three others, are all that have come over, and by the means of money! Could the avowal of the consent of the parents of the children be obtained, and signed in the synagogue chambers by the wardens and overseers, it would add to the dignity of such transactions: but no such thing is the case; therefore, such conversions are very doubtful; and it has happened that, more than once,. Jewish children have been reclaimed from this asylum by their parents, who, however poor, woold not suffer their children to obtain the simple and useful elements of English at the expence of their faith. It ought to be observed here, that these people have been of one orinion in matters of religious worship ever since their dispersion; and no schism has been found distracting their church throughout the whole period of time. They hold in the highest contempt the mutability of faith, and prefer a zealot of any persuasion to one who leaves one profession for another. The case of the man called Lord George Gordon, who became a Jew in Newgate, comes not in point here, as his reasons were not rational, and he had to do only with the most abandoned and unprincipled Hebrews in London, who visited him for the loaves and fishes only.

The scheme of the Jews' Conversion, like all other projects, has its probabilities and possibilities in the view of the promoters; but these people are seemingly set apart by Divine Providence, as an example to all mankind of the certainty of his judgment upon whole nations and countries. Of such as change their religion, I must declare, I hold as mean an opinion as the Jews themselves, and must doubt their sincerity, as well as ability to judge of the right or wrong of the action. Neither am I so uncharitable as to think that no other mode of faith but my own can lead to heaven, and that these people, who are living monuments and remains of God's visible government upon the earth, need such a conversion from Their rigid tenacity in their own laws and customs, observed through every period of their dispersion, and in every place, under the most oppressive governments, bespeaks a providential care visible in their conduct for ages past. Their dict, intermarriages, and burial, amongst themselves, are invincible barriers, I may say, to their coming over to our communion. These, and the constant obligation they hold to their Bye Laws, are strengthened by the accession of foreign Jews, who are still more severe in their discipline than those of England, who, from the liberty they cujoy, are more relaxed in their practice than the Foreiguers, The existence of their Byo Laws has been doubted; but I can assure your readers that they exist, and in following force, as I shall hereafter shew, in the report of a case I have obtained k shew Jour corresp laws exist in full for the application to most punishment is may be pounds or discretion of the they willingly pay righted in our Cour their maxims would then they would in med being gathered in their own burialof which disposal is the Synagogue Chai Star Chamber of 1 these people.

PART I.] Mr. La

This appears so g in their minds, that sideration gives pla poorest have some a in that rest, if they most trifling sum t for their children. Iustrate by recent e: permission for inse and to conclude this carries me not an in was at the conclusi-I shall just observe means observed by convert these peop complish that work. It is a great undertaking, and worthy the names of the first patriots and benevolents: but "beware of counterfeits, for such are abroad." Mr. Frey's Memoirs, published by himself, furnish no proof of abilities; but no prophet is esteemed in his own country, and the gentleman has travelled to this.

Every endeavour to do good deserves praise; but let us not go to work with too much assurance of success, lest we be found militating against the everlasting decrees of God, who has chosen them as vessels of honour as well as disgrace. ! must now conclude this long desultory letter, written without method, an f only to convince Perseverant and yourself of my most grateful respect for his candour and indulgence.

HENRY LEMOINE. Yours, &c.

VINDICATION of the LONDON SOCIETY for promoting Christianity umong the Jews. (Concluded from page 534.)

WILL now turn my attention to a person who signs himself " An trality. The Articles explicitly assert nothing but what is believed both by Arminians and Calvinists. The Calvinists indeed hold some opinions relative to the same points, which the Church of England has not gone the length of asserting in her Articles, but neither has she gone the length of explicitly contradicting those opinions; insomuch, that there is nothing to hinder the Arminian and the highest supralapsarian Calvinist from walking together in the Church of England and Ireland, as friends and brothers, if they both approve the discipline of the Church, and both are willing to submit to it. Her discipling has been approved; it has been submitted to; it has been in former times most shly and zealously defended by the highest supralapsarian Calvinists. Such was the great Usher! such was Whitgift! such were many more burning and shining lights of our Church in her early days, when first she shook off the Papal tyranny, long since gone to the resting-place of the spirits of the

" Any one may hold all the theo-

620 The London Society for converting the Jews defended. [LXXXI.

* If all the Dignitaries of the established Church bore even a faint recemblance to this eminent Philosopher and Christian Divine, there would not be many Disseptors, he refuse refuse to rec parent only sion? When make such a their own f the London knowing, as much (as in dren born o without mar stances of wi spectable Je upon), and v careful to bri religion, I at equally obje gard and at agree with th deception an flects disgrac I do believe have been a braced Chris tives than in plessure to it number is 'ne will the Jer every Jew | alter the sac letter or syl literally and but if he me doctrine, he known that oral law of cacy to the written law. Our Lord himself charged them with this in his day *, and it is the same at the present moment; what a farce then to adhere to the letter, and deny the spirit and effect! I wish I could agree with the Jew, that his brethren in England are so well versed in foreign and domestic literature; still more do I wish so with relation to Jewesses —their education has in some few instances been more attended to than formerly; that is, they have been taught to imitate, and perhaps excel, in a few fashionable accomplishments; but I greatly fear their minds have not been much instructed; at least I know this to be the case with many I am acquainted with, and those by no means of the lower or middle How often does a ranks of life. Jewess attend the synagogue? and say, I wish they had discovered a greater regard for the declarations of unerring Wisdom than they have done; they would have avoided some errors, and have been able to have accounted for some truths which seem to have escaped them.

To the Jews I would say, he careful with whom you selves; if you real and the Prophets, d granted that all whor who have been Christian church, are are now many pracequally despise Mose these are the loudest Methodists, Calvinist cant terms, to extol Established Church, cial care they do no her walls—Beware it

^{*} I wish some blind and ignorant persons, calling themselves Christians, and professing to consider the Jews in a different view from the rest of mankind, would consider this and other passages, and say whether they believe Jesus Christ was mistaken or not? and if not, when and at what period the Jews changed their opinions?

you through philosophy and vain deceit.—Col. ii. 8.

For the information of your readers, and to refute calumny, the London Society is the strongest instance that ever occurred of the entire absence of party spirit; it is a union of all sects and parties of Christians, who believe in the main and essential doctrines of the Church of England, for the purpose of making one grand and united effort for the conversion of the Jews. In the same committee are united the Churchman, the Presbyterian, the Independent, the Baptist, the Moravian, and the Wesleyan .Methodist; it is their object to prove to the Jew, that, however they differ upon points of discipline, and comparatively of minor importance, they alt agree in the main fact, that Jesus Christ is the true Messiah. To induce the Jew to believe this, all their efforts are directed, and not to form a party, nor to make the Jews Calvinists, nor sectarians. And, Mr. Urban, have you any readers who think this is not a great and laudable object? I might call to my aid the history of the whole Christian Church, I might challenge the opponents of the Society to produce a single Christian in antient or modern times, venerable for picty and Christian charity, who has not been anxious for the salvation of Israel; but, as multitudes of authorities have been adduced in the various publications of the London Society, and as I cannot believe your readers can stand in need of them, I will forbear repeating them; I shall only quote the followmg passage from a venerable Prelate of the English Church: " May God incline the hearts of Christians to encourage the conversion of the Jews, and to contribute to it according to their capacities; and may the same God take away the veil that is upon the hearts of the Jews, that they may be converted and saved. Amen."

Could it have been believed that in the 19th century a Society formed for the express and sole purpose of promoting Christianity among the Jews, could have been branded as enthusiastic, vile, and flagitious? or could it have been believed, that in a day when the necessity of the moral and political regeneration of the Jews is admitted, and Buonaparte is extolled to the skies for his political schemes respecting them, a Society, who merely think that, in ameliorating their moral and political state, their spiritual state ought not to be neglected, should be the victims of calumny? I shall only add, for the satisfaction of such of your readers as are really concerned for the salvation of Israel, that there is every reason to suppose that Mr. Witherby's hope will be disappointed; that the London Society is increasing in weight and number every day, by the accession of the Dignitaries of the Established Church, and other exalted characters; that the Committee have niet with much more encouragement and success than they expected, and fewer disappointments than they anticipated; and they have no doubt but their exertions will be made useful. They do not flatter themselves that they shall be the instruments of converting all the Jews in the world; but they do hope they may assist in the great work; and that, through their instrumentality, the prejudices of some may be lessened, and the judgments of others may be convinced; the rest they leave to God. If a single soul is saved, their labours will be amply compensated.

I cannot conclude without one word upon the subject of latitudinarism in matters of religion. I abhor bigotry and superstition; but they are not the errors of the day, except with the Jews and Roman Catholicks, and with them perhaps more nominally and externally than by principle. The prevailing errors of the age we live in, is a spirit of apathy, indifference. and false candour. Now, Mr. Urban, I really believe Christianity to be something more than one of the Gentoo casts; I believe it to be the only true religion; and I believe the Protestant Reformed Church of England to be the purest Church upon earth, though, like all other human institutions, abuses have crept within her

I believe my Bible; and therefore I believe that in Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom the Jews crucified, whom God raised from the dead, who was set at nought by the Jews, and who is become the Head of the corner, and in him alone, there is salvation, and that there is none other name under heaven given amongst men whereby we must be saved *.

"

مشراعه 🕦

^{*} Acts iv. 10, 11, 12.

I also believe th of the Roman Cat formation, so boas I am unacquainted to that Bible, and Majesty of heave when I bear people man Catholicks and inoffensive people. disturb them, I restand what they m persuade myself ti tions with whom I persons I will, with Mr. Reid (though book he is not ver; request to conside the following quot velation of St. Joh know thy works, ti cold nor but. I we or hot: so then bec warm, and neither spue thee out of n

That you and yet live to see the Cross of Christ as dows, is the since humble servant,

CONFESSIONS OF .
(Continued)

WE must inder little more

One of England's crew, named Toytor, a bloodthirsty leading fellow, was most immical to Captain Mackra: drunkenness, with flattery to boot, could hardly soften the beast. That, however, was the mode to try; success had no other probable means.

After swilling arrack panch in one of these dranking bonts, the smokers of topacco called for more fire.—
" Fire, from hell," grumbled out
Taylor. Presently hounced in a wooden-legged cook with burning embers-" Here's fire for your churroots in one hand, and a sharp knife with a clear conscience in the other;" and then he brandished in their eves, over the table, a bright cutlass. The company was arready more than half-scasover; but Captain Mackra had often only pretended to pull at the bowl. " Death and damnation" roars out Tumbertoe, and stumped bastily round the head of the table to the back of Capta n Mackra England sent off Capt. M. to take possession, whilst Toylor slept.

This kindness of their chief rankled in the bosoms of most of the crew: they sided afterwards with Taylor, made him Captain, marooning England with three more upon Mauritius. The Dutch had abandoned that island some years before: it was uninhabited at the time, for the French only took to it in 1722.

England found means to reach Madaga car with his three companions. For several years the pirates, many of them, had made this a place of final residence. Commodore Mathews, who was soon afterwards sent from home with a squadron to scour the Indian Ocean of freebooters, had an interview here with England, of whom we know nothing more.

Taylor escaped from a very superior force upon the Malahar coast, through the cowardice of a Commodore Upton of Bombay. After that he had too much success, particularly by surprizing a very rich Portuguese strip, first become disabled in bad weather.

Then they burnt the small ship called Victory, at Madagascar; and all that chose remained with the old settlers upon the usual condition of iongest liver take all.

Taylor, in the Cassandra, heard repeatedly that ships of war were to be expected from England: he shaped a course, after rounding the Cape of Good Hope, for the Spanish West Indies. The devil's children have the devil's luck, for so it proved with them: Taylor had made his peace with the governor of Portobello, but a day or two before, the Launceston, sent expressly from Jamaica, came down for his destruction.

(To be continued.)

REMARKS on LORD SIDMOUTH'S Bill respecting Dissenters.

MR. URBAN, June 24.

PROM the importance of the object which the noble Mover of this Bill sought to accomplish, and the popular feeling which its introduction excited throughout the country, I consider it entitled to a more lasting record in the pages of the Gentleman's Magazine, than a mere detail of its progress through Parliament can possibly convey.

In addressing, Sir, the following observations to you, I have also another end in view, the hope and wish of rescuing Lord Sidmouth from the unjust reflections that so many persons have improperly cast upon him, as the projector of this Bill; and which will best be effected, by setting before your readers such a plain and simple sketch of it, as will enable them fully to comprehend the particular objects his Lordship aimed at.

It may be necessary to premise, for the information of those who have not looked into the statutes for relief of Dissenters, that by the Act which was passed in the 19th year of his present Majesty's reign (cap. 44), intituled "an Act for the further relief of Protestant Dissenting Ministers and Schoolmasters,"—" Every person dissenting from the Church of England, who shall take the oaths, and subscribe the declaration against Popery (required by the Toleration Act of 1st of William and Mary) and also declare himself to be a Christian, and a Protestant, shall (upon paying sixpence for his certificate) be entitled to all the privileges granted by the Toleration Act, and be exempted from serving all parochial offices, and from the penalties of the Act of Uniformity."

Such has been the extensive liberality of the English Government towards Dissenters of every description, excepting Papists. That such liberality was, abstractedly, founded in wisdom, I am not disposed to question; but that it has been abused, and is constantly liable to abuse, I must at the same time openly assert. Let it be remembered, that there is no regular profession in this country, the members of which are not judiciously required to go through some ordeal before their admission into it; for how otherwise could they be qualified to fulfil their respective situations, or society benefit by their services? It therefore cannot be very anreasonable to expect, that, whilst the defenders of our laws and native soil thus pass through a preparatory course of instruction, those Dissenters who set up as the defenders of our holy faith should alone be exempted. The days of inspiration are past (at least the enthusiastic and credulous only admit the contrary); and the absolute necessity of obtaining some information in Divinity, and general theological literature, must be self-evident to all who have considered the difficult and important task of unfolding the deep counsels of God. From the facility with which every man may now obtain a certificate. and become a licensed minister of the Gospel, be be learned or illiterate. virtuous or depraved, interested or sincere; I hesitate not in saying, that great and lamentable evils have arises to the cause of religion, and to the welfare and social happiness of the English people *.

Influenced, no doubt, by similar con-

^{*} Since writing the above passage, the following remarks have fallen in my way; and as they so fully justify and confirm the sentiments I have here expressed, I trapscribe them for the perusal of your readers. Speaking of the manner in which liceness are granted, the writer observes:—" The case as it now stands is truly alarming; the lowest and vilest of human beings may commence Gospel ministers at pleasure—may preach any absurdities when and where they please—if they fail of listeners in one place, one, as a probationer, should be certified by a certain number of dissenting ministers (who had taken the oaths), testifying that the person recommended was known to them, and of good character, whereupon he should, for the period limited in the certificate, have full liberty to preach and officiate as a minister.

Such were the principal enactments in this Bill; such "the heavy and grievous penalties" (as they were styled) with the very proposal of which the whole body of Dissenters was convulsed; to which popular clamour attached the most unmerited odium, and against which, nearly 700 petitions from different quarters were presented! Surely, had the principle of the Bill been better understood, and the substance of it more extensively known, it would have received rather and were this recent instance wanting of zeal in her cause, the very appointments of a Huntingford and a Burgess to the Prelacy "will ever be jewels in the coronet of Addington."

Yours, &c. M.

Hints to the Sedentary; on Exercise, and the Preservation of Health. Let not ambition mock their humble toil, Nor grandeur view them with disdainful smile.

Mr. Uaban, June 1811. "A GREAT proportion of the inhabitants of our cities and populous towns are necessarily devoted to sedentary pursuits. Many of these have not opportunity, or cannot spare the time that is necessary for taking that exercise which is essential to health. Exercise is best taken in the open air: but where that cannot be they may try their fortunes in another—the listeners do not merely supply ministers to existing congregations, they tend to create them. Successive swarms of teachers roam through the country, and feed with a continual supply that appetite for novelty, which prevails amongst the vulgar, in a manner most favourable to their views. The matter, as we have already remarked, deserves to be weighed with the most serious attention. The matter, as we terly Review, No. Xi 364.

GENT. MAG. Suppl. LXXXI. PART L.

done, means should be found of taking it within doors. To the sedentary therefore I address myself, and have no doubt they will find the following bints deserving their attention. shall describe several effectual and easy methods of taking exercise, which may be performed at all times, in all weathers, and in almost any place, without doors or within, without any preparation, and without any apparatus or expence whatever. study, in a workshop, by a fire-side, even behind a counter, or at a desk, these methods may be followed. I have practised them myselfdaily, for several years past, with great benefit. Indeed I am confident that, under Providence, I owe the preservation of my life, and my perfect recovery from a dropsical complaint, to the exercise I have thus taken. If I can induce others to follow my example, and derive the like benefit, my purpose will be answered.

Even those who can afford opportunities of taking suitable exercise in the usual way, cannot always command the means. Bad weather, accidents, business, and other circumstances, will sometimes intervene, and prevent this necessary enjoyment. The studious, in particular, require occasional bodily exertion in order to preserve health. To these the means I have to offer may prove extremely Most of the disorders that affict the human frame, arise from a want of exercise, in promoting the necessary secretions, and expelling gross humours. Prevention is at all times better than cure.

The methods of exercise that I practise are of several kinds:

1. Duma Sawing. Any person who has seen sawyers at work, in sawing timber into boards, will immediately conceive a proper idea of this exercise. It is done by making a spring on the toes of the feet, without raising them from the ground, at the same time that both arms are thrown forcibly forward to their full stretch; the motions being repeated and continued, as long as may be thought necessary, or till you require rest. These motions bring every muscle of the body into immediate action, open the chest, and propel the blood through the vessels with salutary violence, contributing to remove obstructions, and promoting the neces sary secretions. In a few moments an agreeable warmth diffuses itself through the whole body, and brings on a useful perspiration. This movement should be performed without bending the body either backward or forward, as all exercise is best taken in an unright position. A space of four feet square is sufficient for this mode of exercise.

2. The Skipping Movement. By seeing young people amusing themselves with a skipping cord, this movement is immediately learnt. It can, sists in making easy leaps, so that your feet just clear the ground, at the same time that your arms are thrown forcibly forward as before, and brought instantly back, repeating these motions without intermission, till you find yourself tired, and require a form this

s. This were at the sar with hot forcibly puts the value with grateful This movatirring stand in, than is su

4. Tri
This is n ternately will go, w without a ment sha ancles, h move obs proper di person, a sitting po will find tendency this is or pulse.

These varied o stances. some per unpleasan a few tri-with ple of time (worth neationing) is fathered for, five minutes at a time will generally display a light figure to advantage.

i frequently hear people complaining of cold test, particularly at night, before going to bed, and after. For myself, I hardly know what it is to have cold feet. That is owing to the exercise I take in the modes here described. If any tendency to coldness in the feet is felt, you will find, by following these methods, in less than four minutes, a gentle glow spreading itself through the feet and all other parts of the body.

Another method of preventing cold feet at bed-time is this; draw off your stockings, just before undressing, and rub your ancies and feet with your hand, as hard as you can bear the pressure, for five or ten minutes, and you will never have to con plain of cold feet in hed. It is hardly conceivable what a pleasurable glow this diffuses. It greatly promotes health, by facilitating that emission from the poresthat Nature intended, and which, if long obstructed, gives rise to dissent almost as much expectation in the religious world, as formerly there had been upon his first coming. culative opinions as to the prophecies relative to this event, and circumstances connected wit carried to a greater your own pages have witness, with traits mination and ingenuit instances of this in are the remarks on Jews in page 29 of for January last, grounded upon Hevelations, chap. ix. v. 4. That the figurative Jews 1 men in a peculia the least doubt; means believe t natural stock of men who are to means which the l further believ will join issue ' supposing that France or elsewt

"the great pruning" which he thinks they are yet to undergo. Those who become conversant in the history of countries where these hitherto oppressed people have resided, will soon be convinced that they have already been pruned and peeled and scattered too with a vengeance.

Instead of menace of this kind, I should now rather adopt the language of the prophet Isaiah, xl. 2. "Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned; for she hath received of the Lord? hand double for all her sius."

Of the future exaltation of the Jews in general, there cannot be the least doubt, from several reasons which might be adduced, both religious and political: it is not the end, but the means, by which this amelioration is to be effected, which causes the difference of opinion among commentators. I think the means which they assign for this and other objects of prophecy in connexion with the same, are fanciful, and consequently futile in the extreme.

In the dark ages, it is well known that some of the Popish Ecclesiasticks, to prove that Antichrist could not possibly be found in the Head of the Church, framed such a picture of this supposed personage, as could scarcely be found at any time or in any place. The following are among the most prominent marks of Antichrist, as laid down by these writers: "false characters," which, as Mr. Jurieu observed, had been brought forward to conceal and obscure the true ones. It is understood, first,

That Antichrist must be only one single man, and not a succession of kings or tyrants.

That the duration of his kingdom is to be only three natural years and a half, and not three prophetical years and a half, which make up 1260 years.

That he must style himself the Messiah, and that the Jews must look upon him as such.

That his seat shall be at Jerusalem; that he shall rebuild the temple there, re-establish the Mosaical service, and be received by the Jews as their Messiah.

That he is not to be an outward idolater, but of the tribe of Dan, and to worship the Devil in secret. He will do nothing in the name of Jesus Christ.

He shall abolish the sacrifice of the mass; he is to hate idols; to conquer the whole world by arms; and possess all sorts of treasures.

He is not to come till the Roman German empire is destroyed; his coming will be just at the end of the world; he shall be defeated forty-five days before the end of it, &c. &c. &c.

It is by no means surprising that these Popish writers, and among them Cardinal Bellarmin, should approve of this scheme for removing the odium of Antichristianism from their Church, not by doing it away altogether, but by fixing it upon the chimerical character just alluded to; but it is really astonishing that the Rev. Mr. G. Faber and the late learned Dr. Horsley should adopt this Popish fiction either in the whole or in part. This, nevertheless, being the case, Mr. Faber might moderate his disapprobation of certain entinent criticks, who use the term of "fancied discoveries" in reference to some ef this gentleman's opinions; though it must be admitted, from the tergiversation adopted on their parts; that they seem as if they wished to throw cold water upon all attempts whatever directed to the application of prophecy to the present or to approaching times.

Mr. Faber, however, has lately informed us, that Bishop Horsley maintains, "that the French Government is the great Antichrist of the last ages; and that its power is destined to be broken in Palestine:" both of which positions are fair and natural deductions from the marks haid down by the Popish writers; or rather, this is Antichrist himself predicting the fate of Autichrist!!!

There may be some, there may be several circumstances in the French Government, and even in the Head of it, which bear a strong and imposing similarity to the Scripture characteristicks. And the apparent acknowledgement made by the French Jews of the Messiahship of the French Imperor may appear as striking correborations of Sacred Writ, in profess history: but unless the events prefigured, and the facts which have taken place, agree in each particular, as fect and permanent state may also be that to the Christians, which Jerusalem was to the Jews.

If it be asked from what state the Jews are to be restored? the answer would be, from captivity, from oppression, and from the condition of aliens in every country where they manic Empire (now, strictly speakhave been scattered. If Mr. F. or ing, no more) as a state eminently to the expected reform of these evils by natural means, adopted by good princes, powerful reformers, and even conquerors; such as Cyrus and others.

The learned Mr. Joseph Mede was, I believe, one of the earliest English Commentators who viewed the Ger-

Antichristian; though I have somewhere read that Bishop Downam was the first writer on the Revelations who understood the seventeenth and eighteenth chapters, as describing the punishment and destruction of the German Emperors. This destruction, however, had been a constant theme with some of the Hussites, and martyrs of Bohemia, who had long felt the iron hand of the house of Austria.

But to return. Mr. Joseph Mede, like Jerome Savonorola, seemed persuaded that force alone, under the guidance of Providence, could pussibly bring about the necessary reform in Apostate Christendom. Alluding to the Papal Heaven, he observes, "Now in that Antichristian heaven there are very many stars, and of a diverse magnitude, princes, dukes, prelates, lords of countries, and kings. There are also great lights like the sun and moon. Now of these, the most glorious, and far the greater light of all which shines in the Papal firmament, is the Germunic Empire, the proper inheritance of the House of Austria."

Instead of the sixth, Mr. Mede thought the fourth vial would be poured out upon that house; that, as he says, "being pulled away from the heaven of the beast, and shining to another purpose, it may burn and torment the inhabitants of the Anti-christian world, even to blasphemy; whom, before, it was wont to refresh with its beams."

With respect to Regal agency, when the successes of the great Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden became eminent. Mr. Mede exclaimed, "There is now at length come from the North God's avenger of wrongs, to succour atflicted and distressed Germany; a godly king, happy, and, which way soever he turneth, a conqueror; whose prosperous progress is wondrous speedy. Is not this he whom the Lord of Hosts hath destined to execute the work of this vial? bope, and heartily pray: Gird thee with thy sword, therefore, O great king; go on prosperously, and bear rule, because of righteousness, and thy right hand shall teach thee marvellous things."

Upon the same principle Dr. Burnet, in his Theory of the Earth, Book ii. chap. v. uses the following languago: "I am very willing to admit that Elias will come according to the sense of the prophet Malachi, chap.iv. 5. 6;. but he will not bear the name of Elias, nor tell us he is the man that went to heaven in a fiery chariot, and is now come down to give as warning of the last fire. But some divine person may appear before the second coming of our Saviour, as there did before his first coming, and, by giving a new light and life to the Christian doctrine, may dissipate the mists and errors, and abolish all those little controversies among good men, and the divisions that spring from them; enlarging their spirits by greater discoveries, and uniting them all in bonds of unity and charity, and in the common study of truth and perfection. Such an Elias the prophet seems to point out; and may he come, to be the great peace-maker and preparer of the ways of the Lord."

Now, to bring about such peace in Christendom as seems here to be intigmated, it is scarcely necessary to insist that the plague of persocution must be taken from its great source in the Romish or Papal power; and no one would for a moment suppose that this could be effected without Regal interposition, or the secular arm. Both history and experience are vouchers for the contrary.

A learned writer on Daniel zii. observed on the words "About that time Michael shall stand up, the great prince, &c." " that this will be in behalf of God's people, either the Christians in general, or Jewish converts to Christianity: for it is to be observed, that when the Jews become again the people of God, it must be by embracing the Gospel, so that the Jews, as such, will be no more God's Michael seems to denote pesuliar. some deliverer; but whether Christ introducing the Millennium, or an earthly prince, or party, the instrument in the hand of the Almighty to abolish superstition—he has his title מכאל 'Who is like unto God,' just as the Maccabees had from an applicable motto."

Dr. Apthorpe, in his Discourses on Prophecy, read in the Chapel of Lincoln's Inn at Bishop Warburtou's Lecture, goes even farther, and supposes that the mighty Angel in the Rev. xviii. 21. who took up a stone like a great mill-stone, and cast it.

into

and poncies of man shall here be confounded; and when we say with the greatest assurance, peace, peace, there shall be no peace at all for us. For I know not among whom else to find that small kingdom full of trouble, which is to survive those two other great kingdoms (old France and Spain), represented in vision by the two remaining heads of the eagle. If now at the last, the right head (France) after his having devoured the left, shall fall through the sword himself, then it will be evident that the eleventh and twelfth chapters of Esdras do contain in them a true and faithful prophecy, whoever was the writer of that book; and that we reasonably expect those other things to come to pass, which we are there encouraged to hope for. I doubt not but you will be wellpleased when you shall have

(in the maintent of mount scase) is Enoch, and that, in virtue of that name and spirit, the earth is or shall be given to him, as the sea is given to Leviathan, that old dragon which maketh war against the heavenly woman and her seed. As the earth differs from the sea, and the wood from the sand of the sea, even so shall the rise and manifestation of this prince be different from that of any other that has been before, and have taken their dominion from the beast which riseth out of the sea, Rev. xvii. and which is indeed no other than this very Leviathan. For I look upon the parable of Enoch and Leviathan, which is found at least in the Latin copies of Esdras, to be somewhat more than a mere talmudical tale."

It is to be regretted that other remarks upon Esdras, written by this learned physician, were entrusted by his daughter to the Rev. William Law, and probably lost.

I could

^{*} A supposed allusion to the War of the Succession.

I could increase these testimonies, collected in a long course of reading, to a considerable volume; but wish not at present to intrude upon the rest of your Correspondents.

Yours, &c. Anti-Mercator.

ARCHITECTURAL INNOVATION.
No. CLV.

(REMARKS, &c. continued from p. 445.) DOSTSCRIPT. 'It always causes L unpleasant sensations in me whenever I find J. Britton's authority in Architectural matters brought into notice, whether it makes against his " two years" study in the art, or for it. Dr. Milner has quoted a passage from a review on his works, which Jeans to the Whittington side of the question, about the invention of the Gothic style in the East, as recorded by M. Paris, " of the employment of captive Saracens, as labourers under European architects." The Doctor gives the Latin of M. Paris on this subject, and says, "the quotation, so far from proving the fact, proves directly the contrary:" for the captive Saracens were only employed to serve the Christian masons, under the command of a Christian king; as by the same rule the Mahometans made the Christian captives do the like offices of drudgery for them. "The nature and intent of the king of Portugal's decree in 1184, with respect to the employment of his Saracen prisoners—He did not set them to work in repairing the churches for any skill which they possessed in a style of architecture so peculiarly adapted to ecclesiastical purposes, otherwise he. would have put Saracen architects and masons in requisition, instead of wason's labourers; but he condemned a certain number of them, as many, we may suppose, as could be so employed, to devote their personal toil to the re-establishment and splendour of the Christian religion."

Chapter I. "Next to the intrinsic beauty and sublimity of the Pointed architecture of the middle ages, the circumstance which principally excites our admiration is, the silence of contemporary writers concerning the invention of it, and the very country where it first appeared." The Doctor then observes, that, in the annals of those times, we read of churches being built, or repaired in a new style; of emulation among founders and architects, in decorations and the grandeur of their works; " which emulation could not fail of producing improvements in an art not then subject to any fixed rules. Still there is no record extant to inform us who first broke the architectural semicircle of former ages, into the aspiring arch of the Pointed style; who devised to split the ponderous pillar of the established orders, into the light cluster of our Cathedral columns; or who began to ramify the plain mullions of our windows, and the ribs of our. vaults, into the rich tracery of our bays and groins. It is even still a subject of controversy, to what part of the world we are to look for these singular discoveries—the same mist of obscurity hangs over the origin of bells, organs, clocks, painted glass, and other important inventions of the ages, injuriously called dark ages. by the vain and superficial one in which our lot is cast. Thus much we may gather with certainty from this very silence of our religious ancestors. and their general indifference with respect to posthumous fame, that they were more anxious about being good and useful than appearing so."

The Doctor asserts, it is from the records and monuments of the ages in question, not from the theoretic and fanciful decisions of medern Architects, or other writers, that any light concerning these matters is to be obtained. As to the monuments: there must be sufficient evidence that they are the genuine productions of the æras to which they are attributed. For so numerous have been the changes and alterations in most antient structures, that, without the greatest judgment, knowledge, and jealous attention to them, we are constantly exposed to the grossest anachronisms and errors in pronouncing upon them. Coëval medals, carvings, mosaics, and paintings representing antient buildings, frequently afford better evidence of their former state, than the actual sight of the originals," &c.

"The principal object of the present essay," the Doctor affirms, he having been called upon both by his scientific allies and his antagonists, " is to ascertain the origin, progress, and orders of the Pointed Architecture of monument knew better. It was left for more modern times to render Christian Churches Pagan Temples. Having visited every Cathedral in England except two, and very many Parish Churches in my Rambles, it may be presumed, that amusement at least was the end I had in view. Amusement, and a wish to see the Country that gave me birth, were not improper motives; but in these rambles I have often had to combat feelings I wished never to have done; and those I have alluded to made a proportion. I hope, for the honour of the arts, of sincerity, propriety, and simplicity amongst us, such things will not be repeated; but, on entering a place dedicated to the " Most High," we may meet with nothing to interrupt that profound awe and devotional frame of mind we ought ever to possess in such a place! could make further remarks, and draw other parallels (such as, compare Wykeham's tomb at Winton Cathedral with Mansfield's waggon-loads of stone at Westminster, and say which deserves approbation); but I hasten to add, that I am, Yours, &c. T. W.

D

Mr. URBAN, Oct. 26. "HE practice of giving new names to streets uppears to me to increase very much of late, and is, in my opinion, generally speaking, very absord; it tends to make confusion, and icad people into mistakes. Many instances might be produced where such alterations in this Metropolis bave taken place. If I am not mistaken, a few years ago an attempt was made to alter the name of Hattongarden to Hatton-street; and now the original name is restored: most certainly the place does not resemble a garden, and as the name Hatton was retained, it was not of any great consequence; notwithstanding which I think it was well to restore the old name. Broad Saint Giles's now is, I believe, called High-street, Bloomsbury. Is not this being "more nice than wise," this place having been (and I fear still is) inhabited by a very dissolute set of people? St. Giles's became almost proverbial for a place where people of this description live: which, I imagine, was in some degree the cause of the name being changed. Would the better part of the inhabitants change the manners of the rest, they would perform a meritorious Changing the name cannot be act. expected to do much, if any good whatever. There is one other place I shall specify, and then finish my observations, hoping to have the opinion of your Yeaders on what may be called street-naming invovetion, and that some of them would, if you think proper to receive it, form a list of the principal alterations of this kind which have taken place, with the dates, where known, when such changes took place. If this list would occupy too much space for ose communication, it might be divided into several,

Inquiring a few days ago for Self-(Rosemary-lane, East petre-bank Smithfield), I found it was called Dock-street. What gave it the name of Salipeire-bank I wish to be informed. Many of your readers may remember that this place was where Elizabeta CANNING had been spending the day, on the evening of which she was, according to her account (which I believe to be true), forcibly taken by two men away to an house several miles from London, in which she was confined for very near a month (all but a few hours), from which the escaped, and came home to her mether's in Aldermanbury-postern, on the 29th January 1753. I wish to me the old name restored, if it were only for the purpose of not losing the knowledge of one of the places connected with the very mysterious & fair of Elizabeth Canning.

Yours, &c.

1. Z

Mr verb, will 1 tish 1 whick " D ale-ho had a which able often and th that al forme. the hg other where TABLE OF attendants. In the distances are Yours, &c.

Čivis.

The Motion of a worthy Correspondent (p. 411.) for a Tablet to the Memory of the gallant John Sykes, not having been properly suconded; his generous Subscription shall be returned to him on demand.

MEMOIRS OF THE LATE RICHARD CUMBERLAND, Esq. (Concluded from page 596.)

ON the King's accession to the throne, Mr. Cumberland composed and published a poem in blank verse addressed to the young Soveregu, in which he attempted to delineate the character of the people, and the principles of that conduct which would insure their attachment, and establish his own happiness and glory. This poem was anonymous.

On the appointment of Lord Halifax to be Lord Lautenan, of Ireland, Mr. C. accompanied that nobleman as Uister Secretary, and his father was made one of the Chaplanis. Will into Gerard Hami ton had negotiated himself into the office of Chief Secretary, but not by the enoice of Lord II; to whom he was lattle known, and in the first instance not a together acceptable. Cumberland in consequence became involved in by mass of a nature that should not in the course of office have belonged to him, and his situation was thereby rendered very delicate, and not a little dangerous; whilst at the same time his Lordship's private finances, of which Comberland had the superintendance, were then not in a flourishing condition. The business of the session was passed through with success; and the Lord Lieutenant obtained great popularity. Towards the close of the session his Lordship expressed his suturfaction in Cumberland's services, and offered him a baronetcy, an honour which after due consideration he declined. though he had afterwards reason to think that it contributed to weaken his interest with Lord H. Here Mr. Cumberland remained till a change in administration removed his patron to the secretaryship of state, when he applied, in voin, for the wards obtained the clerkship of reports in the office of Trade and Plantations under the Earl of Hilsborough. — Previous to this, through his own merits, and the interest of his son, his father had been appointed to the Bishoprick of Clonfert, from which he was afterwards translated to Kilmore.

utaarian

Mr. Cumberland contributed "Verses on the Birth of the Prince of Wales," to the Cambridge collection on that occasion.

Bickerstaff having brought forward with success his Operas of Love in a Village and The Maid of the Mill, Mr. Cumberland attempted a drama of that sort, under the title of "The Summer's Tale," which was performed for nine or ten nights, but with no great applause; the musick to it was the production of Bach, Arne, Ar-This drama was nold, and Simpson. published in 1765. As some of the scenes were tolerably conceived, and had preserved themselves a good opinion in the audience by the simplicity of the style, and the excellent acting of Mrs. Mattocks and Mr. Dyer, he afterwards cut it down to an afterpiece of two acts, and exhibited it under the title of "Amelia" with very tolerable success; and published it in 1768. It was altered and printed a second time in 1771.] Seeing, however, how little credit would accrue to him from persevering in this department of the drama, he turned his talents afterwards to compositions of a more independent and higher character.

His next production was the Comedy of "The Brothers," which was brought out at Covent Garden, and well received. He published it in 1769, having prefixed to it a dedication to the Duke of Grafton, the sole motive for which was his being the then Chancellor of the University of Cambridge.

During a visit at his father's at Clonfert, in a little closet at the back of the palace, with no other prospect than a single turf-stack, he began to plan and compose "The West Indian." It was his object always in his hours of study, so to locate himself, as to have little or nothing to distract his attention. He wrote some few scenes of this Comedy also in a kind of hermitage in the pleasure-grounds of Mr. Talbot, of Mount Talbot, who affixed an inscription to that building in commemoration of this circumstance. During his stay in Ireland, he received from the University of Dublin the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. On his return to London, he entered into an engagement with Garrick to bring out the West Indian at his theatre; and availed himself of Garrick's suggestions in adding a new scene and other improvements. This piece (which appeared in 1771), proved successful beyond the utmost expectation of its Author, who was aware that the moral was not quite unexceptionable. It produced, on the Author's night, a larger sum than the then treasurer had ever paid before.

During his residence in Queen Annestreet East, an event occurred which evinced in a striking manner his disinterested generosity and high sense of honour. was visited by an old clergyman, the Rev. Decimus Reynolds, son of Bishop Reynolds, and first cousin to his father. This gentleman, without any previous intimacy, had bequeathed to Cumberland his estate twenty years before: he brought the will in his hand; but required that Cumberland should accompany him to a conveyancer, and direct that a positive deed of gift should be drawn up; for which purpose he had brought the titledeeds, and should leave them with Cumberland. Cumberland conjured Mr. Reynolds to inform him if he had any cause of displeasure with his nearer relations; stating that his natural heir was a man of most unexceptionable worth and good character. Mr. R. stated that he left it to Cumberland, as being the representative of the maternal branch of his family; that Cumberland's father had ever been his valued friend; and that he had constantly watched Cumberland's character, though he had not established any personal acquaintance with him. Upon this explanation, and the evidence of Mr. R.'s having inherited no atom of his fortune from his paternal line, Cumberland consented to the drawing up of the deed, causing, however, highly to his honour, a clause of resumption to be inserted, itspowering the donor to revoke his deed at any future time. This clause Mr. R. was with great difficulty prevailed on to admit; prophetically observing, that it left him exposed to the solicitations of his relations, and in the debility of age, he might be pressed into a revocation of what he had decided upon as the most deliberate act of his life. After ten years of uninterrupted cordiality between them, this resumption actually took place; Major Reynolds, the nephew of the old gentleman, the idea was suggested of extemporary epitaphs upon the parties present. Garrick, off band, wrote an humourous epitapli upon poor Goldsmith, who was the first in jest, as he proved to be in reality, that they committed to the grave. Dr. Bernard, the Dean of Derry, also gave him an epitaph, and Sir Joshua Reynolds illuminated the Dean's Verses with a sketch of his bust in pen and ink inimitably caricatured, Goldsmith was rather sore, and seemed to expect that Comberland would produce something in the same kind of burlesque with theirs. Cumberland, however, wrote a few serious and complanentary couplets. which had an effect upon Goldsmith the more pleasing for being so entirely unexpected. The concluding line-

" All mourn the poet, Hament the man"-

Goldsmith was much gratified by. At the next meeting Goldsmith produced the epitapas, which are printed in his posthamous poem of "Retaliation," in which he characterizes his company under the similaride of various sorts of meat: Cumperland in the mean time had written a little poem, figuring them under that of liquors. He was the last survivor of this celebrated club of wits.

Alcoholdes, were new. The public approbation sanctioned the attempt at the first production of the play; but it has since been neglected.

In compliance with the wishes of Moody, who had become the established performer of Irish characters, Cumberland sketched another Hibernian on a smaller scale in the entertainment of "The Note of Hand, or a Trip to Newmarket," which was the last of his pieces that Garrick produced before he disposed of his property in Drury-lane. His Tragedy of "The Battle of Hastings" was brought out there under the direction of Mr. Sheridan. In his own judgment it was better written than planned. It was published in 1778.

His prospects in life began now to brighten; for, on the accession of Lord George Germaine to office, he was promoted to be Secretary to the Board of Trade, which produced an increase of income that could not be otherwise than acceptable to the father of six children. His Lordship took particular notice of Cumberland, and continued his kind patron and friend till death.

Mr. Cumberland afterwards resided at Tetworth in Bedfordshire, in the vacanity of the house of his honoured friend Lady

Francis

Francis Burgoyne, sister of Lord Halifax. Here he passed his summer recesses; and in one of them wrote his Opera of " Calypso," for the purpose of introducing the compositions of Mr. Butler, then a young man newly returned from Italy, where he. had studied under Piocini. This Opera was brought out at Covent Garden; but did not meet with very great success, The musick has never been published; though, in the estimation of Cumberland, more beautiful and original compositions were never presented to the English stage. Mr. Butler settled at Edinburgh as a teacher and writer of musick, and is well known to the professors and admirers of that art. In the following season Cumberland wrote •• The Widow of Delphi, or the Descent of the Deities," the songs of which also Mr. Butler set to musick, and published a selection of them. This Opera has never been printed; but received frequent revisions and corrections in the MS.; and its Author considered it in this improved state as one of his most classical productions.

About this time appeared his Tragicomedy of "The Bondman," and "The Duke of Milan," altered; peither of which has been printed.

At the request of Lady Francis Burgoyne, Cumberland interested himself in the fate of the unfortunate Perreau, when under trial for his life. The defence, which he read on that occasion at the bar, was every word drawn up by Cumberland, under the revision of the counsel, Mr. Dunning, who did not change a syllable.

In 1780, Cumberland was appointed on a confidential mission to the Courts of Lisbon and Madrid: a situation which, however honourable, seems to have laid the foundation of all his future distresses, and to have embittered every remaining hour of a long-protracted existence. The direct object of his embassy was to draw the Court of Spain into a separate treaty of peace with this country; and but for the disturbances which took place at that period in London, it is probable that he might have proved successful in his endeavours, since his conduct gave the most perfect satisfaction to the Spanish Court, and even procured him the particular confidence and attachment of their king. From these events, and other untoward circumstances, he was, in 1781, recalled, after having contracted a debt of near 5000l. in the service of his country, not one shilling of which Lord North's Ministry ever thought proper to repay him, and to discharge which he was compelled to dispose of the whole of his hereditary property. For what reason neglect and injustice so nomerited were awarded to a faithful servant, it is difficult to conjecture; if, because he had not proved successful in an affair where success was impossible from the situation of the two parties, the nosuspecting confidence of the ambassador must be lamented, while the cool indifference and narrow-minded policy of his employers cannot but be execuated. It is said, however, that he exceeded his commitsion. It is impossible here to pass over the noble offer of the King of Spain, through the Count Florida Blanca, upon Mr. Cumberland's recall. After expressing his conviction of Cumberland's sincere endeavours to promote pacification, and intimating his apprehension that Cumberland would be disappointed by his own Court in respect to an indemnification on the score of his expences, the Count tendered full and ample compensation for all charges incurred by his coming into Spain; " being unwilling," as he stated, " that a gentleman who had resorted to his court and put himself under his immediate protection, without a public character, benestly endeavouring to promote the mytual good and benefit of both countries, should suffer, as he certainly would do, if he withstood the offer." The generous offer could not, of course, be accepted, And upon his journey home through France, the bills of the deserted negotiator were stopped, and his credit so completely bankrupt, that he would have been put in prison at Bayonne, had not his friendly fellow-traveller, Marchetti, advanced him 500% which enabled him to pay his way through France and reach his home.

Upon Mr. Burke's bill of economy, and the consequent dismission of the Board of Trade, Mr. Cumberland retired with a compensation far from adequate to the emoluments of the place he was deprived of, and fixed his abode at Tunbridge Wells, having made considerable reductions in his establishment. His feelings and occupations on this occasion cannot he better described than in his own words; "Being now dismissed from office, I was at leisure to devote myself to that passion. which from my earliest youth had never wholly left me, and I resorted to my books and my pen, as to friends, who had animated me in the morning of my day, and were now to occupy and uphold me in the evening of it, I had happily a collection of books, excellent in their kind, and perfectly adapted to my various and discursive course of reading. In almost every margin I recognized the hand-writing of my grandfather Bentley; and where, ever I traced his remains, they were sure guides to direct and gratify me in my fondness for philological researches. My mind had been harassed in a variety of ways; but the spirit that from resources within itself can find a never-failing fund of occupation, will not easily be becken excellent than the former. A Tragedy intituled "The Arab," in which Henderson performed also the principal character, which gives title to the piece, was acted once only for that actor's benefit, and has never since been put to any use.

In 1783 appeared his " Letter to the Bishop of Llandaff" respecting his proposal for equalizing the revenues of the hierarchy and dignitaries of the Church Establishe l. His Lordship, however, declined the controversy.

In 1785 his Tragedy of " The Carmelite" was brought out at Drury-Lane, which was all y supported by Mrs. Sid-dous, and Mr. Kemble, then in the commeadement of les career. In 1785 also appeared his Comedy of " The Natural Sou," in which Miss Farren admirably sustained the principal character. collection of Essays, under the title of " The Observer" were first printed this year experimentally at Tunbridge Wells, in 2 vois. 12mo. He afterwards engaged with Charles Dilly to publish a new edition, and thereupon stopped the impression of the old. The new edition was considerably angmented, and appeared in five volumes in 1786. When this was out of print, he made a fresh argangement of the at the average of full 50 lines a day, of which he kept a regular account, marking each day's work upon the MS. This poem has since been republished in a more portable size in 2 vols.

Among his productions of the more serious cast may be included, his "Version of Fifty of the Psaims of David," upon which he bestowed great attention: and his religious and argumentative tract, intituled "A few plain Reasons why we should believe in Christ, and adhere to his Religion," a copy of which he presented with due deference to the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of London, the latter of whom honoured him with a very gracious acknowledgement by letter. He wrote also as many Sermons as would make a large volume, some of which have been delivered from the pulpit; and was for some years in the babit of composing an appropriate prayer of thanksgiving for the last day in the year, and of supplication for the first day of the succeeding year. He was accustomed also to select passages from the Oid Testament, and turn them into verse; of which he has given a specimen ju his " Memotra."

In 1793, he brought out a comic opera in three acts, founded on the story of Wat Tyler; which, being objected to by the Lord Chamberlain, he was obliged to new-model, and produce under the title of "The Armourer." He also brought out a comedy under the title of "The Country Attorney" at the Summer Theatre, when it was under the direction of the elder Mr. Colman. At the same theatre appeared in 1794 his "Box Lobby Challenge," a comedy, and his drama of "Don Pedro."

On the opening of the new theatre at Drury Lane, his comedy of "The Jew" was represented; which he had composed with great rapidity. This was the second instance of his coming forward to raise the character of that people from the unmerited contempt and ridicule which they had uniformly before experienced.

In the preceding season came out his comedy of "The Wheel of Fortune," a piece which affords a fine opportunity for the display of Mr. Kemble's powers. This was closely followed by "First Love, a comedy."

In 1796 appeared at Covent Garden his "Days of Yore, a drama." In 1797, at Drury Lane, "The last of the Family, a comedy."—Five other comedies were also successively produced by him, "False Impressions," at Covent Garden; "The Word for Nature;" "The Dependant;" "The Eccentric Lover;" and "The Failor's Daughter," at Drury Lane.

He made annual visits to Mrs. Blud-worth's at Holt near Winchester; where, being absent from his books, he amused kimself with poetical trifles on various subjects, some of which he has preserved in his Memoirs; as well as many other pieces written on other occasious.

In 1806, he brought out his "Hint to Husbands, a comedy," at Covent Garden, which was performed for five nights only. In the same year he published, "Memoirs of his own Life," 4to. to which he afterwards added a Supplement; a work which contains a rich treasure of various information and entertainment.

The publications he was afterwards concerned in are, "The Exodiad," an epic poem, written in conjunction with Sir James Bland Burges. "John de Lancaster," a novel in three volumes; and "Joanna of Montfaucon," a dramatic romance. He was also the conductor of "The London Review."

From the time of his secession from public life, Mr. Cumberland resided at Tunbridge Wells, devoting his time solely to his literary occupations. Here he lost his wife, the happy partner of all his joys, his affectionate consoler in every sorrow. This stroke of affliction he bore with the resignation of a man of sense, convinced, as he says, that patience is no mark of insensibility, nor the parade of lementation any evidence of the sincerity or permanency of grief.

During the alarm of invasion, he headed two companies of Volunteer infantry, and received the commission of Major-commandant. So beloved was he by his corps, that they honoured him with a sword as a mark of their esteem; and at the conclusion of the peace, agreed to serve under him without receiving their customary pay.

Latterly he resided chiefly in London, and, we fear, under very straightened circumstances. He died, after only a few days illness, leaving several children, all of whom are, we believe, if not in affluence, at least most respectably situated in life.

thor, our limits will not permit us to say much. He was a profound scholar, and an able writer in most departments of literature, whilst, as a poet, he has considerable claims to remembrance and applause. His West Indian, Jew, and Wheel of Fortune, were undoubtedly his best productions as a dramatic writer, and will most probably continue to delight and inform long after the rage for pigmy and equestrian performers shall have evaporated, and when the yahoor of the present day have resigned the theatre once more to Shakspeare and common sense.

Of so voluminous a writer many works... probably remain among his papers well worthy of publication. He indeed alludes to several in his Memoirs, as equal, if. not superior, to those which have already seen the light. A tragedy of "The Elder. Brutus" (which had been put into Mr. Harris's hands before he went to Spain. but was rejected), its author thought very. highly of. He mentions also dramas on the stories of the False Demetrius, of Tiberius in Capreæ, and a tragedy, on a plot purely inventive, intituled Torrendal In his Memoirs he devotes the task of selecting and arranging his MSS. at his decease, to his friends Richard Sharpe, of Marklane, Mr. Rogers, the author of "The Pleauses of Memory," and Sir James Bland Burges; from whose judicious selection and superintendance we-may with confidence look forward to fresh proofs of the genius, the talents, and the industry of their departed friend.

In page 519, second column, in the proposals for preventing some of the mischief arising to the manufacturers of White lead, by the small particles of that pernicious metal getting into their stomachs, read, "Would not the wearing a mask over the face, without an opening before the mouth, and having glass before the eyes, remedy the cvil?"

consists of old books of divinity, lives of saints, dissertations on the antiquities of the country, and a very few bad editions of the Latin classicks. You will be surprued to be informed, that in this City the only map of Spain I could procure was a very bad one, published in London. I remarked, in looking over the catalogues of the different booksellers, that I did not see a single book in the Greek language; a pretty convincing proof that the knowledge of it in this country must be at a very low ebb."

Whatever relates to the personal history of the gallant Defenders of Portugal is truly gratifying:

"Lord Wellington was received in Seville with that warmth of applicuse which his conduct truly merits; an applicuse that was felt by his countrymen as a tribute paid to England through one of the first of its military heroes. The suburb of Triana, through which his Lordship passed, the bridge, the Alameyda, and Puerto Xeres, were crowded with people, whose acclamations were answered by Gent. Mag. Suppl. LXXXI. Past I.

of our Traveller, and is by him satisfactorily described.

The following extract must be read with exultation by every Englishman.

"Before the Battle of Trafalgar, when the orders arrived for the fleet to sail, every man at all accustomed to the water wall impressed to man the navy; the carnage of that day consequently fell principally on the population of Cadiz, and numerous widows and orphans have to lament the loss of their husbands and fathers in that memorable action.

"Thave frequently heard people relating, with indescribable emotions, the fears, the hopes, the agitations, and the mournings, which occupied those few but interesting days when the United Flects of France and Spain sailed from Cadiz, amidst the prayers and benedictions of the people, with the vain expectation of vanquishing the fee who had so long held them imprisoned within their own fortifications. The day they sailed all was expectation and anxiety. The succeeding day increased the suspense, and wound up the feelings itself, the eclipsed Majesty of England. was lost among the purpled crowd, there stood the Stuart, degraded by his own hand, in the Metropolis of his haughty Pontoff, while the Jesu t was more deeply engaged in framing a letter to a more real Monarch Nor were the cares of Finance omitted in the studies of the Sovereign of Nations. His throne rested on a treasury. All the resources of the General of the Jesuits were not comprised in a million of Masses and half a m thou of Rosaries, nor in Colleges richly endowed, nor donatives and legacies, the ordinary traffick of the order. With them, indeed, the Father-General might have bid for a Crown, had It been put up in a lot. He had more vast designs in Europe. The Commerce of the Jesuits flourished from the Bast to the West, from Japan to the Brazils, and Lima, that touches on the confines of Peru, and from Mexico, in the midst of these two regions. Goa was the Metropolis of their industry. These were sources of Revenue, which a Monarchy, whose views were so extensive, required. From the hand of the secret Sovereign, a stream of gold was distributed, where Friends were to be bought, Enemies to be silenced, and powerful Prime Minister of Spain, is related with great animation:

"All looked prosperous m the dark Jesuitic government's Ribadeneira was dictating instructions to the Confessors, and displacing the Ministers of Monarche. The intercepted dispatches of the Polish Antiquary, gave the last stroke to the chimerical Politician. They contained a secret negotiation, where Spain, combining with the Eussian, the Swede, and the Ottoman; the Alliance was to conquer Europe, on a plan whose novelty had dazzled the imagination of Alberon. The Crescent was to beam on the towers of Vienna; the North floating to England was to reestablish the Stuart, while Alberoni quietly falling on Sicily and Sardinia, was to be the Liberator of Italy, from the German Yoke. Such was the grand ontline; but it included some minor incidents; 'two Conspiracies, maturing at Paris, and at London. The Spanish Ambassador, not entrusting the names of the parties to another pen, had written them with his own hand, but, in haste, he had neglected to empley his cypher; on such a minute occurrence in a conspiracy, the fates of the bravest bravest are suspended! When the Jesuit caused the project to be divulged, Europe rose against its common disturber; and the Courts, alarmed at his intrigues, loudly remonstrated with Spain. Alberoni was now to be mortified by receiving his political extinction from a vulgar hand. It was the insolent Laura who triumphed in presenting the Royal Order for his ba-At that moment Alberoni thought of the Prince-s of Ursini, the first Patroness of his fortunes; and the poisoned chalice was returned to his own lips. He left Madrid with great pomp, but among his treasures he did not carry away the regrets of a people, whose patience the perturbe! Politician had so long exhausted. The last effort of his intriguing spirit was discovered on the second day of his journey; the Italian, with Machiavellian cunning, had purloined the testament of Charles II. on which the present Spanish Monarch founded his right to the throne. He now designed to offer the precious document, with his services. to his old adversary, the Emperor of Germany, who had so long inflamed Europe with War, to dispute its validity. But the crafty Ex-Minister was compelled to relinquish the Royal Will to the Dragoons sent after him, for when he harangued them he discovered he was out of p'ace.....

"Yet at this moment, was Ribadeneira himself experiencing that peculiar terror of Ambition, when it fears to have over-The enighten d Despot leapt itself. trembles even in that couplie he is perpetually extending; his creatures will often pay their own services by their independence, and the multitude he is governing are ripening for revolt. The Shade of Insurrection passed over the throne of Despotism! In the Despot's political arithmetic, the People are only to be calculated; to be augmented or diminished as State interest requires. Yet often Terror checks him in his wild career—The Ouc, trembled before the Many! The truth he banished from their lips found a refuge in the silence of their hearts. the Universal Despot knows, and he bites his terrific sceptre in despair. Ribadeneira was startled at the pride of dominion which was growing up among his Indian Provincials. A Jesuitic diadem was glittering in their imagination, They were prepared for War, with the Courts of Maurid and Lisbon; they urged their Sover ign to open the Campagn; for they cried. "One battle, and the Continent is ours." Ribadeneira, who at once desired, and feared, to evince his power to Euro. , still chershed the spirit he curbed. Il had not however neglected their interests, and under the pretext of sending some Jesuis to reform those abuses the Courts had constantly remonstrated on, Ribadeneira had dispatched several German Missionaries; and in the plains of Paraguay, twelve Saints had appeared with twelve pieces of artillery. The good Fathers were suspected to be Engineers in disguise; their genius discovered itself in the Military Science; they raised fortifications, converted Caciques into Colonels and disciplined the r Neophytes into squadrons of Infantry and Cavalry. And now his Indian Viceroys haughtily punted to raise the curtain, and exhibit the inagnificent scenery so long concealed behind it. numour too was spreading through Europe, that the Jesuits had elected one of their brothers to the throne of South America, and Nicholas J. reigned from the Audes to the Atlantic, and from the Plata to the Amazons. It was known to the General of the Jesuits, that one of his Missionaries in China, having both predicted an Echipse, and presented his Imperial Majesty with a violin, had so ingratiated himself into linperial favour, that being sent by his Superiors to convert a province, be rather permitted the province to convert him. Now cloathed in the Yellow Robe of the first Order of Mandarines, the political Apostle kept Viceroys prostrate at his feet for an hour, and barred the entrance of his province, like a loyal Chinesc, against every Jesuit but a Martyr."

The following pathetic scene is a remarkable instance of the power of our Author's pen:

"Among the great families of Rome who had suffered from the Jesuitic tyranny, were the noble race of the Aldohrandini. That illustrious house was desolated. Seven Sons had been dragged by the seductive authority of the Jesuitic Autocrat to his dominion; the treasures of the family had been gradually obtained from their various branches, and the head of this antient house, struck by blindness, wandered in the solitude of his palace. The sole personage, who remained as the representative of all the glory and pride of this illustrious race, was the Princess! She stood alone - and was now a Mother without children. She had long inwardly groaned at the ravages made in her family, by a despotism she could not avert. But the last Son was snatched away !--and the Mother, humiliating the Princess, solicited an interview with Ribadeneira. Admitted to his Cabinet, the General of the Jesuits rose, as the Princess entered; his eyes dwelt on the most august of forms. 'Father-General,' she said, 'the Princess of Aldobrandini comes to you only as a Mother—she claims her children. Your Highness,' replied Ribadeneura, 'seems to reproach me, for the glory the Order has past on your liouse." The haughty Princess receded from the General of the Jesuit of Men, I will accuse.-The last Child too has gone! Father General! Return me --- I would say my Children --- Save me at least one Son! a Mother's gratitude has no limits. Listen to me! We have four Claudes in our Picture-gallery, which so long have formed the proud possession of the Aldobrandini. The sole pleasure of my poor Lord since his blundness, is to sit by these pictures, dwelling on their perfections, to strangers. They are his most valued possession, his dearest enjoyment. An English agent has hid for them half a million of Scudi. No Monarch on Firth can possess them; the Jesuite may! Giva us then a Son ! The Claudes I' exclaimed Ribadenerra, and paused. They were looking on each other in silence. Your Highness afflicts me!' he resumed. 'You know not the genius of the Order. illusions of Nature which prey on the distempered mind of your sex, were dissolved for your Son, the instant be joined our Body--there Glory awaits him! The Novice who but touches the threshold of our Cottege, is for ever the Order's! He says no more, I have a Mother, but I had !" *What is it you tell me? that my Sons were my Sons! Bring them into my pre-the temptation of transcribing:

" Those barren and lofty mountains between Savoy and Piedmont, covered with eternal snows among the Alps, are called Les Montagnes maudites,' or the accursed Mountains. With the chart of the secret passage through the Alps, and a small scrip, Rebello commenced with intrepidity, the mighty State-penance that was to elevate him once more to that height of fortitude, from which be had fallen. pessed among the craggy cliffs, where all the seasons mingled together, and lakes in a softened blaze of light, and the Glaciers, the dazzling azure of whose points caught the beams of the sun, while their crystal heads glittered like dismond. As he proceeded, the dreary sublime prevailed --- the barren mountain, the dark abyss, and the abrupt precipice. --- Flung wildly across his path, appeared some grant tree half separated from its trunk; or some Berce torrent, rolling its green and fearning streams, thundered and rose up among the rums of Nature. Often while treading in the awful destruction of some recent avalanche, the thought of his own instant annibilation struck at the heart of the solitary be able to compass things in their nature impossible, or which our fate denies us? Is man made to answer for his destiny ?? Yes is replied the Hermit, An unlucky man can be of no use to the immortal Order. Our Sovereign pronounced the Ed ct that plants me here. Did I not swear to will as he wills, to think as he thinks? I know only to obey.' Did you enter early in the Order?' inquired Rebello. 'I resigned my youth, my fortune, and my talents to the great Order. I professed the three vows, of Poverty, of Chastity, and Obedience In one moment my soul was extinguished My enthusiasm was great; year followed year, till at length they conferred on me the title of 'Coadjutor,' and I flattered myself I was forming a closer union with the immortal Order, But, from that moment, I was abandoned - and it seemed as if the title had been given in mockery.' 'As I live,' thought Rebello, 'this poor devil has les bras Cassás. ' Proceed.' he cried, 'a brother's history is our own! My friend, let me confess my infirmity - I could not endure the sour distinction lip of the haughty Superior, the horror of the averted face of a friend. They harried me thou art lost in thy thoughts,' cried the melancholy spirit --- ' How sweet to firld one human being who can space a feeling try florereign that my loyalty has never failed, though I have never known to obtain a Victory for him. Oh that it were my lot to be disputched to Lisbon; one stroke should end the Tyranny we have so long endured! I would at least be a Martyr! but my superior told me, that it is not permitted to every Jesuit to kill a King! Thus spoke the enchanted slave of Despotion, a men whose wild enthusiasm, enthrulled by the false glory of the Order, had absorbed all other feeling—victim of an ambitious and seducing government! The Fauntick dees not require Conviction, for he only known to obey; he never reasons, for he only sees what he imagines; and his imagination is only excited by that supernatural passer, which he bisseed has often ereated, or suffered to operate on his possions.

"Bebeile loures that he was not distant from " The Chambers of Meditation." The listened to a strange unrective of School who emulated the glory of an Effect with the views of a Brutus, whose bands wisted the extirpating sword of a Gideon, or ob-tained the silent victory of a Jadon, These were the Chatele, the Clements, the Ravailiese, the Fathers Secuet, Can and Parsons, the Apostles of Robell and Political Assarsing of the Order-t dark spirits who had so frequently awaited the invection of a General of the Jesuita. The anchanted Slave described mysterious scenes of superstitions borrors, operating through the senses, on the imagination Here were men educated to become Reg oides; saluted as the Saviours of the Country, they were confounded with its Heroes, and in the mind of the Panetick, while Paradise and Murder were blunded, he believed the Scaffold was the spet on Earth mearest Heaven.

Our solitary Hamibal in his freed passage through the terrors of the Alps, and in his endurance of all its associated feelings, had announced that invincible heroism which Ribadeneira required for that solemn act which was to overturn an empire. And now, this child of favour, if not of fortune, having triumphed in the severest of Trials, and arrived at the 'Chambers of Meditation,' found there the instructions and the congratulations of Rebadeneira."

Much valuable information is given in the "Political Characters of the Court of Lisbon;" where the train was laid which ended in the total destruction of the Order of the Jesnits.

Largely as we have already betrowed from these Volumes, the concluding chapter tempts us to trespass further on the Render's patience.

SELECT POETRY.

Mr. Uanan, Feb. 19.

A a constant Reader, I am induced, for the first time, to contribute my mite, or rather that of a youth whose juvenile talents appear to me deserving of notice. The lines I inclose were written by a Stripling, as a tribute of gratitude to a Clerical Friend, A Recuse.

THE VILLAGE PRIEST.

THE man who looks in Nature's book

The varied ways of all his kindred kind, Will seldom fail, if talent he possess, To mark the course of wily Wickedness: E'en in the object harden'd by his years, At certain times, the cloven foot appears; He, like the Tyro, lets the secret out, And often when he travels most about: Should he his strength against his Country try,

His pen with gall of rankest hue to dye, View him step forward, panting in the cause, [Laws,

To shield the State, or - abrogate the 'Till, uscless quite, the flimsy cov'ring doffs.

Now at his King, and now the Priesthood scoffs;

GEST. MAG. Suppl. LXXXI. PART I.

A host of wrongs on each of these be heaps, [weeps! For which a Traitor hangs his head, and The one, unburt from what pollution gives, [lives; The vacuted pride of faithful subjects Though he resist the foul imposson'd darts [hearts, That issue forth from none but honest Yet must he feel a pang, to find assail'd, And gibes and jeers upon the cast entail'd

Of those to whom his people rev'rence owe, [bestow. On whom they this, and more than this, In changeful shapes behold the tuneful race.

Some seek a high, as some a lower place;
Here stalk abroad to sojourn in the wars,
There tell of feasts, and now of civil jars;
All own the same strong impulse from within,
[have kin.]

And thus betray to what their thoughts I freely boast, my wish is not the least. To paint the meek, the virtuous Village Priest.

That such there are, on Britain's favour'd ground,

Needs for no doubt, for such there will be found. Indeed, Indeed, ye Jaes, the tide is not so low, Contentment's some a countless phalant; show. Though their wilt say, with demon use-

Hough then witt say, with demon maylice franght, [taught, The fraudful words the common parent

The fraudful words the common parent "Look to the Church, its careless vessels to the Church, its careless vessels to the church, its careless vessels to the church of the common parent which is the common parent to the

Their flocks neglect, themselves at riot in other roads their blinded judgments turn, [butn.]

The light of Truth in these can never But why will ye, when thus delighted, dwell,

Refuse to speak of those who, living well.
A thousand rays around their office fling.
A Nation's thanks on all their labours bring?---

This does not take with such degenerate minds:

As like the hog, when he a trinket finds, First stope and gruntles, mitells, and paces it p'er, [more.

For now he prising, loves his rubbish Since, then, the whole we cannot have from you,

Suppose we hold the treasure to your view. Hast thou not seen in thy perverted course

The chosen neglet, mindful-of his source, Alike removed from fouds and worldly strife,

His neel absorb'd in one sweet pieus life, To bear the mild, the watchful shepherd's name, (fame)

To practise right, and bluch to think it Me passes none, but yet their calling knows,

On some a smile, on all a nod bustons:
Nor does he fail to pave the holy mad
That leads to peace, to Heaven, and to God.

When on the bed of death the hind reclines,

Then at the needful post the Paster shines i As thus the suff'rer tells his inward joys, Unmix'd with sinful cares, or gross alloys's "Draw near, good Sic, thy parting sesvant bless,

For what I feel so being can express;
Train'd in the Christian path by thee, I.
own,
[shown.
This much to gain, all, all by thee was

This much to gain, all, all by thee was Oh, may we join!"—"Tis done, he strives no more;

Had rashly said, that native worth was Now, from another cause, a silence reigns, A little effort yet for him remains—

This bears a meed which wealth can ne'er command,

The speaking, icy pressure of the haid.

Must we then point, ore bright refulgent light.

[sight, Withholds the prize from off the descled.

of 49 millions. To meet this charge, he proposed taking 54 millions of the surplus of the Consolidated Fund, 20 millions to be raised on War Taxes, 300,000% on Lottery, 4 millions on Exchequer Bills, and a loan of 12 millions; together with the proceeds of Naval Stores, and some other duties imposed this Session, making in all the sum of 494 millions. After minutely stating the items, the Hon, Gentleman declared there would be a surplus of 646,900% above the sum required for England. He would next allude to the Loan of the year, and the Ways and Means by which to meet it. By the Loan concluded this day, the Contractors were to receive for every 1001. one hundred pounds 3 per cents. Reduced, 201, 3 per cent. Consols, 201. 4 per cent Consols, and 6s. 11d. Long Annuities, being equal, at the rate of the market price to-day, to 991. 1s. 4d. for every 100%. There was an additional allowance, however, of 2L for discount, thus giving to the Contractors on the whole, a bonus of 1t. 1s. on every 100t. He understood that the Loan thus contracted for was selling this day at a premaum of 11, 10s, which was a proof that for Ireland, 2 millions and a half had been raised there, for the interest of which his Right Hon. Friend (Mr. Foster) was ready to propose new taxes; but the remaining 4 millions and a half had been raised in this country, and he had no hesitation in saying, that, by way of loan to Ireland, this country should take upon itself to pay the interest, which might be added to the Consolidated Fund,

After a few words from Sir 7: Turton and Mr. A. Bareng, the Resolution was agreed to.

Mr. Foster then brought forward the Irish Budget: he began by stating the Supplies for Ireland, the Interest of the Debt, the Contribution to the general expenditure of the Empire, the deficit of last year &c. &c. amounting in all to 13,406,6971. and the Ways and Means at 13,240,0001, which in Irish money would be more than 200,0001, beyond the Supply. To meet the interest of the Loan, and of 1 million of Exchequer Bills, he should propose a duty on tobaccs, which would produce $21,0001, and on hemp 80001, which would be 19,0001, more than was requisite. He also intended to raise the duties on timber imported from the United States to the duties paid upon timber from other toreign countries; to diminish the duty on staves from our North American codonies; to impose a tax on cotton wool imported in foreign ships, and abolish the port duty of Ireland.

Sir J. Neuport, and Messrs. Hutchinson and Sharp, made a few remarks; after which the Resolutions were agreed to.

House of Lords, May 21.

Between 6 and 700 Petitions from the Dissenters were presented, by Lords Stanhope, Grey, Holland, Erskine, Earts Moira, Lauderdale, Rosslyn, and the Marquis of Lansdowne, against Lord Sidmouth's Dissenting Ministers' Bill, and ordered to lie on the table.

On the proposal for the second reading of the Bill, Visc. Sidmouth rose, and, after noticing the misrepresentations which had gone abroad respecting its objects and provisions *, stated that he had it in view merely to give an uniformity to the Toleration Acts, by preventing them from being differently construed in different counties; and likewise to prevent persons without any moral or intellectual qualifications from electing themselves to the most important duties that could be exercised by man, or obtaining licences for the purpose of exempting themselves from those civil duties to which their fellowsubjects are liable; and conjured their Lordships to allow the Bill to go into a Committee, where he was convinced all the objections to it might be obviated.

The Earl of Liverpool did justice to the motives by which the Noble Viscount was actuated; but considered that the good to be obtained by the proposed change was trifling, and the agitation and alarm were very great; he suggested to his Noble Friend the expediency of withdrawing the Bill.

The Archbishop of Canterbury spoke to the same effect.

Lords Erskine, Holland, Grey, and Stanhope, decidedly opposed the Bill, as an attempt to encroach upon the Toleration Acts.

The second reading was then negatived without a division.

In the Commons, the same day, a Petition was presented from W. H. Mallison, stating that he had brought to perfection an invention for preserving the lives of persons at sea, and by which it was impossible for any individual to sink when wrecked, or in deep water.

* On this subject see before, p. 624.

Colonel Painer then rose; and (after stating Mr. Palmer's claims to compensation, which had in 1808 been seconded by a Resolution of that House, declaring him entitled to 44 per cent. on the net proceeds of the Revenue of the Postoffice, after deducting a certain sum, and in consequence voted him 54,76%. being the balance of arream due to him, but which Resolution had been rendered nugatory by the Chancellor subsequently prevailing on the House to withdraw that sum from the Appropriation Act), moved an Address to the Prince Regest, praying that he would order the 34,7024 to be advanced to John Palmer, E4q. and that the House would make good the sime, Messrs. Race, Dundas, Long, Giddy; and Perceval, opposed the motion; which was warmly supported by Messi. P. Moore, C. Hynn, Whichread, Sheriden, Jekyll, and Sir T. Turgen, as an act of justice on the part of that House, and finally carried by 107 to 42.

House of Lords, May 22.

The Earls of Radies and Landerdeli called the attention of their Lordships to the Votes of the House of Commons last night, by which it appeared that an Address had been voted to the Prince Regent, praying his Royal Highness to order the sum of $4,702/, to be paid to Mr. Palmer. The Noble Lords thought this proceeding a breach of their Lordships' privilege as a branch of the Legislature, and more peculiarly where their Lordships had previously given a solumn decision to the contrary.

The Earl of Moire supported Mr. Palmer's claim, and confessed that nothing had ever given more pain to his mind than that decision.

The Duke of Norfolk inquiring if any notice of motion was given, and the Earl of Radnor declining to give any, the conversation dropped.

In the Commons, the same day, a conversation arose ás to the merits of Mr. Mallison's invention for preserving the lives of seamen.

Mr. Whitbread moved that it be referred to a Committee. Mr. Creat denied that there was any noveley in the invention; ridiculed its simplicity; and after adverting to the intemperate at tacks of Mr. Mallison upon the Admiralty Board, concluded by declaring it to be greatly inferior to Col. Hanger's inyention.

Messrs. Ross, Adams, and Paget, spekt in its favour; after which Mr. Crois explained, and a Committee was appointed to take it into consideration. and the second s had answered that he would make the grant when Parliament should have provided the necessary means,

The Chancellor of the Exchequer agreed to postpone the committal of the Cotton Wool Duty Bill for three months, though he concurred in opinion with Mr. Rose, that there was no sufficient ground of alarm, but he did it in consideration to the working manufacturers, whose apprehensions were excited, and who were already in a very distressed state.

Mr Whitbread said, that in consequence of the ability of that House to make good a late vote (Mr. Palmer's) being questioned in another place, he should take an early opportunity of making a motion on the subject.

In a Committee on the Irish Customs Bill, Mr. Bankes expressed his apprehension that the duty on tobacco would not be very productive, and recommended that the income tax should be substituted for it. He said that Ireland was already becoming a burden to this country.

Mr. Mac Naughton replied, that the people dreaded the income tax, and doubted the knowledge of the preceding Speaker on questions of Irish finances.

mittee recommended the allotting of three days in each week to the consideration and determining of Appeals and Resolutions were agreed to.

In the Commons, the same day, Mr. Whitbread, having moved that the Address of the House on Mr. Palmer's claim.

ad, ice ffiiny ss, irb of qf qrural natural feelings, re-stated his Father's claims.

Messrs. Bankes, Lamb, Perceval, and Sir J. Anstruther, spoke against the motion. Messrs. Tierney, C. W. Wynne, and Ponsonby, in its support. On a division, the numbers were, Ayes 68, Noes 160.

House of Lords, May 31.

The Royal Assent was given by Commission to the Newfoundland Courts, Quarantine Officers, Linen Additional Dutics, Isle of Man Customs, Timber Dutics, Sugar Distillers, Irish Wines Prizage, Twelve Millions' Loan, and the two Exchequer-Bills' Bills.

In the Commons, the same day, a Message from the Prince Regent was delivered on the subject of the Supplies, which was ordered to be referred to the Committee of Supply; and the Chancellor of the Exchequer said that he should propose a Vote of Credit, founded on the above Message, and at the same time move the appropriation of the Surplus of the Consolidated Fund, and for leave to bring in a Bill respecting a Lottery.

Mr. Grattan, on introducing the Catholic Question, moved, "that the Vote of Thanks lately passed by the House to Lord Wellington and Gen. Graham, and the Officers and men under their command, for their distinguished services in Portugal, and on the heights of Barrosa, be read."

. On the Resolutions being read by the Clerk;

Mr. Grattan moved the reading of these votes of thanks along with the Petition, purposely that the House might see testimony borne to the capacity of those petitioners, and know from the records of military exploit, that the Catholics were petitioning for rights, which they were fully deserving by their services to their country. It was of material moment to show to the Nation arguments which pleaded so powerfully in fayour of the Catholic Religion. The oath of qualification was a penal law of the very worst kind, being disguised or enveloped in an oath, where religion was made a crime, and perjury a qualifieation. They were trying the bulk of the people of Ireland, on the slender testimony against their capacity to exercise any function fitting to save their country. Who could harbour such extravagance of testimony which was militating against the very truth of the Christian religion, denominating that immense body of the Christians called Catholicks, by the name of idulaters; that was, at one sweep of expression, saying, that the Messiah had come in vain, and that the Catholicks were a sect in religion whose professions were calculated to demonize mankind. It was the natural right, it was the desire too of every Irishman to be governed by the same law as their Protestant brethren. The law of disqualification unhinged the country, and made a painful distinction among the people. It was a law of civil despoliation; and he was assured that the country, from the unwillingness which she had evinced, would not long be governed by such policy. Was it sound political prudence to with-hold their rights when they had proved how much they deserved them, by most faithful allegiance and by acts of signal service. In every government there were general rulers, and no power nor principle had ever shewed itself which could hold the mind in fetters, even in political opinions, and how daring must those laws be, which, venturing to impose themselves on religious opinion, laid restrictions on the Supreme Deity. He concluded by moving, that the Petition should be referred to a Committee of the whole House.

Sir J. C. Hippisley, in a speech of some length, seconded the motion.

Mr. Herbert and General Mathew spoke on the same side.

Dr. Duigenan read the oaths taken by the Catholic Bishops and Pricets, and some extracts from the decrees of their Councils. It was singular that the any thors of those should complain of intolerance, when themselves were more intolerant than any other religious sect whatever. The Catholicks, though their grievances were less than ever, came forward with equally loud complaints of evils endured, and claimed what at former periods they would not have presumed to solicit. They now demanded nothing less than a subversion of the Constitution of the country, from the 1st of Elizabeth down to the present day. The Roman Catholicks in Ireland, though more numerous than the Protestants. were not so numerous as they were said to be. The whole of the population of Ireland did not exceed 3,500,000 souls, This be asserted on authority, and not from boasting or bravado. Of that num! ber, he would aver, there were 1,500,000 Protestants: so there could remain 'no more than two millions of Catholics, Of these, a great number contributed little or nothing to the revenue. Out of 50 proprietors of land, 49 were Protest tants; so that, from the taxation of property, the Protestants, it was obvious were obliged to pay that of which the Catholicks boasted as paid by them. Then, as to what had been said of their confluct in the Army, he would observe, that -though which pervaded them was so great, that they ought to be rejected on that account; and it was moreover known, that they had not been voted by assemblies of the principal Catholic Gentlemen in Ireland, but by men of a very middling class. [Here the Right Hon. Gentleman gave a ludicrous description of the persons who were active in causing them to be voted.] He read several passages from the speeches made on the occasion, which, he observed, were put in the newspapers by the parties themselves, who had been in the habit of meeting for that purpose once or twice a-week. They were not the petitions nor the sentiments of the respectable Roman Catholicks by any means, and he should therefore vote against the motion.

Lord Jacelyn, Mr. Bankes, and Mr. C. Adams, spoke also against the motion; and Mesers. Tighe, Ponsonby, and W.

Smith, in support of it.

١

The Chancellor of the Exchequer regretted the nature of the discussion, and should only state briefly some reasons which would influence his vote. He now heard, after a long interval, the claim of right revived. He would allow the fullest claims of Toleration, but the idea of a claim to political power was palpably absurd, and emmentatrocious persecutors, and they overturned all establishments. He thought that the more any great sects were brought to an equality of bonours, the nearer they were to a struggle. They ought to have subordination, to have peace. It was not to be supposed that the Catholic Petition was more agreeable to the Nation, because the public voice was less loud against it than formerly. The reason was, the public fear was less active. When, at a late period, dangerous measures were urged by the Legislature, the cry of the Nation rose against them. The origin of that cry was imputed to artifice; but the ery exhibited the feeling which would be roused again the first moment that the danger scemed probable. He must vote against the motion.

Mr Whitbread thought the speech of the Right Hon. Gentleman one of the most inflammatory things he had ever heard. It had false feelings, false principles, and false arguments. After much eloquent appeal to the feelings of the House, Mr. Whitbread proceeded to speak of the merits of the irish. They were signally brave and patient; they had rendered great services to the country; and it was madness and folly to deprive ourselves of those services for any difference of religious belief. The Hon. Gentleman concluded a very animated speech by observing, that he sincerely hoped the trumpet sounded by the Right Hon. Gentleman (Mr. Perceval) this night would not be attended to by the people, and that no other infernal cry could be raised with any hove of success in this country.

ference

The House divided — Ayes for Mr. Grattan's motion 83, Noes 146. — Majority against the Catholicks, 63.

sune 3.

Mr. M. A. Taylor moved the appointment of a Committee to investigate the causes of delay in the Court of Chancery. The Hon. Gentleman disapproved of the Lords' Report, which he thought jejune and ill drawn up, as also the appointment of an additional Judge. He strongly recommended the House going into a Committee, in order that it might judge for itself. Messrs: Perceval and Wilson opposed the motion; which was supported by Sir S. Romilly, Messrs. Ponsonby and Adam. On a division, the numbers being equal (36), the Speaker gave his casting vote for the motion, and a Committee was subsequently appointed.

A vote of Credit for three Millions was after some opposition from Messrs. Whitbread and Buring, granted for the present year.

June 4.

Lord Cochrane stated some gross abuses in the Vice-Admiralty Court in India and at Malta on the subject of charges: and moved for a variety of papers, which were ordered.

Lord Milton, after a lengthened speech on the subject of the Duke of York's Re-appointment, moved "That after a deliberate consideration of the recent circumstances under which the Duke of York had retired from the command of the Army in March 1809, it appeared to that House to be highly improper and indecorous in Ministers to recommend to the Prince Regent to re-appoint him to the office of Commander-in-Chief."

The Chancellor of the Exchequer took all the responsibility of having advised the appointment upon himself and his colleagues. - Messrs. Elliott, Gooch, B. Bathurst, C. Adams, Lambe, Sec. Ryder, Ponsonby, Barham, Sir O. Mosley, Admiral Hervey, and Gen. Tarleton, spoke against the motion, and highly in praise of the Duke, whose appointment was hailed by the acclamations of the Army.

Lord Althorpe, Sir F. Burdett, and Mr. Whitbread, supported the motion, which was finally negatived by 296 to 47. House of Lords, June 5.

E. T. Farren and N. Hickes, for prevaricating in the evidence given on the Berkeley Peerage claim, were committed to Newgate.

On the motion of the Earl of Liverpeel, the Thanks of the House were voted unanimously to Sir W. Beresford, his Offcers, and Army, and likewise to the Spanish and Portuguese Commanders, for their services and gallant behavious at Albuera.

In the Commons, the same day, the Chuncellor of the Exchoquer, after an appropriate speech, moved a Vote of Thanks to Gen. Sir W. Beresford, the Officers, and Troops under his command, for their services at Albuera; also to Gen. Cole and the Portuguese Army under him; and to the Spanish Army acting under Gen. Blake. The above-were voted unanimously; as was an Address . to the Prince Regent for a Monument to be erected to the memory of Major-Gep. Hoghton.

In a Committee of Supply, a Resoluttion for two millions by loans on Exchequer Bills was passed.

Mr. Whitbread's motion, for a Committee on Thursday next, on the State of the Nation, to provide against any future suspension of the Royal authority, was opposed by Messrs. Perceval, Capning, and Bathurst; and finally negatived by 94 to 22.

House of Lords, June 10.

The Royal Assent was notified by Commission to the Spirit Wash Duty, Irish Tobacco Duties, Chocolate, Printerly East India Bonds, Irish Hat Duty Repeal, Mary-le-bone Church, Nicholas Bay Harbour, Canterbury Canal, and several private Bills, in all 38.

House of Commons, June 11.

A Petition from the County of Kent on the subject of Parliamentary Referen was presented by Mr. Whithrows, who moved that it do lie on the table ;experse. ing at the same time his belief th there was no chance of salvation to the political interests of the country, except through a reform in Parliament.

Sir E. Knatchbull admitted that the meeting was numerous and respectable. though he did not know that it was legal, and he did not conceive that it spoke the sense of the majority of the Freeholders of the County.

Mr. Brand said, from the lateness of the Session, he should defer making his. motion on the subject of Parliamentum Reform till the next.

ther Letter from the same gives the following account of a gallant and successful enterprize off the Italian coast:

Cerberus, Feb. 13.

Sir, Having completed the water of his Majesty's ships under my command, at Lissa, on the 9th inst. I proceeded to reconnoitre the coast of Italy with this ship and Active, in hopes of intercepting vessels which were reported to have sailed from Alcona for Corfu, and taken shelter in various harbours along the coast, during the Southerly winds just set in. On the morning of the 12th inst. we discovered several vess is lying under the town of Ortino, and as the wind was light, the boats of both ships were dispatched, under the orders of Lieut. Dickinson (First of the Cerberus), to bring them out if practicable. On the near approach of the boats to the vessels, a fire of great guns and small arms was instantly opened from an armed trabacolo (which was not till then observed), and soldiers posted on the beach and hills commanding the bay; our boats formed in close order, gave three hearty cheers, and in a few minutes cleared all before them, the men from the vessels and the troops on shore running in all directions,

GENT. MAG. Suppl. LXXXI. PART I.

Jaunches, under Lieuts. Haye and Campston, with the barge of the Active, under Mr. James Gibson, Master's-mate of that ship, were employed in covering them with the carronades. This judicious and advantageous movement was of the greatest service to those employed at the sea-side, as it kept the soldiers and inhabitants, who had collected in great force, in check, and allowed the work which had been so ably undertaken to be most fully completed, as in addition to the convoy consisting of ten sail (under the vessel armed with six guns which was found in the harbour laden with gram, oil, &c.) two large magazines, filled with all sorts of naval and military stores destined for the garrison of Corfu, (and which it is said they stand in much need of) were most completely destroyed by fire; and I feel convinced the Energy will suffer most severely by this capture as they must have been some time in making so large a collection. As I believe you are unacquainted with the situation of Ortano, I must beg leave to state it, and you will then be able to form your own opinion of the difficulties that existed, and to which our men and boats were necessarily exposed. The harbour is formed by a large pier running out into the sea, and connected with a range of hills leading to the town, which stands on the top of the highest, completely commanding the vessels in the bay and the road up to it, so that the marines, to gain the strong post they had, and to prevent being exposed to the severe fire of musketry, were obliged to climb up the rocks by their hands, with a prospect of falling down a precipice every step they took. Having detailed to you, Sir, the particulars of this service. I have much pleasure in adding that our loss has been only Four wounded; and when it is considered that they were exposed to a teazing fire from the bushes and houses, from ten in the morning till three in the afternoon, it will, I trust, be thought trifling in comparison with the annoyance the Enemy have received by the capture and destruction of their inagazines and vessels. I cannot speak too highly of the gallant conduct of Lieut. Dickinson on this occasion; the style in which he boarded the trabacolo, armed with six guns, and full of men, with the gig of this ship, supported by the barge under Mr. Rennie (of whom he speaks in the bighest terms of praise), forms only a small part of his merit; his arrangements being so well made and so promptly executed by those under him, were such as to have ensured the most complete success, could it have been possible for the Enemy to have collected any additional regular force, with that already opposed to them. No language I can make use of is strong enough to express the zeal and conduct of every person concerned.—I feel particularly indebted to Capt. Gordon for the judicious manner his ship was placed, by which means he prevented any body of the Enemy from forming in the fear of our men, and the promptitude and zealous co-operation I have constantly experienced from him since we have been serving together.—Inclosed is a list of the vessels captured and de-H. WHITBY, Capt. stroyed. To Geo. Eyre, esq. Capt. of the Magnificent, Senior Officer off Corfu. [Here follows a list of 10 Venetian vessels captured, laden with corn, oil, hemp, &c.]

June 2. About five this afternoon, Major Arbuthnot reached town, with the Official Details of the gallant battle of Albuera. The Park and Tower guns were fired late the same evening, and the next day an Extraordinary Gazette was published, which is here subjoined:

London GAZETTE EXTRAORDINARY.

Downing-street, June 2. Dispatches, of which the following are Extracts, have been this day received by the Earl of Liverpool, addressed to his Lordship by Lieut-gen. Viscount Wellington, dated Elvas, May 22.

On the night of the 15th inst. I received from Marshal. Sir W. Beresford letters of the 12th and 13th inst. which reported Marshal Soult had broken up from Seville about the 10th, and had advanced towards Estremadura, notwithstanding the reports which had been previously received that he was busily occupied in . strengthening Seville, and the approaches to that city, by works; and that all his measures indicated an intention to pemain on the defensive in Andalusia.—I therefore set out on the following morning from Villa Formosa, and having received farther information of the 14th, from Sir W. Beresford, of the Emercy's movements, I hastened my progress, and arrived here on the 19th, and found that Sir W. Beresford had raised the siege of Badajos, without the loss of ordnance or stores of any descriptions and collected the troops under his command, and had formed a junction with Gens. Castanos and Blake at Albuera, in the course of the 15th inst.—He was attacked there on the 16th by the French army under the command of Marshel Soult; and after a most severe engage ment, in which all the troops couduct themselves in the most gallant mainer, Sir W. Beresford gained the victory, The Enemy retired in the night of the 17th, leaving between 900 and 1000 wounded on the ground.—Sir W. Beresford sent the allied cavalry after them; and on the 19th, in the morning, re-invested Badajos.—I enclose reports of Six W. Beresford, of the 16th and 18th inst. . on the operations of the siege to the mement of raising it, and on the battle at Albuera; and I beg to draw your Lordship's attention to the ability, the firmness, and the gallantry manifested by Marshal Sir W. Beresford throughout the transactions on which he has written. I will add nothing to what he has said of the conduct of all the officers and troops, excepting to express my admiration of it, and my cordial concurrence in the favousable reports by Sir W. Beresford of the good conduct of all.—All has remained quiet in Castile since I quitted that past of the country.—The battalions of the 9th corps, belonging to regiments serving in the Corps d'Armée in Andalusia, had marched from Salamanca on or about the 15th, and went towards Avila, and were to come by Madrid.—I send this dispatch by Major (Lieut-colonel) Arbuthnot, the Secretary of Marshal Sir W. Beresford, who was present in the battle of Albuera, and can give your Lordship any farther information occupied Guadalcanal and Llerena, and avowed his intention to attack and compel the Allies to raise the siege of Badajos, immediately suspended operations against that place, and directed the removal of the guns and stores to Elvas, which by the exertions of Lieut, col. Fletcher, R. Eng. Major Dixon, of the Artillery, and the Portuguese Governor of Alentejo (Lieut, gen. Leite), was effected without the least loss, and all the troops, except Brig-gen. Keminis's brigade, united on the 16th to meet the attack, and oppose the march of Marshal Soult.

Albuera, May 18.

My Lord, I have infinite satisfaction in communicating to your Lordship, that the Allied Army united here under my orders, obtained on the 16th inst. after a most sangumary contest, a complete victory over that of the Enemy, commanded by Marshal Soult; and I shall proceed to relate to your Lordship the circumstances.—In a former report I have informed your Lordship of the advance of tanos under the Count de Penne Villamur had been always with it.—As remaining at Valverde, though a stronger position, left Badajos entirely open, I determined to take up a position (such as could be got, in this widely open country) at this place; thus standing directly between the Enemy and Badajos.—The army was therefore assembled here on the 15th inst. The corps of Gen. Blake.

not ing visit Carl befo Our ing Mai noo frod post ina par thou

it, (

that river, and covering the roads to Badajos and Valverde; though your Lordship is aware that the whole face of this country is every where passable for all arms. Gen. Blake's corps was on the right in two lines; its left on the Valverde road, joined the right of Major-gen, the Hon. W. Stewart's division, the left of which reached the Badajos road, where commenced the right of Major-gan, Hamilton's division, which closed the left of the line. Gen. Cole's division, with one brigade of Gen. Hamilton's, formed the 3d line of the British and Portuguese army. The Enemy, on the morning of the 16th, did not long delay his attack; at eight o'clock he was observed to bein movement, and his cavalry was seen passing the rivalet of Albuera, considerably above our right; and shortly after he marched out of the wood opposite to us, a strong force of cavalry, and two heavy columns of infantry, pointing them to our front, as if to attack the village and bridge of Albueras during this time, under cover of his vastly superior cavalry, he was filing the principal body of his infantry over the river beyond our right, and it was not long before his intention appeared to be to turn us by that flank, and cut us off from Valverde. Major-gen. Cole's division was therefore ordered to form an oblique line to the year of our right, with his own right thrown back. And the intention of the Enemy to attack our right becoming evident, I requested Gen. Blake to form part of his first line, and all his second, to that front; which was done.-The Enemy commeneed his attack at nine o'clock, not ceasing at the same time to menace our left: and after a strong and gallant resistance of the Spanish troops, he gained the heights upon which they had been formed; meanwhile the division of the Hon. Major-gen. W. Stewart had been brought up to support them; and that of Major-gen. Hamilton brought to the left of the Spanish line, and formed in con-tiguous close columns of battalions, to be moveable in any direction. The Portuguese brigade of cavalry, under Briggen. Otway, remained at some distance on the left of this, to check any attempt of the Enemy below the village .-As the heights the Enemy had gained, raked and entirely commanded our whole position, it became necessary to make every effort to retake and maintain them; and a noble one was made by the division of Gen. Stewart, headed by that gallant officer. Nearly at the beginning of the Enemy's attack, a heavy storm of rain came on, which, with the smoke from the firing, rendered it impossible to discern any thing distinctly.-This with the nature of the ground, had been ex-particularly the 57th regt, were lying as they had fought, in ranks, and every wound was in the front.-The battle conimenced at nine, and continued without cessation till two in the afternoon, when the Enemy being driven over the Albuera, the remainder of the day was spent in cannonading and «kirmishing —Marsbal Beresford then mentions, in terms of high commendation, the following Offi-cers who materially conduced to the honour of the day Major-gen. W Stew-art, who received two contusions, but would not quit the field; Major-gen. G. L. Cole, Lieut -col Abererombie, Major L'Estrange (31st, regt, , Col. Ingl s; Ma-3or-gens W Lumley, Hamilton, and Alten; and Col. Cell us, commanding a Portug. brigade, whose leg was carried away by a cumon shot.—The deaths of Major Gen Haghton and of Sir W. Myers, and Licut col Duckworth, are deeply lamented. - The Portuguese brigades of Br g gens Fouseca and A Campbell, are hkewise honouran's mentioned.—Of the services which the Marshal derived from the Officers of his own staff, those of Brig-gen, D'Urban, Q. M G to the Parring. Army, are particularly noticed. Lie t -col Hardinge, D. Q M G to the Portugue e; Brig -gen, Moz. iho, Adjut.geta Lici t -col. Rooke, Assist.Adj -gen. to the United British and Portuguese

I do not think be displayed less than from 20 to 22,000 infantry, and he certainly had 4000 cavalry with a numerous and heavy artillery. His overbearing eavalry cramped and confined all our operations, and with his artillery saved his infantry after its rout.—He retired after the battle to the ground he had been previously on, but occupying it in position; and on this morning, or rather during the night, commenced his retreat on the road be came, towards Seville, and has abandoned Badajos to its fate. He left a number of his wounded on the ground he had retired to, and to which we are administering what assistance we can. [have sent our cavalry to follow the Enemy, but in that arm he is too powerful for us to attempt any thing against him in the plams he is traversing.—Thus we have reaped the advantage we proposed from our opposition to the attempts of the Enemy; and whilst he has been forced to abandon the object for which he has almost stripped Andalusia of troops, instead of having accomplished the haughty boasts with which Marshal Soult harangued his troops on leaving Seville, he returns there with a curtailed army, and what perhaps may be still more hurtful to him, with a diminished reputation. W. C. Beresroad, Marshal and Lt. Gen.

662 Interesting Intelligence from the London Gazettes. [LISYN]

P. S. Major.-gen. Hamilton's Division, and Brig.-gen, Madden's Brigade of Portuguese cavalry, march to-morrow morning to re-invest Badajos, on the South side of the Guadiana, Officers killed and wounded between the 8th and 15th May inclusive.

Killed .- Capt. Smith, 3d bat. 27th foot, Capt. Dickinson and Lieut. Mel-ville, Royal Engineers.—Wounded on the 10th May :- Royal Engineers, Capts. Ross and Boteler, severely; and Lieut. Read, slightly.—3d bat. 27th foot, Lieut. Col. M'Lean, Lieuts. Gordon and Dobbins, slightly ; Major Birmingham (since dead); Capt. Pring, severely; Lient. Levinge, Ensigns M. Coard and Hanley. - lst bat, 40th foot, Lieut.-col. Harcourt, Major Thornton, and Lieut. Street, alightly; Lieuts. Thoreau and Strawbenzie, severely; Capts. Heyland and Wood, Lieuts. Kelly, Butler, and Brown. -- 5th bat. 60th foot, Capt. Prevost, severely. -87th foot, Lieut. Coppinger and Ensign Downing, severely; Lieut. Daunt, slightly; Lieut, Kettlewell and Eusign Dowman, lost an arm. — 17th Portuuose Regt. Col. Turner, severely; Capts. Buquet and Maxwell.

Officers killed, wounded, and missing en the 16th of May. Killed.—Major-gen. D. Hoghton.—3d Dragoon Guards, Lieut. Fox. - 1st bat. 3d foot, or Buffs, Capt. Burke, Lieut. Herbert, Ensigns Chadwick and Thomas, -2d bat. 7th foot, Capt. Erck, Lieut. Archer.-Ist bat. 23d foot, Capt. Montague, Second Lieut. Hall, - 29th foot, Capt. Humphrey, Lieut. Duguid, Ensigns King, Furnace, and Vance.—2d bat. 34th foot, Capt. Gibbons, Lieut. Castle, Ensign Samfield.—2d bat. 39th foot, Lieut. Beard. - 1st bat. 48th foot, Lieut. col. Duckworth, Lieuts. Page and Ansaldo.—2d bat. 48th foot, Lieuts. Liddon, Loft, and Drew; Ensign Rothwell .- 1st bat. 57th foot, Major Scott, Capt. Fawcett .- 21 bat. 66th foot, Capt. Benning, Lieut. Shewbridge, Ensign Coulter. - 2d Light bat. King's G. L.

Lieut. Whitney.

Portugues.—Staff, Surgeon Bollman.

23d regt. P. B. Bandeira, J. Jose

Montro.

Wounded. - Major-gen. Hon. G. L. Cole, Major-gen. W. Stewart, Capt. Egerton (2d bat. 34th foot, Dep. Assist. Adj.-gen.), Capt. Baring (1st light bat. K. G. L. Aid-de-Camp to Gen. Alten), and Capt. Hawker, Royal Art. all slightly , Capt. Waller (103d foot, Dep. Assist. Q. M. Gen.), Capt. Rouveria (Sicilian reg. Aid-de-Camp to Major-gen. Cole), Capt. Wade (42d foot, Aid-de-Camp to Majorgen. Cole), and Lieut. Thiele (Royal German Ert.) all severely, - 4ch Drngoom, Capt. Holmes, Liuut, Wildman, and Adj. Chantry, slightly. — 3d feet or Buffs, Captains Marky and Gooden, Major, 7 Captains, 13 Lieutenants, 9 Ensigns, 31 Serjeants, 4 Drummers, 215 rank and file, 54 horses, killed; 7 General Staff, 4 Lieute-colonels, 4 Majors, 43 Captains, 21 Lieutenants, 20 Ensigns, 6 Staff, 132 Serjeants, 9 Drummers, 2426 rank and file, 26 horses, wounded; 1 Major, 4 Captains, 8 Lieutenants, 1 Ensign, 28 Serjeants, 10 Drummers, 492 rank and file, 17 horses, missing.

towards those places to-morrow morning, and shall accompany it."

Admiralty-Office, June 4.
Vice Admiral Sir J. Saumarez, Bart.
and K. B. has transmitted to J. W.
Croker, esq. a letter he had received from Capt. Lowe, of his Majesty's sloop the Diligence, giving an account of his having, on the 9th of last month, captured a Danish row-boat privateer, carrying two swivels and sixteen men.

ABSTRACT OF FOREIGN OCCURRENCES.

FRANCE.

The Moniteurs have lately published three official documents. The first was, a dispatch from Massena, dated Salamanca, May 14, referring solely to the actions which took place between the 5th and 9th, in the neighbourhood of Almeida.-The second, Gen. Brennier's report of the evacuation of Almeida; in which he asserts, that not more than 60 men of his garrison fell during their hazardous, but well-conducted retreat. -The third, a dispatch from Marshal Soult, containing the details of the ever-memorable battle of Albuera, Soult describes his breaking up at Seville—his junction with Latour Maubour;; -his approach to Albuers, and his disposition for the engagement there, exactly as General Beresford had done. [See Gazette, page 659.] During the engagement, he says, he learned from a Spanish prisoner, that Blake had joined with 9,000 men. Deeming the contest no longer equal, the allies being 39,000, and the French 18,000, he abandoned his design, the relief of Badajes; but his own loss is estimated at 2,000 men, and ours at 9,000. The British, he adds, took no prisoners, except "two or three hundred wounded, who were left on the field!"—though previously, he said, he maintained the position he had gained at the commencement of the battle until the 18th, two days after.—In relation to future events, the French Marshal does not give up the cause in despair: he is determined to call in fresh reinforcements; and, as he expresses it, to complete our defeat;" for throughout he claims the victory at Albuera.

FRENCH NATIONAL COUNCIL.

The first sitting of the National Council was this day (June 18) celebrated according to the antient forms prescribed by the usages and canons of the Church. The Catholic Religion possesses no ceremony more affecting, or more august. At seven in the morning the doors of the Metropolitan Church of Paris were thrown open to the publick—the body of the Church and the ailes were in a moment filled with those who assisted at the ceremony, among whom we noticed a number of French and foreign Ministers, and a great many other persons of distinction. At nine, the Fathers of the Council passed out from the Archbishop's Palace, and moved on in procession to Notre-Dame. The procession marched in the following order: First, the Swiss Guards, and the Officers of the Church; the Cross; the Masters of the Ceremonies; the Incense-bearers; the Choristers; the Ecclesiasticks of the second rank; the Officers of the Council; the Metropolitan Chapter, which was to receive the Council at the principal entrance of the church; the Fathers of the Council, all in their capes and mitres, with the scarf, the cross, the gremial, and the mitre of the Bishop who was to celebrate the High Mass, carried by Canons; four Deacons and four Sub-Deacons in their surplices (en chasuble); two assistant Bishops; the Celebrant, in his pontifical garb. His Eminence, Cardinal Fesch, Archbishop of Lyons, Primate of the Gallican Church, is the President of the Council.

The Fathers were ranged in the choir on the seats which had been provided for them, having hassocks before them, and some small benches for the assistant Priests. The Metropolitan Clergy and Rectors of Paris occupied one side of the Sanctuary. — After the Gospel-Lesson, the officiating Sub-Deacon carried the book opened to the Celebrant, and to the Fathers, for them to kiss. This ceremony finished, M. de Boulogne, Bishop of Troyes, ascended the pulpit. His discourse produced the most lively impression. Many passages, above all, his peroration, appeared models of the most sublime eloquence. The Orator had chosen for his theme, the influence of the Catholic Religion on social order. He evinced that the Catholic Religion is the strongest cement of states, by the force of its tenets, by the nature of its worship, and by the ministry of its Pastors. The Cardinal, who was the Celebrant, now proceeded to the high Mass. At the second elevation, all the Bishops gave each other mutually the kiss of peace. After this, they moved two by two to the Communion, and received the Sacrament from the hand of the Celebrant.

After Mass, different prayers were recited, invoking the illumination of the Holy Ghost, and these were ended by the Hymn, Veni Creator. The Cardinal Celebrant prayed successively for the Pope, the Emperor, and the Council. -(N. B. It is thus pointed in the onginal.) — The Episcopal Secretaries of the Council then approaching the Celebrant, saluted him, and likewise the Fathers who received from their hand the Decrees, which were to be made public in this sitting. One of them (M. the Bishop of Nantes) mounted the pulpit, and proclaimed in Latin the Decree for opening of the Council. (Here follows the translation:)

"Most illustrious and very reverend Siegneur—Most Reverend Father, may it please you, for the honour and glory of the Holy and undivided Trinity, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, for the increase of the exaltation of the faith of the Christian Religion, for the peace and union of the Church, to decree and declare that the National Council has commenced." Then the Cardinal the Celebrant and President said, "The Decree has pleased the Fathers: in consequence, we declare that" the National Council is formed."

The Te Deum was then chanted, after which a new Decree was made public, on the manner of conducting themselves in the Council—de mode vivendi in Concilio. The muster-roll of the Fathers names was then called over, to which each in his turn answered, Adeum—(Here I am). The suffrages having been collected in the usual form, the President proclaimed a Decree on the Profession of Faith. All the Members made the Profession individually, and thus ended the first Sitting.

HOLLAND.

To shew the severity of police to which the Dutch are exposed under their merciless task-masters, we need only mention, that the Exchange at Amsterdam must be shut by three o'clock—the streets leading to it must be immediately evacuated; and all who shall be found in them afterwards are to be treated as disturbers of the public peace. Not more than to stop and

PART I.]

To drain its effective under the to Body Guard

The Jew have found the Lieuten Placentia, ject of the (enforced wi The Deputa three weeks ed of Buor should be p the Hollans substitutes.

Marshal to the Porti their disci
thanking th concludes b it an honou
with a nati and which only auxilia and heredit
from the typ
threatens th

General (gency of Cahas been reterial part ford's. Cas loss at 7,00 learn, that between the lungton, pre-that on the junction of corps, the command should always devolve upon the officer of the tirglest military rank: this would have given the command of the Allies to General Castanos, who, however, in this deheate point, acted most judiciously; for he declared that the General who has the greatest force under his orders, ought to have the chief command, the others being considered as auxiliaries.

During the hortest of the action at Albuera, in officer, Eisign Thompson, was called upon to surrender the coloura he lield, but he declared he would give them up only with his life, and he fell avictim to his bravery—Another officer, Pusign Walsh, had the consurs he held braken be a cannon ball, and was also a verely wear led—having fallen on the field, he ture the colours from the staff, as I timest them into his bosom, where they were found after his death.—Sir W. Beres or I was also attacked by one of the Polish cavalry, whom he discount Mag. Suppl EXXXI, Part I.

24th of April, that he had, after great sacrifice of money, labour, and time, invented a machine in which he would, on the 12th of May, rise in the air and fly twelve miles.

Buonaparte has ordered 68 captains of ships at Embden to be arrested, who were suspected of having had intercourse with England; and has sent them on board freuch ships of war at Antwerp.

Count Scharosch, related by marriage to the Imperial family, was lately murdered, on his estates in Hungary, by two of his principal domesticks, who, after firing the mansion, fled with a large booty to Bohema. An ostentatious display of wealth, unsuitable to persons in their station of life, occasioned their apprehension; but as no evidence could be adduced against them, they were li-Subsequently, however, in berated. clearing away the ruins of the mansion, the body of the Count, which had been accidentally preserved from the fire, was found, with such marks of violence, as left no doubt of his having been murdered. The two domesticks were again apprehended, confessed their crime, and expiated it by an ignominious death.

The following account of a Literary Prodigy is extracted from the Moniteur of the 28th of May last, under the head of Kingdom of Westphalia, Gottingen,

*May 2*0:

"For these eight months we have had among the students of our University, a boy 10½ years old, who is a real phænomenon. The name of this young scavant is Charles Witte. He understands the languages, history, geography, and literature, as well antient as modern: at the age of eight years he possessed, besides his mother-tongue, Greek, Latin, French, English, and Italian, to such a degree of perfection, that he could not only translate, currently, the Eneid of Virgil and the Hiad of Homer, but could, besides, speak, with an astonishing facility, all the living languages which have been just mentioned. Of this, he last year gave such satisfactory proofs in a public examination, which he underwent at the University of Leipsic, that that Body honoured him with the following diploma:

"Almæ Universitatis Lipsiensis Rectore Carolo Gottlob Kuhnio, &c. &c. Carolus Witte Lochaviensis puer IX annorum, propter præmaturam eximiatinque in iis quibus non puerilis, sed adolescentum ætas imbui solet, solertiam; potissimum verð linguarum antiquarum Græcæ ac Latinæ, item recentiorum Franco-gallicæ, Anglicæ, Etruscæ, notitiam haud vulgarem, quam à nemine nisi à patre Carolo Henrico Godofrego unico et solo præceptore accepit. Exemplo plane singulari non modo albo Philyriæ (Leipsic) insertus, verum etiam data fide, civibus Academiæ nostræ adscriptus est."

"Till his arrival at Gottingen, this child had no other instructor than his father, the Clergyman Witte. His Majesty the King of Wesphalia, desirous that he should continue to direct the studies of his son to their termination, has granted him a pension, which has enabled him to quit his pastoral functions, and to accompany his pupil to our University. The young Witte is now studying philosophy: he is engaged in a course of mathematicks, physicks, and metaphysicks, and shows the most happy disposition for all the sciences."

SWEDEN.

The Swedish Baron D'Armfeldt has entered the Russian service, and been appointed Capt. Lieutenant in the fleet in the Black Sea. His Lady has been ordered to quit the Swedish territories.

RUSSIA.

The following remarkable instances of longevity occur in the Bills of Mortality for the whole extent of the Russian Empire, during the year 1809:—Died, 307 persons between the age of 95 and 100; 188 between 100 and 105; 86 between 105 and 110; 36 between 110 and 115; 23 between 115 and 120; 8 between 120 and 125; 5 between 125 and 130; 1 between 130 and 135; 1 between 135 and 140; 1 between 145 and 150; and 1 between 155 and 160.

A tiger of the largest size was discovered in February last in the environs of Buckturma, in Siberia, and killed by a cossack. The memory of the oldest inhabitant cannot furnish another instance of this animal being seen wild in those frozen regions.

The only son of Suwarrow was drowsed in the river Rimmer, on the 24th of April; meeting his death by a remarkable fatality, from a stream which was one of the scenes of his father's glory, and gave him one of his titles, that of Riminsky.

TURKEY.

Seiman Aga, one of the chiefs, and greatest protector of the Janissaries, was lately strangled at Constantinople, on suspicion of meditating the restoration to authority of that corps. Forty of his followers shared his fate.

In Turkey, horse-chesnuts are ground and mixed with the provender for horses, particularly for such as are broken-winded, or troubled with coughs. After being boiled a little to take off the bit-terness, bruised and mixed with a small quantity of barley-meal, they are good food for rearing and fattening poultry.

EAST INDIES,

Just as the last packet sailed from India, Admiral Drury, with a considerable naval force, and 15,000 troops, had gone against the Island of Java.

The art of curing beef has been brought to great perfection in the East Indies. Messrs. Gammidge and Frute, of Calcutta, opened last year some berrels; and though the beef had been in salt six years, it was in excellent picking good preservation, and without taint.

AMERICA, AND THE WEST INDIES.
On the 19th ult. 100 houses were destroyed at New York by fire.

Gen. Moreau, it is said, has declared his intention of becoming a Cities of the United States. Par

Soi conta moqu infas mora quire coms Ch at St A state into cover saries

... rison Symp They fire t bahit fort, time exect have escat trade Αŧ lately miles on t It is a and. of sh.

COUNTRY News.

April 23. This day a Court-martial assembled on board the Gladiator, at Portsmouth, to try Lieut. Joseph Tullidge, the surviving Officers, and ship's company, of his Majesty's ship Africaine, which was captured off the Isle of France. The Court having examined into the circumstances attending her capture, agreed, " that his Majesty's ship Africame was captured by a very superior force of the Enemy, after an action which was commenced by the order of her deceased Commander, the late Captain Robert Corbet, in a very brave and spirited manner; and after he was disabled by the loss of his right leg, by the second broadside of the Enemy, was continued by the said Lieutenant Joseph Tullidge in the most gallant and determined manner, although he had received four severe wounds during the action. as long as there was the least chance of preserving her from the Enemy; and did adjudge the said Lieut. Tullidge, his surviving Officers and Ship's company, to be most honorably acquitted."

Cambridge, May 6. A grand entertainment was given this day at St. John's College, to commemorate the completion of the third century since the foun-

town Linferd; a number of old documents describing this house and the owners of it as belonging to Newtown Linford, and also the parish books of Newtown Linford, in which the occupiers of the Warren-house had been assessed to, and had paid taxes to that parish, were read, and a vast number of old witnesses (one of them of the age of 90 years) were examined, to prove that Rothley Plain had always been reputed to be within the parish of Newtown Linford. On the part of the Defendant, Mr. Babington, an extract from Domes day book was read, and also some proceedings in a cause in the year 1660, or 1661, between the ancestors of the present Plaintiff and Defendant, to prove that the Plain was within the parish of Rothley; and very many old witnesses "whose heads were silvered o'er with age," and whose furrowed cheek spake many a toilsom had again and bounds of the p had always beer of Rothley. T tale" of these hamlet" exciter of Spartan-like miration from the apparently strong possession of their faculties, and the firmness of their memories, too tenacious even to be overset by the brow-beatings of cross-examination, evinced the truth of the Poet's fine description of a green old age:

"The I look old, yet I am strong and lusty,

For in my youth I never did apply
Hot and rebellious liquors to my blood;
Nor did I with unbashful forehead woo
The means of weakness and debility;
Therefore my age is as a lusty winter,
Frosty but kindly."

After a long summing up from the learned Judge, who stated the weight of evidence on both sides to be so strong that he was unable to say on which side, it preponderated, the jury retired, and after more than an hour's deliberation, returned a verdict for the Plaintiff.

June 9. A fishing-boat of Hastings was lost this day in a gale of wind, by which J. White, aged 27, R. Finning, aged 23, G. Gobie, aged 23, and W. Page, aged 17 years, were drowned. Shortly after, a second boat, with her crew, consisting of R. White (brother of the above), three men and a boy, was consigned to the same fate. These events took place seven miles off Dungeness.

DOMESTIC OCCURRENCES.

Monday, April 22.

In consideration of the distinguished services of his Majesty's 87th (or Prince of Wales's Irish) Regiment, upon various occasions, and more recently in the brilliant action at Barrosa, his Royal Highness the Prince Regent, in the name and on the behalf of his Majesty, was graciously pleased to approve of that Regiment being in future styled, The 87th, or Prince of Wales's Own Irish Regiment; and of its bearing upon the regimental Colours and Appointments, as a badge of honour, an Eagle, with a wreath of Laurel above the Harp, in addition to the arms of his R. Highness.

Serjeunt Masterson, of the 87th Regiment, who took the French Eagle at the battle of Barrosa, has been promoted to an enugacy in the York light infantry Volunteers.

Thursday, May 2.

A General Meeting of the Members of the Royal Society of Musicians, was held this day at their Rooms in Lisle Street, Leicester Square, for the election of a Secretary in the place of the late Mr. William Foster. The Candidates were Mr. Charles-James Ashley (proposed by Sir William Parsons and Dr. Smith), Mr. Macintonh, Mr. Leffler, and Mr. Samuel Taylor. After the candidates had severally addressed the

PART I.] Theatrical

THEATRICAL REGIS
DRURY LANS COMPA

AT THE LYCRUM THEATRE, May 20. Where to find a Fi medy, by Mr. Lee, author of a Folly." The language is the sentiment moral; and, does not contain much to pl nothing that offends.

HAYMARKET THEATH June 10. The Royal Oak, cal Play, in three Acts, by l The plot is founded on the co. Charles II, in the branches after the battle of Worcester lates historical truth. Charadventures in the Oak, finds house of Col. Windham, and ment officers baving entered him, young Windham deliver as the fugitive Prince, whose unknown to them. Charles 1 to repair to the tent of Fairfax er in Chief of the Parliame and there to prevail upon th only to suffer young Windhai but also to permit Charles h at large. This is certainly it resting incident in the piece, h accompaniments of parental auxiety for the fate of your, with the addition of the anxio of his intended bride. The nates with the escape of Chacoast on board a vessel.

June C1. The Round Room; a Musical Farce, by Mr Dibdia; which, like all his productions, aims to display the generous character of the English tar. The piece being unfavourably received, the Author has withdrawn it, in order to make such alterations as may insure it a better reception on its next representation.

GAZETTE PROMOTIONS.

R. WARD, esq Clerk of the Ordnance, are Hon. Cropley Ashley Cowper, now Earl of Shaftesbury. Ineutenant-colonel II. Torrens, 89th foot, his Military Secretary

War-Office, June 4. The Prince Regent has been pleased to appoint,

Major-General, — t. Baron Dreschsel, with temporary rank; C Baron Linsingen, with ditto, R. Avioun, G Rochfort, F. Grose, H. R. Gaie, J Spens; W Scott, R. Tipping, A Campbell; A. Trotter; F. Fuller, Sir J. Affleck, bart.; G. V. Hart; J Robinson; G. Warde, Hon. T. Maitland; R Bright, W. Ramsay; J. Campbell; Sir G Prevost, bart.; W. Waller; M. Archdall; Sir J. C. Sher-meet; R. Williams, royal marines; L. Desborough, duto; A. Keith, 65th foot; J. Mackelcan, royal engineers, J. T. Layard, 54th foot; J. Skinner, 16th foot; J. Meredith, royal marines, R. H. Farmer, ditto; Watkin Tench, ditto; J. S. Sanuders, 61st foot; L. Maclean, Quarter-Master-General in the West Indies; G. Wilson, royal artillery; S. Rimington, detto; D. Ballinghall, royal marines; D. Shank, Canadian fencibles; Æ Shaw, on haif-pay of the Queen's rangers, G. Dyer, royal marmes; A. Hay, 1st foot; J. J. Barlow, on half-pay of the Cheshire fencebles; W. Minet, 30th foot; W. M. Peacocke, Coldstream guards; Sir J Doug-las, kut. royal marines; J. Pare, on halfpay of 96th foot; W. P. Clay, on half-pay of 40th foot; C. Wale, 66th foot; T. Hull, 62d foot; J. Kemmis, 40th foot; R. Bu 19th li Sir W. garrisc dragoc H. M. foot; R. B. Sheaff of the foot; G. Airey, 8th foot; R. 8. Denkin, Quarter-Master-General in the Mediterranean; Hon. E. Stopford, 3d foot guards; G. Cooke, 1st foot guards; T. J. Backhouse, 47th foot; J. Wilson, 4th Ceylon regiment; W. Eden, 84th foot; F. G. V. Lake, 50th foot; G. T. Walker, 50th foot; J. A. Vesey, on half-pay of 29th foot; R. Stovin, 17th foot; K. Machenzie, on half-pay of 15th foot; Sir J. Dalrymple, bart. 3d foot guards; F. J. Wilder, 55th foot; Hon. G. de Grey, Aidde-Camp to the King; S. Hawker, ditto; to be Major-Generals in the Army.

Lieutenant-Colonels-Sir C. Imhoff, kut. 4th garrison battalion; G. Gordon, on half-pay of 4th foot; D. Macdonald, 57th foot; Arch. Stewart, 1st foot; Alex. Adams, 78th foot; J. C. Halkett, on halfpay of 55th foot; Hon. G. Maedouald, lat foot guards; T. N. Powlet, on halfpay of 95th foot; Sir E. G. Butler, knt. Bith foot; S. Need, 24th light dragoons; Mr. E. Jacob, on half-pay of 68th foot; T. L'Estrange, inspecting Field-officer; Sir T. Brooke Pechell, bart, of the late horse grenadler guards; W. Latham, 7th dragoon guards; D. Deuter, on half-pay of unattached Officers; G. Kinnaird Dana, 6th garrison battalion; J. Moore, 23d light draguons; E. Baynes, Nova Scotia fenci-Men; N. Levitt Peacucke, 71st foot; J. Stirling, 49d foot; T. Steele, 90th foot; P. Maxwell, 7th dragoon guards; R. Young, 8th foot; B. Leighton, 4th dragoons; Henry B. Mervin Vavasour, of the late horse grenader guards; E. Vicars, 21st light dragoons; J. Meller, invalid artiflery ; H. R. Knight, 4th garrison battalion; R. Douglas, 55th foot; S. V. Hinde, 32d foot; B. Glegg, on half-pay of the 91st foot; Hon. J. Ramsay, 2d foot; L. Mo-sheim, of the depôt at Lymington; F. Streicher, York light infantry volunteers; C. Graut, Aid-de-Camp to his Royal Highness the Prince Regent; J. Lyon, 97th foot; W. Gifford, 43d foot; A. Gore, 33d foot ; J. Orde, 99th foot ; J. Baron de Sonmenherg, De Roll's regiment; C. B. Eger-ton, 44th foot; T. S. Beckwith, 95th foot; to be Conorms in the Army.

Majore—J. Campbell, on half pay 68th foot; H. Shadforth, on half-pay Queen's rangers; J. B. Haffey, 18th foot; A. Hamilton, 30th foot; M. W. Lee, 96th foot; J. French, on half-pay 121st foot; R. Lucas, on half-pay York rangers; A. Lloyd, 98th foot; J. M. Hamerton, 44th foot; A. Chaplin, 2d Ceylon regiment; J. Pringle, 6th garrison battalion; A. Light, 25th foot; J. Wood, 32d foot; D. Campbell, 9th foot; G. A. Tonyn, 31st foot; Henry Thornton, 40th foot; Andrew Davidson, 15th foot; Tho. Chamberlain, 24th foot; J. Hicks, 32d foot; E. Paunce, 4th foot; T. Muller, 1st foot; F. Barclay, 56th foot;

P. J. Parry, on half-pay Steele's late uncruiting ou Spearmen, ton, on hal W. C. Spr on half-pa B. H. You 27th foot; 28th foot, Armstrong Cape regio T. Roberto pay 1912 Y 6th foot ; (23d foot; ment of 1 W. F. Spic foot; R. Pr fout; to be

To be Army—M
Major J. E
Petrie, 79
60th foot;
Major O, 1
C. Patricks
L'Estrange
not (unatis...

M. Mackenzie, That foot; Captain A. Brown, 79th foot; Captain P. Cruebar, 18th light dragoons of King's German legists, with temporary rank only; Captain G. T. Napier, 52d foot; Captain G. Krauchinberg, 1st light dragoons of King's German legion, with temporary rank only; Captain G. Scovell, 57th foot; Captain W. L. P. Napier, 43d foot; Captain M. Banett, 74th foot; Captain J. Cameron, 95th foot; Captain H. Balneavis, 27th foot; Captain H. Balneavis, 27th foot; Captain H. Gaptain S. R. Chapman, royal engineers, Captain R. Armstrong, to be Major in Portugal only.

Dr. Waller, Physician to the garrier, of Portsmouth, vice Meik, deceased.

War-office, J
ness the Hen
Lieutenant-Co
Whitehall, J.
Yorke, Sir Ric
admiral of the William Dome
white, Sir Jose
Frederick Rob
esq. commonly missioners for High Admiral,

FREDERICK Edgentabe, esq. a Commissioner of the Victuality Bhard, the Boscawen, deceased.

G. Bridges, esq. slected Alderhield, Lime-street Ward, vice Jacob, resignal.

Eccusiostrast

ton R. Surrey.

Rev. William Page Richards, LL. B. Abbotstoke R. Dorset.

Rev T Barnahy, B D Edwin Loach R. Worcestersh with Tedstone Wafre Chap. Herefordshire,

Rev. C. A. Wheelwright, Little Bytham R wit a Castle Bytham annexed, Liucolns. Rev. J Carter, librarian of the Bristol

Bigrais.

Library, a minor canon of Bristol cathed.

June 5. AT Arbuthnott House, Viscoun-

At Duff House, Scotland, Lady J. Taylor, a daughter.

The wife of Henry Comyns Berkeley, esq of Lincoln's-inn-fields, a daughter.

June 6. At Ham Common, the lady of Sir Henry C. Montgomery, bart. a son. June 15. At Ryde, Isle of Wight, the lady of Licut, gen. Sir George Nugent, a June 26. At Egglesfield House, the wife of the Rev. John Morris, a daughter.

June 30 At Winchmore Hill, Mrs. Harvey Combe, a san.

I ately, At Caristhue, the Grand Duchess of Baden, of a Princess.

Eliot, esq. of Antigua, and sister of the Countess of Errol, Lady Despencer, and Lady Cosby.

June 15. Edward Fenshawe, Captain of Royal Engineers, to Frances Mary, second daughter of Lieut. gen. Sir Hew Dalrymple.

June 18. J. R. Spencer Phillips, esq. of Writtle, to Anna Maria, eldest daughter of Sir J. Tyrell, bart. of Boreham House, Essex.

June 19. At St. George's, Hanoversquare, John Tyrrell, esq. to Clarissa. Eliza, only daughter of William Merle, esq. of Colliers Wood, Surrey.

June 21. At Putney, Waller Clifton, esq. of the Admiralty, to Elinor, second daughter of Daniel Bell, esq. of Highlands, Putney Heath,

June 22. Rev. A. Peyton, rector of Doddington, Isle of Ely, (see col. 1.) to Isabella Anne, youngest daughter of T. Hussey, esq. M. P. of Gathorn, co. Meath.

Henry Albers, esq. of Great Coramstreet, to Lucia Lucretia, second daughter of N.A. Martinius, esq. of St. Helen's-place.

June 24. At Lianelweth, J. Thomas, esq. of Pencenig, to Miss Gwynne, of Llanelweth Hall, both co. Radnor.

June

LXXXI.

June 25. T. Daniell, esq. of Aldridge Lodge, Staffordshire, to Mary, third daughter of Samuel Smith, esq. M. P. of Woodhall Park, Herts.

Rev. J. Griffin, of Preston Candover, Hants, to Catharine, daughter of the late J. Stephenson, esq. of Bedford-square.

June 26. By special licence, Lord Burghersh, eldest son of the Earl of Westmore-land, to Miss Wellesley Pole, daughter of the Hon. W. P.

June 27. Mr. A. Borradaile, second son of W. B. esq. of Fenchurch-street, to Elizabeth, eldest daughter of R. Borradaile, esq. of Bedford-bill, Surrey.

Lately, J. Soane, esq. of Lincoln's-inn-fields, to Maria, third daughter of James Preston, esq. of Sewardstone, Essex.

M. Tucker, esq. to Margaret, daughter of the Rev. James Douglas, rector of Middleton, Sussex, and Chaplain to the Prince.

R. Smith, esq. of Tibbington House, to Miss Fereday, daughter of S. F. esq. Ettingshall Park, Staffordshire.

Thomas Hughes, esq. of Stroud, to Mary, third daughter of the late Rev. Richard Huntley, of Boxwell Court.

Rev. John Waltham, rector of Dorlastoo, Staffordshire, to Miss Fletcher.

At Mugdock Castle, Hugh Tennent, esq. of Glasgow, to Miss B. Graham, daughter of J. G. esq. of Mugdock Castle.

In Dublin, by special licence, Edward Hood, esq. of Middle Mount, Queen's county, to Catharine, second daughter of Timothy Driscoll, esq. of Harcourt-street.

In Dublin, William Monsell, esq. of Tervoe, to Olivia, daughter of Sir A. J. Walsh, bart. of Ballykillecaven, Queen's county.

The Hon. H. R. Crofton, (Aid-de-Camp to Gen. Sir J. Cradock), youngest son of the late Sir E. C. bart. to Mary, eldest daughter of T. Hemsworth, esq. of Limerick.

Additions and Corrections.

Pages 89, b. 186. The legacy of the late Sir Francis Bourgeois to Dulwich College is more extensive than was supposed. He has left the whole of his pictures, besides 10,000l. to keep them in due preservation, and 2000l. for the purpose of repairing the gallery in that place for their reception. He has also bequeathed legacies of 1000l. each to the Master of the College, and the Chaplain; and the Fellows of the College are to be the residuary legatees, and are to possess, for its advantage, all the rest of his property, of every denomination.

P. 92. a. The late Rev. Dr. Vardill was educated in King's College, New York, of which he was elected principal, and appointed Regius Professor of Divinity. When America claimed independence, he resigned his bright prospect there, and embraced the cause of the mother country; where he distinguished himself hy many publications worthy an acute and liberal politician. He was a rare example of splendid talents, devoted to the purest philanthropy; and of profound scholastic knowledge, blended with the most endearing social virtues. During the last ten years, severe sickness withdrew him from those public circles, of which his wit, bloquence, and urbanity, had rendered him the ornament; but his memory will be treasured while those who knew him exist.

The late Rev. Dr. Maske-P. 197. a. tyne, baving at an early period of life given proots of his abilities as a mathematicien and astronomer, went to Barbados, mader the appointment of the Board of Longitude, for the purpose of trying Mr. Harnson's marine time-keeper, for which the inventor claimed the premium offered by Parliament. His first publication was a quarto pamphlet, with a view to the provement of practical navigation. tituled, "The British Mariner's Guide," published in 1763. His reputation w by this time so completely established, and his talents were so highly appreciated that, on the death of Dr. Nathanael Bli in 1765, he was appointed to the situation of Astronomer Royal to his Majesty. ... In 1767, he published, by order of the code missioners of longitude, an account of the John Harrison's watch. In 1774, the president and council of the Royal Seci brought out in a folio volume, at the pablic expense, his Tables for computing the apparent Places of the Fixed Stare, and reducing Observations of the Planets. In 1776, he produced the first volume, in tolio, of his Astronomical Observations, made at the Royal Observatory, at Green wich, from the year 1765. The continu tion of this important work has since hed given to the world in the same form, the obedience to his Majesty's command. . In 1792, Dr. M. presented the publick with the invaluable Tables of Logarithms, by the late indefatigable Michael Taylor, whi sunk under his task and died when dak five pages of his work remained unfinish bequeathing to the world a most remain able monument of human industry. De Maskelyne had always encouraged the design, and now took upon himself to faint the work, to which he prefixed a mo masterly introduction, randering the whole a very complete performance. .:

P. 399. b. The late Rev. Thomas Maken died March 9, at Castle Kelly, cd. Galway, aged 70. He was only brother of the passent Lord Hartland, and second some Thomas Mahon, esq. Knight of the ships for Roscommon from 1762 to 1782. The was born June 3, 1740, married July 11, 1784, Honoria, second daughter of Duile Kelly, esq. of Castle Kelly; by when had issue, 1. Thomas; 2. Denis, a Rieb.

beautiful seat of Castle Mary, attuated on the harbour of Cork, and a large personal fortune.

P. 606. a. The late Mr. Daniel Roberts was the son of Mr. John Roberts, of Bristol, afterwards of London, by Amelia, second surviving daughter of Mr. Thomas Danien, both merchants of superior estimation and character, the second possessing an extensive influence in the former city, where the subject of this notice was born to the 12th Pec. 1-53. He was the fourth in lineal descent from John Roberts, an eminent personage in the early history of the people called Quickers, and the ten of an high Typitale, of Hunt's Court, in Nibiey, and father of the celebrated Gent. Mag. Suppl. LXXXI. Past I.

telligent and agreeable. His talents and and superior energies of domestic attachment, his more familiar traits of character were predominantly conspicuous: his ex-tended and active, but massuming and private benefactions, may long be feelingly remembered by the objects of their exertion; and his uniform anxiety and efforts for the improvement and happiness of his family over anticipated and superseded the cold anggestions of sordid policy. In this interesting particular, it would indeed , be difficult to render an adequate justice to his desert and kindness; and amid the absence or diminution of every other excellence, these alone would have afforded a private source of review and acknowledgment, affectionate as eternal. . His theological sentiments were comprehensive and sublime, and the latter part of his life was assiduously employed in the dissemimation of principles calculated to promote the welfare of mankind. He married in 1776, Ann, youngest daughter of Mr. Jonah Thompson, of Nether Compton, Dorsetshire, a gentleman of honourable extraction, and distinguished for eminent moral qualities and general acquisition. In exterior appearance, Mr. Roberts exceeded the middle height; he was remarkable for great corporeal, as well as mental activity, and in point of personal symme-try, agility, and elegance, he was equalled by very few examples in the earlier part of life. The delicacy and propriety of his external habits were exemplary and conspicuous. His eye was singularly expressive and brilliant; and his countenance, but for a severe attack of the natural small-pox in infancy, which however seems to have improved the original excellence of his constitution, would have been similarly distinguished. He expired in the midst of his afflicted family, to whom his tranquid conclusion and expressions of confidence and comfort in the Christian faith and redemption, with a full assurance of future happiness, have additionally contributed every complation compatible with their loss.

DEATHS.

1809, AT Canterbury, aged 74, Rev. Feb. 23. John Riquiey, a truly respectable emigrant French priest, formerly Curé D'Espagnes, in the diocese of Amiena. June 22. At Elbridge, in the parish of Littlebourn, in Kent, Sarah, wife of Mr. Henry Denne, and daughter of the late Mr. T. Hollingbery, of Wingham.

July 24. At Sandwick, in her 94th year,

Mrs. Goulder, widow,

Nov. 2. At Sevenoaks, Kent, aged 78, Mr. Geoffrey Taylor, for many years in considerable practice as a Surgeon and Apothecary at that place, but who had retired from practice.

PART I

standing, in many and his tranquilli mated pa

At No. Blagden, one of th families guished t tegrity, a also was teer corp residence jt with ere country who fell g ty's ship Nile, and have erec Nelson 11 family,

At Gat 101st yea was able t in the last

At Cou Ratcliffe, was of the cian of th lation of ' thematics

At Rea-Crowshaw last, and in a week

At Aston Hall, Salop, Mrs. Jane Pugh, a maiden lady, descended from the autient and respectable family of that name, of Kerry, Montgomeryshire. She has left 10% per annum for ever to the poor of the par sh of Hopesay.

At Mersden, Salop, Mr. Addison Ashburn, a relative of the celebrated author of the Spectator,

At Castle Grant, S.r James Grant, bart. His victues as an individual will long be cherished in the recoilection of his friends; the excellence of his public character will be not less warmly remembered in the district over which he presided, not so much by holding the property of the soil, as by possessing the attachment, the gratitude, and the confidence of its inhabitants. He had all the affections, without any of the prile, or any of the harshness, of fendal superiority; and never forgot, in attention to his own interests, or in the improvement of his extensive estates, the interests or the comforts of the people. Amidst the varied situations, and some of the severe trials of life, he was uniformly guided by rectitude of principle, benevolence of disposition, and the most fervent though rational piety. From these he derived support and resignation during the long progress of a pannihi disease, and ton street,

At Villa Fermosa, of the wounds he received in the action of the 5th, Capt. Knope, 14th dragoons,

At Odessa, Gen. Kominskoi, the late Commander-in-Chief of the Russian-army.

May 19. At Halmford, near Shepperton, the divorced wife of Henry Jackson, esq.

May 24, In his 73d year, Rev. G. Ingham, of Chapel-bar, Nottingham.

May 25. In James street, Buckinghamgate, aged 76, Mr. J. Gordon, late of the Cudbear Company, Great Peter-street, Westminster.

At Gibraltar, of the Walcheren fever, in his 31st year, Capt. R. Tribe, of the 82d regiment.

May 26. At Thornbridge, Derbyshire, aged 57, Mr. John Morewood.

In his 78th year, T. Peake, esq. of Denbigh, formerly of Southampton-buildings.

May 27. D. E. Mac Donnell, esq. a literary gentleman of considerable erudition and talents.

The wife of J. Agar, esq. of Welbeckatreet, barrister,

At Richmond, in his 76th year, R. Penn, esq. grandson of W. P. one of the Proprietaries, and formerly Governor of Pennsylvania.

At Lewes, the wife of John Hoper, esq.

Maz

May 28. In Upper Grosvenor-street, Sir James Hamlyn, bart. of Clovelly-court, Devon, formerly M. P. for Carmarthen-His name was originally Hammett; but he took the name and arms of Hamlyn, by Act of Parliament, pursuant to the desire of his great uncle Zachary He married Arabella, Hamlyn, esq. heiress of the family of Sir Rice Williams, of Edwinsford, Carmarthenshire; by whom he had issue, James, Zachary, and Arabella, married to Ambrose St. John, esq. He is succeeded in his title and Estates by his eldest son, James Hamlyn, esq. of Edwinsford, Carmarthenshire.

After a lingering illness, the wife of Mr. John Lincoln, organ-builder, Holborn, a most valuable woman, who will be long and deeply deplored.

At Leamington Spa, Caroline, widow of the late Rev. T. Harris, of Braddon, near Towcester, (whose death is noticed in page 495), and second daughter of the late Rev. Dr. Marriott, of Cottesbach, co. Leic.

G. J. Scott, esq. of Betton, Shrewsbury. At his father's house, Merlin's-vale, near Haverfordwest, Charles Bowen Mends, esq. R. N.

At Beauly, much and justly respected, Joseph Young, esq. of Perth, one of the Tacksmen of the Beauly Fishing. In riding home from Scatwell, one of the stirrups of his saddle suddenly gave way, by which he was thrown to the ground, and so much injured that he died before medical aid could be afforded.

May 29. In Bruton-street, Sarah Caroline, wife of John Henry Smyth, esq. of Heath, co. York.

In consequence of falling into a well nearly 70 feet deep, having in it 13 feet of water, from which she received so much injury, that she died in the course of the afternoon, Mrs. Reed, of Magdalen-street, Exeter.

Greatly respected, Mr. Thomas Camplin, insurance-broker, Bristol.

Mrs. Callow, relict of John C. esq. of Banbury, and daughter of the late Rev. Mr. Wardle, vicar of that place.

In Bath, Mary, wife of Mr. Charles Davis Forrester, late of Demerara.

In his 70th year, Mr. J. Saner, of Kirby Malhamdale, in the West Riding, York-shire.

May 30. Mary Anne, daughter of J. Y. Fownes, esq. Southampton-row, Russel-sq. Philip John Worsley, esq. of Arno's Vale, near Bristol.

May 31. In New North-street, Red Lion-square, in his 46th year, Stephen Scarbrow, esq.

At his brother's, the Rev. Thomas Bowerbank, vicar of Chiswick, after excruciating sufferings of more than two years' continuance, brought on by fatigue and the effects of the climate, aged 23, Lieut. Edward Bowerbank, 21st reg. Native infantry on the Bengal establishment, youngest son of the late Rev. Edward B. rector of Croft and Barningham, co. York, and Prebendary of Lincoln. See page 597.

At Eriswell, Cambridgeshire, aged 101, deservedly respected, James Fuller, one of the people called Quakers; whose temperate way of living was blessed with freedom from pain till the close of his pilgrimage. He had children, grand-children, and great grand-children, to the number of 210.

Aged 42, the wife of Mr. Greenhall, surveyor, Leicester.

Aged 77, Mrs. Swanton, widow, sister of the late Alderman Searson, of Stamford.

At Stamford, aged 75, Mr. James Thompson, slater.

At Edinburgh, the Right Honourable Henry Dundas, Lord Viscount Melville. He had arrived, the preceding evening, in that City in perfect health from Melville Castle, in order to attend the funeral of his late friend the Lord President Blair; and slept at his son-in-law's (the Lord Chief Baron) house in George's-square; but, on being called next morning, was found dead. On the preceding evening, he had been employed in making a number of arrangements relative to his family, and had begun a letter to Mr. Perceval, recommending them to his attention. consulted, about 10 years ago, several medical men in London, and Dr. Munro; of Edinburgh; the latter gave such are account to his lordship of what he supposed was his disease (an ossification of the heart), as satisfied him completely, and made him expect to die as he has done, His remains were removed to Lasswade Church-yard, where they were interred in a private manner in the family vault. is remarkable that Lord Melville died on the birth-day of his friend Mr. Pitt, "Few have longer acted on the stage of ! public life, or in more important stations, than this Nobleman. Of an antient Scotch family, who had long filled high judicial situations in that Kingdom, and a younger son of the Right Hon. Robert Dundas, Lord President of the Court of Session there, he was introduced to the Scotch bar with every adventitious as well as natural, advantage. He was born with powerful, rather than eloquent talents, more calculated for business than speculation; and made an early progress in his profession, In 1775, he rose to be Lord Advocate; but, finding that he could make himself of consequence in parliament, he deserted law for politicks, and became a useful and favoured supporter of the adminstration of When William Pitt, in ex-Lord North. treme youth, stepped at once to the pinnacle of power, in December 1783, such a dextrous, experienced, and indefatigaformalities of office; and wrapping itself up in forbidding ceremonies, and banging fearfully over the precedents of the file, was up, ble to look abroal, when the storm was out, and the nanks and mounds were thrown down. Tell it shall be proved, that the evils, which even this country has suffered from the French revolution, would not have been a housand times worse by flattering and yielding to it, surely nothing is proved against the wisdom of Mr. Pitt's administration. But it must be left to the impartial historian to do justice to Lord Melville's character.—His lordship married, first, Elizabeth, daughter of David Rennie, esq. of Melville Castle, near Edmburgh; by whem he has an only son, and three daughters; and secondly, in 1793, Lady Jane Hope, sister to the Earl of Hopetown *."-He is succeeded in his title and estates by his only son, the Right Hon. Robert Saunders Dundas, President of the Board of Controul, and M. P. for Edinburghshire.

Lately, Suddenly, immediately after the operation of bleeding in the arm, the Countess of Aldborough.

Aged 58, Rear-Admiral J. G. Kinneer.

* Biographical Peerage, 1808.

of Wm. Huish, e.q. 6th dragoon guards. Dr. Milbourne, of Wingfield, Berks.

At St. Thomas's-hill, near Canterbury, in her 84th year, Sarah, relict of Lieut,col. Charles Webb.

At Eythorne, Kent, Mr. Read, coachman to Peter Fector, esq. He was so much alarmed at the late fire at Dover, that a derangement of his intellects ensued.

Aged 77, Simon Buchanan, esq. of Bury. At Clare, Suffolk, Mrs. Barnard, relict of the late Rev. Thomas B. rector of Withersfield; mother of the Rev. Rubert Cary B. rector of Withersfield, of the Rev. Robert B. rector of Lighthorne, and prebendary of Winchester; and of the Rev. Charles Drake B. rector of Bigby, Lincolnshire.

Mr. John Arnold, formerly an eminent jockey, and latterly keeper of the course at Newmarket.

The wife of Thomas Waller, esq. of Sutton hall, Suffork.

William Branch Ehott, esq. of Wells, Norfolk.

At Cambridge, aged 94, Mr. J. Cooper, who, during 76 years, was a noted change-ringer at Great St. Mary's Church in that town, and rung bob-royal within twelve menths of his death.

678 Obituary; with Anecdotes of remarkable Personal [LEFEI.

In Thorney Fen, Isle of Ely, John Hemment, esq.

In consequence of an injury he received in a fall from his horse, in his 62d year, Mr. Samuel Stanton, of Leverington, near Wisbech.

Dr. Thomas Meik, who had been physician of Portsmouth garrison 49 years.

The wife of the Rev. Dr. Wells, of Manningford Bruce, Wilts.

At Albourne, Wilts, Mrs. Ashley, widow of Mr. J. A. attorney.

In consequence of falling down stairs at an inn at Devizes, where he had arrived on business an hour or two before, in his A8th year, Mr. George Fry, of the Cross Keys Inn, Salisbury.

Aged 83. Mrs. Frances Post, grand-daughter of Dr. Burnett, and widow of Walter P. gent. of Rowd, near Devizes.

At Bridport, at an advanced age, Mrs. Arnold, of Rax-house.

Mrs. Humfrey, wife of the late W. H. esq. a burgess of Pools.

Capt. John Simlett, of the sloop Active, in the Cork trade.

Mr. John Moss, son of the late Rev.
Canen M. of Wells Cathedral, and great-nephew of the late Bp. of Bath and Wells.

At Chewton-Mendup, the wife of Mr.

John Cultiford, farmer.
At Ilchester, Mr. H. B. Croome, attorney-at-law.

At Tiverton, Richard Blundell, esq.

At Plymouth-Dock, the wife of Mr, Congdon, proprietor of The Telegraph.

. At Kimbolton, within a fortnight of each other, of a rapid decline, aged 19, James, scholar of Clare-hall, Cambridge; and on the fourth day's illness, of a typhus fever, aged 16, Henry; sons of the Rev. James and Emily Pye.

The wife of William Berry, esq. of Shilstone, Devon.

At Silverton, Devon, aged 74, William Cleeve, esq.

At Penzance, Rev. John Thos. Thompson. Thomas Morris, esq. of Treviggin.

Mrs. Gould, widow of John G. esq. of Amber Cotton-Works, Oxford.

At Cheltenham, the third son of G. Goold, esq.

Aged 38, Susannah Ricketts, a pauper in the House of Industry, Tewkesbury; baving existed ten weeks without eating any kind of food, the only nutriment she received during that period being a few spoonfuls of beer each day. Her disease was of an apoplectic nature; and although it so long deprived her of the power of eating, and the use of speech, she was perfectly sensible till the day previous to her death.

Mr. J. Saunders, attorney, of Cain'seross, near Stroud.

Mr. William Barker, carpenter, Peterborough. He had been assisting at a funeral, and on his return house the balon ill, and died shortly afterwards:

At Grantham, aged S6, John Caldrell Watson, esq. R. N. late surffices of the Princess Royal.

At Wainflect, co. Lincoln, aged 67, Mrs. Susannah Robins. Also, at the same place, Sarah Lilley, who assisting at the funeral of Mrs. R. caught fold, and did a few days afterwards.

At Tetney Lock, co. Lincoln, aged 40, Mr. Richard Chatterton, many years' ca-gineer of Louth navigation.

In his 101st year, John Upton, specification maker. He worked from a youth to the age of 93, for the bours of Bloods shift fin, of Leisester.

At Orby, his son, Mr. Hildred, wid Aged 87, lady, of Not

At Sponde don, esq. in and an alder served the o

At Shelton Chatterley,

Mr. J. Gi member of (

The wife Coventry.

At Radwi wick, Rev. In her 30 Edward D. and ministe

At Leon dence, wife

At Cawb Grammond, At Rev.

aged 27, Ri At Malpa

ton, widow last of the t ly, whose a neighbourh

At Prest Keenan, or Windsor.

At Mand Harrop, pr

At Salfor Sieur Ren,

Rev, J. 1

At Ashte Potts, lines Rob. Sto At Bryn 56th year,

Mr. T. 1 of the late pandy Les ral was att men,

The

PAR Ťbı Hafor Agı late R Αt At of Ca At Presu Αt the la At Mr. J fore h eight 1n know the f bunte estab lisle his le from ble d vears infirm At noch, unwe habit raises a dit 20,00 abous relats

While standing at his door, a stone weighing 12 lbs, which had been blown from a quirry, fell on his head, and caused his immediate death.

At Ferminy, of a malignant fever, caught in attending the Dispensary, aged 29, Geo. Alky, M. D.

At Mallow, co. Cork, Stephen Kell, esq. In Jersey, Lieut, Pictewood, R. N. agent for transports there.

In the battle of Albuera, Major-gen. Hoghton, second son of the late Sir Henry H. bart. of Hoghton Tower and Walton Hall, Lancashire, M. P. for Preston, brother to the present Baronet. He served for several years in the Last Indies under his friend Lord Wellington, and was sent over to England with dispatches from Mayquis Wellesley. Before his constitution had recovered from the effects of that chmate, he was sent to the West Indies, where he commanded under Gen. Beckwith, at the capture of Martinique. In the last year he was sent to Cad z, from whence he joined Lord Wellington's army. From thence he was detached, under Marshal Beresford, to the siege of Badajoz. He was Lieut, col, of the 8th regiment of foot. A monument in St. Paul's to his memory has been voted by Parliament. (See p. 656) his two eldest sons in the service of his country.

In the battle of Albuera, Lieut. H. C. Lofft, son of Capel L. esq. Troston, Suffolk.

At Paris, of a publid fever, aged 17, Georgians, only daughter of Caroline Countess of Melfort, sister to the Earl of Barrymore.

At Tobago, much lamented, Mr. James Walim, son of the late Mr. Joseph W. of Leicester.

At Madelra, after a lingering illness, Alexander Jekyll Chalmers, esq. formerly Major in the 55th reg.

In the West Indies, of the yellow fever, in his 19th year, Lieut. Broderip, of H. M. ship Achates, eidest son of the late Mr. B. of Bristol.

At Hazelymph, Jamaica, James Charles Lawrence, esq of Hazelymph and St. Ives. He had been a member of the Assembly, and was descended from the notable Henry Lawrence, of St. Ives, Huntingdonshire, and St. Margaret's, Hertfordshire, President of the Council of State, and one of Cromwell's peers.

At Prince Edward's Island, J. M. Macdonald, esq. of Treadie; a gentleman of very considerable property and literary attainments, late Captain of the 84th reg. of foot. Also, in the same island, of an apoplectic apopiectic fit, Robert Hodgson, esq. late of Cameway Foot, near Kerwick, Cumberland, Speaker of the House of Assembly, Clerk of the Crown, Coroner and Prothonotary of the Supreme Court. These gentlemen are much regretted, especially the latter; whose places will not very easily be again so ably filled.

880 Obituary; with Anecdotes of remarkable Persons. [LXXX].

Jane 1. Aged 71, Mrs. Harrison, Groveplace, Hackney, relict of John H. esq.

At Islangton, in his 77th year, Timothy Place, esq.

At Epsom, the wife of Mr. Mayd, surgeon. At Fawke, near Sevenoaks, aged 66, S. Woodgate, esq.

At Loughborough, in his 46th year, Mr. Robert Blunt, solicitor.

Mr. Samuel Freer, of Great Wigston, co. Leicerter.

At the Greybound Ing, Bristol, Thomas

Plair, esq. surgeon, R. N. June 2. At Mrs. Winch's, Hampton-court, aged 15, Flora, eldest daughter of James Willis, esq.

Suddenly, at Forge, Dumfriesshire, while enjoying the society of his friends in the evening, Rear-Admiral Dundas. June 9. In Tenterden-street, after a lingering illness, in his 70th year, Henry Merbert, Earl of Carnaryon and Baron Porchester, of High Cleve, Hants, Privy Counsellor and LL. D. He was created Lord Porchester Oct. 17, 1780; and Earl of Camaryon July 3, 1793. He married, 1791, Lady Elizabeth Alicia Maria, sister of George Earl of Egremont, by whom he had a large family. He is succeeded in his title and estates by his eldest son, Henry Geo. Lord Porchester, M. P. for Cricklade. At Newington, Surrey, in his 59th year, Mr. C. Fall.

Margaret, wife of Mr. J. Thompson, of Camp-hill, near Birmmgham.

Mr. John Roberts, fiquor-merch. Bristol. At Clifton, the wife of William Brame Elwyn, esq. barrister-at-law, and recorder of Deal, and eldest daughter of T. Eagles, esq. collector of the port of Bristol.

At St. Petersburg, aged 71, Sir Jonathan Rogers, M. D. late physician-general to the Imperial Russian Fleet, and Knight of the Order of St. Voledimir. June 4. In his 11th year, Thomas, son of Tho. Simpson, esq. of Basinghall-street. Edward George, fourth son of Mr. Matthew Miller, of the Custom-house.

John Crabb, esq. of Hitchin, Herts. Aged 85, Mr. S. Cutts, sen. Clipstone

Lodge, near Mansfield.

Found dead in her bed, at Ripley, in Surrey, aged 35, Mrs. Fathers.

Dropped down in his house, and expired without speaking, aged 66, Richard Nell, esq. senior Alderman of the borough of Great Grimsby. He had been seven times Mayor of that corporation: honesty and panetuality were his characteristic traits.

At Clifton, of an inflatemention on the lungs, Rov. Edward Harrington, iten of the late Sir K. H.

June 5. At Nether Stowey, in h year, Mr. Samuel Kebby, she of the Rev. S. K.

In Edinburgh, John Reid, eng. Advirtat. June 6. In Lincoln's inn-debts, Man. Goaling, relict of the late Rebert Codes, of Fleet-street, banker.

Aged 60, the wife of J. Debutt, Tottenham.

The wife of William 200 St. Aldate's, Oxford, and danger mas Meares, esq. of Souther

June 4. Aged 30, Jensim Clement, Newcastle-street.

Aged 85, Mrs. Aytob, reliet of J. A late of Harleston, Northlk.

In Park-street, Bristol, in 184 78th; Rev. Richard Collinson, rector of westop, Somerast.

June 60, Ma the late

At GI chaine, à the wife Aged downen, After which a equanim of Rev. 1 Rutlend worth, 1 William Uppingb Pound Tewkest bezna, z man, I while at mediatel by him, his havit the row (

At Bri Bogucci. late Her Leiceste

Mr. Je June! of John! In Gr H. Vonh of Engla In Bri Hobbs.

Sudde cock, of At Ci son of W North B. At he Burton, grazier,

PART I.] Obituary

At Ketton, near Stamford Hon, Lady Jane Edwards, r E. esq. of Leicestershire, s Earl of Gainsborough, and Noel, Exton Park, Rutland

June 10. After a reign Charles Frederick Grand I tor of Baden. He was 1728, and in 1738 succeed father Charles William as Baden, being the oldest Sorrope. He is succeeded by

At her brother's (J. M. Stratford, Essex), Mrs. Hathe Late J. S. H. esq. and Duchess of Chandos and I leaving two infant children.

Jane 11. The wife of V Red Lion square, and of H sex, and sister to the Hor Meath.

Suddenly, Mr. W. Adam Fore-street,

In Manchester-street, G of Sans Souci, co. Wicklow, street, Dublin.

Aged 70, James Lynde, e Hauts, late of the North Ha At Taplow, Bucks, Mass River-street, Bath.

In his 80th year, Mr. The farmer and grazier, of Fent

At Rosehaugh House, Mackenzie, bart, of Seatwel

June 12. In South-stree square, much lamented, aged 66, Henry Skeffington third hard of Massareene. His Lordsh pas succeeded ministrile and estates by his ore hir

The wife of Capt. Philipps, Upper Guildford street.

At Craven Lodge, Stamford-hill, the wife of John Craven, esq.

Much regretted, Mr. Richard Davies, formerly a respectable slater, of Banbury.

Dropped down and suddenly expired, whilst mowning in Denton-meadow, Rich. Waite, of Gails agton, Oxon. He had complained of a gredness in ois head as he was whetting his regime a few innuites before.

At Kegwart's Miss Alice Steele, late of Brom! v. Keat.

At Cliton, in her 15th year, Ellenora Cechia, only could of Wilham Brome Elwyn, esq. barrister-at-law and recorder of Deal.

June 13. In Foley place, in his 72d year, Lawrence Stames, e.g.

In Typer Labra augh-street, in her 23d year, Mary Ann. Seife of L. B. Sapio, esq. and eldest diagner of the late Mr. Sewell, of Fig., Samox

At Michael's Grove, Brompton, of a decine, or lossed pear, E. Monut, esq.

At St. Jawrence, near Canterbury, aged 77, J. Warker, esq.

' EST MAG. Supl. LXXXI. PART I.

of Rossie

June 15. Suddenly, in his 59th year, Mr. Ayscoghe Bennett, of Addle-street, Aldermanbury.

In Great Coram-street, Brunswick-sq., W. Piddock Francis, esq.

Suddenly, Mr. Mackinlay, bookseller, in the Strand.

At Brompton, in his 26th year, F. Hutchinson Rainey, esq.

Anne, wife of John Peel, esq. of Bowes, near Southgate.

Mr Thistiewaite (a traveller from Manchester, and one of the society of Friends). While crossing Ulverstone Sands, he got into one of the holes left by the tide, and perished, it is said, within sight of several people who, though within twenty yards, never offered him the least assistance!

Aged 51, Mr. George Robinson, principal officer and clerk to the watch-house, Hall, and publisher of the Hull Daily Shipping.

June 16. At Cotton's, Fssex, much respect din his 68th year, Will am Mashiter, esq. of Tower-bill, many years in the commission of the Peace for the counties of Maddlesex, Essex, and the liberty of the Tower of London, also Chairman of the Court of Sewers for the Tower Hamlets and the Precinct of St. Catharine.

At

At Lower Tooting, Surrey, after a severe illness, John Grellier, esq.

June 17. In Upper Berkeley-street, aged 22, Robert Drummond, esq. Lieut. R. N.

In Poland-street, aged 17, Miss Fanny Hartle. She had been reading in bed; and the family, about, 12 o'clock, were alarmed by her screams, when, on opening the door, the bed was discovered in flames, by which she was so dreadfully burnt as to occasion her death.

At Hounslow, aged 23, Mr. Samuel Thistlewood.

After a short but severe illness, aged 29, Catharine, wife of Mr. Treslove, surgeon, Market Harborough, and eldest daughter of the late Rev. John Bullivant, rector of Marston Trussel, co. Northampt.

Rev. Nicholas Owen, rector of Bottwnog, Carnarvonshire.

Suddenly, aged 63, Rev. Richard Williams, of Fron, near Mold, Plintshire, rector of Llanverras. He was eminently versed in the history and language of antient Britain and of Wales.

June 18. T. Hullett, esq. of Austinfriars, and of Swindon, Gloucestershire.

At Sunning-hill, S. Haynes, esq. father of the Countess of Bridgewater.

. Mr. George Nichols, attorney, Lutterworth, eldest son of John N. esq. of the Spa Gardens, Leicester.

By the rupture of a blood-vessel, aged 27, Mr. W. Smith, book-keeper to Messrs. John Cave and Co. Bristol; a young man of sound judgment, correct principles, and of exemplary conduct.

W. Priddey, esq. of Allington, near Chippenham, Wilts.

At Rhual, North Wales, aged 71, T. Griffith, esq. in the Commission of the Peace, and Deputy Lieutenant for the county of Flint.

June 19. Mrs. Newton, of Harley-street, widow of the late Michael N. esq. of Culverthorp, Lincolnshire, a great benefactor to the poor of Barkton, Lincolnshire, Marylebone, &c.

In Margaret-street, Cavendish-square, in his 46th year, Hugh M'Ilraith, esq.

In Lincoln's-inn-fields, Mrs. Jane Walker, relict of Thomas W. esq. late Accountant-general of the Court of Chancery.

- In her 28th year, Mary-Harriet, wife of Dr. Southey, and daughter of Richard Sealy, esq. of Lisbon.

Lieut.-col. Hilliard, second son of Edward H. esq. of Cowley House, Middlesex.

Aged 47, Rev. M. Slack, vicar of All Saints, Sudbury, Suffolk.

At Baddesley, co. Warwick, in his 86th year, Rev. Henry Bishop, a Roman Catholic Priest, universally beloved by all who knew him, for his affable and cheerful disposition, which he maintained to the last moment of his life. He was a good clergyman, humane and charitable to all; and a particular friend to children, who loved and esteemed him as a father.

Aged 27, Mr. John Pinnell, accomptant in the employ of Mr. Thomas Salmon, Bristol, in whose service he had lived upwards of 15 years.

Mr. Adam Brown, farmer, of Gate-slacks, Dumfries. He lost his way in the twilight, and strayed down the banks of the dangerous water of Linclonden. His body was found at the bottom of one of the pools on the following Monday; and his pocket-book, containing 700% the gift of a West India relation, a little way from the body, both of which were restored to his family.

June 20. The wife of E. Kent, esq. of Wimpole-street, Cavendish-square.

At Tottenham, aged 54, Mr. John

Sykes, of Bishopsgate-street.

James, second son of William Miles; esq. of Enfield Wash, and nephew of J. M. esq. Cheshunt, Herts.

Mr. F. Neale, an eminent training groom of Newmarket.

At Hogsthorpe, near Alford, Notts, the wife of Mr. Styan, late minister at Heek-ley chapel, Notts.

June 21. Thomas, South, esq. of Bes-sington, Hants.

Rev. Loder Allen, rector of Easton, and vicar of Framsden, Suffolk.

In his 71st year, Mr. James Klude, of Blaby, Leicestershire.

June 22. In Gray's-inn-lane, in her 19th year, Hannah, second daughter of Mr. Warren, artist.

In the bloom of life, Catharine-Lisabeth, eldest daughter of Rev. Thomas Deeker, of St. Giles's Broad-street, Norwich, and rector of St. Simon and Jude in that city. Her beautiful countenance, animated with expression, attracted the attention and prepossession of all. Her intelligent mind was amply stored, by careful education, with whatever could qualify her to adorn the silent path of domestic life, with knowledge and picty. virtue and happiness. Deservedly peloved as a daughter, esteemed and comfided in as a companion and friend, she realized every expectation of parental as fection. Never did the morn of female. youth shine out with brighter lustre; when. to the unspeakable grief and irreparable loss of her family, a deep decline disappointed all their flattering hopes, and, before she had completed her 18th year, . terminated by an untimely death, a life: of the fairest promise of future excellence. On the 27th, she was buried in the grave of her departed mother.

Aged 86, Rev. Henry Carrington, reptor of Billingford, Norfelk, and vicar of St. Stephen's, Norwich.

At

At Balsome-house, Somerset, in Line 63d year, W. Gapper, esq. grandson of the late Abraham G. esq. serjeant at law. And on the 23d, Mrs. Gapper, relict of the late Robert G. esq. of Tout Hill, Wincanton.

June 23. In Baker-street, Portman-square, Right Hon. Ursula-Mary, Viscountess Sidmouth. She was the daughter and coheir of Leonard Hammond, of Cheam, Surrey, esq.

Sincerely regretted, in her 32d year, Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. Winkfield, surgeon, Market-street, Bedfordshire.

Aged 34, Mr. J. Wallis, gun-smith, Hull, and one of the proprietors of a very extensive collection of antient guns, &c.

Aged 64, Mrs. Susanna Tate, mother of Mr. Benjamin T. printer, Hull.

At Boroughbridge, Yorkshire, aged 83, Francis Bolton, a pauper of that place, and a most eccentric character. He was born at Spofforth, Yorkshire, and was in his youth very handsome, and the first farmer's servant in that part who wore white stockings. From his infancy he used to throw large quantities of cold water on his head; in the most inclement winter, he would go to a pump, and fill his hat with water, and, having drunk some, would put his hat on, and the contents would run down his body. His shirt, when washed, he put on wet; and, for the last 20 years, refused to lie on a bed, but used wet straw for that purpose, without any covering but the clothes he put off, and during the winter season has often been found frozen to the ground. able, he travelled the country as a beggar.

June 24. The wife of Mr. Parry, tobacconist, Newgate-street.

Aged 75, Mr. Joseph Williamson, farmer, of Boston, Lincolnshire.

At St. Michael's Hill, greatly respected, William Bush, esq. of Bristol.

Mr. Jonathan Ashton Thomas, musician, and clerk at Rev. Mr. Lambert's chapel, Hull.

June 25. In Great Titchfield-street, in his 60th year, Mr. Pahin de la Blancherie, a French emigrant, who, before the Revolution, had set himself up as Agent-general de la Correspondance pour les Sciences et les Arts. Some pleasant Anecdotes relative to him will be found in Madame Roland's Appeal, Parts ii. and iii.

Suddenly, while working on-board a fishing-smack, at Billingsgate, J. Nightingale, a fellowship porter.

Aged six years and five months, William, only son of William Wilson, esq. of Penn-hill, Bexley, Kent.

Aged 34, the wife of Mr. Trevitt, attorney, Lincoln.

Aged 75, the wife of Mr. Casterton, musical instrument manufacturer, Lincoln. At Nether Stowey, Somerset, Mrs. Roskilly, relict of the late Rev. William B. rector of Kempsford, Gloucestershire.

June 26. In Albemarle-street, after three days' illness, of water in the chest, the Right Hon, Sir John Anstruther, bart. M. P. for Anstruther, Scotland, King's heretable carver, and general receiver of Bishop's rents, Scotland. He was born at Elie-house, in Fifeshire, March 27, 1753; was bred to the law; and in 1798 was appointed Chief Justice of the Court of Judicature in Bengal, and created a ba-By his death a pension of 150%. a year falls in to the East India Company. He married Mary-J. daughter of ----Brice, of Berners-street, esq. by whom he had issue two sons, John and Windham, and one daughter, who survive him.

Suddenly, on returning from market, Mr. W. Thomas, of the White Swan, Winchester.

At Wolston, co. Warwick, aged 79, Gen. G. Scott, Colonel of the 58th foot.

In Queen-square, Bristol, Mr. Thomas Jeffery Safford, dentist and watchmaker.

At Poolton-cum-Seacomb, Cheshire, in his 79th year, Rear-admiral R. Smith.

At Menabilly, Cornwall, in his 82d year, Philip Rashleigh, esq. F. R. S. and F. A. S. and Member for the borough of Fowey in seven successive parliaments. Before he quitted public life, he was father of the House of Commons.

June 27. At Lambeth, in his 63d year, Mr. Elizeus Burges, apothecary.

At Danny, Sussex, in his 78th year, H. Courthorpe Campion, esq.

In her 13th year, the only daughter of of George Morgan, esq. of Biddlesden Park, Oxon.

At Brough-hall, near Catterick, York-shire, deservedly regretted, aged 67, Sir John Lawson, bart. He was born Sept. 13, 1744; and married Elizabeth, youngest daughter of William Scarisbrick, of Scarisbrick, Lancashire, esq. by whom he had issue, Anastatia, Elizabeth, and Henry, (who died young). He is succeeded in his title and estates by his only brother, Henry Maire, esq. of Lartington, co. York, (who, in pursuance of the will of his maternal uncle, assumed in 1771 the name and arms of Maire,) now Sir Henry Lawson, bart.

June 28. Mrs. Maitland, of Dundrennan, in the stewartry of Kircudbright, N.B.

June 29. The wife of Mr. Robinson, of the classical and commercial boarding school, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

At Belle Vue, Hampstead, of a fever, aged 15 months, Frederick, and on the 30th, aged 5 years, Charlotte, children of G. S. Holroyd, esq. of Gray's Inn.

In Alfred-str. Bath, W. Mead Ogle, esq. At the Hotwells, Bristol, Miss Vincent, eldest daughter of Col. V. of the Bengal establishment.

June 30. In Henrietta-street, Caven-dish-dish-square, suddenly, in his 55th year, Sir Edward Dering, bart. of Surrendeń-Dering, Kent. He married, in 1782, Anne, daughter of William Hale, of King's Wolden, Herts, by whom he had two sons, Edward and Cholmeley, and one daughter, Caroline.

In the King's-road, Chelsea, of a deep decline, in her 55th year, Miss Fearnside; upwards of 40 years, first a pupil, afterwards a teacher, and finally mistress of -Blackland's House boarding school. talents and accomplishments will be long -remembered by many who are now fulfilling the most important duties in some of the first classes of society; and her extensive though more secret benevolence in the abodes of poverty and distress, will make her loss equally regretted in the humbler walks of life. She was the last survivor but one of 22 children, of the same father and mother, the former of whom also lives to mourn over ber grave.

Listely, Miss Mary Cave, only daughter of Mr. Richard Cave (formerly printer of this Magazine, who was nephew to Edward Cave, the original projector of the publication, and died Dec. 8,1766 (vol. XXXVI. page 600.) She was an amiable and worthy woman, of elegant manners, and possessed a very superior share of understanding.

At Bayswater, where he had removed for better air, being severely afflicted with an asthma, Hugh Deves, esq.

The youngest son of D. Robertson, esq.

of Bedford-square.

Rev. Graham Jepson, of King's college, Cambridge, B. A. 1758, M.A. 1761, LL. B. 1775, vicar of Fulham, Middlesex, and formerly rector of Milton, which he exchanged for Fulham.

At Upham, Hants, Rev. Timothy Davis,

35 years curate of that parisb.

Rev. D. Addison, rector of Portland, Dorsetshire, and formerly master of the grammar-school at Thirsk, Yorkshire.

Rev. Rice Anwyl, rector of Llanycil.

Rev. Tho. Davis, rector of Llandervil, Merionethshire.

Aged 76, Rev. Mr. Stamper, vicar of Irthington, Cumberland.

Rev. John Rawlins, B. D. late fellow of Merton college, Oxford, M. A. 1772, B. D. 1782, vicar of Ponteland, Northumberland.

At Borley, Essex, Catharine, daughter of the Rev. W. Herringham.

In her 102d year, Mrs. Ridge, of Rottingdéan, Sussex.

At the Limes, Canterbury, aged 65, Mary Teresa, widow of the late Thomas Hawkins, esq. of Nash-court, Kent.

At Hoddesdon, Herts, aged 76, Mrs. Varenne, aunt of the Rev. Dr. V. rector of Westley, near Newmarket.

dish-square, suddenly, in his 55th year, At Fulham, aged 32, Capt. O. Bond, of Sir Edward Dering, bart. of Surrenden. Bombay establishment.

At Windsor, Mr.J. Blakeney, bookseller. At Newbury, Mrs. Emma Townsend, relict of John T. esq.

Mr. Uzzell, an eminent builder, of Speenhamland, Berks.

Geo. Earl, esq. Alderman of Winchester. At St. Boniface, Isle of Wight, Lieut.col. Hill.

In the Close, Salisbury, Charlotte, third daughter of the Rev. J. H. Jacob.

Aged 100, Mr. Robert Sirman, of Fisherton Anger, near Salisbury.

At Downton, Herefordshire, aged 85, Mrs. Bailey, mother of John B. esq. of Redlynch.

Mr. T. Pinson, one of the oldest inhabitants of Totness.

Richard Newman, esq. of Dartmonth.

The wife of the Rev. Charles Lethbridge, of Clymesland, Comwall.

Mr. Densley, Angel Inn, Old Bridge, Bath. In his 16th year, Frederick, second son of S. Payne, esq. of Uphill House, Somers. Aged 72, Mrs. Williams, of Bristol.

At his mother's, Park-street, Bristol, in his 21st year, John, eldest son of the late.

John Morgan, esq. Alderman of Bristol.

At Cirencester, aged 27, J. Edwards, esq. Adjutant of the 2d royal East Gloucester local militia.

Thomas Cooper, esq. of Tewkesbury.

At Hartpuny-court, Gloucestershire, Mrs. Berkeley, relict of R. B. esq. of Spetchley, Worcestershire.

At Stroud, the wife of Mr. Newman, attorney at-law.

At Charlton King's, near Cheltenbam; aged 71, Dame Dorothy Mill, widow of Sir Richard M. bart. of Mottisfort, Southampton, and some time representative in parliament for that county.

Aged 67, Richard Reeve, esq. of Bean-desert, near Henley-in-Arden.

At Bishop's Lydeard, in his 76th year, Harry Blunt, esq. many years Lient,—cel, of the 3d foot, or Old Buffs.

At Kempston, Bedford, R. Denis, esq.

At Trowse, near Norwich, Jane, daughter of Rev. Peter Moon, prebendary of Lincoln.

At Yarmouth, aged 70, Edm. Mapes, esq. many years Lieut.-colonel of the East Norfolk local militia.

In her 72d year, Mrs. Wilson, relict of the late Rev. P. W. of Morton, near Gainsborough.

Mr. Flectwood Churchilly mercer and draper, of the Long Row, Nottingham.

At Harby, Leicestershire, aged 72, Mr. Harby, farmer. His death was occasioned by jumping out of a cart, and breaking his leg in a dreadful manner, which terminated in mortification.

.

INDEX TO

Abernethy's Surgical W Acceptance, 364 Æschyli Prometheus V Asken's Memoirs of Bp. Architectural Antiquitie Army, Rights of the, v Astronomy, Elements o Attar, Counsels of, 460 Bard's Farewell, 256 Rebisomania, 548 Bingley's Economy of 157Blomfield's Æschyli P tu., 545 Booker, Dr. L. his Add: rial Legislature, on S - lus Temi Frudney on the Bullion Brazil, History of, 458 Britton's Architectural Bullion Report, Bradney Culvinism, Refutation o Campaign in Portugal, Chirol's Inquiry into Fe 250Christian Life, Econom Church of England, Set tion of, 363 Clopham's Edition of Prayers, 49 Clarke's Life of Lord N -- Travels in Rus Classical Journal, 59 Combe's Description of Conquest of Mino Tse, 146 Contemplatist, a Series of Essays, 57 Care's Life and Works of Stillingfleet, 41 Daniel's Metallic Image, Observations on, 256, 351 Despotesm, or the Fall of the Jesuits, 552, 555, 643 Dibdin's Bibliomania, 548 Dodson's Life of Sir M. Foster, 451 Eds. atum, Femase, Chirol's Inquiry into, 250 Eugene, Prince, Memoirs of, 154, 243 kehssa, 260 Foot's Lite of Murphy, 456 Foskert's Rights of the Army vindicated, 259 Faster, Michael, Dodson's Life of, 451 French and Itahan Dialogues, 364 Gardiner, Dr John, Sermon by, 142 Gr ek and Roman Empires, Revival of, 256, 351 Harmony, Introduction to, 60 Haverfield's Sermon on the Death of Mrs. Trimmer, 143 H adary's Counsels of Attar, 460 Houts on the Prev lence of Vice, 364 Hact, Bp. Memours of, 51 Husband and Lover, 260 Jacob's Travels in Spain, 357, 560, 641 Jee's Sermon on the Sabbath, 250 Jerningham's Old Bard's Farewell, 256 Jesuits, The Fall of the, 552, 565, 643

pires, 256, 351 Reynolds's Elements of Astronomy, 60 Ricardo on the Bullion Report, 363 Rights of the Army vindicated, 259 Russia, Travels in, 137 Sabbath, Sermon on, 250 Sectarists, Dr. Booker on, 362 Sermons, by Gardiner, 142. Haverfield. 143. Jee, 250. Turnor, 141. Young, 50. Southey's History of Brazil, 458 Spain, Travels in, 357, 560, 641 Spence's Introduction to Harmony, 60 Statutes, new Edition of, 556 Stillingfleet, Benjamin, Life &c. of, 41 Taylor, Bp. Edition of his Prayers, 49 Terracottas in the British Museum, Description of, 145 Time, Reflections on the Shortness of, 142 Trimmer, Mrs. Sermon at her Funeral, 143 Turnor's Assize Sermon, 141 Valpy's Classical Journal, 59Vassar on Military Establishments, 259 Vice, Hints on the prevalence of, 364Walte's London Guide, 465 Wieland, or the Transformation, 364 Wilks's Sketches of the South of India, 147, 247 Wilmot, Sir John Eardley, Memoirs of, by his Son, 449 Woodhouselee, Lord, his Essay off the Life of Petrarch, 241 Young's Thanksgiving Sermon, 50 INDEX

686 INDEX to POETRY in Vol. LXXXI. PART I.

Absence, Sonnet to, 264 Albuera, battle of, 566 Amelia, Princess, Elegy on her Death, Bard's Ferewell, by Jerningham, extract from, 266 Barrosa, Battle of, Three Poems on, 365 Berchfold, Count, Tribute to the Memory of, 366 Boscawen, W. his Lines for the Literary Fund, 470. Tribute to his Memory, ib. Browne, Lines prefixed to his "Pastorals," 433 Chevy Chace, Ode to Ritson, on his intended Revision of, 568 Christ, Ode on the Death of, 368 Crashaw's Sucred Poems, extracts from, 420, 519 Cumberland, Mr. Lines by, 470 Daughter, Lines to the Instructress of a, 158. On the Birth-day of a, 158 Death, Judgment, Heaven, and Hell, 63, 158 Deity, Address to the, 63 Dog, Epitaph on, 160 Dovaston, John F. M. his Lines on the Birth-day of Shakspeare, 471 Dryander, Jonas, to the Memory of, 158 Easter-Day, Hymn for, 263 Elsdule, Samuel, Poem by, 158. Hymn for Good-Friday and Easter-Day, 263 Enterprize, Ode to, 62 Fitz-Gerald, W. T. his Battle of Barrosa, 365. his Address for the Literary . Fund, 468. his Tribute to the Memory of W. Boscawen, 470. his Battle of Albuera, 566 Fly, on a, seen in Winter on a Lady's Check, 263 Fothergill, Dr. A. his Triumvirate of Worthies, 366 Fraser, Hon. Simon, Stanzas on his Death, 264 French Watch, On seeing one round the Neck of a Young Woman, 264 Friend, Verses on the Death of a, 263 Gondibert, extract from, 13 Good-Friday, Hynn for, 263, 368 Graham's Sabbath, extract from, 50 Harris, Elizabeth, Epitaph for, 521 Hatheway, Anna, her Lines to Shakspeare, 262

Hawes, Dr. Tribute to his Memory, 366 Howard, Tribute to the Memory of, 366 Hymn, as sung by the Shepherds, 520 Jerningham, Mr. extract from his "Old Bard's Farewell," 266 Jerus, Hymn on the Name of, 520 Infant's Death, On Anniversary of, 323 Jubilee, Lines on the, 127 Lady, Verses to, on the Birth-day of a Son, 568 Lady's Cheek, On a Fly seen on, 263 Langton, W. C. Latin Ode by, 261 Lutin Ode, 261 Literary Fund, Anniversary Address, 468 Loftie, Mrs. Lines at her Tomb, 650 Ludlow Castle, Sonnet written in, 262 Mason, Mrs. Epitaphs and Lines to her Memory, 510 Michelgrove, on seeing, 472 Michell, Rev. J. H. his Farewell to Wickkam, 470 Mitford, Miss, her Ode on Portugal, 567 New Year's Day, Address to, 61. Reflections on, 61. Lines on, 520 O'Keefe, J. his Barrosa, 365 Pan, Hymn to, 160 Parke, Miss, Impromptu to, 568 Parkes, Mr. D. Lines in a Cell belonging to, 262 Portugal, an Ode, 567 Ritson, Ode to, 568 Rose Bud, 64 Rowley, Captain, on his Exploits in the East Indies, 366 Rylance, R. his Sonnet written in Ludlow Castle, 262 Sabbath, extract from Poem on, 50 Shakspeure, Lines to, 262, 471 Shrewshury, Lines in a Cell at, 262 Snowdrop, Lines on seeing a, 159 Son's Birth-day, To a Lady on, 568 Songs, 263 Stoyle, Lieut. his Anniversary Ode on the Death of Christ, 368 Trimmer, Mrs. to her Memory, 281 Village Priest, 649 Watch, on a, 264 Wenman, Thomas, his Lines prefixed to Browne's Pastorals, 433 West, Mrs. Lines on Mrs. Trimmer, 261-Wickham, Farewell to, 470 Worthies, Triumvirate of, 366

INDEX to PLATES IN VOL. LXXXI. PART I.

Nowell, Dean, Monument to, in St.
Paul's Cathedral, 425
Ovington Church, 523
Portland Light-house, 217
Queen Charlton, Gateway at, 113
Repton Priory, 105
Rodgers, Roddy, Portrait of, 113
Saling Parya Church, 417
Salmeston Grange, 617
Shrewsbury, St. Alkmund's Church, 9
Thunderidge Bury, 609

INDEX

INDEX to NAMES IN

TAIDEAL I	O MARIATERA IN A Abbot
7,
	663		— ₂₁
Abday 135	Anson 450, 669		thu ·
Abererombie 657,	T. 183
660	42 658
Abercromby 171,	633
671	Antrim, I
Aberdeett, E. 167	Anwyl 684		1.5
Abernethy 555 Abingdon, E. 489	Aplin 298
Abnett 120	Appelbee 188	Balcareas, E. 288
Acheson 273, 415	Apthorpe 630	Baldwin 277, 500
Acland 489
Adair 276			h
Adam 266
Adams 450, 490,			•
601, 670, 681	Archer 401, 569
Adamson 90, 403	Arden, L. 239
Adare, L 182	Arland 49
Adderley 120, 271,	Armitage 283		4
589	Armstrong 337,524,
Addington 405 Addison 299, 684	1111
Adeane 135
Affleck 369	Arthur 190
Alner 571	Arundel 288
Aikin 40, 51, 337,	Ash 173
543, 610
Ainsley 300
Amslie 502, 524
Airey 570		D.E 660
Agar 321, 605, 675		Baring 662 Barker 294, 403,
Aggs 4 S		442, 589, 678	;
Albemarle, Cs. 85 Albers 974		Barkley 495	Beecher 542
Alban 307	2	Barkiy 293	Beeston 495
Albright 19	Aston	Barlow 135, 248,	Bell 92, 192, 498,
Alb. remerque, D.	——, L. 606	298, 387, 669	662, 669, 671
197, 290		Barnaoy 671	Bellars 529
Althorough, Cs 677		Barnard 273, 275,	Bellasis 99
Alexander 604		284, 521, 677	Bellew 494
Alford 195	4.4 . 200	Barnardiston 589	Belli 580
Allan 195	Atkins 529	Barne 300	Belson 274
Allen C., 277, 294,	Atkinson 182, 298,	Barnes 42, 181, 195, 288, 542	Bemson 189
291, 571,196,60%, 655, 472	Arla 5 621	Barney 89	Bennett 276, 493,
Allert 9	A trobbo43	Barnwell 597	533, 681
Ares 1 3	Aut 60	Baron 298	Benning 662
Atley + P9	Austin 197	Barr 93	Bennington 22
Allix 1 5	Axiolm 403	Barrett 397, 523	Benskin 299
Al mixic 603	Ay, tt 609	Barrie 382	Bentall 398
Alg. 777	Aylmer, L. 509	Barrew 609	Bentham 669
Adva sur	Aynott, 598	Barrowe 324	Bentinck, 195, 276
Alsarer 326	Ayscough 66, 212,	Barry 197	121 GC0
Altamont, E. 293	319	Barrymore, E. 679	131, 669
Asten C 0, 662	Ayte 508 Ayton 400, 080	Bartholoman 497 Bartholomew 589
A ty 125 ; Amery 496	Aytoun 509	Burtlett 394
An a GOV	*4J 10 min 0 0 D	Barton 85, 270, 275
A 500 192	B	Basevi 671
A . 1 rdon 89	Balungton 195, 667	Ra :re 559	374,
And Sele 275	Bach Re 580	Basnett 326	475, 479, 574,
Ardre 400	Backhouse 135, 489,	Bate 616	579, 658, 661,
Andree 493	$92,670	Bateman 420	663

Berkeley

475, 479, 574, 579, 658, 661,

INDEX to NAMES in Vol. LXXXI. PART I.

Barkeley 190, 374, 292, 671, 684 Bernard 180, 687 -, V. 299 Berners 543 Berney 490 Berry 19, 678 Bertie 170, 270, 489 Bertram 382 Berwick, L. 300 Bescoby 188 Bettison, 189 Betts 392 Bevan 195, 489 Beuseville 109

Bicknell 499

Hidwell 489

Biggs 180

Bilby 188

Billings 277

Billington 401

283, 504

Binning 177

Birmingham

Bishop 490, 682

Blackbourne 239

Birch 375

Birti 299

662

Bisset 604

Bissot 184

Black 490

Bisshopp 608

Bingham 83, 178,

481,

Blossett 493 Blount 586 - Blowe 189 Bludworth 640 Blundell 489, 678 Blunt 680, 684 Blyke 597 Bonk 392 Book 276 Boden 596 Bogue 92, 378 Boldero 297 Boll 20 Bolland 84, 589 Bolton 601, 693 Bond 298, 490, 543, Bonbam 288, 523, 669 Bonner 294 Bonucci 680 Booker 212, 321, 362, 364, 430, 662 Boon 214 Booth 195 Boothe 21 .

Borebam 93 Burtace 239 Boriase 87 Borradaile 672 Bostock 398 Boteler 669 Botfield 228 Bott 229

-, Abp. 940

,451. Bourchier 669

679, 680 Blake 188, 239, 414, 494, 580, 659

Blakey 94, 298 Blancherie 683 Hlanchville 891

Bland 193

85 178 Blemer 580

Blennerhassett 163 Blewett 493 Bligh 135, 669

Blinkhorne 191 Bliss 197, 672 Blomfield 545 Bloomfield 135, 544 Blore 207 Blusse 180

Boscawen 32, 309, 470, 500, 670 Boughton 402 Boultbee 83 Boulter 391 Boureher 270

Bourgeois 89, 186, 672Bourne 191, 325 Bowditch 395 Bowen 85, 93, 490 Bower 509 Bowerbank 597,676 Bowes 604

Bowles 397, 399 Bowman 179 Bown 671 Bowyer 326 Boyes 521 Boyle 87, 287, 289,

355 Buyse 472 Box 596 Brace 276

Bradbey 276 Bradbury 417 Braddyli 295 Bradford 601 Bradley 90, 188 Bradney 363 Bradnock 188 Bradshaw 589 Brabem 489 Brain 297

Bramley 191 Brand 378 Brandon 191 Brandreth 297 Brass 135 Bray 239, 509, 597 Brayne 94

Breedon 182, 496, 596 Breese 92 Brereton 181, 276,

398, 589, 671 Brett 85, 120, 325 Brewin 495 Brian 197 Brice 683

Birch 392 Bridger 597 Bridges 598, 670 -, Bp. 414 Bridgewater, Ca.

682 Briggs 172, 187, 662 Bright 344, 669 Brindley 325 Brine 668

Bringhurst 490 Bristol, Ca. 489 Britton 101, 25%, 326, 424, 507, 543

Brock 580, 669 Brocklebank 287 Broderip 679 Brodie 89, 492 Brodrick 67 i Brome 513 Bromley 92 Brompton 500 Bromwich 229

Brooke 180, 190, 239, 394, 490, 662, 663 Brookes 180 Brooks 391 Broom 994, 297 Brotheridge 663 Brotherton 473

Brough 496 Brougham 179 Broughton 172, 671 Brown 184,191,195, 279,287,295,364, 494,496, 544, 579, 662, 670, 671, 682

Browne 84, 191,227,

239,273,285,396 408, 455,400,669

388

Brownjow, Bruce 294

Bryand Bryckner 298 Brydges 403 Bryett 402

Buthannan 344 Buck 185 Buckler 240 Buckley 193 Buckner 295 Bucksey 188 Buckworth 288 Buffe 79 Bull 376, 478

7000

Bullpet Bunbury 501 Buquet 662 Burchell 192 Burder 296

Burdon 548

Burn 896 Burne 669 Burnell 88 Burnet 630

Burrell 180, 18 Burrow

Bushy 7, 300, 39 600 Busche 974

Buttes

INDEX to NAMES

Cartlich I21

399, 596

Cartwright 285,296,

Butteris 602 -Button 88 Buxton 398 Byam 598 Byland, Cs. 401 C. Caddel 94 Cadogan 577, 578 Caithness, E. 181 Calamy 210, 289 Calaway 94 Calcroft 92 Calder 239, 579 Caldwell 173, 396 Caley 92, 550 Callow 676 Calvert 393 Camae 375 Camden 507 Cameron 186, 287, 275,5~7,570, 580, 581,602,662,670 Campbell 135, 168, 170,188,191, 194, 239,275,290,357, 479,490,574, 577, 661,663,669,670, 679 Campion 606, 683 Camplin 676 Campston 657 Cannadine 294 Canning 322, 477, 634 Cannings 403 Canterbury, Abp. 652Canton 239 Capel 355 Capelin 293 Capell, Ly. 489 Capps 326 Car 420 Caraccioli 47 Carden 85 Cardigan, E. 296 Cardoza 84 Carew 32 Carlisle 136 -, E. 67, 679 Carnnehael 94 Carnac 293 Carnarvon, E. 680 Carme 670 Carr 40, 135, 414, 490, 577 Carrington 682 -, I. 401 Carrol 276, 277, 662 Carroll 378, 399 Carson 89 Carter 92, 136, 206, 230,288,309, 337, 341,364,418,445, Cash 598 Cashell 662 Casley 498 Cassan 185 Casterton 683 Castle 283, 669 Castles 662 Catheart 260, 275 Cato 277 Cator 276 Cavan, Cs. 896 -, E. 589 Cave 297, 682, 684 Cavendish 598 Caward 83 Cawston 189 Cazalet 602 Cerbell 490 Cecil 240 Chadwick 662 Chalmers 239, 287, 679 Chaloner 515 Chamberlain 577, 670 Chamberlin 399 Chambers 135, 589, 663 Champernowne 180 Champion 401 Champlatreux 4 Champneys 181 Chandler 90. Chandos, Ds. 681 Chantry 662 Chaplin 670 Chapman 20, 288, 378, 670, 681 Chapone 600 Charleton 669 Charlton 182 Chase 300 Chater 297, 401 Chatfield 400, 603 Chatterley 679 Chatterton 678 Cheales 601 Cherrington 402 Chester 326 –, E. 105 Chesterfield, E. 105 Chetham 497 (hetwynd 400 Cheyney 295 Chichester 260, 311 Child 196 Chillcott 194 Chisholme 294 Chiswell 466 Cholmondeley 403 Cholmeley 196, 391, 589, 671 GEHT, MAG. Suppl. LXXXI, PART I.

Cockell 497 Cockenil 495 Cocks 395, 490, 670 Cold 663 Codham 513 Codrington 181 Coffia 391, 392 Coggeshall 513 Coghlan 670 Coke 182, 190, 495 Culbarne 660 Cole 1×8, 196, 376, 415,480,659, 662, 677 Colebrook 187 Coleman 93, 297, 678 Collett 600, 601 Colley 602 Collier 191, 578 Collin 662 Collingwood 298 181, 196, Collins 297, 661, 663 Collinson 239, 680 Collis 677 Colloclogh 325 Collyer 396, 544 Colman 91, 588 Colmer 192 Coluett 195

Cope 671 Coppard 288 Сорріц 589 Coppinger 662 Corbet 601, 667 Corbett 170, 323 Cordeux 603 Corell 196 Cork, E. 669 Cormick 399 Corne 490 Cornwalls 601 Corn 184 Cosby, Lady, 671 Coterill 392 Cotterill 181 Cottingham 662 Cotton 66, 490, 577, 657 Cottrell 500 Coulson 401 Coulter 662 Countess 197 Coupar 196 Coupland 495 Cour 288 Court 94, 293, 596 Courteney 599 Courtney 195 Coutt 387 Coventry, E. 162 Cowell

INDEX to NAMES in VOLL 690

Cowell 120, 323 Cowie 397 Cowley 397 Cowling 391 Cowper 689 Cowsell 579 Cox 87, 403, 580, Crabb 378, 680

ý., Cragg 679 Crammer 669

> 617 296 519

Crauford 194, 478, 596 Creufurd 578, 669 Craven 179, 681 ---, E. 669

183

Crew 383, 604 Crewe 326 Crisp 294 Croft 92 Crofton 672 Croker 85 Crommolin 189 5 × 663

Cross 370, 494 Crosse 298 Crotch 344 Crow 168 Crowder 669 Crowle 299 Crowmer 478 bir .

Crump 599 Crumpston 575 Cruttenden 181 Cuffe 598 Cullen 207 Culley 283 Culliford 88, 67$ Currey,151, 489 Curtie 567, 571, 988, 375, 487, 570,589, 673 Cust 183 Custard 494 Cutts 680 Dacres 294 Dade 21, 94, 498 Daintree 254 Daintry 404 Dale 120 Dales 298 Dathouse 79 Dallas 295 Dalrympie 239, 670, 671 Dalton 300 Dalzei 479 Daizell 289, 378 Dampier 448 -, Bp. 42

Dana 670

Daniel 673

Daniełł 448, 672 Danvers 892, 472, 498 D'Arabet 182 Darby 277, 598 D'Arcey 484 Dardier 95 Darling 393 Dartmouth, E. 297 Darwin 515 Dass 277 Daubeny 496 D'Avenant 13 Davemport 523 Davey $75 Davidson 93, 580, 670 Davies 66, 268, 296, 401, 448, 681 Davis 84, 239, 396, 401, 569, 684

Davison 191, 543, Dawas, Abp. 240, Dawson 22,321,183, Day 239, 402, 603

Delacheroù 1 Delahay #4 Delamain 600 Delancy 397 Delano 233 Delegal 88 Delme 521 Demattes 397 Denbam.98 Denis 684 Denisch 282 Denne 398, 674 Denney 296 Densky 684 Denys 18f Dent 91 Depping 186 Deres 684 Dering 683 De Salls, Cz. 489

Desenfana 186 Despender Ly. 671 Devon 681 Dewar 670 Dewes 239 Diacon 184 Diamond 19T Dibdin 40, 136, 335, 511, 548, 60 Dicey 135 Dick 577

663 Dickson 184, Diddams 604 Digby 168 Digges 91 Dilkes 378,276,374, lug, ang Dillon 495 Dilly 639 Dimond 181, 689 Dinely 391

Dobbins 662 Dobbs 574 Dobres 496, 68 Dobson $41 Dodd 606 Dodge 589 Dodington 195 Dods 181 Dodson 451., 603

631

Davy 40, 490

Daunt 662

Dawber 193

Dawkins 598

Dawnay 671

Deane 598

Deans 602

Dearling 180 Dearlove 182 Decken 500

Decker 683 . Degen 665

Dury 135 Dusgate 182 Dyer 395, 669 Dyncley 239

15 Eade 494 Ender 521 Enles 598 Eames 286, 297 Earnonson 21 Eardley, L. 449, 488 Enrl 509, 684 Furle 496 Eaton 90 Eccles 191 Echlin 210, 415 Ecles 574 Eddowes 399 Eden 670 Edgar 398, 597 Edgeumbe 670 Edgell 603 Edington 399 Edison 603 Edman 585 Edmonds 93, 197 Edridge 489 Edwards 135, 844, 403,502,522,543, 691, 684 Effendi 401 Egerton 481, 662, 670 Eggers 399 Egleton 492 Egremont, E. 169, 300, 630 Ekins 595

Ehot 392, 671 Ehott 677 Elizée 184 Ellenborough, L. 284, 588

Elborough 299

Elder 477

Ellis 580, 589, 605, 662

Elton 299
Elwyn 680, 681
Ely, M. 399
—, Ms. 289, 489
Emerson 675
Emery 404
Empson 91
Enfield 337
Fingland 214
English 277
Erek 662

Farren 656 Fathers 680 Faunce 670 Fawcett 662 Fawsett 494 Fearnside 684 Fector 677 Fedden 601 Feild 135 Fellowes 277, 392, 509 Fenuell 93, 275 Fenshaw 671 Fenton 596 Penwick 65, 490 Fereday 672 Ferguson 187, 389 Fergusson 391 Fermanagh, Bs. 94 Ferns 662 Fernyhough 326 Ferrar 510

Ferrers, E. 87
Ferris 580
Fetherstone 276
Fewell 601

Forbes 46, 239, 309 Ford 88, 240, 391, 490 Forde 326 Foreman 402 Forrest 197 Forrester 676 Forster 8, 182, 208, 312,332,400,416, 512, 580 Fortescue, E. 20 L. 509

Forter 181,373,451,
475, 651, 666
Fothergill 366
Fottrell 277
Foulker 597
Fowkes 183
Fowler 22, 294
Fownes 676
Fox 40, 579, 669
Fox 40, 579, 669
Fox 399
France 556
France 556
Frank 181

Frankland 297

Franklin 52, 673

Garbutt 277 Gardener 521 Gardiner94,510,609 Gardner 85, 180 -, Ly. 401 Garle 494 Garnett 207 Garrat 678 Garrett 94 Garnek 595, 636 Garrow 268 Garsed 88 Gascoigne 273 Gascoyne 294 Gaskoin 490 Gass 493 Gatfield 293 Gattey 298 Gayfere 341 Gayton 499 Gear 296 Gedge 168 Gee 298 Geli 408 Gelsthorpe 88 Genlia 136 Gent 191 Geoffroy 498 George

Gapper 85, 683

INDEX to NAMES in Vol. LXXXI. Plat L.

George 189, 198, Gore- 195, 490, 670 Grover 191/ Hardinge 661 Hardy 233, 486, 567 Hardwicke, E. 239 575, 680 Gorton 90 Gruben 580 Gosling 288, 880 Goss 89 Gerard 105, $39 Guise 578 Gummar 184 Germaine 687 Hargood-490 Gethin 669 Gunning 85, 188, Goude 296 Hargrave 391 Gibbins 678 Gough 20, 99, 239, 496, 544 Harley 90 Gibbons 596, 662 his 274, 394, 509 Guppy 88 671 Gibba 85,93,178,298 Gould 93, 188, 888, Harold 409, 550 Gurwood 479 Gibson 40, 188, 301, 678 Gwilt 186. Harper 313 596, 657 Gwyn 403 Harpur 105 Giffard 105 Gwynn 439 Harral 91 Gifford 378, 670 Gwynne 580, Gilbert 195, 424, Gower, L. 56 Gyles 598 Gowry, E. 307 Gynd 402 Grace 135 09 Grafton, D. 283, 302 Graham 171, 273, Gill 277, 294, 300 Habersham 183 Gillespie 93 279,297,379, 373, Habingdon 394 Gillman 496 383,389,496, 580, Hackett 20 Gillmour 376, 478, 600, 672 Hadden 669 670 Grainger 679 Haffey 670 Gilpin 92, 136, 597, Grammond 678 Haggitt 135 674 Granger 415. Haggup 479 672 Gipps 490 Grant 40, 270, 296, Hague 396 Girdler 197, 495 300,490,579, 580, Haines 397 Givett 93 604,670,675, 679, Havre 496 Glanvile 603 680 Hale 364, 519, 683 Glanville 309 Grattan 654 Hales 603 Glasgow 669 Graves 399, 600 Halford 181 Glasse 183 Halfpenny 493 Glegg 296, 670 49%, 601, 670 Halifax, É. 590, 635 Glegge 490 Gream 399 Glencairn, E. 210 NX 293 277, Glossop 489 663 Glover 596 Hallan 199, Gloucester, D. 283 Halliday 542 424 Goad 297 Halliwell 597 Gobie 668 Hallows 510 Godby 271, 543 Halsey 392 Goddard 85, 292 Hambly 66 Godfrey 296, 589 Hamell 395 Godwin 275 Golden 98 496 295, Goldie 669 Gregor 194 872,398,400, 499, Goldsmid 93, 467 Gregory 239, 294 535,635,660, 66%, Goldsmith 287, 637 Gregson 85 670 Grellier 682 Goods 192 -, Vs. 85 Good 418 Grenfell 490 , Ly. 184 Goodacre 600 Grenville 288, 371 Hamlyn 676 Goodall 597 Hammet 497, 676 ,161, 腸 Hammond 92, 181, 678 683 Haynes 624 Hamper 403, 521, 605 Hayter 34 -, E. 69, 181, Hampson 93 Goodisson 184 475 Hancock 271, 299, Hazard 493 Griffin 672 Goodland 681 680 Head 588 Goodman 299 192, 287, Griffith | Hand 387, 663 Heald 299 Goodrich 417 298,509,678, 682, Healey 600 Hanley 662 Goold 678 400 Hanson 597 Healy 662 Gordon Grill 681 170, 171, Harby 684 Heapy 90 180,181,366, 560, Grimer 493 Harcourt 662, 681 Hearne 148 575,598,604,66%, ---, E. 92 Grimstead 603 Heath 08, 161 669, 670, 675 Grose 669 Harden 192 681 --, Ds. 88 Grosvenor 167 Hardent 294 Heathcoat 19 -, L. 184 ,, E. 475 Heathcoate (

Harding 326

Heath

Heathfield, L. 106
Hedges 495, 501
Hefford 603
Heise 663
Hely 662
Heilicar 196
Heming 287
Hemment 678
Hemsworth 672
Hensworth 672
Henderson 188,197,
575
Hennell 495
Henniker 631

Herne 499 Heran 296, 498

10,

Hervey 298 Heske 239 Hetberington 677 Hewitt 93, 172 Heygate 295 Heyland 662 Heyward 180 Hicken 663 Hickes 656 Hicks 399, 670 Higden 502 Higgins 670 Highfield 94 Hildred 678 Hildyard 493, 596 Hild 182, 191, 398, 458,496,578, 579, 580, 597, 663, 684 Hadatch 399 Hilliard 682 Hilsborough, E. 636 Hilton 180 Hanckley 30, 472 Hinde 192, 670 Hindley 460 Hinton 296 Happisley, Sir J. C. 654Hirst 191 Hirschell 531 Hoadley 289, 522, 523 Hoare 185, 240, 292 Hobbs 192, 680 Hobday 601 Hodges 88, 391, 662 Hodgson 287, 600, 680 Hogan 580

Hogg 580

Hoppiter 490 Hopwood 378 Hornby 575 Horndon 391 Horne 668 Horner 570 Horsfall 298 Horsfield 20 Horsley 628 -,Bp. 135,441, 530, 609, 619 Hosken 402 Hoste 574 Hotham 183 496, Hounsom 288 Houshold 598 Houstoun 577, 580, 600 Hovenden 270 Howard 68,193,366, 387, 543, 577, 597 -, L. 185 Howarth 669 Howell 180,297,597 Howes 181, 494 Howlett 596 Howley 671

Hoppe 495

Hutchins 99 Hutchinson 473, 490, 601 Hutton 544,669,679 Hyndford, E. 298 Hyde 182 I. and J. Jackson 85,90, 184, 273,298,396,497, 600, 662, 675 684 Jacques 191 Jaggers 93 599, 637 Jameson 396 Jamieson 426, 513, Jamison 191 Jarmam 92 Jarrard 402 lbbetson 500 Idle 494 Jebb 94

Jefferie 494

Jefferies 182

Hussey 94 bis, 671

Hustler 135

Jones 174, 180, 288, 298,300,378, 399, 400,403,414, 510, 599, 662, 670, 620 Jorden 597 Jortin 59 Joyce 596 Ireland 580 Iremonger 239 Irwin 580, 662 Isdeli 287 Isted 595 Judd 597 Juxon 662 -, Abp. 240 ,596, Ives 438

Kaminskoi 675
Kappel 280
Keappock 174
Kearne 579
Kearney 662
Krate 239
Keates 357
Keating 171
Keatinge 400
Keaut 276, 280
Kebby

INDEX to NAMES in VOL LXXXL PART I. 694

694 INDE	X to NAMES	in Aor rxxx	LL PART I.
Kebby 680	Kough 275		Longley 480 :- 7
Keedwell 483	Krauckenberg 579,	Lefebre, 661
Recling 326	670	Le Fevre 195, 984
Keenan 678	Kroop 541	Leftler 668
Kehl 604	Kyd 190	Le Gay 677	Loraine 198
Keir 600	Kymer 603	Legge 297, 298 Legh 187	Lord 192
Keith 197, 669	L	Leigh 180, 399, 490	_
Kell 679	La Cloche 671	Leighton 670	Loring-871
Kelly 197, 579, 600, 563, 672	Lacon 298	Leland 507	Lort 939, 414, 496
Keled 178	Lade 499	Le Mann 608	Losh 180
Kemble 288	Laforest 495	LeMesurier 188, 288
Kemmis 639, 669	Lake 521, 670	Lemoine 342, 619	13
Kemp 188, 600	Lamb 94, 135	Lemos 661	a -
Kennedy $88, 898	Lambard 498	Lendon 489
Kensington, L. 597	Lambert 396	Leonard 286	•
Kent 182, 194, 490,	Lambe 287, 399	L'Estrange660,663,	F
497, 682	Lambert 275, 344	670	7
Kentish 600	Lamberts 688	Lethbridge 684	Low 671 · .
Kenyon 405	Laming 195	Lettsom 488
Keppel 181	La Motte 578	Levinge 311, 603
Kerr 493	Lancaster, E. 478	Lew 576
Ketteridge 184	Landaff, Bp. 639	Lewis 90, 296, 402,
Kettiewell 66#	Landeg 93 Landon 287, 430	597,598,660,681
INEZIION	Lane 182	Lewthwaite 181
	Langford 192	Liddell 298	Later 181
Killeoursie, V. 589	Langhorne 171	Liddon 662	Luders 556
Killick 494	Langrishe 194, 289	Lifford 378	Ludford 599
	454 267,	Light 670	Lumley 659
	D1 3	Lightfoot 394, 629	Luttrell 93, 189. u
	L'Ans 192	Lilly 678	Luscombe 498
898,	Landown 603	Limerick 265	Lushington 800,466
	Lansdowne, M. 67,	Lincoln 676	Lyde 454
	162, 265	Bp. 345, 589	Lye 172 1884
Kingscote 497	Ms. 399	Lindsay 288, 498	Lyell 396 and
Kingsmill 180, 408	Laprimaudaye 589	Lineker 601	Lynde 681
Kingston 185, 576	Lardner 677	Linging 403	Lygon 395 11. 417
Final 101	Larpent 07	Linsengen 669 Lipscombe 496	Lyon 92, 589, 600.
Kinnaird 191	Latham 600, 662,	Liston 391	Lyons 93
Kinneer 498, 677 Kingman 591		Little 88	Lyster 89, 508; 656
Kippis 239		Littlehales 601	Lyttelton, I. 337
Kirby 26, 213, 295,	Latour Maubourg	Liver 574	1426
403, 662	663		- Mr. 19 m
Kirkhouse 400	Lauderdale, E. 652
	Lavie 484	Llewellin 402
248	579,	Liewellyn 599
Kirwan 535		Lloyd 92, 93, 135,	•
Kitching 88	Lawford 399	171, 191,988,402,
Kitchingham 585	Lawrence 679	490, 670 Tanhán 809
Kite 604	Lawrie 191	Lochée 398 Lochner 448
Kitsen 489	Lawson 495, 683	Locker 41 bis
Kittoe 277	Lawton 326 Layard 669	Lockley 88 .
Knapman 575 Knapp 195	Layfield 19
Kaspton, L. 309	Leach 679
Knatchtull 656	Lendbetter 196	Loder 198
Knight 85, 91, 276,		Lofft 662, 679
298, 499, 524, 670	Leather 391	Loft 294
	NOW N	Loftie 650
Knipe 275, 580, 675		Loftus 400
Knollys 374	Lec 184, 392, 469,	Loley 94
Knott 299	589, 631, 669, 670	Louis 494
Knowles 597	Lady 99	Long 68, 994, 388,
Kt.ox 210, 415, 599,	Leech 589, 674	499, 669 Langfield 604, 613
. 662	Leese 585	Longfield 604, 613	Militalth
			البادونية بين

. .

M'Itraith 682 M'Innes 602 Macintosh 578, 581, 662, 668, 670 M'Intyre 579 Mack 663 Mackean 287 Mackelcan 669 Mackenzie 147,344, 391, 589, 670, 681 Mackinder 298 Mackinder 298

Mackrill 600 M'Kay 415

M'Nab 580, 670

287,

Macnamara 375 M'Queen 580 Madden 270, 279, 599, 662 Maddy 84 Magenis 662 Maguire 675 Mahon 399, 669,672 Mainwaring 192, 601 Mair 92 Maire 683 Maister 496 Martland 275, 382, 603, 609, 683 Malcolm 148, 282, 415, 461, 544 Malet 489 Maley 190 M drag 397 Malkin 189, 191 Mallectt 307 Mallison 652 Malone 13 Maltby 181, 601 Mai. 438 Manby 19 Manuers 276, 295, - Ly. 90,299 Manuang 181, 389, 394 Manuingford 196 Mansel 93

Matthews 403, 513, 678 Maughan 493 Mauusell 288, 490 Maurice 380 Mawby 87 Maxwell 68, 391, 662, 670 Мау вв Mayd 680 May hew 603, 677 Maynard 135, 401 Meacher 678 Meade 288, 490, 670 Meadows 544 Meagher 662 Meakin 674 Meares 41a, 575 Measures 295 Mad Con 42 Minet 669 Minshuli 17 Mitchell 89, 276, 399, 493 Mitford40, 136, 162, 448, 567, 681 Mocher 597 Moffatt 300 Morra, E. 105, 265, 652, 668 Molineux 598 Moling 192 Molyneux 898 Monday 294, 677 Money 287, 670 Moneypenny 287, 391 Monkhouse 401 Monro 589, 597 Monroe 486

Mugg 182
Muggeridge 597
Mulgrave, E. 185
Muller 489, 580, 570
Mullins 182, 275,
392, 662
Murr 210
Muncaster, L. 597
Munro 676
Murrison 191
Murphy 456
Murray 184, 281,
288, 377,391,490,
499, 603

N.

Meklola 621 Melfort, Cs. 679 Meller 670 Mellish 589 úit, 91,

Nucle

696 INDEX to NAMES in Vol. LXXXL PART Lin .

Neale 596, 682 Need 670 Needham 523 Negrini 164 Neild 387, 438 Nell 680 Nelson, V. 42, 390, 411 - E. 489 Nelthorpe 21 Nepean 669 Nesbitt 490 Nesbitts 599 Nestor 662 Nettleton 600 Neuman 403 Nevile 513 Neville 46 New 396 Newark, L. 20 Newby 296 Newcastle, D. 603 Ds. 589 Newdigate 180, 599 Newcli 526, 593 Newey 194 Newlay 496 Newman 85, 694 bis Newport 167, 371, 653 Newton 196, 396, 490, 589, 682 — Bp. 530 Neynoe 670 Nicholas 275, 603 Nicholi 596 Nicholls 188 Nichols 20, 93, 99, 239, 467, 499, 509, 682 Nicholson 190, 287, 393, 544, 669 Nicol 544 Nicolai 194 Nidd 603 288, Nightingale 509, 603 Nightingali 577,578 Nind 88, 598 Nisbett 364, 443, 611 Nixon 270, 578,580, 670 Noel 324, 681 - Lady, 120 Nollekens, 548 Norbury, L. 262 Norcott 275 Norfolk, D. 185,652 Norman 180, 298, Normand 596 Normanton E. 606 Norris 88, 401 North 466, 494,598, 604

Northcate 294
Northland, V. 211,
415
Norton 239, 384
Norwich, Bp. 191
Notley 491
Noton 293
Nott 296, 544
Nowell 425
Noyes 601
Nugent 391, 396,
671
Nutcombe 94
Nutt 93

Œ. Oakes 669 Oaklev 92 O'Brien 82 O'Bryen 183 O'Congor 28% Odell 298 Odlin 109 O'Donaghue 662 O'Donel 497 O'Donnell 662 O'Farrel 187 Ogilby 396 Ogrlvie 601 Ogle 282, 295, 391, 683 O'Hara 578 Okedon 398 O'Keefe 173, 365 Oldisworth 403 Oldridge 490 O'Leary 534 Oliphant 297 Olton 589 Ommanney 92 Ortions 396 Onslow 274, 671 Orange, P. 670 O'Reilly 189 Orde 490, 597, 670, 671 Orme 497 Ormerod 294 Orr 662 Orred 598 Orton 600 Osborne 89, 400 Ossory, Bp. 309 Oswald 669 Otway 383, 573 Ourry 189 Ouseley 493 Outram 490 Owen 589, 598, 682

P. Pack 577, 580 Packwood 299, 391 Paddey 192 Page 662, 668, 679 Paget 195, 669

Paisley 90 Pakenham 377 Palliser 239 Palmer 210, 293. 489, 495, 652, 680 Palmerston, L. 268, 473 Papendick 196 Pare 669 Park 187, 508 Parke 189, 568 Parker 91, 94, 198, 270,375. 396,490, 596, 598, 671 Parkers 398 Parkes 262, 598 Parkin 90 Parkinson 40, 344, 598 Parkynt 98 Parleton 662 Parnell 657 Parr 50, 181, 184, 639, 674 Parsons 668 Parry 180, 430, 670, 683 Parsons 195, 465, 544, 596, 669 Partridge 400, 40% Paterson 270, 675 Patey 402 Paton 603 Patoun 402 Patrickson 275,376, 478, 479, 670 Patterson 171, 662 Paty 194 Paul 493 Paus 192 Payne 288, 602,669, 670, 684 Peacock 400 Peacocke 603, 669, 670 Peake 675 Pearce 282, 576,678 Peard 495 Pearson 182, 197, 240, 481,494,670, 681 Pechell 268, 670 Peck 391 Pecking 194 Peel 681 Pefin 661 Pelham, L. 207 Pell 297 Pellew 27 t Peltat 188

Penfold 18

Penn 675 Pennant 394

Penington 597

Penne Villamur,

Count de, 659,661

Percy 394, 569 Pereira 543, 586 Perin 528 Perkins 89% Perreau 638 Perrott 288 Perse 382 45 Pery 40 t Pester $75 Peters 277, Peto 88 Petre 499 Petrie 670 Pettat 92, 987 Pettiward 180, Peyton 671 Pfiel 297 Phayre 988 Phelp 189 Philip 892 Phillips 94, 196, 454,488, 565,67 69 t Pickering 671 Pickford 597 Pickstone 297 Picton 173,184,8 478, 577 Pidcock 499 Piel 311 Pigot 490 Pigott 497 Pike 40, 495 Pinborn 894, Pinkerton 611 Pinkney 207 Pinnell 689 Pinnock 494 Pinson 684 `Pinto 580 Pitcher 609 Pitman 39 k Pitt 182, 19 676 Pitts 198 Place 600

Pogson 94 Pule 177, 269, 292, 373, 489, 67% Pollard 662 Pollen 541 Pollock 589 Pond 287 Ponsonby 164, 274, 288, 370, 596 Poole 300 Pope 89, 239 Popham 401, 668 Porchester 67 Porson 545 Port 105 Porter 193, 196 Post 678 Pott 92 Potter 302, 398 Potts 678 Poulett 400 -, Ca 188 Poulter 135 Powell 89, 180, 182, 137, 490, 599 Powiet 670 Pownall 35, 498 Praed 297 Pratt 940, 391, 448 Prescott 180, 287 Preston 672 Prevost 274, 276, 662, 639 ≰ Price 42, 89, 401,

570, 598 Pridden 84 Pridd y 639 Primrose 430 Prince 238, 328 Pring 652 Pringle 170,391,670 Prior 306, 513 Pritchard 28d, 298, 574 Propert 295 Proby 28 Procter 20, 209 Pro+o 580 Prowde 135 Prowse 293 Prynn 680 Pryor 294 Pugh 675 Puller 294 Palteney 100, 309, 443 Pulton 181, 184 Purchas 398 Partier 296 Putland 681 Puttenham 544 Pye 543, 669, 678 Pyne 513 Pgun 578

Reeve 684 Reeves 327 Reid 192, 364, 529, 620, 621, 680 Reinagle 136 Relph 92 Reunie 391, 657, 677 Renny 541, 542 Rettig 184 Reveley 180 Reynell 181, 481 Reynolds 89, 196, 288, 543, 601, 636 -, Bp. 590 Rhodes 22, 671 Rhudde 493 Ricardo 363 Rich 93 Richards 85, 181, 195,288, 294,524, 556, 600, 671 Richardson 18, 33, 87, 187, 192, 239, 576, 596 Richings 93 Richmond 401 Ricketts 396, 494, 6:8 Rickman 398 Rider 406

170,295,397,584, 640, 660 Rokeby 89, 309 Romney, E. 209, 259 -, Cs. 489 Ronald 276 Rooke 490, 661 Roscoe 50, 51 Rose 62, 288, 293, 369,394, 473,570, 573, 601, *6*52 Roskilly 683 Ross 171, 275, 376, 478,662, 670, 601 -, E. 265 Rosselli 184 Rossmore, L. 673 Rothwell 662 Rouguet 192 Rous 589 Rouse 392, 492 Routledge 297 Rouverta 662 Rowan 598 Rowlatt 495, 600 Rowley 170, 171, 270, 286, 489 Roy 192, 294, 580, 604 Royds 493

---, L. 40 St. Neot 613 St. Vincent, E. 396 Sale 402 Salisbury 33, 496, 524 Salmon 682 Salomana 98 Sal Pietro 184 Salt 282 Saltmarshe 599 Saltoun, Ly. 197,200 Saltreen 90 Saltun 186 Salusbury 589 Salvin 94 Sampson 683, 674 Sandford 182, 199 Sandiford 181 Sandwich, 🕰 309 Saner 676 Sanford 92 Sapio 681 Sarsfield 669 Saumarez 438, 663 Saunders 192, 298, 669, 676, 680 Savery 596 Saville 88 Sawatzky 878 Sawyer 603 Sayer

GENT. MAG. Suppl. LXXXI. PART L

Queensberry, Cs. 85

698 INDEX to NAMES in Vol. LXXXI. PART L.

, 544, 596

76

601

THE REAL PROPERTY.

Stock 681 Stockdale 161 Stockton 678 Stokes 85

أأمة

Silvyland 210 97, Simlett 678 71, Simmons 285, 386, 395 Simon 21 182 Simons 494

Searson
Seaton 669
Sebright 974, 275,
490
Sedgley 99
Segrave, L. 185
Selby 182, 589, 596,
671
Self 191
Selkirk, Ca. 85
Semple, L. 910
Severn 180, 191
Seward 275
Sewell 600, 681

Shaftesbury, E. 602, 669 Shank 669 Shanks 599 Shannon, E. 605

670

,670 162 Sheaffe 669 Sheffeld, L. 185 Sheldon 604 Shellard 600 Shelley 473

Shellir 184

Shelton 669

Shepherd 662, 674 Sheppard 298, 396 Sherard 193 Sherbrooke 669 Sheridan 70, 374, 390, 571, 662 Sherlock, Bp. 448 Sherwen 21' 428,

Shilstone 94 Shipley 669 Shippard 88 Skerrett 669 Skett 396 Skey 188 Skinner 589, 669 Slack 596, 682 Slade 382, 487 Slapp 489 Sligo, M. 293 Slingsby 402, 603 Slocombe 85 Sloman 494 Smalpage 21 Smart 495, 599 Smith 85,88,90,100, 181,188, 191,988, 999,383, 399,400, 403,486, 490,494, 495,496, 500,541, 569,592, 596,600, 603,604, 637,662, 668, 673, 682, 683 Smyth 135,173,197, 287,497, 897,676

39 599 Snorland 93 Snowdon 678 Soane 672 Sober 397 Sobradello 494 Selander 43 Sollers 85 Somers 603 Sumersali 275 Somerset, Ds. 184 -, L. 267 Somes 49th Sondes, Ly. 181 Sone 402

Sonnenberg 670

South 682

Spencer 377, 479, 518, 574, 669 Spens 669 Spersbott 89 Spicer 670 Spiller 277 Spiller 600 Spitsler 75 Spranger 277 Spreadbury 440 Spring 662, 670 Springer 300 Sproull 90 Spurling 189 Squire 48 t Stable 403 Stables 275 Stackhouse 46 Stafford 670 Stainforth 662 Stainton 89 Stalker 603 Stamford, E. 184, 892, 667 Stamper 298, 684

870, 478, 570
Stannard 287
Stannard 287
Stannus 662
Stanton 678
Staples 391, 494
Starkey 494
Starling 285
Staunton 299
Steel 497
Steele 380, 662, 670, 681
Steevens 13, 239
Stehelin 669
Stephens 239, 597,

Stanhope 384

, E. 105,

672 402, 491, 662 Stevenson 88, 89,90, 300, 490 Stewart 66,181,976, 987,988,375, 376, 378,415,479, 579, 580,598,660, 662, 670 Stillingfleet 41, 183,

680

Stillingfleet 41, 1 239, 309 Stimpson 190 Stirling 670 Stoakes 598 Stothard 500 Stovin 670 Stow 195 Stoyle 368 Strachan 197 Strafford, Ca. Strange 681 Stratford 460

Strickland 180, 4 Strode 85, 376

Stuart 45, 298, 365, 366, 479 Sturges 396 Stuit 498 Styan 682 Suffolk, E. 478 Solivan 181

Swaffer 🗯

Swayne 34 Sweetapple 34 Swift 544

Swinney 674
Sydney 558
Syers 544
Sykes 123, 411, 568,
635, 682
Symes 294, 679
Symmons 598
Symmons 405
Synges 181

Tabor 88, 195 Taddy 448

Tama 529
Tamer 598
Tappen 297
Tar 92
Tarleton 571
Tata 192, 665

Tatnott 195 Taunton 556, 606

Teast 397
Temple 493
Temple 493
Tenant 498
Tench 188, 669
Tennent 673
Territt 493
Terrott 669
Terry 90
Teush 93
Thacker 105
Thanet, L. 288
Tharold 80

600

Thistlewaite 681 Thistlewood 682

Thomond, M. 183 Thompson 90, 232, 287,327,400, 401, 424,497,580,589, 665,674,676, 678, 680 Thomson 602 Thorley 90 399, 475, 570, 662, 670 Thorp 596 Thorpe 294, 662 Throckmorton 586 Throsby 298 Thurlos 589 Tighe 288, 657 Tail 598 Tilney 185 Timbrel 298 Tippett 599 Tipping 669 Titlow 662 Tolun 66

Tod 662

Tolson 300

Tombus 556

Tonyn 670

Tengood 448

Tookey 299

Toosey 191

Tombipson 171

Total uson 194

Tombue 392, 448

Todd 42, 493, 604

Tupper 448, 544 Turmore 120 Turabull 379 Turner 85, 181, 182, 402,403,543, 603, 659, 662 Turner 239, 207 Turton 92 , Sir T. 164, 167, 372, 652 Tuson 589 Tute 414 Tuyll 392 Tweedy 681 Twisden 288, 599 Tylney 633 Tyndale 308, 673

Waddingham 195
Wade 662
Wadesley 496
Wagner 294
Wait 403
Waite 497, 681
Waithman 487
Wakelin 496
Walcott 182
Waldegrave 66
Waldron 93, 378
Wale 669
Wales, P. 489
Walhoute 490

Walker 22, 90, 184,

Watt 180
Watts 195,275,288,
494
Waugh 662
Wavell 494
Way 135, 589, 662,
670
Weale 492
Webb 85, 92, 181,

Webster 136, 285 Wedderburne 391 Wedgwood 239 Weichsell 401 Weig ht-

700 IND X to NAMES in VOL LXXXI PART L

Weightman 681 Welch 675 Weld 182 Weldon 535 Wellard 402 Wellesley 479 Wellington, V. 190, 477, 479,574,658, 663 Wells 92, 197 Wemys 321 Wemyss 85, 66% Wenman 32, 433 Wentworth 513 Werninck 85 West 49, 240, 261, 296 Westall 49 Westbrook 17 Westby 297, 580 Westenra 601, 673 Westmeath, E. 396 Westmorland, E. 672 Weston 399, 670 Wetenhall 596 Wetham 669 Wetherall 400 Weyland 875, 580 Wharton 193, 239, 269, 370, 669 Wheatley 273 Wheelock 295 Wheelright 589,671 Whichcote 597 Whimper 194 Whitaker 40, 429, 613 Whitbread 167, 265, 267, 473, 569,652 Whitby 575, 657 White 85, 182, 298, 396, 580,597,662, 668, 673 Whitehead 598 Whitkell 185

Whitlock 596 Whitmore 195, 389, 401, 589, 600 Whitney 662 Whitsia 20 Whitty 598 Whittingham 274 Whyte 195 Wickham 603 Wicks 399 Widdowson 680 Widdrington 662 Wiems 93 Wiggett 589 Wightman 495 Wilbar 396 Wilberforce 140. 194, 668 Wilby 196 Wild 498, 507, 663 Wilde 579 Wilder 670 Wildman 196,662 Wiles 600 Wilkes 289, 603 Wilkins 180, 391 Wilkinson 88, 135, 2°9, 275,297, 678 Wilks 596 Willats 135 Willes 94 Williams 47, 85, 94, 180, 189, 191, 288, 292, 377, 891, 399, 402, 442, 466, 479, 576,577,579,669, 676; 681; 682, 684 Williamson 83, 402, .683 Willis 497, 680 Wilmot 288, 398, 449, 470 Wilmut 28 Wilson 21, 65, 92; 135, 136, 168, 169,

181, 240, 289, 294

381, 382,401,403, 498, 601,662,669, 670, 683, 684 Winch 40, 299 Winchelsea, E. 599 Windham 41 Wingfield 675 Winkfield 683 Winter 669 Winterbottom 378 Wiseman 562 Witherby 529, 533, 620 Withering 43, 525 Wodebouse 294,391 Wolcott 491 Wolfe 300 Wood 298, 299, 403, 487, 601,662,663, 669, 670, 678 Woodcock 293 Woodd 399 Woode 825 Woodford 184 Woodgate 578, 580, 670, 680 Woodhouse 298 Woodthorpe 191 Woodward 188 Woodworth 195 Woolcombe 276,580 Woolmer 298, 364, 446 Woolridge 575 Wools 391, 401, 521 Wordsworth 432 Workman 299 Worrall 396 Worsley 494, 676 Wragg 188 Wraxall 184 Wray 662 Wren 500 Wright 21, 69, 180, 296,300, 391,393, 402, 602, 662

Wrottesley 302
Wyatt 209, 288,662,
667
Wybourn 297
Wykes 446
Wylie 188
Wyneh 188
Wyndham 85, 182,
189
Wynn 294
Wynne 180, 378,
391,486,494,569,
580

Ximenes 670

Yalden 523 Yarmouth, Ly 184: E. 184 Yate 135 Yates 299 Yeates 408 Yelloly 589 Yeo 339 Yeoman 33, 391 Yonge 92, 191, 335 York, D. 469, 499 ---- Abp. 668 Yorke 265, 670 Young 90, 296, 338. 403, 490, 519, 670, 676 ----- Bp. 593

Zinzan 602 Zollikofer 500

- North, travels in, 40 Anholt Isle, attack on, repulsed, 379. Letter from the Governor of, 485 Antickrist described, 628 Antiquities, Architectural, 255 Apothecary's Vace-meeum, 544 Appeals, complaint, &c. on the delay of, 269, 653 Aqueduct cast iron bridge, 84 Architectural Antiquities, 543 ------- Crsts ism, 232. --- Dictionary, 544. -- Innovation, No. CLII 27. CLIII, 100. CLIV, 443. CLV, 632. ---- Proceedings, 204, 480. -- Remarks, 111, 327 Armstrong, Sir T. dying speech of, 338 Army intelligence, 65, 168, 270, 374; 477, 573, 657 --- Estimates for, 268 ---- R ghts of, vindicated, 259 -- On there is not pay to it, 473 Arts, Fine, of the English School, 543 Ascension Day, on the observance of, Ashford Church, damaged by lightning, 584 Asthma, remedy for, 132 Aston's State Papers, 240 Ayscough, Rev. Samuel, anecdote of, 319

Bingham, Mr. tried for arson, 264 Biographia Britannica, writers in, 239 Biographical Publications, 337 Burths, list of, 85, 181, 287, 391, 489, 589, 671 Bishops, Titular, remarks on, 215 Blackfriars Bridge, model of, 500 Blind, employment for, 232. Appeal in behalf of Blind children, 327. Method for the Blind towrite, 418 Biore, Mr. gives up his MS Collections for History of Herts to the use of Mr. Clutterbuck, 207 Blue Stocking (lub, 46, 239, 309 Boarding-schools, neglect of morals, &c. in, 253 Bogs in Ireland, report on, 82 Bolungton Abbey, state of, 20 Bonsall, tornado at, 487 Books, analysis of, 490, 519 Bookselling business, 406 Boscawen, William, account of, 500 Botanica: History, 136 Botany, progress of, in England, 43 Bourgeois, Sir F. account of, 186. Lagacy of, 672 Brazil, History of, 458 Bremen, annexed to France, 75 Brenty ord, schools at, 144 Briefs, great charges on, 117 Bristol Bristol, riot at, 387 British Institution purchase Mr. West's Painting of the Miracles, 240 British Museum, easy access to, 573 Britons, antient, Manners, &c. of, 461 Browne, of Ireland, descent of, 227 Bull, John, why England so called, 103, 219 Bullion, remarks on, 104. Reflections on the Report of the Bullion Committee, 363. Report, &c. on bullion, 570,

572

Buonaparte dissatisfied with the Pope, 174

Burdett, Sir F. verdict against 488, 588 Burn's Poems, appeal on the Copyright of, 265

, C.

Cadia, description of, 358 Calamy's Ejected Ministers corrected 209 Cambridge, election of Chancellor, 293. Entertainment at St. John's college, 667 Canal, &c. Shares, price of, 95, 198, 302, 406, 502, 606 Candles, price of, 95, 199, 303, 407, 503, 607 Canning, Elizabeth, particulars of, 123 Cana, Alonzo, account of, 561 Carew, query respecting, 32 Carlisle, hurricane at, 178 Carlton-house, fete given by the Prince of Wales at, 586, 668 Carpathian Mountain, base of, gave way, 75

Curr, Dr. J. particulars of, wanted, 414 Carter, Mr. reply to an Old Correspondent, 131. Controversy of, 231, 340, 418, 424, 445

Cassan, Mr. account of, 185

Catholicks, proceedings of, 177. Debates respecting, 265, 269, 654

Chain Bridge in America, 282

Chancellor, Lord, Speech of, on opening Parliament by Commission, 165, 166 Charnwood Forest, suit respecting part of, 667

. Charter House, Earl Moira made a Governor of, 668

Chimney-sweeper burnt, 486

Christ, second Advent of, explained, 442 Christians, Free-thinking, 466

Christmas, antient manner of passing, 215. Mode of celebrating Christmas m Yorkshire, 423

Churches, repair of, 38. Want of room in, 412

Living advertised, 308 —— Service, remarks on, 527

Civil Promotions, 181, 391, 670 Clergy, their right to tithes, 36. Residence of, 38 Clerks, Parish, hints respecting, 31 Cloncurry's Divorce Bill, 269

Club, Affred, 231 Clutterbuck, Mr. his proposed History of Herts, 207 Coals, price of, 95, 199, 303, 407, 503, Cock-lane Ghast, 455 Codham Hall described, 313 Commercial Credit, proceedings on, 253, 369. Report on, 286 Constantinople, massacre, &c. at, 76. Constantinople described, 140 Corn, price of, 95, 139, 303, 407, 305, 607 Costume of England, 136 Country Dancing, Analysis of, 135 Country News, 23, 177, 282, 387, 496,

584, 667 Cranmer, Abp. Strype's Memorial of 448

C) ashawe's Poems, 420, 519 Craufurd, Gen. remarks on, 121 Croyland Abbey, state of, 90 Cuha, hurricane at, 78

Cumberland, Bp. Memoirs of, 590 --- R. memoirs of, 590, 635.

Cunnington, Mr. account of, 165 Curiosity, fatal effects of, 4 Curtis, Corporal, motion respecting, 957 Customs, antient, 415

– Scottish, 439

Daniel, prophecy of illustrated, $3 Danube, inundation of, 583 Dears, armorial bearings of, 60 Deaths, list of, 85, 186, 293, 295, 495, 596, 674 Denmark, intelligence from, 75, 176, 281, 386, 485, 583

Devotion, on female, 563 Dilkes, Brig.-gen. thanks to, 374 Dispensations, 391

Dissenters, Lord Sidmouth's Bill respect ing, 624. Negatived, 653

Dollars, their value raised, 286. Q the rise of their value, 371 Domesday Book, translation of, 360 Domestic Occurrences, 84, 178, 284, 344,

487, 585, 668 Dorsetshire, History of, proposals for completing, 99

Dovercourt, account of its Church, 17 Driving, fashionable, 616

Drouery explained, 611

Drought and famine in Vellore, 435 Drunk as David's Sew, origin of the proverb, 634

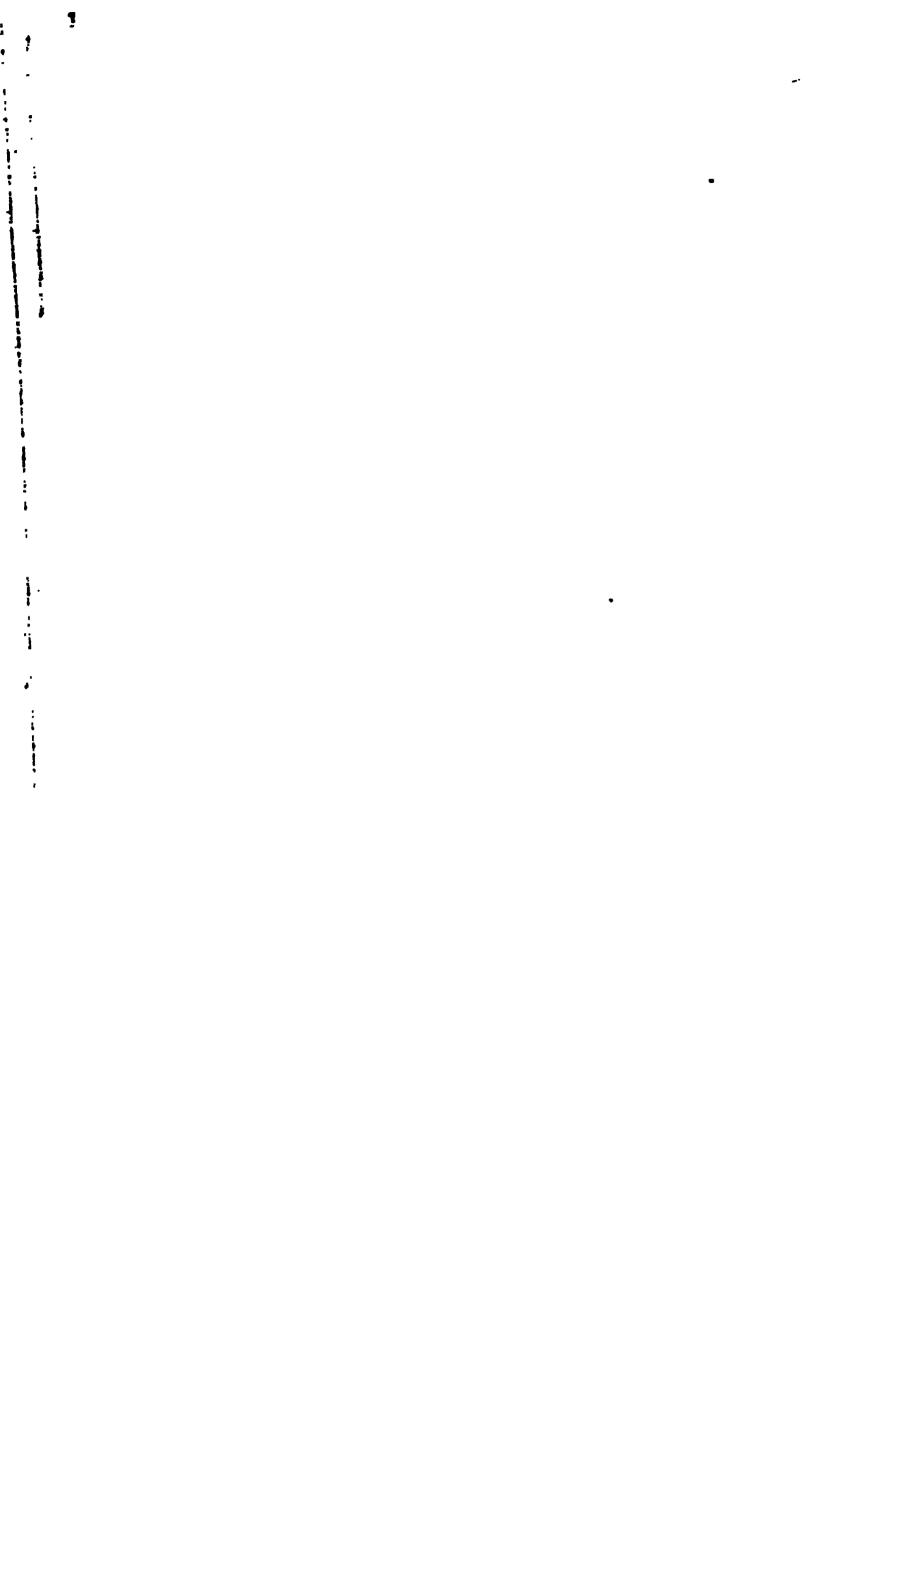

Dugdale, continuation of his History of Warwickshire proposed, 38. Portrait of, 116

Dulwich College, bequest of paintings to, 89

Dunston Hospital, state of, 19 Durham County, Flora of, 40

Vere-street, 179. At Iradeston, at Norwich, and at Bristol, 283. Skinner-street, and at Limehouse, 284. At Crowland, 388. At Barwell, 429. At New Alreaford, 522. Near Halifax, 584 prescrvative from, 228 Florence, account of, 446 Flour, price of, 95, 199, 303, 407, 503, 607 Flying, attempts at, 665 Ford Palace, account of, 617 Foreign Occurrences, 70, 174, 278, 383, 481, 581, 663 Forest in India set on fire, 78 Fortescue, Lord, notes by, 509 Foster, S.r M. Lafe of, 451 Faz, Mr Speeches of, 40 France, intelligence from, 70, 278, 385, 483, 581, 663. Population of France and its dependencies, 174 -, Isle of, captured, 171 Fraser, Hon. Simon, account of, 289 French, retreat of, in Portugal, 280. Cruelties of, 384. Defeated 483 hall Chapel, 488 ---- Imperial Titles, 708 - Writers, mistakes of, on English customs, 218 Fry, John, query respecting, 32 Funeral Feast, 463

Hamlet, passage in, illustrated, 13 Hampstead, proposed History of, 508 Hats, Statute respecting, 833 Haugh Monastery, state of, 20 Haves, Dr. William, monument to, 307 Hay, price of, 95, 199, 303, 407, 503, 607 Head, human, described, 112 Hebrow Learning, utility of, 417 Hedgehogs harniless, 211. Mr. Humphries on, 431 Henry VIIth's Chapel, survey of, 27. Repair of, 206. Controversy about, 2.0. Mr. Carter's remarks on, 430, 444. Sum voted for its repair, 569 Heraldic Corrections, 415 Herculaneum, MSS from, 508 Hertfordshire, proposed History of, 207 Hieroglyphicks, remarks on, 43 Highways in England, 447 Herschell, Dr. his address to the Jews, History and Historians, reflections on, 3 Holland, intelligence from, 279, 385, 484, 664 Hope, Mr. H. Memoir of, 292 Hops, price of, 95, 199, 303, 407, 503, 607 Horace, Illustrations of, 0, 107,224,316, 433, 535 Horse Chemuts, how used, 666 Horses poisoned at Newmarket, 486 Horsley, Bp. critique on his Sermons, 441 Houses,

Navy, Estimates for, 370
Nevid, Mr. his Prison remarks, 439
Nelson, Lord, Statue for, in Guildhall, 390
Newile, family of, 513
New-I hapel, account of, 325
New Year's Day, custom on, 424
Newmarket, Horses poisoned at, 486
Nubett on the coming of Christ, 609
Northumberland, Flora of, 40
House Book, analysis of, 114
Nut Trees, mural, 429

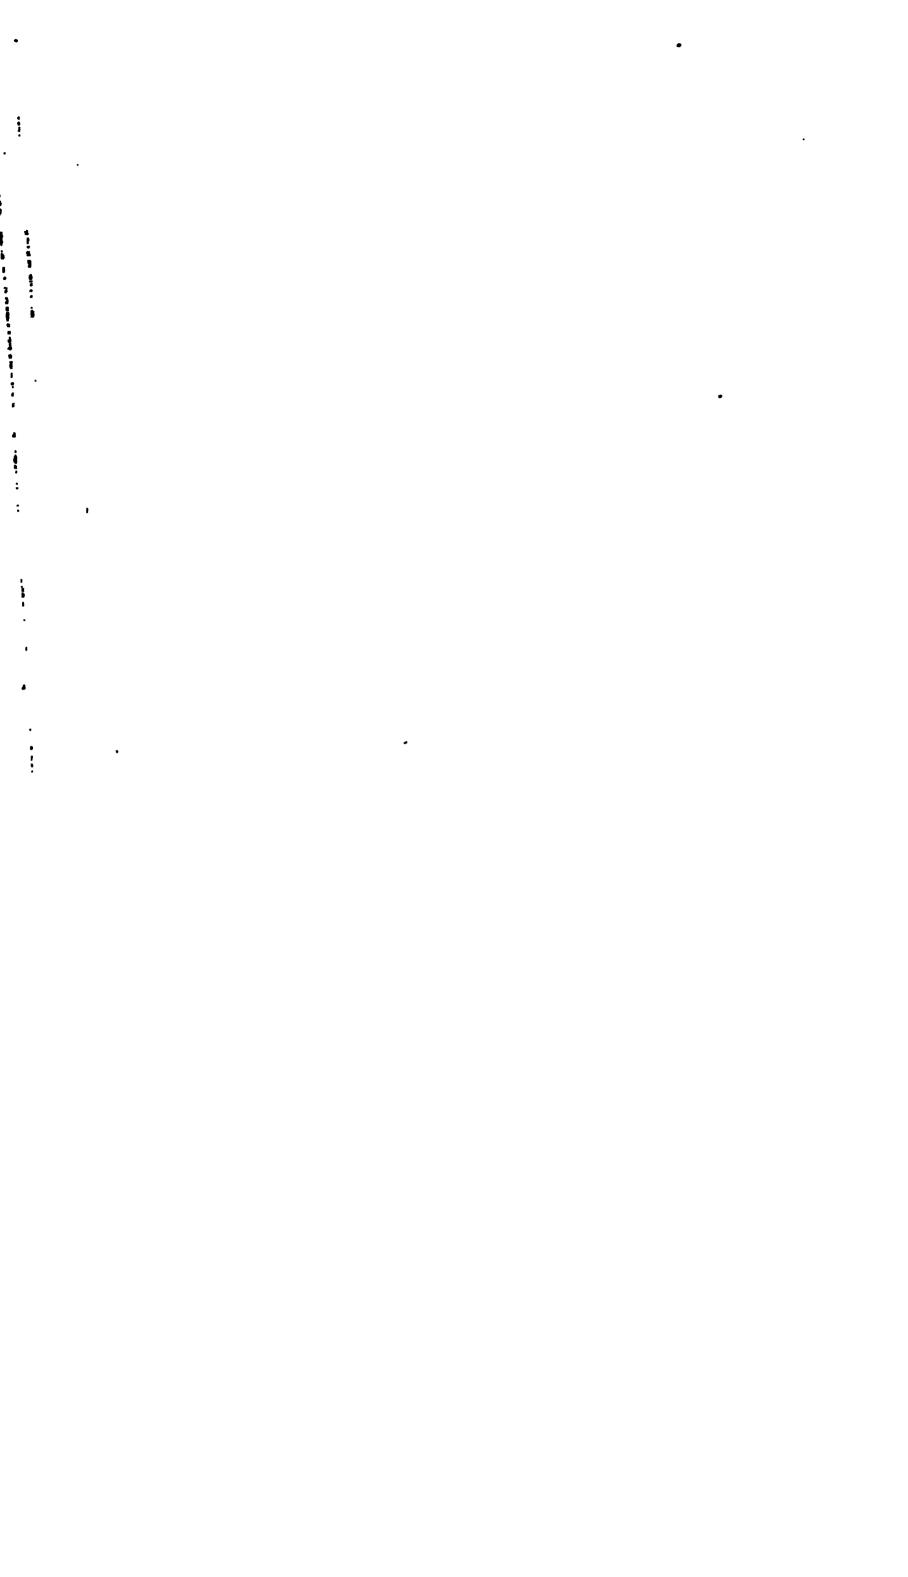

o

Ones in ships, 541
Outmeal, price of, 95, 199, 303, 407, 503, 607
Obelisks, remarks on, 43
Obstuary, additions, &c. to, 183, 289, 392, 490, 672
GENT Mag. Suppl. LXXXI. Part I.

Portuguese, subscription for, 389
Potemian, particulars of, 137
Pride, humiliation of, 286
Printers Bill, proceedings on, 268, 371, 474
Prior's Thief and Cordelier, origin of, 513
Prizes, on delay respecting, 372
Projector, intended publication of, 135
Promotions, Civil, 181, 391, 670
Prophecies explained, 30. Remarks on, 627
Prussia, intelligence from, 75
Praims, with Notes by Bp. Horsley, 135.
Psalms Evangelized, 249. Version of several by R. Cumberland, 639
Psalm-ranging, on behaviour during, 327
Puritans, History of, 544

Q

Queen, address to, 68
Queen Chariton, village of, described, 113
Queensberry,

₩.

Wates, Prince of, address to, voted by the Two Houses of Parliament, Deputation wait on him, and his reply, 68. Accepts of the Regency, 69. Qualified at the Chapel Royal, 84. Opens Parliament by Commission, 166. Sworn in as Regent, 178. Refuses an Establishment, 266

---- Topographical Researches in, 136

Wye, Banks of the, 544

Y.

Yastley, Epitaph at, 415
York, Duke of, motion on re-appointof, 656
Yorkshire method of celebrating Christmas, 423
Youth named Witte, astonishing profciency of, 666

END OF THE INDEX.

FRENCH IMPERIAL TITLES.

	of the French, King of Italy, &c. &c.
Joseph Buonaparte,King of Louis Buonaparte, late Kin
Jerome Buonaparte, King of Joachim Murat,King of Eugene Beauharnois, Viceroy
Marshal Berthier, Prince
	- Pontecorvo, Crown Prince of Sweden;
Massena,
Davoust,
Lasnes, (dead) Duke of Augereau, Moncey,
Soult,
Ney,	- Elchingen.
Mortier,	- Treviso.
Bessieres,	– Istria.
	-
Lefevre,	- Dantzick,
Kellerman,	- Valmy.
Marmont,	- Ragusa.
Oudinot,	- Reggio,
General Junot,	- Abrantes.
Talleyrand, Prince of
Cambaceres, Duke e	f Parma, Arch Chancellor.
Le Brun,	- Piacenza, Arch Treasurer.
Fouche,	- Otranto.
Champagny,
H. B. Maret,	- Bassano.
Caulincourt,	- Vicenza.
Duroc,
Savary,
▼ -	-

CIRCUITS OF THE JUDGES.

SUMMER	Номе.	Norfolk.	MIDLAND.	Oxpord.	Northern.	Western,
CIRCUIT.	LdElleubro' L. C. Baron	L.C. Justice J. Heath		J. Lawrence		B. Graham J. Bayley
Mon.Jul. 2° Tuesday 20		·	Northampt.			Winchester
Wednes. 24 Friday 26 Saturday 27	€ .		Oakham	Oxford		New Sarum
Saturday 27 Monday 29 Wednes. 31		Buckingha.	Linc. & City		York & City
Thur. Aug. 1 Saturday S		Bedford Huntingdon	1			Dorchester
Tuesday 6	Hertford Chelmsford	Cambridge	Derby	Hereford		Exeter and [City
Thursday 5	Chemsion	Bury St. Ed.	Leic. & Bor.	Shrewsbury
Monday 12 Tnesday 13	Kingsto n	Norw&City	Coventry & [Warwick		Durham	Bodmin
Wednes. 14 Saturday 17 Wedues. 21				itatiord	Newc.&to.	Bridgwater
Thursday 22 Friday 25					Carliste	Bristol
Saturday 31 Wed. Sep. 4	3				Appleby Lancaster

END OF VOL. LXXXI. PART I.

John Nichols and Son, Printers, Red Lion Passage, Fleet Street, London.

